Tip leads to arrest

A Sanford man was arrested on a cocaine distribution charge by Sanford police last night. John Henry Smith, 34, 2428 Chase Ave., was arrested at a South Orlando Drive fast-food restaurant after Special Investigation Unit agents report finding three large pieces of "crack" cocaine ready for distribution.

Police Lt. Dennis Whitmire reported agents received a tip Smith would arrive at the restaurant in a white Cadillac to complete a drug deal. Agents staked out the parking lot at about 9 p.m. and at about 9:30 p.m., Smith arrived in a white Cadillac, said Whitmire. Another person got into the car and the Smith drove into the drive-through lane. An SIU agent blocked Smith's car and he was taken into custody. Agents report finding a plastic bag containing three large pieces of "crack" cocaine ready to be broken down for individual sales, said Whitmire. The total weight of the cocaine was 6 1/2 grams.

Smith was arrested on a charge of possession of 6 1/2 grams of cocaine with intent to distribute it. The passenger was questioned and released.

County loses bequest

Estate was to have helped poor, ill residents

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — The 5th District Court of Appeals in Daytona Beach ruled last week the West Volusia Hospital Authority — not Seminole County — should be awarded $1.8 million left 20 years ago to Seminole Memorial Hospital by a DeBary man.

The county will ask for a rehearing next week, hoping to collect the money they believed was intended to benefit needy residents of Seminole County and west Volusia County. Because a share of the estate was left to SMH, county attorneys argue the county, as successor to the Seminole Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees, has the right to use the money to serve local residents.

“We thought it would be nice to be able to give someone $200,000 so they could have a needed operation. I guess the court didn't see it that way.”

—Henry Brown, assistant county attorney

“We wanted to set up a trust in his name to benefit the people of Seminole County and west Volusia County,” said assistant county attorney Henry Brown. “We thought it would be nice to be able to give someone $200,000 so they could have a needed operation or buy a piece of equipment for someone. I guess the court didn't see it that way.”

Brown said the DCA panel affirmed without comment a circuit court judge's 1992 decision to award the money to WVHA. Unless the jurists agree to a rehearing, Brown said the county cannot appeal to the Florida Supreme Court.

The DCA's decision could mark the final chapter in the story which began nearly 24 years ago with the will of Lloyd H. Webster of DeBary. On Dec. 16, 1969 Webster signed his will creating a trust on his death to provide a steady income for his wife, Freda Webster, or if she should die, two family friends.

Webster died Aug. 8, 1973, leaving an estate worth about $500,000. The trust was created for Freda Webster, who lived until Feb. 27, 1991.

At the time of Freda Webster's death, the two other trust beneficiaries had already died. But See Request, Page 5A

Murderer on probation vanishes

SANFORD — A convicted murderer released after serving four of his 17 year prison sentence is a wanted man again for violating the terms of his probation. The mother of the murder victim claims he should be in prison now for an earlier probation infraction in 1992.

A warrant was issued in February for Donn Morris Durham by Judge Alan Dickey. Durham, 28, was convicted of second degree murder in the 1986 strangulation death of Longwood resident Karen Barkley, 20. He also stole jewelry from the victim. After getting out of prison, Durham was placed on lifetime probation.

The victim's family claims Durham should have been returned to prison last year after he took an unauthorized trip to Ohio in violation of his probation. Dickey sentenced Durham to 53 days which was the time served in the county jail awaiting the violation hearing after Durham said he would stay out of trouble and comply with his probation.

Judge Dickey issued an arrest warrant for Durham Feb. 6 after he failed to contact his probation officer for his scheduled monthly meeting set on or before the fifth of each month. According to court papers, Durham moved See Missing, Page 5A

Tourism tax proposal angers hotel owners

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Hotel and motel owners and managers are angry over a proposal to add a $1 per night tax to rooms. Their objections are in response to state Rep. Alzo Reddick's latest attempt to find a tourism promotion tax all areas of the industry could accept.

"I'm totally opposed to this," said Charles Coss, Manager of Super-8 Motel at Interstate-4 and S.R. 46 in Sanford. "They keep adding on and adding on, telling us the money will be used in promotion, then they end up using the money for other purposes."

"The legislature is turning us into another New York City situation," Coss added, "where the taxes and extra charges on hotel and motel rooms are eating people alive."

Jack Wert, of the Seminole County Tourist Development Council is also opposed to the tax. "I haven't had an opportunity to discuss the proposal with the council yet," he said, "but I believe the hotels are already paying for plenty of tourist promotions."

He added, "They should leave hotels and motels alone and concentrate on the other factions which depend on the tourism industry, but don't pay a dime."

Wert admitted some parts of the state are in need of additional funds with which to increase tourism promotion. "Compared to some states," he said, "Florida doesn't spend much on promotion, but I don't believe the problem is here in Central Florida. These people are already taxed See Tax, Page 5A

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Sheriffs, Crenshaw unite

Chiles urged not to veto a 7,000 prison beds program

By CURT ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — The Florida Sheriffs Association board joined Senate President Ander Crenshaw in asking Gov. Lawton Chiles not to veto a 7,000-bed prison construction program passed by the Legislature.

But Chiles, who favors a 21,000-bed program financed by a 25-cents-a-pack cigarette tax increase, was undaunted.

"I'll take serious consideration of that before I veto the bill," Chiles said Thursday.

Crenshaw, a Jacksonville Republican who may challenge Chiles in the 1994 governor's race, called a news conference to announce the Sheriffs Association board had unanimously passed a resolution opposing the veto.

"There's money in the budget to begin building prison beds now," Crenshaw said. "If he vetoes those 7,000 prison beds, then he's doing it to raise taxes. It's going to be the politics of fear, the politics of failure."

The current Sheriffs Association president, St. Lucie County Sheriff R.C. "Bobby" Knowles, has been named as a possible running mate for Crenshaw. But Knowles said Thursday the sheriffs are simply concerned about public safety at the lowest cost.

"If we can avoid taxing our citizens, I think that's what we ought to do," Knowles said. Chiles said the Sheriffs Association had previously gone on record supporting a permanent prison financing source such as the cigarette tax.

"The Florida Sheriffs Association would have the state again fall into a dangerous trap, making a promise it cannot deliver," Chiles said.

Without a tax source, Chiles said there is no operating money for the Legislature's prison program and that there is only planning and design money for 1,900 of the beds.

"I'm confident that most will see the Senate plan for what it is — a fraud against the law-abiding citizens of this state," the governor said.

By VIVIEN BISHOP

LAKE MARY — Students at Lake Mary Elementary School will be at the center of a cultural arts celebration at the Lake Mary City Hall Park this evening from 6:30 to 9 p.m.

