Administration Gives Thought To Plan To Lead Money On Tax Anticipation Notes

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—(A.P.)—Congressional sentiment for helping bankrupt municipalities resulted today in an Administration consideration of having the Reconstruction Finance Corporation do some lending in that direction.

Analysis of a plan which would require legislation involving RFC anticipation of tax anticipation warrants as collateral, had to wait on a tax bill debate in the House, however, and appropriations arguments in the Senate.

Clamped securely in the protective armor of a rule barring amendments, the new $358,000,000 general revenue bill yesterday was started on its way to passage by the House.

It passed its first and probably most severe test yesterday when the House voted 241 to 154 to bind itself under so-called "gag" procedure to allow only changes to be proposed by the Ways and Means committee.

THURSDAY, FEB. 15, 1934

An one fellow put it the other way, he never used the air mail anyhow, always preferring to write.

The City of Miami has just enacted a new two percent sales tax which is about as popular as a rattlesnake at a lawn party.

Col. Lindbergh is not adding to the popularity of opposing the government's cancellation of air-mail contracts. But then the Colonel never cared much for popularity anyway.

The senatorial race in Florida this year looks pretty much like a free for all fight. Senator Hammill is seeking re-election and is said to have considerable support as usual. However, he has strong opposition. To date there's Jones, Mitchell, Wells, and Pepper, any one of whom might be a lucky candidate.

Glad to see old Sheriff Brady getting into this legislative race. We always did think Brady was no good an orator to waste his time in a sheriff's office where the length of a man's pistol has more influence than his forensic abilities. In Tallahassee on the other hand a silver tongue can furnish the proper lining to many a legislative cloud, and in Sheriff Brady we have the makings of a potential orator.

The plan at the present time is to taper off CWA work and end it all by the first of May. While these plans change from day to day and one hardly knows from the minute to the next what is likely to happen, still the likelihood of discontinuing the CWA before summer is so great that something ought to be done about it. One can hardly imagine what a great many people in this section will do throughout the summer if federal aid is suddenly stopped.

Will Rogers, who in the past few years has done a great deal of his traveling by air, does not like the idea of the government trying to take over mail and passenger lines. Mr. Rogers seems to have a notion that the pilots of private air lines are hired on the basis of their ability to fly a plane safely through good and bad weather. Whereas, if the airlines were operated by the government, there might be a tendency to give jobs to pilots, or to supervising officers, simply because they belonged to the great ranks of the unemployed, or controlled a certain number of votes in home districts.

One of the latest bills introduced in Congress would provide loans for home-owners for the purpose of repairing or remodeling their dwellings. Such loans undoubtedly would prove a desirable stimulus to business and particularly to the building trades. Almost every home-owner would like a fresh coat of paint on his house, new windows, new window casings or new flooring. Then, too, there might be an extra sleeping porch or a bathroom of which has been longed for for years. But all this certainly is the government in the building business in a big way. Why wonder when they will start making loans to finance new children's travel tours?

The Bankhead cotton control act may ultimately become law, but is not receiving the enthusiastic support of House members. The secretary of agriculture says farmers may wonder why government is not willing to assume full responsibility for the control of the cotton market and the limitation of production to such amounts as it takes to consume. Any such assumption of responsibility would entail a tremendous increase in government expense, according to the secretary. He says that without such an increase, the government would be unable to make a profit. He still encountered the same old story, as they say, "they might get some."

Tariff Adjustment

Regardless of all that may be accomplished by the NRA, the CWA, the AAA and all the rest of the Recovery alphabet, the fact is absolutely inescapable that before any permanent and substantial prosperity can take place something has got to be done to revive our foreign trade. Our great farming population, particularly our wheat farmers, our cotton farmers, and our tobacco farmers, are almost wholly dependent upon foreign markets for the price of their product. Unless they can dispose of their surpluses in South America and Europe, a glut in the home market results which inevitably destroys prices.

This thought is substantiated by a recent article written by Walter Lippmann, a well known newspaper correspondent and formerly editor of the once great New York World. Mr. Lippmann goes on to point out that not only is the prosperity of the American farmer dependent upon his ability to dispose of his surplus in foreign markets but so too is the prosperity of American industry, for the products of American industry cannot profitably be disposed of unless the great farming population which constitutes almost half of our total domestic market, is sufficiently prosperous to buy the things which industry has to sell.

