Sanford officials see need for more workers

By MICK PFEIFER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Each year at this time, City of Sanford department heads receive a request to begin compiling information to be used in preparing the annual budget. One of the first steps is to determine whether new and additional employees are needed.

The first round of personnel requests was considered Monday afternoon during the commission workshop meeting. In all, a total of 26 new hires were proposed, among eight departments.

The commissioners heard presentations from each department head, but accepted the information as only background in preparation for later discussion.

Signs of the times: Old-time or new?

By JEFF BERLINCKE

SANFORD — They are signs of the times.

The times are the early days of Sanford when the city was new and trying to become a vital part of Central Florida.

Street signs dot the current downtown historical district that date back to those days. Unfortunately for those who want to maintain the historical taste to the area, the street signs - white, with black bordering and black raised letters - may soon be replaced by updated, illuminated street signs.

Sanford City Commissioner Lon Howell said the new signs would not change the aesthetic qualities, they

Spaziano wants taxpayer money in effort to overturn verdict

By The Associated Press

ORLANDO — Former death row inmate Joseph Spaziano, trying for a second time to overturn a jury verdict on recanted testimony, also wants taxpayers to pay his lawyers.

Spaziano escaped the electric chair in January when a circuit judge in Sanford ruled that key witness Anthony DiLisio lied during a 1976 murder trial. Spaziano, 50, who remains in Florida State Prison on a 1975 rape conviction, now seeks to throw out that verdict for the same reason.

Circuit Judge Belvin Perry has set a June 10 hearing on a request by an Orlando attorney to declare Spaziano indigent so that Orange County would pay legal costs for the defense effort on the rape case.

Spaziano lawyer James Ruse will argue that DiLisio lied in the rape trial, too.

Spaziano, who became known as "Crazy Joe" during his days as an Outlaws motorcycle gang member, was sentenced in August 1975 to life in prison plus five years.

Five months later, he was tried in Sanford in the slaying of Laura Lynn Harberts, an 18-year-old hospital clerk from Orlando whose body was found in Seminole County.

Ruse and his colleagues have submitted a

Bicycle fatality this morning

Herald Photos by Tommy Viscusi

An unidentified teen-ager riding his bicycle through the intersection of U.S. Highway 17-92 and Airport Boulevard in Sanford was struck by a car early this morning. The young man was pronounced dead at the scene of the accident. Sanford Police were still investigating the accident late this morning at press time, but had determined only that the young man was about 15 years-old and was a student at either Lakeview Middle School or Seminole High School. Administrators at Lakeview are preparing for grief counseling for their students if it is necessary. Police had not yet released the name of the victim. No charges have been filed in the accident.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Trigger man sentenced

SHALIMAR — The trigger man in the execution-style slaying of a teen-age boy and girl has been sentenced to life in prison, while a drug dealer who ordered the slayings is still awaiting his fate.

Circuit Judge G. Robert Barron immediately sentenced Joseph Francis Sykoosky III, who'd been an honor student and standout athlete in his native California. Sykoosky smiled and patted his attorneys on the back after jurors recommended Tuesday he be spared from the electric chair.

The jury convicted him on two counts each of first-degree murder and aggravated child abuse. He was sentenced to two 15-year prison terms on the latter counts.

Sykoosky, already serving a 40-year sentence on federal drug charges, will appeal, his lawyer said.

Last month, a separate jury also convicted Charles Donaldson, 24, of Fort Walton Beach, on first-degree murder charges, recommending that Donaldson be sentenced to death. No sentencing date has been set.

Shooter gets life

JACKSONVILLE — A 21-year-old man who shot a teen-ager dead for a set of tire rims got a life prison sentence from a Jacksonville judge who exceeded state sentencing guidelines by decades.

Widow Zacharia, the mother of murder victim Terek Zacharia, pumped her fist in support as Circuit Judge Henry E. Davis imposed the life sentence on Johnny Jones.

Davis also sentenced Jones to a concurrent 15-year sentence for attempted armed robbery.

The sentencing came at the end of an emotional three-hour hearing Tuesday, in which Jones' family and friends urged leniency, while Zacharia's friends and relatives urged a harsher punishment than the 14-to-25-year sentence recommended under sentencing guidelines.

Davis said he'd pondered the case daily since April 27, when Jones was convicted of second-degree murder and attempted armed robbery. The life sentence, he said, was warranted in light of Jones' criminal record.

Burglar falls on woman who shot him

CAPE CORAL — A woman shot a burglar four times and killed him, but believed her life was still in danger when he fell lifeless on top of her.

"He pinned me so tightly to the floor that at that moment, I'm truly convinced I've lost the fight for my life because I can't move and I can't get away from him," said Bonnie Faust.

"He's spitting up blood all in my hair and face." Police are not considering charges against Faust, 49, who was treated and released from a hospital Friday after the burglary attempt.

Faust was relaxing in bed early Friday morning after spending much of the night cleaning out her closets. She had just returned from opening the sliding glass door in the dining room to let the cat out when she heard a noise.

A moment later she saw a figure barreling through the glass door and into her bedroom. When John Wayne Horne, 36, lunged at her and hit her on the head, she fired again — four times in all — until he pulled her to the floor as he fell.

'Cinderella' bill would put the brakes on teen night driving

TALLAHASSEE — A "Cinderella" bill that would force 16-year-olds to get off the road by 11 p.m. is drawing opposition not only from teen-agers but even some parents.

Backers of the legislation wanted to cut down on night driving hours for teen-agers to try to reduce the number of fatal crashes involving inexperienced drivers.

The young driver curfew awaiting Gov. Lawton Chiles' signature was prompted by a crash on Interstate 95 last year in Titusville that killed five people, including three teen-agers.

The measure would prevent 16-year-olds from driving between 11 p.m. and 6 a.m. unless accompanied by a licensed driver at least 21 years old. For 17-year-olds, the restriction would be in effect from 1-6 a.m.

The restrictions would be lifted at 18. Florida currently puts no restrictions on when 16- and 17-year-olds may drive.

Violations could be punished by a $50 fine and three points.

Most youths are safe drivers. Most youths are safe drivers. Most youths are safe drivers.

plans would be cramped by the bill.

"Usually I stay out past that time," said Keith Lackey, 16, of Susan.

"It'd be the first one breaking that curfew," said another Eustis resident, Rachel Sedely.

Dan Bailey, a former Lake County commissioner with a 16-year-old son, called the measure an "anti-bid" bill.

"I think it's downright common-sense," said Bailey. He said his son, Brad, would have trouble returning to their rural Lake County home by 11 p.m.

after a late movie on Friday and Saturday nights.

But the sponsor of the bill, Rep. Earl Ziebarth, R-DeLand, said the bill has the backing of the Department of Highway Safety and Motor Vehicles, as he expects Chiles to sign it.

"No. 1, we know it's going to save lives, and No. 2, we know it's going to cut down on the number of crashes," said Ziebarth.

Sixteen other states have so-called "graduated" licenses that impose similar limits, Ziebarth said.

Crew flunks test, real fire

FORT LAUDERDALE — The crew of a Discovery Cruise LEE ship did so poorly in a fire drill six days before the ship caught fire that the Coast Guard held a impromptu training session, Coast Guard records show.