There will be entertainment for and by young and old alike.

Also, an accomplished professional harpist, who plays regularly at the Hyatt Regency Grand Cypress Hotel in Orlando will play classical and popular music.

Embryos disposal delayed

By Associated Press

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — A judge can delay but can't stop the inevitable disposal of seven human embryos held in cryogenic storage since 1989.

Blount Circuit Judge Dale Young, who once called the four-to-eight-cell embryos "children in vitro," ruled Thursday they could be destroyed in six months if their divorced progenitors couldn't agree on an alternative.

Mary Sue Davis Stowe, now living in Titusville, Fla., and her former husband Junior Lewis Davis have waged a four-year court battle over control of the embryos, which they conceived while married and attempting pregnancy through in vitro fertilization.

Stowe wants the embryos used either by implanting them in herself or another woman. Davis objects to any use that could bring them to term and make him a parent.

Young on Thursday granted Stowe's request for a six-month "cooling-off period." He said it would give Stowe and Davis time to "fully reflect on the consequences of their failure to agree as to the disposition of their cryopreserved embryos."

If Stowe and Davis can't agree, Young said the embryos should be turned over to Davis "for the sole and express purpose of discarding" them.

Dick Haash, Stowe's lawyer, called Young's decision "a six-month stay of execution" that might change the outcome.

"It's our feeling that with the courts now out of this, if the lawyers will withdraw and give these people a chance to think and have some positive dialogue, it can only result in something good," he said.

Charles Clifford, Davis' attorney, said six months will not change his client's mind.

"I'm very puzzled why the judge has required this cooling-off period. Mr. Davis' mind has been made up for four years," Clifford said.

But Davis and Stowe have been resolute since the beginning.

Longwood man sentenced

Officials call case largest insurance swindle prosecuted

ORLANDO — George V. Doherty Jr. of Longwood has been sentenced to up to six years and eight months in federal prison for his involvement in the largest insurance swindle prosecuted to date.

Doherty and two others were sentenced Thursday by U.S. District Judge G. Kendall Sharp in the $34.5 million International Forum of Florida Health Benefit Trust health care insurance fraud scheme. Some 6,000 small businesses with 40,000 employees were bilked out of $34.5 million in insurance premiums while Doherty and the other defendants left some $50 million in health care claims unpaid while they drained insurance trust accounts.

Doherty, a IFFHBT trustee, plead guilty on Dec. 28, 1992 to racketeering, including mail fraud, embezzlement, money laundering and kickbacks. In addition to the prison term, Doherty will be required to pay the victims $34.5 million in restitution through the Florida Department of Insurance. He will be under a three-year federal supervision after his release.

April M. McGlawn of Clearwater, who plead guilty in December to conspiracy to commit money laundering and embezzlement, was sentenced to six months home confinement, followed by two years of supervision after her release. She was required to pay $111,795 in restitution.

Robert L. Searle of Miami

plead guilty in December to aiding in the preparation of a false corporate income tax return. Searle was sentenced Thursday to two years in prison, followed by one year of supervision. He was required to pay $183,020 to victims.

Sentencing for a fourth defendant, John L. Gazitua is scheduled for June 18. Gazitua of Miami, who is described by assistant federal prosecutor James Glazebrook as a principle with Doherty, pleaded guilty in December to 15 counts of mail fraud, embezzlement, money laundering, kickbacks and racketeering. According to information provided by the U.S. Middle District Attorney's Office in Orlando, Gazitua has agreed to pay $34.5 million in restitution, pay all back taxes and forfeit up to $34.5 million in assets.

Salvation Army retail store closes

By NICK PFEIFAU

SANFORD — The Salvation Army Thrift Store, at 408 S. Sanford Avenue is closing. Today will be the final day of operation.

Salvation Army Capt. Gary Bergen said plans for re-opening at another location have been under discussion for several months.

Donations will still be accepted at the Salvation Army's main facility at 700 W. 24th Street in Sanford, as well as the collection center at the Winter Park Mall, and the Winter Park store located at 495 S. Semoran Blvd.

"We've been operating the thrift store at the present location for almost three years,"

Bergen said. "Our intent is to find another location in the Sanford area, probably of a larger size, where we can serve more of the people including the Deltona area."

"Meanwhile," he continued, "we want to assure all who are in need of clothing and furniture, as well as those who want to help local residents in need, that service will continue without interruption." He continued, "The local Emergency Assistance Office, (at Salvation Army headquarters in Sanford), will continue to take applications for assistance."

Bergen said, "Those meeting the assistance guidelines will have their needs met either through an in-house clothing room at the Sanford office, or will be helped through the Winter Park facility."

Truck pick-up service for Seminole County will be expanding to a daily (Monday through Friday) service instead of the previous two days per week scheduling. The pick-up service can be arranged by calling the toll free number, 1-800-232-0530.

"The main plans connected to the closure," he said, "are to improve services to both contributors and recipients of donated furniture, clothing and other items through the Salvation Army in Seminole County."

For information regarding the operation, move, or other services, phone the Salvation Army in Sanford at 322-0530.

What's going on in school

SANFORD — The Seminole County school system faces special challenges every day and they want to tell everyone about how they are meeting those challenges.

On Saturday, the school district will present a unique show and exhibit at the Altamonte Mall in Altamonte Springs.

The exhibit will highlight the new approaches and programs that are being implemented throughout the school system.

Year round education in elementary and middle schools, the construction of a seventh high school and Seminole High School's new academy of Health Occupations will be among the programs that will be showcased. There will be information available on different programs and there will be experts on hand to answer questions.

According to Jane Lane of the district's community involvement department, the theme of the program will be "Where we are today and where we're going tomorrow."

The schools in Seminole County receive among the lowest allotments of any school district in the state from the Florida Department of Education, records indicate.

"Yet we consistently perform better than other districts on standardized tests and on other measurements," school board member Nancy Warren said.

Seminole County was the only district in the state in which all the high schools received accountability grants for meeting state-mandated improvement goals.

"We are doing so much with so little," Warren added.

Several video and printed presentations about the accomplishments of the school district have been prepared and will be shown on Saturday. The videos and other materials are often used when the district goes to recruit teachers and to promote the school system to businesses considering a move to Seminole County.

This weekend, the program will also be highlighted by live performances by student choruses, musical troupes and other student groups.

The presentation will take place at the Altamonte Mall from 1 to 7 p.m. on Saturday. It is free to the public.

