Union Hits FEC Use Of Strikebreakers

JACKSONVILLE (UPI) Strike leaders accused the labor-troubled Florida East Coast Railway today of hiring "imported pistol-toting" strikebreakers to work on railroad tracks in the New Smyrna Beach-Oak Hill sec-

J. H. Hadley, chairman of a committee representing 11 pon-operating unions which struck the FEC 90 days ago, said four men arrived in New Smyrna last week in trucks bearing Georgia license

In New Smyrna, T. D. Lyons, international representative of the Boilermakers Union, told UPI there were now six men working on FEC tracks, two white and four

"The white men are wearing guns. One has a shoulder holster and the other, a belt holster. We understand they are professional strikebreakers," Lyons said. He said a seventh man, a Negro, left the area "after some of the strikers talked to him."

Lyons said the men began working south of New Smyrna and "are working at Oak Hill today."

Hadley said in a formal statement "the importation of these gunmen is a desperate gesture on the part of Edward Ball," chairman of the Ball told UPI, "If the FEC has hired anybody from Georgis, then I know nothing about it. It sounds like the unions are getting ready to start violence and they want to blame it on us."

The strike began Jan, 23 when 1,200 members of 11 unions walked out because the FEC refused to meet a 10.28 cents per hour pay hike

Eighteen days ago, four operating (on train) unions also struck, but in a dispute over new anti-featherbedding

Meanwhile, in new legal developments stemming from the strike, the Jacksonville Terminal Company and its legal counsel, Elliott Adams, said federal court had no jurisdiction in an FEC suit to have Adams and the company's president fired.

The FEC had filed suit to force the removal of President Marshall C. Jennette and Adams under terms of an agreement by the owners of the terminal company,

TALLAHASSEE (UPD) The bill to ban the sale of beer and wine from grocery stores and service stations was killed today at a lengthy, emotion filled meeting of the House Temperance Commit-

The vote was 7-3 The defeat of the controversial measure came after tep. William Wadsworth, of Firgler, proposed and then withdrew an amendment which would have banned the sale of all alcoholic beverages from all types of stores, except state owned houor stores. Presently, Florida has to such state owned stores. Wadsworth said he would introduce the proposal to the Legislature as a bill. At look the committee more than 90 minutes to hear arguments on the bill, including a plea from a Tallahassee grocery store owner who said he would not be able to operate if beer sales were prohibited.

The House chamber was nearly filled to capacity by interested parties for the early morning meeting.

Support of the measure, which has been killed in previous legislatures, centered around a group known as the United Christian Action. The group, headed by Rev. Jack Eppes, of Lakeland, urged the committee to pass the bill "for the sake of young people "

Mrs. Leevis Bevis, a Lakeland school teacher and member of the action group, said beer advertising was 'organized brainwashing' and she urged with the "urging of a mother, teacher and new ... lover of children" that the bill be passed.

However, Glenn Woodard, a lobbyist for the large Winn-Dixle Stores, said the issue was one of health and morals and pointed out that "morals can't be legislated." fair for one group to press

100 Year-Old Dream

As the citizens of this county and surrounding areas prepare to celebrate Seminole County's Semi-Centennial, there could be no more appropriate time to mark another important milestone . . . the centennial of the inception of a canal from the St. Johns River to the East Coast, an event we believe could best be celebrated by actual construction of this vital waterway.

A canal between the St. Johns and Indian Rivers was authorized as a state project in 1856 by Chapter I of the Laws of the State of Florida. At that time it was estimated that the total cost would not exceed $30,-000. Bonds were issued at 8 per cent: later (in 1858) the Legislature actually authorized issuance of these bonds. Unfortunately, before any work could be started, the Civil War intervened. Afterward, because of problems in connection with reconstruction, no further action was taken until 1879, when the State Legislature abandoned the project.

