After the program, the children were given a pleasant surprise, Dr. and Mrs. R. C. Bower, very generously sending up ice cream for all the children and teachers of the school, which was indeed greatly enjoyed. The children and teachers take this means of thanking both Dr. and Mrs. Bower for their generosity which was the loveliest treat they have had this year.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Little Mary Elizabeth Tolar, the winsome young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Tolar, was the charming hostess yesterday afternoon when she invited a number of her playmates to help celebrate her eighth birthday anniversary.

Gold and blue were the colors used for this lovely party. The dining table was laid with an exquisite lace cloth and graced with a large Jack Horner pie, in the form of a large golden rose, extending from which were blue and golden ribbons to each plate. At intervals were silver candlesticks holding blue tapers. At one end was the large birthday cake topped with eight tiny blue candles. Covers were laid for twelve, the place cards were unique, being large golden balloons, fastened to these were the names. Refreshments of ice cream, cake and candies were served, favors of golden miniature baskets filled with mints and candies were given. Souvenirs were drawn from the Jack Horner pie.

The afternoon passed all too soon with games of all kinds, and the peanut hunt was featured.

Mary Elizabeth was assisted in entertaining her guests by her mother, Mrs. R. E. Tolar and was the recipient of many beautiful gifts.

The guests were Lola Peak, Betty McKinnon, Helen Wilson, Marjorie DuBois, Martha Coney, Mary Maxwell, Sarah Maxwell, Martha Bishop, Elsie Bryan Tolar, Carla Wheeler, and Mary Jane Preston.

FOR JUNE BRIDES.

Last evening, Mrs. Stella Arrington, Mrs. W. M. McKinnon, Misses Helen Terwilliger, Carolyn Spencer, Mildred Huston, Mary Robinson, and Mrs. Raymona Raynor were hostesses at a surprise shower, at the home of Mrs. Arrington on Magnolia avenue, honoring three of the June brides, Misses Coralie Tillie, Ethel Moughton and Herminia Lehman, all members of the Primary Teachers Book Club.

The rooms were artistically decorated with quantities of lovely May flowers, the prevailing colors being pink and lavender.

After all the guests had assembled, a telegram addressed to the Teachers Book Club, was received by Mrs. Arrington, from Mrs. Lehman, which read, "Since Mrs. Lehman is out, teachers are out, and the engagement of Miss Herminia Lehman to Mr. Herbert Edwin Russell is announced, the wedding to take place June twelfth." The evening was merrily spent with games, contests, etc., a delightful feature being the making and presentation of booklets for the brides to be. These were made by the bride elects, the picture being cut out of magazines and pasted in clever booklets.

Following the contests, three dainty little maidens entered carrying three large baskets which resembled huge bouquets of May flowers, singing "The May Song," they were joined in the chorus by the teachers singing the following parody:

"Look my brides beneath the flowers There you'll find your bridal showers, All the flower bells are ringing, All our hearts with love are singing.

What is this the flowers chime It is wedding time, The flowers chime it's wedding time, Lovely wedding time.

Look my brides beneath the flowers There you'll find your bridal showers All the flower bells are ringing, All our hearts with love are singing.

What is this the showers say, It is love alive, The showers say it's love alive, Truest love alive.

Following the presentation of the "shower," the hostesses served a delicious salad course and ice course, with favors of rose baskets filled with candies.

The guests included the members of the Teachers' Club and a few extra guests, and were Misses Ethel Moughton, Coralie Tillie, and Herminia Lehman, honorees; Misses Emma Owens, Kathleen Brady, Helen Terwilliger, Mary Ervin, Mary Howard, Mary Robinson, Ruth Gillon, Carolyn Spencer, Ruth Hand, Mrs. W. Quantities of exquisite pink gladiolus and roses transformed the rooms into a veritable flower garden.

The hours passed quickly with the interesting game of bridge played, and the prize for high score, a dainty tape measure, was won by Mrs. Sanford Doudney.

