By NICK PFELFAUF
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Pizza Hut, 3852 S. Orlando Drive, was robbed at gunpoint early Saturday morning. Sanford police said two black males, one armed with a revolver, and the other with an unknown type of firearm, forced the staff and several customers into a cooler before taking money from the cash register.
An estimated 10 persons were held in the cooler until police arrived.
Police Commander Dennis Whitmire said in excess of $100 in cash was reportedly taken during the robbery.
One man was described as being about six feet two or three inches tall, 185 pounds, with short hair, wearing a light colored shirt and blue jeans, with a black nylon backpack. He was believed to be carrying a 38 caliber revolver. Two of the witnesses said he had a moustache.
No description was immediately available on the second man although one witness said he also had a moustache and short hair. He is believed to be a few inches shorter than the other. Police said he was armed with an unknown type of firearm.

“All I could think of is: Is he going to shoot us? Then the police came, and here we are.”
— Robbery witness

According to witness statements, one of the men entered the restaurant at approximately midnight and asked how long it would be open. He was told, until 1 o'clock.
Witnesses said he then commented that he wanted to bring some friends in, and would return.
Five minutes before 1 a.m., they said, he returned with another man, and there was an indication that a third person may have been in the car, but it was not confirmed.
The car used in the robbery was described as "a small red vehicle."
One witness reported he was eating pizza with his wife, two children and one of their child's friends at the time of the robbery. He said they were ordered at gunpoint to go into the walk-in cooler area.

Schools seek answers to recycling fee

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Food service administrators for the Seminole County school district are still continuing their fight against the state Advance Disposal Fee (ADF). The district must pay one cent recycling fee for each beverage container used.
Dan Andrews, acting director of food service, said his hands are tied when it comes to cost-effective options to the ADF.
Andrews took exception to a recently-published statement by Ann Whitfield, executive director of the Florida Public Interest Research Group (FPIRG). Whitfield had said there is "absolutely no reason they shouldn't be using bulk milk and reusable plastic glasses."
Food service directors around the state have one very big reason for not doing that, Andrews said.
"HRS administrative code forbids it," he said, citing the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Service, Florida Administrative Code, Chapter 10D-13.023, (2).
The code states that "all milk and fluid milk products for drinking See Fee, Page 5A

Chilly temps expected to take hike back north

By VICKI DeSORMIER

SANFORD — Children this morning once again gathered around in the school yards watching their breath appear in smoke-like plumes in front of them.
Some even hugged together to fend off the icy tickles of Jack Frost's first visit.
Adults, less likely to engage in a playful response to the low temperatures, wrapped themselves in heavy coats and scarves and cursed under the puffs of their breath.
Though official records are not available for Sanford, a spokesman for the University of Florida Agricultural Research Center on Celery Avenue feels certain that the 40 degree overnight lows were no record-breaking temperatures.
Neither the National Weather Service at the Orlando International Airport nor the National Climatic Data Center had a Sanford data base available to indicate if a record low temperature had been set here.
Elsewhere in the state, the record cold spell continues today as decades-old records broke for the second consecutive day throughout the Sunshine State.
However, the frigid weather that emptied beaches of tourists and filled homeless shelters was expected to hike back north as temperatures were predicted to creep back to normal. See Cold, Page 5A

1 sentenced in psychic surgery hoax

PHOENIX — A former Phoenix woman who fled Arizona after she and her husband were charged in 1988 with running a "psychic surgery" hoax was sentenced Monday to a one-year term of unsupervised probation.

Terry Lynn Magno, 37, who pleaded guilty Oct. 4 to practicing medicine without a license, also was ordered by Judge Susan Bolton of Maricopa County Superior Court to pay a fine of $1,649.

Magno, who now resides in Fort Myers, Fla., acknowledged she collected money for psychic surgeries in Phoenix and Tucson in which her now-divorced husband, Gary George Magno, used "sleight-of-hand tricks" to fool ill people into believing that he had removed tumors, kidney stones or other body tissues.

Prosecutors claim that Gary Magno, now believed to be in the Philippines, used vials of red fluid and packets of meat as props.

Orphaned dolphin doing well

FORT WALTON BEACH — An orphaned baby dolphin was doing well at the Gulfarium, said the marine attraction's director of shows.

The 45-pound animal was moved Sunday from a holding area in Santa Rosa Sound at Pensacola Beach, about 30 miles west of here, although fighting off an infection.

"She's doing real good," shows director George Gray said Monday. "She's feeding without a problem."

Gray and veterinarian Dr. Forrest Townsend last week had delayed plans to move the Stenella dolphin, dubbed Kiwi, because of the infection, but her condition had improved since receiving antibiotics.

A blood test for viruses that could infect the Gulfarium's other animals was negative so a decision was made to move her when the sound's water temperature dropped from 70 degrees Saturday to 55 degrees Sunday morning.

Kiwi is the only survivor of five Stenella dolphins that stranded on a Gulf of Mexico beach near Pensacola Beach on Labor Day, Sept. 6. Postmortem examinations showed the others had suffered from infections.

Castor finalist in bid for USF president

TAMPA — Three women, including Florida Education Commissioner Betty Castor, were among six finalists selected as president at the University of South Florida — the state's second largest public institution.

Betty Asher, president at the University of South Dakota, and Eleanor Smith, provost at William Paterson (N.J.) were also chosen to return later this month for two days of further meetings with a variety of university groups.

The other three finalists included John Darling, chancellor at Louisiana State University-Shreveport; Tilden Edelstein, provost at State University New York-Stony Brook, and Peter Nathan, provost at the University of Iowa.

Castor, a former state legislator and two-term education commissioner, has pledged to give up her political career if she gets the job. Castor has been considered a potential gubernatorial or U.S. Senate candidate by her supporters.

The Board of Regents plans to have a new president named on or before Dec. 8, said spokesman Patrick Riordan.

Glass dies of cancer

ORLANDO — Norman Glass, who climbed from construction superintendent to executive director of the Orlando International Airport, has died of cancer. He was 69.

When Glass first went to work at what would become Orlando International Airport, the airfield had a prefabricated shelter made of corrugated metal for a terminal. Twenty-two years later, it has become the billion-dollar gateway to Orlando's tourism industry.

Glass' death came just two weeks after a farewell party to mark his retirement from Orlando International, which many say he helped transform from small-town airfield to world-class airport.

Glass was the airport's director for only about a year. But in the two decades before that, he is credited with securing hundreds of millions of dollars to build Orlando International.

He was a World War II veteran with the U.S. Army, earning two Purple Hearts for his part in the Normandy invasion. After the war, he joined the U.S. Air Force, from which he retired in 1970 as a chief warrant officer in Orlando to work at the airport.

Glass is survived by his wife, two daughters and several grandchildren.

Equity Study Committee

Newly-formed committee lacks members, so far

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The City of Sanford now has an official Equity Study Committee. The committee however, presently does not have any members.

The creation of the committee was approved last week by a unanimous vote of the City Commission.

Later in the same commission meeting, when it came to selecting the people to serve on the committee, commissioners failed to make any appointments.

According to the wording of the ordinance establishing the committee, "The purpose of the Equity Study Committee is to review the City Code relating to occupational licensing and to make recommendations to the City Commission regarding classifications and fee structures."

The ordinance calls for the commission to select "representatives of the business community within the City of Sanford." A listing of eleven business leaders was supplied as a recommendation.

The commissioners however, were not fully satisfied with the list. "We need more names from which to select," suggested commissioner A.A. McClanahan.

"Commissioner Lon Howell commented, 'We have brought this up before. We should have information sheets on every person to be considered. All this is, is a list of names and some of these people we may not even know.'"

The appointment of members calls for "not less than five, nor more than ten." The members of the commission agreed to bring their personal selection information to the next meeting for consideration at that time.

They voted unanimously to wait until additional names are obtained before selecting Equity Study Committee members.

On two other boards, the City did not make any recommendations this past Monday. One vacancy is on the Historic Preservation Board for a 4-year term beginning Oct. 29, 1993.

The other is for a vacancy on the Scenic Improvement Board, which would expire on Jan. 31, 1995.

Both selections were postponed with no recommendations for membership made.

The next regular meeting of the Sanford City Commission is scheduled for Monday, Nov. 8.

Allstate would stay in state if catastrophe fund passes

By ADAM YEOMANS
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Allstate Insurance Co. backed off an earlier threat to drop 300,000 Florida customers and offered Monday to renew most clients if the state passes a catastrophe fund to help pay hurricane-related claims.