Alternatives to early release

State Corrections Secretary Harry Singletary says he will have to add 5,241 "lesser criminal offenders" to the early release program. He attributes the need to prison overcrowding.

In Sanford, Seminole County Sheriff Don Ealinger suggested an alternative. He proposed "Sprung Structures," portable buildings with heat and air conditioning, capable of being erected within 60 days at a fraction of the cost of major prison facilities.

He suggested placing them on property owned by the state or federal government which is not presently in use.

We believe this is an exceptionally good concept. Ealinger wants something to be done to prevent the early release of prisoners, rather than continuously changing the level of criminals who can be freed.

Certainly other law enforcement leaders in the state have proposed similar approaches. We wonder why they have not been given consideration.

Things are being accomplished, but not to solve the problem, only to extend it.

Governor Lawton Chiles is expected to call a special legislative session next month, and request approval for the additional early releases.

Meanwhile, he is stumping the state asking for a 25¢ per-pack tax on cigarettes, to obtain money for additional prison beds.

The legislature previously set aside money which will supply 3,710 so-called "hard" prison beds. Only 1,100 could be built and staffed by 1994.

Another 1,461 would be built for such facilities as community-based drug courts and centers.

What is needed now is an immediate solution to the expanding prisoner release problem. The "Sprung Structures" may be one answer, but this suggestion appears to be reaching deaf ears in Tallahassee.

When our correction facilities are forced to turn out a prisoner because another has been sentenced, the people released will eventually be more hardened criminals.

Many people report crimes or identify criminals in a line-up. Knowing a convict could be released within months may cause this to cease due to fear of retribution.

Law officers have made a good suggestion. We urge our governor and legislative leaders to listen.

Allowing a convict to be released after serving only 20 percent of a sentence is not the way government should treat its people.

Thanking volunteers

April 19-24 is National Volunteer Week, and we would like to take this occasion to publicly thank the people we believe are the most dedicated volunteers in our community — the 637 volunteers of Hospice of Central Florida.

Most people know that Hospice provides a very special kind of care for terminally ill persons and their families. But it's less known that, were it not for our volunteers, our hospice could barely function. In 1988 alone, they saved our organization more than $678,000 in one of the most difficult years ever for non-profits.

Hospice uses a team approach to care for dying persons. A team typically includes a physician, a nurse, a home health aide, a counselor, a member of the clergy, and a volunteer. We rely heavily on volunteers to augment the services of our professional staff.

Most of our volunteers work on these teams directly assisting patients, but others help in our office, our speakers bureau, our transportation team, and on a variety of boards and committees. More than 100 volunteers enable us to operate two third shifts which last year generated $60,000 for Martin Andersen Hospice House.

Volunteers are so important to Hospice of Central Florida that Medicare regulations require that part of our work hours be provided on a volunteer basis. This makes Hospice unique. Nationally, almost 70,000 of the 90,000 hospice workers are volunteers; last year, they gave over 5 million hours of their precious time to serve the dying and their families. At Hospice of Central Florida alone, volunteers contributed 35,152 hours and drove 152,063 miles in 1992.

We're pleased to say our volunteer force continues to grow, with 133 new recruits last year. The powerful force of volunteerism continues to shine brightly in our country. We send our heartfelt thanks to all the hospice volunteers who have unselfishly contributed their time and talent to help their fellow human beings.

Chavis' success depends on you

Benjamin — son of Jacob, Benjamin Franklin — American statesman. Benjamin Franklin Chavis Jr. — executive director of the NAACP.

That's an audacious cognominal legacy for America's newest leader. But a name can't guarantee success.

Chavis, 45, a member of the same generation as William Jefferson Clinton, 46, will need the fund-raising talents of Billy Graham, the political shrewdness of Lyndon Johnson, the charisma of Michael Jordan, the negotiating skills of Cyrus Vance, the cross-over appeal of Michael Jackson and the patience of Job.

Patience is an old acquaintance of Chavis'. Like great heroes who protested injustice, Martin Luther King Jr., Henry David Thoreau and Mohandas K. Gandhi, Chavis was convicted by bigotry and sentenced to serve time. He was wrongfully convicted of trying to firebomb a Wilmington, N.C., grocery store. The conviction was subsequently overturned. While in prison he earned a master's degree in divinity.

Now comes the meanest burden of all. He's got to reassociate an enfeebled civil rights giant that lost touch years ago with the masses and is still living on the borrowed time of yesterday's glories.

But the youthful minister is ready. Armed with two major degrees — a Ph.D. and a B.B.O.B.

(being black on the streets) — the North Carolina-born Chavis started training for this job when he took out an NAACP membership at age 12.

"Ben always had a love for people," said his proud, soft-spoken sister, Dr. Helen Chavis Othow, chair of the English Department of St. Augustine's College. "Our older sister, June Chavis Davenport, was a mentor for Ben. June is a retired science teacher. A third sister, Francis Chavis, is a physician."

These values still guide his life. Happily married to Martha R. Chavis, he is the father of six children, ages 25 to 2. (A busy brother!) For black and white America, Ben Chavis' life teaches two lessons. (1) A strong and lovingly united black family (both his father and mother were educators) can turn out high achievers. (2) And black families who stay together can ennoble this nation. In the midnight gloom of disintegrating family values, the Chavis family is a cheerful lighthouse of distinction.

For the most part, blacks have stabilized their civil rights. What all of us must do now is fight civil wrongs.

This means that Ben Chavis must focus on the inauguration of programs to help arrest the decline of two-parent black families, the spread of drive-by shootings in the nation's capital, gang-organized riots in Los Angeles, rapacious lawlessness in Detroit, biracial confrontations in New York City and collapsing educational systems in the nation's ghettos.

"I'm not a stranger in the 'hood," he said. "I know we need to reach out and embrace our young people."

One example of his creative approach to civil rights is his new initiative against "environmental racism," the disproportionate placement of incinerators and waste dumps in low-income minority communities.

Chavis has also reaffirmed the NAACP's historic commitment to interracialism, or today's variation on that theme, multiculturalism.

Clinton plan short on specifics

WASHINGTON — Bill Clinton's recently unveiled federal budget — 1,478 pages crisscrossed with hundreds of numbers in very small type — is being called a "wealth budget" by some because it seems to raise more questions than it answers.

Budget Director Louis Funston calls the Clinton budget a "bold plan aimed at reducing the deficit, changing priorities and investing in the future of our people and our country." In the abstract, this may be true. Reading the plan closely, however, you are hard pressed to understand how it will accomplish this.

Even given its mind-numbing length, this budget is still more of a blueprint about where the administration wants to go than a specific road map about how it intends to get there. It talks about huge cuts, but doesn't detail what will be cut. It asks for billions in new spending, while remaining vague on where the money will come from.

