Political Crossfire Raging Over Ike's Missile-Age Leadership

WASHINGTON (UP)—Top Democrats and Republicans flung charges today in a raging political crossfire over President Eisenhower's missile-age leadership.

Truman started the running fight in an interview by saying Eisenhower was a great military leader because "he had someone to tell him what to do."

He told reporters Monday, Eisenhower had written a "good" reply to Soviet Premier Nikhola A. Bulganin.

Scientists and military leaders showed that "if today we are behind the Soviet Union in some respects in the race to perfect the weapons of the future... a considerable part of the blame lies on the doorstep of your administration."

GOP To Seek Temporary Debt Ceiling Increase

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Eisenhower administration will ask Congress this week for a temporary five-billion-dollar increase in the national debt ceiling to make room for bigger defense spending, informed sources said today.

The present limit of 275 billion was called "too restrictive" by President Eisenhower. The debt now stands at $274,275,000,000.

In the Senate lawmakers were not giving much of a chance to the President's five-cent stamp measure—unless it is cut down to four cents and tied to a pay hike for postal workers.

Farm belt legislators hit as unwise and unrealistic administration budget cuts in agriculture conservation and lending programs. But Sen. Milton R. Young (R-ND) conceded a defense spending boost may mean Congress will go ahead with some farm assistance reductions.

Major developments in Congress Monday: Defense—The House Armed Services Committee gave unanimous approval to administration plans for spending $549,670,000 on a speed-up of ballistic missiles and dispersion of the Strategic Air Command's bombers.

Heart Attack Fatal To Judge

One of the most colorful figures in Seminole County history died suddenly last night after suffering from a heart attack.

Judge Ernest Housholder, 64, while talking with his wife, Mrs. Lois Housholder, slumped in his chair and was dead on arrival at Seminole Memorial Hospital.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Lois Housholder, Sanford; one son, Karlisle Housholder, Seminole County Bar Association and Florida State Bar Association.

Rotarians Hear 'Truth About Postage Rates'

The Truth About Postage Rates was told in a dialogue between Postmaster Joe Field and Supt. of Mails L. V. (Dick) McLaulin shared honors yesterday afternoon at the regular weekly meeting of the Sanford Rotary Club with a film, "Operation 3-M."

Introduced by program chairman Charlie Morrison, Field told his audience back to the "Horse and Buggy Days" and drew a comparison which, he was frank to admit, did not show too much of an improvement. This fiscal year, he said, the Post Office loses an estimated $68,000,000 and for the fiscal year 1958, it is predicted the sum would reach $705,000,000.

What causes the postal deficit? The rates are too low, McLaulin replied. Although the post office now loses money on all classes of mail except parcel post, the principal cause for the deficit are second class mail and third class mail, mostly advertising circulars.

President Eisenhower: Make This Time Of Test A Time Of Honor

All that President Eisenhower said in his message on the state of the union was brought into focus by one striking phrase. He expressed confidence that Congress and the people would "make this time of test a time of honor." Here is the essence of our national situation, and of how we must meet the challenge that confronts us.

This is a time of test more severe than any the nation has experienced, except during wartime, since the great depression of the early 1930s. America is endangered by a hostile power whose advances in science and military technology threaten to tip the balance of strength against us.

It would not be honorable to be craven about the Russian threat, or to temper it with weak compromise. It would not be honorable for the United States to supinely accept a secondary position. It certainly would not be the part of honor to shrink from the sacrifices necessary to preserve our cherished way of life. Nor would it be honorable for us to seek to meet totalitarian power by curbing our own hard-won freedoms.

Honor demands that we sacrifice, individually and collectively, whatever we must in order to keep America strong and alert. Honor demands a clear-headed devotion to the task of arming ourselves both with the best weapons now available and with the scientific capacity to develop better weapons at least as fast as the potential enemy does. Honor demands that we help strengthen other free nations. Honor demands that we continue the co-operative "works of peace" referred to by Mr. Eisenhower.

There is no doubt that this is a time of test. The only question is whether we will meet the test in such a way as also to make it a time of honor.

Out With Education Confusion

A central task of American education is not to make Einsteins out of dunces and dullards, but to make dullards a little less dull. We are merely going to repeat a familiar American habit if we expect miracles and sensations in education because more money is pouring into our schools. We cannot expect an overnight change.

