McLain, West clash over questionnaire

By Russ White Staff Writer

SANFORD --- Bob West, a Republican candidate for the District 5 seat on the Seminole County Commission, said Friday he had "taken a leave of absence" from the interim field director's position for the Christian Coalition of Florida.

"I did this last month on qualifying day," West said. The Coalition is a nonprofit Christian group which provides a voter information guide that does not endorse a candidate but strongly hints

West distributed a 49-question form to more than 400 candidates running this year for office in the state. One candidate - Daryl McLain, the Republican incumbent District 5 Commissioner in Seminole County — says West "wasn't fair and equitable" about the questions.

"He published the results of the questionnaire on the web, but under my answers he wrote 'unclear.' " McLain said. "It was pure misinformation."

West said Friday that McLain was the only candidate who did not answer the questions as stated. "He put a little commentary on each question but that was all. I published his commentary." Two years ago when West challenged Randy Morris for the District 2 county commission seat, he helped author the same questionnaire that was used this year. Morris refused to answer, protesting his opponent's part in the survey.

West assumed the interim director's role of the Coalition about a year ago

Bus drivers making calls to inform parents

By Art Zielinski Staff Writer

Come Monday morning the sound of school bells will signal the start of classes for students throughout Seminole County. And Jean Johnson, director of transportation, says the great yellow fleet of nearly 400 school buses is ready to hit the road.

Although the buses and the 388 bus drivers are ready to go, the problem, Johnson said, is informing students and their parents of the bus route schedules.

Johnson said her office has been swamped with last minute calls from parents wanting to know arrival and drop-off times, in addition to bus stop locations.

"We sent out 28,000 postcards to parents with bus route information," Johnson

This was the first year, she explained, for mailing the postcards. Since Wednesday, bus drivers have been phoning families on their routs informing them of pickup and drop-off times. Each driver will be making more than 150 phone calls.

According to Johnson, the phone calling started in 1994 as one way of getting the information to the public.

In addition to the postcards and telephone calling, route information will be handed out at Wal-Mart's in Sanford, Altamonte Springs, and the Oviedo Market Place this weekend from noon to 5 p.m.

Bus routes can also be found on the schools' Web site at www.scps.k12.al.us.

Kids put on happy faces at Family Fun Festival

SANFORD —Sissi the Clown painted faces, Claudia the Cop gave out badges, Al the pal, made the hot dogs.

For the fifth consecutive year, the West Sanford Boys & Girls Club held its Family Fun Festival at the 919 Persimmon Avenue campus.

Organizers figured more than 1,000 children attended the event. "That's how many hot dogs we had" said Al Mitchell, an auto sales and leasing consultant.

Kristal Audiles, 8, was extremely pleased at how Sissi the Clown painted her face. So were Ashiona Wesley, an 6-yearold who likes to me called

Labels, chasms and a little history

A teen-age girl sat on the floor of Barnes and Noble in Berkeley listening to stories she had never heard, absorbing a history she had never seen in her school books. Gloria Steinem was speaking that night to promote Ms. magazine. The girl's head swiveled between Steinem in front of her and the rows of women behind her, taking in their comments with a vaguely quizzical look.

She wasn't yet born when Ms. hit the newsstands in 1972 with its cover of an exhausted eight-armed woman holding a frying pan, clock, feather duster, typewriter, steering wheel, iron, telephone and mirror. "Now it'd be a cell phone, a computer mouse, some different things," Steinem joked. But not all different things. The frying pan, clock, steering wheel and mirror haven't gone anywhere. Neither has the passion among feminists of a certain age, the ones who announce upcoming rallies, and who also voice their frustration and disappointment in today's young women — a common theme.

Joan

Ryan

Younger women seem to have little or no interest in feminism, the older women say. They reject the very word "feminist." Many subscribe to the traditional lifestyles that previous generations of feminists had rejected, and they go for clothing that reinforces the notion of women as sex symbols.

Steinem glanced at the young woman sitting on the floor, and to several other young women who had come to the bookstore.

