Dogs sniff lead for missing girl

By SUSAN LODEN

Herald staff writer

LAKE MARY — Tracking dogs from Texas and Georgia that combed woods in Lake Mary late last week for the remains of a 14-year-old Lake Mary girl missing three years, have given police some strong leads to follow.

Police Chief Charles Lauderdale said this morning that in one area off Lake Mary Boulevard, the "super dogs," which can detect the persistent scent of even buried human remains, "almost clawed the trees up."

That site was one of the first that was preliminarily probed by Seminole County sheriff's crime scene technicians last Thursday after the Labrador retrievers "hit" two spots in the same

SANFORD — Nearly nine months after Seminole. County's controversial drug lottering ordinance first took effect, it may be on the same path of defeat that two similar Sanford and Melbourne ordinances have already taken.

In April, the Seminole County State Attorney's Office refused to prosecute a cocaine possession case where a defendant with a known drug conviction record ran from Oviedo police in October when they asked to speak with him in an area with a history of drug-related arrests.

After the man was arrested under the county ordinance, police found cocaine in his pocket and he was charged with violating the ordinance and possession of cocaine. In November, prosecutors filed criminal charges against the man.

Hubble snaps historic picture

By ROB STEIN UPI Science Editor

GREENBELT, Md. - The Hubble Space Telescope opened its electronic eyes on the universe Sunday and snapped a historic "first light" photo of an ancient star cluster, the first image in a 15-year quest to answer age-old questions about the universe.

ORLANDO - Officials representing three nations will work this summer to lay the groundwork for a cosmic code of conduct to keep the final frontier from degenerating into a lawlessness like the Old West.

Representatives of NASA, Japan and the European Space Agency will meet in racial clash killed in Hernando

United Press International

BROOKSVILLE - Calm was reported Sunday in Hernando County, but tighter security was planned for area schools after a racial clash that resulted in the beating death of a 19-year-old man Saturday.

Russell Coats, who was white, was beaten to death with clubs, boards and tire irons in a fight between about 20 black youths and about 20 white youths, police said. Four adults and two juveniles, all black, face first-degree murder charges. A seventh suspect was still at large Sunday.

"We haven't gotten any indication of any extra racial tensions right now. We haven't gotten any rumblings of any retalliation on either side at this point in time." said Brooksville Police Chief Fred Tincher, but school officials were meeting to discuss tighter security when classes resumed Monday.

"There is so much tension in the community right now," said school superintendent Dan McIntyre. "I think everybody needs to be very careful what they say and

"Black parents don't want this kind of disturbance in their neighborhoods," said Richard Howell of the local NAACP. "The kids involved in the fighting on both sides should be tracked down and something should come of it on both sides."

"I've never been a prejudiced guy. As a matter of fact. I've been an advocate of the black man's cause," said Gene Coats, father of the slain man. "I feel I've been badly mistreated here.

Participants in the melee had attended Hernando High School together and were social aquaintances, according to some of those who were involved. The trouble began at about 12:30 a.m. Saturday in a mall parking lot where area yongsters often gathered.

Tincher said the problems stemmed from n ordinaent youth identified as John W. Smith, 18. made a remark to one of the men, a friend of his, which the other mistakenly believed was directed at him. He fought with Smith. who left the area vowing revenge.

Police arrived and chased the youths away, but they gathered again at another parking lot nearby. Shortly afterward, Smith returned with about 20 friends armed with bludgeons and a gun. Shots are fired and the group of about 29 whites scattered.

A witness looked out her kitchen window and saw seven blacks beating Coats about the head. The witness, Jackie Shelf, sald one of the assailants repeated, "Don't ever

"He was trying to act as a calming force." the police chief said.

The suspects were identified as Bobby Owens, 19, Sammy Lee, 21, Jonathan Mathis, 18, and Smith, all of Brooksville. Two others, aged 15 and 16, were in the custody of the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services. Their names were withheld because they are tuveniles.

Monkeys' lease up on islands

United Press International

KEY LOIS - A research company has asked for a 30-year lease extension allowing it to keep a colony of 2,000 rhesus monkeys on two Islands In the Florida Keys despite complaints that the animals are destroying mangrove trees.

Gov. Bob Martinez and the Florida Cabinet were expected to decide Tuesday on the request from Charles River Laboratories, a commercial research firm owned by Bausch & Lomb. Department of Natural Resources staff said the monkeys are destroying the mangroves by stripping the bark off the environmentally important trees and are overpopulating the islands. But the agency recommended that the breeding operations be continued for 30 more years. The extension would settle a lawsuit over ownership of the wetlands under the monkeys' mangroves. DNR planner Grant Gelhardt sald. The rhesus monkeys were brought in 1972 from India to Key Lois, a 100-acre Island that is nine-tenths submerged in the Atlantic Ocean off Summerland and Cudjoe keys.

Charles River raises the monkeys for medical research such as vaccine testing. It sells the monkeys to labs for about $1,500 each.