In order to meet spending plans recently adopted by Congress, and reluctantly endorsed by the administration, Clinton is now agreeing to cut $68.7 billion more over the next five fiscal years than he was prepared to cut as recently as February. These additional cuts are the real basis for saying, as Vice President Gore did, that "this budget backs away at the deficit." But nowhere in the budget does it say what will be cut to make this reduction.

Actually the administration must cut close to $90 billion over the next five years. The current budget plan calls for new spending or revenue reductions of about $10 billion more than originally envisioned. This is the total of programs the administration wanted to cut, but has agreed not to, or revenues it wanted to raise, but now won't. This is the result of deals cut with influential lawmakers in order to get the budget through.

For instance, the administration wanted to slash funds for mass transit, and reduce funds for homeownership under several Department of Housing and Urban Development programs. These funds have been restored in the new budget after Clinton was bluntly told by influential Democrats in the Senate that they would not support the budget if the funds were cut.

Likewise, the centerpiece of the Clinton tax increase is a new energy tax, which the administration boasted would be fair because it would tax all sources of energy equally.

That has now changed radically. Under intense pressure from the mostly Democratic congressional delegations of the Northeast, home heating oil will be taxed less heavily than other forms of energy in order to hold down next winter's home heating bills.

West Virginia is coal country, and coal companies were upset that, for the first time, coal was to be taxed at the mine. Although this is the most efficient way of taxing coal, and would have resulted in significant revenue increases, it would have jacked the price of domestic coal and made it less competitive with foreign coal. If the coal companies are upset, then Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., chairman of the Appropriations Committee, is upset. If Sen. Byrd is upset, then no new budget will ever get through the Senate.

The result: Coal will not be taxed at the mine, but at the utilities that use it, or the distributors. Costs will be passed along directly to the consumer. The government will get considerably less. domestic coal will continue to be a favored fuel source, and Sen. Byrd will support the bill.

The administration is trying to explain away the plan's current lack of specificity by noting that $90 billion over five years is rather insignificant in a $1.5 trillion annual budget. But, in point of fact, all these cuts will have to come from discretionary spending, and that adds up to only about $250 billion annually.

If the bill is silent on the specifics of long-term revenue increases and deep cuts, it is just as silent on a number of key short-term issues that specifically affect the fiscal '94 budget.

The new budget, with its economic stimulus package, exceeds the domestic spending cap approved by Congress for fiscal year '94 by $5.4 billion. But the budget does not detail where this more than $5 billion is going to come from — additional cuts or new revenue.

The bill specifies cuts department by department. We know, for instance, that next year the Agriculture Department will be cut by a little more than 4 percent and the Department of Energy by more than 5 percent. However, nowhere is it specified where these cuts will be made, and if you talk to people at the departments involved, all they know are the gross numbers involved, but they have no idea where the money is actually going to come from.

The same is true across government. The administration calls these cuts "streamlining." In answer to a question about specifics, an Office of Management and Budget spokesman said the details "remain to be seen."

Bill Clinton's federal budget is being called a 'wealth budget' by some because it seems to raise more questions than it answers.

Prison overcrowding has Florida reeling

WASHINGTON — Mary Heggie of Broward County, Fla., believes the criminal justice system has broken faith with her family. That's why she now keeps close tabs on the whereabouts of Walter Ross Lewis.

Five years ago, Lewis stabbed Heggie's daughter to death with a butcher knife. Lewis had been released on parole for good behavior after serving eight years of a 25-year sentence for raping a 63-year-old woman and pistol-whipping a bus driver. Heggie's daughter was a six-months pregnant when Lewis assaulted her. Both mother and unborn child died of the stab wounds.

Lewis is back in jail now. Heggie wonders how long "the guy who gets a ticket or buys a little drug is doing the full (jail) time." Heggie told our associate Dean Boyd, "But the murderers and rapists are getting off with a slap on the wrist. ... Within a couple of months, I'm afraid it may be my guy who gets out."

Heggie has good cause to worry. Thanks to severe prison overcrowding, about 2,000 Florida inmates walk out of jail early each month — most having served about one-third of their time. In the last fiscal year, parole officials released 24,713 state prisoners early. By October, prison officials will have to release a prisoner for every one admitted.

Florida's early release program is the tragic result of good intentions gone terribly askew. As the drug culture stirred up a national hysteria in the 1980s, politicians spared no effort to show how tough they could be on users and sellers. Legislatures passed stiff new laws that abolished parole, and mandated lengthy prison terms for possessing even the smallest amounts of illegal substances.

The American Bar Association summed up the problem in a recent report: "While drug use is decreasing and violent crime is increasing, the criminal justice system is directing more of its resources to drug offenses and less to violent crime — resulting in an increasing proportion of persons imprisoned for drug offenses and a decreasing proportion imprisoned for violent crimes."

"Get tough" policies on drugs have led to a federal-prison system where more than half of all inmates are there on drug charges. The Office of National Drug Control Policy estimates that by 1996 drug offenders will comprise two-thirds of the federal prison population. Justice Department statistics show that since 1980, the average sentence for federal drug offenders has increased by 37 months, while violent offenders are spending an average of 34 fewer months in jail.

In Florida, where a court order bans overcrowding in state prisons, the steady stream of drug offenders serving mandatory terms is now forcing more violent inmates out. "It's not leaving any beds for the killers and rapists," says Sarah Armwine of the Florida State Attorney's office in Miami. Long considered a state tough on criminals, Florida now leads the nation in violent crime and in the early release of inmates.

"You have to ask yourself the key question," says Kevin Roberts of the Florida Parole Commission. "Is the first-time drug offender more dangerous than a guy who assaulted someone with a knife? We have cases of non-violent habitual offenders and drug offenders we'd rather release, but we can't touch them. It gets to a point where the only thing left that's eligible are the violent offenders. It doesn't make sense."

Given trying circumstances, Florida prison officials do their best to select the best candidates for early release. But there are always those who return to their old ways.

Five years ago, Lewis stabbed Heggie's daughter to death with a butcher knife.

Webster had included another provision to address that situation. The trust was to be dissolved and the money divided among three institutions, Bethune-Cookman College in Daytona Beach; Massachusetts College of Pharmacy in Boston; and SMH.

But at the time of Freda Webster's death, the value of the estate had blossomed to about $5.4 million. Bethune-Cookman and Massachusetts College each received their $1.8 million share and teamed up to seek the third share, arguing they were sole surviving beneficiaries. By 1991, the SMH board had long since been dissolved and the hospital sold to Hospital Corp. of America. Brown said the two educational institutions testified they wanted the money for their campus construction programs.