"If this had been a real fire, they would have had six firefighters, three officers and all of the support personnel," Coast Guard inspector Val A. Deutsch wrote in a May 2 inspection report. "If this had been a real fire, they would have been dead."

The ship with 800 passengers was on its daily run from Fort Everglades to Freeport, Bahamas on May 8 when an engine-room fire broke out. Passengers and the Coast Guard reported that the crew had problems putting the fire out.

Deutsch had approved the ship for its quarterly certification six days earlier after holding a training session and noting that he thought they had learned their lesson, according to a Coast Guard report released Wednesday.

Discovery Cruise spokesman Larry Turner told the Sun-Sentinel of Fort Lauderdale that the crew must have improved in the deficient areas that Deutsch had noted or the inspector would not have found the ship in compliance with required international safety standards.

Turner said the training session may have also saved lives during the May 8 fire.

Jury deliberates in Zile murder trial

WEST PALM BEACH — John Zile could learn his fate later today for allegedly beating to death his 7-year-old stepdaughter, who had been buried a month before Zile and his wife staged an elaborate kidnap hoax.

Jurors deliberated all day Wednesday in the first-degree murder trial and then broke for the evening. The panel continues deliberations today.

Zile's 29-year-old wife, Pauline, was convicted last year of first-degree murder and aggravated child abuse for killing to protect Christina, her daughter from a previous relationship.

Mrs. Zile, who watched as her daughter was beaten to death in September 1984, now is serving a life sentence.

Zile is charged with first-degree murder in the child's death in September 1984. If convicted, Zile would face either death in Florida's electric chair or life in prison.

In her husband's trial, the defense argued Zile was just trying to handle a troubled stepchild when she accidentally died. The Ziles told authorities Christina had been abducted at a Fort Lauderdale flea market.

That hoax spurred a huge hunt by South Florida law enforcement agencies. Zile later admitted he'd buried Christina weeks earlier behind a Kmart more than 40 miles to the north, in Tequesta, in northern Palm Beach County.

The Ziles kept the girl's body in a closet for two days before deciding what to do with it.

Governor signs Baker Act reform legislation

ST. PETERSBURG — Gov. Lawton Chiles signed legislation to reform Florida's mental commitment law, saying he wanted to protect the dignity and stability of seniors under long-term care.

The governor led a ceremonial signing of a Baker Act reform law Wednesday at Colonial Care Center, a 134-bed nursing home for long-term care and short-term stays for elders recovering from acute surgery.

"For too long we've seen abuses of the Baker Act cost elders not only their dignity, but the stability of their long-term care. In some of the worst cases, elders have even lost their personal possessions and homes," Chiles told an audience of patients and local civic and government leaders.

Under the Baker Act, mentally ill people who are judged to be a danger to themselves or others can be committed voluntarily or involuntarily to a state mental hospital or other psychiatric facility for treatment. The reform, which takes effect in October, aims to prevent the inappropriate commitment of seniors.

The new law requires administrators in nursing homes to call families before transferring residents to a mental hospital. Those being committed must be allowed contact with family and attorneys. Also, it requires a transfer evaluation by an independent examiner before moving a patient.

Forged instrument

Sanford police arrested Thomas Jerome Inman, 28, 1215 Randolph Street, on Tuesday. Officers said he was attempting to cash a check which was identified as having been stolen. He was charged with uttering a forged instrument.

According to the police report, during an interrogation at the Sanford police department, Inman reportedly told them he had obtained the check for $150 from another man.

During the questioning, police said Inman's pocket pager sounded several times, and it was found that the caller was the man being discussed as having given Inman the check. Police said Inman cooperated and called the man back, arranging to meet him at a Sanford location.

When the man, identified as Armand Renee Campanis, 38, of CR-418, Osteen, arrived, police placed him under arrest in connection with the case. Campanis was subsequently charged with uttering a forged instrument, and initiating plans/financing/supervising the theft of property.

Police indicated they are continuing their investigation into the case and further charges may be made.

Burglary case

Devon Jamerson Smith, 19, of 1100 W. Third Street, was arrested by Sanford police this past Friday. According to the arrest report, on March 23, a burglary was reported in the 1400 block of S. Sanford Avenue, during which time someone stole a 1988 Chevrolet van. The van was eventually found abandoned, in Mount Dora, by Mount Dora police. It was returned to its owner.

Sanford police checked the vehicle on March 26, and located a charge card, which was taken into evidence, and reportedly proved to be of assistance in resolving the case.

On April 1, Crime Line received an anonymous call regarding information in the case, and police were able to locate the caller who told them Smith had brought over the van and taken him for a ride.

Smith was located at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility Friday, where he was officially charged with burglary to a structure and grand theft.

Educating judges on domestic violence

By GAILA VIL GARDNER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Judges must be educated about domestic violence, says Denise Brown, who concedes that even she didn't understand it before her sister, Nicole Brown Simpson, was killed two years ago.

"I was the first one to say that I did not think Nicole was a battered woman," Denise Brown told the Senate Judiciary Committee on Wednesday. "It was because I didn't realize, I didn't know, I didn't know what domestic violence was. I didn't understand it."

When judges don't understand, tragedy can result, she said.

She pointed to the New York City case of Galina Komar, 32, who was shot and killed by her ex-boyfriend in February, two weeks after then-Brooklyn

Criminal Judge Loris Duckman freed him on $2,000 bail. Senito Oliver, 20, had been arrested for violating a protection order issued by another judge after Komar complained that he had attacked her several times.

"The judges need to be educated on the complex dynamics involved in domestic violence," Brown told a hearing on the implementation of the Violence Against Women Act, part of the 1994 crime law. Without such knowledge, she said, offenders are "getting a slap on the wrist and going free, and women are getting killed."

The Brown family has founded the Nicole Brown Simpson Charitable Foundation to educate the public on domestic violence. Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ron Goldman were slain June 12, 1994. Her ex-husband, O.J. Simpson, who had a history of domestic violence against his ex-wife, was acquitted in October of both killings.

The Violence Against Women act, she said, are the calls to the National Domestic Violence Hotline, which opened Feb. 21.

"In its first months, the hotline received almost 15,000 calls. Nearly half of those calls were from victims of domestic violence — many of whom did not know where to go for help," she said.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, Judiciary Committee chairman, said he was concerned the department has prosecuted only a "handful of cases" based on the law's new crimes.

Reno said she had no precise figure, but that each case is analyzed to determine if state or federal prosecution was most appropriate.

Under the Violence Against Women law, states will receive $130 million to help them train law enforcement officers on handling domestic violence calls, hire prosecutors and help victims of violence, Reno said.

The 1994 law also made interstate domestic violence a federal offense.

Congress urged to act against gay marriages

By GABRIELLA SURELLA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Gay rights extremists in Hawaii are trying to get the Constitution to force all states to accept same-sex marriages, witnesses told a House committee considering a bill that would define marriage in federal law.