In 1976 the colony was expanded to Raccoon Key, an Island twice the size of Key Lois on the bay side of Summerland and Cudjoe keys. Charles River employees bring food and fresh water to the islands, which have no human Inhabitants, said veterinarian Paul Schilling, the company's director of primate breeding. The colony started with 1,200 females and 50 males. Schilling said about 40 percent of the original monkeys are still on the islands as breeders.

The Keys monkeys have the advantage of being raised in the wild without being exposed to other animals or people that could give them diseases, the veterinarian said.

Because the monkeys are so healthy, they have been used to set up special breeding populations for AIDS research, Schilling said.

But some Keys residents, who would face criminal charges if they destroyed mangroves, contend it is unfair to let the monkeys do it.

'We've been screaming about it for 10 years," said Charles Mills of Summerland Key. "The monkeys have destroyed all the mangroves.

Housing industry fights road impact fee increase

By J. MARK BARFIELD Herald staff writer

SANFORD - In what housing officials say may reduce new house sales. Seminole County commissioners will consider doubling many road impact fees Tuesday

"Every time are trapact fee goes up, more people carnot afford to buy a new home," said Cheryl Taubensee, governmental affairs director for the Home Builders Association of MId-Florida.

Faced with increasing land and construction costs, the fees may be increased to allow the county to provide an adequate road system for its growing population. Commissioners will consider the increases tommorrow at 7 p.m. in the County prised of county and city Services Building commission chambers. If approved, the new fees will take effect July 1.

The fees are charged on new construction and are used to miles they determined was build new roads and widen needed during a review in 1987.

charged on homes both in cities and unincorporated areas. The fee is not assessed on existing and resold homes.

A new home in the Sanford-Lake Mary area currently has a $445 county road impact fee assessed when the construction is complete. The proposed increase will be to $850.22, a 91-percent Increase. A new house in the southwest section of the county currently has a $529 road impact fee assessment. Commissioners will consider increasing the amount to $1,273, a 140 percent increase.

The impact fees vary in different sections of the county based on road needs and population growth in each area.

A county committee comengineers and planners found more than 70 miles of road improvements will be needed for the county instead of the 53 existing ones. The fees are a 32-percent increase.

Sanford considers Seminole Mall rezoning

By J. BRADLEY DILLING Herald staff writer

SANFORD - The $100 million Seminole Mall will approach another hurdle tonight as the city commission considers the request to rezone a 30-acre parcel of land to planned development zoning.

The property is located on the east side of Interstate-4 between State Road 46 and County Road 46-A.

The request to rezone is needed because the area that developers will use is listed under four different zoning uses, including agriculture, general commercial, restricted Industrial and medium industrial.

This will be the commission's first reading of the item, but it's just a routine step in the long process of the development of the mall over the next few years. City Planner Jay Marder said. "It's not a milestone step and it will probably pass. This is only the first reading." Marder said. The commisson tonight will also consider a request for immediate condemnation of an abandoned apartment house that has served as a "flop house" for crack cocaine users. Sanford Police Chief Steve Harriett said. The condemnation would allow the house to be demolished immediately.

Harriett said the building had been condemned by the Sanford Fire Department about two weeks ago, and that there had been a couple of arrests for trespassing and that evidence of crack use had been found in

In this . case, it is a six-parcel area on the south side of Pine Avenue the city wants to change from C-3 zoning, or general commercial. to R.P. or residential professional. The reason given in the initial presentation by City Administrator Mike Abels was 'to create a buffer zone between the commercial aspects of the (State Road) 434 area and the downtown historic area." Pine Avenue runs parallel to State Road 434.

In a presentation to be submitted to commissioners tonight, Abels wrote, "Initially it seemed reasonable and logical to hold off on a decision concerning this administrative rezoning in Ordinance No. 978. However, after in-depth research and consulting with an Assistant County Attorney, Melbourne City Attorney Paul Gougleman. and District Court of Appeal attorneys in Tallahassee, it appears that denying the rezoning existance when Seminole to R-P, when it has been so approved by the comprehensive plan, the City has no choice but to rezone the subject properties to R-P." The investigating agencies include the FBI, the Internal Revenue Service, the Florida Department of Law Enforcement and the Judicial Qualifications Commission, the newspaper quoted unidentiffed sources as saying.

Miami attorney Burton Young acknowledged that Gale had retained him "for a specific case." but would not comment otherwise.

Attorney Richard Gerstein, a former state attorney now in private practice, also said Gale had contacted him for possible legal assistance, but said he did not know of any probes and could not comment if he did.

German's future

The Soviet Union's continuing anxiety over reunification of Germany manifested itself again in the Kremlin's recent proposal that a united Germany belong to both NATO and the Warsaw Pact.

The Bush administration was right to reject this odd suggestion out of hand. Apart from the obvious practical difficulties of one country belonging to two opposing military alliances, the effect would be to make the new Germany neutral.