America has been gradually developing the notion that money and a highly trained and organized campaign of inspiration are just about sufficient for the attainment of any goal. Now the country appears to be building up to a reform of education with the aid of these weapons. The clamor and clutter about expenditures is rising.

Overnight, a number of people who either thought nothing at all about education, or else believed that American education was very good if not superb, now think American education is rotten and Soviet education is worthy and exemplary. But the educational system of Russia is not a free one. The Soviet educational system indoctrinates as well as teaches. It is no model for any civilized and free country.

While we do need much improvement in American education, we would be in a better position than we are if more persons, in education and other walks of life, had taken the trouble to understand the Soviet system—its structure, its policies, its history. Many who were in positions of leadership and influence in various areas of American society either would not learn or else put their knowledge about Soviet Communism to sleep. If this is not learned and if we fall overboard trying to emulate Soviet education rather than remain on deck to achieve sensible improvements, we will be in for new and bigger disillusionments.

There's something deeper than money involved in education today. We cannot expect our teachers of today to turn out better pupils and more learned students just because they are paid bigger salaries.

We believe that our teachers are good teachers—qualified and able to cope with students under their supervision.

A change in salary isn't going to affect a teacher's ability to teach or enable that teacher to instruct more pupils, or provide additional hours in which that teacher can instruct.

Certainly, we agree that a teacher must be paid well—and we feel that our teachers are being paid well.

Looking at the question from the opposite view—a teacher's salary isn't going to affect the minds of the students.

Our system of teaching must be scrutinized. Not in comparison with Russian methods of teaching for none of us would want either the teacher or the students to be placed in the same position as those of their Russian counterparts.

Education must be placed on the same high plateau as our freedom and democracy with ever-increasing goals to be reached.

Science Today

By DELOS SMITH
United Press Science Editor
NEW YORK (UPI)—A survey of 25 American hospitals revealed that just about all surgeons now believe in getting patients on their feet quickly after operations, but a large number are inconsistent or afraid in putting the belief into practice.

Dr. Daniel J. Leithauer, Detroit, a pioneer advocate of exercising surgical patients, conducted the survey and appeared somewhat dismayed at the results. For instance, some of his colleagues let patients decide when and whether to get out of bed and walk.

Leithauer believes that is "the surgeon's responsibility," and not "the patient's desire." He believes surgical patients should be required to walk not only on the very day of their surgery, but as soon as they have recovered from the anesthetic.

Most Don't Walk
But only 33 per cent of the hospitals reported that patients were required to walk that quickly after operations, and only 9.3 per cent required patients to walk on the day of operation. Walking on the day after surgery was most common 63.4 per cent, but 4.3 per cent reported patients were not asked to walk until four or more days afterward.

vey to the technical organ of the American College of Surgeons, Leithauer remarked that surgeons now were all but unanimous in agreeing early walking caused no ill effects, prevented a number of post-operation complications, and hastened the recovery of patients.

"Nevertheless, only a small minority of surgeons practices early ambulation in a way that will be of most benefit," he continued. He thought this was due to an insufficient general understanding among surgeons of what is accomplished by "early ambulation" and how this walking should be applied to patients. Leithauer said it should be "vigorously" but, of course, "judiciously" applied.

He himself began studying its beneficial effects in 1932 and has been applying it to patients since about 1942.

The best results, he said, are obtained when the patient is required to get out of bed and walk as soon as he recovers from the anesthetic.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

"And he did that which was evil in the eyes of the Lord."

Letters To The Editor

Editor,
The Sanford Herald,
Sanford, Fla.
Dear Sir:
I hope you will print this as something in the nature of a rebuttal to Mrs. Conn's column of Jan. 9, 1958.

As one who has worked with the Mutual Concert Association this year and last, I would like to say I find this particular piece confused and confusing, and apparently written in ignorance of all the facts.

I will concede Mrs. Conn the point she seems to wish to make, the Village Players presented Tuesday, January 7, as the second Mutual Concert Assn. attraction were not Broadway luminaries. I will grant it was not the most dramatic performance to be seen, except for the Chekhov one-act play, and I maintain that that was well worth $1.25 admission. Just think, the evening's performance cost each patron one whole dollar and a quarter, the price of two movies!

Further, these Mutual Concert Association series take quite as much volunteer labor to get to Sanford, as the price paid labor to promote Orlando attractions. I am not associated with the Hi-Fever Follies promotion, but I would venture there are a great many more laborers in that part of the industry than the dozen old people who dedicated their time to promoting the Mutual Concert Associations in any year.