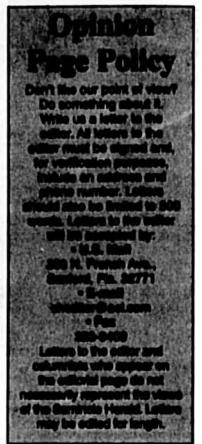

"It doesn't work to try to radicalize people through guilt," Steinem said. "You get radicalized by your own concerns and the injustices you see."

Which are different today from 30 years ago. The challenge of bringing about change, as early feminists have done so well, is that things change. The battleground shifts. The combatants arrive with their own histories, their own ways of doing things, even their own language. And the old guard inevitably bristles.

"I think sometimes we fail to recognize (today's) See Ryan, Page 5A

Begley wonders if Dale does believe in accountability

To the editor:

I read with some interest Mayor Larry Dale's views on accountability in Sunday's Seminole Herald. As a longtime supporter of both Mayor Dale and City Manager Tony VanDerworp, I, too, believe that accountability for the actions of the city rest squarely on the shoulders of these two gentlemen.

I have, however, begun to question exactly how strongly they themselves believe this. It was Mayor Dale and Mr. VanDerworp that I, in fact, turned to when faced with a problem caused by the city that I could not solve alone.

Almost two weeks ago a 40 foot branch from a live oak in Touhy Park came crashing down upon my family car. It was the middle of the night. There was no wind, no rain, no reason I could see for this unfortunate accident. The crash was loud enough to bring out my neighbors, the branch large enough to stretch completely across the street and engulf the vehicle. Shortly before 1 a.m. a public works crew arrived with a bulldozer to clear the road.

According to my neighbors, the crews didn't seem to notice that there was a car beneath the branch as they attacked it with the buildozer. Once the sound of wood on metal and the sound of breaking glass subsided, the crew realized their mistake and decided to take another approach (chainsaws).

By morning, little evidence remained save a demolished 1991 Celica and the skidmarks indicating that the car had been moved backwards almost a foot and 6 inches toward the curb. No one ever so much as knocked on the door to mention this little "mishap." It was left to my neighbors to tell me.

The city didn't tell me. Nor did they tell their insurers, The Florida League of Cities. Robert Beall of the Department of Public Works did tell me that I should file a claim with the city and provided the phone number. Within 10 minutes of filing the claim, I received a call indicating that Howard Jeffries, the city's landscape architect, was outside my home and had determined that because the tree was "healthy" the city had no liability in the matter. I was shocked. I wondered exactly how Mr. Jeffries had made this determination, since by the time he arrived the branch itself was mulch and the section of the tree from which it had fallen had been "cleaned" with a chainsaw.

I eventually obtained an email address for Tony and sent him a blow-by-blow description of the events as they happened.

.The following Monday shortly after 9 a.m. I received a phone call from Larry Dale. I explained the situation to Mayor Dale in detail. His initial response was a curious one. "Mr. Begley, do you read the papers?" I had to admit that, in truth, I don't read the Herald as carefully as 1 should. It seems Mayor Dale had been accused of "micromanaging" the city. However, the mayor asserted that the city would "make it right." Micro-management be damned! The mayor was on

It appears he simply forgot to mention this to anyone else. I received the same assertion from the City Manager's office. I would be contacted. Someone would call. There would be an insurance claim assigned.

On Saturday, July 30th, 10 days after the incident, I received a form letter from the Florida League of Cities' claims adjuster. It read, "We have completed our investigation into this matter and find no negligence/liability on the part of the City of Sanford for your damages." Case closed.

My family is in serious difficulty. You see, my wife and I bought our little home on Elm Street with our life-savings.

Mayor Dale is absolutely correct in asserting that accountability is the precursor to effective policy. He is absolutely correct in asserting covers a bulldozer moving our

We have no insurance that that the buck stops at the office of the mayor and city manager. That is why I hold them accountable, not for the random accident of nature but for the promises they make to serve the people.

