'Discover America' filmed for Columbus Quincentennial

Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - Jack Wert is very pleased with the way filming for the "Discover America" program went in Seminole County this weekend.

Wert is the director of tourist development for Seminole County.

The cable television program, a travelogue around America in celebration of the Columbus Quincentennial, spent much of Saturday and Sunday gathering footage for the three-minute segment which should appear on CNBC (Cablevision Channel 23) some time in late October or early November.

"Everything went really well," said Wert. "We had no problems and we worked ahead of schedule."

Wert said that the two-person crew from WTLN, an independent television production company from Boca Raton, visited places like Flea World, Big Tree Park, the Central Florida Zoo, the St. Johns River Cruises and the Rivership Grand Romance.

Run-off items go to ballot

LAKE MARY - Lake Mary voters will decide if they want run-off elections in multiple candidate races. They will be allowed to vote on it in November - three times.

Two separate ordinances dealing with the run-offs were approved Thursday night by a three to two vote on second reading, by the Lake Mary City Commission. Commissioners A.R. "Doc" Jore and George Duryes voted in the negative.

The third item, a citisms petition also calling for run-off sicctions, was approved on second reading by a unanimous vote.

Each of the items will appear separately on the Nov. 3 general election ballot.

City Attorney Ned Julian had presented two of the proposals which he previously explained were necessary, "to avoid any future litigation," caused by future candidates who may object to the way run-off elections were or were not held.

Each of the Items calls for a run-off election in cases where there are more than two candidates in a city election, when one does not receive over 50 percent of the votes. In those cases, the two persons with the highest number of votes would go into a run-off election to be held on the first Tuesday in December.

The first two ordinances deal with another item to be on the Nov. ballot, the proposed changes in the City Charter. The changes do not include any references to run-offs. Ordinance #817 calls for the

"The future looks pretty bleak," University of Florida researcher Elliott Jacobson told 30 experts who gathered Friday to discuss the threat. "We have a disaster that is looming down the road."

As many as 1,000 gopher tortolees live on Sanibel west of Fort Myers. Many are descendants of turtles that competed in races before the practice was banned in 1978.

A 91-acre preserve at the Boca Raton campus of Florida Atlantic University is home to 639 turtles, more than three times what it has room for, said graduate student and turtle researcher Judy Hicklin.

Eighty-six percent of Sanibel's gopher tortoises have tested positive. One FAU gopher tortoise and several other turtles at the preserve also carry the microscopic bacteria that causes a runny nose, inflamed eyes and swollen eyelids.

Tampa may get pirate museum

TAMPA - A sudden opportunity to attract a $70 million pirate museum has visions of treasure chests and the Jolly Roger dancing in the heads of city officials.

Members of a New York entertainment group told Port of Tampa Director Joe Valenti last week they may abandon Boston and move their Japanese-backed project to the Tampa waterfront. There it would join the Florida Aquarium, cruise ship terminals, a planned music amphitheater and perhaps a convention hotel.

Promoters Roland W. Betts and Tom Bernstein of Silver Screen Management Inc. intend to tell Boston city officials

Monday they have opened talks with Tampa, Valenti said.

"This is almost like having a gold mine," Valenti said Friday of the proposed museum, which the promoters say could attract 1.8 million visitors a year.

This would be nothing like the tiny museums devoted to maritime life that are common in Florida.

Instead, the 175,000-square-foot Whydah Pirate Complex would include thousands of artifacts. a motion simulation of a shipwreck and a full-scale model of the Whydah, a pirate ship that sunk off Cape Cod 275 years ago.

TALLAHASSEE - There was no jackpot winner in Florida's latest Lotto game, boosting to $11 million the estimated value of the grand prize for this week's game. Lottery officials said.

- Five numbers are on 206 tickets, and each ticket is worth

- Four show up on 11,406 tickets, and each is worth $100. Three are on 215,264 tickets worth 65 each.

Lotto jackpot estimates are for 20-year payouts to one winner and are based on sales projections for this week, funds from rollovers and projected long-term interest rates.

Sand clogs Tampa Bay shipping channel

TAMPA — Sand is choking the entrance to Tampa Bay so rapidly that local maritime officials say they may be forced to limit the channel to the ports of Tampa. Manatee and St.

Limiting drafts would be coally because ships would have to carry less cargo to meet the depth restrictions. In 1991, the channel was used by 1,569 vessels and 1,244 barges, carrying more than 51 million tons of cargo, Tampa Port Authority records indicate.

The channel was last dredged in 1982 and it isn't scheduled for dredging again until 1994.

Florida poll: Clinton, Bush tied

By Associated Press

LAKELAND - Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton is tled with President Bush in a state considered an important battleground for the 1992 presidential election, a recent Florida poll shows.

Of those surveyed, 38 percent said they approved of the way Bush was handling his job as president. 54 percent disapproved and 8 percent had no opinion.

That's far different from a February 1991 poil at the height of the Guif War. Then, 89 percent of the Floridians surveyed patted Bush on the back for his job performance.