The president of the property and casualty company said they will renew 97 percent of their Florida homeowners' policies if the Legislature passes the multi-billion dollar fund in a special session this week.

Allstate originally planned to cancel about 300,000 customers, but the number would drop to about 30,000 if lawmakers establish the fund, said Jerry Choate, president of the Illinois-based company. He said the fund would stabilize the property insurance market and allow insurers to better manage potential losses from a hurricane.

"It now appears that it may be possible for us to keep the vast majority of our property insurance customers in Florida," Choate said at a press conference scheduled by House Insurance Committee Chairman John Cogroves, D-Miami, who wanted to show support for the plan.

Florida lawmakers are debating that fund and other insurance reforms, hoping to prevent insurers from canceling between 700,000 and 844,000 policyholders when a statewide moratorium on cancellations expires Nov. 14.

Under the proposal, insurers would pay a portion of their premiums into the fund, which would reimburse an insurer 75 percent of the hurricane losses that exceeded 200 percent of the total premiums collected from policyholders.

Allstate, which paid about $2.7 billion in claims from Andrew, would have received less than $1.5 billion from a catastrophe fund if it had been in place last year, said Ed Young, an Allstate vice president and actuary.

The state could issue 15-year revenue bonds and an emergency 2 percent assessment on insurers if the premiums collected from insurers did not provide enough money to cover hurricane losses. The fund would be managed by the governor, comptroller and insurance commissioner.

"The House proposal stands as an ideal example of the government working with the private sector to create solutions in the public interest," Choate said.

A second insurer, Auto Owners Insurance Co., said the fund would allow it to stay in Florida where the company has 100,000 customers. After Andrew, the company announced plans to withdraw from the state altogether.

Disabled witness details crime

By Associated Press

BRONSON — A mentally disabled man said he feared for his life when he held a young Kentucky nursing student to two brothers could repeatedly rape and eventually kill her.

"I was afraid I would be laying there dead with her," James Burney, 33, testified Monday in Levy County Court.

Charges were brought against the brothers — Cecil Simmons, 24, and James Simmons, 21 — when Burney decided to cooperate with a grand jury investigation.

The brothers are charged with sexual assault, rape and first-degree murder in the June 1990 attack on Kristi Hedden.

Hedden, 19, a student at Western Kentucky in Bowling Green, was strangled and her body dumped into the Waccasassa River outside Bronson. Prosecutors say the brothers picked her up on Interstate 75 when a tire went flat on her car. She was on her way to visit a friend in Daytona Beach.

Burney said he went for a ride with the Simmons brothers, longtime friends of his, and a woman he identified later in a photograph as Hedden. He said they stopped their truck and Cecil told him they planned to rape the woman.

"They told me to hold her legs," Burney said he continued to hold Hedden because "I was scared of them."

Hedden then was driven to a hunting cabin, raped again and burned on her thighs with James Simmons' cigarette. Burney testified she was tied to a bed, released and then strangled by Cecil when she began to fight the men, he said.

Burney said Hedden's body was then tossed off a bridge into the Waccasassa River. He wasn't charged in the case.

Prosecutors were expected to recast their case Tuesday.

Jurors' sex

Can jurors be disqualified because of gender?

By LAURIE ASSEO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court's first major sexual-equality case in years asks whether it is just as unlawful to keep people off juries because of their sex as it is to bar them because of their race.

The Clinton administration and an Alabama man fighting a paternity lawsuit are urging the high court to rule that the Constitution bars such sex-based jury selection.

"Gender discrimination has no place within the court system," lawyers for James E. Bowman said in court papers. Bowman contends his rights were violated when an all-female jury decided he fathered a boy born in 1989.

But Alabama officials said the Constitution does not bar sex-based jury decisions, partly because sex discrimination in the United States has never been as pervasive as discrimination against blacks. After hearing arguments in the case today, the high court is expected to issue a decision by next June.

The Supreme Court barred race-based exclusions of potential jurors in a series of rulings starting in 1986. Today's case asks whether the Constitution's equal protection clause requires the same ban on jury strikes based on sex.

Lawyers for the state of Alabama say it does not. The state filed a paternity lawsuit on behalf of Teresa Bible, contending Bowman was the father of Phillip Rhett Bowman Bible, born May 18, 1989.

A blood test established a 99.92 percent probability that Bowman was the boy's father.

The jury pool for the 1991 trial was narrowed to 23 women and 10 men by the trial judge.

Lawyers for the state used peremptory, or automatic, challenges to remove nine of the remaining men and one woman. Bowman's lawyers used a peremptory strike to remove the last man from the jury pool.

The jury decided Bowman was the child's father, and the judge ordered him to pay child support.

Alabama appeals courts rejected Bowman's arguments, excluding him from the jury violated his equal-protection rights under the Constitution's 14th Amendment.

Allowing male or female jurors to be excluded solely because of their sex "perpetuates stereotypes of both groups," Bowman's lawyers told the Supreme Court. Many women's rights groups supported Bowman's appeal, saying sex-based jury selection harms women, too.

The Clinton administration agreed in a friend-of-the-court brief, saying that "outmoded assumptions about the proper roles of men and women have no relevance to their actual abilities and qualifications."

But Alabama officials said history has shown that men may be more sympathetic to a man accused of fathering an out-of-wedlock child and that women might be more sympathetic to the child's mother.

Last month, the high court heard arguments in a case asking what constitutes illegal, on-the-job sexual harassment, but that case is based on federal law and not the equal protection clause.

The high court's most recent equal protection case involving sex discrimination came in 1992 when the justices said a state-supported nursing school could not ban male students.

Today's case is J.E.B. vs. T.B., 92-1239.

Bump and grind

Following an early afternoon accident on U.S. Highway 17-92 near Lake Mary Boulevard in Sanford, rescue workers prepared to transport Rhonda Baker Flagler, 40, to HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital after the 1981 Dodge she was driving was struck from behind by a 1985 Buick driven by Holly L. Bailey, 41, of Lake Monroe. Sanford Police said Flagler was stopped at a traffic signal at that location when Bailey hit her car. Bailey was charged with careless driving and Flagler was treated and released from the hospital.

Prosecutor: Boys stoned toddler to death

By KARIN DAVIES
Associated Press Writer

PRESTON, England — The youngest alleged murderers in Britain are a calm, apparently impressive 11-year-old and his crying, nervous companion.

At least that's how the two behaved as the ghastly tale of their alleged crimes unfolded in court.

When they were 10, the boys battered to death a toddler they lured from a shopping mall and dumped his body on a railroad track where it was sliced in two by a passing train, a prosecutor said Monday.

They are charged with abducting and murdering 2-year-old James Bulger when he slipped away from his mother in a shopping mall in Liverpool on Feb. 12. They have pleaded innocent.

"It is alleged they both intended either to kill James or at least to cause him serious injury," Richard Henriques told 12 jurors in Preston Crown Court. "They both know their behavior was seriously wrong."

The defense will make its case midway through trial, expected to last two to four weeks.

The crime provoked anger and dismay around the country. Crowds threw stones and eggs at police vans carrying the boys to their first court appearance, in February. The trial was moved to Preston, 30 miles north of Liverpool.

Under British law, the boys cannot be identified. Judge Michael Morland ordered that they be referred to as "Child A" and "Child B."

Seated on a specially raised dais so they could see the courtroom proceedings over a brass bar in front of them, the chubby, dark-haired boys watched the prosecutor describe the horrible last hours of James' life. One boy remained stoic and emotionless throughout, but the other broke into tears and whispered "Daddy, Daddy" to his father as he left the courtroom.

Henriques said the two boys skipped school on Feb. 12, and spent the day at the shopping mall. They annoyed shopkeepers with their antics, picked on an elderly woman and begged a bank manager for change.

They tried to abduct another 2-year-old boy early the same day, but his mother saw one of the defendants beckoning her son and retrieved him, the prosecutor said. The boys have pleaded innocent to attempted abduction.

They snatched James while his mother was fleetingly distracted, and carried and tugged the toddler 2 1/4 miles.

When challenged by people they met along the route, the boys passed James off as one of their brothers, or a lost boy whom they promised to take to a police station for help, the prosecutor said.

Instead, they took him over an embankment to a railway line.

"He was subjected by the two defendants to a prolonged and violent attack," Henriques said.

