BIBLE VERSE FOR TODAY

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH "LIFE" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christian Science on Sunday, July 16.

IT HAS WISELY BEEN SAID

The question is not how can you "put in the day" but "how much can you put into the day."

The kind of advice we do not like to take often turns out to be the best.

Not all men can be the best, but every ambitious man can be his best.

Ignorance of strength defeats as many men as knowledge of weakness.

An optimist is one who makes the best of it when he gets the worst of it.

Early rising is not so much help unless you keep wide awake after you get up.

The road to happiness runs parallel with the path of duty.

To nourish character, swallow false pride.

You can become as well-educated as you like without spending a cent.

A man who really amounts to anything keeps on trying to amount to more.—Christian Science Monitor.

Who could have predicted three months ago that today we would hear-talk about profiteering?

George Whitney, Jr., son of the Morgan partner who was the chief witness for his firm during the Senatorial inquiry into the banking house, is traveling in Europe with Roosevelt's son. It is about time for Huey Long to come forth with another one of his philippic disclosures the sinister, if circuitous, connection between the President and "Big Business."

Members of the Civilian Conservation Corps are building a scenic highway and working at reforestation near President Roosevelt's "Little White House"—a worthy project. But how nearly alike does it sound to the work done by U. S. Marines around the Hoover Rapid Camp, a matter which offered some of the political ammunition in the last election.

Three men involved in the slaying of Joe B. Johnson, Tampa automobile salesman, were electrocuted Monday at Raiford. Justice according to the law, has been meted out, and the triple execution should be a warning to others who regard life lightly. But we doubt that it will, and we wonder if it isn't such things as legalized "murders" by the state which help, by example, to arouse the brutal instinct in men.

Federal Judge Akerman in Tampa the other day gave some sage advice to the grand jury. Referring to the enforcement of the dry law, he said: "The people have a perfect right to change that law in a legal manner, but no one is privileged to violate it in the meantime. All laws must be enforced to the last letter and you must act on the evidence submitted no matter what you might think about the question." If all judges take this position the country is in no danger.

Announcement that the Federal Government is planning to relieve the states of spending money on transient is particularly good news to Florida. Because this state is nice and warm in winter, it is especially attractive to those who are without homes and jobs in the North and who can at least find bodily comfort in a tropical climate. They can't be blamed for swarming southward with the advent of Fall, but it is certainly unfair for Florida to be burdened with the responsibility of caring for the indigent hordes from other sections.

The Rockefellers And Their Money

John D. Rockefeller, whose name was once an anathema to the general public when the oil king was branching out with his organizations to a dominant position in business and finance, celebrated his 94th birthday last Saturday and received only the warmest felicitations from his neighbors and the American citizenry. Forgotten was all the animosity which in former years had been evinced against the man who was and is the Croesus of the modern age.

It seems to be a rather peculiar paradox that the Rockefellers, both the father and son, should not have come in for a share of the acrimony which has fallen on the heads of other captains of industry during the present depression. Not only are the Rockefellers still the first family of wealth but they apparently have been the least hit by financial reverses. It even seems they have done right well for hard times, branching out with Radio City, with the continued purchase of bank stocks, and extension of their oil operations.

The answer to this public goodwill may be found in the benefactions which this family has promoted. The extent of their charities and gifts to every conceivable project is almost beyond comprehension. The Rockefeller Foundation, organized for the purpose of promoting the welfare of mankind, operates hospitals, laboratories and conducts researches into every phase of medical science. Its operations are extended to every corner of the world and its benefits to the human race have been monumental.

In the field of education, the Rockefeller millions have been widely felt. In every section of the country their money has been graciously donated to schools and universities. Europe has received no little contribution for its colleges, hospitals and other enterprises. It may be recalled that the Rockefeller family paid for much of the rehabilitation of Rheims Cathedral after the World War.