There is only one way by which American products can now be sold abroad. That is, by American purchases of foreign products. In other words, there must be an exchange of goods. American cotton must be swapped for British glassware. Tobacco must be exchanged for Scotch woolsens. Wheat must be exchanged for French wines. And these exchanges must be on a dollar for dollar basis. A dollar's worth of wheat must be exchanged for a dollar's worth of wine. There is no other way.

Time was when America sold vast quantities of raw materials abroad in payment of loans which had been made to this country by French and British investors. Then we did not have to buy from them in order to sell to them. We owed them money and we paid them with American products. Later, during the World War we again did not have to buy from them, since we sold them so many things that we not only paid-up all we owed, but we sold them so much more that our government had to lend them the money with which to buy from us.

After the war, for some ten years, private American investors continued to make loans to France, Germany, England and many South American countries. And these huge funds lent to foreigners were used by them to finance their purchases in this country. So again we were able to sell abroad without buying as much there as we sold. But all this is changed now. American investors will not make any more loans to Europe. Neither will the American government. At least, it will not, with any expectation of getting any of it back. So how are our farmers to sell surplus products?

Mr. Lippmann puts it this way. "We must buy imports to sell exports." What imports ought we to take? "Clearly we ought to take those for which the price in the United States is high and the quality poor," Mr. Lippmann says; "we ought to take the goods we do not produce well, since these are the goods that mean either low wages to labor or high prices to the consumer. This, it seems to me, is the fundamental principle of a sound commercial policy: To protect the industries that are most efficient and to let imports compete with the industries that are least efficient. The more an industry claims that it needs protection the more reason there is to doubt whether it is entitled to protection. For except in special cases where, for example, the industry is a key industry or is vital to the national defense or is subjected to unfair competition from abroad the plea for very high protection is likely to mean a confession of relative inefficiency. Our policy in recent years has been the reverse of this. We have protected the relatively inefficient and unsuitable industries at the expense of the more efficient ones. We ought to reverse the policy and in future plan to protect and encourage those American producers who are the most competent by opening up export markets for them. We can do this only by opening our markets to imports which will compete with our less competent producers."

This clearly means that tariffs must be reduced. It does not mean that tariffs must be abolished. Or that there must be any indiscriminate slashing of tariffs. And more than that, it does not mean that there should be log rolling and tariff bargaining among Congressmen who are apt to forget the good of the whole in the interest of the particular minorities they represent. Mr. Lippmann wisely suggests that Congress delegate to the President the power to adjust tariffs as he has adjusted the gold content of the dollar. In fact, Mr. Lippmann calls tariff adjustment "the next great phase in the Recovery program."

Versailles Palace

Versailles palace near Paris has long been regarded as the acme of extravagance and the pinnacle of luxuriousness under the old monarchies. At the height of its fame, when it was known throughout the world as the most dazzling court in all Europe, its great wings often sheltered more than ten thousand persons at one time, many of whom came from the most remote parts of the world but most of whom were the nobility of France and the intimates of Louis XIV. It was the playground of the plutocrats of that time but history records that it has had its serious moments. It was there that the pugnacious National Assembly took the "Tennis Court oath." It was there that the juvenile United States of America was formally recognized in 1782. In 1870 the victorious Germans carrying out their pre-developed plans with the precision of a machine invaded Paris and marched direct to Versailles; and in 1871 William, then only king of Prussia, established the German Empire, and dubbed himself emperor. And later the Versailles Treaty, closing the World War, was signed there.

And yet this great palace was not designed for such luxurious living, nor was it built for the express purpose of providing a fit setting for important affairs of state. It was, in short, the original PWA project of all time. Unemployment and hard times was the order of the day during the reign of Louis XIV. It was one of those periodic depressions which have come and gone throughout the centuries. For want of a better idea as to what to do with his impoverished subjects, he decided to build this elaborate court. The principal argument advanced for its construction was that it would put 80,000 men to work for several years.

