BUDGET OF OPINION "JUST BETWEEN YOU AND ME."

EVEN THE GATE POST NOT IN IT

A CHIEF IS AMONG YE TAKING NOTES AND FAITH. "HE'LL PRENT 'EM"—SO SAYS SAUNTERER.

My old friend, Stonewall Jacksonville Triplett of the St. Cloud Tribune is evidently the owner of a car and is averse to paying twenty cents per gallon for gasoline to run his benzine buggy. He breaks forth into song as follows:

Every once in a while an account of John D. Rockefeller giving money to charity or doing something really human appears in the daily press, and in a few days following that announcement another announcement appears stating that the price of gasoline has increased from one to four cents a gallon.

One of those instances of his seeming benefactions occurred about six weeks ago, when he granted an eight hour day to his employees, they previously having worked nine hours a day. When that announcement appeared he was heralded as a great benefactor, one who loved his fellow man. But past experiences have taught us to be doubtful about John's big heartedness, and sure enough, in a few days we were told that gasoline had gone up a cent a gallon. In a few days more it jumped another cent, and continued to jump until today we in St. Cloud are paying twenty-two cents a gallon.

I don't blame John so much for wanting to corner all the money on earth, as it appears to be fashionable these days to oppress your neighbor as hard as you can, but we do blame those shining lights we pay $7,500 and perquisites a year to look after our interests at Washington. To say that congress has no right to regulate the price at which gasoline can be sold is all tommyrot—it has, and every man who is not a corporation paid hireling will admit it. If the coal barons raised the price of coal to twelve dollars a ton we know there would be a hundred congressmen clamoring for recognition to introduce a resolution of inquiry the first day of the coming session, but we venture the assertion that not a whimper will be heard about John and gasoline.

The papers are filled with what Mr. Wilson said to Mrs. Galt and what Mrs. Galt said to Mrs. Wilson, all about trousers and wedding rings, but not a word has passed that distinguished gentleman's lips about the enormous price John is charging for the fluid. If he is the man of the people he claims to be, why doesn't he close that White House matrimonial bureau long enough to look under the cover and see what is going on among the people who made it possible for him to be at the head of this government?

And this same gentlemen might be asked some of the gentlemen who now seek these $7,500 per annum jobs at our hands. In a few months they will begin telling you how they became pigeon toed following a mule down a corn row, how they rode a cow pony over the wilds of our prairies when the vast silence was broken only by the howl of the wolf and the low of the long horned cow calling its calf, therefore they are eminently fitted to look after our interests under the gilded dome of the big house at Washington. But when they get to that city of magnificent distances, learn to quaff the cup that cheers, and take a few rides in a jitney bus, they forget we are down here adding millions to John's bank account. It matters not to them whether gasoline is two or twenty-two cents a gallon. They are drinking costly and invigorating draughts at our expense and become intoxicated with their own mightiness.

No, we see no hope—we'll just go on paying twenty-two cents or any other amount John sees fit to charge us. He's grabbed the hook, sinker, line, pole and gone under the log, and we've got to stand for it that's all.

There seems to be no stir about the coming city election other than the offices of Clerk and Collector and Assessor and Treasurer, in which the present incumbents, W. M. Lovell and A. A. Preston are to have Harry Wilson and Addison Williams as opponents. J. D. Davison as Mayor has them all backed off the boards and the aldermanic ticket will remain as it is at present with the exception of two new ones to be elected. Tolar and Davison will leave the aldermanic race and two new men will run in their place. I believe that the old aldermen are the men for the place. While I may have a difference of opinion with some of them I believe that as a whole they have given us a good administration. Certainly they have done one thing that should redound to their credit as long as they live and that is starting the bulkhead of the lakefront.

For one I have never been a kicker against the acts of the aldermen taken as a whole. There is no set of aldermen who do not strive to give the people the best there is in them, especially in this city. You often hear rumors of different kinds of manipulations but they percolate through the loyal life of Sanford only because some other town has had trouble. As far as our own aldermen are concerned they have always given the city a square deal and if the former aldermen decide to come out for re-election they will receive the hearty support of the people.

I have never been satisfied with the action of the city council regarding the bill boards. I believe that if other cities can stop this indiscriminate despoliation of the beauty of our city that Sanford can do the same and there should be an ordinance framed that would cover the case. Other cities in Florida are rapping this bill board business and prohibiting the same as the following from the Tallahassee Democrat indicates:

"The city authorities of Tallahassee should take some action in response to the complaints being made almost daily by citizens against the disgraceful moving bill board which is towed over the streets of the Capital City by a mule to the accompaniment of a cow bull, to advertise the picture shows, every day except Sunday.

The eyesore that creeps over the pretty streets of the capital day by day is crude in its design, so slow moving as to impede traffic, frightens horses and distracts the peace of the neighborhood. It is a nuisance.

In other cities these moving billboards have been prohibited. Theaters should no more be permitted to use the streets of a city for bill boards than an electric company to run cars over the pavements without a franchise. One by one the cities and towns of the country are prohibiting advertising vans on the public thoroughfares, while many other cities are going further and ordering razed all of the stationary bill boards. They, too, are eyesores and discourage the sale of the property they occupy. Nothing makes a poorer impression on a stranger than a multitude of rusty old billboards in every direction in the business district of a city. Not satisfied with the use of all the fences and brick walls that could be found, the bill posters of Tallahassee have adorned a mule cart and hung it to a cow bell and run it down the middle of Monroe street in the middle of every day.

The painting of the city's sidewalks would not be permitted in any other city of the United States to the extent that it is allowed here. Occasionally in the larger cities the mayor will grant the sidewalk advertising privilege to some charitable organization that has no other means of advertising, but never to a theatrical corporation.

Let the city authorities act immediately. The public demands that something be done to eliminate the noisy moving billboard and the free sidewalk advertising concession now used by a private business for personal gain.