I am curious as to the reasons why DeBary can be sold 200 tickets to the DeLand-Stetson series of concerts, while it's so difficult to sell around 400 tickets to our local series here in Sanford with its vastly greater population. Incidentally these DeBary tickets are sold in the spring, six months prior to the season and without specific knowledge of what the series will consist other than it will be devoted to music. You can see how it would simply engage good talent to have their tickets sold, money in, before engaging your artists. Talent demands money, and not a little of it. If you raise $2,500, you get $2,500 worth of talent. If you raise $1,600, you get less talent either in quality or quantity. By and large Sanford has only given token support to their local series—they pay a higher price to go to Orlando, or Daytona or DeLand, and the whole point is the local series can only be as good as the amount of money raised to pay the artists. Knowing the facts of this year's series I believe the association did wonders with the amount of money raised. The association members responsible for engaging the artists have to buy what they can afford to pay and do not have opportunity to preview coming performances any more than any other member. Responsibility for the quality of cultural entertainment brought to Sanford is entirely up to the public who buy the tickets, and this is a MUTUAL Concert Association. The officers and workers who promoted it have no more at stake than any other member. They all paid exactly the same amount for their tickets, their work was voluntary and given as a community service. The purpose is to see live cultural entertainment right here in Sanford.

Generally speaking, people get what they want. It appears there is not enough interest in Sanford to adequately support concert or dramatic productions of Broadway proportions. Mutual Concert Association is wide open for volunteer workers—there's plenty of room for both chiefs and indians, but if you, the public or any other critics did not buy tickets or help promote this civic enterprise, I think I'd be a little less hasty in my condemnation of the programmes offered.

Truly yours
Jane F. Fletcher

Russia, in what seemed to be a paper gesture made for propaganda purposes, announced a cut of 300,000 men this year in the strength of its armed forces.

The Kremlin called the cut a "new, serious contribution to the cause of easing tensions and creating an atmosphere of confidence in the relations between states."

But the cut—if actually carried out—would leave Russia still with the most powerful armed forces in the world.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Peter Thorneycroft, No. 2 man in the British cabinet, resigned because the government refused to make a slash of 140 million dollars in its cradle-to-grave social security spending. Two of Thorneycroft's key aides quit with him.

It looked, for a time, as if Prime Minister Harold Macmillan might face a crisis in his cabinet. But the three men then said they were not rebels and that they would continue their support of the government.

Last Week's Good And Bad News

By CHARLES M. McCANN
United Press Staff Correspondent
The week's good and bad news on the international balance sheet:

The foreign offices of the 15 North Atlantic Treaty Organization countries spent this week trying to coordinate replies to a Soviet Russian bid for high-level talks on reducing international tensions.

Soviet Premier Nikolai S. Bulganin had proposed the talks in separate letters to the heads of government of the NATO allies last month.

Agreement on replies which would refuse a meeting now but would leave the way open for some kind of negotiations proved difficult.

The United States was convinced that any talks would be held unless Russia gave firm evidence that it was prepared to negotiate in good faith.

Some other Allied governments wanted a conference on almost any terms in hope that the threat of a catastrophic nuclear war might be dissipated.

Proposed drafts of the separate Allied replies were submitted to NATO headquarters in Paris. But because of the disagreement on the proper response to Bulganin, coordination proved difficult.

Dispatches indicated that when the replies were sent, probably late next week, they would emphasize that the first step should be for Russia to agree to resume disarmament negotiations.

It was expected that the Allied course would be: (1) Secret diplomatic exchanges with Russia to find out whether a basis for negotiation was possible. (2) A meeting of foreign ministers to discuss any agreement reached for East-West negotiations. (3) Finally, several months from now at least, a "summit" meeting if there was real prospect for success.

The Kremlin called the cut a "new, serious contribution to the cause of easing tensions and creating an atmosphere of confidence in the relations between states."

miles into the air caused a flurry of excitement over the world.

The United Press Moscow bureau chief, asked about it, emphasized that it was nothing more than a rumor and that no basis for it could be found. But the rumor mushroomed. It took two days to pin down its source. Moscow Radio had broadcast, as purely fiction, an account of a trip into space and back-by parachute—of a Russian missileman. For those who took the rumor seriously, it was a good one while it lasted.

Why Let Overindulgence Spoil Your Holiday Fun?

