Developers face jail

In what is believed to be the first case of its kind in Florida, two land developers face up to 14 years in prison for allegedly cutting down 2,000 protected mangrove trees on an island in Sarasota County.

Storms hamper body recovery

U.S. helicopters battled thunderstorms in trying to recover the bodies of 15 people, including Rep. Mickey Leland of Texas, which were found in a remote mountainous area of Ethiopia Sunday. Observers said the airplane crashed against a 3,800-foot mountain about 35 miles short of its destination a week ago. A team of U.S. Congressmen were to fly to Addis Ababa today to escort Leland's body back to the United States.

Congressman's plane crashes

NEW AUGUSTA, Miss. — The wreckage of a single-engine airplane believed to have been carrying Rep. Larkin Smith, R-Miss., was discovered Monday in a wooded area 12 hours after it disappeared.

Perry County Sheriff's Department spokesman C.B. Easterling said the crash site was 12 to 15 miles southeast of New Augusta. A rescue team was sent to the site.

Larkin and a pilot, Chuck Vierling, were en route from Hattiesburg Municipal Airport to Gulfport Sunday night when the Cessna 177 disappeared. Smith's executive assistant, Billy Thornton, said.

The search had been focused on rural Perry County, southeast of Hattiesburg, where the Sheriff's Department received a report about a possible plane crash about 9:50 p.m.

Phone strikes spread

Ameritech joined the ranks of strike-bound "Baby Bells" as a walkout against three other regional telephone companies moved into its second week, sending 185,000 employees to picket lines Monday in 20 states and Washington, D.C.

About 35,000 unionized workers in the Midwest went on strike against Ameritech early Sunday, but strikes were averted by tentative settlements with US West and Southwestern Bell.

In each of the labor talks, health insurance costs and wages have been a main stumbling block.

Ameritech employees in Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin joined striking Communications Workers of America union members on both coasts. About 13,000 International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers settled last month.

U.S.-PLO talks resume

TUNIS, Tunisia — Representatives of the United States and the Palestine Liberation Organization met today to discuss last week's congress of the PLO's dominant Fatah group, U.S. Embassy officials said.

Ambassador Robert Pelletreau presided over the U.S. delegation at the talks in the port city of Carthage outside Tunis. Yasser Abed Rabbo, a member of the PLO Executive Committee, led the Palestinian team.

The formal session is the fourth between the two since the United States authorized a dialogue with the organization in December after PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat denounced terrorism and recognized Israel's right to exist.

PLO officials said Pelletreau asked last week for the latest meeting in Tunisia after the Fatah movement ended its first Congress in nine years Aug. 8 with a statement criticized by U.S. officials.

Sanford rescue workers, right, tend Shirley Ann McNine, 51, of Sanford, after she was thrown from her pickup truck after making a right turn from 25th Street into the path of the car of Cornelius J. Collins, 70, of Casselberry. Collins and his wife were not seriously injured in the accident that occurred at about 5:20 p.m. Sunday. Above, Collins sits on the sidelines as rescue workers tend Margaret Collins, 88, inside their car. Her injuries, as well as those of Doris Ann Ruel, 48, and Raymond Ruel, 52, of Jacksonville, traveling in a third car, weren't serious, police said. All five were transported to Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford. Charges are pending against McNine.

NASA faces tough schedule

United Press International

CAPE CANAVERAL — The first year of post-Challenger shuttle flight operations ended Sunday with Columbia's landing in California and despite five successful missions. NASA faces major hurdles keeping its space fleet on schedule.

For the first time since the 1988 shuttle disaster, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration has three operational spaceplanes available for duty, stretching manpower and facilities at the Kennedy Space Center to the limit.

"The workforce has got to work all three vehicles simultaneously, we cannot be a one-flight oriented activity," said astronaut Robert Crippen, deputy manager of the shuttle program at the Florida spaceport.

"There's always a tendency ... where you focus on the one that's right there in front of you. To adequately do the job right now, we've got to be able to put resources on all three vehicles."

In the wake of the 1988 Challenger disaster, NASA's three remaining shuttles — Atlantis, Discovery and Columbia — had to be extensively modified to improve flight safety and performance.

At the same time, the agency's management structure was overhauled to prevent the "flawed" decision making blamed in part for the accident and to eliminate the kind of flight planning responsible for merciless "launch schedule pressure" that demanded more than NASA could safely deliver.

Atlantis and Discovery received priority in the return-to-flight process, completing two missions each before Columbia was finally ready for blastoff last Tuesday.

Now, with three operational shuttles ready for duty, NASA once again is facing pressure to meet an aggressive flight schedule, or manifest, that calls for nine flights next year, equaling a record set in 1985.

Eventually, NASA hopes to launch up to 14 flights a year.

In an interview, Crippen said it will be difficult keeping three space shuttles in the launch processing "flow" with available manpower and resources in the conservative post-Challenger environment.

"It is necessary to be able to keep those three in flow to achieve anywhere near the manifest we have laid out," he said. "We're now back facing some of the same kinds of problems that we had (before Challenger), just trying to make everything happen."

Jupiter probe planned

United Press International

CAPE CANAVERAL — The space shuttle Columbia's return to Earth Sunday clears the way for the long-awaited launch of the $1.4 billion Galileo Jupiter probe from the shuttle Atlantis in October.

The most sophisticated interplanetary probe ever built, Galileo promises to revolutionize knowledge about the solar system's largest planet during an unprecedented 20-month orbital tour that will begin six years after launch from Atlantis.

Atlantis currently is scheduled to be hauled to launch pad 39B, the same pad used by Columbia last Tuesday, on Aug. 28 for final flight preparations.

If all goes well, the shuttle and its three-man two-woman crew will blast off at 1:29 p.m. EDT Oct. 12 on the sixth post-Challenger mission, the fourth of six flights planned for 1989.

Schools ponder money

Board looking at growing enrollment

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — A $300 million bond issue to be put to the voters early next year to build new schools is only one of the methods the Seminole County School Board is weighing to cope with the burgeoning student population.

Chairman Ann Netawender thinks there needs to be a balanced program that includes bond money.

When the Seminole County school district went to the public in 1985 to ask for their approval in the purchase of $105 million in bonds to help pay for the renovation of and additions to the district schools, they were not alone.

Over the past decade, voters in 26 Florida school districts have been asked to approve more than $3 billion in bond money. Only seven bond issues, totaling $443.4 million failed to win voter approval.

The Seminole County measure passed by a substantial margin in October 1985.

"Most districts find that they have no trouble passing a bond issue if their public is well-informed on what the money is to be used for," said David Voss, director of communications with the state department of education. Of the seven issues that failed, four of the districts which had made the attempts were able to pass a later issue following a public awareness campaign.

Board chairman Netawender agreed that an informed public would be better able to make a decision on such an issue.

"I don't look at it as passing or failing," she said, "but I think we need to inform the public as to our needs."

Longwood land use discussed

By SANDRA BOUCHANNINE
Herald staff writer

LONGWOOD — City commissioners met with City Planner Chris Nagle Saturday morning to discuss the city's comprehensive plan which must be submitted to the Florida Department of Community Affairs by July 1, 1991.

Nagle proposes 34 land use changes to the existing plan which comprises about 200 parcels within the city.

The goal of the state-mandated comprehensive plan is to guide growth and development in the city throughout the year 2005. The objective of the plan is to protect existing single-family residential neighborhoods from commercial and industrial encroachment. The 300-page plan addresses traffic circulation, conservation, park facilities, historic districts and other planning concerns.

Unicare expands program for handicapped

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald staff writer

LONGWOOD — Unicare has been in operation in Central Florida since 1967 as a place parents of handicapped children could go to get information. Recently, director Lori Bennett has begun to expand her operations to include a care facility and a manufacturing division.

The basis for her expansion was the same as her original impetus for founding Unicare.

"Often you're frustrated with your doctor and frustrated with the school system and you just want to get information from another person," Bennett said.

Bennett, whose son Danny, 10, is profoundly mentally handicapped, has vast personal experience in working with handicapped children and the bureaucratic system which is set up to assist them.

Florida, unlike some other states does not have a committee on the handicapped (a state agency that performs that service). In

New York (from where the Bennetts moved in 1984), for example, there is a board which will review a case if a parent does not agree with an assessment given by a school, in effect giving a second opinion.

"Here, there's nothing like that. We can't get schools to change their rulings, but at least we can offer advice and guidance," she explained.

Since the inception of Unicare, Bennett has been trying to create a day care center for handicapped children and their siblings in which they can play and work together.

Brothers and sisters are not separated because one has exceptional needs.

"That's where we are unique," she explained. "We let the children gain experience from one another."

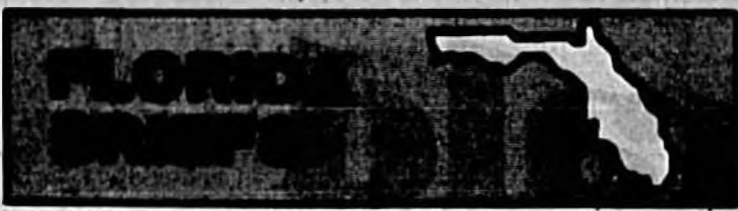

According to Bennett, one in three families has a child with some sort of exceptionality, be it a learning disability, a physical handicap or mental retardation. She doesn't believe the children should be segregated but, rather, learn to live

Capalized boaters rescued

CLEARWATER — Two boaters hung to their capized vessel in the Gulf of Mexico for two days and were airlifted to safety Monday morning by a Coast Guard helicopter.

Coast Guard spokesman James Wentworth said both were hospitalized in stable condition in Clearwater.

Richard Darrett, 40, and an unidentified 38-year-old woman left Clearwater Saturday morning to test sail Darrett's new 23-foot boat. They were reported overdue Sunday and a search was begun.

Search crews aboard a Coast Guard Falcon jet spotted them clinging to the overturned vessel Monday morning, and a helicopter lowered a rescue basket to reach them. Wentworth said.

Drowning victim identified

NAVARRE BEACH — A man who died Saturday while swimming in the Gulf of Mexico has been identified as a Louisiana man, authorities said Monday.

The Escambia County Sheriff's Department identified the drowning victim as George Donald Dorsey, 50, of Metairie, La.