Despite the Soviet Union's justifiable concern about the balance of power being tipped in Europe, it is crucial that a united Germany stay in NATO rather than become neutral and be compelled to rearm and protect itself. Germany's presence in NATO is the best guarantee for long-term peace and stability in Europe and for continued progress in East-West arms control.

In the meantime, the problem is to find a formula to maintain a stable Europe that does not depend upon two antagonistic alliances with Germany split between them.

Clearly, the suspicions and edginess of Europe's Cold War era would disappear more quickly in an atmosphere of openness and cooperation. Germans on both sides of the Elbe could play a pivotal role by fostering confidence and a feeling of security among their neighbors and former adversaries.

East Germany's new non-communist government h s made a good start in this direction. One of its first official actions has been to bear joint responsibility for the Nazi slaughter of 6 million Jews. This was in stunning contrast with East German governments of the past 40 years which have maintained that the country had no responsibility for the atrocities because it rose as an anti-fascist state from the ashes of Nazism. "We feel sad and ashamed," said the new parliament in a joint statement. "We ask the Jews of the world to lorgive us. In further acts of contrition and catharsis, Prime Minister Lothar de Malziere recognized the legitimacy of Poland's postwar borders and apologized for the part East Germans played in helping Moscow to crush the reform movement in Czechoslovakia in 1968. West Germany, too, correctly seeks to allay Polish fears about the possibiltiy of new territorial claims. Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher spelled it out unequivocally in his recent speech to American newspaper editors: "We realize that the finality of Poland's western border on the Oder and Neisse Rivers is a fundamental condition for peace in Europe. Genscher also gave the assurance that Germany's joy at being reunited would neither extinguish nor conceal its memories of the suffering brought upon the Jewish people and others by Hitler. Significantly, he also declared that both Germanys could make a major contribution to European peace by renouncing for all time the use of force in the pursuit of political aims and by reaffirming jointly their decision not to manufacture or possess nuclear, chemical or biological weapons.

In May, the foreign ministers of the two Germanys and of the four wartime Allies -The United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France - will hold discussions on Germany's future status in Europe. The Bush administration has backed Genscher's plan for a united Germany within NATO, with the proviso that Western troops be barred from entering what is now East Germany.

Peddling neo-manifest destinarianism

The argument now concerns The American Purpose. If it can be defined, perhaps we can do something about it.

It can. We can. What? Consider neo-manifest destinarianism.

Until recently, our national purpose was imposed: Keep the free world free. As communism collapsed, options expanded. Theories

The Declinists said America would no longer be "Number One" because we were "overstretched" militarily. Their remedy: Cut the defense budget, manage our decline gracefully. We will cut defense. The Declinists still want us to decline ourselves. They don't like being Number One.

Pat Buchanan bangs the lead tambourine for The Isolationists, a conservative rap group. His recent contribution, in The National Interest magazine, is "America First - and Second, and Third." Buchanan says our foreign policy should only be in our national interest. How original. To Buchanan that means we should "come home" and stop peddling that silly democracy stuff. But doesn't the spread of democracy enhance our national interest? His title is two-thirds accurate. The Buchanistas would make it more likely that America would be second or third.

Charles Krauthammer and Joseph Nye, coming from different directions, make more sense. Both know that America will remain Number One. Both believe ideology e will play a lesser role. Both know we must remain a big time

All right. But no one is going for the gold. And so we come to neo-manifest destinarianism.

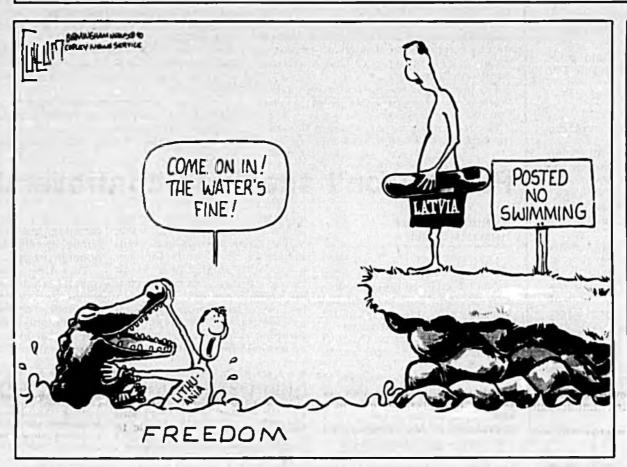

We ought to wage democracy - remembering that the mansion of democracy has many rooms. Democracy American-style, a way of life as well as a political system, is not the same as, say, the pinched stultification of Swedish-style democracy. And in Eastern Europe today, it's said the newly free countries should go Swedish.

American taxpayers didn't spend trillions to create more Swedens. Not long ago we were troubled by the Swedish - read European model. It was seen as stagnant, decadent and even "creeping socialism." Since then, they, and we, have gotten better.

If the world evolves toward European-style social democracy, or some democratic hybrid, or some unipolar transnationalism, so be it. We and our allies will have won a free world. But that result is only acceptable. As the last superpower, we ought to try to shape evolution.

Americans have always felt they had something special to offer. We know now we can't clone the world American-style.

