By HERSCHEL NISSONSON Associated Press Sports Writer Steve Carlton, Bob Boone and John McSherry teamed up to help the Philadelphia Phillies blank the Pittsburgh Pirates 3-0.

Carlton, 1972's Cy Young Award winner, hurled a six-inning, walk-free and struck-out game. Boone, as catcher, and McSherry, as umpire, also helped.

BASEBALL'S FLYING ARTISTS

THERE ARE MANY WAYS of avoiding the runner who is trying to break up the double play but the best method, and most popular, is taking to the air. Demonstrating their escape techniques are Ron Hunt of Montreal, Derrel Thomas of San Diego and Jack Brohamer of Cleveland.

'Optimistic' OJ Returns To Bills

By FRED ROTHENBERG Associated Press Sports Writer O. J. Simpson, recently recovered from a viral infection, now has a case of early season optimism.

"I think I can rush for a lot more yards this season than last," said Simpson, the NFL's leading rusher in 1972 with 1,251 yards and six touchdowns.

Chargers Are Still Mystified: What Makes Duane Run?

By BOB ORTMAN Copy News Service

Of all the Chargers brass, Bob Hood is the one who probably knows Duane Thomas best, and he knows him about as well as a husband understands Phase 4.

At their association developed into something akin to friendship, Bob "became more comfortable in the situation but I never really was at ease, because you never know what to expect," he said.

Maintenance Crews Transform Fields

By RON WELLS Copy News Service

Some athletes feel that having to play on a field that's used for both football and baseball is like grazing cattle and sheep in the same pasture.

Many of these stadiums have artificial turf while others still sport the real stuff. Most of them feature such creations of modern technology as movable stands which transform the seating configuration from baseball to football.

This Weekend Beef Shortage Due

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The president of a large Midwestern-Southern retail food chain says the nation's supermarkets will run out of many cuts of meat by this weekend. "The cattle simply are not being brought to market," Lyle Everingham, president of Kroger Co. of Cincinnati, Ohio, said Monday.

The beef shortage has forced Kroger to lay off 400 workers in 13 meat-processing plants, Everingham said. He predicted further layoffs unless the Phase 4 price ceiling on beef is lifted. The federal freeze on beef prices also was cited by a union official in New York City who predicted that "housewives of this city and this nation will find there is little if any beef and beef products to be bought anywhere" by the end of the week.

The ceilings are slated to remain on beef until Sept. 12.

One food chain, Finast, posted signs at meat counters asking customers to be "a good neighbor by buying only what you need so there will be enough for everyone."

The warnings from food retailers and meat processors of an impending meat shortage were disputed by the deputy director of the federal Cost of Living Council, who said meat industry pressure to lift the beef price ceiling would be resisted.

Direct and indirect assaults on the beef price freeze were coming from inside and outside the country.

The Iowa Cattlemen's Association claimed that Canadian meat packers were circumventing the freeze by purchasing cattle in Iowa and Nebraska for processing in Canada and resale in the United States.

Larry Kallern, executive vice president of the organization, said Canadian packers can make a profit because meat imports to the United States were not affected by the price ceiling on domestic beef.

In Seattle, meat packers from a dozen Western states charged on Monday in a federal suit against the Nixon administration that the freeze is discriminatory.

Calling themselves "scapegoats," the meat packers charged that many companies will have to close or operate at a loss unless the beef freeze ceiling is lifted.

SCHOOL UNIQUE
Glendale, Ariz. — The Thunderbird Graduate School of International Management at Glendale, founded in 1946, is the nation's only graduate school devoted exclusively to training college graduates for international careers.

Meanwhile, Butz said Monday he would urge a veto if the final bill contains a four-year increase of five per cent in minimum milk price supports. Another unacceptable provision, he said, would be more than one year of cost-of-production escalation for the "target prices" being set as crop supports under cotton, wheat and feed grain.

Butz said the provisions to which he objects are inflationary because they would hike federal spending.

Farm Bill Is Facing New Veto

By CARL C. CRAFT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional conferees, heading to a sixth session on the farm bill today, face a renewed threat of a presidential veto. Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz said Monday he would recommend a veto unless the final version is in line with a tight budget and a "full-production" national agricultural policy.

Rep. W. R. Poage, D-Tex., a conferee and chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, said he doesn't know if Butz is bluffing.

Butz "is in the position where he has to give us his asking price rather than his selling price, and I don't believe the conferees are going to make any further concessions," Poage said.

A deadlock over a provision to ban food stamps for most strikers could force the House members of the Senate-House conferees to go back for instructions from the House on what to do, congressmen said.

Eventual maneuvering might open a way for farm program reformers, who have lost in conference what they had won on the floor, to try forcing their views onto the conferees, they said.