But it would be impossible in this limited space to set forth all the Rockefeller benefactions. Surely, it would take a whole book to do this. It might be well to say that the Rockefellers' contributions to churches have been especially generous and appreciated. Along the banks of the Hudson River in New York they have reared a vast cathedral which stands as a monument to their religious nature and public kindness.

Wealth accumulated in the hands of a family which uses it wisely for the benefit of other people is an asset to the country. It is unlikely that the Rockefeller fortune could have contributed more to human happiness under any other system.

A Highway To The Sea

Many nations have gone to war in an effort to gain access to the sea. The matter of an outlet to open water has at various times played important roles in the history of Russia, Poland, Austria, and Bolivia. No country likes to be shut off from the rest of the world because of a lack of maritime facilities, and as this is true of nations so is it true of cities.

Thus we find many inland towns which are in fact real seaports and others which are striving to gain a water-outlet. Much agitation has been stirred up lately in Orlando over the possibility of getting water transportation.

Two major plans have been suggested, one including Sanford and the St. Johns River, the other a harbor at Canaveral. Writing as though he knew what he was talking about, Mr. A. H. Smith of Orlando sent the following letter recently to the editor of the Orlando Sentinel setting forth the advantages of the St. Johns route:

"May I bother you with a few words for the information of Mr. Duris with regard to a seaport at Sanford to accommodate sea-going ships?"

"The federal engineers estimate for straightening and dredging the St. Johns River from Jacksonville to Sanford to take care of such shipping, (as has been referred to in these articles) a few years ago was from $450,000 to $600,000. In that case $1,000,000 would complete the project, including highway from Orlando to Sanford.

"It would cost $1,000,000 to build a highway to Canaveral, then $10,000,000 more to develop a harbor. Then it would have very little business as it is not a developed and producing section.

"But, when steamships come to Sanford they are in the very center of the vegetable producing section; also about as close to Orange, Osceola, Lake and Volusia counties as it is possible for large ships to get, which are all large producers of fruit and vegetables.

"If the project is given the cooperation and support it should have it could be completed to move the 1934-1935 crops to market; making it a long time ahead of any other water transportation which could be brought to Central Florida. In addition to the large amount of incoming, as well as out-going freight, there would be developed a large passenger travel up and down the picturesque St. Johns River."

SANFORD, TWENTY YEARS AGO

'DRUNK' INFORMS POLICE HE SAW 'L'IL PINK ANGEL'

Tuxedo Attired New Yorker Tells Cops Of Strange Vision

NEW YORK—"Don't care what you say, I saw it with my own eyes," said a tipsy man in a tuxedo to the night officer at Snyder Avenue station, Brooklyn, recently.

"You're drunk," said the officer. "Don't you know it's 5 A. M.? You better go home." The tipsy man reeled toward the door and pointed down the street. "L'il angel, pink l'il angel, only a foot high." He sighed and drifted out into the early morning fog.

The officer at the desk pinched himself and felt his pulse. He called to Patrolman Cornelius Shea. Patrolman Shea was to go outside and see what was leaning against a lamp post at Brooklyn Avenue and Clarendon Road. Patrolman Shea drew in his belt, strapped his gun one notch tighter and faced forth.

Outside in the cool mist Patrolman Shea saw a tiny figure wrapped in a pink silk night-gown. He went over and picked it up. It was a two-year old boy with blonde curly hair, who had cried himself to sleep. He awoke when the policeman picked him up.

"Who are you?" said Shea. "Mama," said the child. Shea folded him under his coat and marched back to the station. "Here's your angel," he announced.

Mrs. Gerald Lacey, of 1251 Brooklyn Avenue, Brooklyn, got up that morning about 7 o'clock and went into the room of her small son, James. He was not in bed. She searched the house from cellar to garret, but there was no baby. She called her neighbors. They had seen no one. So she telephoned the 125th Avenue station, two blocks away.