"Bricks, stones and a piece of metal appear to have been thrown at James on that railway line."

The toddler died of multiple fractures to the skull. His socks, shoes, pants and underwear were stripped from him.

As the first day of their trial wore on, "Child A" used brief recesses to remove his suit jacket, then loosened his tie. He listened impassively to details of James' torturous death.

"Child B," neatly groomed in suit and tie, cried in silence, resting his head on his social worker's shoulder and blotting his tears with tissues.

At the end of the day, he called to his father.

The other boy's parents did not come, and he was accompanied only by a social worker. James' father, Ralph, was in the courtroom. His wife, Denise, is pregnant and was not expected to attend the trial. James was their only child.

Henriques said both boys were equally involved.

"You will see time and again how each boy has a hold of one hand. Each plays a significant part," he said.

Ten is the youngest age children can face criminal charges in Britain.

If convicted, they will be detained indefinitely at a secure facility.

Properly plan joint school, county complex

At 4 p.m. this afternoon, representatives of Seminole County, the school board, and City of Sanford are to meet in a joint work session. The subject will be a suggestion to consolidate county and school facilities into one location within the City of Sanford. Officials will weigh the pros and cons of this move.

There is no doubt, with the employees at these two facilities, retaining them in Sanford is an excellent idea. A move out of the downtown area could reduce a great deal of income in such fields as restaurants.

But we urge caution in selecting the property on which such a major facility would be built.

One proposal is along the lakefront, north of the present County Services building on East First Street.

The City of Sanford already has an overabundance of property off the tax rolls. If privately owned land is required for this complex, it would increase the non-taxable land.

Sanford owns several rather large parcels of land. Giving these areas consideration would be a good move.

If land must be given a non-taxable status in order to have the joint governmental facility, a fair trade should be suggested. If the school board moves from the land at the intersection of Mellonville and Celery avenues, or any county facility moves, they should be re-zoned for some type of use which would get them back on the tax rolls.

In order to create such a massive building, not only land for construction is needed, but additional areas will be needed for expanded parking, buffer zones, retention ponds, beautification areas, and other needs.

The joint governmental bodies meeting today will be faced with both pros and cons of the proposal. No decisions will be made, but plans could begin for what may be an impressive future facility.

It's an excellent concept. Let's do whatever is possible to keep both operations in the Sanford area, preferably in the downtown area. But let us also consider what is best for the city and county in the form of tax revenues on the land.

Assess your life

Today we see glaring headlines about crimes committed by children. How can this be happening? A man dreamed that he and some children were on a tower. They showed little fear. Suddenly, one stumbled and fell. In disbelief, he saw the little body as it struck a stone on the ground below. In a state of panic he rushed to the child, picking it up. He screamed aloud, "Every bone is broken!"

When he awoke, being a Christian, he prayed about the horrible nightmare. He understood the tower to represent a sensual worldly lifestyle, drugs, alcohol, promiscuous sex, etc., where innocent children, unafraid, trust and follow the adult example. Many of these children continue into adulthood, some becoming progressively worse, including a life of a crime.

He recalled how God regards such lifestyles. "The wages of sin is death," Romans 6:23. Christ warns, "Whoever causes one of these little ones...to stumble, it is better for him that a heavy millstone be hung around his neck, and that he be drowned in the depth of the sea." Matthew, 18:6. "The wicked will be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God." Psalms 9:17.

The Bible says that "the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom," Proverbs 9:10. Past generations, that made this country the greatest nation on earth, respected the laws of God so much that they established the nation's motto, "In God We Trust." Living on God's earth is a great privilege with a commensurate responsibility. May each reader assess his own life and make corrections as needed. Christ said: "The one that comes to me I will certainly not cast out." John 6:37.

Denny beating verdict is a travesty

They were break dancing in the streets of South Central Los Angeles last week. The two young black men who beat the bejabbers out of white truck driver Reginald Denny were acquitted of attempted murder and other serious charges against them. Damian Williams and Henry Watson may be set free shortly to prey upon other innocent citizens who have the misfortune to be white.

"We saw justice working at its best," said the Rev. Leonard Jackson, pastor of South Central's First AME Church. What hypocrisy. If Denny had been black, and Williams and Watson white, Jackson would have stood in his pulpit and exhorted his flock to take to the streets. Instead, he's barbecuing the fatted calf for the two black toughs.

Race relations took a giant step backward with the Denny verdicts. The ideal of color-blind justice was sacrificed on the altar of political correctness. The constitutional principle of equal treatment under the law was completely set on end.

The clear message of the acquittals is that criminal conduct - no matter how wanton - may be mitigated by racial grievances. Since the black community was outraged by the acquittal of the white police officers accused of beating motorist Rodney King, Williams and Watson supposedly had moral license to take matters into their own hands.

To this twisted way of thinking, the April 1992 unrest in Los Angeles was not a "riot," as most of us law-abiding folks viewed it. It was an uprising by the oppressed. Williams and Watson are not simply thugs, as prosecutors depicted them. They are freedom fighters.

Of course, when you're fighting for freedom, there's going to be some collateral damage. Sometimes an unsuspecting truck driver is going to be cracked over the head with a brick and dragged out of his cab. Sometimes property is going to be destroyed. Sometimes lives are going to be taken.

It is peculiar the way the black community makes cause celebre out of some of its criminals. Consider, for example, the case of former Washington, D.C., Mayor Marion Barry. He was given jail time after getting caught on videotape doing cocaine with a woman who was not his wife.

Much of Washington's black community felt that Barry's prosecution was politically motivated. So when he got out of jail, they promptly elected him to the city council.

There is a similar groundswell of support in the black community for convicted murderer Gary Graham. A Texas court placed him on death row after he shot and killed a grocery store patron. Actor Danny Glover has enlisted the aid of his Hollywood friends to try to get Graham's sentence overturned.

Maybe if the killer is sprung, they'll present him the keys to the city of Houston where the murder took place.

The black community does itself a grave disservice when it absolves young offenders like Williams and Watson of their crimes simply by virtue of their complexion. Their actions hardly were heroic. Their acquittals hardly are cause for celebration.

Linking environment to economy

The word environment does not even appear in any of the international trade agreements ratified to date by the United States. It will - and in many ways, if Congress passes the North American Free Trade Agreement linking the United States, Mexico and Canada in an open market.

Trade allocates natural resources. If the rules encourage exploitation, the environment suffers. That's a legacy this country has been correcting for the past 30 years.

Trade today, however, increasingly means transactions across borders and will become even more internationalized in the future. Exports are already one of the fastest-growing sources of new jobs in our otherwise sluggish economy. The Europeans are joined in a single free trade market. NAFTA is designed eventually to expand, linking up the emerging open market democracies of South America into a hemisphere-wide free trading zone.

The idea that the United States, with 8 percent of the world's population and a declining share of the global economy, can best prosper behind barricades of tariff protection runs against the grain of what is happening around us. The world is shrinking and as it does free market economies dependent on international trade are expanding.

NAFTA's environmental provisions are groundbreaking precedents that will likely become templates for future agreements.

All previous trade pacts have opened the door for one nation to attack another's environmental standards as artificial restraints on trade. When challenged, the burden falls on the accused nation to prove its standards are not trade barriers disguised as environmental safeguards. NAFTA sets a new course. Under the agreement every environmental standard in force in this country will be protected by the presumption of validity. The burden to prove otherwise will fall on the challenger.

The agreement further provides that local, state and national agencies of government in the United States will continue to have the right to adopt even stricter environmental standards without regard to the attitude in Mexico City or Ottawa. The only requirement NAFTA makes is that such enhanced standards be scientifically based. Rationality is to be the criterion for improvement, as well it should be.

Over time NAFTA will encourage the three nations to harmonize many of their environmental standards. These adjustments are the principal fear for some of NAFTA's environmental critics who presume U.S. standards will be weakened in the process. The NAFTA text, however, commits the three nations "to enhance the level of safety and protection" for human health, wildlife and the environment by establishing the principle of harmonization. The strongest standards are the objective to be reached, not the limit below which compromise is to be sought.

Another target of NAFTA's opponents is the prospect of Mexico using lax environmental enforcement as a lure to attract U.S. business and jobs into "pollution havens." This objection overlooks the obvious fact that Mexico now is perfectly free to use such an inducement and NAFTA's rejection would only heighten the incentive to do so.