Because the information didn't make it past their offices, I must spend a hardwon $94 to file a suit against the city, take the time off from work to pursue the lawsuit, and wonder if, in the end, we would have done better to take the $94 and invest it in insurance against the future negligence of the town we've come to love. We could do a lot worse than Larry Dale and Tony VanDerworp. I'm no longer convinced that we couldn't do better.

Martin points out difference in appointed, elected officials

To the editor: Appointed officials are to run the people's government for Elected officials are to represent the people's interest.

Appointed officials often wish elected officials would leave them alone so they can run the people's government anyway they choose. But elected officials cannot abrogate their responsibility of being certain the appointed officials are always mindful of the people's interests.

Apparently Mayor Dale is doing his job!

Yours very truly, Jack Martin Orlando

Herring believes Herr best judge for District 3

To the editor:

I am not a candidate for office nor am I involved in any political campaign.

Seminole County will elect an attorney for county judge, District 3. One candidate is Jeffrey Deen who has been systematically breaking election

Weeks before qualifying to run, Deen put out signs without permits from Casselberry, Longwood, Winter Springs, Altamonte Springs and Sanford

- a violation in each instance. Florida Statute 105.071 states "a candidate for judicial office shall not: participate in any partisan political activities."

On April 20, 2000, at the Republican Executive Committee meeting, Deen was introduced as a Republican and as a judicial candidate by Republican County Chairman Jim Stelling. This is a clear violation of law.

Again, July 26, 2000, Deen attended the Republican's candidates forum sponsored by the Suburban Republican Woman's Club, Again, he broke the law.

A look at Deen's financial contributors shows 80 percent are attorneys. Do they realize they are supporting a scofflaw. How will Deen judge their cases

Rather than putting Deen on the bench, Seminole County would be better served to elect Mark Herr. He is of judicial temperament. He has accepted no contributions from attorneys. His 15-year practice in small business, civil and family law is a good fit for a county judge. His high standards are needed. Please elect Mark Herr.

Sincerely. Patricia Herring Altamonte Springs

The dark side of competence

Often in life, what we're told flies in the face of what we know to be true. For example, in the area of professionalism and competency, we are told that everyone wants you to excel in these areas and that whatever you do in life, it is your duty to do it to the best of your ability.

your ability.

I don't think that's entirely true. Oh sure, when you need something like openheart surgery, you want the surgeon to be competent and professional. But when the activity does affect you in any way, professional. But when the activity doesn't affect you in any way, like watching your neighbor having a pool installed, you enjoy it more if the bobcat operator is incompetent and amateurish.

Red

Green

That's because competence is boring. Whereas incompetence is always interesting. And when it doesn't negatively impact your life, it's downight entertaining.

So if you're hiring someone to hil a useless redundant position in your company, go with the bumbling incompetent. They'll give everybody a lot of laughs and they'll never quit to go to a better job.

TRAFFICKING

I was driving in the middle of a pack of cars on the highway this week. We were all speeding. No problem. Suddenly a police car pulled on to the highway, and we all hit the brakes, trying to subtly ease our way down to the speed limit.

Luckily the cop didn't notice. He just thought his car must have tremendous power to be able to catch up to all of us that quickly. So we all moved at the same speed in a huge mass joined together by guilt.

Thankfully, the copgot off a couple of exits later, and we could all get back to breaking the law. We're not criminals. We just think that there are a couple of laws that you only obey when a policeman is present. So when they're around, we pretend we always drive at a safe speed. And they pretend to believe us.

It's kind of an unspoken agreement between the two sides — like not swearing in front of your kids and vice

SIGNS THAT IT'S TIME TO STOP TALKING

Whenever you're talking to someone, it's important to watch their body language to make sure they consider the conversation a worthwhile investment of their time, because you may want to speak with them again in the future. Here are a few signs to watch for — signs that may indicate it's time for you to stop talking:

— They make that "yak, yak, yak" hand gesture while you're talking.

They turn their back to you and stare at the wall.
They blink and their eyes stay shut.

 They pinch their nose and look at you accusingly.

— They pretend to see someone they know in the distance even though you're shipwrecked on a desert island.

