Child safety

SANFORD — Parents are reminded that the law states:

- All children under 6 years of age must be properly restrained while riding in any vehicle, regardless of where they are seated.
- Children through age 3 must be secured in a separate carrier or a vehicle manufacturer's integrated child safety seat.
- For children aged 4 through 5 years, a separate carrier, an integrated child safety seat, or a safety belt may be used.

For parents who cannot afford safety seats, contact the Seminole County Public Health Unit at 322-2724, ext. 3278 and ask about the Healthy Start program. The program provides car seats for $5 to parents who qualify.

Community college celebrities

SANFORD — Seminole Community College reminds the public that many notable Americans enjoyed the benefits of a community college education. Some of the alumni from various community colleges are: Walt Disney, Calvin Klein and Natalie Merchant, former lead singer with 10,000 Maniacs.

For people who wish to join the ranks of community college graduates or just want to take classes for enrichment, SCC will begin their summer IIII term June 20. Some of the classes offered are career exploration, oceanography and TV production. Call 328-2050.

Asian festival

SANFORD — The Asian American Heritage Council presents an Asian Festival June 1 and 2 at Flea World. Demonstrations planned are the dance of the dragons, martial arts, magic shows and more.

Chicken impersonation?

SANFORD — Dondi and Family, billed as a "unique elephant presentation," will perform at Flea World on May 31 and June 1 and 2 and 7-9. According to publicity, Dondi can imitate a chicken, a lion and a hunting dog.

Sea lions head for Florida

SEATTLE — Hondo, Bob and Big Frank, can eat all the fish they want without fear of the death penalty, now that the three California sea lions have been sent into retirement in Florida.

The trio were loaded on to a Federal Express cargo jet Wednesday for a cross country trip to Sea World of Florida in Orlando, where they are to spend the rest of their lives.

The three were among the more voracious of the sea lions that were previously slated for extermination for nearly destroyed the run of steelhead salmon that must pass the Ballard ship locks in Seattle.

The fish gather below a fish ladder at the locks before heading upstream to spawning creeks that feed Lake Washington. That makes them easy pickings for the sea lions.

Wildlife officials have tried for years to scare the sea lions away from the locks by using firecrackers, underwater noises, rubber bullets and other devices. All failed, as did nets near the fish ladder and trapping the animals and relocating them off the Pacific coast.

Officials had received permission to kill the worst of the predators — including the three nicknamed Hondo, Big Frank and Bob — to save the steelhead salmon. But Sea World stepped in, and offered the animals Florida digs.

Students design local rail service system

By VICKI DeSORMIER

LAKE MARY — High speed rail transportation is no longer the stuff of which science fiction and dreams are made.

The possibility of moving around the Central Florida community and beyond on a rail system that parallels the interstate system that is already in place will become a reality sooner than some might think.

For several years, Ernie Morris' students at Greenwood Lakes Middle School in Lake Mary have been working on a project to show the practicality of rail service. They have researched the details of how potential systems might work. They have made decisions regarding which type of system would work the best. And they have constructed a working model of the system.

"They have worked very hard for several years," the teacher said. "We have students who are no longer in the class who have come back to keep working on the Mass Transit Orlando project for a couple of years."

Morris' students feel strongly

Seventh graders Melissa Smith, Mindy Goodman, Alexus Teicher, Ryan Hammond, Brett Swann and Brian Skuderin and former students Brett Baltzer and Joey Eckstrom are to make a presentation on mass transit monorail transportation to Lynx this afternoon.

Citizens' dirt road rally

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

GENEVA — It's not just a pain to drive on, residents of Cochran Road in Geneva say it's becoming a danger for those who live on the dirt road.

Fire and rescue officials have told residents they can't traverse the road in order to offer emergency services. School bus drivers curse the road to parents and the county. Sheriff's department officials take several hours to respond to calls, residents say, because they don't want to drive down that street.

Residents claim they have registered an many as 40 complaints a day about conditions on the road with county officials. Most have gone completely unheeded, residents say.

One of the largest unpaved roads in Seminole County is becoming one of the largest problems in the county as well, those who live along the rural highway say.

"It's not just a problem," says Chris Wozniak, a spokesman for the 200 residents who live along the road. "It is a big problem. It is a mess."

On Saturday evening at 7, residents hope to make it clear they have had enough of the inaction on the part of the county to correct the situation.

The Cochran Road Rally will not be a race. It will be a meeting of those who are concerned with the condition of the road with those who might be able to do something about it.