NAFTA itself specifically prohibits any of the three nations from using pollution havens to attract foreign investment. To enforce that prescription, NAFTA's environmental side agreement will create a watchdog commission empowered to investigate charges of lax enforcement. The commission will be able to levy fines or initiate trade sanctions in cases of proven violations.

The agreement also provides that individual citizens can bring complaints of poor environmental performance directly to the commission and that the commission's reports be made public. These provisions, without precedent in previous trade agreements, are designed to assure an effective means of public participation in the way NAFTA works in practice.

The agreement also takes special note of the three international environmental treaties that incorporate the use of trade sanctions as part of their enforcement mechanisms. These treaties cover trade in endangered species, the transport of hazardous waste and restrictions on chemicals that deplete the atmospheric ozone layer. In each case, NAFTA provides that the environmental treaties are to prevail in any instances where a conflict arises with the trade agreement.

NAFTA is far and away the most environmentally responsible trade agreement ever drafted. Its rejection would be a vote for the status quo that would choke off the very means Mexico needs to begin making environmental progress.

NAFTA's passage, on the other hand, will signal this country's leadership in linking environmental concerns to the emerging economic dominance of international trade.

Trade allocates natural resources.

Why isn't RU486 sold in America?

The long, tortured journey of a drug that could make abortion a much more private matter has just hit another rut.

Considering that the drug's manufacturer turns around and puts the car in the garage every time it runs into a poek mark in the road, it's not surprising. The company is like a child with a toy it doesn't want to play with: too jealous of losing a possession to let another child play with it, yet not wanting to play with the toy itself.

Roussel-Uclaf, the French developer of the drug RU486 - which allows women in the early stages of pregnancy to abort at home under a doctor's supervision - is afraid of losing money. Anti-abortion groups have threatened to boycott other drugs manufactured by the company if RU486 becomes available in the United States. So Roussel-Uclaf is stalling.

For several years, our government did all the stalling; Roussel-Uclaf didn't need to. The Reagan and Bush administrations banned importation of RU486 from France. But when President Clinton revoked the ban early this year, industry sources and pro-choice leaders predicted the drug would soon be a reality here.

Last April, the commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration, Dr. David A. Kessler, announced that Roussel-Uclaf would allow a nonprofit research group to find an American manufacturer for RU486. The New York Times reported that the Population Council, a research group, would also be charged with conducting clinical tests and winning government approval to sell the drug here.

Yet six months later, Roussel-Uclaf has still not signed a contract with the Population Council. Tamar Lewin of the Times reported recently that sources "familiar to the negotiations said Roussel was concerned about possible litigation and liability insurance problems in the United States, as well as the anti-abortion groups, which have threatened a boycott of Roussel's parent company, Hoechst A.G. of Germany, if the drug is made available in the United States."

The big victims of Roussel-Uclaf's cowardice are: (a.) the many patients who could benefit from the other uses cited by researchers for RU486, and (b.) the ability of women to place abortion where it is most private and less convenient for the harassment of a person choosing it: a doctor's office and her own home.

Medical research has indicated that RU486 shows promise for treating breast cancer; a life-threatening metabolic disorder called Cushing's Syndrome; benign brain tumors; fibroid tumors (which often necessitate hysterectomies); and endometriosis, a major cause of female infertility.

What we have here is a drug held hostage by a drug company afraid of risk and reluctant to lease its patent to a company unafraid. All it would take from Roussel-Uclaf is a decision to allow the Population Council to find another American company to manufacture and test RU486. All it might take from the rest of us committed to seeing this drug made available is a pledge to support drugs manufactured by Roussel-Uclaf - or a promise to boycott its other products until it markets RU486 here.

I don't believe that making abortion safer and less public will make it any easier psychologically for a pregnant woman. Yet with the decreased risk of infection or other health complications, RU486 is a significant improvement to a medical procedure that is legal in this country.

How can a drug company refuse an advance that offers patients better care? This is responsible medicine?

The long, tortured journey of a drug that could make abortion a much more private matter has just hit another rut.

County wins can round-up competition

SANFORD — Seminole County has won the Great Aluminum Can Round-Up Success Story Special Recycling Coordinator Award from the Can Manufacturers Institute for its golf course recycling competition.

"The community spirit of Seminole County exemplifies the outstanding leadership and environmental initiative of America," Jenny Day, CMI recycling director, was quoted as saying in a Seminole County release.

Between June 15 and Sept. 1 this year, eight of the 12 golf courses in the county participated in the competition to see which could collect the most cans. The program, developed by assistant county recycling coordinator David Richards, was designed to emphasize the importance of recycling to business execs while they were on the links.

More than 2,210 lbs. of cans were collected during the project.

The three top courses were Sabal Point Country Club, 424 lbs.; Casselberry Golf Club, 423 lbs.; and Ekana Golf and Country Club, 422 lbs. Each received a $300 award from CMI.

Also participating were Tusawilla Country Club, County Club at Heathrow, Rolling Hills Country Club, Deer Run Country Club and Timacuan Golf and Country Club.

Each participant was honored by county commissioners with a county Waste Watcher Award last week.

employees, one of whom pushed the alarm button.

The police said they were told by one of the robbers to stay in the cooler for at least ten minutes.

Witnesses estimated they were in the cooler for approximately 10 to 15 minutes before police arrived.

Whittire said this morning that the investigation is still in progress. "At this time, we aren't ready to reveal any of the additional details in the case," he said. "Our investigation is continuing, and right now, we don't want to go into details any beyond this point."

Police said interviews with several employees and witnesses were scheduled for this morning and afternoon.

In writing an account of the incident, one employee said, "I went into the walk-in with all employees and a family of customers. All I could think of is: 'I hope the police come. Then the police came, and here we are...'"

Jacksonville did the same with a 35-degree reading. It's old record was 41 in 1963.

Records were also set in Melbourne (45), Daytona Beach (43), Tampa (40), and West Palm Beach (51), Orlando (48) according to the National Weather Service. However, the temperatures in Central and South Florida were already higher than Monday when records were broken from Pensacola to Miami.

The warming trend was expected to continue to increase throughout the week.

"I think we will see it warming up pretty rapidly beginning tomorrow," said Jerry Gallup, Weather Service meteorologist, adding temperatures Wednesday would be 10 to 15 degrees warmer.

The increase in temperatures was due to wind coming off the eastern seaboard over warm waters, he said.

Meanwhile, Floridians took the unusual cold weather in stride.

Alonzo Hall, front desk manager at the Howard Johnson's Hotel on Daytona Beach, said many of his guests were joking about the cold snap.

Orlando's near-freezing weather has sent homeless crowding into the Pavilion. The homeless center has been averaging about 275 people per night. Some 404 showed up Sunday night.

Information from the Associated Press is contained in this report.

Vote

Longwood City Clerk Geri Zambri said a few voters were waiting outside to vote when the polls opened at 7 a.m. Voters cast their ballots at two polling places in the historic downtown district. Polls are set up at city hall in the commission chambers and across the street at the Ed Myers Community Building. Voting continues until 7 p.m.

There are 6,027 registered voters in Longwood. Zambri said she expects about a 20 per cent turnout in today's election. She predicts about 1,000 to 1,200 voters will participate in the election.

Deputy mayor Harvey Smerilson said with a wide grin, "I'd like to report the incumbents have taken the early lead. I was the first person to vote." Smerilson voted early on his way to work. He teaches math at an Orange County middle school.

As the sun peeked over the roof tops of city buildings, some voters dandled up against the 47 degree temperature.

Marie Sutherland stopped by to vote on her way to work and said she was "chilly."

Karl Berg, a 23-year Longwood resident said he voted to "change everything, but leave the police department the way it is...it will keep them honest."

Other voters declined to give their names or comment on the election, with one woman saying, "There wasn't enough to vote for to comment on."

Jane Cleeton, president of the Longwood Better Government Association political action committee, set up tables outside the polling places urging voters to replace the incumbent commissioners. Rex Anderson, Fred Pearl and Smerilson by voting for challengers Annamaria Vacca, Ron Sargent and Iris Benson. The committee workers were also asking voters to sign a petition for a referendum to put a cap on all tax increases unless approved by the voters. The PAC also campaigned against the police in the charter amendment.

Cleeton said the three challengers, who were not at the polls during the first hour of voting, were probably urging early morning commuters to vote.

"We can support them (the candidates) but we can't tell them where to be," Cleeton remarked.