But American democracy has distinctive features. Most Americans believe most of them are beneficial. Individualism, pluralism, opportunity, dynamism, and the absence of a rigid class structure come to mind.

Diceman: bigot in comics mask

BOSTON - And now the Diceman cometh Into the mainstream. Andrew Dice Clay is moving in from the studded-leather fringe where his brutality is hip and his bigotry is daring. The man who has turned comedy into a hate crime is being handed a passport to the center ring. It didn't take long did it?

Little more than a year ago, the Diceman was a figure in the club underworld, practicing his AK-47 verbal assault on women, immigrants, Asians, gays, in an equal-opportunity attack act. In 1989, he surfaced in front of huge concert audiences of, as someone said, men who hate women and their girlfriends. Then he put together a video that bore the pseudo-warning. "This album is offensive." replete with his trademark screeds.

Now the Brooklyn boy is breaking out or breaking in. Last weekend "Saturday Night Live" presented a tamer Diceman. This week. Vanity Fair offers up a "warm and likable" Andrew. Next month Twentieth Century Fox will release "The Adventures of Ford Fairlane" with the comedian playing a "rock 'n roll detective."

Either the Diceman is trying to become a nice man or we are lifting up the lid under which anything that crawls, dank and ugly in American underlife, is to be allowed an airing.

How to describe Clay's act in a newspaper? Only the tamest tidbits are permissible from an act built on obscenity and hostility. The most benign routine begins like this, "So I'm out with this pig...." Watching him on "Saturday Night Live" was like watching Louis Farrakhan appear on network television. You get the cleaned-up version, the merely dreadful Diceman, just enough to make you wonder what the fuss is all about.

But seeing his video is like sliding down a chute of night soil. You finish it in need of a shower and an explanation of why so many take this ride again and again. Why there are so many other rides in this grotesque theme park of hatred in the entertainment of the

What is happening when Andrew Dice Clay sells a relentless string of ethnic, racial and sexual attacks as humor? What is happening when the heavy-metal group Guns 'N Roses sells its hatred of blacks; when Sam Kinison makes it with calls to kill frantan kids; when Public Enemy parades its anti-Semitism?

In some perversion of the old '60s motto, these '90s entertainers have indeed learned to let it all hang out. Their fans praise them for the "frankness" of their racial slurs, the "honesty" of their sexual hatred, for telling it like it is. Like "it is" in the graffiti on campus or ractal battles of Bensonhurst or sexual violence.

Humor always pushes at the edges, but now it's as if the cutting edge has moved 180 ered avant-garde in degrees. It is America to be reactionary. Pop anti-culture is now rife with a backlash against tolerance, a reverse discrimination in favor of discrimination, shattering the taboo against hatred.

And yet, for the most part, those who believe in tolerance have been quiet. They have been silenced by ambivalence about their own values. How, they ask, can the opponents of blacklists become censors? How can the free-speech people oppose letting it all hang out? Those who defended Lenny Bruce when he told the judge, "Let me do my own act," can feel as trapped by their principles as an ACLU lawyer defending the Ku Klux

Well. I don't share that silence. It seems to me that there is a difference between making fun of others and making war on them, a difference between humor and hate. There is also a lot of room between a ban and a seal of approval.

Nora Dunn took a stand when she refused to act in the "Saturday Night Live" show with Clay. Anyone can choose to collaborate or not with intolerance in a dozen public and private. ways. Unchallenged and unchecked, hostility can grow like kudzu, overwhelming everything else that grows.

Iran's gestures are whitewash

WASHINGTON - Iran used its magnanimous release of an American hostage to draw attention from another heinous act — the assassination of one of the top opponents of the Iranian government living in exile in Switzerland.

The incident proves once again that no movement is made on the hostages without bloody strings attached

This time, Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani won praise in Washington and elsewhere for his "moderating" influence in securing the release of Robert Polhill. At the same time. Rafsanjani's agents were gunning down a well-regarded diplomatin Switzerland.

Polhill was released April 22 after 39 months in captivity. In a written statement, President Bush thanked Iran and Syria for contributing to the release.

Two days later. Rafsanjani's top human rights critic in Europe, Iranian exile Kazem Rajavi, was in his car near his home in Coppet on Lake Geneva when another car blocked him on the road. Two assassins fatally shot him at close range, one with a submachine gun.

The brazen assassination barely received notice in Europe and America. It was crowded out of the headlines by the release of Polhill and promises of freedom for a second hostage. And that was exactly the way the Rafsanjani regime wanted it, according to our intelligence sources.

Not coincidentally, Rajavi was the brother of Massoud Rajavi, the leader of the People's Mojahedin, the chief opposition group to the regimes of the Ayatollah Khomeini and Rafsanjani.

Kazem Rajavi was an opposition leader in his own right. The 56-year-old professor had been an opponent of the Shah of Iran and lived in France and Switzerland while the shah was in power. When Khomeini overthrew the shah in 1979, Rajavi was welcomed home and became Iran's first ambassador to the European headquarters of the United Nations in Geneva.