From time to time efforts were made to reactivate the project, but interest lagged as water tonnage gradually lessened with the completion of the railroad south of Jacksonville to Orlando, and the consolidation of small narrow gauge lines by H. L. Plant into what is now known as the Atlantic Coast Line

Today the tremendous growth in Florida, particularly in industry which requires heavy cargoes of raw materials, as well as the phenonmenal rise in recreational boating, make it imperative that we construct this missing link in the state's waterway system. Florida has grown to ninth in population in the United States. and has developed into a $10 billion market. There are some seven million boat-owners in the United States, and Florida is highest in number of boats per capita . . . approximately one boat for every seven residents, with an average investment of $1,500.

Florida has the longest coast line in the nation, besides some 30,000 inland lakes and numerous rivers. The St. Johns and Indian Rivers are the most important in the state. Sanford and Seminole County, as the terminal point in the connection of these two great rivers, would reap the highest economic benefits.

The St. Johns-Indian River Canal would permit pleasure craft to come inland via one route and return to the coast via another. A mecca for both yachts and smaller pleasure boats, it would make possible round trips through some of the most scenic portion of the state and the finest fishing waters without the need for back-tracking.

Progress, unfortunately, does not always favor everyone, It is regrettable, but sometimes a few individuals are adversely affected. However, we believ that the vast majority of the citizens of Seminole County and the State of Florida will benefit beyond description. The scope and magnitude of the effects of this canal upon our economy are such that we place it first in importance among four major projects that are essential to the orderly growth of this area. The others are: A fouryear state university, a causeway crossing Lake Jessup, and, ultimately, a Sanford port with dock and terminal facilities.

We endorse the resolution passed unanimously by the House of Representatives and the Senate of the 1961 session . . . "The Legislature of the State of Florida hereby approves the Sanford-Indian River Canal as a vitally needed waterway development for the State of Florida, and as a project necessary in the comprehensive development of waterways of the State of Florida."

This week, April 21-27, is National Library Week and boys and girls in elementary grades at Oviedo School have spent much time in preparation of projects to carry out the theme, "Read-The Fifth Freedom-Enjoy R!"

After a visit to the Albertson Public Library in Orlando, sixth graders submitted "newspaper reports" on the trip which were judged by members of the Senior Library staff. Winners were Linda Kasell and Mary Massey with honorable mention going to Richard Eichbarger, Guy Lingo and Richard Morgan.

Fourth grade students last week completed a survey among faculty members, student council members and several Oviedo civie leaders to determine favorite childhood books.

Top favorites of the commined groups were Bobsey Twins, Huckleberry Finn, Little Women, Heidi, Tom Sawyer, Black Beauty and the Nancy Drew Mysteries.

Fifth graders designed book covers for some of the favorites and also learned to say "read" in many foreign languages.

CLEAR FOR A PROFIT

Today in Florida, the assessed value of land is such that one can't afford to leave it undeveloped. For housing, farming, ranching or any other uses - it will probably pay you to clear your land.

■ Without a question, you'll be money ahead if you use the land clearing services of one of Rozier's customers who uses Caterpillar-built machinery. His equipment is designed for the rugged clearing jobs. He can do it faster and better — more economically. Land clearing is his business and dependability is his guarantee . . . he's backed by Rozier's custom-care service.

■ Clear for a profit — call the land clearer you can depend on -he's the man with Caterpillar-built tractors.

A United County

The past 80 days have been outstanding in the 50-year history of Seminole County.

We have just been through a muscle flexing period, a tremendous show of county unity: The first Seminole County industrial show; the promotion of our area for a four-year state university; a Semi-Centennial celebration that included all-out Navy participation, and beauty contestants and parade entries from every section of the county. A united county is very impressive.

Experts have predicted growth in the hundreds of thousands during the next 50 years, and if our grandchildren are to be proud of what this present generation has accomplished, county-wide economic planning must be done NOW.