In the latest Florida Opinion Poll, Clinton held a slight lead of 45 percent to 42 percent. The poil surveyed 596 randomly

Whistle-blowers say they're still punished

TALLAHABBEE - Even after updates to Florida's whistlewer's act, those who've found fault with agencies that hired them say they're punished for sounding the alarm.

State agencies deny retaliat-ing, but some who've told on their government employers say their jobs have never been the same afterward.

For example, though he's asked for work, state Department of Revenue investigator Michael B. Wynn said be hasn't been given an sesignment in at est seven months.

Wynn exposed a scandal in late 1968 that led to the resigna-tion of former Revenue Director Katie Tucker, and later prompted an investigation of the department's handling of a tax case involving a hotel owner with ties to organized crime.

Wynn's supervisor, Jay Friedman, acknowledged that Wynn may be bored, but denied retaliating.

"I can only babysit a certain amount of people," "They want me to be bored to said. "I don't have the time to death and leave," he told the St. monitor him every minute of the Petersburg Times for a story day to make sure he's being gunday.

Other whistle-blowers told similar stories.

The day after Paul Harvill made allegations of criminal and unethical conduct at the agency that represents death row inmates, his boss ordered him to undergo a psychological evaluation. The psychologist concluded Harvill was "non-psychotic and well-oriented." Harvill was put on probation this spring, and fired in July.

Six months after Florida Department of Law Enforcement special agent D. Douglas Rehman complained to the gislature about a multi-million dollar law enforcement radio system, an in-house audit re-commended changing his position to civilian status.

Gwen Croce always had a satisfactory evaluation at the Department of Corrections until ahe reported money problems and possible theft at the proba-tion and parole office where she worked. She began getting bad evaluations, and was fired in 1968.

Mother will fight son's charges

By IKE PLONES
Associated Press Writer

ORLANDO - A mother who will defend herself in court this week against her 12-year-old son's charges of abuse and neglect says allegations of an unstable home life with her boyfriend are untrue.

Absolutely not, there's no way he would do that," the woman known as Rachel K. said Sunday in reply to reports that the man she wants as a step-father to her son attacked her, broke her arm and bloodled her face last month.

But the lawyer for the boy, identified in court documents as Gregory K., says she will take police reports of the incident to court on Thursday in efforts to prove that the child has a right to his freedom.

Gregory's unprecedented lawsuit seeks to sever the parental rights of Rachel and his natural father so that he can be adopted by the foster family with whom he has lived

Gregory claims mistreatment and neglect throughout his young life, contending that his mother abandoned him at the age of four and that his father was an alcoholic who abused him. In the past eight years, Gregory has lived with his mother only seven months.

The alleged beating incident of Rachel by her live-in boyfriend. Steve Hack, in their home in a St. Louis suburb is the latest development in a highly publicized case.

Advocates for children's rights say the case will open doors for other kids who suffer abuse and neglect.

Gregory was given the right to sue his parents by Ctrcuit Judge Thomas Kirk in July. Kirk will hear arguments to terminate parental rights and then determine whether Gregory should be adopted by George and Lizabeth R., who live in Central Florida's Lake County with their eight children.

Rachel talked with reporters briefly before attending Sunday morning church services with her Orlando lawyer, Jane Carey.

As a side issue to that case, the woman's ex-husband announced Friday he will seek custody of his other two sons because of the reports of an unstable home life between Rachel and her boyfriend.

Rachel, wearing a cast on her left forearm. confined her remarks to the alleged attack by Hack Aug. 28.

She fell down the stairs, injuring her arm and shoulder, she said. This contradicted police reports in St. Louis that said her 8-year-old son, Zachary, had called the 911 emergency number about 3:30 a.m. to report that "my step-dad pushed my mom-down the stairs and she's bleeding all over."

Rachel said her son was scared and didn't know what was happening. Hack was detained by police but was not charged, she Hack, 31, told investigators, "I beat the bitch," according to the police report. Hack was originally charged with third-degree assault, a misdemeanor.

CAPE CANAVERAL - Endeavour is back home with about 120 fewer hornets but 155 tadpoles it didn't have when the space shuttle lifted off.

The orbiter glided to a landing Sunday at the place where it blasted off eight days earlier. completing a U.S.-Japanese research mission scientists hope will provide clues to motion sickness and animal development in weightleseness.

"I think we accomplished some great science on this mission. We did all the experiments that we went up there to do, so you couldn't ask for anything more," said astronaut Mark Lee. He and his wife, Jan Davis, became the first married couple to fly together in space when NASA's 50th shuttle flight

On board along with seven astronauts Sunday were the first 155 tadpoles conceived and hatched in space. But about two-thirds of the 180 hornets that rode into orbit didn't make it back alive, and they built no nests in space.

Jacob Ishay, an Israeli entomologist oversceing the hornet experiment on Earth, blamed both failures on high humidity in the insects' containers. Ishay had wanted to see how the hornets would build nests in the absence of gravity.

"These are the conditions, and we have to live with them," he said.