By HENRY H. HARRISON, M.D.

EXCESS as though we're in a rut. Every New Year's Eve I write about the subject. But each year early in December, safety and traffic experts and law enforcement officials begin beseeching me with requests to caution my readers about the dangers of becoming intoxicated and driving during our bolshoi farewells to the old year.

Other Discomforts
But aside from the dangers of traffic accidents—and they are very great—think of the discomfort of overindulgence. Give a thought to that big head you will have tomorrow morning.

Now a cocktail in itself isn't harmful to most people. In fact, as I have advised you previously, alcohol in moderation has certain therapeutic advantages.

A cocktail for example, may help to relieve the pain of rheumatoid arthritis.

It is the abuse, not the use, that causes trouble.

No Longer Sober
Alcohol is a drug. Prolonged use may lead to a tolerance for it. You can readily see that after awhile, in such cases, a drink or two will no longer satisfy.

Of course, you won't become an alcoholic overnight. Imbibing at a celebration tonight won't make a habitual drunkard out of you no matter how much you may drink.

It may, however, start you along the road. And it may make tomorrow's holiday a pretty miserable day for you. So let me give you a few tips on how to set tonight.

Mixing Drinks
Contrary to popular belief, mixing alcoholic drinks does not increase the intoxicant effects of the alcohol. However, promiscuous sampling may easily lead to greater consumption, just as eating a large variety of foods may lead to overeating.

A good idea, if you feel that you must drink, is to take a mixed cocktail and sip on it gradually. That way one or two drinks will last the entire evening.

If you are going to drive home even one drink may be too many.

Latest Method
The latest method in treating alcoholism is the use of tranquilizers. While using tranquilizers in connection with overindulgence has been confined primarily to treating acute alcoholism, you might ask your physician whether he would advise taking one or two following a New Year's Eve party.

It has been found that not only do they give a patient a sense of comfort that enables him to sleep, they also relieve his nausea and permit him to eat much earlier than is customary after a bout with a bottle.

QUESTION AND ANSWER
R. O.: Can a duodenal ulcer ever develop into cancer?

ANSWER: The possibility of a duodenal ulcer developing into cancer is extremely negligible. Stomach ulcers have a greater chance of developing into cancer.

DEPLORES ROYAL FOX HUNT
NORFOLK, England (UPI)—The League Against Cruel Sports expressed opposition today to Prince Charles and Princess Anne attending a fox hunt at Westacre. "We deplore the attendance of children at such meets, ordinary children as well as those of the royal family," a league spokesman said. Nine-year-old Charles and seven-year-old Anne followed the hounds Thursday with their mother, Queen Elizabeth, in a land rover.

The aqualing is a device that enables man to swim freely at depths of 300 feet.

"If he shows signs of fear or is reluctant to co-operate, two or three ambulatory periods in rapid succession are very effective in overcoming the difficulty," he said. "Directing the patient to walk up and down a flight of stairs, or to do bendin' exercises also alleviates fear rapidly."

"Usually a patient should be required to walk once every hour during the first four hours after recovery from the anesthetic. By the following day, most patients require little or no supervision, except the constant reminder to walk frequently. Patients will not be too active, no matter how much prodding they receive."

July 25 Deadline For WWII Vets To Make GI Loans

Karyle Housholder, County Service Officer for Seminole County, wishes to call attention to all WWII veterans who may be considering the possibility of obtaining a GI loan that the time is soon coming when it may be too late to obtain such an insured or guaranteed loan.

The Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944 provided that any loan made to a veteran of WWII within eleven years after the termination of the war, may be guaranteed or insured by the VA, if such loan was made in compliance with the provisions of that Act and the Loan Guaranty and Insurance regulations.

WWII was terminated on July 25, 1947, therefore, the deadline for the making of such loans is July 25, 1958.

It is important that all lenders note carefully that in respect to loans to WWII veterans the VA, even though it may have issued a certificate of commitment on the loan may not issue evidence of guaranty or insurance subsequent to July 25, 1958, despite the fact that unusual delays in the form of title difficulties or other problems precluded completion of the loan transaction on the date anticipated by the lender.

Government Heads Into New Spending Period

WASHINGTON (UP)—Key lawmakers of both parties agreed today the federal government is heading into a new period of red ink spending despite President Eisenhower's "balanced" budget.

Some viewed this prospect with alarm. Others figured in view of the business slump deficit spending isn't as bad as it would have been last year or the year before when the economy was booming.