"Well, we've got a small boy over here," said the day officer. "He's asleep on a policeman. If you want to come over you might be able to identify him. We can't."

Mrs. Lacey ran over to the station and took one look at the child in Patrolman Shea's arms. The baby awoke and held out his arms.

"Mama," he said again. The police wanted to know how their guest had found his way to a telephone pole at 5 o'clock in the morning.

"I don't know," said Mrs. Lacey. "He is the youngest of my three children, two boys and a girl. I put him to bed at 7:30 last night and I came back and found him asleep."

"Later on my daughter, Joan—she's six—became restless and so I went to her room and stayed there all night. Jimmy must have tried to find me. I wasn't in my own room, so he must have gone downstairs and out on the street. He must have thought I had gone away."

The day officer filled out a report card and thanked Mrs. Lacey.

"I'd better telephone that guy that was in here last night," he said. "It'll restore his self-confidence."

President Gives His Approval To Building Program

WASHINGTON, July 13.—(AP)—President Roosevelt gave his first approval yesterday to the first batch of federal construction projects under the $3,300,000,000 public works program, the entire group totaling less than $100,000,000 and comprising chiefly items recommended by the reclamation service and the agriculture department.

The items will be made public today or Friday together with about $1,000,000 in advances to municipalities whose projects were approved by the cabinet advisory board yesterday in its first

Then, if they ask my opinion, I'm pretty frank and tell them why "Luckies please"—me, at least. After all, there's an intimate relationship between a cigarette and my lips —and I'm very sensitive about my personal daiminess. Certainly I enjoy Luckies' delicious tobaccos and their mellow-mildness—but the comforting purity of "Toasting" is what I prize almost above everything else. And that is a woman's reason for saying "Luckies Please!" because 'tis toasted'

Sheriff Unhurt As His Car Turns Over Near Here

Finally Sheriff McClelland managed to right it again, and he decided to lead it toward the edge of the road, believing that it might stop skidding when its wheels reached the shoulder of the highway.

His plan did not end successfully, for as soon as the right front wheel struck the grass and dirt, Sheriff McClelland said he felt it "die in", and he then knew that something serious was about to occur.

Bracing himself, he made ready for impact, and the next thing he knew the car had turned over once and landed on its side in the ditch.

A truck driver who was directly behind the car just before it skidded, had stopped his truck in the meantime, and hurrying to the wrecked car which he believed would contain a badly injured or possibly dead man, he was surprised to see Sheriff McClelland climb out of the car unhurt. Other persons in filling stations nearby had also arrived, and after making sure that Sheriff McClelland was unhurt they helped turn the car back on its wheels. Sheriff McClelland got in, stepped on the starter, drove to a nearby filling station and got two quarts of oil, and then drove to Sanford to put the car in a top-repair shop.

The fenders were slightly bent, the top was crushed, and the door was sprung.

Sheriff McClelland's comment today was that "I guess I'm lucky." He said the queer thing about the entire experience was that it happened so slowly that he had time to think about what each next move should be. He admitted that skidding on a wet highway while traveling at about 50 miles an hour is more than a thrill although he did not become nervous during or after the accident.

Daytona Firemen Demonstrate How To Save Property

DAYTONA BEACH, July 13. (AP)—Using as a laboratory an improvised bedroom filled up in the municipal garage, headquarters of the Florida Firemen's association, two fire fighters demonstrated how the entire contents of the room could be saved from fire and water damage.

It took them just 30 seconds to remove the rug from under the bed, place the dresser against it and cover the whole with a salvage cloth. The demonstration was supervised by D. W. Brown, fire chief of Albany, Ga.

POSTMASTERS ON CIVIL SERVICE IS ROOSEVELT WISH

Long List Of Patronage Applications Facing President

WASHINGTON, July 13. (AP)—The placing of all postmasters under civil service was asked yesterday by President Roosevelt as he signed an executive order, changing the age limit and residence requirements of new appointees.