Endeavour's menagerie also included two carp, four adult female frogs, seven tadpoles hatched in orbit but fertilized on the ground, 7,600 flies and 30 fertilized chicken eggs, some of which will be allowed to hatch.

NASA added a day to the flight so the astronauts could conduct more experiments, and the threat of rain at Kennedy Space Center delayed landing 11/4 hours, or one orbit.

Poverty lessons

With the U.S. economy mired in recession for much of last year, it is not surprising the ranks of the poor swelled by 2.1 million. Why, then, did the Census Bureau's recent findings touch off political alarms?

The fact is that, over the last 20 years, the poverty rate has remained relatively constant. It temporarily rises during economic downturns and temporarily falls during stretches of economic growth.

It matters not whether a Democrat or a Republican is in the White House. The poverty rate for individuals has fluctuated between 12 percent and 14 percent through the presidencies of Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford. Jimmy Carter, Ronald Reagan and George Bush.

It really is not unusual that the poverty rate stood at 13.5 percent in 1991. What is vastly more important is that America has spent more than 82 trillion fighting poverty over the last 27 years, since Lyndon Johnson launched his great Society programs. Yet, in 1992, we find there are as many poor Americans as there were in 1965.

The Census Bureau calculated in 1990 that the amount of money required to lift all 7 million poor families above the poverty line was $5,192 each. This added up to a grand total of just under $37 billion. That is less than one-fifth the $210 billion the government actually spent on anti-poverty programs that year.

What this means is that the government could have eliminated proverty by simply writing a $5,200 check to every poor family in America. That actually would have saved the federal treasury $170 billion a year.

The point is that, after a quarter century of Great Society anti-poverty programs, we finally have learned there is little correlation between the amount of money spent fighting poverty and the poverty rate. We also have stumbled on the simple truth that family structure, education and a strong work ethic have more to do with economic status than any other factors.

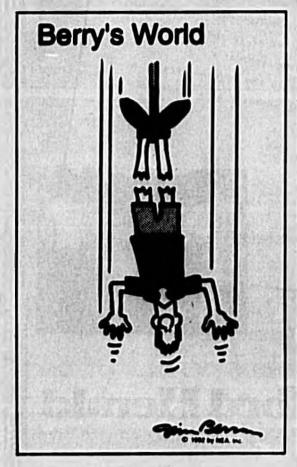

Census Bureau data bear this out. A family with two parents, both high school graduates, one or both working full-time year round, has a better than 95 percent probability of being above the poverty line. This statistic applies to whites, blacks, Asians and Hispanics alike.

Voters who are concerned not only about last year's poverty rate but also about a long-term solution should not be mistaken nto believing that the presidential candidate who promises to spend more on poverty is more compassionate.

The candidate who really has a handle on the poverty problem is the one who pledges to take the $210 billion taxpayers already are contributing to the anti-poverty effort and use it to provide meaningful incentives for poor young men and women to get high school diplomas, get married and get jobs.

Academic freedom only for profs?

According to the admissions office of Connecticut College in New London. It is a campus where "differences of opinion are respected and celebrated as legitimate avenues to new understanding.

Some of the professors on that campus, however, strongly believe that differences of opinion — especially in books — can go too far. Much too far. And their job is to shield students from such books that will do them harm.

Each spring, at the suggestion of Claire Gaudiani, president of the college, a committee of faculty and students select a list of books for summer reading by students, professors, parents and alumni. In the fall and winter, the readers convene and dissect the books, and each other.

One of the books this year was Camille Paglia's "Sexual Personae: Art and Decadence from Nefertiti to Emily Dickinson" (Vintage). Paglia sees literature and the rest of the world as a tournament, and her mission is to unhorse fashionable literary and intellectual figures and theories. A Berce critic of orthodox modern feminism. Paglia believes attention must be paid to differences among the genders:

When I cross the George Washington Bridge I think men have done this. ... If civilization had been left in female hands, we would still be living in grass huts." She herself smites men as mercilessly as she does women. And she can be a very penetrating critic: "Lewis Carroll is the true poet of childhood, with its mystery.

aggressions."
When her book was revealed to be one of the summer challenges for the Connecticut College community, a number of professors worked very hard to remove it from the list. There were lettern to the college paper and petitions that included dread passages from the book. (Just like the Rev. Donald Wildmon and Jesse cruelty and blatant

Helms do to get

The readers convene and dissect the books, and each other.

"Sexual Personae" was labeled a "hate" book. condoning hatred of women. Would parents said the objectors - really want to send their children to a college that put its imprimatur on such a book? And there were professors who compared Paglia's book to "Mein Kampf."

Studies program, sounded like a goodly number of professors elsewhere who write law review articles calling for suppression of certain kinds of speech on college campuses. "Whenever we think about freedom of expression." Professor Gezari said. "we need to think also about the damage that certain kinds of speech can do. Let's not be fooled by the packaging into mistaking any hate speech or sexist or racist doctrine for But, said a Hartford Courant editorial, "Sexist or racist doctrines are ideas. They may be repugnant ideas, but that doesn't stop them from being powerful, and therefore worthy of the attention of people who may not agree with Robert W. Baldwin, an assistant professor of history, noted solemnly, "We wouldn't put a racist book on a summer reading list. That list has to be more sensitive.