At the conclusion of the card game the hostess served ice cream, cake and salted nuts.

BON TON BRIDGE CLUB.

Among the pleasant social events of the week, was the bridge party given by Miss Fern Ward, at her home yesterday afternoon. The guests being the members of the Bon Ton Bridge Club.

Vases and baskets of pink hibiscus and ferns were effectively used in the rooms where the card tables were arranged.

Of exceptional interest was the game of bridge played, when scores were counted it was found that Mrs. Raymond Phillips held high score and was awarded a lovely box of stationery.

Following the awarding of the prizes, the hostess served a dainty ice course.

FIRST AUTOMOBILE TO MAKE WORLD TRIP

The first automobile ever to make a trip around the world, a 1910 Model 20 Hupmobile, is on display at the main offices of the Hupp Motor Car Corporation in Detroit. During the trip, made in 1910 and 1911, the car traveled nearly 40,000 miles. Natives in many parts of the world were terror stricken at the "strange contrivance" for it was the first automobile ever seen in 23 different countries. Much of the success of the Hupmobile in foreign sales is still attributed to this trip by Hupp officials.

Tonight will be the closing episode in the High School Commencement. It has been a great week with the graduates and their friends and families.

The Schools of Florida are certainly coming to the front. Every paper in the state shows that big classes are being graduated from the schools and that higher education is taking a large place with the people of this state.

All this "bull" about this member and that member of the Florida legislature being the next governor is all rot. The next governor of Florida is not a member of the present legislature and has never been a member of the legislature—that is why he will be the next governor.

Greece and Turkey will not meet this year says the latest report from ringside circles. The purse was not large enough and the battle-ground could not be decided upon.

One of the best signs of growth of Sanford is the growth of the public schools. The graduating class is double the number of other years and with all the improvements at the High School building it looks like there will be no room for the big senior class of next year.

The Daily Herald is going ahead and making arrangements for one of the biggest summers in our history. We believe in making Sanford a summer town as well as a winter town.

If all plans are carried out several hundred miles of good roads will be built in Florida within the next year costing several millions of dollars. Over three quarters of a million dollars will be spent in the New Smyrna road and bridge district alone.

What was almost a world's record for the Florida legislature was accomplished yesterday morning when the local bill authorizing Volusia county to issue time warrants in an amount not to exceed $75,000 for the purchase of the Monroe and Crows Bluff bridges was passed in both the senate and house in about one hour's time.

Junior Class of the Sanford High School

calls upon me to lead you to the source of strength for the supporting of your ideal. To develop your lives in the fullest and the most perfect manner so that they may minister in the most helpful way to the largest number of people demands that you live in touch with the source of strength and inspiration.

If you continue your preparation until your equipment fits you for the largest service, you must constantly ask Christ for counsel. If the ideal which we have presented to you this morning becomes your ideal, and gives direction to your lives, you must appropriate that superlative inspiration which comes from the Man of Calvary.

Young women, and young men, linger, I beg you, during these graduating experiences to soberly peer into the future, and address to yourselves that very searching question: what shall the lives of the members of this graduating class be tomorrow? If college days contribute anything to your fitness for the more exacting experiences which life offers to you, then you must have Christ revealed to you more perfectly during your college days. If you would live, and live profoundly; if you want your deeds not to be swept away by the passing tides, but if you want them to live and to live forever, they must be a product of Christ's impelling compassion within you. Members of the 1923 graduating class, whatever you may do or fail to do, make Christ absolutely first in your lives, and your work will be immortal.

Alone I walked the ocean strand—
A pebbly shell was in my hand;
I stooped and wrote upon the sand,
My name, the year, the day.
As onward from the spot I passed,
One lingering look behind I cast—
A wave came rolling high and fast,
And washed my lines away.