Less than a year later he resigned in disgust over Khomeini's human rights abuses. He stayed in exile in Switzerland where he became the chief advocate of Khomeini's victims. He tirelessly fought for the rights of the imprisoned and tortured in Iran and spoke about their cause internationally, including a speech in Washington in Rajavi had plenty to talk about. Khomeini brutally retaliated with torture and murder against anyone who opposed him or who did not adhere strictly to his brand of Moslem fundamentalism. Rafsanjani has carried on the tradition.

In 1985, after the United Nations issued one particularly weak-willed report about the state of human rights in Iran, Rajavi said, "We're writing the history of human rights with our blood, and we feel deceived by this

He was again "deceived" this year when another U.N. human rights observer went to Iran and came back with milquetoast conclusions. This time the United Nations was suckered by a rare invitation from Iran for an on-site visit before writing the report. The observer missed blatant abuses.

Evidently, Rajavi had criticized Iran one too many times. Nine eyewitnesses, all members of the Iranian opposition, say they heard the Iranian ambassador to the United Nations. Stroos Nasseri, tell Rajavi to his face that Iran would send an assassination squad to "liquidate" Rajavi.

No movement is made on the hostages without bloody strings attached.

Five people found dead in apartment

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. - Authorities said autopsies would be performed today on two adults and three children found dead in an aging apartment building where carbon monoxide fumes had sickened tenants a day earlier.

Police Capt. Joseph North said the bodies were discovered about 9:45 p.m. Sunday at the Cordova Apartments, located in a run-down section of the gambling resort town and just down the block from some casinos. The cause of the deaths was not known, and autopsies were scheduled to be performed Monday, police officials said.

FAIR blasts 'MacNeill-Lehrer,' 'Nightline'

NEW YORK (UPI) - A news watchdog group Sunday criticized PBS's "The MacNell-Lehrer Newshour" and ABC's "Nightline" saying the programs' guest lists and experts were dominated by the white, male establishment.

The report said: "Both 'MacNell-Lehrer' and 'Nightline' fall far short of being politically or socially inclusive. Their limited political scope generally excludes critics in favor of voices of the powerful. Conservative advocates regularly appear as 'experts,' while progressives are identified as partisans. And foreign policy debates are almost the exclusive property of policy makers."

The report added that "Nightline's" 13 repeat guests included five U.S. officials, four of whom it called conservatives, and four experts, including conservatives Robert Bork and Patrick Buchanan, Buchanan and Bork, it said, often were represented as neutral experts.

The report also said that 90 percent of "MacNeil-Lehrer's" American guests were white and 87 percent were male. On "Nightline." 89 percent of the American guests were white and 82 percent male.

Lester M. Crystal, the executive producer of "MacNeil-Lehrer," said in response to the report that while he agrees with the importance of diversity of opinion, FAIR "is chiefly concerned with having its own bias represented."

But the state decided not to prosecute the case in April seven days after the man's public defender filed a motion stating the discovery of the cocaine should not be considered by the court because the ordina ice was unconstitutional. The case was dropped.
"Certain language in this ordinance permits police to act in areas case law does not permit." said Assistant Public Defender Arthur Haft, who defended the man. "It attemp's to view drug cases as different when considering our right to talk to a friend. I felt pretty confident going to court.

Haft cited a 1967 U.S. Supreme Court decision which states that police may not arrest someone because of a "need to prevent the disappearance or destruction of evidence of a Prosecutors say they weren't avoiding dejense of the ordinance, they believed the man had been arrested improperly. "It is not against the law to run away from a policeman." said Steve Plotnick, chief trial attorney of the Seminole County State Attorney's Office. When Seminole County Sheriff

John Polk first proposed the ordinance a year ago, he said it was needed to help combat street drug sales in such areas as Midway and the North Street area near Altamonte Springs. Sheriff's officials said the ordinance would give them a "tool" to help them to arrest drug dealers.

"It is a tool we can use from time to time," said Lt. Don Eslinger, commander of the City-County Investigative Bureau. "It is not a cure-all, but it gives us something we can use when we need it."

Law enforcement officials said without the ordinance the only way they could arrest someone for possession or sale of drugs under state laws and court decisions was to see the person in possession of the drug or to be sold the drugs during an undercover operation.

The officials said they were frustrated by the limitation because they often watched known drug dealers approach cars and exchange unidentifiable objects with persons in the car. Even though their experience told them they were witnessing a drug sales transaction. police say they were unable to

They needed a tool to allow them to arrest someone they believed to be selling, buying or possessing drugs by their behavior, police said.

Using a similar Melbourne ordinance as a model, the county ordinance was drafted by county attorneys. Plotnick and sheriff's officials. The ordinance made it a county crime to lotter in a place where drug-related arrests had previously occurred. Conviction of the ordinance carried penalties of a $500 fine and 60 days in Jail.