Mrs Van Buren this mother
Jane Darwell
Osman Howard Davies
Halib Bey Herbert Standing
Barah Laura Woods Cushing
John Marshall Harrington Gibbs
The story ("Paramount Program"):

Bob Van Buren's rescue of the daughter of a wealthy Turkish rug-maker in Constantinople when waylaid by robbers paves the way for a romance between them. The romance progresses rapidly despite the objections of Demetra's father and the venomous Turk he is trying to force upon her. At length Bob persuades Demetra to elope with him to America. Getting wind of it, the malicious Osman hires a band of ruffians to make way with Bob on the eve of his departure.

With her young American mysteriously vanished and the day of her odious wedding to Osman drawing near, Demetra flees to a cousin's in New York on the boat on which Bob has reserved passage.

Osman pursues the little refugee, corners her in New York, and with oriental cunning sets a trap into which Demetra blindly walks. Osman then summons a second Turkish priest and has just forced Demetra to her knees when the door bursts open and Bob rushes in, having escaped the dungeon in Constantinople. He routs Osman and his confederates and takes Demetra to his mother's, where they are happily married.

Blanche Walsh Dead

Pittsburg, Nov. 2.—Blanche Walsh, the well known actress died Saturday in a hospital where she was taken suffering from a malady that caused an operation.

Miss Walsh's refusal to disappoint an audience caused a relapse. After she went under the knife she insisted on keeping an engagement at Youngstown, Ohio, where she relapsed and was brought back here. In private life she was Mrs. William H. Travers.

"The Silent Voice"

Those who viewed the "Silent Voice" when it was presented on the legitimate stage at the Liberty Theatre in New York last season, with Otis Skinner in the principal part, will be interested to learn that it has been produced in motion picture form by the Quality Pictures Corporation for release in the Metro program and will be shown here at the Star Theatre on Tuesday, Nov. 2nd.

Francis X. Bushman and Marguerite Snow, who are probably known to more motion picture lovers than any stellar combination now being shown on the screen, are starred in this important production, and Frank Bacon, one of the best known character actors in the legitimate here makes his debut before motion picture audiences.

Congregational C. E. Notes

Miss Marion Packard, assisted by Miss Helen Randall were the leaders of forty-five Endeavorers Sunday evening. Our honored and honorary member, Dr. Bouchele addressed the meeting with much feeling and beautiful thought. ### Pulled New Stunt

A new stunt, for Sanford at least, was pulled off Wednesday when three young ladies, members of the Presbyterian Christian Endeavor Society clerked in the Three-in-One store of L. L. Taylor. Five per cent of the total sales of the day were given to the C. E. for their building fund. It was great fun for the girls. About 6 p. m. found them rather tired. A goodly sum was added to the treasury.

Naming the Park

There is a box in the Herald office for the voting on a name for the park on Ninth street and French avenue. This park is as yet undeveloped, but there are plans on foot which will result in making it a true beauty spot. Various suggestions for the name include the beautiful and musical Indian names, and the name of flowers and plants which thrive best in Florida soil.

Good Advice. Mr. Merchant

The regular kick on the mail order houses is still in progress, but Bro. Merchant, all the newspapers in the world cannot fight this battle for you. We can pat you on the back and tell you we feel sorry, and throw all the bricks in our yard at that mail order casa, and not do one bit of good. There is but one way to whip him and that is for you to join us in our effort and advertise. Let the people know you have the same thing for sale.—Zolfo Truth.

GENEVA JOTTINGS

Mr. C. F. Harrison with a crew of twelve men have been up to Primmham Hammock this week putting up the fruit there for Chase & Company.

The Baptist people had quite a time Sunday with their regular pastor, Rev. Stones, and with Rev. Burr of Altamonte Springs and Rev. Milton of Chuluota. Rev. Burr gave a very interesting talk on "God's Money Laws." Rev. Burr is an interesting lecturer and his talk was greatly enjoyed by all in attendance. Rev. Stones, after dinner was served on the grounds gave a talk on State Missions as They are Today and Rev. Milton gave one of his high intellectual talks in the evening, touching on life as life is today. Besides these talks the choir gave some well selected hymns.

We are all glad to have Mr. McLain with us again. Mr. McLain had a rather severe case of malarial fever but has entirely recovered after being taken to St. Luke's in Ocala.

Mrs. R. L. Dancy is spending the week end with her mother, Mrs. W. J. David of this place.

W. B. Raulerson is still home from Okechohee.

The young people met at the home of C. F. Harrison last Saturday evening. After their songs, were sung Mrs. Harrison served a delicious tea course. Mrs. Harrison is one of Geneva's most charming hostesses.

Miss R. Proctor was in Okechohee last week attending to business there.

Miss Florence Bellows charmingly entertained a few of the young people at a Halloween party, last Friday evening. Many games appropriate to the occasion were played, some of them being "Bobbing for Apples," "Spents" and "Sweeping for Luck." In a charming booth on one side Mrs. W. L. Song as "The Witch" told your fortune and Mrs. E. Stones charmingly read one of our true ghost stories, "Where's My Mommy?" Everyone was dressed as ghosts till a late hour, when they discarded their costumes for evening dress. Mr. and Mrs. Claude Raulerson with Mr. and Mrs. G. Mattheux chaperoned the crowd. Mr. Raulerson was charmingly gowned in white tulle de champagne, while Mrs. Mattheux wore grey crepe. Among others present were Misses: Clara Harrison, Alice Coffey, Sallie Grant, Georgia Battisball, Beattie Sheldon, Louise Harris, Bessie Proctor, Thusa Tarbell, Corinne Raulerson, Lois Grant, Edna Geiger and Ruth Geiger and Messrs: Otis Mapp, Payne Daniels, Stephen Childs, William Kilbee, Horace and Cyril Haulerson, Marvin Walker, Joe Brown, Leon Cunningham, Robert Hill and Lester Brown. Then to end it all a large Halloween supper was served.

Wonder if any active interest is going to be taken about the grade between here and Sanford. We are still unable to pass in any way and an dreadfully afraid that Sanford will be overstocked with eggs and will have no coffee at all unless we can make the exchange soon. Joe Smith is in Geneva for the winter now.

