British Figures First Girl Marine Served For Nation On Lend-Lease Are Food For Thought During 1812 War

By JACK STINNETT
 WASHINGTON, Mar. 19.—The British Purchasing Commission, through Lord Halifax, Ambassador to the United States, has just made public some figures that are food for thought.

In view of the threatened revolt against Lend-Lease, it's a safe guess that they were timed. They never were any doubt about the continuation of Lend-Lease (as the 407-106 vote in the House indicated), but the fact that someone thought there might be an attempt to bring out an indictment of just how important the Russians and the British consider this place of our aid, the Soviet government rushed out with an all-out explanation of every ounce of aid the British and we had given them.

But HPC and Lord Halifax were a jump ahead. Already they had written into the record that Great Britain, since 1939, has spent approximately 3.4 billion dollars for war supplies in this country and that nearly a quarter of a billion of that was spent solely for new plants and plant expansions, and most of that before Pearl Harbor.

Thus, 18 months before we were actually plunged into war, the British were pouring millions into extension of "the arsenal of Democracy" and laying the groundwork for the remarkable production record we have set since Dec. 8, 1941.

A little more than half the total sum has been spent with aircraft factories. This approximate figure is in view of Congressional appropriations for Army and Navy aircraft now, but the national question is: Where would we be today if the British hadn't started the ball rolling?

It may stagger those who like to think that Henry Kaiser is purely an "American" product to learn that he got his start as a shipbuilder on British money.

The British Merchant Marine Building Mission, some years ago, with an order for 80 Liberty ships—about the same in design as those being turned out today. Uncle Sam's shipyard didn't start building new ones at Richmond, Calif., until 1941. One of the reasons for this was that the British had a long experience in building ships.

Lord Halifax, president of the local aid to the British war effort, said the British war effort was a "great success" and that the British had a "great record" in building ships.

Correspondents In Battle Areas Are Odd Individuals

AP Features
 Somewhere in West Africa March 19.—This business of being a war correspondent is often misunderstood. I have it on reliable authority that my friends here consider me a somewhat odd individual who spends nine-tenths of his time looking for a ride somewhere else, who always is in a jam with one colonel or another, who knows nothing of military etiquette and diplomacy, and who spends a goodly portion of his time resting up from the ardors of getting material for stories he hasn't yet written.

Well, I have been guilty of looking up the Cavalry River in a haphazard way, and I crossed the Atlantic on an American troopship, crossed it on a French battleship, and came back in a U. S. Army plane—all free of charge. But on each occasion my mission was a serious one and I worked at least 50 percent of the time. Moreover, my travels are never a leisure tour.

For a calm stomach I would much prefer a Staten Island ferry to the British destroyer that carried me up the West African Coast last September. From the rowboats at Central Park, I am superior to the dugout canoes used to cross the rivers of Liberia. As for the U. S. Army's jeep, that is a very little machine built for service, not comfort. My back still aches from a 200-mile journey between Bathurst and Dakar in one last December.

Looking up the Cavalry River in Liberia—the time I walked from 7 A. M. until 2 P. M.—I was going strong until some natives appeared carrying a freshly-killed python. Then my legs gave out unexpectedly, and I decided, in the interests of true reporting, to find just how it feels to be carried in a hammock by eight bearers. It felt wonderful.

They tell me I blundered by calling on President Edwin Barclay of Liberia soaking wet and in my imprudences. My answer is that I didn't know it could rain so hard and that I had no coat. Besides, the president chuckled and even apologized for his country's unpleasant weather.

Other of my friends insist that my interest in learning to fly an airplane is "deadly," but I hold no malice against the pilot who let me take the stick for a while. Then suddenly grabbed the wheel and frightened me to death by screaming: "What are you trying to do—crash!"

I told him I had my eye square on the horizon indicator and that we were sailing along at a perfectly even keel. I certainly had no way of knowing that the horn had suddenly cracked and we had lost 300 feet in a few seconds.

I really do not mind if my West African friends smile and call me "Jumping Joe" because I am a "jumping" correspondent. I will have James on my side. He is my Gold Coast house boy who, when my choice room in the barracks was re-allocated to a major, packed the dog and kept him out until I returned. Some day soon I am going to give James a raise. He is getting three shillings a week now, the same as the other house boys, but I am going to hike it up to a dollar.

HOLLYWOOD

By ROBBIN COONS
 HOLLYWOOD, Mar. 19.—That ban on banquetting recently announced won't be without its compensations even for banquet-lovers.

For one thing, cut the annual feast of the Oscars, the academy shindig, down to size. This affair, year by year, seems to take on more and more the attributes of a Frankenstein's monster of movie social life. It seemed like a good idea at the time, but now it's completely out of hand, trampling down more hapless hours than a triple-feature movie.

The recent one, you know, was going to be different. They were going to get things going early in quick time, and in fact they did. The assembly dinner, all done out in its finest feathers, hardly had time to snuff its soup and peas before Jennette MacDonald coast started "The Star Spangled Banner"—two verses without a bobble—and the impacted hall was standing on its feet of an appreciation thereof. Requested imitations so tightly placed, many of the folks found it difficult to find their feet, much more so to stand on them in haste, crowded on the national anthem is a challenge to contemporary abilities as well as to patriotism.

