

Creighton U. Coach Packs Lot Of Cage Dynamite

By CHIP ROYAL
A P Features Sports Writer
NEW YORK, Jan. 14. —He's only 5-foot-5, weighing 155, but he packs a lot of athletic dynamite under his small frame, this Eddie Hickey, the basketball coach of Creighton University, out Omaha way.

Watching the Nebraskan mite order the six-footers around during a recent Madison Square Garden session, spectators were impressed by the way he handled his men, and the way they respected his words.

Talking to Hickey, you can understand it all. He is one of the greatest boosters that basketball players, or sports audiences ever had. He is interested in only one thing—doing his best to keep sports on a high plane.

Recently, there have been stories that eastern and western basketball don't mix, that the game is too professional in the east, but the Bluejays mentor doesn't agree.

"Basketball has made great strides in the last few years, and it can thank these New York games for it," Hickey declared. "The inter-sectional clashes have done more to improve the game than all the rule changing and talk will ever do."

The Nebraskan commended the style of officiating here in the east and said he liked the rugged, offensive style of play.

"The New York teams I have seen all operate with major efficiency that is a pleasure to watch. The spectators are entitled to be excited by the terrific off-the-board game. I doubt if any other section of the country can match the marvelous ball-handling, the fast cutting, and the exceptional ability in set-court shooting.

"Some of the coaches have been yelling for the standardization of play," continued Hickey, "and these inter-sectional games are the best medium I know for doing that. We have introduced several features of the eastern game in the west, and we intend to try more of them in turn. The teams here have picked up a few of our tricks, including the one-handed shot, and they are doing all right."

This dramatic photo was made in Washington, D. C. just after Marie Davis tripped in front of an incoming trolley car and was pinned beneath it. Quick work by the motorman stopped the car just before the wheels were about to run over the woman. It took a rescue crew an hour before she could be freed. She was rushed to a hospital to determine whether she was badly injured. This is a photograph. (Central Press)

Unemployment Fund Increases In '42

TALLAHASSEE, Jan. 14, (AP)—With claims by jobless workers reduced by increased wartime employment in Florida, the State's Unemployment Compensation Fund increased 85 percent during 1942, from $20,000 at the close of the year, Boyce A. Williams, chairman of the State Industrial Commission, reported.

During the first six months of 1942, when many major automobile agencies, contractors, appliance dealers and service stations lost their jobs, unemployment claims aggregating $2,851,229 were paid. In the second half of the year, as war work absorbed more and more of those displaced in private industry, payments decreased 37 percent, Williams said.

BIRTHS INCREASE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14, (AP)—From Nov. 26 to Dec. 25, 1942, there were 6,041 births and 1,744 deaths reported for Florida, compared to 5,101 births and 1,718 deaths for the same period in 1941, the monthly vital statistics bulletin of the Bureau of Census reported.

For the first 11 months of last year births in the State rose 6.4 percent (from 53,555 to 57,371), while deaths dropped 3.9 percent (from 21,015 to 20,208).

T. C. U. Player Brings Team Out Of "Doldrums"

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF
FORT WORTH, Tex., Jan. 14.—Make way for Hub (Carpenter) McQuillan.

That's what they call him out at Texas Christian University where he's done a lot of building.

Hub is the guy who brought T. C. U. out of basketball's doldrums in one year then pushed the Horned Frogs to the top the next.

The Frogs came home the other day with the championship of Oklahoma City's All-College tournament in their pocket. To win it they had to topple mighty Arkansas, always the team to beat in the Southwest Conference.

But it wasn't the defeat of Arkansas that impressed the fans as much as the way the Frogs did it. The score was 27-25 and few teams ever had held the tall Razorbacks under 30 points.

Meaning, T.C.U. has the all-firdest defense in basketball down here.

It's a short but interesting story.

Hub started at the bottom when he became coach of T.C.U. last winter. The Frogs could count their victories over a stretch of three or four years on their fingers. They were doormats of the Southwest Conference.

McQuillan wants to get a job done, quickly. Carpenters, you know, are that way.

With the aid of a few additional basketball jobs, Hub went after material. He took a short cut. He brought in junior college boys who could skip that year's freshman play, his went to Kansas, Minnesota and Idaho for some of the prospects.

They were not the shining stars that other conference schools boasted but they were a lot better than the average. They were hard workers too, just like Carpenter McQuillan.