To head them off, Congress should quickly pass the bill, which would define marriage as a "legal union between one man and one woman," said three state legislators: Rep. Deborah Whyman, a Republican from Michigan; Rep. Marilyn Musgrave, a Colorado Republican; and Rep. Terrance W.H. Tom, a Hawaii Democrat.

Gay-rights groups "are trying to accomplish through judicial fiat what they could never accomplish via the legislative process," Whyman told the Senate Judiciary Committee's Domestic Violence subcommittee.

"It's like telling you to stop the execution and allow the state to regulate marriage without the interference of another state's courts," she said Wednesday.

The bill would give states authority to reject the legality of same-sex marriages performed in any other state. But it wouldn't block any state from conferring its own legal status on same-sex unions, said the bill's sponsor Rep. Bob Barr, R-Ga.

Something needs to be done to keep gay marriage invalid under federal law to make it clear that same-sex couples are ineligible for various federal benefits, including Social Security, Barr said.

Barr said he introduced the bill in response to a gay-rights case that could make Hawaii the first state to recognize same-sex marriages. If such marriages were ruled legal in Hawaii, the Constitution would require that all other states accept gay marriages performed there as legal, he said.

The Constitution generally entitles a law in one state to "full faith and credit" in all the other states. That's why a couple considered married in Hawaii also is considered legally wed in all other states.

But opponents of the bill, including some who previously opposed gay marriage, told the hearing that the bill was an attempt to "step up energy" that went during a presidential election year.

"The Republican national campaign is not doing very well, and there is a concerted effort to change the subject," said Rep. Barney Frank, an openly gay Democrat from Massachusetts.

President Clinton and Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., the GOP's presumptive presidential nominee, both have said they oppose same-sex marriages.

Clinton gathers executives to air corporate responsibility

By MARTIN CRUTCHER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — President Clinton is opening a new front in his election-year battle against economic anxiety — this time hoping to turn the White House into a bully pulpit that will spotlight corporate responsibility.

Clinton has invited 75 business executives from around the country to participate in a series of roundtable discussions on the theme of good corporate citizenship.

The sessions were to get under way today with breakfast at the White House, followed by panel discussions at Georgetown University.

Companies that have excelled at creating family-friendly workplaces, offering generous health care and retirement benefits or upgrading workers' skills will be invited to tell their stories with the goal of inspiring other corporations to do the same.

In advance of the meeting, Clinton said executives' pay was too high when compared with their employees.

"It's gone too far," Clinton said Wednesday in an interview appearing in today's editions of USA Today.

Republicans, seeking to defeat Clinton in November, called the White House Conference on Corporate Responsibility nothing more than an election gimmick that offered the wrong prescriptions for what ailed the economy.

GOP National Chairman Haley Barbour said it was "evidence of this administration's desire to control the economy."

And some major lobbying groups for businesses also were leery.

"Focusing on the positive steps corporations are taking to help their employees is a welcome antidote to some of the hysterical corporate bashing that has occurred," said Jerry Janowski, president of the National Association of Manufacturers. "But all to often this administration has been more of a hindrance than a help."

Janowski said rather than hosting a White House conference, businesses would prefer to see the administration backing efforts to cut taxes and enact regulatory and legal relief that would make it easier for them to create new jobs.

Among those invited to make presentations today were executives from Optiva Corp. of Bellevue, Wash., which provides both full-time and part-time employees with health benefits and reimbursements for college education; Fel-Pro Inc. of Skokie, Ill., which offers on-site day care facilities plus scholarships and savings bonds to all children of its 1,700 employees; and Starbucks Corp. of Seattle, one of the first major retail chains to offer part-time workers similar health benefits as those provided fulltime employees.

Labor Secretary Robert Reich said it was entirely legitimate for Clinton to be using his bully pulpit to encourage the right types of corporate behavior, especially after a spate of unfavorable news stories last winter generated by layoffs such as the out of 40,000 jobs at AT&T Corp.

After the AT&T layoff announcement in January, presidential candidate Pat Buchanan won the New Hampshire primary with a corporate-bashing campaign that railed against greedy companies shipping U.S. jobs overseas while the "forgotten Americans" watched their wages stagnate.

While the administration hopes its spotlight on good companies will help calm economic anxiety in an election year, some congressional Democrats have expressed disappointment that Clinton is not going further to address a more activist approach to combating stagnant wages and job insecurity.

But Reich insisted that the rhetoric of corporate America already has begun to change under the glare of public criticism. He said recent restructuring announcements, including the merger of Bell Atlantic and Nynex, have been made with an eye to lessening the number of layoffs rather than trumpeting big layoffs as a way of impressing investors with cost-cutting moves.

"I think the climate has changed," he told reporters before the conference. "Recent restructuring announcements have been made not only with Wall Street in mind but also Main Street."

Thank you, Mary Klages

Why was the American flag hanging at half-mast yesterday in front of the Seminole County Sheriff's office? If it wasn't for Mary Klages, probably very few people would know the answer.

Mary, the major telephone switchboard operator at the sheriff's office has taken on the responsibility of running the flag up the pole every morning. She also displays flags for the state, and others, to the sides of the American flag.

Although she hoists the flags by herself, she will snap to attention when she does, and give a military salute to the national symbol as it flies proudly at the highest pole.

"Mary, why is the flag at half mast," she was asked. "It's Peace Officer Memorial Day," she replied, listing several members of the sheriff's department and other area law enforcement officers who have given their lives in the pursuit of law enforcement.

"President Clinton declared the day to honor law enforcement officers across the nation," she said.

According to the presidential proclamation, since May 4, 1963, May 15th has been designated as a day in which to honor fallen officers across the nation. Approximately 21,000 officers nationwide were honored at special ceremonies at 10 a.m. yesterday at the American Police Hall of Fame and Museum in Miami.

We expect, other than people who noticed the flag in the position of honor yesterday at the sheriff's office, few people realized the importance of the day.

With so much publicity for the event, most media also was unaware of it. The observance, therefore, passed us by without proper attention being paid to it.

Therefore, even though it's too late for yesterday's observance, let's pause, possibly this Sunday morning during services, and give at least a few moments thought to people who were willing to put their lives on the line in order to protect the rest of us, and subsequently paid the ultimate price.

And let's also extend appreciation to people like Mary Klages, who take the time and make an effort to help give light to those of us who may not see the total picture of what's going on in our world today.

Best-kept secret

Just a note to say "many thanks" for the excellent editorial on April 30 encouraging people to expand their horizons, better their lives, and enroll at Seminole Community College.

As I have ventured out into the community these last 50 plus days, I have been amazed at the low profile that SCC has kept over the years. Most don't realize that we enroll 50,000 annually, that we have a summer study program at Cambridge University in England, that we have an excellent honor's program and that students from 60 countries currently attend classes here.

Thanks to your good efforts, hopefully, the phones will begin ringing off the wall.

Clintonomics don't mesh with reality

Are you better off than you were four years ago? Has your paycheck kept pace with inflation? Do you have more of your income left over after taxes?

If you're like most Americans, you answered no to each of these questions. Yet to hear President Clinton and his economic advisers tell it, the economy is booming, the American job machine is chugging along at a record clip, and working families are in the best shape they've been in three decades.