— They excuse themselves to take a call on their cell phone, which is actually an ashtray.

— They swallow a pickled egg whole so they can be rushed to the hospital.

- They reach to their side hoping to find a holstered

I'd try anything in my 20s because I knew I had lots of time to heal or apologize or do community service. But now I'm very fussy about what I spend my time doing. I'm running out of it, so it's becoming much more valuable.

I used to view life as a timeless adventure: "What do you want to do?"

"I don't know, what do you want to do?"

activism when we see it because it looks different from what we did," Steinem said. She pointed to the Lilith Fair concerts, which had feminist lyrics, booths of women's books, voter registration tables.

"The symbols that we rebelled against" — such as high heels, push-up bras, taking a man's name after marriage, quitting work to raise children — now are freely chosen, or the context has changed. Young women feel different about these thir gs because they're choosing them freely, and, in fact, they're a form of rebellion in themselves.

"The core question is: Is this our choice?"

Precisely. Feminism never demanded that women walk in lockstep, and it doesn't today. So what if young women don't call themselves feminists?

So what if young women don't call themselves feminists? They still embrace the goals of feminism. They still expect equality and freedom of choice. In other words, they are the confident, ambitious, independent women that feminism set out to create.

As the evening came to a close, the young woman sitting on the floor up front raised her hand. She seemed surprised that the future she took for granted — her place in the boardroom, the bedroom, the gym — had been shaped by so much struggle in the past. "I came here because I'm getting extra credit in my high-school Einglish class," the girl said to Steinem. "Before tonight, I'd never heard of Ms. magazine and I'd never heard of you."

Steinem laughed along with the audience.

"The point is not that you know who I am," Steinem told her. "The point is that you know who you are "

Earnhardt ties Martin with fourth True Value IROC title

Special to the Herald

INDIANAPOLIS - With a second place finish, seventime NASCAR Winston Cup champion, Dale Earnhardt, driving the dark blue True Value IROC Pontiac Firebird earned enough points to take the 2000 True Value IROC Championship away from fellow champion from Daytona Beach's Mark Martin at Indianapolis Motor Speedway Friday.

Martin, driving the red True Value IROC Pontiac Firebird earned his 10th career True Value IROC race by 1.327 seconds, but fell short of the championship by three points. NASCAR Winston Cup veteran, Tony Stewart took third place.

For the third consecutive year, the True Value IROC series finished its season at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. The four race invitational series began at Daytona in February with Dale Earnhardt earning his 11th IROC victory, tying Al Unser, Jr. for all-time series race wins.

Race two resulted in Bobby nte's first series win in

The surprise of the season took place in race three at Michigan Speedway when the 1998 Indy 500 winner, Orlando's Eddie Cheever Jr., relentlessly battled for the lead throughout and took home his first True Value IRUC VICTORY.

For the final race of the series, Martin started in 11th position but quickly moved to fifth position on lap 3 and up to third on lap

"I got off to a good start," said Martin. "Before the lap 7 caution, I knew I was going to lead the race soon."

A single race incident occurred immediately following Martin's surge to the front, in the first turn of the 7 lap as Indy Racing League Champions Greg Ray and Mark Dismore tapped one another. The collision sent Dismore spinning into the

"It's unfortunate," said Ray. "We had a good car. Mark (Dismore) and I got into it in Turn 1. Unfortunately, he caught the wall."

Dismore's car was towed, while Ray pulled out of the race in the 18th lap.

After the caution lap, Martin, continued his torrid pace all the way to the checkered flag. His victory made him the first driver ever to win three consecutive events in any type of car at Indianapolis Motor Speedway since the track's first race in 1911. "I got to the lead as quick as I could and then just tried to stretch it so he (Earnhardt) couldn't draft," said Martin. "When I got to the lead, I didn't think he'd get to second. I ran about one lap, and there he was, I thought, 'That's it.' I could probably race 10 more years here and never win another True Value IROC Race here. I've just been lucky."