A sheriff's department report said Dorsey, who was staying at a Navarre Beach hotel with his wife and son, went swimming shortly after eating. Witnesses said Dorsey grabbed his chest and called for help around 5:30 p.m. CDT.

He was pulled from the water and taken to a Fort Walton Beach hospital, where he was pronounced dead around 8:20 p.m. CDT.

Rally protests flag-burning ruling

CRESTVIEW — About 800 people showed up Sunday for a rally designed to show the community's disagreement with the Supreme Court ruling concerning flag-burning.

Organizer Steve Hudson had hoped more people would show up for "Wave Old Glory Day" in front of the Okaloosa County Courthouse. He said he was disappointed with the turnout.

Hudson plans to send a petition in the form of an old pickup truck covered with signatures to Washington, D.C. as a way to protest the June 21 ruling that said burning the flag is protected political speech.

Turnpike crash kills four

JUPITER — A Connecticut man and his three children died in a fiery collision with a moving van on on Florida's Turnpike near Jupiter Saturday, less than two hours after they stepped off a plane to start their vacation.

The children's mother survived, pulled from the burning wreckage by a passing motorist who swerved his pickup truck to avoid the crash.

Gerry Michaud, 38, and his children, Dawn, Stephen and Michael were killed when a moving van plowed into them.

Donna Michaud, 35, was burned over 40-percent of her body and flown to Shands Hospital in Gainesville, officials said. She was listed in critical but stable condition Sunday in the Burn Intensive Care Unit at Shands, a hospital spokesman said.

Former diplomat kills son, self

MIAMI — A former Cuban diplomat shot and killed his 9-year-old son and then killed himself, police said.

The bodies of Rafael Delgado and his son Carlos were found in remote western Dade County after the car erupted into flames and crashed into a guard rail Sunday.

Delgado, 51, was separated from his wife, Florida Delgado, and had custody of Carlos on weekends. Mrs. Delgado described him as a "desperate" man who had battled depression for years and had trouble living in the United States illegally.

Delgado fought against the Fulgencio Batista regime and became a diplomat under Fidel Castro's government. He later became disenchanted and won asylum in Portugal nine years ago. He came to the United States more than a year ago, but like many Cubans arriving from third countries, was unable to obtain legal status or a work permit. He was active in Miami exile groups seeking human rights improvements in Cuba.

Water weed worries Orange County

WINDERMERE — A rapidly reproducing water weed has regulators of a pristine Orange County chain of lakes so worried they want to double a special tax to fight the vegetation.

"It is damn bad and almost out of control," said chairwoman Marilyn Wise of the Windermere Water and Navigational Board, which governs the special taxing district for southwest Orange County.

Some experts fear hydrilla will soon choke the lakes and hamper recreation. County commissioners have tentatively approved raising the taxing district fee to $1 per $1,000 of taxable property value.

They vote formally on the proposal next month.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Felled trees may set precedent

United Press International

SARASOTA — Two land developers were charged with 85 criminal counts of cutting down protected mangrove trees and could face up to 14 years in prison in a case believed to be the first of its kind in Florida.

Frank Miller, 50, of Englewood, and William H. Burke, 64, of Sarasota, are scheduled to appear Sept. 14 at the South Sarasota County Courthouse in Venice before County Judge Alan Dakan.

According to a report published Sunday, Sarasota County officials warned Miller in the spring that he had illegally cut down more than 2,000 mangrove trees on Casey Key, where the developers planned to build homes.

Miller reportedly replied: "Go ahead, fine me. It's the cost of doing business."

Miller and Burke then cut 85 more trees, a sheriff's report said. They were charged with one count for each tree under a county ordinance imposing jail terms of up to 60 days and fines of up to $500 for disturbing a mangrove without a permit.

"It's a criminal act that was done with intent and malice after he was given the proper notice," said Assistant State Attorney Steve Cooley. "He could have just stopped. It's one thing to do something wrong; it's another thing to split in the face of the system."

John Costigan, chief of environmental litigation for the Attorney General's Office, said he knows of no other criminal cases in Florida involving the cutting of mangroves.

The trees are protected because their root systems help fight coastal erosion. They also provide shelter for spawning fish and other wildlife ranging from snakes and otters to butterflies, birds and bobcats.

A sheriff's report said the developers apparently were trying to improve the view of Blackburn Bay on eight lots on the site.

"On one specific occasion, both Miller and Burke had been on the job site up in the cherry-picher, looking out to see what the views might appear to be once the structures were built," Detective Rob Crane wrote.

The developers came down from the cherry-picher, complained about the view and said, "We need to cut more of the mangroves. We need to cut them lower."

Cooley said he may file additional charges under state law regarding the first 2,000 trees, but has not done so because state law makes it more difficult to establish criminal responsibility against individuals.

The county ordinance makes it easier to establish blame, particularly because the developers were warned, Cooley said. The County Commission also has authorized its lawyers to seek civil damages against the developers.

Contractors Roger Holland and Fred Boatright, hired to clear the mangroves, told investigators they questioned the legality of the cuttings.

"Don't worry about it," Crane's report quoted Miller as telling Boatright. "I've got friends in the county office, and they will get it all straightened out."

The contractors were given immunity from prosecution in exchange for their testimony.

Miller and Burke declined comment. Court papers filed by their lawyer, Michael Resnick, contend that jail time for cutting trees violates the U.S. Constitution's prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment, and that the Florida Constitution bars counties from passing ordinances that call for jail sentences.

Satanic fears worry key

United Press International

BIG PINE KEY — Residents of Big Pine Key are packing Mace, signing up for self-defense courses, and even fleeing amid rumors that a Satanic cult is responsible for the murders of two women whose bodies had the hearts missing.

Two women and a 4-year-old girl have been murdered in the last year on Big Pine, Little Torch and No Name keys, a 10-mile string of islands in the lower Florida Keys. The two women's hearts were missing.

"The consistent story is that the murders had something to do with a satanic cult connected with drug shipments," The Miami Herald quoted bartender Nancy Banks as saying.

Banks, 37, moved to California last week.

Some women are buying on-the-spot Mace cans for $10 apiece and packing pistols. Others are taking a self-defense course at St. Peter's Church. Pastors there attend to people "troubled by a spirit of fear."

Monroe County Sheriff J.

Allison DeFoor downplays talk that drug cultists sacrificed the victims.

"We haven't ruled it out," he said. "But we haven't ruled out Martians either."

The first murder occurred July 2, 1988. Patty Lanza, 4, went to a party with her mother on Little Torch Key, Kim Normandy, who attended, said it was a big, wild affair where people "probably" were using cocaine. She said Patty's mother was confused about where the child was.

Sheriff's deputies found her body in the woods, her clothing and underwear nearby. An autopsy indicated she had been sexually assaulted with a blunt object then clubbed on the head with a different weapon.

Deputies believe her killing may not be related to the other two because of the difference in her age and the method of killing.

Her grandmother, Alice Glendinning, believes Patty's death is cult- or drug-related and asked homicide investigators to send her surviving grandchildren to a psychiatrist.

"Especially one of them. I think he knows something and is afraid to talk about it," she said.

The second murder occurred Dec. 17, 1988. Lisa Sanders, 20, was 5 feet 4 inches tall and weighed 105 pounds. She was recovering from leukemia and came to the Keys from Michigan to join her parents, who live next door to the Glendennings.

She went to a Friday night party attended by about 100 other people on a deserted road on No Name Key.

Her body was found the next day when deputies followed vultures to the site. A few days later, police found a pentagram on the roadway about 2,000 yards away.

Autopsies indicated she had "multiple skull fractures" and "knot marks" on her neck, consistent with a rope and strangulations. She also had been clubbed on the head, apparently with the butt of a pistol, and stabbed through both eyes.

The autopsy noted numerous "holes" in the body measuring up to three inches wide.

Drugged, unlicensed driver sues van she hit

United Press International

MIAMI — A driver who had no license and tested positive for cocaine, marijuana and alcohol is suing the owner of van she ran into, accusing the other driver of carelessness and negligence.

Miki Kyoto Squires was ticketed after smashing into the rear of an electrician's company van, according to a police report.

Three months after the accident, she and her husband Nigel filed a personal injury suit against the electrician and the driver of his van. The suit asks for a trial by jury and seeks in excess of $5,000, claiming their carelessness and negligence caused Squires "pain and suffering, disability, disfigurement and mental anguish."

Jack Reeve, owner of East Coast Electric Co., is outraged.

"It aggravates the absolute hell out of me," fumed Reeve, who said he already has spent about $5,000 defending the lawsuit.

"Someone with alcohol, cocaine, marijuana and no driver's license involved in a rear-end collision has no business suing anybody. This is completely ludicrous."

According to a Sunday report, Squires lawyers said both the driver of the van and the police report are mistaken. Squires did not rear-end the van, but was traveling in the opposite direction and smashed into the van after it attempted a U-turn in front of her, they said.

Squires' lawyer said the officer based his report solely on what the van driver, Raymond Holland, told him.

The accident occurred at 10:10 a.m. July 21, 1988. Squires had her 5-month-old daughter strapped into the front seat of her 1979 Lincoln. The child was uninjured.

Paramedics took Squires to Baptist Hospital, where she was treated for facial cuts and bruises, an ankle injury and a concussion.

Dade County Public Safety Officer Pablo Espinoza investigated the accident and ticketed Squires for driving without a license. She later said she never got around to renewing her license, which had expired in 1982.

Squires initially said she remembered nothing about the accident, then later said she had been driving in the opposite direction of the van.

Her attorney, Edward Magill, said people with head injuries frequently have a hard time remembering what happened and sorting out the sequence.

Squires, a former model who toured the world between 1980 and 1982 as a Japanese yo-yo champion, said she had about three beers the night before the accident.

She said she shared a "tiny, minuscule amount" of cocaine with a friend the afternoon before the accident, using only a small amount because she was still breastfeeding her baby daughter. Squires said she and her friend also smoked a marijuana cigarette that day.

The hospital lab put her blood-alcohol content at 0.03 and indicated she tested positive for cocaine and marijuana. Under Florida law, a driver is considered drunk with a blood-alcohol level of 0.10 or more.

Lotto prize rolls over to $13 million

UPI report

TALLAHASSEE — Nobody chose all six winning numbers in this week's Lotto drawing so the jackpot rolled over to $13 million for next week, lottery officials said Sunday.