Mr. John Huddleston has returned to his old position in Washington, D. C.

Miss R. Proctor left the first of the week to fill her position in Marion County Hospital at Ocala. "Bobbie," really you preach good roads, talk good roads and write good roads, why don't you mention the grade between Geneva and Sanford if you wish some of these sweet taters, oranges and grapefruit?

Early Martial Music.

Almost from time immemorial our soldiers have marched to battle to the tune of the drum or the skirling of the pipes, London Tit-Bits says. Perhaps, however, the most interesting of the early records of martial music is that concerning an episode in 1333, the date of the battle of Halidon hill, when "the Englysche mynastrelles beaten their tabors and blew their trompes, and pipers piped loud and made a great schowte upon the Skottes."

Progress of the South
Columbus, Ga., Nov. 5.—The Industrial Index says in its issue for this week:

"With ample proof of indications the southeast enters into November with most substantial prospects of continued increase in the volume of business.

"The prospects for September and then for October proved to be even better than they had been described. There are now the most dependable indications that November will be far better in a business way than was October.

"This month is begun with general business activity. There is no longer stagnation in any great industry. Manufacturing plants are in full operation and new ones are being established. Construction work is in progress in large volume. Bank clearing show big comparative gains.

"Prosperity is at hand. It will not be limited by November, and the end of December will not mark its cessation. It is the belief of successful, observant business men that we are entering upon a period of prosperity such as this country has never known before.

"Among the items of construction work to be done, as reported this week are:

"Apartment house, Atlanta, Ga.; bank buildings, Atlanta, Ga., and Ft. Meade, Fla. factory building, Rome, Ga.; fraternal buildings, Laurel, Miss., and Selma, Ala.; library building, Sumter, S. "An Act of Heroism

By a girl, who is an act of heroism that should be rewarded by a Carnegie Medal.

Editor Sanford Herald:

I desire to bring before your noble act of bravery by a little girl, which isn't surpassed by any I ever heard of. After the heavy rainstorm which passed over Sanford two days ago (Nov. 2nd), the children were playing at the edge of the water of a creek where the bridge had been washed away. There were two on one side and two on the other. After they had played awhile they all wanted to be together, so Sarah Hutchinson and her brother attempted to get to the other side by crossing a log that lay athwart the stream. Sarah crossed safely, but little John, aged 7, fell into the water. Without a moment's hesitation, though she had never been beyond her depth in water before, Sarah took a headlong plunge after him. The water was fully six or seven feet deep at the time of the accident. After a short though exciting struggle she got him out, by the aid of little Walter Price. The older girl's name was Florence Price, little Walter's sister.

I think, Mr. Holly, such an act of bravery and fearlessness should not go unrewarded. If you think it meritorious enough to be brought before the proper authorities, would you use your influence in so doing?

Yours respectfully,
Harry Lucas

The Herald, W. J. Sears, M. C. and the Postoffice

The Herald, at it again. You get it straight, for the Herald knows. Here it is:

The Sanford postmaster will be appointed. Not in any wise to be influenced by vote of the people. Joe Sears everything, the people nothing. No voice or choice for them.

The way and the right to say, all a private asset of the man who, just a little while ago, in electing to congress, we built larger than we knew. But it was ever thus, and thusly we have it good and strong of course Mr. Sears can know but little, if anything of who Sanford prefers for the postoffice. He has never come here and talked with our people on the subject. He seems to have felt himself sufficient within himself and, therefore, didn't have to come. All of which the Herald perfectly well knows.

Now, when a man's name is put forward about the postoffice, whether he be elected or appointed? You would think the best man would be chosen.

It is a drawing of its substance largely from this community, in social and sympathetic touch with all our people and all its needs. The Herald could not but champion the home side in this contest, but it was not done so. Read carefully between the lines of the several carefully but pointedly prepared articles in some half dozen of its issues, and you will detect a set purpose to support and encourage Joe Sears, M. C. to go over the head of the people.

In the beginning of this postoffice controversy, on announcing my candidacy, the Herald quite spiritedly noticed the card and said as a matter of fact that they were the candidates for the office right here in Sanford whom you would prove out disgruntled politicians for sure and certain and, therefore, the thing was done. The same thing will happen the next time. He would not have been so bold as to do this if he had not been sure of his ground.

Noticing the absence or indifference of its thirty applicants demands that they show up and make signs of getting into the race, as before, these would be disappointing and a primary purpose, as it coordinates, one of thirty was the controlling issue at stake and here you have the Herald again, put what interpretation you please, the primary is to be brushed aside and Mr. Sears given the right of way to appoint the man. We all know the man, and we believe we all know the rest of it.

Very truly,

Blasting Ground For Tree Planting

Much has been written on how to plant a tree or trees, but if the experiences of scores of famous arborists have any weight on the topic, then the practice of using dynamite preliminary to planting young trees has fully proved its merits.

The writer has personally seen specific examples of the value and excellence of tree planting with dynamite on a private orchard in Delaware, the Blasting for tree planting is best done in the fall, because at this time of the year it is easier to catch the subsoil in dry condition. Blasting in the spring for spring planting, however, is much better than planting in dug holes, notwithstanding the fact that the subsoil is apt to be wet or damp.

If the holes are blasted in advance of the time of setting the trees they are left without further attention until difference in growth between the unblasted trees and the trees planted in blasted ground being so minimal, that in favor of the latter that no adequate comparison could be made.

Furthermore, there are scientific and logical reasons for this method of tree planting that even the most skeptical could not fail to be convinced. Obviously when a tree has to use a large part of its energies in forcing its root through the hard soil it can not be expected to make the same rapid growth and come into such tree planting time unless it is despoiled of some of its energy. If the soil is blasted in advance of the time of setting the trees, the soil will materially assist in the softening of the clay and keeping it permanently granulated and sweet.

Immediately after the blast the soft blasted ground should be dug out down to the location of the charge where a hole will usually be found about the size of a bushel basket. This early bearing as a tree would that had had the ground in which it was planted thoroughly prepared by dynamiting beforehand.