But a new study by the Heritage Foundation exposes Clinton's rosy economic scenario as a fiction. According to Heritage, the Clinton tax hike of 1993 will reduce the number of new jobs by 1.3 million, reduce employee wages and salaries by $112 billion, and cost the typical family roughly $2,000 in higher taxes.

Of course, the White House disputes these figures, suggesting that the authors of the study, Scott Hodge and William Beach, suffer a conservative bias. But the Heritage economists did not make up their numbers out of whole cloth. They arrived at their projections by employing a computer model widely used by the federal government and many leading U.S. corporations.

And as my friends on the Wall Street Journal editorial page noted last week, the computer model in question (the Washington University Macro Model) won the Blue Chip Economic Forecasting Award in 1985 and 1986. It was developed by Lawrence Meyer, an economist whom President Clinton respects so much that he recently appointed him to the Federal Reserve Board.

The White House boasts that the economy has sustained steady growth since Clinton moved into the Oval Office. That is true. But it is also true that the economy has not grown nearly as much as it would have had Clinton's $241 billion tax hike not been enacted in 1993.

If you're the most American, you answered no to each of these questions.

Indeed, in 1993, the gross domestic product grew just 2.1 percent, which is less than half the 4.3 percent growth rate Clinton inherited from George Bush. Moreover, over the past 5-1/2 years under Clinton, the GDP has increased by less than half as much as the average of previous postwar expansions.

In dollars and cents terms, this translates into $600 billion in lost output between 1993 and 1995, or a $2,100 lower standard of living for every household in America.

It's the same thing with jobs. The White House claims that during the past 5-1/2 years, the economy has generated some 5 million new jobs. That is true. But it is also true, according to Heritage, that the Clinton economy has produced 1.3 million fewer jobs than it would have without his tax hike.

Even more disturbing, half of major U.S. companies eliminated jobs in the 12 months ending June 1993, up from 47 percent the year before. In March 1993, nearly 5 million Americans were working two or more jobs to make ends meet, up 10 percent from two years earlier. And less than one-third of workers who've lost full-time jobs since Clinton has been in the White House have found new jobs that pay the same as their old ones.

War hero McCain has the right stuff

Some advice for Bob Dole -- no charge. His for the price of a newspaper: If he wants a first-rate running mate, what he should do is write four names on slips of paper and drop them in a hat.

John McCain, John McCain, John McCain.

Then he should draw one. Presto, he's got a winner.

If you read Newsweek magazine, you will have seen an alternate viewpoint. "Washingtonians are deep into speculation about (Dole's) running mate," the magazine recently reported.

While circulating inside the Beltway last week was Arizona Sen. John McCain, a Vietnam War hero.... One problem: McCain was one of the notorious Keating Five, which could make him an easy target.... Another problem: McCain says he's not interested."

Second problem first: Not being a McCain confidant, I cannot say from personal knowledge whether he would agree to run with Dole. But I have a source who knows McCain very well, and this is what the source says: "He doesn't seek it. He is not addicted to power. He does not need a fix. But if it was offered, yes, he would accept."

As for the Keating Five thing, it is patent nonsense. I'll come back to that, but first I would like to say why I think John McCain would make a perfect running mate for Dole.

Like Dole, for whom he has great affection, McCain is a war hero. He is an Annapolis graduate, the son and grandson of Navy admirals. His father jet was shot down over Hanoi on Oct. 24, 1967. He bailed out, landed with two broken arms and a busted knee and was bayoneted by the mob that greeted him.

He was tossed into the infamous "Hanoi Hilton" prison camp, where he was hung by his fractured arms for hours at a time. The North Vietnamese, thinking it would demoralize American troops to grant favors to an admiral's son, offered to let him go, but for 5-1/2 years he refused.

McCain is a maverick. He is a conservative, a defense and deficit hawk, but he is often at odds with his peers because he studies the issues independently, takes his own and the lead with it. He drove anti-barrel projects, especially in the defense budget. He believes in military readiness, but thinks Star Wars is a waste. He tried to eliminate congressional parking privileges at local airports. He disapproved of draft-dodging, but after Bill Clinton was elected commander in chief, he offered to accompany the president to the Vietnam Memorial.

And now to Charles Keating. A decade ago, the savings-and-loan magnate was one of the richest and most powerful men in Arizona. He contributed over $100,000 to McCain's campaign and invited McCain and his wife to the Keating retreat in the Bahamas. The McCain went. They meant to reimburse Keating, but never got around to it.

In 1997, as federal regulators were closing in on Keating, he asked several senators to intervene. McCain refused. Keating called him a wimp, and the two had a shouting match. Later, McCain and four other senators met with regulators to hear their case against Keating. Afterward, McCain told an aide: "We've done everything we're going to do on this thing."

He never spoke with Keating again.

That's your notorious John McCain-Charles Keating scandal.

I think you would like him.

Then he should draw one. Presto, he's got a winner.

GUEST COLUMNIST

Saying no to conditional use

This letter represents my very strong objection as a request that 1900 Magnolia Avenue be allowed the conditional use as a Bed and Breakfast. The request is to be dealt with at a public hearing tonight. My reasons are listed below. Let me preface these reasons with several comments.

Over the last year I, as well as surrounding neighbors, have been concerned with the deteriorating condition of the property and the structure. Normal routine maintenance and upkeep on the structure and the property has not been performed. The exterior maintenance with regard to the house and garage is quite apparent, given the condition of the house prior to Mr. Maryanski's purchase. Many Sanford natives, such as I, know the house as the former residence of Mr. & Mrs. Hill, one of the oldest families in this area (Hill Lumber). The stately grace of the house was charming. Now, however, the residence is characterized by rotting fence, dead foliage and a backyard reeking of offensive odors and deteriorating due to the presence of two dogs.

To make matters even worse, it became known that the inhabitants are renting rooms, as well. It was at that point that I registered, anonymously at first, a complaint on April 23rd with the zoning office, stating that this situation was a violation of the codes for single family, in that I know full well that single family zoning precludes a multiple family situation. I was told by a lady named Julie that Don Florian would investigate and that Russ Gilson would be notified. I was to follow up this week. The attached notice, interestingly noted, arrived May 4th.

My objection is predicated upon the following reasons:

1. The residential area is not an appropriate area for the existence of such a use. The property is not located within or even adjacent to the part of the city that is "historical" and offers the amenities that make our area unique (i.e., the lakefront, main street shops, etc.). This fact alone would preclude granting the maximum intended use of the establishment.

2. There is inadequate parking, with only the front of the house offering any semblance of safe parking, and very little space at that. The north side of the house features a driveway area directly opposite the driveway of Mr. & Mrs. Richard Swann and has been a continual headache and inconvenience to them, with all the activity at the house, due to the occupants. Nineteenth Street is an active street, to which I, personally am witness, perhaps even more than others. Being situated on the corner of 19th and Park, I can attest to the fact of a continual flow of traffic spilling over from Park Avenue. It is a nice shortcut in Sanford Avenue and the percentage of use has greatly increased over the last 12 years while I have lived at this location, which is within 300 feet of 1900 Magnolia Avenue.