ORLANDO — Did an 18-year-old driving his father's stolen truck intentionally run into an Orange County deputy? Steve Jones of the Orange County Sheriff's Department said the Florida Highway Patrol and State Attorney's office are working with the sheriff's department to make that determination. If so, murder charges will be filed.

In the meantime, Jason A. Tucker remains in critical condition at the Orlando Regional Medical Center. Joe Brown, spokesman for ORMC, said Tucker is paralyzed from the chest down.

"It usually takes 48 hours to see how these things are going to go," Brown said. He said it is too early to determine if the paralysis is permanent.

Brown said Tucker's family has not arrived; and as far as the hospital can determine, there has been no contact from them as of yet. A call to the family's home in Virginia went unanswered

County schools already meet new standards for students

By JEFF BERLINCKE
Herald Staff Writer

While state public schools scramble to meet new state cabinet-approved standards, it will be business as usual in Seminole County.

New guidelines for pre-kindergarten through 12th graders may give some Florida students and teachers a tough time at first, Education Commissioner Frank Brogan said, but Seminole County schools already hold standards that meet the new Florida criteria.

"In some places these standards are not in place," Brogan acknowledged. "In some places around the state, students are going to be expected to do more, to know more and to learn more."

The Cabinet unanimously voted to use the rigorous requirements in seven subject areas to develop a new Florida Comprehensive Achievement Test that will be field-tested in 1997 and administered statewide by 1998.

Also unanimously approved was a plan to require better scores to pass the placement tests that determine

Playing the field

The youngsters at Goldboro Elementary School learn year round, but they take a break for fun every once in a while too. Recently at their May Day Play Day celebration, the kids spent the day outside with their teachers taking part in all kinds of games and competitions. The fun activity is an annual event at the school and is always a hit with the students.

Governor learns to mix politics and religion

By BRENT KALLESTAD
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — It may have taken almost 40 years in public life, but Gov. Lawton Chiles is learning how to mix politics and religion.

The governor has only a couple of days to decide on a school prayer bill that will automatically become law if Chiles doesn't veto the measure by Friday.

Chiles, who spent Wednesday in Washington with one eye on next fall's elections, has three options on the bill. He can sign it, veto it or allow it to become law by doing nothing.

But the school prayer bill has political ramifications that could resurface in the fall elections. A veto could damage President Clinton's hopes of becoming the first Democratic presidential candidate in 20 years to carry the Sunshine State.

Former cop guilty of tax evasion

From staff reports

OSNEYA — Jeffrey S. Frasier, 34, of Sanford, was found guilty on five counts of income tax evasion yesterday. The conviction was handed down by a federal jury in Orlando.

Charles S. Wilson, U.S. Attorney for the Middle District of Florida said, after a four day trial, Frasier was also found guilty of four counts of willfully failing to file income tax returns.

Wilson said evidence showed that Frasier, a resident of Osneya, failed to file income tax returns for the years 1980 through 1983, and evaded his income taxes for the years 1983 through 1985. He was reportedly a police officer for the city of Altamonte Springs during those years. He had been suspended without pay pending the outcome of the trial.

Following the jury verdict, U.S. District Judge G. Ronald Sharp revoked Frasier's bond and remanded him to the custody of U.S. Marshals.

Frasier faces a maximum of 30 years imprisonment and a fine of $1,000,000. Sentencing is set for August 31.

U.S. Attorney Wilson said that the law is clear that taxpayers, including tax preparators who advise non-compliance with the income tax laws, must file tax returns and pay income taxes. He added that the office of the U.S. Attorney will continue to aggressively prosecute individuals who fail to file their income tax returns or evade their taxes.

Police said they found $67 in one of Carter's pockets and $1,100 in another. He was charged with possession of cocaine with intent to distribute, two counts of resisting an officer with violence, sale/delivery of cocaine, and battery on a law enforcement officer.

Drug arrest

Gov. Chiles signs Lake Apopka legislation

From staff reports

To celebrate the strides made by Florida lawmakers in cleaning up Lake Apopka, Gov. Lawton Chiles was to travel to the shore of Lake Apopka this morning for a ceremonial signing of legislation aimed at controlling pollution discharges into the lake.

"The signing of this legislation marks the beginning of Lake Apopka's recovery," said Henry Dean, executive director of the St. Johns River Water Management. "We know how to clean up this lake. But before any restoration plan can be effective, something must be done about the pollution discharges that are loading the lake with toxic chemicals."

The bill, which passed by the Florida Legislature on May 2, appropriates $20 million as a down payment on 14,000 acres of such farms along the northern shore of the lake.

The farmers tilling the Lake Apopka much however are asking $85 million for their land and businesses.