Publication of the order was regarded as signalling a rash of patronage appointments from the White House within the next few days. A long list of names for jobs ranging from postmasters to collectors of internal revenue and United States attorneys had been prepared by Postmaster General Farley, the patronage dispenser.

A while before the executive order was signed, Mr. Roosevelt told newspapermen his newly created civil service commission would take federal employees for the emergency agencies, such as the home loan bank board, public works and others, from the ranks of civil service workers who have been displaced in the administration's economy drive. There are more than 8000 of these displaced employees.

The President asserted, however, that the thousands who were "blanketed in" the civil service by executive order under Republican rule are not to be elected for employment. He has no objections, on the other hand, to these workers taking examinations and seeking re-employment on civil service lists on the same basis as those chosen through the merit system.

A complete survey of the postmaster situation has been made by Joseph C. Mahoney, first assistant postmaster general, including salaries paid and time devoted to the service by postmasters of the first, second and third classes which are not now under civil service.

250,000 MEN ARE ENROLLED IN U. S. FORESTRY CAMPS

Army Ends Greatest Peace-Time Effort Requiring 2 Months

ATLANTA, July 11.—During the past two months 250,000 men have been physically examined, enrolled, equipped with clothing, provided with food and shelter, organized into companies of approximately 200 men each and shipped to 1,330 forestry camps extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Canadian border to the Gulf of Mexico.

Few people realize the proportions of this task which was assigned to the army and which has recently been completed. Men were to be enrolled faster than the average enlistments of both the army and navy during the World War. General Douglas MacArthur, the army chief of staff, stated that the job represented the greatest peace-time demand ever made upon the army and constituted a task of character and proportions equivalent to the emergencies of war.

The following comparison between the enrollment, equipping and organization of the Civilian Conservation Corps men and the enlistment of men during the early stages of the World War, extracted from the report of the War Department, is so vivid and the contrasts in the two efforts so striking as to make it most interesting:

"On April 7, 1918, the United States declared war on Germany and initiated the mobilization of the country's manpower. On Monday, Apr. 8, 1918, practically the same date, Mr. Howe, secretary to the President, speaking in the White House to the War Department's general staff representative, said: 'The President wants to start the enrollment of 25,000 men on Thursday (Apr. 6.) Can the army do it?' The answer was, 'Yes, sir, the army can.' Orders were issued on that basis. The 'new deal' was on. During the first three months of the World War, the War Department mobilized by July 1, 1917, 117,000 men in the regular army, 58,000 men in the national guard and

One of the check girls is holding Rudolph Kozlik, while Helen Friedman is seen placing a tag on Phyllis Chura held by her mother, Mrs. Lottie Chura.

6,000 men in the national army, or a total of 181,000 men. By that date less than 16,000 men (mostly regular army units) had embarked for France. How then during a long winter such as given by the European war could the regular army alone process some 275,000 men, organize them into 1,330 companies, establish 1,330 forest camps on a front of 3,000 miles from the Atlantic to the Pacific, distributed in depth from Canada to Mexico, occupying every state in the union, excepting only Delaware, and move 55,000 of them a distance of 2,300 miles from the east coast to the Rockies and the Sierras, all before July 1 of this year?"

A glance at some figures from the army quartermaster general's report paints an excellent picture of just what work was necessary in equipping these Civilian Conservation Corps men. "Alterations were made at the factory of nearly 200,000 wool coats, 225,000 overcoats, 200,000 trousers and 375,000 pairs of drawers. At the depot about 100,000 barrack bags were made, and the manufacture of tents is proceeding at the rate of 75 per day. "The Quartermaster Corps also awarded contracts for the purchase of 2,500,000 yards of denim, 785,000 summer drawers, 185,000 denim hats, 1,000,000 jumpers, 28,500 overalls, 700,000 denim trousers, 525,000 wool trousers, 1,150,000 summer undershirts, 500,000 pairs of shoes, 250,000