Today, Texas Christian looks like the best bet in the field of line teams in this conference. It lost its opening game but that was before the boys got organized. Since then, it has dropped just once—before Corpus Christi Naval Air Station, which boasts one of the greatest edge squads in the nation.

Carpenter McQuillan can skip back and admire his work—that is, he has time. He's a very busy fellow, you know.

Question Arises Of Too Many Men In Armed Forces

By HERMAN ALLEN
Debate has sprung up in Washington over whether the Army should continue to increase in size or be cut off before it reaches the 7,500,000-man strength for which it is slated by the end of this year.

Those who propose to hold the Army down say we are reaching the point where military requirements for supplies and equipment are overbalancing our ability to produce them. Why put more men into the Army, these persons ask, if we can't give them guns or parachutes—the very guns and parachutes they might themselves be producing if they were still in civil life?

The question seems to have been brought out in public the first time by Pierre Cot, former French aviation minister, before the House military committee last week. "The (French) republic suffered from general industrial weakness, having a labor force only about one-third as large as Germany's. We mobilized too many men in our army and not enough in our factories."

Senator Johnson of Colorado commented: "The United States is making the same mistake now, and we've had more time to correct them."

A few days later Chairman Truman of the Senate defense investigating committee said this in a speech in Massachusetts: "It will do little good to raise a huge army unless, consistently with supplying our allies with the weapons they need, we can transport and supply our own Army overseas. It would be even more futile to raise so large an army that its attempted supply and maintenance will destroy essential civilian economy."

Reaction—and significant reaction—was not slow in coming.

President Roosevelt, in a press conference, said he had noted comments that continuing to increase the armed forces would discommodate the domestic economy (discommodate is a favorite word of his) and said such a statement speaks for itself as something not popular in the midst of a serious war. He said Cot's statement was amazing and that it was equally amazing that anyone in Congress should try to apply it to the United States.

Secretary of War Stimson spoke out even more bluntly. He reminded the public that the chief of staff, General Marshall, and his assistants, "have had access to all the facts in the possession of our government as to our resources, our manufacturing facilities and our power to transport this army by land, sea and air."

"They have had the benefit," he continued, "of constant consultation with the corresponding military and naval representatives of our great allies. Finally, in all their decisions, these men have worked in active collaboration and subject to the approval of the President of the United States."

War Boom Occurs In Horse Meat Packing Business

AT Features
TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 15.—There's a war boom in the horse meat business.

And take it from Burton Hill, whose Hill Packing company has been processing horse meat for human consumption since 1907, human use of the meat is "increasing all the time."

"People in Europe have been eating horse meat for generations because it's nutritious, rich in flavor and low in cost," Hill explains.

Until about 12 years ago, his company shipped practically all its production to Europe—Scandinavia, Holland and France. Since then, the United States market has been growing. After war curtailed England's normal meat supplies, sales of horse meat increased there, and Hill says the same thing is happening in this country as beef and pork become scarce and expensive.

Right now, the firm is slaughtering horses at a rate of about 25,000 animals a year. Some of them, about two to three carloads a week, are dressed "just like beef" and shipped in quarters so buyers can get standard cuts. The rest are sold in packaged form as steak or coarse chopped meat.

Hill says horse meat "tastes just like beef." In recipes calling for beef, horse meat can be used at a considerable saving, he claims.

On the retail market, the meat sells for 15 to 25 cents a pound. It can be bought in "practically all the big cities east of the Mississippi."

Hill, a book binder in the government printing office in Washington before starting a horse meat packing business 35 years ago, points out that U.S. Department of Agriculture inspectors approve his product just as they inspect beef in other packing plants.

"Horse meat has to be designated as such when it is sold," he explains, "so people can rest easy about that. They won't get it without knowing what it is."

There's one thing about the war boom in his business which makes Hill smile.

"This notoriety is ruining us," he jokes. "We can't fill all our orders. Why I've got a nice new office built back here and I've been so busy I haven't had time to get inside of it."

The packing company buys its horses in the area from 600 to 800 miles around Topeka, getting healthy animals which have outlived their usefulness as work horses.

And like other packing plants, this one makes good use of all the by-products. Besides meat, horses furnish an oil high in glycerin content, in demand now for machine shop use. The hides make a soft but strong leather which goes into the manufacture of aviators' jackets.

The circumference of China, 8,000 miles, is approximately equal to the diameter of the earth.