3. The existence of such an inn would devalue the properties in the area. I can personally feel very strongly that we must maintain the integrity of our neighborhood area, and work to preserve the unique character and charm that Sanford has to offer. This charm and the way of life we all enjoy is no longer a secret, as more and more people, monthly, are discovering what we have enjoyed for years. We should seek to welcome and encourage these new prospective neighbors, but at the same time we should not undermine that uniqueness by allowing conversion of dwellings to a use inappropriate and disruptive in nature and one that is "out of character," as stated above, to the specific area. (As a side note, I understand that the house on the corner of 10th & Magnolia was turned down for such a use due to inadequate parking... and it actually is within the historic district.) We should not deplete our inventory of wonderful old homes by allowing such a conversion, especially if other factors exist, as cited above. To the contrary, we should capitalize on their existence and treasure them, recognizing their value as homes for those who appreciate just exactly what they are... gifts from the past!

4. In that the proprietors of the Bed & Breakfast Inn live in the house, this house would not even be adequate as such an inn. Only two bedrooms would be provided for visitors. The third bedroom constitutes the Master Suite and which one would presume to be the private area for the proprietors. Mr. Maryanski has converted the laundry area (located in the garage) to another sleeping area, which compromises the laundry facilities necessary for the inn.

In closing, let me say that those of us objecting have been in Sanford for years, and some of us second and third generation natives. My great grandfather, J.C. Higgins, built the wonderful home that is now The Higgins House and I am most proud of the contribution that The Higgins House and its proprietors, Walt and Bert Fudget, have made to Sanford, for it represents a jewel of our history. It is properly located and its history intertwines with the community spirit and activities that make Sanford unique. To attempt to reconvert this venture and to allow such inappropriate areas will literally unravel the integrity of the area affected. We cannot allow "boarding houses" to exist upon the whim of someone who purchases and who gradually tries to turn the property into commercial use, however subtle they may try. This is exactly what has happened in 1900 Magnolia. All of the surrounding neighbors are strongly objecting to this use. None of us has ever been approached by Mr. Maryanski regarding this matter. In fact, he is rarely seen. We all have a deeply vested interest in maintaining the stability and integrity of our neighborhood and we will not stand by quietly and see that slip away from us.

I respectfully request that this request for conditional use be denied... for the purpose of preservation, preservation of a wonderful home, preservation of a stable neighborhood and preservation of the history that defines this area, as representative of what Sanford is and offers!

Lake Mary planner: Moratorium on communications towers

By Bob Williams
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY - A new Telecommunications Act was approved by Congress earlier this year. It is expected to result in a heavy increase in the number of communication towers.

Lake Mary Senior Planner Matt West says the city should place a moratorium of possibly 180 days on any decisions pending a further study of the matter.

Lake Mary has already approved a new tower for TV-10 and a 500-foot tower was granted about a year ago.

Tuesday, the city's Planning and Zoning Board approved a request for another 500-foot tower, and West believes this is just the tip of the iceberg for what may be forthcoming.

The city of Sanford Planning and Zoning Commission has already heard requests for several towers in recent months, with possibly another request scheduled at a meeting within the next month.

West says the city should place a moratorium of possibly 180 days on any decisions pending a further study of the matter.

In commenting on the Telecommunications Act, West explained that the legislation creates competition in the telecommunications marketplace by allowing local telephone providers to provide long distance telephone service as well as cable television, radio services, video programming, interactive telecommunications and Internet access.

As a result, he says the FCC (Federal Communications Commission) has said Federal Communications Services (FCS) providers license to compete in the Florida market against local phone and cable companies.

"One of the immediate effects of the FCS license and competition," West said, "will be an increase in the number of communication towers located within and around the city limits."

In order to take more time in which to study the situation, West is suggesting a 180-day moratorium to put into place. The matter is scheduled for discussion during tonight's meeting of the Lake Mary City Commission.

By establishing the moratorium, West said the city staff, city attorney and the Planning and Zoning Board will have an opportunity to evaluate the situation and bring forward recommendations with which to handle what is expected to be an increase in tower construction requests.

West said the cities of Casselberry and Altamonte Springs, as well as Seminole County already have ordinances being drafted for consideration in the near future, regarding moratoriums and towers, and he believes Lake Mary should branch into its own work toward that end.

The Lake Mary City Commission meeting will begin at 8:00 this afternoon with a special work session, followed by the regular meeting beginning at 7 p.m. in the city commission chambers.

Lake Mary City Hall is located at 100 N. Country Club Road.

Signs

would only consist of replacing the raised letters with ones that are illuminated.

He also asked Sanford City Manager Bill Simmons to take the request for a change until Monday's City Commission meeting.

Simmons was unavailable for comment.

Howell said he also agreed with those protesting the change.

"For homeowners to get change approved, they have to go through the historical board," Howell said. "The city should have to do the same thing. If they are going to replace a sign, they have to make sure they get approval from the historical board."

Part of the reason for the change is the city's $11 outdoor lighting program which allows for emergency services in response to any 911 call automatically, without the caller giving the address. The historic signs do not list block numbers and are considered more difficult to spot at night but some Sanford citizens are concerned that the move could be the first step to depriving the downtown area of its historic quality.

"I think the city needs to be more sensitive to the needs of the historic district and I realize this is a new thing for the city government but the area needs to be looked at as a city within a city," Sanford resident Steve Myers said.

The street signs are some of only several things that have been part of the downtown renaissance which has taken place over the past 17 years. When the rehabilitation began, the one-way street was being overhauled by low-budget housing and the city's reputation - along with its charm - began to decline.

New homeowners began to come into the area and slowly, the historic district began to take on the look of old-time Sanford. Street names were reprinted on the sides of the streets, brick streets were updated and other projects were implemented to recreate the old-time look.

"The city needs to realize the value in all of this," Myers said.

Now the street sign controversy has evolved. Karen McNeil, president of the Sanford Historic Trust, has heard from many of the citizens who reside in the district.

"Most people in the historical district want the old signs to remain," McNeil said.

As a result of the controversy, McNeil said the Historic Trust is holding a meeting for concerned citizens on Thursday, June 6 at the First Street Gallery in the historic district at 7 p.m. She added that everyone is invited.

work and reduce duplication with other departments regarding city liability and special liability needs for various departments.

He also asked for three firefighter/paramedics. "These would be for Station 3, in the west side of the city," he said. "Calls since 1993 are up 63 percent higher than we had anticipated in that area. We are looking at 2.5 million square feet of business buildings, 1,500 new homes, 3,500 additional residents, and over 40,000 vehicles which will need to be handled, in that area alone."

Parks and Recreation - P&R Director Mike Kirby explained that he needed a custodial worker and recreation worker. He said both would be an entry level position. Parks Director Howard Jeffries discussed four maintenance workers needed for the Parks and Grounds maintenance division. He explained that the city keeps adding parks, but not personnel to maintain them properly. The suggestion was made to contact the sheriff's office to determine if prisoners might be used on work programs rather than require new personnel.

Utilities Department - Department head Paul Moore asked for one maintenance worker who would serve as a meter reader. "We have two at this time, but they are overloaded and we really need three readers," he said.