The ordinance also established a variety of criteria for the law enforcement officer to decide cause for a loitering arrest. The criteria included police knowledge of previous drugrelated convictions, display of Intoxication or hypodermic "needle tracks," knowledge of membership in a gang involved in drug sales, transfer of money or objects in a "furtive manner," attempts by the person to hide himself or an object or running

The ordinance was opposed by commissioners Fred Streetman and Sandra Glenn, who said it may violate an innocent person's right to move about freely in public and associate with other people.

"This scares me," Streetman commented last May. " 'Furtive manner, about to engage in,' this is police state wording."

As a compromise, Streetman law enforcement officer to ask suspects for reasons for being in the location. The wording is found in the state lottering law.

Since the ordinance was adopted on Aug. 8, 1989 and took effect on Aug. 16, 1989, the City-County Investigative Bureau has arrested 16 people, including three Juveniles, for violations of the ordinance. In four of the cases, the defendants were either found guilty of paraphernalia or reached a plea agreement with prosecutors.

One case remains to be tried. One person was found not guilty due to the length of time involved between the incident and the arrest.

Prosecutors did not file cases against eight of the defendants. Even though arrest records show CCIB agents saw the eight suspects acting in ways the ordinance describes as suspicious. agents reported finding no drugs or paraphernalia during a search after the arrest. Prosecutors determined no crime had occurred.

Plotnick defends the decision not to pursue cases against where no subsequent ast Tevcaled.

'It's not that uncommon." Plotnick said. "We rarely charge someone with a county ordinance. It is so relatively minor that it is too complicated to try a crime not worth the time and the

But since the county passed its proposed, and the commission ordinance last year, wo similar adopted, wording requiring the city ordinances have been found unconstitutional by local circuit Judges. Last December. Brevard Circuit Judge John Antoon II found the Melbourne ordinance was unconstitutional in its "overbreadth."

On March 30, Sc ninole Circuit Judge Leonard V. Wood ruled the Sanford ordinance, passed prior to the county's, was unconstitutional because it "attempts to abridge (constitutional) liberty protections by possession of drugs or drug attempting to create reasonable suspicion and probable cause where none otherwise exists."

Commerce, over 22 businesses and civic groups in the area have agreed to contribute the money for the students' further education. Twenty seniors have been selected from each of the two schools. The specific amounts of each scholarship and the sponsors will not be revealed until tonight's reception in honor of the students.

Entry forms were sent to guidance counselors at the two schools for distribution, and students forwarded the completed forms to the chamber office. Dave Farr, chamber executive director, said need was one of the primary considerations in the selection process, but entries were also judged on several other levels, with vocational students being given the same consideration as those who excelled academically.

College kid wins one for Bruins

EDMONTON, Alberta — A college kid taught the Boston Bruins something about grabbing a lead.

John Byce, a hero in the SCAA just two months ago, scored a record tying goal 40 seconds into the game Sunday night, firing the Brums back into the Stanley Cup finals with a 2-1 victory over the Edmonton Oilers.

Byce put a rebound past Bill Ranford, giving Boston its first lead in three games. Greg Johnston added a first-period goal, pulling the Bruins within 2-1 in the best-of-seven series and assuring a return to Boston Garden.

In snapping their six-game playoff losing streak to Edmonton, the Bruins proved their stature as the NHL's best road team and top defensive unit. They controlled the play until the third period, when Edmonton fired 14 worst, one of them Esa Tikkanea's goal.

Boston can tie the series in Game 4, which is scheduled for Tuesday night.

I think the number of athletes receiving scholarships is probably a little bit down from last year, commented Athletic Director Dale Phillips. "After last year, we have a comple years to rebuild."

Five players from the 9.2 lootball team received scholarships, including 6.5°, 240 pound noseguard being snatched up by Olio University

Fullback Frank Diaz, who rushed for over 2,700 yards in the past two seasons, will handle the ground duties at Morehead St. in Kentucky while Brian Machiness will air it upnext year for Valdosta St.

Linemen Mike Kobia, Danny Wynn, and John Knutson also received grants, with Kobia going to Lawrence University. Wynn to Lindenwood University in Missouri, and Knutson to Carnegle-Melon in Putsburgh, Pa. Both Kobia and Knutson plan to play two sports while attending college. Both basketball players Brad Bolton and Rob Crager will join Macliness at Valdosta St. Crager, who made the all-county basketball team last season, didn't plan on attending Valdosta St., but when Bolton went up to the university for a workout, he went with Bolton. The coaches liked them so much they signed both of them.

County boys of summer return to baseball action

By TOM LANHAM Herald correspondent

Seminole Count, high school baseball players are about to begin their second season Summer is here and it's time to play even more baseball.

Most players will play with their school teams in the National Amateur Baseball Federation. The NABF, as the name implies, is a nationwide organization of baseball teams arranged by local districts and featuring season-end tournaments. To be eligible to play in the league, players must have high school eligibility remaining. All told, teams in the federation will have the opportunity to play some 30 games during the season.