Notice should be pointed out that the soil should be blasted so that the soil may be made open and porous. Such blasting not only creates channels in the soil, but it also creates channels in the soil, but it also in duces better growth and larger yields.

must be filled with good soil of the best after planting. The roots should be placed in a hole that position in good top soil, covered with good top soil and tamped down. The hole in then to be filled with soil, the surface with subsoil.

The fact that nearly all commercial orchards use this method proves that it pays in reduced first year loss, better fruiting and longer and better yield.

OUR BRICK ROADS

In this day of good roads agitation and the construction of many miles of hard surfaced roads in the state of Florida there is much being said pro and con in favor of the brick or against the brick. The Herald believes that at the present time the brick roads are the best paving that can be procured for Florida. We pay no attention to the claims that are being made for other material for the simple reason that the sand oil roads are an experiment, the cypress asphalt blocks are an experiment and the macadamized roads are an experiment in this state. The brick roads have been down in this county and in other counties long enough to demonstrate beyond peradventure that regardless of the price paid for the brick and the heavy toll exacted by the railroads for hauling the brick from other states that the brick roads are the most economical if the proper brick is purchased and they are laid properly. The articles written for this paper regarding the poor brick in this county and the discussions that arise from time to time do not change our opinion in this matter or cast any aspersions upon the board of county commissioners that bought this brick. They stood the rattle test at the depot and before at the station and yet when they were laid did not prove to be the right kind of brick. As soon as this was discovered the manufacturers were ordered to give bonds of sufficient sum to pay for the replacing of all these bricks and wherever these roads are not paved with good bricks they will be torn up and good ones laid down. There has been some criticism about the rattle test and yet the Clearwater Sun of recent date stated that the brick laid on Hillsborough county some five years ago was laid out and it had no rattle test and the brick laid that stood the rattle test had gone to pieces in other places.

The best test we have in the community of the brick is our own Sanford streets that are a monument to the fact that W. A. Holly's were placed on the streets and that they are not being properly repaired and the water and gas mains being so close to the surface in places and in several ways did not receive the treatment that the engineer would have attempted and yet these same brick streets are the models for other cities and recently a committee of officials of a Georgia city were brought here to see our streets as a test of the Augusta brick, demonstrating that the brick people think our streets were laid in the proper manner. Our streets have been torn up time and again for plumbing and sewerage and telephone and other repairs and in places present a very lumpy surface but the bricks are there yet and show little sign of the heavy wear and traffic of city streets.

The Herald has no stock of interest in the manufacture of paving bricks and has never received a pleasant look from the manufacturers of paving brick. Our deductions are based upon the actual results obtained from the brick streets here and the brick roads in the county and we can truthfully state that the brick roads where properly laid and with the best grade of paving brick will stand up ought to stand for twenty years, at least, before showing any signs of disintegration. The roads should be made of a good grade of brick and they should be placed on a solid and the road should be finished with proper curbing and the sides have proper drainage just as a railroad should have. This paper wishes to go on record as being in favor of brick paving now, because brick has received the proper test and other material have not.

This paper wishes to go on record as standing behind the county commissioners and the city council in their effort to give the people the best paving that money could buy and any act of theirs in this regard was done by them as public servants acting for the best interests of the people of this city and county. With their former experience in brick and brick paving the best roads to be built should be the best in the state and give no cause to critics.

SANFORD WOMEN WRITE

The Woman's Club edited in its beautiful entirety the Sanford Herald last Friday, and the issue stands as a monument to the energy and patriotism of the good women of that thrifty city. Editor Holly went to Jacksonville to attend the State Press convention, leaving his paper in their charge. Two lessons may be learned by the experiment, viz: how excellent are the accomplishments of the general run of club women, and how versatile one man must be to turn out 104 issues a year almost as interesting as the one supreme effort of a score of women. That man's name is Bob Holly. Hereafter Bob and the club women will better appreciate each other, and the Herald should be the gainer for the incident.—Eustis Lake Region.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT

Senator Fletcher has been mentioned several times by the DeLand News as a candidate for Vice President of the United States to be a running mate for Wilson or whoever receives the nomination. Senator Fletcher would be the man for the place and his friends in this state and other states would rally to his support. Senator Fletcher is looked upon as one of the leaders in the upper house and his name on the Democratic ticket would strengthen the party in many ways. Vice President Fletcher would sound particularly good to Floridians in the nation's capital.

The Sanford Herald announces that it expects to print Pat Murphy's book on inside politics in Florida now and for many years past, just as soon as Pat can get the data together and in shape for the printer. It will doubtless be a hot reading and if it hews up to the line, regardless of where the chips fall, it will make a sensation. Go to the Pat! Lakeland Telegram.

The copy that has come to hand is certainly enlightening and there will be some disgruntled politicians in Florida when the book is printed. Many of the so-called peoples candy dates will be eliminated from the ranks of the people's party when Murphy's book comes out.

Willis Powell has engaged Fred Desjardis of Gainesville to handle for the Sun in the advertising department and states that he hired Fred primarily because he played the clarinet and the band wanted a clarinet player. Willis is a member of the old school and believes that the home band should be encouraged. When we were boys, the home band was always recruited from the ranks of the wandering quilters and the fellow that could play in a band was sure of a job. If other business men were of the same opinion, the home band would be a good thing.

The fruit traders are arriving by and rail, the latter walking, and all of them have the idea that they should be put to packing, but they should be introduced to a basket, ladder and pair of clippers and sent to the field. We have plenty of domestic help for the better ones. We have an Al orchestra now and after a little rehearsal they will be able to entertain the public. The Epworth League is planning a social for Friday night which will eclipse anything of the kind ever before been tried. One of our colored men brought a law suit against another. He has less money but more experience.