Loan Purchase Program On Naval Stores Announced

GAINESVILLE, Jan. 15. (Special)—A Commodity Credit Corporation loan and purchase program for the 1943 crop of gum naval stores, through the American Turpentine Farmers Association of Valdosta, Georgia, is available to producers who comply with the 1943 naval stores conservation program of the Agricultural Adjustment Agency and the U. S. Forest Service, according to L. T. Nieland, farm forester with the Florida Extension Service.

The loan and purchase activities are designed to promote the attainment of the 1943 production goal of 850,000 units of gum naval stores and to complete the acquisition of a stock pile of gum rosin by the CCC. Producers cooperating in the conservation program have the option of either pledging naval stores for loan or offering naval stores for purchase by CCC. Naval stores purchased under loan may be redeemed up to April 1, 1944, by payment of the loan value plus accrued charges and interest at 3 percent, but naval stores so redeemed may not subsequently be offered for purchase by CCC. Naval stores which are purchased become the property of CCC.

For turpentine the loan rate is 64 cents per gallon bulk, and for rosin the loan rate will range from $3.70 per 100 pounds net for X grade down to $6.35 for G grade, with an average of $3.80. The purchase rates are 68 cents per gallon of turpentine and $3.90 to $3.45 per 100 pounds of rosin, with an average of $3.70.

Turpentine in barrels is not eligible for loan or purchase, nor is rosin which grades below G.

DiMaggio Plans To Join Armed Forces

RENO, Jan. 15. (AP)—Joe DiMaggio, the American League's great baseball player, reported today he planned to join the armed forces and, at the same time, disclosed he and his pretty wife Dorothy had patched their marital differences.

Arm in arm and smiling happily, the New York Yankee outfielder and his wife, the former Dorothy Arnold of radio and night club singing prominence, said they solved their marital problems about the time she had completed legal residence in Reno for a divorce.

"We're very happy about it," said Mrs. DiMaggio. "Everything is straightened out," granted Joe, winner of batting championships and most valuable player awards in the American League.

Actress Given 180 Days For Drunkenness

SANTA MONICA, Calif., Jan. 15. (AP)—Frances Farmer, once glamorous screen actress, was sentenced to 180 days in jail Thursday for violation of drunk driving probation, and in a wild melee as she was taken from court knuckled down one officer but was finally subdued by others.

"Have you ever had a broken heart?" she screamed at a matron as she was carried to a cell.

Soldier Writes From Southwest Pacific Of Travels

...not even in the United States.

"While there I met a radio repairman who had served in the last war as a signaller, and he showed me a number of blue prints he had on secret codes that the Germans used in the last war, and also his own code too. He let me copy some of them which I looked over and then tore up. He surely was a fine fellow and we became good friends before I left, and since we left he has written me several times.

Later I met an old man and his wife who have had two sons in this war, one of them was killed in action, and they did not know where the other one was. The old couple treated me just fine and that night after we had eaten supper and played a few games of cards, the old lady went to her late son's room, brought out his army coat and asked me to try it on, which I did and it fit me fine. At that time the old man put my coat on, marched up and down the hall and yelled, "Say look, mother, I'm a bloody Yank in his coat! (They use bloody this and bloody that in everything they say).

"Before I left, the old lady put her arms around me, and with tears in her eyes said, "Son, I will be praying for you all every night to get you all safe."

"She was so sweet and kind to all the boys, and it made me feel bad as I thought of the son she had lost. I just hope that her other son can come back to her after the war.

"It was surely cold in New Zealand, and I almost seemed to freeze to death. I slept in all my clothes and with my overcoat on and even with the addition of woolen gloves and two woolen blankets, I would shake all night with the cold. I knew I just could not last long in that kind of weather.

A few nights later we got payed off, and oh me, it was in New Zealand money. It took us boys all day and half the night to figure it all out; it was still in this and that, and half pound this and pound that, and six pence this and half pence that. However, we soon learned to count it, and so we took a trip over the green valleys and mountains, and are they beautiful!

"We saw many things it would take weeks to tell about it. A good thing however, can't last forever, and one morning at an unknown hour and time we pulled out of there for another place unknown, and brother, I really mean it is unknown—nothing but wild swamps and jungles, and lots of natives. Some of the tri-

Gas Prevalent, Onions Scarce In French Tahiti

TAHITI, Jan. 15.—Ho, hum! War is something like this in this French colony, one of the pioneer units in the Fighting French movement.