The county sued, arguing it was due the one-third share because they continued the SMH mission to serve medically needy residents. HCA sued, saying it had bought SMH, so it was the rightful successor to their share. Brown said HCA planned to use the money to offset their indigent emergency care expenses at HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford. The windfall would be used to increase stockholder dividends, Brown said.

WVHA sued, arguing it now served the residents of DeBary. Webster had intended to benefit with his gift to SMH, then the nearest hospital to DeBary. They were building a new hospital near Deltona which would be closer to the DeBary residents. If they won the share, it would be used to offset business expenses, said Brown.

Last July, Volusia County Circuit Judge Edwin P.B. Sanders ruled Webster intended to benefit his neighbors and WVHA would soon do that with their new hospital. Sanders wrote Webster had no intent to help indigents of Seminole County residents. The county, HCA and the Bethune-Cookman — Massachusetts partnership appealed the decision. Brown said HCA subsequently dropped out.

Brown noted Webster had a 1959 will that named Fish Memorial Hospital as a successor, but his trustee testified Webster wanted Fish out of his 1983 will because most DeBary residents went to SMH. Fish is owned by WVHA.

Students, teachers, administrators and staff have been collecting and creating items for sale at the event. Every club and organization will be participating with a booth that will raise money for that particular group.

Community organizations, businesses and individuals have donated items to be sold at the auction. The money raised as the auctioneers try to get the best prices for the items will be divided evenly among the groups.

Stiffey said that the variety of items donated for the auction and flea market booths is very good this year.

"Everyone has worked very hard this year," she said.

According to Bobby Lundquist, assistant principal and another organizer of Springfest, some of the items that will be placed on the auction block include:

A Bobby Bowden-autographed football, a Jim Kelly-autographed football, Orlando Magic and Orlando Predator memorabilia, 35 precious gems, including sapphires, garnets, emeralds and rubies, gift certificates for the Grand Romance, for Disney World, for Church Street Station, for the Colonial Room and for Pizza Hut, Coke glasses, a Seminole High School jacket and Ray Ban sunglasses. There will be many more items as well.

The auctioneers, including Tom Stiffey, from Central Florida Auction in Sanford, are very experienced in making the bidding exciting.

Seminole's annual fundraiser has been very popular in the community in past years. It is a great place for bargain hunters to help support the school.

Master barbecue chefs from the Seminole High School community will begin preparing the finger-licking good barbecue chicken dinner just before noon and start serving when the first batch of birds is done.

Meals, which include chicken, crispy cole slaw, delicious baked beans and some tasty bread, will cost $4 each.

Diners can eat their meals, picnic style, around the grassy open spaces, in the large landscaped quadrangle or under the towering pines around the campus or they can bring the meal with them to enjoy at home.

The flea market and carnival will open at 9 a.m. and remain open until 5 p.m. It will be under the covered walkways surrounding the quadrangle.

The auction, which will take place in the school's auditorium will begin promptly at 3 p.m.

Tax

too much." Reddick, an Orlando Democrat, proposed the $1-a-night tax on lodgings to raise $80 million a year for tourism promotion and economic development.

"It's absolutely unfair," said Tom Stied, president of Oceans 11 Resort in Daytona Beach Shores. "What you are going to do is drive the smaller hotels out of business."

The room tax was a switch from previous plans considered by the Florida Tourism Commission for more broad-based taxes that would take in areas such as restaurants and attractions.

"The commission ... is in a state of shock, given that it has just received a proposal that is diametrically opposed to what it has been working on for years," Hayward Benson Jr., executive vice president of Gray Line of Fort Lauderdale, said at the group's meeting Wednesday in Tampa.

Reddick, chairman of the House Tourism and Economic Development committee, proposed a $1-a-night surcharge on hotel rooms, condominium units and campground spaces.

Forty percent of the money would go for tourism promotion and the rest for economic development, he said. "We cannot separate the economic well-being of the tourism industry from the well-being of the community as a whole."

Reddick said he was trying to end a longstanding struggle to find a politically acceptable source of tourism promotion dollars.

Current proposals are doomed because opposition from the restaurant industry and lack of consensus throughout the tourism industry, he said. Hotel owners said they shouldn't be singled out, especially since many counties already impose resort taxes on hotel and motel rooms and camping spaces.

Many commission members at first seemed unwilling to accept Reddick's contention their current tax proposals couldn't make it through the legislature, but later focused on ways to modify Reddick's proposal.

Some members said the success of such a plan would depend on the willingness of major tourist attractions to shoulder a share of the burden.

Commission Chairman Bruce Nierenberg, president of Costa Cruise Lines, said he thought if attractions agreed to pay a fair share, so would the cruise industry.

In a letter dated Dec. 8, 1992 to Judge Dickey, the victim's mother, Delores Barkley said, "The criminal justice system is just that—just for the criminal—the revolving door justice."

Further she said, "This system denies justice to the victim and oppressed. We have no rights." She went on in the lengthy letter to describe Durham as "a sinister, diabolical, cold-blooded murderer who should not have been allowed to live much less be set free. What a sham. Justice has been perverted."

A Rite of Renewal

Mmmm ... how sweet the sensation ... those warm wispy fingers caressing your face and running through your hair like faithful friends returning from a long journey. You run to meet them ... smell the fresh familiar fragrance. You embrace Spring.
Spring is a rite of renewal. It is a running start at life. Catch it quickly and run with it! Soar with the seedlings planted in fertile soil, flowering with faith, petals turned toward the sky.
There is yet another rite of renewal, a weekly renewal with God, the Creator, in His house. Visit regularly and you shall depart refreshed and rejoicing, facing the firmament, filled with strength for whatever challenges life may offer. Embrace Spring. Embrace God.

... and your business will look down from the sky.

Progress M.B. Church rededicates sanctuary after a year

By MARVA HAWKINS
Herald Columnist

MIDWAY — Progress Missionary Baptist Church, under the guidance of The Rev. Emory Blake, marched into its renovated sanctuary on Sunday morning, April 18, at 11 a.m.

Pastor Blake, Charlie Luster, chairman of the Deacon Board, Bob and Betty Sonnenberg, of Holy Cross Episcopal Church, and the Rev. Andrew Evans, Congress No. One president and pastor of Morning Glory Missionary Baptist Church, led over 100 members, well-wishers and Christians in the morning service.