The President in his annual budget message Monday forecast record-high peacetime spending of $73,900,000,000. But he looked for an upturn in the economy to boost tax revenues high enough to cover this and provide a 300 million dollar surplus.

Debt Limit Boost Informed sources said the administration would ask Congress this week for a temporary increase of about five billion dollars in the national debt ceiling to take care of increased defense spending. The President called the current $75 billion dollar debt limit "too restrictive."

The debt now stands at $74,273,000,000. The higher ceiling is expected to apply to the rest of this fiscal year and to fiscal 1959 starting next July 1.

Manw Democrats and Republicans agreed the President probably was too optimistic about the business outlook. They figure the government's income will fall in spite of the President's spending program.

Spending May Be Higher In addition some Democrats claimed actual spending for some programs will be higher than the President said. They charged he resorted to unrealistic bookkeeping practices to hold down the total.

Congress could touch off a big economy drive that would cut spending but the outlook for major congressional economies is dimmer than at any time in recent years.

Senate To Make Study Of Dulles' Conduct Of Foreign Policy

WASHINGTON (UP) — Democratic senators assured Republicans today a Senate study of foreign policy will be just that: a study, not an "investigation" of Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and his conduct of foreign policy.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted unanimously Tuesday to name a subcommittee to map the study after Republican members did not imply criticism.

Democratic members who pushed for the study felt the seriousness of recent world developments — notably Russia's advances on the economic and scientific fronts — made a high-level overall look imperative.

Senate Democratic whip Mike Mansfield (Mont.) declared the review will not be a "vendetta" against Dulles.

Democratic members said they all want and expect the study to be non-partisan.

However the Democratic initiative in setting up the study, coupled with a speech by Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (Tex.), reflected the party's increasing concern about what many members consider the inadequacy of the Eisenhower-Dulles foreign policy.

Johnson, addressing CBS television affiliates Tuesday, proclaimed that the United States "demonstrate its initiative before the United Nations by inviting all member nations" to join in this nation's outer space projects.

"If we are to win space as the outpost of peace," Johnson said, "all men may — and should — share in that endeavor."

Johnson, chairman of the Senate preparedness subcommittee which is investigating U. S. missile programs, said "it would be a mistake to stop" at a reappraisal of military and scientific capabilities.

"Our foreign policies require the same reappraisal," he said.

In the meantime House leaders drove for passage today of the first bill of the week-old session — an emergency authorization of $448,570,000 for missiles.

It was learned the measure contains money to start construction of the nation's third big intercontinental ballistic missile ICBM base to locate ocean-pennant rockets pointed at Russia.

House members were expected to pull the high priority legislation through by a near-unanimous vote and send it to the Senate.

Authority to start building the third ICBM base was reported to be included under a section of the bill authorizing construction of ballistic missile facilities costing $112,400,000. But it was understood only a part of this sum would be applied to the ICBM base.

Defense Secretary Neil H. McElroy, who disclosed Monday funds would be sought this year for the base, said no decision had been made on its location. The other two will be at Cape Air Force Base, Calif., and Warren Air Force Base, Wyo.

Meanwhile Chairman George H. Mahon (D-Tex.) of the House defense appropriations subcommittee declared Republicans were making "grossly misleading" charges in contending Democrats lopped off 300 million dollars for missiles last year.

He said no program makers were scheduled to testify today before the Senate preparedness subcommittee in an open session. Witnesses included President Robert Gross of Lockheed Aircraft Corp., Dan Kimball, vice president of Aero-Jet, and Patrick Hyland, vice president of Hughes Aircraft.

George B. Bunker, president of the Glenn L. Martin Co., told the committee Tuesday government "red tape" was holding up his company's development of the Air Force's Titan 3,000-mile ICBM.

Eisenhower: Red-Ink Financing Preferable

1 Injured In Two Wrecks Yesterday During Noon Hour

Two automobile accidents interrupted the noon hour for Florida Highway Patrolmen in Seminole County yesterday.

Damage was estimated at nearly $1,300 and one person was injured.

Shortly before 12 noon, a 1956 Mercury, driven by Mrs. Fred Behrens of Lake Monroe, plowed into a stump 15 feet off the highway to smash the front end of the car.

FlHP Patrolman Otto Garrett, investigating the accident, said yesterday that he believed Mrs. Behrens "fainted" causing the automobile to go out of control traveling north on the Upsala Rd. about one mile from Monroe Corner.