And so I thought 'twill shortly be
With every mark on earth for me;
A wave of dark oblivion's sea
Will sweep across the place
Where I have trod the sandy shore
Of time; there will remain no more
Of me; my name—the name I bore—
Will leave no track, no trace.

And yet, with him who counts the sands,
And holds the waters in His hands,
I know the lasting records stand
Inscribed against my name.
Of all this mortal past has wrought,
Of all this thinking soul has sought,
Of all the fleeting moment's brought
For glory or for shame.

BACCALAUREATE SERVICES AT HIGH SCHOOL INTEREST- ING PART WEEK'S PROGRAM

social system into a military machine, and the Spartan became perhaps the greatest soldier of all time. Conquest became a controlling passion of the Roman's life, and this passion led those few peasants and outlaws from the law hills along the banks of the Tiber, and made them play a very great part in the world's life. A very different ideal possessed Athens and Florence. The Athenians, and the citizens of Florence dreamed of art until the dream was converted into a passion, and this passion impelled them to such endeavors that they are even today world shrines. Very recently we entered the isolated world of the Japanese, and awakened this little yellow nation, and almost immediately the Japanese determined to have a place in the modern world, and their achievements have been almost startling. I think that we shall be able to agree that "ideals and ambitions are the soul of a nation," and without ideals and ambition a nation "will never rise to those supreme heights that justify man's creation and his being."

If the ideal and the ambition determine the life, and the character of the nation, they also determine the life and the character of the individual.

It is indeed very evident that the graduates from the high school should make sure of the character of their ideals and their ambitions. Young women and young men, your ideals and your ambitions will determine very largely both what you are to be and what you are to do.

You dare not go out into the larger experiences of life with a passion for pleasure driving you along. Such an ideal would be fatal both for you and for others. If such an ideal should control the making of your life program, you would soon discover, or others would soon discover that you were a menace to all that is highest and best in the lives of others, and that your own finer powers were being prostituted to very unworthy ends.

You dare not go out into the more exacting experiences of life with an ambition for money controlling you. A passion for money for the sake of money, will brutalize your finer and your nobler feelings. Do not permit a passion for money to get possession of you.

What then is to be the ideal which shall give direction to the plans which you make for tomorrow, and for all of the other tomorrows? To develop your life in the fullest and the most perfect manner so that it may minister in the most hopeful way to the largest number of people is in ideal worthy of any graduate from our high school. If you have not yet taken time to concern yourselves seriously about the places which you are assigned to fill in the world, may such a concern take possession of you just now, young men and young women.

The ideal which we have just presented to you to develop your life in the fullest and the most perfect manner so that it may minister in the most helpful way to the largest number of people—at once calls upon you to consider with profoundest care the matter of your further preparation.

Students of the Sanford schools, do not be content with anything less than the best training with which you can provide yourselves. Take, I beg you, this graduating experience as a kind of vantage ground, and look carefully into the world before you. Out there before you are awaiting many testing and exacting experiences. Out there are awaiting many open doors of real opportunities. There is no doubt whatever but that you will be tested, and tested repeatedly. Many will be the opportunities which will call for the very best of training. Shallow or superficial equipment will not answer the demands which will be made upon you. A proper appraisal now—today—of the largeness of the opportunity which is certain to be yours will challenge you to the most manly and the most womanly endeavors in equipping yourselves for ministering to the greatest and the most enduring interests of humanity everywhere.

We must forever abandon the idea that life consists in the abundance of the things which one possesses. Young women and young men, the man of Calvary was correct when he gave us that statement: "Take heed and beware of covetousness: for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." Then let us ask this question: in what does one's life consist?

The strength of the will; the character of the purposes; the quality of the feelings; the aim of the ambitions—these largely make up one's life.

Each one of you must face that very profound question—"What is your life?" And there is another question which perhaps is no less profound, and that question is this: what is your life to be? The aim which was presented to you a few moments ago, if genuinely accepted and constantly and carefully fostered, would contribute much to the making of life complete, and to the making of one's work immortal.