Planning and Development - Director of Planning and Development Jay Shuler asked for one Land Development Technician, and one graphics draft person. The draft person position is presently under a temporary employment agreement.

Public Works - Director Jerry Herman requested five new employees, one mechanic to work in equipment repair, two tradesworkers to work in maintenance which include stop light, street lights and other items.

He asked for a foreman to help supervise in tree removal, and an equipment operator for the street division. "We have all the equipment we need at this time," he said, "but we simply don't have enough personnel to accomplish the work."

Staff - City Clerk Jan Dougherty asked for one clerk-typist to work for the clerk and city manager's department. "We have a small staff now," she explained, "and when someone is sick or on vacation, we are really short."

Police Department - Police Chief Ralph Russell requested six new persons. One would be a community service officer, two for police officers in the uniform division to work in the area of Seminole Towne Center, one to work in the evidence/supply custodian area, and two uniform officers to work at the airport.

Regarding the officers required for the mail, Russell explained that in the first quarter, officers have already responded to 719 calls, and he expected the number will be over 2,000 for the year.

For evidence/supply he observed, "We are operating about three years behind right now, and there is much to do in destroying old evidence, turning over cases, researching old cases and handling supplies."

Community Development - Director Charles Rowe asked for one part-time secretary to free some of his personnel to other duties, especially in the area of code enforcement. "We are getting more and more forms which need to be filled out," he said, "and a part-time secretary would be of big help."

During commission discussion, Mayor Bettye Smith opined that she believes it may be more important to insure that the present staff can be paid in keeping with what other cities are paying in Central Florida, rather than concentrating on hiring new personnel.

"I had one department head, who I won't identify," said Commissioner Whitely Schmitt, "who told me personally that he would hold off on any new personnel requests if his department could be granted a COLA." (cost of living adjustment).

"The impact if we hire this many people would be significant," said City Manager Bill Simmons, "but I suggest we put the police and fire departments on hold in this consideration until bargaining matters are resolved."

He added, "But we should consider the need, rather than the cost in many of these requests."

It will be up to Simmons to begin trimming down requests prior to the beginning of budget hearings, which are scheduled to begin in next month. On 111-1

$100,000 bill to Seminole County for work done on the murder case. The state attorney's office is protesting some of the submitted expenses - which include $198 for Spaziano's clothes and $84.15 spent for food and drink at a Casselberry tavern bar by a defense investigator.

In Sanford Tuesday, Circuit Judge G.H. Eaton scheduled a hearing June 14 on who should pay the Seminole County expenses.

Orange County prosecutor Paula Coffman said she thinks Spaziano may have $8,000 in his prison bank account. But that would not go far in what could be a lengthy court fight over the rape verdict.

Senate after Dole

Lott ready to replace Dole, but others may challenge him

By DAVID BEPP
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — An old Southern rivalry is being played out on a new, national stage as Mississippi Sen. Trent Lott and Thad Cochran square off to replace Sen. Bob Dole as Senate Majority Leader.

"I'm in pretty good shape," the 54-year-old Lott said Wednesday as he swiftly moved to fill the void left by Dole's decision to resign the Senate to devote full time to his lagging presidential campaign. Asked whether he has a majority of Republicans lined up in support of his candidacy, Lott smiled and replied, "I hope so."

A few hours later, Cochran, said it was too early to handicap the race. "We all started off at square one today, dealing with the reality of an unusual election," he said. However it turns out, he added, "I'm not going to have any hard feelings and I hope he won't either."

Republicans who have known both men say they have been rivals for much of their tenure in Congress together, which began with their election to the House in 1973. Just last year, for example, Lott leapfrogged over the more senior Cochran to win election as whip, the No. 2 job in the caucus.

Two other Republicans are potential entrants into the majority leader's race, with the election to be held at some undetermined date in June. Dole's resignation is expected to take effect by June 11.

One, Sen. Don Nickles of Oklahoma, said Wednesday he might pass up the contest to seek the whip's job, the No. 2 leadership post that Lott is relinquishing.

Also, Sen. Pete V. Domenici of New Mexico, talked with colleagues to gauge his chances in the race, according to aides. He declined to speak to reporters about the vacancy in the job of Republican leader.

"The brass ring only comes around so often," Minnesota Sen. Rod Grams said Wednesday, as the jockeying began.

The majority leader's post is immensely powerful in the Senate, a type of first among equals.

The occupant of the job decides what legislation comes to the floor, in the current political environment, Dole's successor will also play a major role in crafting legislation that would be sent to President Clinton in the run-up to the fall elections.

The prizes are substantial, as well — a large staff, a car and driver, and a suite of offices just down the hall from the Senate floor with a glorious view of the historic Washington Mall, a working fireplace for cold days and a private, outdoor balcony for the warm ones.

Lott, 54, first elected to the Senate in 1986, has long been considered an automatic contender for the job when it became vacant.

He topped Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., Dole's longtime deputy, in a contested election in January 1988, on the strength of support from younger, more conservative senators.

Many Republicans said that if elected, Lott would bring a more combative style to the post than Dole employed in relation to the Democrats. His ascension would also give House Speaker Newt Gingrich an ideological ally and close associate with whom to work across the Capitol grounds.

"Trent Lott was my mentor at one time when he served in the House," Gingrich said Wednesday.

Cochran jumped swiftly into the race, as well. "I am a candidate for Senate majority leader," he said in a statement released shortly after Dole's formal announcement.

Oxygen generators hazardous cargo

WASHINGTON — The oxygen generators that have become suspect in the deadly ValuJet crash in Florida are classified as hazardous cargo that the airline was not authorized to haul, federal regulators say.

Federal Aviation Administration officials said Wednesday that while the generators are standard equipment on most planes, they are considered hazardous materials when carried as cargo.

ValuJet "is not an authorized 'hazmat' carrier," the FAA said.

The National Transportation Safety Board has reported the generators were carried in the cargo hold of the plane that crashed Saturday in the Everglades, killing 110 people. FAA officials stressed that they have not concluded that the airline was carrying hazardous items.

China blames U.S.

BEIJING (AP) — China blamed the United States today for souring already strained relations by allowing a dispute over copyright piracy to degenerate into threats of trade sanctions.

The U.S. decision Wednesday to release a list of Chinese goods targeted for punitive import duties forced China to issue its own slate of counter-sanctions, Chinese officials and state-run media said.

The tit-for-tat trade-war threats come less than 15 months after Beijing and Washington tried to end persistent battles over piracy. With sanctions looming, Beijing agreed to halt the massive copying of U.S. videos, music, computer software and other goods under copyright, trademarks and patents.

The piracy dispute is also likely to aggravate relations recently taxed by China's sale of nuclear technology to Pakistan, allegations of human rights violations and attempts to intimidate Taiwan.

Epitome of doublespeak?

NEW YORK — Philip Morris USA's offer to back a ban on cigarette vending machines and curb advertising got a cool response in Washington, where one wary lawmaker called it "the epitome of doublespeak."

At issue was a big string attached: the nation's No. 1 tobacco company would only follow through if the FDA backs off any attempt to regulate cigarettes.