Wekiwa and Ethel Items The Seminole game warden who was over about Markham Wednesday came across the river to explore our little city yesterday. He seemed well pleased with it. Rex Holiday killed a large bobcat in Mr. Andy Rush's chicken yard at midnight last Saturday. It measured 8 1/2 feet from the end of its nose to the end of its tail, and 4 1/2 feet from front toes to hind toes. It had killed several chickens for Mr. Rush. No one in this community has been able to find Miss Lila Brown since the death of her father, Mr. Jerry Brown. Anyone informing her of her father's death will confer a favor on her, as the estate is being settled. Some of the hogs are found now near Mr. W. H. Boyd's home and will soon be sold. Mr. Brown has been dead over a month. Messrs. George and Frank Coates are spending a day or two with their father, at his home, fishing, boat riding and hunting, near Clearwater, and returned to Fort Meade to visit their grandmother for a few days before taking up their work again. Mrs. Eugene Brower was taken to Orlando for an operation last Friday. Her husband returning last Friday night reports her case as being hopeless as the doctor thinks she is too far gone to undergo an operation. Her friends will be very sorry to learn that her death is expected at any time without a great change. It is very sad to think of a dear mother being called from her four dear little children so young and from her devoted husband, yet God's ways are not our ways and we cannot understand. There was a prayer meeting held at Mr. Hardy Boyd's last night in behalf of his brother Ben, who is lying at the point of death and his death is expected hourly. Mrs. Charley Vermillion is taking care of Mrs. Eugene Brower's two little children since she has been in the hospital. The two older ones stay with Mrs. Grippen at night, going to school through the day. Mr. Peters of Tennessee came home with Mr. Brown last night and will spend awhile in our community. Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin and daughter, Ethel, from New York paid a visit to Mrs. A. O. Powell last week at her home in Wekiwa.

In Honor of Bride

Mrs. Cecil Butt and Mrs. A. B. Wallace entertained yesterday afternoon with a charming party in the town bridge party in honor of Mrs. Eugene Roumillat, one of the recent brides. Effective autumn decorations were carried out with brilliant autumn leaves and yellow cosmos. The lights were green shaded and the score cards were an artistic design of autumn leaves. In the dining room, where coffee was poured by Mrs. Stringfellow, the table was lovely with its vases of gorgeous roses, and autumn leaves scattered over the pretty cover; the gleaming silver urn reflecting the beauty of roses and leaves. Mrs. W. P. Carter, making top score was presented a cut glass vase, while to Miss Charlotte Hand was presented the consolation prize, won in the cut, of a lovely yellow and white silk work bag. A cut glass bon bon dish was the guest prize. A salad and sandwich course was daintily served upon plates decorated with cosmos, the salad garnished in apple cups was unique and attractive. In Honor of Visiting Girl

For Miss Gwendolya Le Massena who has been the recipient of many charming social attentions during her visit to Mr. R. B. Dean, Miss Laura Fish entertained with an evening party last Friday that was one of the most enjoyable of the season's small affairs. The attractive home was lovely with rose and other flowers, arranged with artistic simplicity. Dancing and music made the hours fly on the wings of pleasure and the young people returned to the city with Miss Fish a most gracious hostess. A salad and sandwich course was served with rollee and devil's food at the refreshment hour. Enjoying the hospitality of Miss Fish were Mr. and Mrs. Geo. D. Bishop, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Dean, Misses Le Massena, Sadie Williams, Florence Frank Charlotte Hand and Mesdames Galloway, Lloyd and York.

Holly Party

A delightfully informal affair of the week was the Holly party, sponsored by Mrs. H. E. Hester on Monday night to the home of Mrs. Evans at 113 Main. The party was given in honor of Mrs. Frank Evans of Chulson, Mass. Among the pleasures observed was a magnificent roast. The party was reported a gay time. The party included Mrs. Hester, Miss Clara Phillips, Miss Corbie, Miss Hand and Mesdames Kenneth, Merrill, Hart and Phillips, and Mr. Hester.

A Most Enjoyable Meeting

A most enjoyable meeting of the L. K. Bible society held at the residence home of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Holly on Tuesday evening, where everybody had a good time and indulged in delightful reminiscences of their summer vacations. Count Holly and President J. J. Holly gave the most vivid explication of course, the "sermon" spelled with L. K. Bible.

Sanford Department Reception

The night reception to the Social Department to the General Club will be held at the Women's Club rooms Tuesday afternoon. All members of the club are cordially invited and requested to attend this reception. Mrs. R. J. Holly will be the department hostess for the month of November.

A Correction

In an announcement of the marriage of "Smith-Gunter" last Tuesday we were misinformed as to the identity of the parties and make the following correction: Mr. E. D. Gunter, formerly of Sanford, Fla., son of Sanford and Miss Holly Smith of Vienna, Va., were one of the holy bonds wedded by the Rev. W. G. Goulyman at the Baptist Temple, Sanford, Fla., on Tuesday afternoon at 6 o'clock.

Surprise Party

Little Miss Margaret Petos was happily surprised by a number of her neighborhood playmates Thursday afternoon, the occasion being her seventh birthday. A gay good time was enjoyed by the little folks upon the "parkway," where games were played until dark sent the self-invited guests to their homes. The fun was so contagious.

SYNOPSIS.

The New York police are mystified by a series of murders and other crimes. The principal clue to the criminal is the warning letter which is sent the victim, signed with a "clutching hand." The latest victim of the mysterious assassin is Taylor Bennett, the insurance president. His daughter, Elaine, employs Craig Kennedy, the famous scientific detective, to try to unravel the mystery. What Kennedy accomplishes is told by his friend, Jamison, a newspaper man. After many fruitless attempts to find Elaine and Craig Kennedy out of the way the Clutching Hand is at last found to be none other than Perry Bennett, Elaine's lawyer and the man who is engaged to marry. Bennett flees to the den of one of his Chinese criminals. The Chinaman forces from Bennett the secret of the whereabouts of $100,000. Then he gives the lawyer a position which will suspend animation for months. Kennedy reaches Bennett's side just after he has lost consciousness.

TWENTY-FOURTH EPISODE

SHADOWS OF WAR.

It was a day, or two after the escape of Wu Fang and Inez. Kennedy had Chase and another detective whom he frequently employed on routine matters, at work over the clues developed by means of the sphygmograph. Elaine, anxious for news, had dropped in on us at the laboratory just as Kennedy was hastily opening his mail.