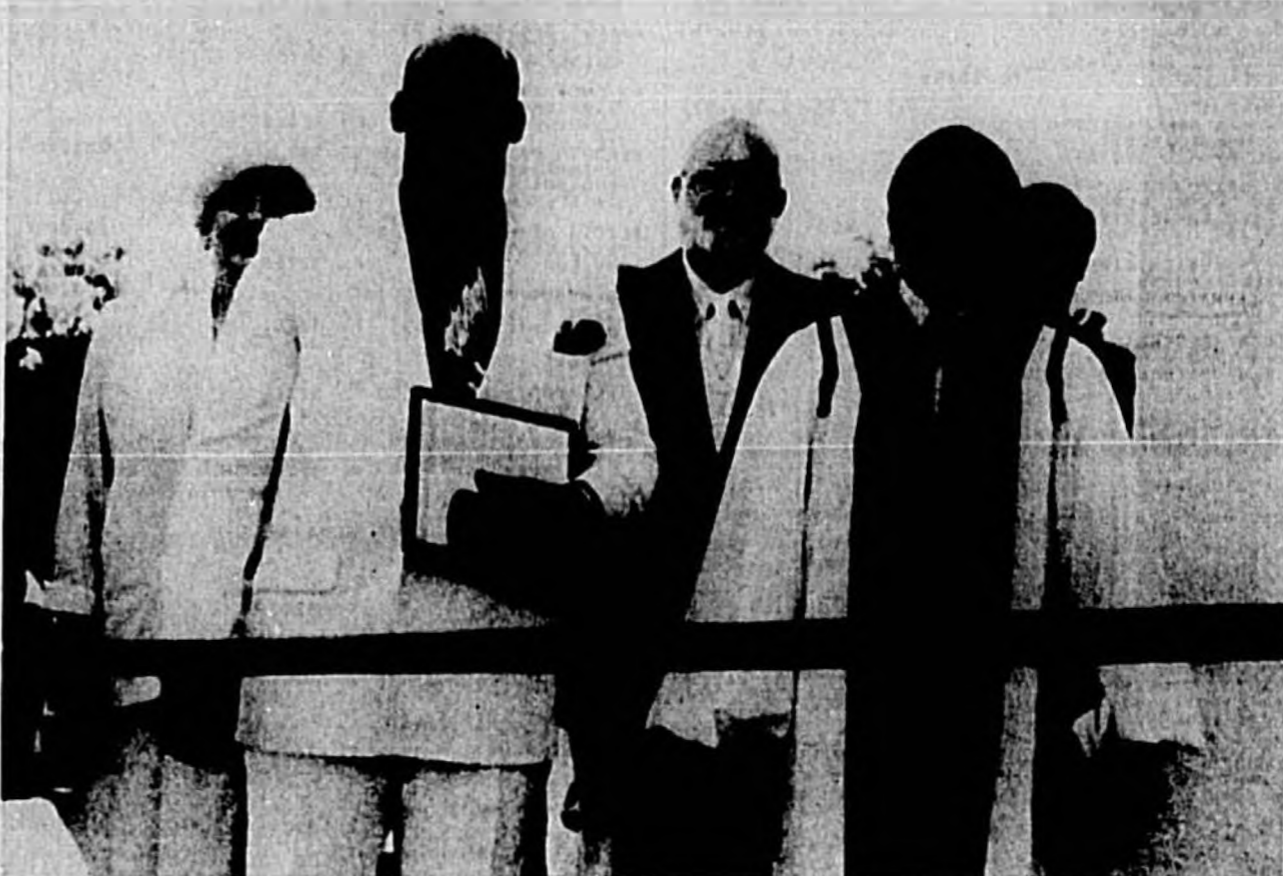

Choirs from Progress and Morning Glory Baptist churches presented the music for the morning's worship, with Sister Gloria Williams at the console.

The theme of the processional, "We Have Come This Far By Faith," rang true throughout the service as the participants raised their voices in praise.

The sanctuary fell victim to a fire in April of 1992, gutting the inside of the church and leaving the congregation to hold services wherever they could. Since that time the community, members and well-wishers have responded to the many needs of the congregation. Through prayer, donations and hard work from the Rev. Blake and the congregation, they saw their dream fulfilled and prayers answered Sunday.

The rededication of the church was presided over by the Rev. W. Frank Williams, pastor of Mt. Zion Baptist Church.

The significance of the service, by Brother Tracy Cashe, opened the service and words of welcome were extended by Sister Cynthia Butler.

A special musical tribute was sung by Patricia Hitchmon, followed by a special presentation to Pastor Blake by Sister Eva Stephen, the oldest member of Progress.

The Blake family presented the pastor with a gift and a Bible for the pulpit was accepted on behalf of the church by Sister Stephen.

The message of the morning was delivered by the Rev. Andrew Evans and the Dedication Litany was given by the Rev. W. Frank Williams.