With Martin gaining bonus points for leading most laps and winning the race, Earnhardt needed to finish second in order to secure another championship. Rising to the challenge, Earnhardt came in behind See Racing, Page 38

Suns advance to Final Four Weir blanks Senators 2-0 in Under-17 quarterfinals

Special to the Herald

PHOENIX - Relying mainly on its offense the Central Florida Suns had posted three solid victories and three blowouts in cruising undefeated through Pool Play in the AAU (Amateur Athletic Union) 17-and-Under National Tournament at Phoenix, Arizona.

Friday in the Quarterfinal Round of the eight-team single elimination Championship Playoffs the Lake Marybased squad found yet another way to win, blanking the Slam Senators of Austin, Texas, 2-0, to improve to 7-0 and advance to the Final Four.

Orlando's Jason Wetr, who led the Suns' to victory on Thursday with his bat, did it with his arm this time, going the distance in hurling the Suns' first shutout of the nationals.

The Boone High School star, who was an All-Tournament Team selection in the Junior Olympic Tournament in Tucson last year, struck out eight and walked one while allowing just four hits to the Slam Offensively, Lake Mary High School's Matt Horwath, who is playing in a national tournament for the fifth straight year. and Kyle Bono and Dr. Phillips High School's McCay Green each had two hits.

Friday's victory sets up a game between the irresistible force and the immovable object that will also add another page to the long-argued question.....Who plays better baseball, California or Florida????

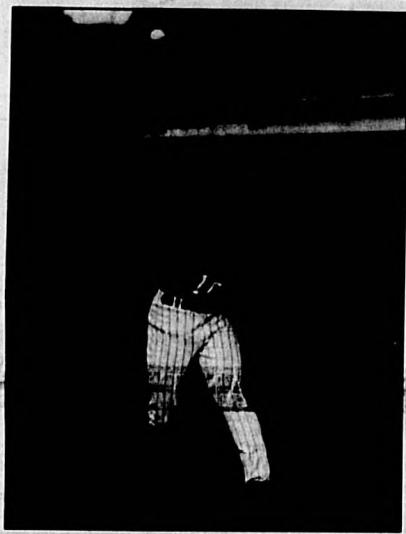

This half of the semifinals not only features two teams fighting to advance to Sunday's Championship Game, it also pits the only two undefeated teams in the tournament against one another and sets up a state bragging right contest as the Central Florida Suns will face the California Angel's.

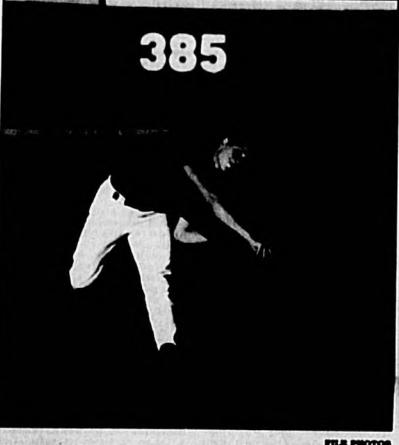

With Weir going the distance in the quarterfinals, Sun's manager Mike Bono and coach Mickey Bono still have Plant City-Durrant High School's Stephen Lee (the Suns' top pitcher the past two years and the Tampa area's ERA leader this past season) and Weir's Boone High School teammate, Cameron Abel (who was second in Central Florida in strike outs this season and was the winning pitcher in the 14-and-Under National Championship Game at Disney World three years ago), well rested and ready for the Suns' championship run.

Two more wins would give the Suns their first National Championship.

Insurance official advises businesses to prepare for potential flood damage

Staff Writer

Business owners eyeing stock market swings and fluctuating interest rates may be overlooking another, even greater threat to their economic well-being - potential losses from flooding during the 2000 hurricane season.

"Businesses can't afford to get caught off-guard by flood damage," said Senior Vice President Steve Murry of Bankers Insurance Group. "Flooding is the number one risk associated with the hurricane season but most commercial insurance policies don't cover flood damage or losses. So the first step in being prepared is to review business. coverage and make sure you have adequate flood insurance in place.

ing approach, to be made now, rather than later when there is an impending threat.