Craig came to a large letter with an official look, slit open the envelope and unfolded the letter. "Hurray," he cried, jumping up and throwing the letter before us. "Read that."

Across the top of the paper were embossed in blue the formidable words:

United States Navy Department,

Washington, D. C.

The letter was interesting.

Professor Craig Kennedy,

The University, New York City.

Dear Sir—Your (automatic) torpede model was tested yesterday and I take great pleasure in stating that it was entirely successful. There is no doubt that the United States is safe from attack as long as we retain its secret. Very sincerely yours,

DANIEL WATERS,

Assistant Secretary.

When we were going to see the wonderful invention, I added as I stepped into the car and in a matter of moments broke the record by reaching the room.

As soon as you wish to be notified, moving over to the side of the car and opening it. Hence the only other model in existence besides the model I sent to Washington.

He held up the letter and we read it together. It was a masterpiece of brevity and directness, which we both appreciated.

The principle of the thing, I went on proudly, "is that I use a device which is a relay of the torpede, the relay releases it. That is I could send it through the air, deep the work. So you see I can get away in safety and send my little letter out anywhere, to attack down a large Goliath."

He had scarcely finished his brief description when there came a knock at the door. It answered it. It was Elaine and his assistant.

"We've found the place, on Pell Street," they reported excitedly. "It is No. 14 as you thought. We've left an operative disguised as a blind beggar to watch the place."

Half an hour later we turned into Chinatown from the shadow of the elevated railroad on Chatham square, doing our best to affect a bowery slouch.

We had not gone far before we came to the blind beggar. He was sitting by No. 14 with a sign on his breast, grinding industriously at a small barrel organ. Behind him on which rested a tin cup. We passed him and Kennedy took out a coin from his pocket and dropped it into the cup. As he did so he thrust his hand into the cup and quickly took out a piece of paper which he palmed.

The blind beggar thanked and begged us, and we dodged into a doorway, where Kennedy opened the paper and read "Wu Fang gone out."

We had scarcely mounted the stairs to the den of the Serpent when a servant in a black room, hearing a noise, stuck his head in the door. Kennedy and I made a dash at him, and quickly overpowered him, snapping the bracelets on his wrists.

"Watch him, Walter," directed Craig. He made his way into the back room.

In the devious plots and schemes of Wu Fang his relations were had brought him into contact not only with criminals of the lowest order, but with those high up in financial and diplomatic circles.

Thus it happened that at such a crisis as Kennedy had brought about for him Wu had suddenly been called out of the city and had received an order from a group of powerful foreign agents known secretly as the Intelligence Office, to meet an emissary at a certain rocky promontory on the Connecticut shore of Long Island sound the very day after Kennedy's little affair with him in the laboratory and the day before the letter from Washington arrived.

There on the rocky shore, he sat gazing out at the waves, waiting, when suddenly, from around the promontory, came a boat rowed by two stalwart sailors. It carried as passengers two dark-complexioned, dark-haired men, foreigners evidently, though carefully dressed as a conventional both their identity and nationality.

As the boat came up to a strip of sandy beach among the rocks, the sailors held it while their two passengers jumped out. Then they rowed away as quickly as they had come.

The two mysterious strangers saluted Wu. "We are under orders from the intelligence office," introduced one who seemed to be the leader, "to get this American, Kennedy."

"Information has just come to us," the stranger went on, "that Kennedy has invented a new wireless automatic torpede. Already a letter is on its way informing him that it has been accepted by the navy."

The other man, who had been drawing a clear-shaped outline on the wet sand, looked up. "We must get those models," he put in, adding, "both of them—the one he has and the other that the government has. Can it be done?"

"I can get them," answered Wu in a matter of moments.

And so while Kennedy was drawing at the laboratory the net about Wu that was criminal had already planned an attack on him in an unexpected spot.

Down in Washington the very morning that our pursuit of Wu came to a head, the officials of the navy department, both naval and civil, were having the final conference at which they were to accept officially Kennedy's marvelous invention, which it was confidently believed, would ultimately make war impossible.

Seated about a long table in one of the board rooms were, naturally, the officials but the officials of the department of whom no mention was necessary for the final step. By a window sat a woman sphygmograph, who was transferring the results of the measurements being made to a record. She was engaged in conversation with the man sitting next to her.

She looked up at the man and laid it on the end of the table, across an arm's length from the sphygmograph. As she finished a page of notes she glanced quickly at a watch on her wrist. It was half past ten.

She looked at the clock and then at the door. The door opened and a man entered. He was a Chinaman, and he was dressed in a suit that was not unlike that of the man who had been seen at the laboratory.

He came to the window and looked at the sphygmograph. He then turned to the man sitting next to him and said, "The man who was seen at the laboratory is the same man who was seen at the laboratory."

He then turned to the man sitting next to him and said, "The man who was seen at the laboratory is the same man who was seen at the laboratory."

ening himself out after the fracas, "I'll stay here with the prisoners. Go get the police."

I hurried out and rushed down the street seeking an officer.

Up in the den, Wu Fang, silent, stood with his back to the wall, scowling sulkily. Close beside him hung a sort of bell cord, just out of reach of Kennedy, revolver in hand, was examining the writing table to discover whatever evidence he could. Slowly and imperceptibly, inch by inch, Wu moved toward the bell cord. He was reaching out with his manacled hands to seize it when Kennedy, alert, turned, saw him, and instantly shot Wu literally crumpled up and dropped to the floor as Craig bounded over to him.

By this time I had found a policeman and he had summoned the wagon from the Elizabeth street station, a few blocks away. As we drove up before the den, I leaped out and the police followed.

Imagine my surprise at seeing Wu stretched on the floor; Kennedy had tried to stanch the flow of blood from a wound on Wu's shoulder with a handkerchief and now was making a temporary bandage which he bound on him.

"How are you, sergeant?" nodded Kennedy. "Well, I guess you'll admit I made good this time."