Mrs. Behrens was taken to Seminole Memorial Hospital suffering from a lacerated forehead and possible internal injuries.

The car barely missed a power pole when it cut down several fence posts and barbed wire as it gouged through deep sand and into a field.

Constable J. Q. "Slim" Gallows said "I'm at a loss as to what happened for there is no evidence of speed or passing another car."

Shortly after 12 o'clock, a 1942 Packard, driven by William H. Yarnell, 80, of Longwood, attempted a left turn off of 17-92 into Wildmere Ave. and into the path of an oncoming car traveling south.

Joel D. Radford, 20, a navy man stationed at Key West, said "There was an automobile passing me on the left and I could not avoid the collision that way so I was forced to veer to the right."

The front end of Radford's 1951 Buick was damaged an estimated $250.

James L. Sikes estimated damage to the Packard would be a "total loss."

Yarnell was charged with failing to yield the right of way.

C Of C Seeks $10,000 From County Commission

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Eisenhower said today he thinks a reasonable amount of red-ink financing would be far preferable to any increase in taxes.

The President, in his first meeting with reporters since Oct. 30, stuck to his belief that there will be a business upturn this year that will keep the new budget balanced. But he conceded that Congress might vote additional expenditures and thus force federal spending over his projected goal of $12,300,000,000.

The President appeared to be in an amiable, easy mood.

He said he felt fine.

The President said that while he had not actually considered resigning in connection with his November illness, he would have no recourse but to quit if he ever felt or was told by a group of eminent doctors that he was not up to doing his job.

But he said he did not expect any such development in this connection.

Wants Red Proof

Other conference highlights: He said any summit meeting with the Russians could be held only after lengthy careful preparation starting on the ambassadorial level. Even after such preparation, he said there would be no point in a summit meeting unless there was clear evidence in advance that the top level conversations would result in profitable agreement.

He dismissed as so much trash a report that Secretary of State John Foster Dulles recently submitted his resignation under a fire of criticism and that Eisenhower had rejected it. He said Dulles is the wisest and most dedicated man he knows and possesses the greatest knowledge of foreign affairs of any man of his acquaintance.

He said he saw no reason to maintain the federalized National Guard in Little Rock, Ark., once city officials could express their confident intention of maintaining order in their town. He added that he hopes such an expression of confidence will be forthcoming soon.

He promised that in the congressional campaign this fall he would do his best to help elect Republican candidates who share his philosophy of government.

Defense Reorganization

The details of Defense Department reorganization and greater service unification should come primarily from an agreement between Congress and the executive branch of government—particularly the armed services—rather than following any minutely detailed blueprint he might lay down.

The President said he had no intention of making the Galther report public. This report by a distinguished panel of civilians has been represented as concluding that America is in potential grave military danger.

The President's discussion of the budget was touched off when a reporter noted that some members of Congress in both parties do not believe the 1959 budget will be balanced or wind up with the 500 million dollar surplus forecast by the President.

The President said it is quite possible that there could be some additional costs beyond his budget. But he said he believes all low-priority expenditures should be reduced if humanly possible.

Should Congress vote additional expenditures which it regards as necessary, he said his own feeling was that a reasonable amount of deficit spending would be better than talking about a tax increase at this time.

He said the consensus of his economic advisers is that there will be an upswing this year rather than a continuation of a downswing.

NAS, Canal Important To Central Florida

Praising Seminole County Chamber of Commerce Manager John Krider and the Seminole County legislative delegation, Henry Balch, Executive Editor of the Orlando Sentinel, issued a statement today that "there are two projects all Central Florida is interested in."

Balch spoke last night at the first quarterly meeting of the Seminole County Chamber of Commerce held at the Mayfair Inn.

"The Sanford Naval Air Station and the Sanford Titusville Canal are important, not only to you here in Sanford and Seminole County but to all of the area," Balch told the chamber of commerce directors.

"In Washington, we were assured that the Sanford Naval Air Station would remain here as permanent," he said, and now "certain funds" which were allocated to make the base adequate for the job it is to do have been held up by the Director of the Bureau of Budgets.

"I think it is our job to tell our congressmen and anybody else that we want these monies turned loose and spent," Balch said.

"They're telling us now they can't afford to put this field in shape. It just doesn't make sense," he said. "Our job now is to get the feeling of the taxpayer expressed and to get this $300 million-plus investment protected."