Built for reasons of state, Versailles soon became the setting of a court so dazzling that many of the French nobility closed their great chateaux in the country and came to take up quarters in a palace that could shelter nearly 10,000 persons. And near the palace, Louis built the Grand Trianon, a glorified marble bungalow, where he could retire from the ceremonies and crowds with which he had afflicted himself. Left to ruin after France became a Republic, Versailles was partially restored by Napoleon I, five years after he had installed 2,000 of his veterans in the special wing of the palace. But the greater part of the work of transform-

SUPREME COURT HEARS ARGUMENT OVER LICENSES

Right Of Municipality To Levy Tax On Outside Firms Is Aired

TALLAHASSEE, Feb. 15.—(AP)—The Supreme Court yesterday heard arguments on whether a municipality has the right to levy a license tax for the privilege of soliciting orders and delivering commodities by truck from a warehouse located in another town. Attorneys for C. E. Duffin, agent of the Paris Company of Jacksonville, who was arrested in the City of Cocoa for failure to pay a $10 license fee, said that without a wide field of operations produce companies in larger cities could not operate, and farmers and producers would lose the advantage of centralized markets. Attorneys for the city declared "big business" in larger cities is gradually forcing out of existence wholesale business in smaller cities. Duffin brought action against Cocoa's police chief, contesting constitutionality of the law under which he was arrested. The city claimed it had special legislative authority in addition to general laws covering the subject, to levy a license tax upon the agent of a company in another town that delivers its goods into Cocoa in its own trucks. The court was told the city did not levy the license tax when the firm in another city sent agents into Cocoa but delivered to local retailers by rail or highway common carriers. Duffin's attorneys said the license amounted to taxing a business transaction in another city, because orders taken in Cocoa are not consummated until they are presented to the company. Delivery, they said, is made on the basis of orders signed in Jacksonville. Counsel for the Paris Company said if the present $10 license fee is upheld, the City of Cocoa would have authority to increase it. The Cocoa case was considered a test of similar laws in other Florida cities.

Demobilization Of CWA Army To Start Tonight

Hopkins directed discontinuance of work on all federal projects not on federal property and directed various departments and bureaus to reduce their Civil Works forces from 50,000 to 30,000. Those continued on the payroll are to be dropped at the rate of 10 percent a week until May 1 when the last of the 4,000,000 employees are scheduled to be let out. The exact number to be cut off tonight could not be ascertained last night as some of the projects are being operated partly on government land and partly on private property. In some instances state Civil Works Administrations may take over portions of the projects and combine them. TALLAHASSEE, Feb. 15.—(AP)—Orders to suspend federal Civil Works projects in Florida went forward from state CWA headquarters here yesterday, but immediately came back proposals for continuing them as projects under the state's quota of workers. Approximately 9000 men will lose their jobs. The state executive committee of the CWA will consider proposals Monday for taking over as state projects work previously handled as direct federal projects. Rural sanitation, cattle tick eradication and pest control, major federal projects, will have the backing of the state board of health, state livestock sanitary board and others before the executive committee. Although the state's quota under original allotments was exhausted, completion of hundreds of projects today will release many men to be assigned to jobs over the suspended federal program, Marcus C. Fagg, CWA executive officer said last night. About 75 percent of the various state and local projects originally started will have been completed by tonight, Fagg said. "The men employed on them will be transferred to other projects and there now appears a possibility that we can take over the federal projects."

Reason For Big Gold Shipments To U. S. Related

DOLLFUSS HAS BROKEN BACK OF REVOLUTION

(Continued From Page One) Lashberg was the first response to a Duffuss offer of amnesty to all opponents who should lay down their arms by noon today. Other European governments, with one eye fixed on their own internal affairs, watched Austria with the other eye today. The government of Chancellor Duffuss appeared controlling the situation in Vienna but the stubborn resistance of socialists in the provinces indicated that civil war in Austria is by no means ended. Italy with 75,000 troops concentrated on her northern border was ready for any eventuality, although government spokesmen stated that the soldiers had been concentrated there over a period of months, and not because of the Austrian rebellion. In Germany, newspapers expressed resentment against Duffuss, enemy of Nazism, because he had appealed to his people to aid his government. In France, Premier Gaston Doumergue sought favorable action from the French parliament on his budget measures with as little political bickering as possible. It is the question of the budget which overthrew five previous French cabinets.