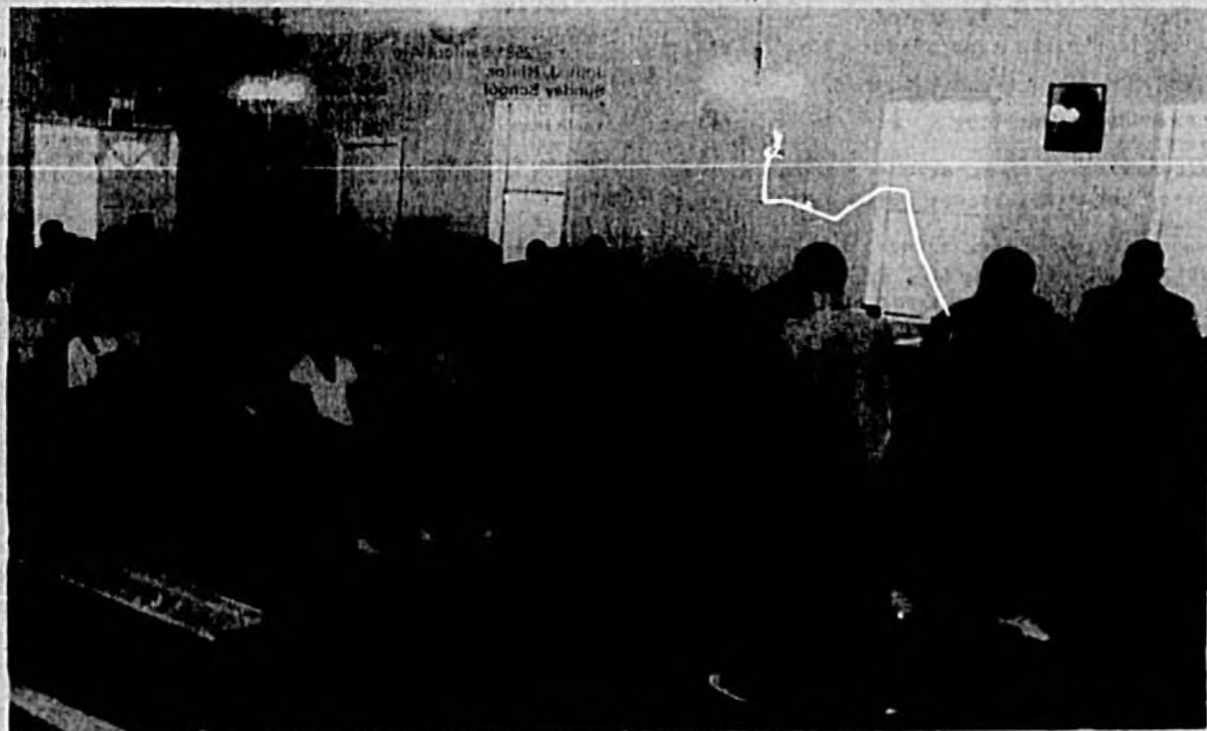

Special thanks and appreciation was given to Mt. Olive

A.M.E. Church, with Elder Robert Smith, pastor.

Special recognition was given to Sister Christine Luster, chairwoman of the event, her committee and Sister Dorothea W. Fogle, coordinator.

A dinner was enjoyed after the service by the congregation and guests.

Rapped up in Christ

Second Shiloh Missionary Baptist Church, Sanford, held a seminar for all ages on Saturdays with the theme "Let's Talk About Sex," a teen rap covering subjects from AIDS and interracial relationships to sex. Local rap groups including "BMP (Brothers Made Perfect)," from left to right, Buck Ramirez, Quadar Davis and Lantz Davis, and Arturo Roque, not pictured, performed a original raps on what not to do in the streets. The Rev. R. T. Davis, right, the rappin' pastor, said he saw a need to have the church and young people address this issue in the African-American communities and encouraged the teens to be honest with themselves and not fall victims to peer pressure. Because of this need, the seminar will be held each month at the church.

Many seek work after jobless benefits run out

By JOHN D. McCLAIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Michael Collard feels left out. Congress provided money this week to pay for the latest extension of federal emergency jobless benefits, but the unemployed former library instructor won't get any.

Collard, 50, who lives in Jonesboro, Ill., is one several million jobless Americans no longer eligible for unemployment insurance benefits.

Contrary to a widespread perception — at least among those with jobs — benefit payments do not continue indefinitely even if people are unable to find new work.

The states administer the regular programs that provide assistance for up to 26 weeks for people who lose their jobs through no fault of their own.

Because of the recession and a shortage of jobs, Congress voted in 1991 for a federal emergency extension of benefits to the jobless for up to 26 more weeks if needed while they continued to seek employment.

The continuing slack job growth resulted in three more extensions, including one in March. The Senate approved on Wednesday and the House on Thursday a $4 billion measure to pay for the latest extension through next fall.

However, the extensions apply only to the program itself not to the individual job-seeker. The extensions provide additional — but one-time — assistance to the jobless who have exhausted their state aid. Once those additional weeks are over, unemployed workers no longer are eligible for benefits.

"If people use up their state benefits, get federal benefits and use those up, there is in effect nothing left for them," said Markley Roberts, an AFL-CIO economist. "They fall out of the income support system."

"There are at least 5 million people who are jobless, who need some kind of income support and are not getting unemployment compensation," Roberts estimated.

Labor Secretary Robert B. Reich, whose department oversees the programs, agreed in an interview that "there is not really a safety net" for those exhausting their benefits.

Reich has been leading the Clinton administration's efforts for expanded and improved job training to help the unemployed find jobs, but acknowledged his efforts would not provide any further income support for the long-term unemployed.

"If they've lost their jobs, they're going to have to get by on their savings or borrow money," he said. "I would also tell these people that the best hope they have over the next six to eight months is a revived economy."

Tailhook report to call for punishment

By SUSANNE M. SCHAPER
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon's final report on the sexual misconduct of Navy and Marine Corps aviators at a 1991 convention calls for widespread disciplinary action, military officials say.

Pentagon officials say that the report will recommend about 140 to 150 individuals be referred for potential disciplinary proceedings and that at least a dozen courts-martial could be anticipated.

Dozens of women, more than half of them naval officers, say they were pawed and abused in a hotel hallway gantlet by drunken fliers during the three-day event in Las Vegas.

But the new report also will contend that the men went beyond fondling the women at the rowdy gathering that featured topless barmaids and X-rated movies, according to Pentagon officials speaking on condition of anonymity.

The report will allege that some men exposed themselves and engaged in public sex acts with women, the officials said.

"It's not a pretty picture," said one official with knowledge of the report. "We need to let people know just how bad it was, so this stuff doesn't happen again."

The report is expected to be released by the Pentagon today.

Some 1,500 people attended the private convention of aviation boosters, including 33 admirals from the active duty ranks and the reserve. The Tailhook group takes its name from the hook used to brake jets landing on aircraft carriers.

The report, completed several months ago by Pentagon deputy inspector general Derek Vander Schaaf, will touch off months of additional investigations by Navy and Marine Corps legal officers and could reach into the highest ranks of the service.

No names will be used in the version of the report slated for public release, the officials said.

The first part of the report is composed of a detailed description of the events at convention.

The second section of the report, which will not be made public, deals with the individual cases. They are expected to be handed over to high-ranking Navy and Marine officers.

The commander of the Navy's surface ships in the Atlantic, Vice Adm. Joseph Reason, is to head a Navy's panel. Maj. Gen. Charles Krulak, the commander of the combat development command in Quantico, Va., is to take the Marine post.

They will review the allegations contained in the report, as well as any other evidence they may choose to look at, and then decide what, if any, disciplinary action should be taken.

Those officers will determine whether the cases against the individuals should be sent through a court-martial proceeding or whether they should be judged through an administrative process known as a captain's mast.

A court-martial is called to try the military's most serious offenses. A captain's mast deals with non-criminal acts that usually involve disciplinary matters.

The Tailhook scandal has dragged on over the past 18 months, and already has claimed the job of Navy Secretary H. Lawrence Garrett III. He took responsibility for "a failure of leadership" that allowed the event to occur.

Last September, Vander Schaaf issued an initial report that faulted the Navy for mishandling its own investigation of the incident, resulting in two admirals losing their jobs and a third admiral being reassigned.