John S. Gordon, an English professor who considers much of the faculty "politically correct," noted mordantly, "There's a much more narrow range of opinions here than there is in the average bar.

But the students in particular saved the book and the intellectual credibility — of Connecticut College. One of the champions of free thought on campus was Lauren Klatzkin, who was on the selection committee and had proposed Paglia's book

Peace dividend now receding

Everyone remembers the peace dividend, that budgetary bonus from the end of the Cold War that could be applied to pressing domestic needs. But then again, everyone remembers the flat earth theory, another nice idea that didn't prove out in the real world.

Both shared the same fate. The closer you thought you were coming to the promised "dividend." the more it receded. like some flacal horizon on the Great Plains of the economy. Washington never could reach it, for the simple reason that in our deficit-ridden, debt-burdened economy, it never existed.

That is hard for liberals to accept, as I'm the first to admit. But if conservatives are at last willing to admit the obvious, which is that the great defense buildup of the 1980s was tied directly to deficit spending, then liberals should be able to face facts as well. However grudgingly, conservatives are biting the bullet of candor. "In a sense, we financed the military budget on borrowed money," former Reagan economic adviser Murray Weidenbaum recently said.

Or, to put it another way, as the national debt went up by over $2 trillion in the 1980s. funds spent on the military simultaneously jumped by almost $1 trillion above the projected Carter defense figures. Instead of tax and spend, the Reagan philosophy was borrow and spend, and the chief beneficiary was the defense establishment.

Now, with the economy sputtering, the current budget deficit over $300 billion and the national debt climbing toward $4 trillion. Washington's priorities are clear. The first order of business is to get the deficit-debt monster under control. Until we can begin putting investment funds into new projects instead of old debt, the long-term economy is going to be anemic and its short-term prospects erratic. But if everyone gives lip service to that proposition, and virtually everyone does, the bloated defense budget cow remains a tempting target for immediate consumption. The Buan administration has promised to cut military spending from $287 billion in fiscal year 1991 to some $236 billion in 1995. That's a $50 billion annual "savings," as such things are measured in the nation's capital. Centrial think tanks like Brookings are suggesting that the savings figure could be closer to $120 billion. Further along the political spectrum, savings as high as $150 billion a year have

That's a lot of money, and it is not hard to think of intelligent, useful ways to spend it for the public good. Defense conversion is one. Helping retrain displaced workers for employment in the civilian sector ought to be high on the list. Helping defense industries retool for civilian production is another. (One of the reasons that the post World War II economy was able to absorb the 10 million men and women released from military service was that the government and industry began planning for peacetime conversion two years before the end of the war.) To look at the nation's public school system, its physical infrastructure and cities is to see inviting prospects for productive use of the billions released from defense spending. in an ideal world. that is how the money would be used. Ours is not Ideal. Projected increases in entitlement spending in areas such as Medicare and Medicald, for instance, more than equal even the most dramatic of the projected defense cuts. To put it directly. every penny of the alleged peace divi-dend apent on new programs would be another penny added to the deficit, and therefore to the national debt. Or to put it another way, the only course of action more feeldess than the original policy of borrow and spend would be a new one of divert, spend and borrow.

The hard truth is that the peace dividend is no more than a bookkeeping scam. The defense budget does not stand in splendid teolation from the total federal budget, no matter how ardently the Reagan team argued to the contrary or how much liberals today wish that it could. So long as the entire budget shows a horrendous deficit, there is no "surplus" in any of its components. As the Congressional Budget Office has warned:

"If the peace dividend is consumed, the economy will eacrifice the longer-term gains including lower real interest rates, higher capital formation and, ultimately, higher living standards - that follow deficit reduction.

That leaves the nation with two large deficits rather than one big dividend. The first is budgetary. The second is in investment.

WASHINGTON - Balding car tires. Olympic basketball victories and used light bulbs have all been served up as omens of economic recovery by Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady since the start of the presidential campaign last winter. "I see robins on the lawn in the economy now." he said recently.

All administrations are guilty of gilding-But Brady & Co. are practically Nobel laureates in the spin sciences.

Before the National Association of Business Economists, Brady explained his shopping trip one weekend to buy new tires for the family car. Lots of families must be driving on bald tires, he figured, and there's all that pent-up demand ready to be released. Same with light bulbs. The Dream Team's gold medal would give the U.S. economy a big psychological boost.

Such pep talks may be good politics. But one high-level government economist labels Brady's theory "ludicrous."

"It is true that Americans have been holding onto cars and the average age of cars has risen very substantially over the last couple of years," he said. "But the reason they're doing that is because they don't have the money to buy new tires. They're going to keep running on bald tires until they get

Since July 1990, 1.9 million jobs have vanished. But the White House has only seemed to come to terms with it politically since last December, when Samuel Skinner became chief of staff and imposed glasnost.