Hitler Policy In Austrian Strife One Of Waiting

(Continued From Page One) appearance of such an evil at the present delicate juncture, remained conjectural, but probable. It is recognized here that any move by the German Nazis would bring bad results from the former allied powers, and the Nazis are more convinced daily that Austria eventually will come to them of her own accord, without further Nazi agitation. Meanwhile, between 5000 and 10,000 Austrian "regenerators" are being cared for and trained in several camps throughout the Reich, for use when "der tag" comes and Austria is taken over by the Nazis. The principal camp at Lech the town of Hof, in Bavaria, about 200 miles from the Austrian border. Smaller camps near the frontier are located at Freilassing, Burghausen, Tittmoning and Aibling. The Austrians living in these Nazi camps are occupied with voluntary labor services, sport and exercises. Military training is forbidden. The exodus from war-torn Austria continues, most of the refugees living on money raised among Austrians living in Germany. Most of these expatriates are farmers and workers who have emigrated from Austria on the grounds they were persecuted by the government there. Some are students and former civil service employees.

Hand Of Terrorism Is Seen In Birmingham

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 15.—(A.P.)—The hand of "terrorism," police said, yesterday had entered the strike of more than 1000 laundry and dry cleaning workers. The strike began Monday but has failed to tie up the industry entirely. Police investigating two bombings and several cases of threats being thrown into the homes of non-striking negro workers said that there was an apparent attempt to frighten them and others into joining the walkout. The union disclaimed any knowledge of violence and declared the strike would be peaceful and orderly. The report of two bombings, one of which apparently was at the wrong house, was followed by numerous complaints of bricks being thrown through windows of the homes of negro laundry workers.

FARLEY GIVES REASONS FOR DRASTIC MOVE

hours before he made public the letter and a bundle of photostatic copies of correspondence taken from the postoffice files during the administration of Postmaster General Walter F. Brown, had sent a telegram to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh. Lindbergh sent a protest to President Roosevelt three days ago.

Farley told Lindbergh that "I am certain that if you were in possession of all the facts you would not feel that any injustice had been done or will be done. He followed this with the publishing of his letter to Black.

"It is incontrovertible," Farley said in his letter to Black, "that the 1930 meeting was held, that it was confined to those who subsequently obtained contracts, that the provision of law calling for competition in bidding was not carried out, and that all the present domestic air mail carriers secured contracts based on conspiracy or collusion, with the possible exception of the National Parks Airways, which will be given further consideration."

At the time the Water Act, the air mail subsidy law, was passed in 1930, Farley said, there were "many reasonably well established air transport passenger lines, dozens of obtaining air mail contracts, which received no consideration whatever."

In addition to the charge that the combination of companies to prevent bids was illegal, Farley also called "illegal" the extension of five contracts beyond their normal date of expiration. These extensions in expiration dates, he said, were made by an order issued by the former second assistant postmaster general, W. Irving Glover.

"There was," Farley wrote, "no attempt whatever to readvertise said routes or re-award them, or emergency requiring them to be let without competitive bidding, and the course pursued was a part of the conspiracy hereinafter mentioned."

"Extensions of these contracts for a period of 10 years, under the so-called 'certificate' method, were arbitrarily made by Postmaster General Brown on May 3, 1930. Then Postmaster General Brown proceeded to build up, by the so-called 'extension' of routes, part of the system of the United Aircraft and Transport Corporation, and the greater part of the American Airways and the Transcontinental and Western Air systems. This means, in simple $201,000. Payment of the dividend and the clearance of certain obligations of the closed bank were made possible through a loan of $525,000 by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the conservator, W. R. O'Neal.

Charter for the new institution, the First National Bank at Orlando, was issued yesterday by the Comptroller of the Currency, in Washington, D. C. The new bank succeeds the closed bank but has no liability connection with the liquidation of any previously existing institution.

Linton Allen is the executive vice president and cashier, while W. T. Bland is chairman of the board and F. L. Morse is president.

Capital stock of the bank is $200,000 with a paid-in surplus of $40,000. The RFC purchased $100,000 of the stock while the other $100,000 was subscribed by local business men.

Mr. Allen issued a statement saying:

"The new First National Bank at Orlando is owned and operated by local men to serve Central Florida. It is not affiliated with any other bank and has no liabilities in connection with the liquidation of any previously existing bank."

The full list of officers and directors, follows: F. L. Morse, president; Linton Allen, executive vice president and cashier; T. K. Johnson, vice president; assistant to executive vice president, I. L. Cook; directors, W. T. Bland, chairman, F. L. Morse, E. W. Yandere, E. C. Langston, T. K. Johnson, H. L. McDonald, W. T. Murphy, and Linton E. Allen.

terms, that if one of these companies had a contract for part of a through route, a transcontinental system could be built on that short line. These great systems were built in that manner."