The House itself is bitterly split over the food stamp section. The provision on strikers was accepted by the House 213 to 203, upheld by 210 to 207 and survived final challenge 208 to 207. There is no such ban in the Senate bill.

Nixon Estate Tax Probe Cancelled

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — California's tax administration board has refused to investigate property taxes on President Nixon's estate at San Clemente.

The State Board of Equalization rejected a proposal by Chairman William M. Bennett Monday that it determine whether the owners of the Western White House property are paying their fair share of taxes.

Bennett called for the state probe on the basis of reports that the 28-acre complex in Orange County is assessed at $1.37 million this year, while the original sale price and reported improvements total $2.33 million.

The Orange County Register reported this month that the estate, owned by Nixon and industrialist Robert Abplanalp, has been undervalued by $25,000 to $55,000 over the past three years. Orange County officials denied the allegation.

Squirreling Stuff Away Is Now A National Game

By JANE GLENN HAAS
Copley News Service

Squirreling it away for a rainy day has once more become a national mania.

This time, however, the hedge against inflation is getting pretty basic. What with the dollar zooming nowhere but down and the stock market nosediving after it, Americans are reportedly spending like crazy for material things—like jewels, gold, rare coins and other tried and true valuables.

A random check of my neighborhood certainly bears this out.

There's my friend Prudence Pennypacker. Ever since the meat boycott, Pru's been zipping about from supermarket to supermarket buying the sale items each week.

Harry, you see, is a bit of a tippler now and then and, at last, his lifelong interest has been justified. More than that, it has inflated beyond his wildest expectations.

Harry was showing me through his wine cellar the other night. It used to be his wife's utility room. That was before Harry found out those bottles contained liquid gold.

French wines, Harry explained between hiccupps, have inflated as much as 300 per cent a bottle.

"Do you realize what that means?" said Harry with a leer.

"That bottle of Chateau de Chateau over there set me back four bucks a year ago. Today it'll get me $12. Show me a stock that's done that!"

Harry assured me he's not drinking up his profits, either. "Personally, I never touch the stuff. Gives me a headache."

Her freezer is chock-a-block with steaks, chickens and pork chops.

But hoarding meat has its drawbacks. During the recent heat wave I noticed Pru hovering near the freezer in a frenzy lest the power brown out and her "hedge against inflation" turn into so much garbage.

On the other hand, my neighbor Bruce Bittles is one snug cat. A few months ago Bruce was down in the dumps. He had to have all his fillings replaced with gold.

Today, Bruce's wide smile brings a well-flushed blush to his cheeks.

"See that tooth," Bruce points inside. "It's gone up 45 per cent in the last three weeks."

Bruce figures his future is secure.

"I've told my wife Marge she can have my teeth when I die. That ought to keep her for quite a spell," he chortles.

But of all the neighborhood hoarders, no one can beat old Harry.

Where's it all going to end, I asked Harry. Wine is, after all, somewhat limited in its appeal and, while you can't drink

General Motors, you can't drive a bottle either. "That's exactly why I'm buying all this wine—General Motors!" Harry exclaimed in delight, bottles rolling on the floor about his feet.

The way Harry has it figured, scientists are bound to figure out how to run ordinary cars on alcohol and Harry will have a basement full of the stuff.

"Fat cats with fancy cars aren't going to run around on just any old booze. They'll want the first-class stuff—know what I mean? And I'm the guy who's going to give it to 'em."

Granting Harry that a couple of engineers have said cars can run on wood alcohol, I had to tell Harry I doubted anyone would pay $12 a quart for gasoline, no matter what its pedigree.

"Doesn't matter," Harry said. "If nobody wants to buy it, I can always use it for medicinal purposes."

Seems to me hoarding brings nothing but headaches. Think I'll stick to Indian head nickels.

Energy Chief Endorses Balanced Environment

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The President's new energy chief, John A. Love, is calling for more "pragmatism" in balancing the nation's energy needs against protection of the environment.

"I am afraid we are faced with two imperatives—the environment and energy—and we cannot take an extreme view on either end," Love told a House Banking Subcommittee Monday.

He said it was no solution "to have all the energy you need if you can't breathe" or to have "the cleanest air in the world and have no energy."

Love had been asked by Rep. Garry Brown, R-Mich., "if we can continue to make the energy demands we have and still make the (environmental cleanup) policy commitments we have."

"We are going to have to bring a greater pragmatism... a greater balance... to it," Love replied.

He said energy is important "not only to our way of life but to our personal freedom. It is so vitally interwoven in our life it is hard to realize doing without it."

In answer to other questions, Love said he didn't believe the oil companies had conspired to withhold gasoline supplies from the market or to raise prices, that Congress should hold hearings on the deregulation of new natural gas supplies and, in at least a partial agreement with Rep. Philip Crane, R-Ill., said government action had not furthered the success of energy policies.