The winning numbers drawn Saturday were 3, 9, 22, 28, 35 and 31.

Even though no ticket matched all six winning numbers, 248,411 tickets qualified for over $3 million in the other prize categories.

Payouts were:
 • 235 players matched five-of-six numbers to win $3,480.50 each
 • 12,990 players matched four-of-six numbers to win $92 each
 • 236,196 players matched three-of-six numbers to win $6 each

LOTTERY

TALLAHASSEE — The daily number Sunday in the Florida Lottery CASH 3 game was 863.

- Straight Play (numbers in exact order): $250 on a 50-cent bet, $500 on $1.
- Box 3 (numbers in any order): $80 for a 50-cent bet, $180 on $1.
- Box 6 (numbers in any order): $40 for a 50-cent bet, $80 on $1.
- Straight Box 3: $330 in order drawn, $80 in any order on a $1 bet.
- Straight Box 6: $290 in order drawn, $40 if picked in combination on $1 bet.

Police arrest rape suspect

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — A man who was stopped and questioned by Altamonte Springs police near the police station on Newbury Point at about 3:15 a.m. Sunday, was arrested in connection with a rape that occurred in that same area on Holly Street at about 10:50 p.m. Saturday.

Author Taylor, 30, of Orlando, is charged with aggravated sexual battery and carrying a concealed pocket knife, believed to have been used to threaten the 24-year victim.

The victim told police the rapist offered her a ride to her Caselberry home, but instead pulled her behind a building on Holly Avenue and raped her. She said she was knocked out twice during the attack. After the attack, she said the rapist took her pants and left her with two pair of pants spattered shorts.

Man jailed in battering of girl

CASELBERY — William Gregory Henson, 31, of 890 Reedy Cove, rural Caselberry, was arrested at home on a charge of child abuse at 8:16 p.m. Sunday, after he allegedly pulled by her hair Hadena Stilwell, 15, from her mother's car in the driveway.

Stilwell, of the same address, reported Henson beat her head against the ground and then dragged her into the house, where her mother Deridree Park, 31, also lives. Stilwell had gone to the car to wait for someone else to arrive to pick her up following an argument with Henson, deputies reported.

Two arrested in armed robbery

CASELBERY — The victim of an armed robbery in the parking lot of the Movie Emporium at Goldenrod Groves, rural Caselberry, met a Seminole County sheriff's deputy in the area at about 9:25 p.m. Saturday and described the robbers and their car.

That led to the capture of Red Bug Lake Road at about 10 p.m. of Marcus McKie and Torevona Ygett Richardson, both 18 of Gainesville.

McKie, accused as the gunman in the robbery is charged with armed robbery, use of a firearm in a felony and possession of a concealed gun.

Richardson is charged as a principal in the first degree to the robbery and for carrying a concealed gun.

Fraud charge closes talent agency

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Altamonte Springs police are investigating the local activities of a man arrested here on California warrant charges of three counts of forgery and grand theft.

The man arrested Sunday at First Class Management, a talent agency located at 710 E. Altamonte Drive, for about 6 weeks, has been identified by police as Todd Valentine, 27, although police spokesman Jeff Hawkins said he has several aliases.

Wife reports battering

LONGWOOD — City police here charged Christopher Shawn South, 23, of 983 Lorman Circle, Longwood, with battery spouse abuse after he allegedly beat his wife after she objected to his leaving their house.

Both South and his wife Tammy, police said, are on community control because of a prior criminal conviction, and are not allowed to leave home.

South was arrested at 11:15 p.m. Saturday after his wife was taken to South Seminole Community Hospital, Longwood, for treatment of her cuts and bruises.

Four arrested on DUI charges

SANFORD — The following persons face a charge of driving under the influence in Seminole County:

- Michael David Browning, 26, of Kissimmee, was arrested at 11:32 p.m. Saturday after his car was in an accident on State Road 436, Altamonte Springs.
- Scott Irvin Bridges, 32, of 2489 S. Palmetto Ave., Sanford, at 9:37 p.m. Sunday after his truck was seen speeding and weaving on U.S. Highway 17-92, Sanford.
- Andrew Michael Schaeffer, 28, of 101 Dublin Drive, Lake Mary, at 7 p.m. Saturday after his car was in an accident on State Road 434, Winter Springs.
- Robert Lee Hilton, 51, of 124 Fairway Drive, Sanford, at 1:34 a.m. Sunday after his car was seen weaving and traveling 30 mph in a 50 mph zone on Rhinehart Road, Lake Mary.

NAACP to seek removal, apology in 'wetback' remark controversy

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — The local NAACP chapter tonight will ask the city commission to remove a Sanford Housing Authority commissioner who referred to an Hispanic man as a "wetback" during a public meeting.

Turner Clayton, chairperson of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said his group tonight will ask for the removal of J. Wain Cummings, who made the remark during an Aug. 3 special meeting of the Sanford Housing Authority.

He said the group will also demand an investigation of Cummings' background and a public apology from City Commissioner A.A. McClanahan, who recommended Cummings for appointment.

McClanahan's recommendation to approve Cummings as a housing authority commissioner was unanimously approved by the commission April 24.

Cummings made the comment at a meeting to select a professional management team for the housing authority. During review of a proposal from R&P Management, a McAllen, Tex., firm owned by Robert Perez, Cummings said, "He's a wetback." He then apologized at the next meeting of the board Aug. 7.

Wetback is a derogatory term originally used to describe Mexicans who illegally entered the United States by crossing the Rio Grande River.

Perez is seeking legal action through the Mexican American Legal Defense Education Fund in San Antonio.

"I am an American citizen," Perez said last week. "That comment was uncalled for."

Guadalupe Luna, employment attorney for MALDEF, said Friday, "This is not a rare thing. This element is getting more hostile, more crude and more brave. Unfortunately for them, we have a lot of energy."

Luna said she will investigate the circumstances surrounding the comment before deciding what legal action to pursue.

Tonight's request will be the NAACP's second request for an investigation of the housing authority board. After the board fired executive director Elliot Smith last September, the group asked for a state attorney's investigation of alleged Sunshine Law violations and charges of conspiracy and theft.

Early release does not last long

United Press International

FORT LAUDERDALE — Floridians were outraged when they learned a man accused of gunning down two police officers in November had been released from prison because of overcrowding just 10 days earlier, but the case was hardly unique.

A newspaper study published

Sunday indicates that among 104 prisoners released that same day due to overcrowding, nearly half were arrested on new charges within six months, some as many as five times.

Foster visit policy might have helped

United Press International

TAMPA — If 2-year-old Bradley McGee's caseworkers had followed current procedure, his foster parents would have been allowed to visit him after he was returned to the parents now charged with fatally beating him.

Foster father Jim Kirkland is convinced such a visit might have saved Bradley's life.

"They had us convinced it was policy, it was law, that we couldn't see the kids afterward," Kirkland said. "I wish I had known, because with Bradley I would have made sure we saw him. And he might be alive today. We might have been able to help them."

When a caseworker took Bradley away from the Kirklands May 24, the couple was told they would never see him again.

Although many Health and Rehabilitative Services caseworkers don't realize it, department guidelines actually encourage foster parents to visit their charges after the children leave, an HRS spokesman said in a report published Sunday.

When a child is not weaned away from a foster parent, it can have the same emotional impact as breaking a bone, said Albert J. Soinit, author and professor of pediatrics and psychology at Yale University's Child Study Center.

"Old school" thinking was that an abrupt end to children's ties with foster parents helped them bond with new caretakers, said HRS spokesman Steve Konicki.

But HRS Secretary Greg Coler agrees with experts who now advise otherwise, Konicki said. Children's ties with foster parents become an important part of their lives and should be recognized, he said.

"The theory was back then that you make a clean break," Konicki said. "But at this point that's not our philosophy."

Cane workers sue over foreign labor

BELLE GLADE — Cane growers are using thousands of imported Caribbean workers to push U.S. residents out of jobs they want, two recent federal lawsuits have charged.

According to the Miami Herald, a group of 32 Haitian Americans claims the Okeelanta Corp., one of the area's largest cane-growing companies, fired or refused to hire them for jobs planting sugar cane over the past two seasons. The suits, filed six weeks ago, were brought on behalf of as many as 700 similarly situated western Palm Beach County residents.

"Sugar cane planting is a very lucrative job for these people," said Greg Schell, an attorney for Florida Rural Legal Services. "This is a job they love and need ... and from which they have been excluded."

Under federal farm labor laws, resident aliens and U.S. citizens are entitled to hiring preference over foreigners in any job they seek. But the government's H-2A program allows sugar cane companies to import foreign labor if they first certify that they were unable to fill the jobs with domestic laborers.

Most of the plaintiffs in the federal suits are resident aliens, newly arrived Haitians who have taken the first steps toward full citizenship.

South Florida's cane workers have long maintained that U.S. workers regard cane harvesting as too strenuous and hazardous. Though sugar companies advertise jobs, they say U.S. workers don't respond.

Despite the job's hardships, thousands of caribbean workers line up for the chance to make American dollars here and bring them back to their economically anemic homelands.

More than 10,000 Caribbean islanders travel each year to south Florida for the five-month harvest season, usually living in housing provided by the company.

Cane planting, though, is less strenuous than cane cutting, and one of the most lucrative farm jobs in south Florida.

An attorney for Okeelanta denies they turn away job-hungry Americans. The company is often forced to import Caribbean workers because domestic help is hard to find, said Elizabeth DuFreane, a lawyer for Okeelanta.

"We will hire anybody who wants to plant cane," she said.

Owners register pit bulls under new ordinance

United Press International

MIAMI — Dade residents registered their pit bulls "under protest" by the dozens Sunday, rather than refuse to obey the county's new pit bull control ordinance.

The ordinance, which requires pit bull owners to keep their pets securely locked behind a fence with a "dangerous dog" sign and to have insurance in case their dogs attack someone.

As they registered their dogs and paid their $50 fee at the Dade County Animal Control center, the owners predicted the Metro commission would suffer a political backlash from angry dog owners.

"This commission has woken up a sleeping giant," said Bob Sanchez, president of Responsible Dog Owners of Dade County. Sanchez said the group, formed four months ago, has 400 members.