Murry suggests the follow-

· Make advance arrangements to move items to an alternate site should you be forced to evacuate.

· Determine alternate vendors for key services involving computers, office equipment and others, remembering that flooding may also affect them.

· Assemble disaster supplies at the business including a radio with battery back-up, heavy-gauge plastic, sandbags, pre-cut plywood for windows and doors, portable lights, generators and cell phones.

"Storm season is like taxes," Murray said. "We know it's coming every year and we know that flooding is the greatest threat it brings. It's just good business sense to be prepared.

Although there is a requirement for adequate retention ponds around business developments and residential areas, and there is generally sufficient drainage, over the past years the area seen the large amount of rainfall associated with hurricanes or tropical storms which could not be handled by the ponds and sewers at the rate the rain is

While it is always hoped the danger of flooding does not pertain to a particular business or location, there is always the possibility.

The best way to cope with this is to be sure you have flood insurance, which is generally not contained in regular insurance, and undertake preparations now.

An artist's touch Ashby Jones discovers pleasure in painting

Ashby Jones doesn't consider himself Grandma Moses, although neither started painting until they had, well, let's say, "advanced in age." At one time, Ashby and another prominent local artist, Troy Ray, worked side by side in the Seminole County Clerk of Circuit Court's office. Troy eventually went on to become Seminole County Tax Collector. Herald Staff writer Nick Pfelfauf questioned Jones about his love for the arts.

Q: When did you start paint-ing? After you left the Clerk's office? A: Actually, I started painting in 1970. I didn't retire from the Clerk's office until 1985. But back in 1970, I started taking art courses at Seminole Community College, and that's what got me interested in

Q: What kind of medium do

A: Most of my work has been in oils, but lately I've had to start using acrylics. I'm making smaller size paintings now, but that's because I'm beginning to have arthritis problems.

Q: What other kind of instruction have you received?

A: I studied under the late E. B. Stowe for a number of years. Right now, Troy Ray and I go to Winter Park every other Wednesday to study under Ralph Bagley. He's been an artist judge, and is lately getting into restorations. He's really good.

> Q: Do you teach? A: Only on a local level. We get together at my church (First Methodist Church) weekly on Monday mornings, from October through May of each year. Troy (Ray) actually started painting through this church group.

Q: Is there money to be made in oil or acrylic

A: Not at my level. In fact, most people are in it strictly for pleasure. It's also fun to participate in art shows. I've entered a number of them, especially the St. Johns River Art Festival. But I've been at art shows in Stuart and as far away as Macon, Ga. It's purely for the fun of it.

Q: Can you relate anything you have found interesting in painting?

A: I once bought a "Highwayman" painting by Newton, for $40. I enjoyed looking at it. After I had kept it for many years, I decided to get rid of it, and put it out in a yard sale, at $40, just wanting to get my money. About that time, the "Highwayman" paintings suddenly became, famous, and I pulled it from the sale at the last minute and ended up selling it through a Winter Park Art Gallery for $500.

Ice skating trip turns into day at hospital

Every year, my family and I head for Huntsville, Ala. to visit my husband's side of the family. Every year, my sister-in-law Lisa sends her two daughters,

Ali, 12, and Darcy, 7, up from Birmingham to stay with us. The week started off pretty good. We visited the oldest continually operated hardware store in Alabama. Although the kids said "yuck" when I told them where we were going, they really enjoyed it. It's now part hardware store, part museum and part gift shop. It's operated Mary Rowell by the Huntsville Historical Foundation.

Another great thing happened that day. I bribed my 17-yearold daughter Stephanie to take the younger ones to see the Pokemon movie so that I didn't have to go. One day, we went to the their butterfly house. That was botanical gardens and toured really neat. You could dip your finger in sugar water and if you stood very still, a butterfly would land on you. It worked for a couple of kids. We also visited the Burritt Museum, which is a beautiful 1920s era house filled with nifty antiques. On the grounds of the museum. there were several houses that represented life from the 1830s to the 1900s.