This ideal—to develop your life in the fullest and the most perfect manner so that it may minister in the most helpful way to the largest number of people—calls upon you to recognize the fact that you are indeed a world citizen. You are called upon to interest yourself in the far-away Afghan, and the poor black Australian, and the savage Zulu in South Africa. There is not a human being living in the remotest corner of the earth from you, or a member of the most savage tribe from whose destiny you may excuse yourself. But this is not all which is involved in your citizenship. You must make your influence felt in your own state and in your own community. This ideal calls upon you to so equip yourselves that you will do well your part in seeing to it that another Martin Tabert will never suffer and be beaten to death by a heartless "whipping boss." You are called upon to do well your part in seeing to it that another Sheriff Jones can never disgrace the law in any county in the United States. You are called upon to do well your part in bringing about such a reformation that another Judge Willis will never be permitted to outrage the sacredness of any court room. Young women and young men, you are called upon to see to it that another Putnam Lumber Company employing the same principles which have been employed in our state can never do business in any state in the American union, and that another Higginbotham can never put his foot on another boy's neck, press his face into the sand and beat out his young life.

I want to lead you for a few minutes into a very practical field, of thought for every young woman and every young man in the United States. I think there can be no doubt in the mind of any ordinary student of world events but that God had some wonderful purpose in the settlement of this new world. And I am sure that you will not be accused of being bigoted or boastful if you should intimate that you are citizens of the greatest country in the world. Every casual student of present world conditions knows quite well that just at this time there is threatening unrest in many places throughout the world, and this unrest places upon America a greater responsibility of world leadership. We must do our best to keep America true, or to make her true to those ideals and ambitions which will save the nations from chaos, and will lead them out of the present turmoil. Members of the graduating class, if our nation functions well in this sacred work of world leadership, we must give more careful attention to the selecting of those who are entrusted with the sacred work of governing our one hundred and ten million people. The little attention which we give to the selection of the people who are to make and who are to enforce our laws constitutes a peril—a very grave peril. For the benefit of any one who may think that this is an unwarranted statement I shall give you two illustrations which are representative in character.

I know intimately a county in our own state in which three men were nominated for seats in our legislature. A second election had to be held to decide which of the three was to represent the county. The man who was finally elected was openly known to be a constant violator of the prohibition law. He was known to drink whiskey constantly, and certainly somebody had to make that whiskey, and all the citizens of the county were convinced that somebody had to pay for the whiskey. The man for whom an equal number of votes were cast in the first election hauled sloop from some of the homes and hotels of the county seat to feed hogs. There are some men of genuine worth in our state legislatures, but in the average state legislature there are many counties represented by men who do not have the ability to hold a responsible position in their own communities. You are called upon, young men and young women, to do well your part in correcting this condition.

The second illustration is this: for a half century the great majority of the citizens of New York City have known that Tammany Hall is a corrupt organization whose members have been out for "public plunder" and knowing this the citizens of New York City have permitted Tammany Hall to rule the city for most of the time during the last half century. Do the citizens want crooked government, or are they too indifferent to work for wholesome government? And the distressing thing about it is that this condition is more, or less true in multitudes of towns and cities. The ideal presented to you demands that you do your part in correcting these conditions, and in correcting them as speedily as possible.

FOR THE MOVIE FAN

Friscilla Dean in Frances Hodgson Burnett's great novel, "The Flame of Life."

When the spark of life is fanned into "the flame of life" how often in the life of any girl comes that blazing moment when she heeds the call of love that is more powerful than herself!

Such a moment came to Joan Lowrie only after the most terrific hour of her career—when, because she was seeking the man who taught her the only gentle things she knew, she stumbled into a pit of flame and crumbling walls and found—LOVE.

And tonight the honor guests will be Matt Turbell and his lady friend and will see this wonderful picture without cost to them. Be there, Matt, and have the lady with you.