Sanchez and other pit bull owners unsuccessfully fought the ordinance before the Metro Commission and in court, saying they were being unfairly singled out and that the commission should be targeting dangerous dogs in general, not any specific breed. They argued unsuccessfully that it was impossible to define pit bull.

The ordinance declares pit bulls "a danger to the health and welfare to the citizens of Dade County." It was enacted earlier this year after several highly publicized pit bull attacks.

It's not clear how many will comply with the new ordinance, which goes into effect Monday. Zoraida Diaz-Albertini, chief of Metro-Dade's animal services division, said only 102 of the 2,000 pit bulls licensed in the county had been registered by Saturday afternoon.

Thrift reform, finally

After years of bowing to the savings and loan lobby, an embarrassed Congress has put together a credible bill to clean up the financial wreck of the thrift industry. Although the legislation hammered out by a House-Senate conference committee will not save the nation a $300 billion bill for government's past regulatory failure, it looks a good bet to prevent a repeat of the breakdown. That achievement is too important to allow it to be stalled now by a largely irrelevant budget dispute.

In final form, the S&L bill signed into law last week by President Bush, closely follows the lines of his proposal of last winter. It sets up a new financing mechanism, largely funded by the taxpayers, to liquidate about 500 insolvent thrifts and make good on the government's insurance promise to their depositors.

Almost no financial expert believes that the final cost of reacting depositors can be held to the $164 billion the Bush administration project over the next 30 years. The final cost is likely to be double that, in part because the bill probably doesn't contain enough money to close all insolvent thrifts, institutions that are currently running up losses of $12 million a day. But this plan is a start.

Although the bill's financing is shaky, its regulatory structure is sound. Over the objections of much of the industry, Congress approved though new capital standards for thrifts and tighter restrictions on risky investments. That will assure that thrifts won't be allowed, as they were earlier this decade, to gamble other people's savings without putting significant amounts of their own cash at risk.

S&Ls failing to meet the capital standards can be denied deposit insurance or brought under federal supervision.

To be sure, those stiff rules will make survival difficult for many small or marginal thrifts. But shrinking the industry is a small price to pay for restoring confidence in the safety of the system.

The only question remaining for the government is how honest to be about the reform's budget implications.

The conference committee, rejecting the position of the Senate and the president, placed the bill's spending on-budget but excluded it from the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings accounting that sets the nation's annual deficit target. Because the Treasury can borrow money at a lower rate than the off-budget agency the President would like to create, putting the rescue on-budget will save some money.

But the president says that an on-budget bailout exempted from Gramm-Rudman-Hollings sends financial markets a signal that the government is no longer serious about fiscal discipline.

That argument makes no sense. New spending increases the real deficit whether it goes on-budget or off-budget.

Florida holds 1 key to GOP's future

MODESTO, Calif. — If the Republicans ever hope to gain control of the House of Representatives, they must begin to capture seats long controlled by Democrats. The resignations of Speaker Jim Wright of Texas and Democratic Whip Tony Coelho of California, and the death of Florida Rep. Claude Pepper, will provide the GOP with three such chances in the coming weeks.

The results in these three races barely will affect the balance of power in the House, where Democrats hold a 257-175 edge. But the Republicans must start winning such contests if their congressional campaigns are to have credibility.

The GOP thought it had identified some winning issues in George Bush's sweeping victory in November — ones that could be translated into House victories. New staffers were added to the National Republican Congressional Committee, including — at a huge salary — former White House political director Ed Rollins. Its coffers overflowing with contributions, the NRCC faced the future with unbridled optimism.

But 1989 has turned into a surprisingly poor year for the GOP. This past spring, special elections were held to fill openings in three House seats. Republicans talked sweep, but they ended up losing two out of three elections, including Dan Quayle's old seat in Indiana, which they had held for years. The GOP's whole House campaign strategy for the 1990s will be thrown off unless it can reverse the results of the spring by winning at least two out of the three seats now up for grabs.

Ironically, the Republicans' best chance is in the contest where the Democrats' ethics problems will have the least impact: the south Florida race to replace Pepper.

The Miami district represented by Pepper for over two decades has, in recent years, become predominantly Cuban. The Cubans overwhelmingly are Republican. The GOP has nominated a Cuban-born state senator — Ilseana Ros-Lehtinen, a "Little Havana" favorite. Given the heavily GOP makeup of the district, Ros-Lehtinen should become the first Hispanic woman ever elected to Congress. Her election, however, because of the unusual makeup of the district, will not have anything approaching national impact.

In similar fashion, Jim Wright's Fort Worth, Texas, district (where primaries were held Saturday) is heavily Democratic. The Democrats are expected to hold the seat easily. Wright has endorsed a local lawyer and former aide to Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, Pete Geren.

Political pros are focusing on the contest for Tony Coelho's seat here in the San Joaquin Valley — California's agriculture heartland. The 15th District stretches from the suburbs of Fresno in the north to Modesto in the south. Given the demographics of the district, it seems almost a textbook example of the kind of seat the GOP must capture if it is going to have any realistic chance of becoming the majority party in the House.

The GOP is pouring money and manpower into the district. But Democratic Congressional Committee spokesman Howard Schloss says, "We know it's going to be a tough fight, but we're confident that we can hold the seat."

Republicans must win congressional campaigns for credibility.

Roads: jamming of America

ST. JAMES, Mich. — The drive from Chicago to northern Michigan illustrates precisely the condition of America's road transportation system.

With the last legs of the interstate highway system complete, hours have been cut off the travel time. What was once a tedious trip has become a quick and pleasurable journey.

Except for the start, that is. Where I-80 and I-94 are being repaired and upgraded in the Chicago-Gary commuter corridor, traffic was snarled and tempers strained. Not just vacationers but scores of semi-trailers and smaller trucks and vans were mired in long lines, at who knows what cost to their companies and the overall economy.

The transport system — or infrastructure, as the current fashion calls it — had been a major topic at the National Governors' Association meeting in Chicago. In a report released there, outgoing NGA Chairman Gerald L. Baliles wrote, "How well this nation moves its commerce, how quickly, efficiently and effectively our system transports goods and conveys people, will dramatically influence America's future competitiveness as a trading nation. Unfortunately, when it comes to transportation, America is stuck in neutral."

That judgment by the Democratic governor of Virginia was challenged directly by Transportation Secretary Samuel K. Skinner. After almost 35 years and about $122 billion, Skinner told the governors, work is virtually complete on the 43,000-mile interstate system President Eisenhower envisaged as the centerpiece of transportation policy for his era. Plans for the next generation of investment, he said, will be laid out in the comprehensive national transportation-policy statement he has promised to deliver by next January.

Rhetoric aside, there is no substantive difference between Skinner and the governors on the scale of the problem or the needed investment. Repair of highway bridges will cost two-thirds as much as the original construction of the interstates, Skinner said. Billions more will be needed to modernize the air-transport system, after a 15-year hiatus between the completion of the last new airport in 1974 and the recent approval of a new terminal outside Denver.

Updating sea transport, railroads and mass transit will add massively to the bill. "The price to bring America's transportation infrastructure into reasonable condition within the next 20 years is estimated by a number of authoritative studies to range from $1 trillion to $3 trillion, requiring annual outlays in the range of $50 billion to $150 billion," said the governors' task force headed by Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson (R).

Even the lowest of those figures requires a substantial increase in present spending. And the top estimate would more than triple federal, state and local investment. If Skinner delivers an honest assessment of the nation's needs, as there is every reason to expect, the Bush administration will have to recommend annual spending on transportation as high as the overall cost of the savings-and-loan bailout.

Unlike the bailout, the transportation investment can pay real economic dividends, not just make up the cost of operators' greed and government laxity. The evidence is clear that there is a direct link between public-works investment and the productivity growth upon which America's prosperity and competitiveness depend. The single most striking graph in Thompson's task force report shows parallel shrinkage in public capital-investment and productivity growth from the high point of the 1960s to a level in this decade at least 50 percent below the earlier standard.

Real as the rewards will be, you can still expect a major political debate starting next year on who will pay the cost of improved transport. In his speech, Skinner almost nonchalantly drew attention to the fact that he had lobbied personally in two states this year to help Thompson and California Gov. George Deukmejian (R) secure sharply higher gas taxes to finance ambitious transport programs.

In California, where traffic congestion has become a major political issue and a giant threat to future economic growth, Deukmejian is seeking voter approval of a 10-year, $18.5 billion program. Translate that to the national level and it would be a commitment half again as large as the 30-year cost of the interstates.

The spectacle of a federal Cabinet official lobbying state legislatures to raise state taxes did not go unnoticed. As New York Gov. Mario M. Cuomo (D) noted in an interview, actions like Skinner's send a clear message that the Bush administration acknowledges that needed national investments will require higher taxes. But it would prefer others to levy them.

The states are not ducking their responsibilities. But a national need will require national resources.

Transportation investment can pay real economic dividends.

Gorbachev faces tough opponent

MOSCOW — One by one, Mikhail Gorbachev is detaching his Kremlin adversaries until he stands alone, unchallenged, at the pinnacle of power. Yet he still confronts the most formidable adversary of them all — the faceless bureaucrat, operating in the obscurity of the cubicle, shuffling official forms, deciding who can run afoul of regulations.

The revolutionaries who overthrew the czar entrusted their revolution to commissars and clerks. So feverishly did they multiply that they number more than 18 million.

They promised to liberate the masses from serfdom. Instead, they subjugated the masses to a more degrading tyranny. They demanded the rigid observance of rules and procedures, the interminable seeking of permission for any divergence and the relentless prosecution of those who resisted. To enforce their rules, they kept strict watch on the populace. They developed the capacity to concentrate an infinite variety of eyes and ears — electronic, mechanical and human — on any individual who might invite special scrutiny. The bureaucracy's electronic devices and intrusive interrogations gradually extinguished the right to privacy in the Soviet Union.

All this was justified in the name of protecting the masses from exploitation. Yet, under communism, the commissars and their anonymous clerks achieved new heights of exploitation. They multiplied into 18 million bureaucrats living off the sweat of the workers, obstructing rather than contributing to their production, and skimming off the cream for themselves.

The bureaucracy might be described as a glacier that has frozen the progress of Soviet society.