Only in August 1991, during a golf outing in Kennebunkport, President Bush declared, "I feel all right about things. There's some statistics up and down, but basically I think it's doing all right." Within months, however, Bush was telling angry primary voters in New Hampshire that the economy was in a "free fall." Fitzwater said Bush was in "private" communication with some unemployed workers to learn conditions first hand. Skinner ordered photo-ops showing Bush with the "burgers-and-beer" folks.

Congressional Budget Office Director Robert Rieschauer, not referring directly to the Bush administration, says historically the role of executive branch forecasters has been to serve as "part analyst, part forecaster, part cheerleader,"

"There are two kinds of ways that politics enters." he told us. "One is that any administration, Republican or Democrat, is going to look at the economic outlook in as optimistic a way as possible." He defines spins as being "faced with a development, a fact, a piece of evidence and what you try to do is manipulate how that piece of evidence will be interpreted by the American media first and the American people second."

Miss America thinks abortion a moral - not political -

By DARLENE SUPERVILLE
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. - The newly crowned Miss America doesn't know how she'll vote in November, thinks abortion is a moral issue and says the Republican party should concentrate on teaues other than "family values."

"I'm a Christian who is pro-choice. Those two don't go hand-in-hand all the time," acknowledged Leanza Cornett, 21, of Jacksonville, Fla., at Miss America's traditional Sunday morning news conference.

"It's not something that should be political. It's a moral issue," she said of abortion.

Dressed in a cobalt blue suede suit and rainbow-colored high-heeled shoes. Cornett told dozens of reporters she is a registered Republican, but that she hasn't decided which presidential candidate to support in November.

She said the GOP's emphasis on "family values" could divide the country because all families aren't the same, nor can they be alike.

'I don't think the political arena has a place for family values," said Cornett, the first Miss Florida graduate to Miss America. "I think the Republican party needs to choose something else.

something that can include everyone."

About two dozen reporters lobbed easy questions during the packed news conference as Miss America Pageant officials packed the room, eyes fixed on their new beauty queen, who slept for less than two hours after winning.

Cornett became the 68th Miss America after she was chosen by a panel of celebrity judges from among 10 semifinalists, nine of whom were from the South or Midwest.

Miss Iows, Catherine Ann Lemkau, was first runner-up and Miss Indiana, Shelli Renee Yoder. was accord runner-up. Third runner-up was Miss Kansas, Pam McKelvy, and fourth runner-up was Du Sharme Carter, Miss Oklahoma.

Cornett, a singer and actress, is a sophomore studying communications at Rollins College in Winter Park, Pla. She plans to speak about AIDS during her reign and wore a red ribbon - the symbol of solidarity with AIDS sufferers - during competition Saturday and at the news confer-

Some of her friends are infected with the deadly virus, and she has cared for children who have died from it. She volunteers weekly at AIDS hospices in Florida.

Cornett said her "ultimate goal" is to get a group of drama and theatre atudents together whose performances would "give AIDS kind of a hopeful message."

"If we can bring some lightness into it, it would ! be very motivational and very educational," Cornett said.

She has not been tested for the AIDS virus, she

An estimated 400 persons boarded the Rivership Grand Romance Sunday evening for a sunset cruise which included dining and dancing. The event was a fund raiser for the St. Lucia Festival, coming up Dec. 12 and 13. Sanford Historic Downtown Waterfront Associ-ation President Chris Cranias estimated approximately $4,000 was raised, to be split evenly between the St. Lucia Festival and SHDWA. Part of the money will be used to purchase permanent lights for the historic district streets and waterfront area to be used as a colorful backdrop for the St. Lucia Festival and other holiday season events.

Eye screening free for kids in September

LAKE MARY - Poor vision can affect more than a child's school performance. If left untreated, some common eye disorders in children can lead to serious and irreversible vision problems.

That's why Martin Kansol. O.D., a Lake Mary optometrist, is offering free eye acreenings for area school children during September.

Children have a biological timeclock that may affect the succes of treatment for certain eye problems such as strabismus (misalignment of the eyes) and ambiyopia (lazy eye)," Dr. Kansol said. "A thorough eye At the Lake Mary Chamber of exam should be an essential part of a child's back-to-school routine.

Dr. Kansol said about 50 percent of all blindness can be prevented if treated early. The best form of prevention is an annual eye examination by a trained professional.

BRIEF

Dolphins win again

MIAMI - The Miami Dolphins, who let fourth-quarter leads slip away in the final two games last year and the season-opener last week, scored on their first three possessions and held on to beat the Los Angeles Rams 26-10.

Miam! (2-0) took a 14-0 first-quarter lead Monday at Cleveland, then needed a last-minute rully to win the game. Against the Rams, Miami rolled to a 17-0 lead after one period.

The Rams (1-2), seemed on the verge of a comeback when it closed to 20-10, but Miami dominated the rest of the way.

