

JOHN F. KENNEDY SPACE CENTER, NASA
KENNEDY SPACE CENTER, FLORIDA 32899

FOR RELEASE May 19, 1973

PHOTO NO. 108-KSC-75P-332
73H-454

MARSHALL SPACE FLIGHT CENTER, ALA-- Workmen at NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center fold a piece of nylon netting which, in underwater test, simulates the aluminized material proposed for use as a solar shield for the Skylab space station. Nylon netting was chosen for its ease of use in water, where simulated weightless tests of the deployment exercise take place.