Now Gorbachev has climbed the icy mass with a flame thrower. He has achieved some thawing at the top wherever he points the flame. But he has had little effect on the great glacier underfoot.

It remains a solid mountain of ice, which has resisted the flames of perestroika and glasnost. On our visit here, we found Soviet managers who are eager to engage in free enterprise.

But they are obstructed by the bureaucrats, who inundate them with forms to fill out and regulations to comply with. Those who fight their way through the paperwork are confronted with local taxes, which have already put many of them out of business.

The bureaucrats who have immobilized the Soviet system have their counterparts in America. Just as Gorbachev's reformers are outmanned by bureaucrats, so is President Bush outgunned by his troops. No president has been able to manage the bureaucracy, let alone curb its growth or diminish its domain.

American bureaucrats have perfected the technique of solemnly pondering directives from on high, forever reviewing and revising the fine print, on the assumption that an unwanted directive will go away if it is studied long enough.

In the end, the president departs and the bureaucrats abide. Any ground they lose in an encounter with a president, they will regain later when the president leaves or focuses attention elsewhere.

In the Soviet Union, Gorbachev at least is trying to break the power of the bureaucracy. We cannot avoid the conclusion that America needs a perestroika, too.

The most formidable adversary (is) the faceless bureaucrat, operating in the obscurity of the cubicle.

Columbia wraps up mission Jupiter

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. — The crew of the shuttle Columbia glided to a triumphant desert touchdown Sunday, closing out a successful 17-day mission and presumably leaving a spy satellite behind in orbit.

Hounded by twin sonic booms, NASA's original shuttle dropped like a stone out of a clear sky after a high-speed plunge across Southern California, gliding to a powerless landing at 8:57 a.m. PDT on dry tarmac runway 17 at Edwards Air Force Base.

Commander Brewster Shaw, 44, appeared to have trouble bringing the ship's nose down, and at one point, the nose even seemed to rise slightly as instant before touchdown.

But a few seconds later, the 100-ton spacecraft settled to a smooth landing and the fifth post-Challenger flight rolled to a dusty stop, bringing an end to a five-day, one-hour mission that spanned some 80 orbits and 2 million miles since blastoff last Tuesday from the Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

"A super team and a great machine! Welcome home Columbia," astronaut Frank Culbertson radioed from mission control in Houston.

It was the first flight for Columbia, NASA's original shuttle, since the Challenger disaster and its successful return to Earth signals the end of the accident recovery process, giving the space agency three operational shuttles for the first time in 3 1/2 years.

Despite the importance of the moment to NASA, Columbia's mission ended like it began, under a cloak of Pentagon-imposed secrecy. Edwards was closed to the public and only about 200 family members, friends and VIPs were on hand for Columbia's return to Earth.

Even Culbertson's congratulations to the crew was blacked out and had to be relayed to reporters by a NASA spokesman.

But Air Force Col. Shaw, co-pilot Richard "Dick" Richards, a 43-year-old Navy commander, and their crewmates — Navy Cmdr. David Loestma, 40, Army Lt. Col. James Adamson, 43, and Air Force Maj. Mark Brown, 57 — were all smiles after climbing from the shuttle about an hour after landing.

Television views of the orbiter showed a few "dings" in the ship's heat-shield tile system, and at least one tile that was missing altogether, but no major damage was apparent.

A complete assessment was not expected until Monday, but Ann Montgomery, the engineer in charge of Columbia's flight processing, told Shaw: "It looks beautiful! You brought it back looking good."

Left behind in orbit was what has been widely reported to be an advanced reconnaissance satellite believed to have been launched into an orbit allowing it to fly over 80 percent of the Soviet Union.

The satellite presumably was launched Tuesday, about seven hours after blastoff, but the exact deployment time has not been confirmed.

Because of the military nature of the mission, NASA refused to release any details.

NASA

"Trying to do that with all the extra caution we have in the system now is pretty tough. We're working all of that to try to take out things that we don't think are necessary, but at the same time to keep in things we do."

NASA has three space shuttles but only two "orbiter processing facilities" — high-tech hangars — where shuttles can be fully serviced between missions.

A third hangar is used for some work, but technicians are constantly forced to move orbiters from one hangar to another depending on what work has to be done — a far from efficient procedure.

While the third hangar eventually will be upgraded, NASA currently has major problems scheduling required work.

Throw in tight budgets, limited manpower, tight restrictions on overtime and the endless paperwork required in the post-Challenger era and the result is not difficult to predict: trouble meeting the flight

The mission has generated media controversy in recent weeks because Galileo is equipped with a pair of "radioisotope thermoelectric generators" — RTGs — that produce electricity from the decay of plutonium 238 dioxide.

The United States has launched some two dozen such plutonium power packs since the 1960s, but anti-nuclear activists, remembering the 1986 Challenger disaster, have vowed to protest Galileo's launch aboard Atlantis.

NASA, however, has conducted an exhaustive series of tests that show the RTGs used by Galileo would easily survive a Challenger-class explosion and even in worst-case failure scenarios, engineers say only trace amounts of plutonium dioxide could be released into the environment.

For Atlantis skipper Donald Williams, what small risk is involved is worth the rich return in science.

"I'm convinced, the crew is convinced, that it is absolutely safe to fly with the RTG power sources on the Galileo spacecraft," he said. "The return we're going to get from this thing is so much more than the risk involved that it's worth doing."

"This is something that this schedule. But NASA managers are convinced the paperwork can be reduced and that some pre-launch requirements can be eliminated now that relatively normal flight operations have resumed.

Still, the sheer amount of work now required to assemble and check out a space shuttle for launch is staggering.

Launch director Robert Steck said 3.5 million man hours went into preparing Discovery for the first post-Challenger launch last September. The number went down to about 1.7 million man hours for the next flight, but Steck said it probably will never go lower than 1 million man hours per processing flow.

Already managers are expressing doubt that all three of the remaining missions planned for 1989 will make it off the ground by the end of the year.

But agency bosses insist safety will not be compromised, regardless of pressure to meet the launch schedule.

Only time will tell.

country needs to do, this world needs to do, go out and explore the place where we live and return that knowledge and see if we can understand where we came from."

Joining Williams for the 31st shuttle mission will be co-pilot Michael McCulley, Franklin Chang-Diaz, Shannon Lucid and Ellen Baker.

Because of the positions of Earth and Jupiter, and the power of Galileo's rocket booster, NASA must launch Atlantis before Nov. 21 or the flight will have to be delayed for at least two years while the planets return to favorable launch positions.

For that reason, NASA is under tremendous pressure to get Atlantis ready for its flight as soon as possible to allow time to handle unexpected problems.

"Previous (planetary) missions have been fast flybys or orbiters to single planets," said Galileo project scientist Torrence Johnson. "This is our first real chance to put a spacecraft in orbit about what amounts to a mini solar system and do a really in-depth survey of it."

Following Atlantis' launch, NASA plans to send the shuttle Discovery back into orbit Nov. 19 on another blacked-out military mission to launch a large Pentagon satellite.

Finally, NASA will close out 1989 with the launch of Columbia on a high-priority mission to launch a military communications satellite and to retrieve a school-bus-size science satellite left in orbit in 1984 to expose a variety of materials to the harsh environment of space.

The Long Duration Exposure Facility, known by its initials and pronounced "el-deaf," originally was to have been picked up after a year in orbit, but the retrieval was put on hold by the Challenger disaster.

together. The response from parents in both Seminole and Orange County has been overwhelming. When the first Unicare Day Care Center opens its doors next month, there will be nearly 100 students enrolled. There is a waiting list of 200 handicapped children plus their siblings, which brings the list to more than 1,000.

"We are hoping someone can donate a larger facility to us," she said.

Bennett, who founded Unicare in her garage, sees the organization as a "force of advocacy" for parents with physically handicapped or profoundly mentally handicapped children. She speaks from more than a decade of experience working with her son, and as a volunteer with United Cerebral Palsy and other organizations.

Bennett said there is a great shortage of appropriate toys for older children with mental handicaps as well as children with physical disabilities. She has designed a line of special toys to meet their needs.

There are puzzles and games that help children develop gross and fine motor skills as well as activities for all ages.

"People were always asking me, 'what can I get Danny for his birthday?'" she explained. "They can't just go to Toys R Us and pick something out. There isn't anything there."

After getting advice from many professionals, Bennett is ready to begin manufacturing the toys. She hopes to employ handicapped adults.

"Often there is no work for these adults except, maybe, at Goodwill," she said.

Unicare will open their first facility at 729 Eldridge Street in Orlando in September. Bennett said they hope to expand into Seminole County one day to fill the need here.

They are certified by 4-C and licensed by HRS. Tuition will be based on a sliding scale dependent on family income.

Bennett said the non-profit day care center needs donations of everything from cribs to highchairs to volunteer hours.

"We want to serve the community with the best," she said.

Longwood

Planners concentrated this weekend on the land use element. The land use element designates future property uses which will guide the type of zoning to be used. It is not the same as zoning regulations, which control what type of development is built on the property.

One of the changes is intended to create an "activity core" at the intersection of County Road 427 and State Road 434 to make it "economically attractive for developers," according to Urban Planner Javier Omana of Ivey, Bennett, Harris and Walls Inc., Orlando, a consulting firm which has been retained by the city since 1986 to assist with the plan.

Omana called the proposed activity core a "move towards the future" to attract redevelopment and "create a downtown area which will complement the historic district."

About 85 to 90 percent of the city is built out, but there exists a substantial amount of un-developed acreage that is vacant within the proposed activity core, according to Nagle. The activity center would be "pedestrian-oriented" with shops and retail stores.

"We're trying to create a so-called downtown area. I think Longwood needs to get a name for itself," Nagle told the commissioners.

The state is requiring more specific information and analysis of existing conditions and future growth projections. Also, stricter concurrency standards levied by the state government will require that counties and cities maintain adequate infrastructure and have the means to fund them. The concurrency aspect will become effective in Longwood in 1991, according to Nagle.

"This plan will meet about 80 percent of the state's requirements which take effect in Longwood in 1991," Nagle said.

The existing plan was adopted in 1979 and the land use map was adopted in 1982.

The first public hearing on the comprehensive plan is scheduled for Aug. 21.