Friends of the Longwood Police Department displayed a large sign on a pickup truck urging voters to say "yes" to the police in the charter amendment.

Incumbent commissioner Rex Anderson, who is seeking his third term, carried a campaign sign as he greeted voters. His son, Wayne, carried a bright green sign stating he was Anderson's son and urging voters to support his dad. Anderson waited for his son to arrive at the polls before voting. Anderson accompanied Wayne into the commission chambers where the teen voted for the first time. He was 18 in May.

Pearl arrived to cast his ballot shortly after 7 a.m. A Longwood podiatrist, Pearl said he hoped to return to greet early afternoon voters after completing morning appointments and surgeries. Two years ago when he was elected to his first term as commissioner, Pearl recalled the weather was "bitter and drizzly."

Cleeton said Vacca, Sargent and Benson were expected at the polls during the morning.

Mayor Paul Lovestrand, who is not up for election this year, said the city charter does not specify when the newly elected commissioners are to be sworn in. Each commissioner will be sworn in by the city clerk.

Lovestrand said he has not made plans to call a special meeting following the election. The newly elected commissioners' first regular meeting will be Nov. 15.

Amtrak trims personnel

By NICK PFELPAUF
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Amtrak, operating the rail passenger service through the Sanford area, has cut back on personnel. Twelve positions from the mechanical department have been eliminated.

In Washington, Amtrak spokesman Cliff Black said, "This is part of approximately 118 positions we have eliminated across the country."

He continued, "We believe it's the only direction we can take when we anticipate approximately a $30 million shortfall for fiscal year 1993/94 which began Oct. 1."

"The cut backs were only in the mechanical departments," said local Auto Train manager John Lombardi. "It isn't going to effect us or cause any change in services as far as we are concerned at the Sanford terminal."

Black agreed. "This will not be a viable change insofar as our customers are concerned."

Black said the 12 positions in Sanford were different from the other 104 across the nation. "For some reason," he said, "we have offered to relocate all of the Sanford people, so that none will lose their jobs."

He added, "The only hardship this will bring about is that in order to stay with the company, they will have to move, and that is unfortunate, but it can't be helped."

Seven of the jobs could relocate to Haleah, three to New Orleans, and two to Washington, D.C.

In Sanford, an Amtrak party planned for Friday night at the Timacuan Country Club was cancelled. The event was to celebrate Amtrak's 10th anniversary in Sanford.

"We are sorry this had to happen," Black said, "but we have to toe the line when it comes to costs."

Earlier this year, Amtrak service between New Orleans and Jacksonville, the first since the early 1970s, resumed in April. It provided for the first transcontinental rail service operating from Los Angeles to Miami.

Also this year, Amtrak leased the X2000 train for tests to demonstrate high speed rail technology. The new generation high speed passenger train was brought into Central Florida for public viewing.

Another Amtrak improvement was the new AMD-103 locomotive, which began activities fromorton, Va., to Sanford on the Auto Train service on June 11. It was the first diesel locomotive designed specifically for North American passenger service in over 40 years.

Longwood commissioners may be replaced in today's election

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — Three men ended their terms on the Longwood City Commission Monday night and the outcome of today's election will determine if they will return.

At the end of a hour-long commission meeting, Harvey Smerilson, Fred Pearl, and Rex Anderson said good-bye to fellow commissioners expressing their thanks at the end of the present term.

Anderson commented, "Well, it hasn't really been enjoyable all the time," but that the group had worked together, although they didn't always agree with each other's viewpoints.

During the short session, the commissioners approved a budget amendment allowing 21 city workers to take city vehicles home by a 3-2 vote. Mayor Paul Lovestrand and commissioner Steve Miller voted against the policy.

The mayor has been critical of the take home cars due to the lack of figures showing the actual cost of the practice. Some of the vehicles are taken as far as south Orange County and into Volusia County.

In other business, the commission completed budget transfers in last year's budget to make line items balance.

The commissioners also unanimously passed a resolution approving contracts with the operating engineers' union.

The three incumbent commissioners are being challenged for election by Iris Benson, Ron Sargent and Annamaria Vacca.

Complex

New Triben Mission. It is located east of the mission's administration building.

"We have a unique opportunity for all three of us to do something to benefit all of our taxpayers," said Smith.

City Administrator Bill Simmons pledged to develop a low-cost parking plan for the complex to reduce potential construction costs. He cited the possibility of condemning land near the County Services Building for less-costly ground-level parking. About 400 spaces are believed needed for the venture.

School board members expressed their enthusiasm for the project and were ready to commit to it if a city-proposed study suggested financial and public benefits outweighed negative factors.

But county commissioners demonstrated their continued split over the need to spend money for administrative offices and said they were reluctant to chip in $5,000 to pay a third of the cost of the study. This past summer, commissioners split on whether to expand the current County Services Building or to build a new center at Five Points.

"I am not going to sign off on a study before it's done," answered county commissioner Pat Warren in response to school officials' call for support.

"What does the county get for that $15,000?" asked county commissioner Dick VanDerWeide. "The Board of County Commissioners has already approved $200,000 for a study. This study would be more of a benefit to the school board and the city. It should be split two ways, not three."

"I'm not sure we have a consensus," said school board member Nancy Warren.

After an hour and 45 minutes of discussion, the group agreed to include Sanford in their discussions and not conduct the benefits study.

County commissioner Carlton Henley suggested the group didn't have enough information to establish even the cost savings of the joint project. Henley suggested space needs of school and county officials should be merged by an independent consultant to establish any construction savings.

School board officials want to begin design for a new administration building in January so they can move out of their cramped quarters, a former baseball training camp, as soon as they can. County officials have also considered replacing their offices, a former hospital, but have a lesser urgency.

At a meeting in July, school board member Larry Strickler suggested combining the two buildings, possibly at the present County Services Building site. Strickler suggested construction costs could be saved by sharing meeting rooms, mail centers and other space.

Several county and school officials met in informal discussions, but stopped when Paulucci seemed to indicate he was only interested in an outright sale, not a deal which included a land swap.

In an Oct. 25 letter to Smith, Paulucci wrote he was willing to swap the land for seven acres owned by the school district east of U.S. Highway 17-92 facing Lake Mary Boulevard. But Paulucci added he would not consider an outright swap, but one that included cash. Paulucci wants $900,000 for his land, although it is appraised at $380,110, according to a county report.

School officials value their Lake Mary Boulevard land at $900,000.

Fee

purposes shall be purchased and served from the original containers in which they were packaged at the milk plant."

Andrews said even if they could pour the milk, none of the schools has the dishwashing facilities to wash the reusable cups which would be used.

"The cost of purchasing and installing warewashing equipment would be excessive," he said. "Conservatively, I would estimate an average of $4,000 per school or $180,000 for the district. Add to that the cost of the chemicals, utilities and labor. All this to avoid paying approximately $50,000 in fees."

Andrews also notes that the chemicals required to clean the cups properly would have an adverse effect on the water.

"Even the 'biodegradable' chemicals have an extremely long life," he said. "We can pollute one way or the other and, frankly in Florida, I think the water is a much more precious resource."

Alternative containers are becoming available. Andrews said, A "mini-sip pouch," made by DuPont is made of 100 percent recyclable polyethylene.

Even if such an alternative were available today, the ADF would be charged for the first year and waivers would be approved in the second year.

"And that's just not right," he said. "All student breakfasts and lunches are state and federally subsidized. The federal subsidy varies with the students classification: free, reduced or paid. How can a student be charged a penny fee for a meal in which milk is a mandated component and the federal and state governments have said it is an entitlement?"

"And if we did charge the student the penny fee and the student comes to school without the penny, do we take the milk away from them? Not in Seminole County. We are here to feed the students, not become tax collectors!"

And, finally, Andrews argues, that the subsidy money the district receives from state and federal sources is to make up the difference in cost between what is charged to the students and what it costs to produce the meal.

"By using subsidy money to pay this fee, could it be construed as a misuse of federal or state funds?" he asked.

Andrews said that matter is currently being researched by the Florida Food Service Association.

"It's like taxing food stamps," he said. "They shouldn't be doing it."

Andrews said the school district will continue to do what it can to avoid spending more than $633,000 in ADF charges this year.

Music comes to Sarajevo, pianist hopes to soothe the savage soul

By AIDA CERKEZ
Associated Press Writer

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — If music soothes the savage soul, Marc Ponthus has a remedy for war-torn Sarajevo.