That quid pro quo "falls a little bit short" of President Clinton's demands, said White House spokesman Mike McCurry. But he allowed that Philip Morris "is clearly trying to become a good corporate citizen."

Philip Morris, the maker of Marlboro and other cigarettes, said Wednesday that it would support a proposed ban on permanent brand-name advertising in virtually all sports stadiums and the use of corporate logos and characters on non-tobacco items.

Balanced budget

WASHINGTON — House Republicans preparing to vote on their 1997 budget plan say they're determined to make the federal checkbook balance because the American people are demanding it. Democrats insist the GOP approach cuts taxes too much and slashes welfare and other social programs.

A vote was expected today on three versions of the next fiscal year's budget: the GOP plan likely to pass; President Clinton's proposal; and a middle-ground approach offered by Republican and Democratic moderates. The Senate hoped to finish work on parallel legislation by the end of the week.

The Republican plan seeks to find some $700 billion in savings over six years, including $150 billion from Medicare, $75 billion from Medicaid, and about $70 billion from welfare and the earned income tax credit for low-wage earners.

Marlins streak ends

MIAMI — Todd Stottlemyre ended the Florida Marlins' nine-game winning streak Wednesday, striking out 13 and pitching a four-hitter for his first National League shutout as the St. Louis Cardinals won 6-0. The Marlins squandered a chance to reach .500 for the first time in 1986. Their winning streak was a franchise record and the longest in the majors this season. Mark Sweeney homered and scored twice for the Cardinals, who won for just the sixth time in the past 23 games. Willie McGee hit his third homer of the season in the ninth. Stottlemyre (3-2) walked two in his fifth career shutout and his first since May 20, 1984, when he pitched Toronto past California.

FSU wins in ACC

DURHAM, N.C. — A three-run double by Jeremy Morris keyed Florida State's fourth inning Wednesday on the top-ranked Seminoles beat Wake Forest 5-4 in the second round of the Atlantic Coast Conference baseball tournament. Morris' home-run double, which also brought the well-timed 400-foot sign in cover field, was his 20th double, breaking the ACC record of 18 set in 1983 by Maryland's Kenny Noe. FSU (44-18) will play No. 6 seed Virginia in a winner's bracket game Thursday afternoon.

Stoudamire is top rookie

NEW YORK — Damon Stoudamire of the Toronto Raptors won the NBA Rookie of the Year Award, receiving 78 of 113 votes from a media panel. Stoudamire, a 6-foot-11 guard from Arizona, averaged 18.0 points, 9.3 assists and 4.0 rebounds for the expansion Raptors. Portland's Arvydas Sabonis followed with 17 votes and Golden State's Joe Smith had 15.

Fitzsimmons stays with Suns

PHOENIX — Phoenix Suns coach Cotton Fitzsimmons, who left the front office Jan. 16 to take over for the fired Paul Westphal, will return next season for 51st season. Fitzsimmons, 65, is seventh in NBA history with 288 career victories. He led the Suns to a 57-23 mark in their final 46 games for a 41-41 record. San Antonio then beat Phoenix 3-1 in the first round of the playoffs.

War Eagle has cancer surgery

BERMINGHAM, AL. — Auburn guard Wes Flanagan underwent surgery to remove a cancerous tumor from a bone in his left arm. Flanagan, a third-team All Southeastern Conference selection who tied a school record for assists last season, will not require radiation or chemotherapy, Dr. William Dunham said.

Johnson on AL shelf

SEATTLE — Randy Johnson, last year's Cy Young Award winner, was placed on the 15-day disabled list by the Seattle Mariners because of an irritated nerve in his lower back. Johnson is 5-0 with a 3.85 ERA in eight starts, but has been bothered by the back injury since an April 29 start in Milwaukee.

Braves lose Justice

ATLANTA — Atlanta outfielder David Justice left the Braves' 5-0 loss to Pittsburgh after dislocating his right shoulder while swinging at a pitch in the second inning. He will be placed on the 15-day disabled list.

Ready for repeat

Surging Lyman on track for second straight title

By GARY COATSAN
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — On April 5, 1986, the Lyman baseball team had a 10-11 record and was struggling to find the form that carried it to the 1985 Class 6A state championship. It seemed like the Greyhounds would be fortunate to repeat as 6A, District 4 champions. Everything seemed to click for Lyman on April 6, 1986 in a 13-1 rout of Meigs County (Tenn.) in five innings. The Greyhounds have posted an 11-1 record since then, including five straight playoff games, to reach the 1986 6A FHSAA Florida Baseball Finals.

"Win, lose or draw, this team has done all we could have asked for," said Lyman coach Bob McCullough. "Our players worked hard, and they overcame some adversity. Being in the state final four is a dream for any team, and I'm proud of our guys." Lyman will face Coral Springs Taravella at 10 a.m. Friday in a state semifinal game at Ed Smith Stadium in Sarasota. If the Greyhounds win Friday, they will play for their second straight 6A state championship Saturday at 8 p.m.

Lyman ace pitcher Danny Bogenja, who posted a 9-2 record this season despite back and ankle injuries, will start Friday's game. The senior right handed hurler has won his last three playoff starts. "There is no Saturday if you don't win Friday, so we are going with Danny on Friday," McCullough said. "You don't want to lose Friday with your ace pitcher on the bench."

If Lyman wins Friday, Lance Odom will be the Greyhounds' starting pitcher in the state championship game Saturday. Odom has given up just two runs over 13 innings in two playoff appearances this season. "If Lance can go all the way Saturday, that's what we'll do," McCullough said. "He has been working hard, and he's confident. I think Lance can do the job because he's throwing breaking balls for strikes and keeping his pitches down. If we win Friday, we'll probably be facing someone on Saturday who has used up their ace, too."

Should Odom falter Saturday, Lyman will have somewhere to turn. Tyler Carr is available out of the Greyhounds bullpen in long relief is necessary, while Bogenja would be called on for short relief work. However, Lyman must win Friday before they worry about any of that.

"Our team has realized that they can compete with anyone," McCullough said. "Our senior leadership is confident, and its rubbing off on the other players on the team. Everyone has been working hard."

Odom allowed just two hits and two walks over seven innings to lead Lyman to a 6-2 win over Lake Brantley in the district 4 semifinal game. Bogenja took the mound in the district championship game the next night, and struck out eight to lead the Greyhounds past Lake Mary 6-5 in eight innings.

Lyman needed some late-inning heroics to slip by DeLand 2-1 in a North II Regional tournament game. The Bulldogs took a 1-0 lead in the top of the seventh inning, but Matt Cangialosi and Joe Sustaita scored in the bottom of the seventh to give the Greyhounds the win.

"Coming back against DeLand was probably the turning point for us," McCullough said. "We took DeLand a little lightly, and that game woke us up. We haven't taken anyone for granted since then. We Jerry: (From telephone conversation) Do you think that my job will provide security for my future so that I can anticipate purchasing a home and getting married sometime in the future? Today is such an uncertainty.