Mark Higgs led with 111 yards rushing in 23 carries. Dan Marino threw two touchdown passes. Pete Stoyanovich kicked four field goals and Miami's defense forced four turnovers

Bucs suffer first loss

MINNEAPOLIS - Scan Salisbury, playing his first NFL game in five years, replaced injured Rich Gamon and led Minnesots to a 26-20 victory over Tampa Bay on Sunday, the Buccancers' first loss under Sam Wyche.

Cris Carter caught two touchdown passes, one each from Gannon and Salisbury, as Dennis Green won his home coaching debut. The Buccancers (2-1) had won their first two games at home under Wyche, who was hired to revive an organization that has suffered through nine straight seasons of 10 losses or more.

Salisbury, a former CFL standout who never took a snap in his first two seasons with Minnesota (2-1), completed 12 of 22 passes for 162 yards. His only previous NFL experience was with Indianapolis in 1987.

Gannon left in the first quarter with a sprained hand. The Bucs' Vinny Testaverde bruised his forearm in the second quarter and was replaced by Steve DeBerg.

Thigpen sets record

CLEVELAND — Bobby Thigpen would have felt better about save No. 200 if he'd gotten it two mouths ago.

Thigpen; dropped as the Chicago White Sox's closer after struggling early in the year, became the youngest pitcher with 200 career saves in a 10-8 win over the Cleveland Indians. The 29-year-old Thigpen, who played under Jack Pantelias at Seminole Community College. got four outs for his 22nd save of the year, joining 13 other relievers who have saved 200 career games. Bruce Sutter, Lee Smith and John Franco all accomplished it at age 30.

"I didn't expect it to be September before I got it." Thispen said. "I was hoping to get it in July. I guess I should just be glad I got it."

Thispen. whose 57 saves in 1990 overwhelmed Dave Righetti's major league record of 48, hasn't been the same since. He blew nine of his 39 save opportunities last year and has let seven chances get away this year.

Unassisted triple play

PITTSBURGH - Mickey Morandini made history with one simple catch of a line drive. Too bad that he and 21,652 fans didn't realize it until about a minute after it happened.

Morandini, of the Philadelphia Phillies, made the fourth unassisted triple play ever in the National League - and just the ninth in baseball history - when he completed one in the sixth inning against the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Morandini became the first second baseman to do it in a regular acason game, turning a line drive by Jeff King with two on and no outs into an inning-ending play.

Andy Van Slyke and Barry Bonds singled. The runners were going on a 3-2 pitch and King hit a liner up the middle that Morandini grabbed by diving to his right.

Morandini acrambled to his feet and, with Van Slyke nearly to third base, stepped on second. Morandini then tagged Bonds, who was standing on the bag.

Checkers serves up first loss for Thorne

SANFORD - Ray Schleichkorn doubled in two runs during a 10-run fifth inning and limited Thorne and Son Land Clearing two seven hits as Checkers handed Thome its first loss 11-3 in Sanford Recreation Department Men's Over-35 Fall Slowpitch Softball League Friday night at Pinehurst Park.

The loss was the first ever for Thorne, which went undefeated in winning the Spring league while playing under the State Farmer's Market banner.

The first game of the evening went to Sanford Officiating Service by a 7-0 score as McRoberts Auto Center only had eight players show for the same.

Checkers is now 2-0 on the season, while Thorne and Son Land Clearing and Banford Officiating are both 1-1 and McRoberts Auto Center la 0-2.

Next week, Checkers takes on Banford Officiating Service at 7 p.m. and Thorne and Bon Land Clearing plays McRoberts Auto Center at 8

Checkers scored a run in the second inning on a triple by Rocky Ellingsworth and a single Mark Morgan and the score remained 1-0 until the fifth inning when the winners exploded for the 10 runs.

Checkers came up with three doubles, four singles and a walk for six runs in the big fifth before Thorne could record an out.

Thorne and Son was held three singles before finally denting the scoreboard by plating their three runs on four hits in the bottom of the neventh inning. Contributing to an 18-hit

Importance of games shouldn't be downplayed

We forget sometimes how impor-tant things like football games are to many high school students.

It may be overstating the fact, but ou wouldn't think so if you hap-ened to be on the sidelines during the final seconds of the Lake Brantley-Lake Mary game on Friday

When J.D. Russell took a lateral from Jeff Shaw and completed a game-winning pass to Chris Gray in the final minute of the game to give Lake Brantley a stunning 20-17 come-from-behind win, tears flowed unashamedly on both sides of Don T. Reynolds Stadiu Adolescent? What else would you expect from adolescents? Extreme? Perhaps. But not unreasonable.

For teenagers, high school is their first real experience of community. Growing up in neighborhoods n't seem to mean as much as it did a generation ago when neighborhoods had their own schools, their own athletic teams DOBORMIER sense of social structure and group identity, the things that adults take for granted as interactive members of society. Student government elections, social clubs, professional societies . . . the parallels aren't surprising when you realise they are forms of premeditated imitation.