"Culture is a human right," the 3-year-old Ponthus said after his piano concert of classical and avant garde works, staged Monday in the frosty, unheated Academy of Performing Arts.

Ponthus played works by Bach, Debussy and modern German composer Karlheinz Stockhausen for an audience of about 100 people in the Academy, which sits under the gaze of Serb snipers in the hills around Sarajevo.

It was "a breeze of civilization, and I'm trying to breathe in as much as I can because it's rare," said Aidin Sijerac, who was among the audience for the concert by Ponthus, a French native who lives in New York.

Monday was a frigid day in Sarajevo, a grim reminder of the harsh winter to come, with no electricity, water or gas in the city.

Ponthus wore a wool scarf as he played by the dim glow of a flashlight, held by a young girl standing behind him.

"I'm an artist and artists are the consciousness of the world," said Ponthus as Sijerac and others gathered around the piano, eager to talk to him.

Ponthus flew to Sarajevo on Saturday because he wanted to show the residents of the besieged Bosnian capital that "somebody cares about what is going on here."

He said Sarajevo is part of Europe, "part of my cultural world," and the people here are the same as those in New York or Paris, except that they are isolated by a 19-month Serb siege.

Drug connection explored in actor's death

By JEFF WILSON
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES -- An autopsy on River Phoenix was inconclusive, and investigators are awaiting test results to learn whether drugs played a role in the death of the rising Hollywood star, the coroner's office says.

Coroner's spokesman Scott Carrier said the toxicology results won't be available for weeks. But the TV news magazine "Hard Copy," citing an anonymous hospital source, said that blood tests at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, where the 23-year-old actor died early Sunday, found cocaine and Valium.

Paramedics were told the actor had been taking drugs, county fire Capt. Ray Ribar said.

"It was the classic cocaine overreaction — it just didn't give people and stops the heart," he said.

Phoenix, who played a tough kid who stands up to bullies in the 1988 movie "Stand by Me" and won an Oscar nomination for the 1988 "Running on Empty," collapsed outside the Viper Room nightclub.

He was writhing on the sidewalk — flopping around like "a fish out of water," one witness said — as his brother screamed into the phone: "He's dying!"

"You must get here, please, you must get here, please," Joaquin "Leif" Phoenix, 19, told a 911 dispatcher. "I'm thinking he had Valium or something."

Phoenix's other movies included "The Mosquito Coast," "My Own Private Idaho" and "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade."

Beth Williams getting in the spirit of Christmas...

I'm Dreaming Of A White Sofa Christmas

There's only one thing that I want for Christmas this year and that is a white sofa. I decided that I should start looking early because I am very picky when it comes to furniture and I want my white sofa to be absolutely perfect. Well, in the past two weeks I have seen hundreds of sofas in all different colors on dozens of showroom floors, but none of them was my white sofa. Sure the red one was pretty and the blue couch with white stripes caught my eye, but they weren't white. Then I finally found some white ones, but they were either the wrong size or not my style. I began to despair. I felt that I would never find my white sofa. I only had two options left. I could sit down on Santa's lap and beg him to bring me this sofa made to my exact specifications or I could go to Beth's Country Classics where they will special order my sofa with my choice of frame, style and fabric. Beth's Country Classics makes it easy to redecorate to my specifications. At Beth's, my sofa, loveseat or chair is special ordered for me and upholstered in the fabric of my choice. It's all up to me. I get to pick the frame, style and fabric. Beth's Country Classics has over 1000 fabrics and hundreds of frames and styles to choose from so I can make that special piece of furniture I thought I'd only dream of. I can make my dream furniture come true through leading manufacturers such as Weekend Retreat and Bob Timberlake. Beth offers decorating selections and fabricating of upholstered pieces along with free expert help and advice.

After ordering my sofa, I decided to look around Beth's to see what kind of accessories she had. I couldn't believe the selection. If you need a new lamp by which to read all your Christmas cards, Beth has country and traditional lamps and even occasional tables to set them on. If you're looking for special Christmas gifts such as framed prints and art, cotton throws, copper and brass or braided rugs, Beth has more than enough to fit under your Christmas tree. Beth's Country Classics has gifts from the New England states, far western states, Amish country and those that reflect deep south heritage. They also feature gourmet foods and the house of collectibles.

Are you already dreaming of Christmas? You should come to Beth's Christmas Open House on November 5th, 6th and 7th. Admire the beautifully decorated Christmas tree and see how she can help you deck the halls of your home. As usual, Beth features 14 fully decorated rooms with furniture and accessories that she collects traveling across the country just as she has the past 11 years.

Whether you're dreaming of an elegant white sofa or a simple country Christmas, Beth's Country Classics is one place you shouldn't miss. Stop by 1000 North County Road 427 in Longwood to see all that Beth's Country Classics has to offer you. If you need more information, please call 834-1077. ## Spring fashion Schoolgirl skirts, slip-like dresses at New York shows

By FRANCINE PARNES
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Spring's fashions have arrived, and schoolgirl skirts, slip-like dresses and retro-70s funk are leading the fashion parade.

New York's spring fashion showings got under way with fanfare on Monday, introducing the first Anne Klein collection by new head designer Richard Tyler.

The career woman's design house marked its 25th year by unveiling what may be the season's most anticipated collection.

Known for dressing Hollywood types and rock 'n' roll luminaries, Australian-born Tyler got down and funky with naughty schoolgirl styles, lingerie-looking slip dresses, army-green rubber boots and some Lemlimes hovering near Indent. Yet he also stayed the classic Anne Klein course with meticulously tailored jackets, his longtime strong suit.

Next were Bill Blass and Byron Lars, representing, respectively, polished and pretty, and wacky and witty.

Blass pleased his luncheon audience with little black lace dresses and floaty chiffon ball skirts. Lars honored Emma Peel of the television series "The Avengers" with shirtdresses unbuttoned over hot pants and holster belts carrying lipstick as ammunition.

Tyler opened with sexy schoolgirl looks reminiscent of those at last month's Paris and Milan shows. There were super-short wool jumpers, flippy pleated suspender skirts and black leather kilts, all worn with anklets and leather backpacks.

Evening is the best time of day for Blass, whose signature remains unexpected fabrics and silhouettes. Menswear-inspired gray pinstriped or glen plaid pants went with feminine blazers in silk chiffon or black lace, or point d'esprit jean jackets.

"A certain amount of surprise is always necessary in clothes," said Blass. "A bit of wit doesn't hurt."

Appropos wit, Lars once again reworked fashion basics with novel proportions and shapes.

Nodding to the Superfly '70s, he trotted out exaggerated bell sleeves tumbling over fingertips, and towering Afro wigs.

Forty shows are being staged in a centralized showplace, copying the format used in Milan and Paris. The move is designed not only for convenience but also to help elevate American fashion to international status.

The reorganization comes courtesy of Seventh on Sixth, the group also responsible for the new cap on modeling fees, which had soared to $10,000 a piece for certain models per show.

With the fee cap, on an hourly rate super models rake in $750; second-tier models get $400 to $600; and first-timers earn up to $250.

Sly and Harrison still drawing crowd to movies

By JOHN HORN
AP Entertainment Writer

LOS ANGELES — Audiences have crowded theaters at a record pace this year, drawn by such movies as "The Fugitive," "Jurassic Park" and, more recently, the comedy "Cool Runnings" and Sylvester Stallone's "Demolition Man."

Ticket sales so far this year total $4.25 billion, way ahead of the $3.73 billion brought in last year by this time, according to figures released Monday.

At that rate, 1993 could be the biggest year in Hollywood history, with $5.3 billion in tickets sold. The record is $5.1 billion, set in 1989.

The No. 1 movie at the box office over the weekend was "Tim Burton's The Nightmare Before Christmas," which made $8.2 million in its third week. Exhibitor Relations Co. reported. In second place was "The Beverly Hillbillies," with $4.9 million.

"Demolition Man" was third with $4.2 million. "Cool Runnings," about a bobsled team from Jamaica, was next with $3.7 million.

Packwood says he's a victim; Murray disagrees

By SCOTT BONNER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Sen. Bob Packwood, accused of sexually harassing more than two dozen women, is portraying himself as the victim of a witch hunt. But a female lawmaker says Senate refusal to enforce a subpoena for his diaries would show American women "the cards are stacked against you."