The recent program started only a little behind schedule, and before long—quite as usual—it was bogged down in a mass of introductions, more speeches, the reading of letters and telegrams and other business on the path of the evening of Oscar.

By way of the banter and chatter and sparkling jest on the floor, the time the first award was announced, and somebody came up from somewhere to take the Oscar statuette, and the crowd was so packed that it was impossible to see the winner until the very end of the ceremony.

Casket Makers Still Strike In New York

NEW YORK, Mar. 19.—The regional War Labor board announced Thursday it had adopted unanimously an order directing the employees of 100 striking casket makers not to deal with local 1723 of the Casket Makers' union (A.F.L.) on issues in the dispute while the strike continued.

The order followed a union meeting at which it was agreed to continue the strike. Tests were expressed yesterday that there were only a limited supply of caskets in the metropolitan area.

Instances of the order was withheld, however, in the household of Judge Maguire, Mayor LaGuardia's labor secretary and the state state board of mediation, pending a conference tomorrow at all-cities.

Louis A. Berglund, president of the local, said the strike was expected to last at least a week.

Fighter Pilot Was Sole British Fleet

LONDON, Mar. 19.—A single fighter pilot was the sole air defense for the entire British Eastern Mediterranean fleet for a time during the early part of the war, the Admiralty disclosed yesterday.

From such a humble beginning grew the mighty fleet air arm which, with a daring surprise attack the night of November 11, 1940, struck a paralyzing blow at the Italian fleet as it lay at anchor at Taranto Harbor.

The story was told for the first time by the Admiralty in a booklet, "East of Malta and West of Suez," which detailed the work of the Eastern Mediterranean fleet in the first 18 months of the war.

TRAVEL RATIONING

NEW YORK, Mar. 19. (AP)—William M. Jeffers, federal rubber administrator, predicted rationing of railroad travel in the near future in an address Thursday before the annual meeting of the Travelers' Aid society of New York.

Jeffers said he made the prediction in his capacity as a rail man—he is president of the Union Pacific railroad—and not as rubber director. He declined to amplify his remark when interrogated at the end of the meeting.

Whiskey Supply In England Falling Off

LONDON, Mar. 19. (AP)—By 1945, there won't be any more Scotch whisky. Manufacture of all whisky in Britain was stopped in September last year.

Whisky manufacturers have been controlled since the onset of the war by the British Food Ministry, which has allocated to distillers the amount of barley they may have. No more barley to them has been available since the end of last August. Prior to that time, manufacture of spirits was progressively reduced from 75 to 25 percent of peacetime production.

Hence supplies of whisky available will only those maturing in bond. These are not expected to last for more than another two to two-and-a-half years.

Great many poorly chosen spirits are being sold in the world, the big moments when they spill the news the public all want to hear if they aren't.

Next year, perhaps, there could be a shortage of whisky. It could be hoarded at a box-making plant, and the public could be told to buy it. The public could be told to buy it. The public could be told to buy it.

Specialist Gives Pointers To Use In Raising Chicks

GAINESVILLE, Mar. 19 (Sp. coll.)—A few pointers for legions of backyard poultrymen in caring for baby chicks, grown to help reduce the wartime meat shortage, are given here by N. Mehrtens, poultryman with the Florida Extension Service.

Mehrtens said to prepare some sort of home for the baby chicks before they arrive. Baby chicks may be housed in a garage, barn, shed, or any out-building. A lean-to or a good-sized packing box, if it must be water-tight and rain-proof. Scrub the chick's house with lye before they arrive to eliminate the danger of lice and mites.

The chicks' house must have a shaded brooder to take the place of the mother hen. This can be improvised by using either an old tub or a pasteboard or a wooden box. This brooder should be turned up the sides and covered with a cloth or paper. The floor should be supplied with an electric bulb and the temperature should be kept at 90 to 95 degrees Fahrenheit.

The brooder should also have fresh dry litter, consisting of an inch of dry sand covered with chopped straw, chaff or some similar absorbent material. This should be changed frequently.

Fifty baby chicks will need two hoppers about two feet long and water containers, both placed outside the brooder. The length of the feed hopper should be doubled in four weeks to allow for increasing size of chicks. The drinking fountain should be of a non-spill type so the floor and litter will not be dampened.

The chicks will need a good commercial chick starting meal and during the first few days should be carefully observed so they will be comfortable.

JOIN THE RED CROSS

Wherever the American Flag is carried into battle, there also is the American Red Cross.

Great as the need is for its protective arm about our fighters at the battle front, no funds are available to the Red Cross to carry on this work except those which are given voluntarily by the citizen body.

You now are being asked to make a contribution to help sustain the enormous wartime budget of the Red Cross. Give generously! Though many have given freely of their time in individual service to the Red Cross—and with no small sacrifice or inconvenience to themselves—yet this is not enough; above all else the Red Cross must have the funds necessary to put and keep its own vast Army of Mercy in the field.

Perhaps you, too, have someone in service whom you will want to help, intimately and personally, as the Red Cross does help him so well.

No matter where your marine, soldier or sailor may be, the Red Cross is nearby, ready in sickness and in health, alert for mental as well as physical needs.

So give now to the Red Cross War Fund. Give generously, for the task is as huge as it is worthy. Give more this year—give double if you can.