ECONOMIST SAYS BRANCH BANKING NOW IMPORTANT

Chase National Official Gives Views On Deposit Guarantee

BOLTON LANDING, N. Y., July 12.—(P)—The Glass bill, with its deposit guarantee provisions, points to the desirability and even the necessity of a very widespread extension of branch banking in this country. Dr. Benjamin M. Anderson, Jr., economist of the Chase National Bank, said in a speech before the New York State canvas coats, 475,000 bath towels, 605,000 face towels, 300 motor ambulances, 300 passenger cars, 3,000 motor trucks and large quantities of other items."

While furnishing these men with individual equipment they must also be fed. Note some of the figures given out by the army as to the food requirements for the Civilian Conservation Corps:

"Each day the army expends nearly $85,000 to feed the hungry forest workers. The foresters are given the same food supplied the regular army soldiers. Much of this is purchased locally in the vicinity of the work camps. Each day these civilians consume the beef procured from about 330 steers. Each day they eat nearly 225,000 one-pound loaves of bread."

And then came the question of finding shelter at conditioning camps at all army posts in the country. Naturally with the army crowded in all the available quarters no more men could be accommodated in barracks. Tents, therefore, had to be provided and it was necessary to procure and distribute to all army posts sufficient tentage to shelter these men as well as find a cot and two or three blankets for each man.

Naturally when large groups of men are brought together the greatest care must be exercised in protecting the health of all and preventing epidemics from spreading. To meet this great load placed on the army medical department, medical reserve doctors of excellent ratings were called to active service.

SUCH IS LIFE—

FEELINGS OF THE PAINTER WHO OVERHEARS SOME DISINTERESTED COMMENTS ON HIS WORK

Bankers Association here recently. Dr. Anderson was of the opinion, however, that the desirability of preserving local financial independence in as great a country as the United States was very real.

"The important change that the Glass Bill makes in existing law, with respect to branch banking, is to permit national banks to do, in a given state, what state institutions may do, and the immediate question is as to what state policy should allow," Dr. Anderson continued.

"The urgent question here relates to the rather numerous small institutions which, though they have survived the catastrophe of the past four years and are solvent today, still find themselves with capital funds reduced, and with prestige impaired.

"I think there is widespread agreement that state legislation during the coming months, in many states, should concern itself with just this problem, particularly in view of the uncertainty as to how many of these institutions will be able to qualify after Jan. 1, next, for admission to the deposit guarantee system provided for in the Glass bill, and as to what their status in the future will be if they are not so admitted."

Relative to the handling of New York state's branch banking problem as affected by the Glass bill, Dr. Anderson offered the following suggestions: "I think it very desirable that the great banks of New York City and the great banks in other important cities in New York should be empowered and encouraged to reach out into smaller places, under the supervision of the state banking authorities and the office of the Comptroller of the Currency, and to take under the protection of their adequate capital an important number of solvent but weaker banks in smaller places. This should be done under terms and conditions approved by the comptroller or state banking department, with due consideration for local interests, as well as for the interests of the banks in the financial centers.

"I should not wish the legislation to permit the establishment of new branches in competition with existing institutions in the smaller places, as this would aggravate the difficulties of the situation rather than help them, the only exception being that, if a community has no bank at all, a branch of a bank in a great city might well be placed there.

"Instead, therefore, of a statute in New York providing for unqualified state-wide branch banking, I should think that the legislation might take the following form: We should permit banks of certain minimum capital to establish branches in any part of the state, in cities of a certain maximum population, the maximum being set low enough to prevent a competition of New York City banks for control of other important financial centers in the state.

"I think it would be desirable to permit banks of a smaller, but still substantial, capitalization to take over, as branches, other banks within their own county or within two adjoining counties. The very small bank in very small communities, established in the horse and buggy days, which lost a great deal of its business and of its importance as a result of the coming of the automobile, which has already lost much of its business to the county seat banks, would be much better off if made a branch of a strong county seat bank."