In a final, additional victory for the Apopka watershed, the bill also requires the state to work with state environmental officials in reducing the nutrient-rich discharges that have routinely pumpe into the lake.

less in the months of January, February and March. For a full, detailed report on the Apopka watershed, contact the Florida Information Council, Department 8802, Pueblo, Colorado, 81002.

Is doctor's diagnosis logical?

DEAR DR. GOTT: For years I've suffered recurrently with a sore throat that turns into bronchitis. This happens prior to menstruation. My gynecologist says it's related to my period and insists it to arrange or a hysterectomy, but I don't feel comfortable with his diagnosis.

DEAR READER: Not so I. Sore throats and bronchitis are customarily caused by viruses or bacteria, not by any hormonal fluctuation around the time of menstruation. Of course, these normal fluctuations can lead to moodiness, irritability and other symptoms. But it would be unusual for your immune system to be affected to the degree that yours appears to be.

Therefore, I suggest that you discuss your symptoms with your family physician, who may — in addition to examining you — obtain a throat culture as well as blood tests to check your level of immunity. For example, diabetes is often associated with a susceptibility to infections, as are a number of blood disorders.

If I were you, I'd use your gynecologist for the things he or she does best, and give your family doctor a crack at this intriguing, difficult problem.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I was recently diagnosed with depression. I was placed on Paxil and Prozac, both of which gave me side effects that were unpleasant. I was then changed to Luvox, which is working better. Can you give me information on this drug and tell me how it works?

DEAR READER: Luvox (fluvoxamine) is a selective serotonin re-uptake inhibitor, meaning that it stabilizes brain chemicals to prevent depression and improve obsessive compulsive disorders.

In general, it is a safe and effective medication but should not be used with a score of other drugs, especially most other anti-depressants, because of the possibility of severe neurological reactions, including rigidity, dangerous fluctuations in blood pressure and coma.

Luvox should be prescribed cautiously (or not at all) with anti-anxiety drugs, such as Alivan, and with certain anti-histamines, such as Sediline. The major side effects of Luvox include weakness, nausea, diarrhea, indigestion, sleepiness, insomnia, nervousness and dizziness.

Like other anti-depressants, Luvox is a powerful drug that should be prescribed and monitored only by a professional familiar with its use.

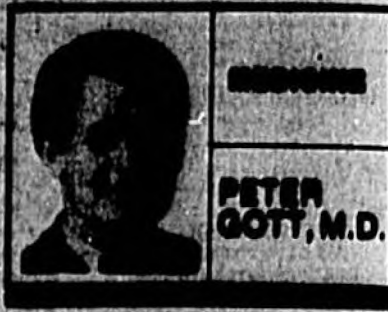

DEAR DR. GOTT: My boyfriend breaks out with hemorrhoids for at least a week every time he eats anything with cream, such as pasta, sausage or meatballs. What can we do to alleviate the problem? Would drinking extra water help?

DEAR READER: I don't know what your boyfriend is reacting to, but off the top of my head, I'll bet it's mesenteric giardiasis. This larval organism is found in an astounding array of prepared foods.

Unless you're making all the necessary precautions, they are probably food with MSG, which can cause rash, weakness, listlessness, headache, and sweating in susceptible individuals. I'd wager that if he eats foods that are free of MSG, his symptoms will not return.

Drinking water may help only because it dilutes the concentration of

PETER GOTT, M.D.

MSG. I think he'd be better off avoiding the additive entirely. If this strategy doesn't work, he should see an allergist.

From Canberra with success

By PHHtp Alder

The team event at Surfer's Paradise was won by George and Dorothy Jenner, Richard Hills, Keiran Dyle, Theo Ansell and Arjuna Delevors. In the final they beat three women from New Zealand — Jan Cormack, Elizabeth Stebbins and Lisa Jones — and Stephen Lester, a Scot (a New Zealander) who lives in Sydney.

The Jenner team, most of whom live in Canberra, won by 99 international matchpoints. This deal was one of Jenner's best gains. Both teams reached three no-trump by South. At the other table, East had opened with a weak two-bid in hearts. West, Dyle, led the diamond four, East, Ansell, winning with the ace and returning the jack. The declarer, Cormack, cached the spade king and played a spade toward the dummy, West splitting the club queen, which declarer ducked — a lay play. On winning the club continuation with his ace, Jenner cashed the spade king and played another spade. West splitting her honors. After winning the third round of spades, West called with another club to dummy's king. Jenner cashed dummy's spade nine and played a diamond to East's jack and his king. A diamond to the 10 and ace outplayed East to lead away from her heart king. Jenner's nice tricks were three spades, two hearts, two diamonds and two clubs.