"A vote against this resolution (seeking a court order against Packwood) sends a clear message to every woman in this country: If you are harassed, keep quiet, say nothing," freshman Sen. Patty Murray, D-Wash., said Monday in a forceful speech on the Senate floor.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell said the Senate would resume debate today on whether to ask for a court order enforcing the subpoena for the Oregon Republican's diaries.

The Senate Ethics Committee has demanded more than 8,000 pages of Packwood's writings as part of its investigation into allegations that the veteran lawmaker sexually harassed more than two dozen women over the years and used his staff to try to intimidate them into silence.

Murray, one of the Senate's seven female members, said the debate reminded her of watching Anita Hill's testimony concerning alleged sexual harassment from then-Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas. "I remember thinking, 'Why don't they get it?'" Murray said about the 1991 televised hearings. "Why don't they understand women who have been victims of sexual misconduct are watching?"

"Even here today I am shocked and surprised that through the nature of this debate, it appears to portray the senator from Oregon as the victim," Murray said. "I remind my colleagues, more than two dozen women have brought their allegations to this body. Clearly they see themselves as the victims in this debate."

Some of Packwood's colleagues in both parties raised questions about the scope of the Ethics Committee's inquiry. And three Republican members of the panel said they disagreed with the investigators' tactics.

But no one stood up to say they would vote in favor of Packwood's position that he should escape full compliance with the subpoena, which the committee maintains would shine light on potential criminal violations beyond an initial probe of sexual harassment and intimidation.

Sen. Richard Bryan, D-Nev., the committee chairman, said no senator under investigation by the Ethics Committee "has ever in the history of the committee refused to comply with a document request."

But Sens. John Warner, R-Va., Hank Brown, R-Colo., Joe Biden,

D-Del., and Bennett Johnston, D-La., were among those who questioned the panel's authority without backing Packwood's position.

"How do you tell the difference between a fishing expedition and a due process subpoena?" Johnston said.

Packwood, 61, ranking GOP member on the Senate Finance Committee, said he was being treated differently than private citizens. He said he had been branded a criminal without a fair hearing.

Packwood was referring to Bryan's assertion last week that the Packwood investigation had turned up evidence of possible criminal violations.

Bryan retorted, "My statement was only to the possibility of such criminal violations and was made in the context that this Senate needs to know of the potential gravity of the offense."

Packwood has said earlier that his more than 8,000 pages of writings include entries on the sex lives of fellow lawmakers. He added Monday that the diaries included references to history-making events and matters that "are very, very personal."

Even as he offered a last-minute compromise to a hushed Senate, Packwood described how he had committed his innermost thoughts to writing, including "family heartaches, disappointment, irritation with the car repairman."

Sen. Packwood not first diarist concerned with unhappy endings

By WALTER R. MEARS
An AP News Analyst

WASHINGTON — Oftentimes, it seems, public men choose to record their daily lives as chapters for history — grand plans that can go wrong. Sen. Bob Packwood is not the first political diarist to find himself cornered by his own journal.

Within the year, the journals of a former Cabinet officer became grounds for indictment, overruled by pardon from an outgoing president whose diaries had been used to question his veracity.

Packwood started long before that; his diaries date back to 1969, prior even to the classic self-unraveling of Richard M. Nixon's White House tape recordings.

"From the very beginning I had decided that my administration would be the best-chronicled in history," Nixon wrote in his memoirs. That led to the voice-activated system that recorded the Watergate tapes and ultimately forced his resignation as president in 1974.

A dozen years later, asked for the lesson of Watergate, Nixon replied: "Just destroy all the tapes."

He didn't, nor have other political figures whose records and diaries can be incriminating, or at least embarrassing.

Caspar Weinberger, the former secretary of defense, was indicted in 1992, accused of false statements about the Iran-Contra scandal on the basis of his own handwritten notes. Prosecutors in the same case obtained taped diaries that raised doubts about George Bush's early knowledge in that case. Bush had kept the diaries when he was vice president.

The Packwood diaries run to 8,200 typed, single-spaced pages, dictated by the senator most days for 25 years.

But he had disclosed their existence to the Senate Ethics Committee, hoping to use entries in the diaries in his defense against accusations of sexual harassment and intimidation.

Two states get OK to test limiting welfare benefits

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration has opened a Pandora's box with its decision to let Wisconsin push some families off welfare after two years, an advocate for the poor says.

But Republican Gov. Tommy Thompson says the state is moving to end the cycle of long-term welfare dependency with its tough new experiment.

The Department of Health and Human Services, which must approve state experiments in welfare programs, announced Monday that Wisconsin would be allowed to test two-year time limits in two counties.

The state does not guarantee families who exhaust their benefits a job at the end of the two years.

But in a compromise with HHS, Wisconsin agreed it will not kick families off the rolls if they are unable to find work because of a lack of appropriate jobs. The state will continue Medicaid coverage indefinitely for all families who leave the rolls.

President Clinton popularized the idea of a two-year limit on welfare benefits during his 1992 campaign and promised it would be the cornerstone of national welfare reform. He also pledged to create jobs for families who cannot find work when their benefits run out.

Thompson called Wisconsin's "Work Not Welfare" a "revolutionary concept."

"For too long, the welfare system has provided disincentives to self-sufficiency," Thompson said. "Work Not Welfare will change that. It will make welfare what it was meant to be — a temporary hand up, not a permanent handout."

But an advocate for the poor contends that a two-year time limit with no guarantee of a job is a recipe for social disaster.

"It is extraordinary to think that the federal government wants to run an experiment to test what will happen when poor families with children have nothing to live on," said Mark Greenberg, senior staff attorney with the Center on Law and Social Policy, a liberal advocacy and research organization.

Greenberg said the administration's decision opens a Pandora's box to other requests from other states claiming a desire to experiment with reform that wind up merely punishing the poor. Clinton sold himself as a new Democrat last year with his call for two-year time limits, and now other politicians see welfare reform as a potent campaign issue.

"Is this saying we're going to let 50 flowers bloom even if they all have thorns?" Greenberg said.

In Wisconsin's two test counties, with some exceptions, benefits under Aid to Families with Dependent Children, or AFDC, the formal name for welfare, will be limited to two years in a four-year period, and once benefits are exhausted, recipients would be ineligible for 36 months.

A senior HHS official said the administration's decisions on Wisconsin and other state experiments should not be interpreted as "the direction in which welfare reform is going."

Instead, said HHS Deputy Secretary Walter D. Broadnax, the decision "shows that the Clinton administration is serious about providing states with the flexibility needed to test innovations."

Earlier Monday, Georgia officials announced that the administration had agreed to waive federal welfare rules to allow the state to reduce welfare payments when an able-bodied adult refuses an offer of full-time employment or quits a job without cause.

The state also will be able to deny increases in benefits for families that have additional children after they have been receiving welfare for at least two years.

The average AFDC payment for a family of three in Georgia is $140 a month. Parents who have additional children get $45 more.

Greenberg said the caps "appeal to the worst popular stereotypes about AFDC families" and could cause great harm to families with infants.

Gov. Zell Miller said the decision "places Georgia among the nation's leaders in welfare reform."

LAKE MARY — It must be the nickname.

A trio of squads that use the nickname Rams, the Lake Mary High School girls' volleyball team and the Orangewood Christian Academy boy's soccer team and girl's volleyball team, will all be in the Jacksonville area today looking to take the next step in their quests for a state championship.

Lake Mary (23-4) will travel to Neptune Beach (on Jacksonville Beach) looking for its third consecutive Regional title when it takes on the Fletcher High School Generals starting at 7 p.m.

The winner of the game (Region II) will take on the winner of the Region I contest between Niceville and Orange Park, which will be played at Niceville High School at 5 p.m. Central Standard Time today. Should Lake Mary win, they would host the Section I championship game on Friday if Niceville wins. If Orange Park wins, Lake Mary would have to go to Orange Park.

Both Orangewood teams will travel to Orange Park for a soccer-volleyball doubleheader against St. John's Country Day School.

SANFORD HERALD PLAYER OF THE WEEK

Butler baffles Tribe on way to honor

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Writer

ALAMONTE SPRINGS — Anybody got an elephant gun?

That may be the only way to stop Lake Brantley fullback Jeff Butler.

The 6-foot, 2-inch, 225-pound senior made mince meat out of the vaunted Seminole High School defense last week, rushing for 249 yards and two touchdowns on 28 carries.