Common humanity dictated that we take Wu first of all to a hospital and get him fixed up, and to a hospital we went. Kennedy and I entered with our prisoners, closely guarded by the police.

Craig handed Wu over to two young doctors and a nurse. By this time Wu was very weak from loss of blood. Still he had his iron nerve and that was carrying him through. The two young doctors and the nurse had scarcely begun to take off Craig's bandage to replace it properly when a noise outside told us that a weeping and gesticulating delegation of Chinese had arrived.

Kennedy by this time had finished talking to the doctors and handing Wu over to them. They had taken him into a room in the dispensary. Just then the chattering crowd pushed in, some asking questions, others besting the fate of the great Wu Fang. They were so insistent that at last one of the doctors was forced to demand that the police drive them out. They started to push them back.

In the noise one of their number managed to get away from the crowd and reach the doorway to the emergency room. He was as we found out later, disposed almost precisely as Wu, although he had on a somewhat different cap. In build and color as well as features he was a veritable duplicate.

The other Chinaman drew back behind the screen which hid the door way to the emergency room and concealed himself.

In the emergency room Wu was placed on an operating table and there was bound up properly, though he was terribly weak now.

Back of the screen, however, the other Chinaman was hiding, side to side on an operating table at what was going on. There happened to be a table in the room on which was placed a bottle of medicine.

He saw the bottle and he saw the doctor who was standing by the table. He saw the doctor who was standing by the table. He saw the doctor who was standing by the table.

one. "We have been to his apartment and to the laboratory."

"I'll see," said Jennings discreetly, taking the card of one of them and leaving them in the drawing room.

"Two gentlemen to see you, Mr. Kennedy," Jennings interrupted our congratulations, handing Craig a card. "Shall I tell them you are here, sir?"

Craig balanced the card. "I wonder what that can be," he said, turning the card toward us. It was engraved:

W. R. Barnes,
U. S. Secret Service.

"Yes, I'll see them," he said, then to us, "Please excuse me?"

Elaine, Aunt Josephine and I strolled off in the palms toward the Fifth Avenue side, while Jennings went out toward the back of the house.

"Well, gentlemen," greeted Kennedy as he met the two detectives, "what can I do for you?"

The leader looked about, then leaned over and whispered, "We've just had word, professor, that your model of the torpede has been stolen from the navy department in Washington."

"Stolen?" repeated Kennedy, staring aghast.

"Yes. We fear that an agent of a foreign government has found a traitor in the department."

Rapidly Kennedy's mind pictured what might be done with the deadly weapon in the hands of an enemy.

"And," added the secret service man, "we have reason to believe that this foreign agent is using a Chinaman, Wu Fang."

"But Wu has been arrested," replied Craig. "I arrested him myself. The police have him now."

"Then you don't know of his escape?"

Kennedy could only stare as they told the story.

The crook fell back and dropped down behind the palms. Jennings looked about, but saw no one and stood there puzzled. Then the crook, fearing that he might be captured at any moment, looked about to see where he might hide the torpede. There did not seem to be any place quickly to be found to dig out the earth in one of the palm pots. He dropped the torpede, wrapped still in the handkerchief, into the hole and covered it up.

Jennings was clearly puzzled. He had seen someone rush in, but the conservatory was apparently empty. He had just turned to go out when he saw a palm pot. There was a face. He made a dive for it and in a moment both he and the crook were rolling over and over.

Kennedy and the secret service men were talking earnestly when they heard the cry for help and the scuffle.

They rushed out and into the conservatory in time to see the crook, who had broken away, knock out Jennings. He sprang to his feet and started away.

Kennedy's mind was working rapidly. Had the man been after the other model? The detectives went after him. But a faint went for the torpede. As he looked into the tank it was gone! He turned and followed the crook.

I was still in the garden with Elaine and Aunt Josephine when I heard the cry. I rushed to the conservatory and saw the crook.

Two men were fighting for him. He managed to climb up and dashed for the wall in the back of the garden. The secret service men fired at him, but he kept on. A moment later Craig came through the window.

The crook by this time had reached the top of the wall. Just as he was about to let himself down safely on the other side a shot struck him. He tumbled over and ran forward.

He had just run forward a short distance in spite of the shock of the wound he managed to pick himself up and with the help of a confederate, hobbled into a waiting car, which sped away just as we came over the wall.

We dropped to the ground just as another car approached. Craig commanded it from its astonished driver, the secret service men and I piled in and we were off in a few seconds in hot pursuit.

Down at the terminal where trains came in from Washington, Wu, much better now, was waiting. He had pulled a long coat over his Chinese clothes and wore a slouch hat. As he looked at the incoming passengers he spied the man he was waiting for, the young crook who had been waiting in the shrubbery outside the navy building when the torpede model was thrown out.

Among plants nature's imitations are much more numerous than in the animal kingdom, says a writer in Gas Logic. The man had the model carefully wrapped up under his arm. As his eye traveled over the crowd he recognized Wu, but did not betray it. He walked by, and as he passed hastily handed Wu the package containing the model.

It was a close race between the car bearing the two crooks and that which Kennedy had impressed into service, but we kept on through the city and out across the country, into Connecticut.

Time and again they almost got away, until it became a question of following the tracks. Once we came to a cross roads and Kennedy stopped and leaped out. Deeply planted in the mud he could see the tracks of the car ahead leading out by the left a road close beside the tire tracks were the footprints of two men going up the right-hand road toward the sound.

You follow the car, and the driver, decided Craig hastily indicating the road to which it had gone. I followed the footprints.

The secret service men jumped back into the car and Kennedy and I went along the shore road following the two crooks.

Already the wounded crook supported by his pal had made his way down to the water and had come to a lone wharf. There near the land end they had a secret hiding place into which they went. The other crook drew forth a smoke signal and began to prepare it.

Kennedy and I were able now to move faster than they. As we came in sight of the wharf Kennedy pointed to the right. There they were, two of them, he indicated.

I could just make them out in their hiding place. The fellow who had stolen the torpedo was by this time so weak from loss of blood that he could hardly hold his head up, while the other hurried to fix the smoke signal. He happened to glance up and saw us.