If East goes in with the diamond ace and exits with the diamond jack, declarer just draws a heart, again employing East.

HURRICANE GUIDE

Your complete guide to preparing for the storm season

I survived Donna!

By NICK PEPFAM
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — With the constant influx of new residents to the Central Florida area, many people have never experienced a hurricane. Perhaps a personal experience will serve as a warning.

I was once one of these first-timers, and learned many lessons.

It was Sept. 4 through 12, 1960, when Hurricane Donna came blasting its way through Sanford from the southwestern part of the state. While winds had been higher, they were recorded at 92 miles per hour when they reached Seminole County.

It was my first encounter with a hurricane, but not my last. Being a novice, and admittedly unfamiliar with the destruction such a storm can do, I was somewhat unprepared to experience the wrath of even a hurricane as light as Donna. We have had many much more severe windstorms since then.

At the time, I served as program director and chief announcer for radio station WTRR in Sanford. The studio was located near the east end of First Street.

It was my job to give reports of the hurricane's progress. The only source of information was United Press wire service. The information however was generally old because of the length of time it took other reporters to compile their stories, write them, and transmit them.

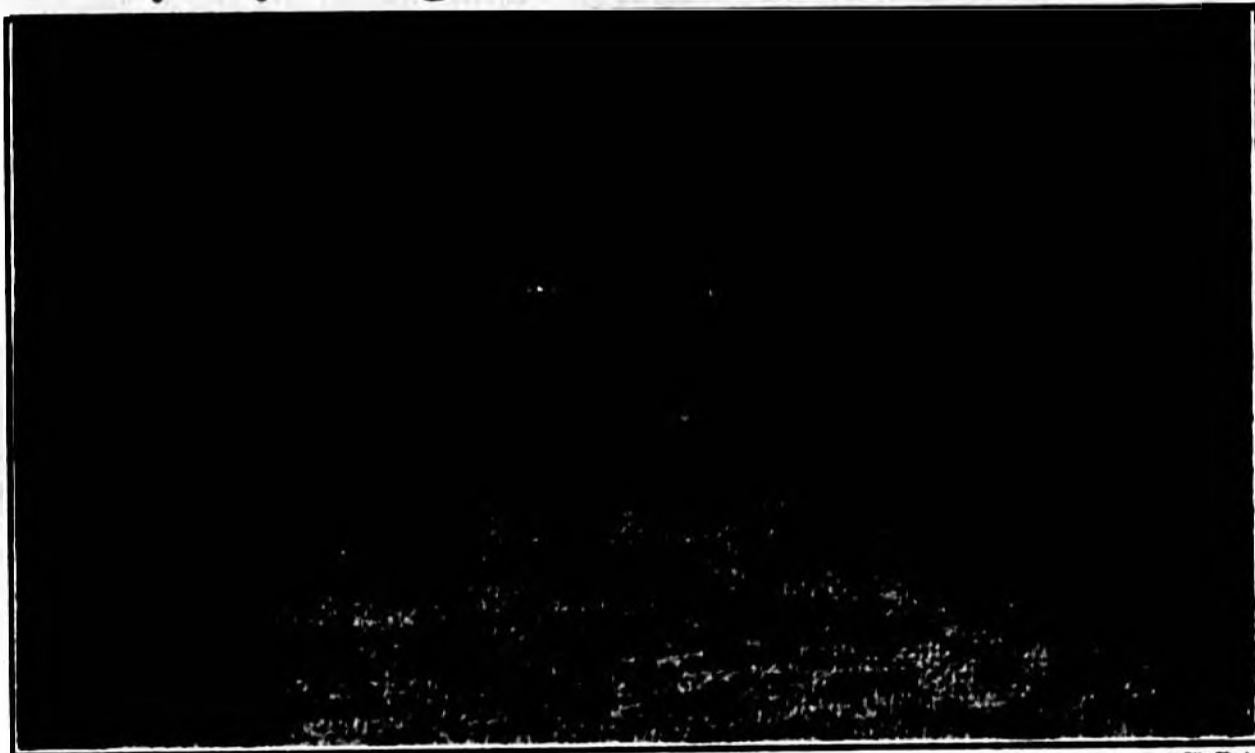

We did know, however, that Donna's winds would reach Sanford in full force shortly before midnight. Prior to that time, I compared the edge of the hurricane to a rather severe but common Central Florida storm.

The radio station was scheduled to go off the air at midnight, and in order to continue operating, I was required to deliver the standard "we are now leaving the air" message, followed immediately by, "we are now officially returning to the air in order to continue our hurricane coverage." That's as far as I got with the message. Power went out in east Sanford, and the station went completely off the air for what proved to be three days.