Teams from Seminole County scheduled to participate in the NABF are from Oviedo, Lake Howell, Lyman, and Lake Mary. Two other teams will round out the district, including an entry from Winter Park.

Another league for local prep players is the Buddy Lake League. Seminole High and Lake Brantley will field teams for the loop playing at the Sanlord Stadium.

Lake Mary appears to be among the strongest of the teams as summer play begins. The Rams have 10 players returning from the high school season, including pitchers Scott Davidson, Chris Jackson, and David Hudick.

Oviedo, despite losing 12 seniors to graduation, will also carry a miniber of experienced and talented players into the summer league. Among the Line standouts should be 332 bioles pitcher in the high sc., ool season, Ryan Alkire, another .333 hitter, and Darey Garrett, who pitched three shutouts while leading the junior vars ty team in batting.

Hoping to be the most improved team in the SAC next season will be the Seminole County team. Coach Mike Powers' team is still undergoing the rebuilding process he began two years ago and is beginning to gain confic ace as their game experience increas.

The Lake drantley Patriots will lose a number of key players from this year's state championship club, but still figure to be loaded with talent. Ace pitcher Brad Righy will again be on the mound, and infielder Tom Penny, errorless in the state tournament, will provide leadership and the winning spirit for the team.

The Lyman Greyhounds, losing only six players to graduation, hope the lessons learned by their relatively young team during the past season will pay dividends in the future. Hard-throwing young pitchers like Frank Harmer and Jason Goodpaster look to develop their skills even further this summer.

Lake Howell's Silver Hawks will feature a number of experienced juniors this summer. Eight players will be lost to graduation, but another eight will be rising semiors led by shortstop Malcom Cepeda and catcher Bobby Coleman.

HAINES CITY - Just like deja vu all over again.

Following on the heels of the 4A championship by Lake Brantley, Patriots Jason Varitek and Greg Thomas returned to Royals Stadium to lead their East leam to victory over teams from around the state in the Florida Athletic Coaches Association All-Star Baschall Classic this past weekend.

Varitek, in addition to recording four hits in nine at-bats for the tournament, impressed the many professional scouts on hand with his catching and switch-hitting abilities. Teamed with outstanding catching prospect Jerry Thurston during the regular season, Varitek often found himself playing third base. to the dismay of the scouts.

Lake Mary coach Alan Tuttle guided the East squad although, in his words, he simply "let 'em play."

"It was a great honor to coach a team of players of that calibre," he said. "I really did not have to do that much coaching."

Tuttle attributed the success of the East squad to better overall pitching than the other teams and to better teamwork.

"We didn't necessarily have the best talent," he explained. "But our guys did play better together. Our guys seemed to get along well with each other from the start; some of the other teams had some ego clashes among the players."

In the championship game played Saturday, the East squad defeated the North 12-3, as both Varitek and Thomas were two for five at the plate.

Insect invasion can bug homeowner

Lawns are having problems lately with the drought, and stressed lawns issue an invitation for insects to invade. Here are some tips to prepare you for a possible insect infestation this summer in your lawn.

There isn't a perfect type of grass in Florida, one that is without problems. Most of us have either a bahla or St. Augustine grass, and both have a major pest attacking it.

The big insect problem atcricket. Adult mole crickets are light brown and are about 11/2 inches long. Their front legs are short and stout and well adapted to tunneling through the soil.

grass in several ways. They surface. This tunneling action loosens the soil and exposes the thins the turf and eventually exposes bare areas of the soil. Mole crickets also feed on grass roots causing a thinning of the turf and eventually a total decline of the grass.

To control mole crickets, it is important to understand their life cycle. In Central Florida, adult mole crickets begin laying eggs in late March and continue through May and June. The eggs take about 20 days to hatch. The young mole crickets begin feeding and tunneling. Most mole cricket feeding occurs at night. after rain or irrigation and during warm weather.

If you are unsure whether or not you have a mole cricket problem, try to flush them out using one or two tablespoons of liquid dish soap per 2 gallons of water and pour this in a four square foot area just next to a suspected mole cricket site. In a few minutes, the mole crickets frequently noticed along the will come up to the surface and edges of sidewalks or waterthen you will know for sure that you have a mole cricket pro-time to control mole crickets because the young nymphs are tacking bahia grass is the mole more susceptible to pesticides than the adults. The recommended pesticides at this time of year are mole cricket bait. Dursban, Diazinon and Oftanol. Be certain to follow the label Mole crickets damage turf- directions on the insecticide that you choose. Remember that the tunnel through the soil near the mole cricket is active at night, so pesticides should be applied at nightfall or in the early morning. roots which then dry out. This Control later in the season is more difficult because the adults are less susceptible to insecticides.

The chinch bug is the major pest of St. Augustine grass. Adults are very tiny (about 34 inch long), black, and have a white "X" across their backs. The young nymphs are very tiny, reddish in color and with a white band across their backs. Adults lay eggs most of the year. but chinch bugs are worse in the warm weather. Eggs are laid in the leaf sheaths. In summer, the eggs hatch in about 11/2 weeks and develop into adults in four to five weeks.