There are many adult sports fans who live and die with a favorite professional or college team, but what high school students experience carries much more weight

We, as adults, can take pride in our communities for a variety of achievement, accial support, superior roads, what have you. While many of those same items can be a source of pride to a student body, they are not as accessible. For example, students in Seminole County can certainly be proud of the beauty of their campuses, but because they're there temporarily hopefully not for more than four years — their participation in their physical surroundings is reduced largely to maintenance.

It would be nice if high school students would take pride in the cultural and educational acents of their cla but then, it would be wonderful if society as a whole celebrated the arts as much as it does athletics.

That's a story for another day. The point is, athletic teams, for good or ill, personify a school's identity for much of its student hody. Beyond vicariously enjoying the thrill of physical competition through them, students of a school embrace their team's accomplishments as their own. There may be 30 or 40 members of a football m, but for the student body, it's

And that's as a summer of students who particited in the spirit chain co pated in the spath week's fe preceding the annual Lake Brantley-Lake Mary game, the bands, dancers, cheerleaders, baton twirlers, student trainers, the kida cheering from the stands — they all cheering from the stands — they all participated. They all won.

Conversely, just as they win together, they lose together. It's the more difficult but more important lesson to be learned in the self-contained society of high schools. It's easy to be a member of the community when all's right with the world. But when things aren't the world. But when things aren't going well, that's when it's crucial going well, that's when it is traction for everyone to come together to shoulder the disappointment, to stick together.

How important are those lessons that the context of being

Mums extend color into fall

The garden chrysanthemums. commonly referred to as "Mums," belong to a large group of annual and perennial herbs in the composite family. The cold-hardy, cultivated varieties are used extensively as garden flow-ers to extend bright color into fall, when most other plants have long since lost their

The wide range, flower shape and size tend to increase the popularity of this garden beauty, especially noted for its excellent show of color in September and Flowering can be controlled by manipulating day length, but most home gardeners allow their plants to flower in the normal fall season — when days are naturally short. Controlled flower production is best left to commercial flower producers.

Chrysanthemums will grow in any well-drained soil that contains plenty of organic matter. If the soil is very sandy, a three-to-four inch layer of peat or other organic material, such as compost, should be worked into the flower bed to a depth of six

Most garden centers that I have visited in the past few weeks have chrysanthemums in four-inch and six-inch pots and hanging baskets. These larger sizes provide a more instant effect in our gardens. The four inch material can be placed in beds spaced ten to twelve inches apart; space larger material 18-24 inches apart. Chrysanthemums can also be purchased as rooted cuttings for larger bed areas and cost less than the larger pots. Mums also make great container plants for the porch or patio and compliment our Halloween and Thanksgiving wreaths.

Two to three applications of a complete fertilizer (6-6-6 or 8-8-8) during the growing season is sufficient. When applying fer-tilizers, keep the material off the leaves. Water thoroughly to distribute the fertilizer throughout the root area.

Chrysenthemums may need to be supported unless the plants are the low, strong growing types. If a wooden stake is used. drive it into the ground at planting time. Staking after the plants are established can cause damage to the roots.

carefully, flowers of many types and colors can be grown from September until Christmas, getting us through fall and winter in flying colors. For more information about fall flower gardening, call the Agriculture Center at 323-2500 ext. 5550 or 5558.

Educational Connectualties: Seminole Community College is offering two home landscaping classes through the Leisure Program. "Home Landscape Maintenance" will meet Saturdays from 9-11:30 a.m., Sept. 19 through Oct. 24 and "Home Landscape Design" will meet Wednesdays from 7-9 p.m., Sept. 16 to Oct. 21. The fee for each class is $35. For more information call 323-1450 ext. 664.

All Seminole County Cooperative Extension Service programs are open to all regardless of race, color, sex, age or national origin.

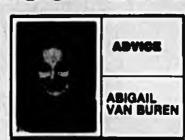

Start planting

Motivating members of the Wildflower Circle to start planting from seed rather than buying plants was the topic for the program "Generating Your Own Bedding Plants" pres-ented by Tricia Thomas, (right), Seminole County Urban Horticulturist and Kathy Krasnoff, master gardener, (left) during a recent meeting of the Garden Club of Sanford. Member Gladys Zahand listens as the plant masters cover all the steps from the germinating media to the transplanting. A luncheon hosted by the ciric officers, Anne Wamer, Mildred McKendres, Royce Tishken and Jackie Partain, was served after the business meeting.

High school sweethearts reunite

DEAR ABBY: I read with interest the letter from the fellow who wondered if he should contact his high school sweetheart before their 20th high school reunion. You advised him to use whatever means he had to track her down. I heartily agree!