THE ROMANS had a phrase for it—

"CAVEAT EMPTOR," meaning "Let the buyer beware." This wasn't used as a bit of balm to ease the ancient conscience; nor, yet, was it placarded in the booths and stalls of the market-place. It was a piece of every-day knowledge, born of dear-bought experience.

A shopkeeper knew little about the source of his merchandise. This tunic he bought from a trader, who said it came from Byzantium. So he sold it as the latest Byzantine style. The trader told him the dye was pure Tyrian—it wouldn't fade. So he sold it as Tyrian dyed. But the buyer knew the responsibility was his own. If he guessed wrongly, or his judgment was poor, it was his hard luck.

Today, fortunately, there are safer guides than the blanket-warning to "let your eyes be your market."

These guides are the newspaper advertisements. In this newspaper, they are a daily catalog of the best values in town—signed by responsible firms. If the goods are not all that is claimed for them, their sponsors would need to "beware." For no business can thrive on a one-time sale, or on dissatisfied customers.

A signed advertisement is, in a way, like a promissory note. The advertiser has made a statement, and affixed his signature as a sign of good faith.

So, read the advertisements before you start on a buying-trip. Make this a daily habit, and see how much you save . . . in time, in temper, in money, in shoe-leather.

SCHOLARSHIPS TO STATE COLLEGES TO BE CURTAILED

Board Also Agrees To Stop Pensions For Disabled Teachers

TALLAHASSEE, July 12.—(AP)—The State Board of Education yesterday voted to discontinue giving free scholarships from counties to the University of Florida at Gainesville and the Florida State College for Women here, due to the lack of funds in the state treasury.

Scholarships already awarded from the counties and now being financed by the state will be continued but no new awards will be made. The board said the state is footing a bill for about $10,000 a year to meet these free scholarships.

The board also agreed to discontinue payment of a month's pension to disabled school teachers who had served the required number of years in public classrooms but rescinded the action to allow Attorney General Cary D. Landis to determine the board's legal right to set. Some 60 former teachers now are receiving monthly pensions from the state but the board agreed the depleted condition of the treasury makes it necessary to discontinue these pensions, at least temporarily if this can be done legally.

Secretary of the State E. A. Gray, chairman of a special committee, named to look into the matter of county finances said reports from counties indicate they are expecting the state to furnish them with at least $4,507,000 to pay teachers and cost of transporting pupils during the current fiscal year.

On a recommendation of Gray's committee, the board voted to direct Bradford, Columbia, Lake, Orange and Seminole county school boards to levy the 10 mill maximum school taxes to enable them to finance a minimum of eight months free school, as required by the new school law.

These counties reporting they planned to levy less than the 10 mill maximum but the state board decided they would not have enough money to operate schools for a full term, unless the maximum tax was levied. The board agreed to allow Dade, Gadsden and Hamilton counties to levy less than the 10 mill maximum as it considered these counties will not need the maximum.

Reports from 54 other counties showed they are levying the full 10 mills as allowed by the constitution. The new school law, enacted by the 1933 Legislature, gives the board the power to direct counties to levy up to the maximum of 10 mills, if in the board's opinion the counties are not levying sufficient school taxes to finance an eight months' term.

Communications to the board from the University of Florida and Florida State College for Women indicating these institutions are worried about the interpretation of the new law prohibiting employment of school teachers or other public workers who have not been legal residents of Florida at least two years.

The state board was informed two professors at the Women's college have been on the faculty more than ten years, yet neither has established a legal residence in this state. This and other similar questions regarding the two-year residential law were referred to the Attorney General for an advisory ruling, before the board passed on them.

