There is a story about the Middle East that goes like this:

One day a scorpion and a frog met at a river bank. The scorpion asked the frog to carry him across.

"Not me," said the frog. "Id get half way across and then you'd sting me and I'd die."

"Don't worry," replied the scorpion. "I can't swim aud if you were to die, I'd drown."

So, convinced, the frog started across with the scorpion on his back. Half way across, the scorpion stung his corps, the scorpion stung his corps, the scorpion stung his corps.

When the UAR was seeking vast mew sums in U. S. aid.

It also came at a time when Kosygin, with around $2 billion already invested in the UAR military establishment and in the Aswan dam, came with little more to offer, in fact might be coming to ask a partial payment-harbor fact littles for Soviet warships.

From the United States, Nasser wanted an expansion of U. S. food aid—$150 million for for the fiscal year beginning July 1.