Storms hinder efforts to recover crash victims

United Press International

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia — Foul weather delayed efforts today by U.S. helicopter crews to recover bodies from the shattered wreckage of a plane that carried Rep. Mickey Leland and 15 others. No survivors were reported.

Highland storms prevented two U.S. Air Force Blackhawk helicopters from reaching a rough landing zone less than 1 mile from the burned and fragmented wreckage of the plane presumed to have been carrying Leland and 15 others on a visit to the Fugido refugee camp, U.S. embassy spokesman Jim Haley said.

The Twin Otter disappeared a week earlier in stormy weather. Searchers found it Sunday in dense brush on the steep face of a 5,000-foot mountain about 35 miles short of its destination.

Air crews reported an "awesome" scene of complete destruction, and officials said nobody could have survived the crash and subsequent fire when the twin-engine plane slammed into the mountainside.

Crews dropped by line found twelve bodies at the scene Sunday, but none was identified or removed from the site before encroaching darkness cut efforts short, Haley said. Bodies of four others presumed killed in the crash were not seen.

The two Blackhawks lifted off early today from Addis Ababa for the site some 370 miles west of the capital, but storms in between forced them to turn back, Haley said.

At least one U.S. Air Force C-130 went to the town Gambela

["The plane went in nose-first, right into the rocks. They told us everyone died instantaneously.]

near the wreckage to unload equipment and support personnel, he said. An undetermined number of Ethiopian helicopters already were in the area, where the weather was adequately clear, and were ferrying U.S. personnel from Gambela to the site 34 miles to the east, Haley said.

The Blackhawks were to try again to reach the rugged site, Haley said. Once there they were to deliver medical, forensic and search and rescue experts who would determine how best to remove the bodies.

It was unclear whether the remains would be winched from the rugged site or taken to the rough-hewn landing zone for removal, he said.

Once recovered, the bodies were to be flown by helicopter to the far western town Dembedolo, then by C-130 to Addis Ababa, Navy Capt. Stan Boyer said in Washington.

From there, they were to be flown by C-141 Starlifter to a U.S. base near Madrid and then to the United States by midweek, Boyer said.

Officials earlier said recovering the bodies from the plane that took off with Leland, eight other Americans and seven Ethiopians aboard would be arduous and would take time.

"How much time I don't know," said Haley. "It is just extremely rugged territory."

Rep. Gary Ackerman, D-N.Y., was aboard the helicopter that found the wreckage and reported by radio that there appeared to be no survivors.

"The plane went in nose-first, right into the rocks. They told us everyone died instantaneously," he later told reporters.

"There will be some difficulty in identifying some of the people," Ackerman said. "Our friend Mickey Leland was definitely among them, as his personal belongings, a couple of things anyway, were there."

U.S. Embassy spokesman Jim Haley said none of the bodies had been positively identified.

In Washington, President Bush and Secretary of State James Baker expressed their condolences to Leland's pregnant wife, Alison, and the relatives of those aboard the plane.

"It's a sadness for everybody," Bush said, calling Leland "an outstanding man, a man of great humor."

Bush lauded the efforts of the search parties and had special praise for the "great cooperation" provided by the Marxist government of Ethiopia.

There was no immediate word on any formal Ethiopian investigation of the crash, but the United States offered technical assistance.

Leland's plane apparently disintegrated on impact, Houdek said.

Officials will escort body home

United Press International

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Tom Foley assembled a congressional delegation to Ethiopia to escort Rep. Mickey Leland's remains back to the United States once they are positively identified.

Foley arranged for the escort plane to leave the United States today for the Ethiopian capital of Addis Ababa, said Rep. Ron Dellums, D-Calif. He said members of the Texas Democrat's family will not be on the flight.

The escort will be made up of four Democrats and two Republicans, including Bill Emerson, R-Mo., the ranking minority member of the House Select Committee on Hunger, which Leland served as chairman, and Rep. William Gray, D-Pa., Dellums said.

Friends and colleagues of Leland, meanwhile, expressed grief when they learned that the plane carrying the congressman and 15 others slammed into the side of a mountain in Ethiopia, apparently leaving no survivors. The plane disappeared Aug. 7 during a flight to a refugee camp in a remote area of Ethiopia. Leland was making one of his frequent trips to aid starving refugees.

Sen. Al Gore, D-Tenn., a friend and colleague of Leland, called him "a man of great accomplishment and vision."

Lower interest rates advocated

United Press International

WASHINGTON — Doubts about how long the economy will continue to sputter along its current growth path have evoked a rare expression of White House concern over the tight-fisted monetary policy of the Federal Reserve Board.

Appearing Sunday on the NBC News program "Meet the Press," budget director Richard Darman, who serves as a top economic adviser to President Bush, advocated lower interest rates by the Fed to fend off any threat of recession.

Though public criticism by the administration is unusual, the message was unmistakable as Darman urged the Fed to stop worrying about inflation and "be more attentive to the need to avoid tipping this economy into recession."

"I think it's quite important that the Fed appreciate that growth is indeed fundamental to the health of this economy," he said, "and that they not become obsessed with concern about things going well for too long."

It was the most public indication to date of anxiety that the tight money policy pursued until recently under Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan could choke off growth altogether and end a history-making economic expansion.

Over the past few months, Bush has denied on repeated occasions that he was upset with the anti-inflation strategy that has guided the Fed's actions on interest rates.

Amid talk that the slowing economy may be headed for worse than the "soft landing" desired by the Fed, even as the stock market soars to record highs, Darman hinted at discord over how to keep the economy on a course to further prosperity.

"I think the Fed has had a difficult job," he said. "I'm fearful that they may have been a little bit too concerned that things have been going well and that they may have been a little bit tight. If we do have a recession, I think it will be because they erred on the side of caution."

"Insofar as we are concerned about recession," he added, "we should all worry a little bit about the Fed."

Told that his remarks sounded like an appeal for lower interest rates, Darman said, "That would be a fair conclusion."

At the same time, he insisted there is no reason a recession need occur "if there's sensible management on the part of ourselves and the Fed."

Run-off election for Wright seat

FORT WORTH, Texas — Former House Speaker Jim Wright, forced to resign his post earlier this year over ethics charges, said he would endorse the Democrat front-runner in a special election for his vacant seat.

Wright said late Saturday he would back Pete Geren, who came in second in Saturday's special election to Republican Bob Lanier, a pediatrician and host of the nationally syndicated TV show "60-second Housecall."

The two candidates will face a run-off election, probably on Sept. 9.

Wright refused to endorse any of the eight candidates in the open election, but quickly made his choice for the runoff.

In a widely applauded appearance at Geren's headquarters, Wright said: "You (campaign workers) have work to do and I want to ask you to do it because here's the man I want to be my successor."

"I predict that if you send Pete Geren to Washington, he'll be there for a long time and he'll be one of the great leaders of Congress by the time he gets through," the former congressman said.

Nobel laureate William Shockley dies

STANFORD, Calif. — Dr. William Shockley, who won a Nobel Prize as co-inventor of the transistor and later became a proponent of controversial race theories, died of cancer at the age of 79, his family confirmed.

He died Saturday at his home on the Stanford University campus.

Shockley always said he had no memory of writing a note Dec. 23, 1947, that told colleagues in the Bell Telephone Laboratory: "I hope you can break away and come to see some effects."

Those "effects" are now considered the birth of the transistor, which revolutionized the electronics industry and modern civilization. The progeny of the Bell researchers' first transistor is now found in almost every modern electronic device from wristwatches, hearing aids and washing machines to cars and satellites.

Shockley himself called the critical date Nov. 17, 1947, when a half-page entry in the notebook of colleague Walter Brattain "lit the fuse." A flashing light on a drop of electrolytic solution on a piece of silicon had produced a voltage on the silicon surface that was detected.

Balloon falls 3,300 ft. killing 13 passengers

United Press International

ALICE SPRINGS, Australia — Several of the 13 balloonists who fell 3,300 feet to their deaths apparently jumped away from the plummeting basket in a vain attempt for "a better chance" as others simply embraced, a rescuer said.

One former world champion balloonist called the Sunday sunrise accident the worst in ballooning history.

Witnesses said the balloon "folded and fell to earth" from 3,300 feet about 9 miles south of the Alice Springs airport in the vast "outback" of central Australia. The balloon's descent lasted 51 seconds, officials said.

"The balloon fell to the ground like a streamer," witness Mike Crofts said.

All 13 people aboard the balloon died in the crash, and more than one appeared to have jumped away from the falling balloon, rescue worker Kezia Purich said.

"There were a few (bodies) away from the actual basket. Perhaps they may have jumped out of the basket thinking they had a better chance," she said.

"But the people in the basket were all huddled together with arms around each other. Effectively, the balloon just dropped out of the sky."

Eleven of the dead were from Australia, officials said. A Danish tourist identified by police as Priben Jacobson, 25, and an Italian tourist whose name was not disclosed also perished.

"We all prayed for their safety and began to land our balloon some distance away," said Dr. Irene Fielder, a German tourist who watched the crash from another balloon. "It completely collapsed before it hit the ground."

Moslem offensive launched in Beirut

United Press International

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Syrian-backed Moslem and Palestinian forces launched a large-scale ground offensive on territory held by the Christian army at Souk El Gharb and engaged in fierce hand-to-hand combat, authorities said.

Both sides claimed success Sunday in what military experts said was the most fierce battle since the current cycle of violence erupted in March with Gen. Michel Aoun of the Christian-led army announcing a "war of liberation" to drive out Syrian troops from Lebanon.

Aoun's army claimed to have inflicted 100 casualties among the attackers, and the Syrian-backed forces said it "wiped out" a core Christian brigade, but there were no independent casualty reports.

Security sources said the attack Sunday coincided with intensive rocket and artillery exchanges in and around the devastated capital Beirut in which at least 20 people were killed or wounded.

Fouad Turk, Lebanese Ambassador to Paris, thanked France for launching a diplomatic initiative designed to halt the worsening fighting and said the international community may have to impose a cease-fire on Syria "by force."

"No appeal for a cease-fire has had any success," Turk said in an interview with France-Info Radio. "An extraordinary initiative is needed to oblige Syria to observe a cease-fire."

"You need to impose the cease-fire on Syria by force," he said.