"Respectably"
JERRY STEWART

Emory, Lake Mary, FL
Emory: In your particular case I would like to say yes, but cannot. Your education and background, at this time, isn't complete to the point where you can count on having your job be assured and stable. I would do all I could to take some course, even at night, if I had to. First, you must be confident unto yourself and your ambitions. Knowledge alone, even with the best experience today doesn't guarantee anything.

I do feel, however, that you would be able to be somewhat self-supporting by using your expertise with something that you do as a hobby that could be turned into cash. Why, even the typewriter that I'm using to write my stories is considered outdated, outdated and a relic to be relegated to ancient history. It seems society even puts human beings in the same realm or, perhaps, it's just the times we all live in. You'll do alright either way, just make sure that you're making some of the decisions for your own future.

Dear Mr. Stewart: This is the second time that I have written to you and I do really need an answer to my question about my marriage. We're on the verge of divorce and it seems we only argue about "little things of unimportance." Is there any hope for my marriage and who would get our son?

Atchafey, Fern Park, FL
Dear Atchafey: I had no idea that I was going to have to play King Solomon and make such a decision, so I won't. I do see both of you having joint custody in this matter and that also answers your question about your marriage; so you, divorce is imminent. You got married too young and for the wrong reasons. Of course, you tried to do the right thing, but just who did you do it for? That was part of the mistake. 1989 will see you re-married and happier though.

Dear Jerry: I am graduating from high school this year. What do you see me doing for work, education, location, and marriage, and will I get the motorcycle that I want?

H.T.K., Altamonte Springs, FL
Dear H.T.K.: I don't know if you listed your priorities or just gave me a Christmas Wish List of needs. Fortunately, I do not see you unemployed now or in the future. You are aggressive enough to not be without a job. I do have an answer to most of your questions wrapped up in one word that I really do feel applied to you, but it may be something that you haven't thought about or just couldn't fathom. For you it would be "the answer", at least for the immediate future and I do feel good about it. It's called "the military!" For you, this would be the promise to your college education, a home, (but not in Florida, perhaps near the State of Kentucky).

Don't be shy! Send me your letters to the address shown at the end of this column. I need your letters and they will be kept confidential. How you sign your letters is what I use in this column. I know that some of you are afraid that someone might know a name or a special situation, but you would be amazed at how many situations are very similar or the same in many instances. Don't let that stop you though. YOU'LL KNOW YOUR OWN ANSWER WHEN YOU SEE IT. I would like to answer each and every request but that cannot always be due to space. Thank you and "stay tuned to this column!"

President Garfield best judge of self

DEAR ABBY: I had a copy of President James A. Garfield's "Rules for Living" but have been unable to locate it for several months.

It seems that one of President Garfield's friends gave him a list of rules for moral living, which Garfield carried in his wallet for the rest of his life. These rules have been published in various periodicals.

I would appreciate it if you could locate a copy of these "rules for living" and print them in your column. I'm sure that many people would benefit from reading them again, and possibly for the first time.

I'm signing my name, but if you print this, please omit my name and sign this ...

A MOMENT IN HISTORY

DEAR MOMENT: I have seen the rules for living that you mention and I would like to see a printed copy of the rules published in President James Garfield. It is from a book I own titled "Facts About the Presidents" by Joseph Nathan Kane.

GARFIELD JUDGES GARFIELD

"I do not care what others say and think about me. But there is one man's opinion which I very much value, and that is the opinion of James Garfield. Others I need not think about. I can get away from them, but I have to be with him all the time. He is with me when I rise up and when I lie down; when I eat and talk; when I go out and come in. It makes a great difference whether he thinks well of me or not."

DEAR ABBY: What is proper etiquette when video-recording in someone else's home? My mother frequently visits my brother and his wife in another city with her trusty videocamera in tow. My brother and their toddler are always shot in their best light, but somehow she always manages to catch and film my sister-in-law first thing in the morning as she makes her bleary-eyed way to the bathroom. Mom especially likes shooting the dirty dishes or piles of laundry.

I've asked Mom why she didn't put down the camera and help with the chores, or at least film the great dishes that led to the dirty dishes, but it does not seem to help.

My sister makes no secret of her dislike for my brother's wife and uses her electronic demon to vent some domestic pleasure. Is there a noncombustive way of saying, "Leave the damn thing at home?"

NOT EVEN A STATE, PLEASE

DEAR NOT EVEN: The best way to deal with this is for your brother to firmly tell your mother or that she is welcome to visit -- on the condition that she leave her videocorder at home.

DEAR ABBY: Your suggestion that "Needs Help For From Home" find an Al-Anon meeting was right on. I have been attending Al-Anon for more than six years now and feel that everything I need to know I learned in Al-Anon.

The bottom line is that in Al-Anon we learn to love ourselves unconditionally, and that is the best calling card we can have for relationships of all kinds.

Protect self from credit card marketing

If you think you've received a lot of junk mail lately from credit card companies, it's not your imagination. The competition for your interest rate dollars is fierce. In 1988, an estimated 2.5 billion credit card solicitations were mailed in the U.S. -- approximately ten for every resident -- advertising low introductory rates and bonuses for making purchases.

And it seems to be effective. New accounts and total credit debt is rising consistently, so it's up to you to protect yourself by understanding how these offers work.

One of the most common offers is the credit card that starts with a low interest rate. Usually, it's obvious what that low rate is because you'll see it printed in huge type on the envelope. What they leave for the fine print, however, is what the rate jumps to after the introductory period ends. These mailings also typically include an offer to transfer debt from other credit cards with higher interest rates to their cards.

Before you consider this new card offer, read it thoroughly to find out what the eventual rate increase is. If the permanent rate is also fairly low, and you were considering a new credit card anyway, it may not be a bad idea. If the introductory rate is 4.9 percent, but soars to 20 percent after six months, toss it in the garbage.

One strategy that has resulted from these low, up-front rates is called "rate hopping," and, done properly, it can save you money. Rate hopping is the practice of transferring high-interest credit card debts to cards with low introductory rates, and repeatedly transferring them to the next low-interest card before the rate goes up. However, this can cause problems, especially if you stop receiving the offers and you end up stuck with a high rate.

Other credit card marketing techniques include:

Bonus—The more you spend on the credit card, the more you earn frequent flier miles, credits for gasoline, or points toward catalogue purchases. However, only people who are disciplined about paying their full balance every month actually benefit from this program. And if you've never been that disciplined, you probably won't change now just because you receive this offer in the mail.

Vanity cards—These cards may be prettier than a standard credit card, because they have the logo of your favorite team or the college you attended. They have some of the highest interest rates you'll find, however. My advice is to just get a bumper sticker or a t-shirt instead.

Reduced minimum payment—This offer comes from a card you already carry and involves reducing your minimum monthly payment. What it really means, though, is more finance charges for the credit company. Some of these offers even require you to pay an "application fee" first. You'll also see offers from your credit cards to ship a monthly payment, especially around the holidays. Ignore these offers.

One more slight-of-hand to look out for. Sometimes you'll see the words, "pre-approved" on the envelope, and jump to the conclusion that you can't be turned down. If you read the fine print, however, it may read "pre-approved to apply," which makes no sense because anyone can apply. And remember, if you apply for a card and get turned down, it's a mark against you on your credit report.