The building was relatively well built however, and I felt safe inside. My main concern was the nearby 120-foot transmission tower, which could be dangerous if it collapsed on the studio. It remained intact however.

In the complete dark, alone, and with the winds really picking up outdoors, I attempted to nap on the floor of my office. The rest didn't last long however, as hurricanes have a tendency to drive indoors such varmints as roaches and field mice. These soon attempted to cuddle with me, and there was no further attempt to sleep.

The windows were dangerous to approach, as winds and/or falling debris could have knocked them that hit Sanford on Oct. 9, on the shore of Lake Monroe at Sanford's lakefront.

out giving me possibly severe cuts. The front door however was under an overhang, and provided me with a good view of some of the area, specifically, Sanford Hospital, now the County Services Building, across the street.

The roar of the winds was deafening. Blue and golden flashes of light were everywhere. I learned these were power transformers busting apart as power line after power line fell victim to falling trees.

Suddenly, the roar ceased. It was an immediate silence which I will never forget. There was absolutely no sound; no downpour of rain, no blasting wind, no collapsing trees, nothing. It was the eye of the hurricane, going directly over Sanford.

I went outdoors. (Don't try this). Looking toward the west, First Street was covered with fallen trees, palm fronds, and electric wires, many of which were emitting sparks and jumping around like the proverbial chicken with his head cut off.

Then, within only a few moments, I heard the sound returning, and the eye had passed. Winds and the accompanying rains were now coming from the opposite direction. I went back inside the studio.

As the first light of day appeared, the storm had passed, and I was able to lock up the station and go home, which was only six blocks away. There was no damage done to my house, but several tree branches were on the roof, and there was a trash can in my front yard which apparently came from several blocks away. My wife and daughter were safe, having spent the time in a hallway, away from windows.

Later that morning, being inquisitive, I ventured forth to check on other damage in the city. Driving only a dozen blocks into the downtown area was virtually impossible. There were trees and power lines all over the streets.

It was much later before I was able to reach the downtown area. During the rainy season, Sanford

If you must leave your pet at home, determine the best location away from windows to place the pet in, such as a utility room, bathroom or other tiled area that can be easily cleaned. Do not leave pets outside. Leave only dry dog food to prevent vomiting. Leave water either in a bathtub or sturdy containers that will not spill. Never leave a cat with a dog even if the two do normally friendly because if they are frightened, they may have a tendency to fight.

suffers from a high water problem in Lake Meador, and with the added rain from Hurricane Donna, water now came over the bank, and stretched onto First Street making it almost impassable.

Many downtown businesses, especially those to the north of First Street, had flooding problems, although in many cases, only deep enough to damage the floors rather than merchandise which may have been up on counters or racks.

In many areas of Sanford, especially on our tree-lined streets, passage was impossible. Yet city, county and utility equipment soon became evident.

It took several days to replace those busted transformers, removed fallen power poles and replace the lines.

In the entire state of Florida, records indicate 149 people died as a direct result of Hurricane Donna that year. The Sanford area reportedly had only one or two fatalities, although damage was severe.

The aftermath of the storm was heart-warming. Neighbors turned out to help each other clear debris and tapes from their properties. Citizens helped city crews clear roadways. Those who lost their homes were helped by others and given food and lodging. People worked together, as they may have a tendency to do, to recover from devastation such as this.

All in all, Sanford didn't suffer badly or long from Hurricane Donna, but those who remember it, especially the first-timers, will never forget it. We learned many lessons which have proved to be invaluable when other storms and hurricanes threaten our area.

• Stock your home with non-perishable, water and other items for emergency use. Be prepared for the power to be knocked out.

• Don't look at the storm as an adventure. Treat it as a serious and possibly life-threatening situation. You'll last longer and survive better.

• Don't try to go outside and look at the misery whenever a hurricane's eye is present. Winds start up extremely fast without warning and you could be in bodily danger.

• Don't get involved with the so-called "hurricane parties" which involve drinking and merriment. It will impair your ability to cope with emergencies, and may cloud your judgment when it is needed most.

• Don't go driving or walking amidst fallen power lines and/or trees after a storm. The danger isn't over.

• After surviving a hurricane, spread the word to newcomers and first-timers. Tell them this is a serious matter, one not to be scoffed at or taken lightly.

• And by all means, follow suggestions, rules and recommendations from area safety councils, weather bureau, the hurricane center, city, county and state officials regarding what to do and how to go about it before the hurricane arrives as well as afterwards.