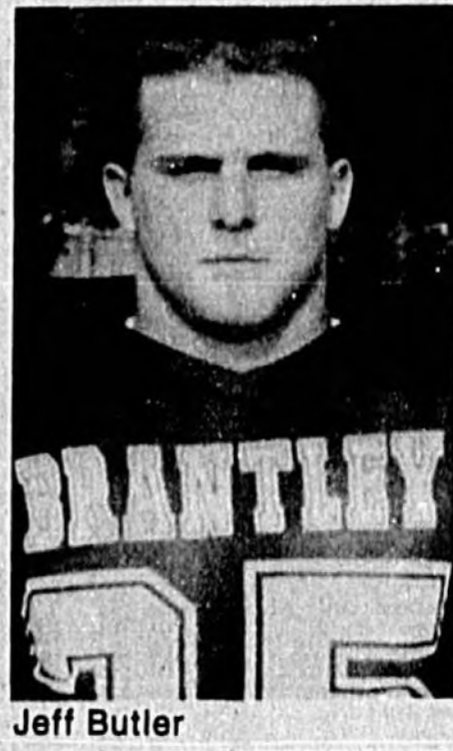

For his efforts, Butler becomes the first two-time winner this year of the Sanford Herald Player of the Week.

"I was a little disappointed he didn't get it last week," said Lake Brantley head coach Fred Almon. "Last week he ran for 259 yards and a school record against Mainland. I was amazed when he came within 10 yards again this week. I figured out that over the past five games he has run for 989 yards on 99 carries. I guess people trying to stop our wishbone are not doing very good."

Butler's running last Thursday against the Tribe dropped Seminole to second in the county in rushing defense behind Oviedo, the only team to slow Butler down this year. The Tribe came into the contest allowing only 87 yards per game and a 2.8 per carry average, but now it is giving up over 100 yards and a 3.6 yards per carry average.

Butler leads the county in rushing 1320 yards and has scored 12 touchdowns for a county-high 72 points.

Jeff Butler

Lake Brantley's Jeff Butler is this week's Sanford Herald Player of the Week.

Also considered for the award were:

• Seminole's Cliff Branch, who completed nine of 18 passes for 196 yards and a touchdown.

• Lake Howell's Kelvin Chisolm, who rushed for 178 yards on 14 carries and scored two touchdowns.

• Lyman's Keith Burgess, who rushed for 108 yards on 18 carries.

• Lake Mary's Dexter Graham, who scored his team's touchdown.

• Oviedo's Oscar Duncan, who rushed for 90 yards on 14 carries.

Hernando Junior College from Port Richey starting at 7:30.

Or, a year's edition of the Raiders would appear to be one of the most athletic groups ever assembled.

Only three members of last year's team returns, but they are all from Central Florida and saw considerable playing time last season.

Leading the returnees are 6-foot, 4-inch guard/forward Aaron Merrell from Altamonte Springs. The Lyman graduate started several games last year at both the point and second guard positions and can easily play either guard spot or at small forward.

Also back is 6-foot, 5-inch forward Michael Burch from Daytona Beach. The 215-pound Mainland graduate was the starting center for most of last season, but worked hard on his shooting and defense over the summer and will be used almost exclusively at the power forward spot this year.

The other returnee is "Mr. Instant Offense," Evon Hammond. The 6-foot, 4-inch, guard/forward from Orlando-Evans was one of the top scoring threats for SCC last year both from the outside and the inside and probably would have led the team in scoring if he had not suffered an severe ankle injury early in the season that slowed his progress.

Merthie worked hard on re-cruiting over the summer and brought in seven young men who could quickly make local fans forget about last year's struggle and make the Raiders a power in the Mid-Florida Conference again.

Among the new faces on the roster are Ralph Philpott from Lyman and Akiva Wilson from Winter Park.

Philpott is a 6-foot, 5-inch, 215-pound jumping jack, who was highly recruited by the junior college's during his senior year at Lyman. But he chose instead to gain some strength and maturity by going into the Army before starting his college career and Merthie will be counting on him to be rebounding force for the team.

Wilson is a jet-quick guard who started for a pretty good Winter Park squad the past couple of seasons and should add to the back court depth.

But while it is nice to have local talent on the team, Merthie's pride and joy of his recruiting efforts are a pair of guards from Rochester, New York.

Michael Sheppard is a 6-foot, 1-inch point guard who is probably the best to play the position since All-State performer Darrin Gallagher graduated.

"Michael sees the floor unbelievably," said Merthie. "He is a pure point guard who is more interested in getting an assist than scoring himself. I thought we had the best point guard in the state in Phillip Williams last year, but Michael came in and practiced with us in January and just played circles round Williams."

The other New Yorker is 6-foot, 3-inch Terrance Mitchell. Merthie feels he is one of the best scoring threats he has ever seen and he proved it recently with a 28 point performance in only 23 minutes of play in an exhibition game against Edward Waters College.

Filling out the 11-man roster are 6-foot, 7-inch sophomore transfer Antonio Sutton from Jacksonville. 6-foot, 2-inch freshman leaper Roger Gaston, who now calls Sanford home. 6-foot, 2-inch freshman Don Tillman from Saginaw, Michigan and 6-foot, 5-inch freshman Charles Davis from Spartanburg, South Carolina.

As has become an SCC trade mark, Merthie will press and run and expects to use all 11 players at his disposal.

Review drug therapy with urologists

DEAR DR. GOTT: I feel I have exhausted all local avenues of obtaining helpful medical advice about my kidney disorder. After visiting five urologists, I was finally diagnosed with renal tubular acidosis of an incomplete type. I've been prescribed Uroci-K and sodium bicarbonate and still experience pain while urinating and the passing of ammonium phosphate crystals. This is at least a weekly occurrence. Since I am unable to work or function in a normal capacity, I would appreciate any advice you might have.

DEAR READER: Renal tubular acidosis, the inability of the kidneys to excrete enough acid, is usually an inherited condition, but it can also be caused by other disorders, such as diabetes, sickle cell disease (an abnormality of the blood cells), autoimmune diseases (such as lupus and Sjogren's syndrome), and vitamin D deficiency. The condition is also associated with lecithin toxicity and heavy metal (lead) poisoning.

When the kidneys fail to excrete acid, the body becomes acidotic, leading to low potassium levels, rickets, kidney stones, and osteoporosis.

Symptoms include weakness, bone pain, heart irregularities, and kidney failure, to mention a few.

The diagnosis is made by special urine tests.

For therapy, specialists prescribe bicarb of soda. Some commercial solutions also contain potassium, as does your Uroci-K. These compounds help neutralize the acidosis and prevent the mineral deficiencies that complicate the disorder.

If you continue to have symptoms, despite treatment, you should review your medicines with your urologists. Perhaps you're not getting enough or maybe another type of compound would suit you better. With appropriate therapy, you should be able to live and work normally. To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Kidney Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Partner bids a suit and you plan to support him. How do you decide the level to which you will raise his suit? Probably point-count is top of your list. But there is a more accurate method: the Losing Trick Count.

The LTC was devised by F. Dudley Courtenay around 1934. Its modus operandi is described in an excellent book by the Australian expert Ron Klinger, "The Modern Losing Trick Count," published by Gollancz ($11.95, The Bridge World, 39 West 94th Street, New York, NY 10019, 25-7124).

Today's deal gives you a taste of the LTC in action. You count one loser for each top honor (ace, king or queen) missing in each suit. Add your losers to those shown by partner and subtract from 24. The result is the number of tricks you probably can win.

Here you assume partner has six losers for his strong no-trump. You have six losers also (one spade, one heart, one diamond and three clubs). This suggests that you can make a small slam (24 minus 6-plus-6 equals 12). You must sound out partner about a spade contract.

Over your three-spade response, partner cue-bids the club ace to say that he likes spades.

Against six spades, West leads the diamond jack. You must win with dummy's ace and cash the spade queen, a safety play to allow for East's having all four trumps. When that position exists, you lead spades twice through East to pick up his J-10, using the heart king as the second dummy entry. Then you take two club finesses to hold your losers to one and make your slam.

YOUR BIRTHDAY
Nov. 3, 1993

In the year ahead you might experience from time to time a series of unexpected changes. Fortunately, when this occurs it will work to your advantage.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) There's a chance you might profit from two sources for personal gain today. There may not be any linkage or relationship, but each will be somewhat similar. Scorpio, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Both Dan Cupid and Lady Luck might eye you favorably today. Involvements you have with the one you love could exceed your expectations.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Individuals who are in posi-