"Come back with me," I urged. We found two of them. One is dead. Craig sent me to trace the other. I've lost the trail. Perhaps you can find it for me.

We crashed through the brush quickly. Suddenly I heard something that caused me to start. It sounded like an explosion.

There's the place, over there. I pointed pointing and indicating the direction of the wharf where had come the explosion.

What was it? We did not stop a moment but hurried in that direction. We reached the shore where we saw marks of the explosion and of a fight. Out on the pier I ran breathlessly. I rushed to the very edge and gazed over, then climbed down the slippery piling and peered into the black water beneath.

She Seemed to Read the Tragical Look on My Haggard Face.

ish, but he was too weak. He fell back, dead. He had waited as long as he dared to learn the secret. He jumped up and ran out just as we burst into the hiding place.

Kennedy dropped down by the dead man and searched him, while I dashed after the other fellow.

When I returned I found Kennedy writing a hasty note. "I couldn't follow him, Craig," I confessed.

"Too bad," frowned Craig, evidently greatly worried by what had happened, as he folded the note. "Walter," he added, seriously, "I want you to go and find the fellow." He handed me the note. "And if anything separates us today—give this note to Elaine."

Meanwhile, as nearly as I can now make out, Kennedy searched the dead man again. There was certainly no clue to his identity on him, nor had he the torpedo model. Craig looked about. Suddenly he fell flat on his stomach.

There was Wu Fang himself coming to the wharf, carrying the model of the torpedo which had been stolen in Washington and brought up to him by his emissary.

Kennedy, crouching down and taking advantage of every object that with Aunt Josephine, rose as she saw me. "Did you get them?" Elaine asked eagerly. I could not speak. She seemed to read the tragic look on my haggard face, and stopped. "Why," she gasped clutching at the desk, "what is the matter?" As gently as I could I told her of the chase, of leaving Craig, of the explosion, of the marks of the struggle and of the finding of Wu Fang.

As I finished I thought she would faint. "And you—you went over everything about the wharf?" "Everything. The men even dragged for the—"

I checked myself over the fateful word. Elaine looked at me wildly. I thought that she would lose her reason. She did not cry. The shock was too great for that.

Suddenly I remembered the note. "Before I left him—the last time," I blurted out, "he wrote a note—to you."

I pulled the crumpled paper from my pocket and Elaine almost tore it from me—the last word from him—and read.

"Dearest—I may not return until the case is settled and I have found the stolen torpedo. Matters involving millions of lives and billions of dollars hang on the plot back of it. No matter what happens, have no fear. Trust me. Lovingly, CRAIG."

She finished reading the note and slowly laid it down. Then she picked it up and read it again. Slowly she turned to me.

He told me to trust him and to have no fear," she said simply, gripping her hands mentally and physically to restrain herself, then with an air of defiance she looked at me. "I do not believe that he is dead."

I tried to comfort her. I wanted to do so. But I could do nothing but shake my head sadly. My own heart was full to overflowing. An intimacy such as had been ours could not be broken except with a shock that tore my soul. I knew that the poor girl had not seen what I had seen. Yet I could not find it in my heart to contradict her.

"She saw my look, read my mind. No," she cried still dumb, "no a thousand times no! I tell you he is not dead."

Patron, Ky.—In an interesting letter from this place, Mrs. Bettie Bullock writes as follows: "I suffered for four years, with womanly troubles, and during this time, I could only sit up for a little while, and could not walk anywhere at all. At times, I would have severe pains in my left side.

The doctor was called in, and his treatment relieved me for a while, but I was soon confined to my bed again. After that, nothing seemed to do me any good.

I had gotten so weak I could not stand, and I gave up in despair. At last, my husband got me a bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I commenced taking it. From the very first dose, I could tell it was helping me. I can now walk two miles without its tiring me, and am doing all my work."

The Way of Going. And after all it may be best, just in the happiest sunniest hour of all the voyage, while eager winds are kissing every sail to flash against the unseen rock, and in an instant hear the billows roar above a sunken ship. For whether in mid-air or among the breakers of the farther shore, a wreck at last must mark the end of each and all. And every life no matter if its every hour is rich with love, and every moment jeweled with a joy, will at its close become a tragedy as sad and deep and dark as can be woven of the warp and woof of mystery and death. —Robert Ingersoll

ENGLAND'S BLOCKADE HAS BEEN DECLARED ILLEGAL

GREAT BRITAIN HAS BEEN NOTIFIED THAT UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT WON'T STAND FOR IT

Washington, D. C., Nov. 9.—Publication today of the American note to Great Britain denouncing a "ineffective, illegal, and indefensible" attempted blockade against Germany and Austria, gives notice to citizens of the United States whose legitimate foreign trade is interfered with by the allies that they should secure redress directly through the diplomatic channels of their own government rather than through prize courts.

This latest note, delivered in Ambassador Page to the British foreign office, is an exhaustive document dealing with England's interference with American trade since the outbreak of the war.

Thirty-five points are treated in the note and in conclusion Secretary Lansing declares that the United States "cannot with comportsance suffer further subordination of its rights and interests to the plea that the exceptional geographical position of the enemies of Great Britain require of justice oppressive and illegal practices."

established rules of international conduct; it is of the highest importance to neutrals that the principles of international right be maintained unimpaired, and the United States unhesitatingly assumes the task of championing their rights.

Heretofore Americans whose cargoes destined to neutral countries have been seized on the high seas and delayed or confiscated have been advised to exhaust legal remedies before suing the United States government for reparation. Now the note says the government "feels that it cannot reasonably be expected to advise its citizens to seek redress before tribunals which are in its opinion unauthorized by the unrestricted application of international law to grant reparation, nor to refrain from presenting their claims directly to the British government through diplomatic channels."

Since the United States does not recognize the existence of a legal blockade Americans may look to their government for protection in the shipment of a noncontraband cargoes not only to neutral countries contiguous to belligerents, but directly to or from the enemies of the allies.