Chinch bugs seriously damage St. Augustine grass by inserting their needle-like mouthparts into the grass blade and sucking out the juice. This results in grass that turns yellow, then drybrown in irregular patches in the lawn. The injured areas are stressed areas in full sun.

irrigation. If water is not the problem, try this at-home test for chinch bugs. Cut both ends off a 1 or 2 pound coffee can and insert it vertically into the grass In an area just next to a dry patch. In thick grassy areas, you may need to use a knife to cut the runners so the can can be Inserted an inch or two into the soil. Fill the can with water, If chinch bugs are present, they will float to the surface in a few minutes. If none appear, try another place. Chinch bugs are easier to control than mole crickets. Use either a Dursban or Diazinon insecticide. A liquid applied in a hose end sprayer is the better method of application since the chinch bugs are attacking the grass blades. You may need to retreat in five or six weeks. With the concern over protecting the environment, I suggest that you try the simple at-home tests for either mole crickets or chinch bugs rather that spraying on a preventative basis. I would rather that you spot treat an area instead of blasting your lawn with a lot of pesticides. If you are still unsure what your lawn problem is, then bring a square foot of sod between the healthy and declining area in to our Monday morning plant clinic at the Agriculture Center.

On Friday, June 1, there will be a short lunch time seminar on summer lawn care at the Agriculture Center from 12:10 until 12:55. I will be covering the basics of lawn maintenance including watering, fertilizing and insect control. This program is free and open to the public. Please bring a brown bag lunch If this program is during your tive Extension Service Programs lunch hour.

Use of brand names of pesticides in the article is for educational purposes only and If you see an area of your lawn not meant as endorsement of tem.

More dispute over Shakespeare's words

DEAR ABBY: Fools rush in: n second-guessing Shakespeare, you should not be so quick to give credence to a high school student's English teacher. Most serious Shakespeare scholars now agree that, in Hamlet. 'nunnery" means a convent or cloister.

It was not until 1936 that Dover Wilson, in his "What Happens in Hamlet," first suggested that it meant a brothel, along with other silly notions. most of them Freudian. Such interpretation became fashionable for a while (Laurence Olivier gave it acceptability) but it has largely faded

Although there was some use of the word "nunnery" in Elizabethan England as a brothel, such use was not extant. Moreover, no one can rationally read this scene without concluding that Hamlet. in urging Ophelia thither, is crudely suggesting that only in such a place can she hope to escape the evil machinations of man and the vile institution of marriage, which has so de-spoiled his mother. He can hardly have meant brothel to this end. Isaac Asimov, in adopting the conventional meaning. offers another suggestion: "But is it Ophelia he plans to send to a nunnery, or is it his mother, Queen Gertrude?" (Remember that Edward the Confessor sent his mother, Emma, to a nunnery once he had gained the throne.)

Be assured that, for every opinion of Shakespeare, there is given to the bawdy does not way to give his every word that twist.

WILL BAKER, YAKIMA, WASH.

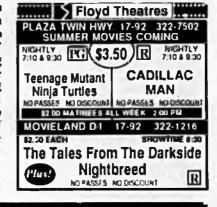

DEAR MR. BAKER: Whatever did we do before the facts were faxed in a matter of minutes?

According to Warren Seid of the Frances Howard Goldwyn Hollywood Regional Library in Los Angeles: "There were two meanings of the word 'nunnery' in Shakespeare's time. Noting his use of puns, and the nature of the character who is being addressed, it becomes clear that Hamlet is telling Ophelia to go to a nunnery where personalities of note can get 'favors' from the inhabitants. It is there that he can go to breed sinners.

A page from the Oxford

another to the opposite, and English Dictionary (2nd Edition. hundreds in between. And just Volume X) shows under the because this genius was much word "nunnery": 1) A place of residence for a body or commumean we should go out of our nity of nuns, a building in which nuns live under religious rule and discipline; a convent. 2) A house of ill fame.

> Aha! So, there is, indeed, a question about what Hamlet meant in his speech to Ophelia. I

DEAR READER: [rritable bowei syndrome, also known as spastle colon, is a frequent occurrence in otherwise healthy adults that typically affects women more often than men. It is marked by abdominal discomfort, bloating, gas, headache, fatigue and constipation. alternating with diarrhea.

The syndrome is often associated with tension and stress. The cause is unknown. although some authorities believe the condition is the result of inappropriate bursts of nerve impulses to muscle cells in the colonic lining.

Recently, some studies have suggested that irritable bowel syndrome may be related to an imbalance of neurotransmitters. that initiate or modify nerve 24 Tea activity.

The syndrome is divided into of relief two primary types. In the first, 33 Period of 3 patients experience recurring painless diarrhea after eating or upon arising. This can be quite troublesome, as the diarrhea is associated with an overwhelming sensation of urgency. Prescription drugs, such as belladonna/phenobarbital combinations, reduce spasm and aid symptoms.

The second form of irritable bowel syndrome is more severe.