European satellite stranded

PARIS — In a disappointing setback for the European Space Agency, scientists failed in their third attempt to fire the on-board rocket motors of a crippled astronomy satellite.

The $384 million Hipparcos robotic spacecraft was launched Tuesday atop an Ariane 4 rocket from a jungle launch pad in French Guiana on the northern coast of South America. But its motor failed as the spacecraft passed through the high point, or "apogee," of its initial elliptical orbit.

In a statement from its European Space Operations Center at Darmstadt, West Germany, ESA officials reported, "On Sunday at 3:45 p.m., a new firing attempt was undertaken to reproduce the conditions of the preceding attempts with the aim of obtaining more data. The new attempt... was not successful."

Hipparcos, which stands for High Precision Parallax Collecting Satellite, was built to map the locations of more than 120,000 stars — and create the most accurate star catalogue ever assembled.

The loss of Hipparcos would be a major disappointment to the European Space Agency, which has gained great prestige in the international space community with other sophisticated science satellites, such as the Giotto probe to Halley's comet.

Walesa and others may form government

WARSAW, Poland — Poland's Communist Party could be a minor player — or left out altogether — if plans for a new government emerge from talks between Solidarity leader Lech Walesa and leaders of two key parties, sources said.

Walesa traveled from his home in Gdansk to the capital to prepare for discussions Monday with Peasant Party leader Roman Malinowski and Democratic Party leader Jerzy Jozwiak, the sources said.

The meetings culminate a week of lower-level consultations between Solidarity and the two parties, which now form the ruling coalition with the communists but have threatened to leave the alliance and join the union-led opposition.

Walesa also was expected to hold a meeting with new Prime Minister Czeslaw Kiszczak, who announced Saturday he was unable to meet his own two-week deadline for forming a communist-led government and asked the Solidarity leader for a meeting to help resolve the crisis.

The Polish parliament, or Sejm, was to meet Wednesday and Thursday to formally approve Kiszczak's Cabinet. It was not clear if the session would take place.

On arriving in Warsaw, Walesa made it clear he felt there was no room for the Communist Party in a Solidarity-led government.

"This means the PWUP (Communist Party) must go into opposition," he said.

From United Press International reports.

IN BRIEF

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Royals run wild on Blue Jays

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Brad Wellman scored on a wild-pitch strike out to Bo Jackson to start a four-run rally in the seventh inning Sunday and lead the Kansas City Royals to an 8-3 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Tom Gordon, who also allowed a strike-out victim to contribute to a rally, improved to 14-4. He allowed seven hits and five strike outs over seven innings. He was aided by Danny Tartabull's 14th home run of the year, Jackson's 23rd homer and two innings of relief from Jeff Montgomery.

Toronto tied the score 3-3 in the seventh but the Royals used a rally that included two bunts, three walks, three hits and a wild pitch to score four runs.

South Korea upends U.S.

LOS ANGELES — South Korea beat the U.S. National Soccer team 2-1 Sunday in the consolation match of the Marlboro Cup.

The United States, now 2-3-1 and quickly falling out of contention for one of the two berths available for advancement to the 1990 World Cup, fell behind 2-0 to South Korea 21 minutes into the match and was never able to bounce back.

The United States, which lost 2-0 to Juventus in an opening-round match, scored South Korea's first goal inadvertently when defenseman Jim Banks accidentally bounced the ball into the net while attempting to tap it to goalie David Vanole with 17:10 elapsed.

Four minutes later, South Korea's Seon Hong Hwang made it 2-0 with a shot past Vanole.

The United States finally scored its first goal of the tournament 60 minutes into the match when middle fielder John Harkes, off a free kick inside the penalty box, tapped a shot past goalie Poong Joo Kim.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Browning, Davis power Reds

HOUSTON — Tom Browning scattered six singles and Eric Davis drove in one run and scored another Sunday to lift the Cincinnati Reds to a 5-0 victory over the Houston Astros.

Browning, 11-10, walked four and struck out seven in recording his second shutout and sixth complete game of the season. It was Browning's 23rd victory in his last 28 decisions against western division teams.

Jim Clancy, 6-10, allowed three runs on four hits in four innings and lost for the sixth time in his last seven decisions.

Cincinnati made it 3-0 in the fourth. Davis singled and moved to second on a ground out.

Rolando Roomes moved Davis to third on an infield hit. Benzinger singled to score Davis and one out later Ron Oester singled to drive in Roomes.

On the field Sunday Pittsburgh topped Montreal 6-4; New York bested St. Louis 3-2; Philadelphia popped Chicago 5-3 and Los Angeles outlasted San Francisco 3-2 in 12 innings.

West Seminole eliminated by Dallas in Bronco playoff

By MARK BLYTHE
Herald sports writer

TAMPA — West Seminole's dream of its first World Series appearance fell short Sunday as Dallas handed it a heart-breaking 6-5 loss in the finals of the Bronco (11-12 year olds) All-Star Southeastern Zone Tournament played in Tampa.

West Seminole finished with a 12-3 tournament record, having won 12 consecutive games before dropping two straight losses to Dallas.

"We had a great post-season," West Seminole manager Joe Foranoco said. "I want to stress how proud of this team and how proud I am to have managed them. They never gave up and fell just short of another spectacular win."

West Seminole opened the tourney with come-from-behind victories over Tampa-Town 'N' Country (8-6) and North Tampa (3-2). Dallas then whipped West Seminole 10-2 on Saturday, giving the team its worst defeat and forcing a winner-take-all confrontation.

On Sunday, Dallas jumped out to an early lead and never gave it up. Scott Wiederhold led the game off with a single and, after an error, Mark Cogdill singled to load the bases. Craig Yates then ripped a grand slam over the left center field fence to give Dallas a quick 4-0 lead.

Losing pitcher Tommy Grigg, who went the distance, then shut down the Dallas offense, retiring nine of the next 10 batters (the only base runner he allowed reached on an error).

"Tommy (Grigg) pitched another strong game," Foranoco said. "He had a great season all the way around."

Dallas built its lead with a run in the top of the fourth inning as Kevin Moore singled and stole second. Two outs later, Jason Feldman singled him in to up the score to 5-0.

West Seminole, just as it had done throughout the All-Star season, then mounted a comeback. Grigg opened the fourth with a single and stole second. DeBart then followed with a single to bring in Grigg and cut the lead to 5-1. But Dallas got the run back on a big solo home run from Cogdill in the fifth.

Then the West Seminole offense finally got untracked in the sixth.

Preseason win thrills Bucs

United Press International

TAMPA — The Houston Oilers, hammered by Tampa Bay in Saturday night's exhibition opener, remember the days an exhibition game was deemed important.

Vinny Testaverde threw two touchdown passes and scored himself on a 2-yard bootleg, sparking the Buccaneers to a 41-23 romp. The Oilers lost for just the third time in 13 exhibition games under Coach Jerry Glanville, who looked at the opponent and saw a remembrance of things past.

"The Bucs are very, very close to being a good team," Glanville said after Tampa Bay thrilled a crowd of 37,830. "When I look at them, I see the Oilers two seasons ago. It was an important game for them."

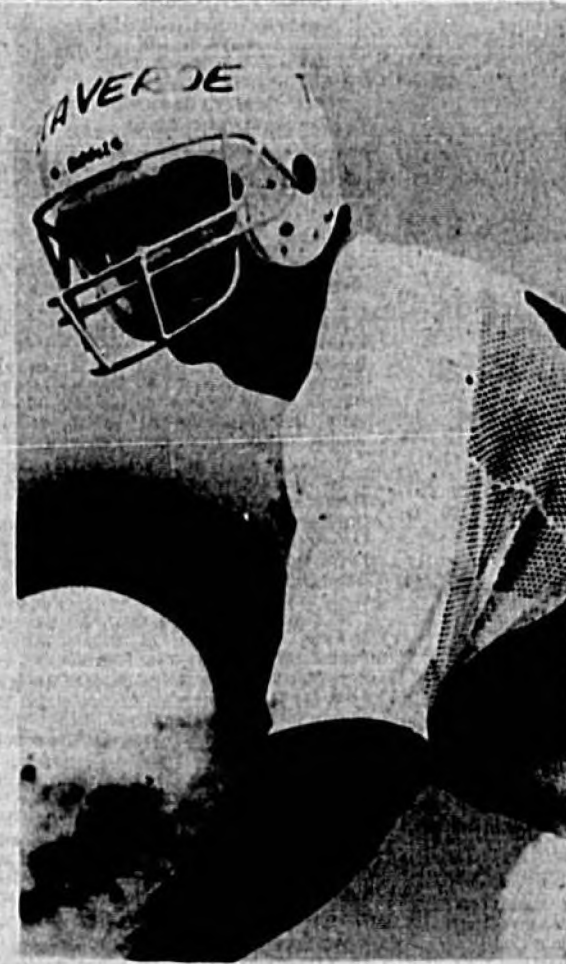

Two summers ago, Glanville's Oilers were coming off a 5-11 finish, just like the 1989 Buccaneers. Houston has won a combined 19 games in the past two seasons and is established as an NFL power.

"It's just night and day," said Testaverde, the NFL's lowest-rated passer last season. "This is what we've worked for in the off-season. The big key is winning. I was having fun out there."

Testaverde completed 9 of 22 attempts for 137 yards in the opening half, including TD strikes of 32 yards to Mark Carrier and 28 yards to second-round draft choice Danny Peebles. Odie Harris returned an interception off Cody Carlson 27 yards for another score and John Carney kicked two field goals before Lars Tate closed out the scoring with a 1-yard plunge in the final minute.

Houston's Warren Moon played only the first two series, completing 6 of 8 passes, five to Ernest Givins. The Oilers went ahead 9-7 on Givins' 6-yard TD catch and a blocked punt by rookie Bubba McDowell that rolled through the end zone for a safety, but the Buccaneers answered with 24 second-quarter points to take a 31-9 halftime advantage.

Carlson and rookie Chuck Hartlieb each tossed a second-half TD pass for the Oilers, who were outgained 405-256.

Ray Perkins, head coach of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, said quarterback Vinny Testaverde (above) had his best of football as a professional in the Bucs' 41-23 preseason romp over Houston on Saturday.

"I think Vinny had the best half of football he's had since he's been with us," said Tampa Bay Coach Ray Perkins. "He had a great game, not a good one or a pretty good one. I can't really remember any mistakes that he made."