"I can conceive of no type of project to have priority over this one," the Executive Editor said, "and I think it should be a concerted effort to put this base into the shape that it should be in."

Citing a "boondoggling" story in a national magazine, Balch said the story was an important one.

The Navy has spent four to five million dollars at Canaveral Harbor, the speaker revealed.

"Now I don't think this is a boondoggling project, but if the harbor is going to be this important to the Navy then why can't we go all the way?"

The Sanford-Titusville Canal is a project that will make it easier to deliver better.

Turning to the missile program, Balch said "politicians have gotten so far into the program that people like you and me should speak up and be heard."

"We've wasted time, money, brains and manpower and I for one hope that it will stop," he said.

Nationalist Regime In Political Crisis

political picture also is a quiet struggle between vice president Chen and Chiang's elder son Chiang Ching-kuo for recognition as the political heir of the generalissimo.

Has Wide Power

The control Yuan is a sort of government watchdog committee, empowered to investigate about everything and everybody in Formosa.

The significance of the Control Yuan's action in impeaching Yui lies in the fact that it is composed of veteran members of the Kuomintang itself, and thus involves a party split.

Generalissimo Chiang himself is not involved in the crisis. He is the unchallenged leader, as he has been for 30 years though he did not assume the presidency until 1948.

But Chiang is 70 years old.

Though he is still vigorous, and his health is good, the men around him are looking ahead to the day when he may give up the leadership.

Limited To Two Terms

One of the problems which the Kuomintang faces now is a means of electing Chiang for a third term as president.

Under the nationalist constitution, a president is limited to two six-year terms. Chiang has a little more than two years of his second term to serve.

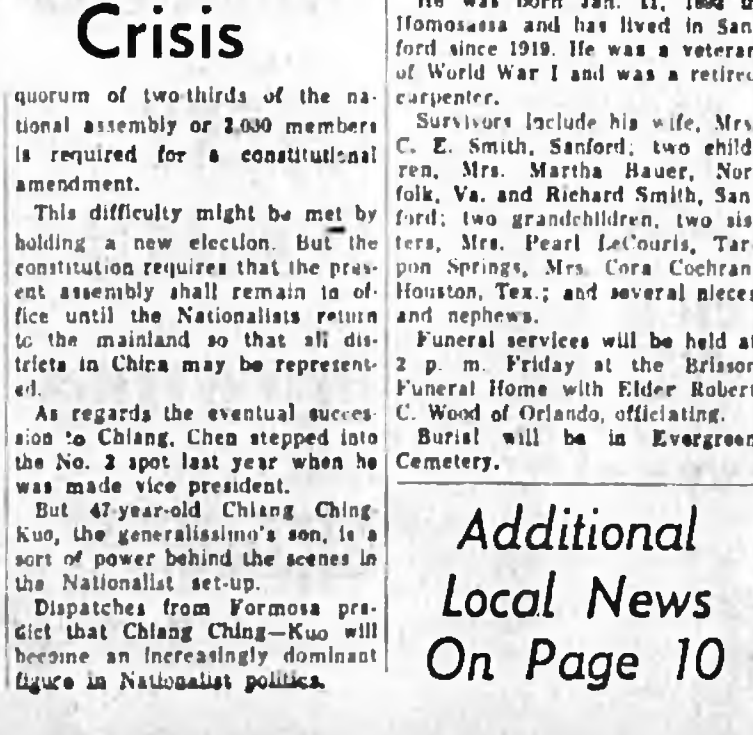

Political leaders are talking about amending the constitution so that Chiang can serve a third term. One difficulty about that is that the National Assembly, the single-chamber parliament, was elected on the mainland in 1948. The National Assembly consists of 3,043 members. Only 1,643 of them are in Formosa — and a legal quorum of two-thirds of the national assembly or 2,030 members is required for a constitutional amendment.

This difficulty might be met by holding a new election. But the constitution requires that the present assembly shall remain in office until the Nationalists return to the mainland so that all districts in China may be represented.

As regards the eventual succession to Chiang, Chen stepped into the No. 2 spot last year when he was made vice president.

But 47-year-old Chiang Ching-kuo, the generalissimo's son, is a sort of power behind the scenes in the Nationalist set-up.

Dispatches from Formosa predict that Chiang Ching-kuo will become an increasingly dominant figure in Nationalist politics.