Tomorrow—Wanda Hawley and Jack Holt in "Nobody's Money".

Wednesday—An all-star special cast in "Ashamed of Parents".

"FLAME OF LIFE" AT PRINCESS TONIGHT IS GREAT

In 1870 the class lines were a wall of steel between coal miners in North England and the gentry. So strict were they that passage from one class to another was virtually impossible. Joan Lowrie was only one of a thousand women who did not look nor act like women, but served as human beasts of burden in the mines, toiling pitiously by day, eating, sleep, and cursing fate by night.

"Why, you talk nonsense," laughed a rich baron, when his over-man wanted to inaugurate better conditions for the workers, "these people are little better than beasts!"

The new young over-man in one of the mines believed in human nature, even though sunk in this low scale. He looked for the best in everyone. Always was he eager to extend a helping hand to his fellowmen.

"You are a noble, unselfish character," he said to Joan Lowrie, one of the women who drudged in the slate pit.

That was the beginning of the upward climb for her.

Humbly, timidly, not for a moment with even a faint hope of his love for her reward, she struggled in silence. She would learn to read, to write, she would become a "lady."

This wonderful character of Joan Lowrie's in one of Frances Hodgson Burnett's most popular books has been adapted for the screen under the title of "The Flame of Life." It is a Hobart Henley Universal-Jewel production starring vital and dynamic Priscilla Dean, and will be seen at the Princess Theatre tonight.

An excellent cast was gathered together to support Miss Dean and includes in the principal roles, Robert Ellis, Wallace Berry, Kathryn McGuire and Bessie Burbanck. Mr. Ellis gives a remarkably strong performance in a very difficult part and seldom has appeared in better advantage in any screen success.

Manager Herndon of the Princess Theatre booked "The Flame of Life" as soon as reports of its glowing success were received from metropolitan circles. He is confident that it will prove a delightful evening's entertainment.

A PERFECT PERFORMANCE.

While enjoying a very fine attraction in one of our metropolitan cities I noticed that no one had been seated during the performance. This however did not make the most impression. The most striking thing that was noticeable was the perfect order that was maintained. It was a performance full of fun and comedy with pathos to an extent that it gave to the audience that which they should have at any show to make the lasting impression and one that is favorable. After the first act and the curtain lowered I with the rest of those who so desired retired to the foyer and enjoyed a cigarette. While standing and talking with some gentlemen a bell rang. The usher quietly announced "Seventy-five seconds before curtain rises, no one seated during the act." Quietly each one at once returned and took their seat in a few moments the curtain rose and the act went on and every one heard. Compare this with a dozen or more coming in after the curtain has risen, the act going on and for the first minute no one anywhere near those who are being seated hears a word nor does the one being seated. Such will be the policy of the Milano Theatre. An alarm will be sounded before the curtain rises which will give ample time for all to be seated before the act goes on. No one will be disturbed. In the rear will be seats provided for those who are forced to be late and will occupy these until the curtain falls. The above policy will prevail as to all road attractions. Pictures shown in the Milano will be shown under the most favorable conditions. The usual pandemonium that so often prevails in some theaters that are not well regulated will not be permitted. Your comfort will be looked after in every way, nothing that will annoy you will be permitted to continue.

The Milano will be operated to the entire satisfaction of its patrons. Your presence will be appreciated by the management and your comfort safe-guarded. Everything, with comfortable seats, pleasant air and good attractions. All ready some of the most highest class attractions have been booked. In ample time the management will give to the public a complete list of fall and winter shows to be played in the Milano. You will then be able to arrange your engagements to meet the requirements. Another very important regulation that will be carried out: The Milano will never sell standing room. There will never be sold from the box office more seats than we have in the theater. No jammed aisles, but open clear exits if they need be used. In a short time we will welcome visitors and some one will be more than pleased to show you over the house. We will announce this later. Everything the best that we can have and for your comfort when we open the Milano Theatre.