A few short years ago our economy was solely dependent upon agriculture, a situation that old-timers will tell you was less than desirable. The Sanford Herald agrees that a good start has been made on diversification, but we are not satisfied. With some 900 empty homes and approximately four percent unemployment, Seminole County's natural resources must be developed.

Small opposition groups should be convinced that it is more profitable to help than sabotage . . . that reaping long-range benefits from many different projects is far more advantageous that waiting for just a few to pay off.

Again we say, united we move forward; divided we can leave only apologies for future generations.

The prevalence of violent behavior in this country is seriously disturbing.

Places once cherished for their wholesome innocence - the park, the zoo, the baseball park, the picnic ground - today are often the scenes of fighting, of unprovoked attack upon the young, the old, anybody at all.

In some cities, Easter Monday outbreaks are so much a "tradition" that extra police are assigned to zoo areas. Despite the precautions, Baltimore's zoo this year saw a battle involving 2,000 young people. Two were stabbed.

Many major league baseball teams have long encouraged youngsters to attend ball games free. These "knothole gangs" were a feature even decades ago. But in Washington on a recent Saturday, 15 to 20 knotholders awept through the stadium in vicious, random assaults on other youngsters. Hardly good clean

When the attackers were apprehended, one schoolmaster said that to those youngsters "playing is fight-

It is frightening that violence is either above or just below the surface in so many human beings today -especially the young.

Of even more concern is the seeming half - acceptance of this in many quarters as apparently inevitable.

The Baltimore authorities who commented on the zoo riot explained it by saying "there were thousands of people milling around with no-thing to do." Obviously, fighting was the only answer.

Occasionally, men in high places rationalize rising crime rates by noting the incidence of broken homes, joblessness, school dropouts in the affected areas. They stop just short of phrasing the question: "Wouldn't you steal under the circumstan-

Even if you should improperly answer such a query with "yes," the related matter of accompanying violence is left unanswered.

What element of economic need compels a boy or man not merely to steal a woman's purse, but to knock her down and kick her senseless?

Rationalizations of crime which ignore the violent aspect are the purest rubbish. The truth is, as some scientists pointed out in a recent national meeting, violence is the key element in the crimes of this age.

Scholars in human behavior may argue that violent instincts exist within us all. But is not the great wonder of man supposed to be his supreme talent for putting himself under the disciplined control of his mind?

The real root of the problem is that, more and more and more, selfcontrol is neither taught nor practiced.

This is a time of indulgence, laxity and high disorder. Worst of all, there are far too many among us who neither revere order and discipline nor perhaps even understand what

DEAR WONDERING: I have yet to see the doctor who wasn't able to "get rid" of a woman without my help. Leave the woman's husband alone. If you really feel that someone should "straighten out" the woman - suggest it to the doctor. And he might straighten YOU out.

DEAR ABBY: My 16-year - old daughter wears a size 20 dress. If I have pie or cake in the house, that's what she cats for breakfast. I have four other children and a husband to feed, so I can't make only non-fattening meals for her alone. If I cook spaghetti and meatballs, I have to lock up the leftovers or this daughter will finish it. I've had her to doctors who put her on diets but she never sticks with any of them. She has no willpower. She is driving me crazy. What should I do? TIRED MOTHER

DEAR TIRED: Your daughter should see a doctor who treats "emotional disorders." That is what's causing her to eat compulsively. Unless your daughter is treated for the CAUSE of her overeating, she will never stick to a diet.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for twelve years to a man who absolutely refuses to try anything new when it comes to food. When we are invited out to dinner, if it isn't meat and potatoes, he won't even touch it. I have tried to interest him in molds, fish, chicken, salads, casscrole dishes and desserts, but it's futile. I finally threw away my cook book. What is wrong with a man like that, and how can I cope with it? GAVE UP

DEAR GAVE UP: His mother probably frightened him with a souffle when he was young. Just keen on feeding him meat and potatoes at home. And when he dines out, let him sit in the corner and suck his thumb.