Thursday, the kids all decided they wanted to go ice skating. Ice skating is fun, but I've always thought it should be a winter activity. There's just something so unnatural about ice skating in Alabama in July! With us on our ice skating adventure was my sister-in-law Mary Beth and her two children, Jena and Noah. I was hanging on to 2-year-old Noah, who had decided he hated his skates, when I looked up just in time to see Ali trip.

She tried to right herself, but that just sent her feet flying out in front of her and she became briefly airborne. She came down on the ice with a sickening thud. I could see from the look on her face that she was really hurt. I dug Noah off the ice while Mary Beth and Stephanie got Ali up and off the ice. I immediately went to the phone to call my husband, but he'd already left. As planned, he was bringing his parents down to watch the kids ice skate. I went back to find Ali sitting in the bleachers. Mary Beth had already gotten her skates off and her other shoes on. I checked out her arm. There was a bulge where there shouldn't be one. I told her that I'd take her to the emergency room as soon as her Uncle Steve arrived. "I want go to now," she said. Now I knew she was in pain, so I got out of the skates and my son and I took Ali to the emergency room. At first, I didn't want my son to come, but he came anyway. I was glad afterward. Only 18 days difference in their ages, Ali and Nicholas had always gotten along well and he joked and talked and made her feel better. Luckily, the hospital was very close, only about a mile away, and the people were very nice. They saw Ali immediately. They took us to an exam room and while we were waiting to go to X-ray, the nurse started trying to reach Ali's parents. Both had just left their office, so I asked their secretaries to track them down. Just as a call was coming in from Ali's dad, the hospital staff lost it trying to transfer it to the room where we were. So, I had to stay and wait for the call while they took Ali to X-ray. By the time they brought Aliback from X-ray, I had talked to both of her parents. The nurse who brought her back in confirmed that the arm was broken. Then an emergency room doctor brought in the X-rays and showed them to us. The upper arm was broken midway. The frightening thing was the fracture that extended from the break to the top of the bone. I went outside the room to ask the nurse if they had been able to get in touch with the orthopedist and she said he was one his way. "We'll be able to get her out of here soon then," I said. "Probably not," she said. "With the arm in this condition, they're probably going to have to do surgery and insert steel plates." I had just told Ali's mom to go ahead and finish work. There's nothing you can do here, I had told her. This is the part here where I started, for want of a better term, "freaking out." But my niece was depending on me, so I had to remain calm on the outside. "And of course," the nurse said, "we'll have to contact the parents again for permission for the surgery." Luckily for my sanity, the orthopedist came very soon after that. "We're just going to put a half cast on it, immobilize the arm, and let gravity do all the work." When people say, they feel like a load has been lifted off them, it's not just an expression, it's a genuine physical feeling. The doctor immediately started putting the cast on, and right about then, all the relatives came by and dropped off my husband and took my son with them. The process of putting the cast on the arm was a bit painful for Ali, but it didn't take very long. We were out of the hospital three hours after arriving.

The moral of the story? Be prepared! I was not prepared for this emergency. And when I send my children to stay with relatives, I have never made sure they were prepared. I was lucky. Ali was conscious and knew how to contact her parents. I had no idea what either parent's work number or cellphone number was. Their home phone number was at home in my computer. I did not know it by heart. Had it been my sevenyear-old niece or had Ali lost consciousness, reaching her parents would have been much harder. As All's closest relative, the hospital would, eventually, have taken care of her on my say so. But they prefer parental consent. Since a broken arm is a "non-emergency" emergency, had they not been able to get in touch with her parents as soon as they had, the wait to get her arm cast would have been much greater. And believe me, the sooner you get a child out of the hospital, the better they feel.

It was also very hard for me. I feel better if I can stay with a child in an emergency situation. When they took Ali to get Xrays, I had to wait for phone calls. I would have preferred to go to X-ray with her. They had to move her arm and the process was very painful to her so someone she knows h should have been there 1 - 30 my son with her, but they manhim wait outside the room 1. will mention here that the in a es said they wouldn't have letme in anyway but I've been in hospitals where they told me l couldn't go into x ray with an child.