There is a shortage of onions, due to infrequent ship calls. To gourmets of the islands this deprives all food of any appeal to the palate. But it gives to the tourist to clear the atmosphere of Tahiti from the seeming perpetual odors of cooking onions.

Island highways are crowded with motor cars, trucks and motorcycles. Apparently someone has discovered the spring of pure refined gasoline in the recesses of one central mountain.

Expanded demand for copra has become a plying from island to island. Native shippers, sailing outboard for the Atoll archipelago, keep an alert eye for a boat across the sea on clear banks ahead. When they see it they know they are in the neighborhood of Anaa, whose bright green sea is a contrast to its color on clouds.

The poultry shortage has been a disaster in a colony where everyone is raising chickens, and there has been an appalling increase in the number of roosters. The South seas rooster is the most obstinate of creatures. They work by relay, by night as well as by day, so the island is in a continual uproar. When the roosters let up at night, the dogs sleep by day and howl in massed batteries at night.

There are O. K. but a lot of them are not. They even have pots in which they used to cook people to eat, and they had a large log on which they broke up the bones to eat them too.

"Honest, I never would have believed anything like that if I hadn't seen it with my own eyes. There must have been times when a man's life was not worth a dime in the kind of place which have met a number of the natives, and even made friends with some of them. If they like you it's O. K. if not, they'll show you how to trap the fish, but they said there was too much work in it, the women do most of the work here, but some of the men will work.

"A few days after we arrived here, we got word that they had an awful earthquake in New Zealand. I was surely glad we had left when we did.

"It rains every other day here, but I had rather be in the jungle waist deep in mud than be in the cold, which I just can't stand.

"You know, if the people back home could see what a hard time the people over here have to make a living, they would change their tune about working.

"Well, I'll close this time hoping you all had a Merry Christmas and will have a Happy New Year. All I can say in closing is: God bless America, the U. S. with the Japs and all the Axis nations; Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition; and love to my wife and babies."

Chinese Troops Completely Upset Japanese Efforts

(By Associated Press)

Meanwhile from another war theater Chinese troops, in their greatest victory of the past six months, have completely upset the enemy campaign in the Honan-Anhui-Hupoh border triangle of Central China after killing more than 3000 Japanese. It was announced last night.

A communique said that Chinese forces have strengthened their foothold within Sinyang, strategic railroad city in Southern Honan Province which they penetrated January 10, and have recaptured Loehai, 35 miles to the northeast.

The communique, however, acknowledged a Chinese setback in Southern Yunnan Province far to the southwest where Jap troops driving from the Kankung area of Northeastern Burma were reported to have made additional advances despite stiff resistance.

A Chinese spokesman said Sinyang had been turned into a "sea of flames" during some of the heaviest fighting seen in China in recent months. Complete occupation of the city, he said, would seal the fate of the Japanese retreating from Loehai.

The campaign in Central China began two weeks ago when 90,000 Japs launched a two-prong drive from the area north of Hankow, Hubei Province, and from Wuhu, Anhwei Province, against Chinese positions in the Tapish Mountains.

Allied ground forces have made a successful foray against the Japanese at Mubo, 12 miles south of the enemy base of Salamaua, New Guinea. The Allied Command announced earlier today in revealing the first action in that area in several weeks.

More than 116 dead Japanese have been counted as a result of the raid on Mubo, said the mid-day communique issued by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters.

A spokesman said the action occurred Tuesday and Wednesday, although he gave no details. Australian troops made the assault. They have maintained a force in the area ever since the Japanese occupation.

In the Sannanda sector of New Guinea, 140 miles down the coast from Salamaua, Allied troops are slowly compressing their encirclement of the Japanese who hold the last enemy foothold in the Papua area of the island.

The latest clash near Salamaua, which is located on a mile-long peninsula jutting out into Hoon Gulf, appeared to have been the heaviest of the few sporadic actions occurring there since the Japanese occupied the Lae-Salamaua area in March, 1942.

The last report from that area concerning ground operations was on Dec. 18 when a communique announced that Allied patrols were maintaining pressure on enemy outposts and protecting friendly natives in the area.

On June 28, an Allied Commando raid on the Salamaua area resulted in the killing of 60 Japanese.

Allied planes meanwhile ranged up and down the New Guinea coast as well as over nearby New Britain Island and Timor Island, the latter about 400 miles northwest of Port Darwin, Australia.