Farley declared that "indeed, certain air transport operators who had not been invited to attend the meeting at which the agreement for dividing up the routes was reached, were refused admission when they attempted to gain entrance."

Some of the meetings held in May and June of 1930, Farley said, occurred in the postoffice department and were attended by Brown and Glover, William P. MacCracken, sentenced last night to 10 days in jail for conspiracy of the Senate, was said by Farley, to have been named chairman of the meetings.

The minutes of the meetings prepared by MacCracken, Farley said, listed among those attending Eastern Air Transport (North American), Thomas Doe, Harold Elliott and John K. Outley, Jr.

Farley's letter went to Capitol Hill shortly after President Hoover had disclosed that he favored a complete reorganization of the ocean mail carrying system about whose contracts some too bright a picture was painted by the evidence presented to the Senate investigating committee.

The path which this reorganization would take was not entirely marked out but the President let it be known that he favored outright subsidies to shipping companies for the maintenance of the merchant marine.

State Schools To Get Another $1,000,000

(A.P.)—Public schools will get a million dollars from the state tomorrow, making the second distribution this month of a million or more.

The State Board of Education learned at its meeting yesterday that increased collections from the sale of automobile license tags would make possible the "second million grant."

Governor Shotts said he had been told tag sales had passed the $3,000,000 mark, which is approximately $750,000 more than was paid in up to Feb. 15 last year.

Statements of amounts available to schools will be submitted to the department of education today by the comptroller's office. The counties will then be allotted the funds for payment of teachers' salaries.

Army Officer Is Freed Of Assault Charge

(A.P.)—Lieut. John H. Murrel was acquitted yesterday by a federal court jury late yesterday on charges involving Miss Blanche Ralls, 28-year-old Birmingham, Ala., divorcee.

The former West Point football star was cleared less than an hour after Judge R. J. McMillan gave the case to the jurors.

Murrel testified before the crowded courtroom that Miss Ralls was "in a drunken condition" and that he was driving her to his home to place her under the care of his mother when she charged that he assaulted her the morning of Oct. 22.

Miss Ralls charged she was assaulted on the Fort Sam Houston military reservation, where Murrel is an officer of the Ninth Infantry.

CROSS STATE CANAL HOPES ARE SPIKED

than 600 miles from the water distance between the Atlantic seaboard and Gulf ports. Its sponsors estimated approximately 25,000 men would be employed six years in digging the channel. They said the waterway would result in more economically operated service to agriculture, industry and commerce of the entire country, maximum economic use of the Gulf and Atlantic inter-coastal waterways, and of the vast system of interconnected inland waterways and canals, as a national defense measure and an impetus to the re-employment program.

Figures were presented to show the domestic coastwise commerce with the Gulf ports trebled between 1920 and 1931, from approximately 14,000,000 tons to 43,000,000 tons. This shipping, along with the commerce of 33 states bordering on the inland waterways system, the canal sponsors said, would be benefited economically by removing the necessity of ship looping the Florida peninsula between the Atlantic seaboard and the Gulf.

It was claimed shipping readily would pay toll at the canal to gain time and conserve coal.

The army engineers found that the anticipated shipping which would pass through the waterway did not justify the large expenditure.

Orlando Man Held For CWA Worker's Death

(A.P.)—A coroner's jury yesterday ordered Herman Smith bound over to the grand jury in connection with the death Saturday of J. L. Castel, 35-year-old Civil Works employe.

Sheriff Harry Hand of Orange county said Smith served seven years of a life sentence from Hernando county for murder.

Hitler Moves To Form Unified German State

BERLIN, Feb. 14.—(A.P.)—The government of Chancellor Hitler moved yesterday toward the formation of a single, unified state to replace the 17 individual federal states composing the German Reich.

By decree, the central power controlling all Germany abolished the Reichsrat, last stronghold of the federation. The Reichsrat or federal council, represented the federal states in the Reich.

Elimination of the council which well informed circles believed would eventually lead to complete effacement of individual state lines, was viewed as another move by the chancellor toward complete unification of all political units and agencies in Germany.