When my 20th high school A ADDIO found myself in a similar situation. I wanted very much to see that very special fellow I had dated during my senior year. We had a little spat and I was hurt. so after graduation we drifted apart. I met a man and married in haste, but I kept in touch with my high school sweetheart. exchanging Christmas cards, etc. I even attended his wedding.

and subsequently, my husband and I visited him and his wife in their home. Then we lost track of

By last year, I had been divorced for three years — after a rather rocky marriage. I sumed that my high scho sweethcart was still married, and I looked forward to seein him and his wife at our 20th high school reunion. I was therefore diamayed when the reunion committee listed him as among those they could not Having some idea of where he might be living. I tracked him down and telephoned him. I was shocked when he told me he had been divorced for 10 years and even more shocked when he told me that he had tried to locate me several times because he still had feelings for me.

To make a long story short we got together, and we are getting married in three weeks.

Abby, I agree emphatically that your correspondent should follow his heart, and I pray that he will be as fortunate as I was.

P.C. IN GAUGERTING, N.Y. DEAR P.C.: Please add my prayers to yours. And may the rest of your lives be the best of your lives.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago you had a letter in your colur from a mother who had been worrying about her teen-age daughter experimenting with peyote - which is mescaline.

I was surprised that you didn't mention the unreliability of street drugs in your answer.

When we buy prescription Here is how I stuck my foot in drugs, we can be sure of what they contain and that they are what they are represented to be. But when a person buys illegal drugs from the criminal element.

When I was in college at drive as poorly in the Berkeley. I remember reading they do around here?" about a drug dealer who had been arrested not far from our campus. He had been selling a hallucinogenic substance powder form. The student who bought thought it was mescaline, but after he was arrested and the stuff was analyzed, it turned out that he had been selling LSD!

My point is that when people buy street drugs they are taking a big risk. Things haven't changed much since I was young and innocent about drugs, so please print this for kids who may now be tempted to buy drugs on the street. LUCKIER THAN MOST

DEAR LUCKIER: Thanks for sharing your experience. The drug problem is still one of our major problems for people of all

DEAR ABBY: My problem may seem petty, but it's impor-tant to me. I have a lovely set of wind chimes hanging from a tree in my yard that is equal distance from my neighbor's house. Yesterday morning I noticed that my wind chimes had been taken from the tree and placed on a lawn chair in my yard with a note from my neighbor: "Sorry. but your wind chimes make it impossible for me to hear the birds sing.

What is your reaction to this very rude act?

Over-eating often masks depression

MATTER THE PROPERTY OF THE

healthy 35-year-old male. Al-though I've always kept fit, this year I committed myself to a scrious athletic program. As a result, I lost 35 pounds in four months and am down to 150 pounds. I cat well and, physically, I feel great. My problem to that I've now gone through a period of serious depression. notice a lack of self-esteem and the things that were once very important to me seem trivial. Could the change in my emotional state be related to the weight loss or exercise, or is the timing coincidental?

DEAR READER: The timing is probably coincidental. Ordinarily, taking control of your life by eating prudently and exercising will alleviate de-pression. Certainly, frimming down and feeling physically fit should improve your self-esteem. The loss of interest may be a consequence of depression.

I suspect that your emotional symptonis may simply have been masked by your previous. unhealthy habits - such as over-eating. Watch out that you don't become "addicted" strenuous athlettes: the syndrome of obsessive exercise is now becoming widely re-cognized. People with this syndrome come to depend on endorphins, naturally occurring substances in the brain, which are released by exercise and make us feel good. With this addictive pattern, people feel sullen and fatigued if they are deprived of even one day of exercise.

Because I believe your feelings are independent of your new. healthful lifestyle, I recommend that you check with your doctor for an exam - to make sure a physical ailment, such as diabetes or a thyroid disorder. isn't causing your problem -- and for further advice. You might be helped by some short-term counseling or you may need prescription anti-depressant

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a medicine to relieve your symptoms.

ATTACABLE DE LE C ESTRA (STACSES ALTERIAL (STAL) MET TERA (FAL)

By Phillip Alder Stantslaw Lee said that each snowflake in an avalanche pleads not guilty. Sometimes if a contract dies, each trick is in itself innocent, but often one can point the finger and say, "That was the trick where the declarer committed hara-kiri.'

Declarer won the spade-king lead with dummy's ace. He drew two rounds of trumps and continued with three rounds of diamonds. However, it wasn't difficult for East to find the heart-jack switch: one down. If West had five spades for his vulnerable overcall, South had to be out of the autt. So which was the fatal trick?

East's four-spade raise put South under pressure. As it was, he would have done better to double four spades, collecting 200. But South bid five clubs as an each-way bet: perhaps it would make, or it might be a cheap sacrifice. And if South had played more carefully, he would have been plus 400 (duplicate scoring) in five clubs.

The contract is in danger only if West has the heart ace. Therefore East must be kept off the lead while the diamonds are being established. This can be accomplished by playing low from the dummy at trick one.

Suppose West continues with another spade. Declarer discards his low diamond on dummy's spade ace. He then draws trumps with two honors in his hand, cashes the A-K of diamonds, leads a club to dummy's 10 and ruffs a diamond. Finally, declarer returns to dummy with a trump to the king and discards two heart losers on the established diamond winners.

Fight hard to keep the danger hand off the lead.