The town of Lae, 20 miles north of Salamaua, was battered again by medium bombers with fighter escorts. They attacked Japanese supply dumps along the shore. The communique said the bombs fell in the target area, starting large fires in fuel dumps and that the enemy made no attempt at interception.

The rickshaw was invented by a U. S. Marine who visited Japan in 1854 with Commodore Perry.

WASHINGTON DAYBOOK

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15. (AP)—The capital in wartime probably was quieter more frequently there than any man in his time.

Congress has just dealt the old one-two to the theory that hard work and war tension are killing. In the 715 days of the 77th Congress, the longest on record, 14 members of the House and five Senators died, but only three of those congressmen and one senator had died since the United States declared war.

That record hasn't been equalled in any year since 1914. It is all the more remarkable because 1942 was not only the second year of the longest continuous session of Congress but also was a year when many members had to do the double duty of electioneering and wrestling with all the legislative problems this war has raised.

Dr. George W. Calver, congressional physician, attributes the new health record to a greater consciousness of the need for physical fitness. Scores of congressmen have beaten the strain of overwork with physical check-ups and strict adherence to proper exercise and diets.

Rep. Will Rogers, Jr., is the only man in the new Congress who will walk the halls of the Capitol in the shadow of his daddy's statue. In one of the main floor corridors that houses the overflow from the Hall of Statuary is a life-size bronze of the gum-chewing comedian.

It should be a daily reminder to young Will that although his Dad never served in Congress, he probably was quoted more frequently there than any man in his time.

MEAT PRESERVATION

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15. (AP)—Meat prepared for shipment to our forces overseas is now completely boxed and the cuts quick-frozen, coated with paraffin and packed in cartons. This saves about one-third of shipping space and one-fifth in weight according to WFB, but it led to a new difficulty.

The multitude of cutting operations has placed a strain on the knife industry, and now it is intended to amplify types and sizes of knives.

Allied planes meanwhile ranged up and down the New Guinea coast as well as over nearby New Britain Island and Timor Island, the latter about 400 miles northwest of Port Darwin, Australia.

Bikes Will Be Easier To Get After January

JACKSONVILLE, Jan. 15. (AP)—Beginning Feb. 1, the average Floridian will find it a lot easier to get a bicycle.

Acting to help relieve the congestion of transportation caused by reduced gasoline rations or passenger cars, Florida OPA headquarters here yesterday announced an amendment to the strict regulations by purchasing bicycles.

Anyone gainfully employed or doing volunteer work essential to the war program or public welfare will be able to qualify for a certificate to buy a bicycle merely by showing proper need for one, Gordon Morecroft, State rationing officer, explained.

Further liberalization also makes bicycles available to pupils who need them to get to and from school. Moreover, a provision under which bicycles were denied to motor vehicle owners who could use their cars in lieu of a bicycle has been revoked.

New National Lottery Bill Is Introduced

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Rep. Adolph J. Salath, yesterday introduced a national lottery bill intended to raise several billion dollars to supplement new revenues that may be gained under President Roosevelt's $16,000,000,000 war-financing program.

The measure authorizes sale of $1 so-called war participation tickets and provides for $125,000,000 in cash awards and $250,000,000 in certificate awards.

"Government lotteries for revenue-producing purposes have been conducted successfully in many foreign countries, including nearly all South American republics," he said. "The Post-office Department has estimated that $1,500,000,000 annually heretofore has flowed into foreign lotteries, with no benefit to our government."

... and how's YOUR sense of balance?

• It looks like a carnival concession or an inventor's nightmare. But it's simply a balancing chair, used to test the equilibrium of Army Air Corps candidates.

• Only a relatively few hand-picked Americans will ever try the balancing chair — but every last one of us is having our sense of balance tested under the mad whirl of war. It's a test of our ability to do our daily job, buy bonds, pay taxes, donate blood, spot planes, serve in Civilian Defense — and still keep an even head. It's a test of individuality — and imagination — and ingenuity.

• We're rather proud of the way our laboratory — the classic post-war — compares under balance management — but not in greatest test. In the face of shortage in heavy metals, precision production has been stopped by the lack of raw materials and all essential machine tools.

• Balance is still good, even still low. The average American will get better at such stability for money as he will get it in spite of the shortage of raw materials.

• There are the same old same old things...