MOVE PLANNED FOR REDUCTION OF TRADE BARS

Several questions of importance as illustrating the President's methods have arisen in the preliminary discussions with Ambassador Epif. of Argentina. Roosevelt regards as significant what is accomplished, a proposal to facilitate the importation of Argentine apples at certain periods of the year with American products to be taken by the South American nation in exchange.

Under this suggestion, the tariff on apples from the Argentine would be lowered during the months of June, July, and August, when the previous fall's domestic output is becoming undesirable for eating. It is then late fall and winter in the Argentine and the apple crop there is ready for export. A proviso would be added under which the Argentine apples, imported but still uncut, would be withdrawn from the domestic market when the home grown crop begins to appear.

In exchange for the American concession in reducing the tariff, the Argentine republic would decrease its duties on stipulated products of the United States enabling the domestic producer to sell in the South American country, receiving the credits built up by the apple imports.

As with all the trade discussions, the negotiations with Argentina still are in a preliminary and explorative stage.

Argentina is interested, too, in obtaining concessions that would permit shipments of meat to the United States.

The President has suggested that "mate," a South American beverage popular as a substitute for tea and coffee, might find a market in the United States. Hides, casain and flasseed are other products which the South Americans are anxious to sell here. Brazil is interested in keeping coffee on the free list.

INDUSTRY IS SPEEDING TO SUBMIT CODES

(Continued from page 1) because they were in a hurry to get on the first of the navy's $230,000,000 shipbuilding program, half of which is to go to private firms.

The ship men want the recovery administrator and President Roosevelt to find that the 30 hour work week, prescribed by the act for naval construction where feasible, is not a practical proposition.

They proposed that the 48 hour week be substituted. They offered minimum wages of 35 cents an hour in the South, 45 cents an hour in the North and West. The navy program at a 40 hour rate, they said, would cause 250 per cent unemployment in their badly depressed industry-making jobs for a big majority of those now out.

Johnson had not received the steel industry's code, whose presentation yesterday had been indicated earlier, but there was no explanation of the delay nor any change in the announced expectation that it would be in quickly.

The administrator was making an intense study of the feasibility of proclaiming levels of wages and working hours to be adopted by the law apparently offered on July 11, which such a general usage could be mandatory.

If he finds a way to do it, the administrative indications were that the President would rely fully on his judgment and approve his desires.

Secretary Hooper of the commerce department said he expected a recommendation to be made soon.

A new question arose for the administrators in getting into operation the cotton textile code, promulgated to take effect July 17. The President attacked many conditions in approving it; he prescribed that what collar workers should be included in the wage and hour prescriptions; that no "stretch-out" system be imposed to make mill workers do more labor under the new scales; and that the ratio between minimum wage earners and the higher earners be maintained by raises for the higher.

Reports spread in the industry that Johnson would not require these presidential prescriptions to be effected at the same time as the terms subscribed to in the code proper. That was denied. In prospect is a conference, probably this week, to devise methods of putting the whole thing in order for a start next Monday.

The possibility existed, nevertheless, that not everything could be worked out within the short time Johnson is opposed to.

If reasonable cause for delays developed, it was believed here he would not hold that violations of the agreement had taken place. Yet, officially, the recovery administration was proceeding on the assumption that July 17 would find the textile code in full operation.

Clearing House Deficit Pared By Means Of Economy

WINTER HAVEN, July 12.—(AP)—Manager A. M. Pratt reported at a meeting of the Florida Citrus Growers' Clearing House Association here yesterday that the practice of strict economy last season resulted in a deficit of only $8,000 instead of the anticipated one of $20,000.

Activities of the association reported by Pratt included support of the Growers and Shippers League of Florida; a share in securing a 35 per cent reduction in freight rates on citrus movements to Southeastern states during the year and a cut in shipments on the St. Louis San Francisco railroad, effective next season; promotion of a $60,000 advertising campaign for Florida citrus; successful prosecution of a suit against the break up fruit-stealing and sponsoring the standardization bill and the state citrus advertising measure, both of which failed to be enacted.
