Use Group Lobbying, Ancient Custom, Again Besets Legislators

Practice Never Has Been As Extensive As It Is In Washington At Present Time

By HERBERT PHILLIPS

WASHINGTON, July 23.—The use of lobbyists by legislators is a practice which has become increasingly common in the United States in recent years. The practice is not new, but it has become more extensive and more organized than ever before. In Washington, the use of lobbyists is particularly common, and it is often the only way in which legislators can get their views on a bill or a piece of legislation heard by their colleagues.

The practice of lobbying is not always done in a proper or ethical manner. Often, lobbyists will use不正当的手段 to get their views heard, and they will often use their money to buy their way into the legislature. This is a practice which is not only unethical, but it is also against the law. In many cases, lobbyists will use their money to buy their way into the legislature, and they will often use their money to buy their way into the legislature.

A "Negligible" Calamity

General Sumnerall is without doubt one of Florida's most distinguished citizens. He is not only one of the few regular army generals to come from the state of Florida, but he is also the first four-star general to be elevated to that high office during time of peace. Further, he is a native of our adjoining county of Volusia as well as should be thoroughly conversant with all general Florida conditions.

Speaking over the radio yesterday at the Sanford Rotary Club luncheon, General Sumnerall pointed out how length the controversy raring over the proposed construction of the cross state canal. As a former United States Army engineer, General Sumnerall is in a position to know as much about the possible effects of the canal's construction as anyone. He is president of the Gulf States Ship Canal Association, which may be included in the very same waterway project only on the largest scale of it.

In the course of his remarks General Sumnerall pointed out the possible damage to agriculture if the canal were to be built. He pointed out that the canal would be a source of water for the state, and that it would be a source of water for the state, and that it would be a source of water for the state.

Nation's Youths Soon Will Be Seeking Work Or Study

National Youth Program Expected To Find Thousands Lining Up For Registration

WASHINGTON, July 25.—(AP)—In a few weeks John Dill, 18 years old, of Any Town, the United States, will take his place in a registration line seeking work or study under the new national youth program.

He may have his high school diploma but no pay check, no money to go to college, no experience at work and no chance to get any. The street corner of his neighborhood baseball lot may be his only outlet for energy.

John will tell them of his previous education and his ambitions. There will be three answers: He can take job training in some school, office or factory, work some work relief project proposed by the government, or go to college or further schooling. If he wants job training, he will be taken to a school where he will be trained for a job. If he wants to go to college, he will be taken to a school where he will be trained for a job. If he wants to go to college, he will be taken to a school where he will be trained for a job.