The proudest number for Testaverde was the zero next to the interception line. Last season, Testaverde threw 35 interceptions and was booed often by frustrated Buccaneer fans. Peebles, a speedster from North Carolina State, has been sidelined for much of training.

McEnroe surges late for Hardcourt tourney win

United Press International

INDIANAPOLIS — John McEnroe won his first outdoor tournament in 16 months, scoring the final 13 points Sunday to defeat Jay Berger 6-4, 4-6, 6-4, in the finals of the $415,500 U.S. Men's Hardcourt Tennis Championships.

"By the end I felt I couldn't lose a point," McEnroe said. "The momentum kept building. It was a tremendous feeling. I don't recall something like that before."

McEnroe took the $51,000 top prize and his 75th career singles title at the Indianapolis Sports Center in his first match ever against Berger, who upset Stefan Edberg and Tim Mayotte to reach the final.

McEnroe double faulted on break point to fall behind 3-2 in the third set and Berger held serve for a 4-2 advantage.

"I was feeling a bit discouraged," McEnroe said. "I wasn't doing the things I knew I could do. At the end, it all came together."

McEnroe held serve to trail 4-3 and then began his run, breaking Berger twice and holding serve without losing a point.

"If I play like that, I'll be satisfied at the U.S. Open," McEnroe said. "I would play anybody anytime like that. The danger is to assume I will play that well. It took two hours to get to that point. That is the way you want to play more often."

Navratilova romps in Slims of LA title match

United Press International

MANHATTAN BEACH, Calif. — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova used the "BBB Concept" in overwhelming No. 2 Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina, 6-0, 6-2 Sunday to capture her fifth title of the year at the $300,000 Virginia Slims of Los Angeles.

"I was just playing, 'Broad, Butter and Boring,' tennis, to quote Billie Jean King," said Navratilova, who won her 143rd career title and boosted her lifetime earnings to more than $14.5 million. "It's the best tennis I've played in the last two years. I was mixing it up well and keeping her off balance. I'm trying to round out my game and make it unpredictable."

Navratilova, ranked second in the world, didn't need many surprises with her power game. She raced to the net often, converting 49 of 79 chances.

However, Sabatini, who looked near-invincible throughout the week with her biting topspin groundstrokes, was handcuffed by Navratilova, especially in the opening set.

Navratilova also split $18,000 by capturing the doubles final with partner Wendy Turnbull.

Reid falls prey to PGA championship pressure

United Press International

HAWTHORN WOODS, Ill. — The agonizing pressure that goes with a major golf championship claimed another victim Sunday and made an unexpected winner out of a man who knows what that pressure is all about.

And for the third time this year in a major event, the man who seemed certain to win did not.

Payne Stewart won the 71st PGA Championship, his first major title, while standing alongside the 18th green as a mere spectator. Mike Reid lost it in a heart-wrenching manner and was reduced to tears because of what he had let get away.

"I knew what I had to do," Reid said, using a handkerchief to wipe the tears away. "I just didn't get it done. It's only a game, right?"

Perhaps, but the winning of a major title puts a player's name in the record books and Reid's name — not Stewart's — appeared destined to be the one inscribed on the PGA trophy.

Stewart won by shooting a 5-under 31 on the back nine that included a chip-in from 25 feet at the 14th hole and a 12-foot birdie putt on the last green.

Reid lost by hitting his tee shot in the water at the 18th, missing a two-foot putt at the 17th and then missing a four-footer at the final hole which would have forced a sudden-death playoff.

"I feel sorry for Mike," said Stewart, who has gained the reputation during his nine-year career of winning lots of money but very few titles. "God bless him. It is tough to lose a tournament you have led from the start."

"But I have let a few of them get away, too."

"On the other side, I sure am glad I won. I'm not going to kid you. I talked to Mike after it was over. He congratulated me and I consoled him. That's all you can do. There can be only one winner."

Stewart, 32, was five shots behind when he began play on the back nine, but came back to shoot a 67 for a 72-hole total of 12-under 278. The $200,000 first prize money boosted Stewart's winnings for the year to $755,292 — No. 1 on the American tour.

Sunday's win was Stewart's fifth. He has won at least $200,000 in each of the last six years and this is the fourth straight year he has won at least $500,000.

His playoff record is 0-4 and found himself saddled with his "can't win" reputation when he blew a three-shot lead with one hole to play in the 1985 Byron Nelson Golf Classic.

"I was scared to death of sudden death," Stewart said. "You know my record in playoffs isn't worth a damn. I really can't describe how I feel right now. This is the realization of a dream that I have been trying to work on for a long time."

"I was wondering when my time would come. I pride myself on being a patient person. I felt if I kept knocking on the door, I would win one (a major)."

"I guess to people who have won a lot of majors, this would not be that big a deal. But it sure is to me."

Picking grapes begins with planting

If someone asked you what the most widely grown fruit crop in the world is, chances are that you would answer "citrus." Surprise, surprise! Grapes have been grown from before recorded history and are grown on every continent except the Antarctic.

In the 1920s, Florida had a sizable grape industry. The entire industry was wiped out by a disease called Pierce's disease. For many years after that, the only grape that could be successfully grown in Florida was the muscadine grape.

The University of Florida, under the direction of Dr. John Mortensen, developed a number of large-bunch grapes that can be successfully grown in Florida. In collaboration with other Southern states, a number of superior muscadine grapes have been developed as well. And now these varieties of bunch and muscadine grapes are available for your garden.

The two bunch grapes already widely available are "Lake Emerald" and "Blue Lake." Some of the newer introductions may be superior to these old standbys. The shelf life of lasting quality of "Lake Emerald" and "Blue Lake" is too short by modern standards.

Among the newer varieties of bunch grapes, you have a choice between slip-skin grapes (like the thick-skinned Concord grapes) and thin-skinned grapes (like seedless grapes that you buy in supermarkets). "Conquistador" and "Stover" are excellent slip-skin grapes. The new "Orlando Seedless" grape is a recent research breakthrough in a thin-skinned seedless grape that can be grown in Florida. Other good varieties for our area are "Suwannee," "Daytona" and "Blanc Du Bois." All of these varieties are resistant to Pierce's disease.

Jeff Joice, vineyard manager at Lakeridge Winery in Clermont, checks the condition of some Suwannee grapes. The Suwannee grape is one of several varieties resistant to a Florida grape disease.

Muscadine grapes grow individually or in small bunches. They require more time to pick but are less susceptible to disease and insects than the bunch grapes. Suggested varieties for home gardens are "Triumph," "Dixie," "Southland," "Cowart" and "Welder." There are two excellent fresh-eating varieties—"Fry" and "Higgins"—but they must be planted near another variety in order to cross-pollinate.

Northern grapes like Concord do not do well here. Stick with the recommended varieties for Florida and you will have success rather than frustration.

Bunch grapes do require more care than the muscadine grapes. During the growing season, they require bi-weekly spraying with a fungicide like benomyl, captan or phakten until 10 days before harvest. Without the fungicide, your grape leaves and stems will develop fungal leaf spots and your grapes may develop fruit rot.

Grapes should be trained up a trellis. The top wire of the trellis can be approximately 5 feet above the ground and the bottom wire about 2 1/2 feet off the ground. The individual vines should be planted 10 feet apart.

The young grape vine is trained to grow to the top of the trellis. This will develop as the trunk of the grapevine. One shoot from the trunk is trained to grow to the left and one to the right on the top wire. Two are chosen as leaders on the bottom wire, too. These branches are called "arms." After the trunk reaches the top wire and the arms are chosen, all other growth on the trunk is removed.

Growth that comes off the arms is called a "spur." New growth appears from these spurs and bears fruit. When pruning grapes, which is done in the winter while the grapes are dormant, the spurs are cut back, leaving at least two nodes. From these nodes will be your fruiting "canes."

These canes are removed when pruning because grapes are produced on new growth. If you leave these old canes on, you could reduce the amount and size of your grapes. If you need more information on pruning grapes, give me a call.

Grapes prefer a well drained soil, but they like lots of moisture. Give them about an inch of irrigation per week unless the rainfall is providing that much. Irrigation will increase your yield and fruit size.

Florida grapes can be used in a variety of ways—wine, preserves, jams and jellies. If you need recipes, call the county's home economist, Barbara Hughes-Gregg, at 323-2500, ext. 179, for a bulletin on making jams, jellies and preserves at home.

Korean War veterans deserve more honor

DEAR ABBY: Orchids to you for calling public attention to the Korean War veterans.

In March, my wife, two sons and I visited Washington, D.C. for a sightseeing vacation that included a tour of Arlington National Cemetery. Our guide pointed out the Korean War "memorial," which was a cement park bench on which was engraved: "In Sacred Memory of Those Americans Who Gave Their Lives During the Korean War (1950-1953). 84,246 Died; 8,377 Missing in Action; 559 Unaccounted-For POWs."

Our sons were incensed after reading the casualty statistics. They had no idea the Korean War was so bloody and costly, and couldn't understand why those who fought in Vietnam had been honored with such an impressive memorial, while the Korean War veterans had only a cement park bench.

Matt, 13, felt compelled to do something about it, so for his Eagle Scout project he researched the Korean War and began a movement in our city to raise awareness, support and money for a proper memorial to honor those who served—including my own cousin who was killed in action.

ADVISE

I am proud of Matt's sensitivity. And God bless you, Abby, for caring so much.

THANKFUL IN FORT WORTH

P.S. Please tell us where we can send contributions for the Korean War Veterans Memorial.

DEAR THANKFUL: Thank you for asking. Contributions (checks or money orders; no cash, please) should be made out to: Korean War Memorial, P.O. Box 2372, Washington, D.C. 20013-2372.

The proposed memorial will cost $6 million—funded by contributions from the public, and not one dime of government money. Let's get that well-deserved memorial built. A buck or two from you will do it!

Garden of the Month

Randolph Risner tends vegetation at his home, 1503 E. Second St., Sanford, named Garden of the Month by Mrs. Erant Horrell and Mrs. Thomas Spear, members of the Camelia Circle of the Garden Club of Sanford. Geraniums and dusty miller line the entrance, blooming flowers encircle the home, and an oak tree ringed with caladiums sits in the side yard.