Gray-haired lesbians find freedom, prejudices

By CONNIE CASS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — With their silver-gray hair and comfortable shoes, they look like somebody's grandmother, and most of them are. They also are lesbians.

These women who will walk at the fore of the gay rights march on Sunday grew up when the word "lesbian" wasn't spoken aloud. Fourteen members of Old Lesbians Organized for Change, all of them over 60, gathered this week to recall the days when a gay rights march was unthinkable.

"I came of age in the late '40s. Who was out then? I didn't know what it was to be a lesbian," said one 61-year-old woman who asked not to be named. "What was there to do but get married?"

Ten of the 14 did marry men, even though most realized before they walked down the aisle that they were lesbians. Some were married 30 years or more, and the majority have children. Those who were single led secret lives.

"It was a terrible double life, you were always hiding, always lying," said Ruth Silver, 74, who grew up in New York in the '30s. She found other young women who were "different" through track and basketball.

Silver looks with envy at the long list of books, magazines and clubs available today to her 40-year-old daughter, also a lesbian.

"We never discussed it in my day," she said. "You just were."

Some lesbians said they first met women "like me" when they joined the Women's Army Corps or took factory jobs in World War II. Others met at gay bars in big cities. They knew to keep their private lives private.

"We were thought of as being sick, as being like criminals," said Ruth, 66, a Maryland teacher who fears she will lose her job if she discloses her last name. "We were discharged from schools, we were institutionalized, we were lobotomized, we were given shock therapy."

Elaine Mikels, 72, worked for the American Friends Service Committee in Germany, aiding orphans rescued from concentration camps, until a State Department background check revealed she had "lesbian leanings." She was forced to quit her job and return home.

Mikels, who now lives in Santa Fe, N.M., said some of her lesbian friends were so scarred by McCarthy-era witch hunts that they will never recover.

"Some women are so afraid, they're still living in the '50s," she said.

That overwhelming fear is foreign to the younger generation of lesbians, although worries about gay-bashing and job discrimination remain.

"In recent years it's been easier for young women to decide to come out," said Jennifer Brier, 22, who co-designed a gay history exhibit to complement the march. "But it's never easy."

Jennifer Martin, a 19-year-old college student from Somerville, Mass., believes she may be bisexual and feels a modern freedom to experiment.

"The biggest joy for me is knowing there are infinite options," she said. "Young people today know there are others who think this is OK and natural and normal."

Inspired by outspoken gay youth — or because they have retired or their children have grown up — a new wave of lesbians over 60 are stepping out of the closet, said Chevy Healy, 71.

"Women who have been together for 45 years are coming out publicly for the first time," she said.

But many are frustrated to find that, even within the gay community, they are forgotten and misunderstood, considered over the hill and asexual. Old Lesbians Organizing for Change was formed in 1989 to fight such myths.

Healy, who is traveling the country with Silver, said they frequently encounter people, even other gays, who believe they are too old to be a loving couple.

"The word 'lesbian' is hard to get used to," Healy said, "but the word 'old' is harder."

AROUND THE STATE

Santiago saves Marlins

MIAMI — Catcher Benito Santiago retrieved a bouncing pitch and tagged Otis Nixon out at the plate as he tried to score the tying run with two outs in the ninth, preserving Florida's 4-3 victory over Atlanta on Thursday.

Trailing by two runs entering the ninth, the Braves made it 4-3 on Jeff Blauser's sacrifice fly off Bryan Harvey.

After a stolen base and a walk, Harvey threw a 1-2 pitch in the dirt to Terry Pendleton that got a few feet behind Santiago. But the catcher quickly ran down the ball, lunged toward the plate and tagged out a sliding Nixon with his bare hand.

Jack Armstrong (2-2) got the win after holding Atlanta to one unearned run in seven innings. Harvey picked up his fourth save.

Orestes Destrade hit a two-out, two-run homer against Steve Avery (1-2) in the opening inning. He added a 420-foot triple and a single for the first three-hit game of his career.

Pose demoted

MIAMI — Rookie Scott Pose, the first batter in Florida Marlins history, was demoted Thursday after going hitless in his past 16 at-bats.

The Marlins designated Pose's contract for assignment, which means he must clear waivers. If he does, he'll join the Marlins' Triple-A team in Edmonton.

The Marlins also purchased the contract of right-handed pitcher Matt Turner from Edmonton, and recalled the contract of catcher Bob Natal from Edmonton.

Munoz may play for Bucs

TAMPA — Anthony Munoz, who retired last season after 13 years as an offensive tackle with the Cincinnati Bengals, passed a physical and wants to play next season with Tampa Bay. The Buccaneers are coached by former Bengals coach Sam Wyche.

Dolphins sign former Gator

MIAMI — Defensive end Hucy Richardson, a three-year starter at Florida and a first-round draft choice by the Pittsburgh Steelers in 1991, was among four free agents signed Thursday by the Miami Dolphins.

Also signed were linebacker Chuck Bullough, punter Dale Hatcher, and tight end Dante Whitaker.

Deltona's Bezeredi leads Raiders past Patriots

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Deltona graduate Pete Bezeredi had an RBI single and a solo home run Thursday afternoon to lead the Seminole Community College Raiders to a 4-2 win over the Central Florida Community College Patriots in a Mid-Florida Conference baseball game at Raider Field.

It was the second win over the Patriots in as many days for the Raiders (16-24 overall, 7-16 in the M-FC). On Wednesday, SCC edged Central Florida 9-8.

The Raiders will wrap up their season on Saturday with a game at St. John's River Community College.

SCC took a 1-0 lead in the bottom of the first inning, when Oviedo graduate B.J. Calapa drew a

In the second inning, Johnny Goodrich walked, stole second, and came in on a single by Seminole High School graduate Rick Eckstein to give the Raiders a 2-0 lead.

After Central Florida cut the lead in half with an unearned run in the third inning, Bezeredi hit his home run in the bottom of the third to restore SCC's two-run advantage.

Lake Mary's bid to repeat in jeopardy

From Staff Reports

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Lake Mary's chances at repeating as Class 4A state champions in boys tennis appeared slim after the 4A-District 5 tennis tournament completed its second day of play Thursday at Sanlando Park.

The Rams were fourth in the team standings with 17 points, trailing Boone (20), Lyman (19), and Dr. Phillips (18).

When play resumed at 8 a.m. this morning, Lake Mary was represented in three of the five boys' singles finals. Jack Whigham advanced to the championship match at the No. 1 position, Shawn Perce played for the No. 3 division crown, and Randy Brown was in the No. 5 flight final.

Crippling the Rams' effort is the fact that only one of their two doubles teams were still playing.

By comparison, Boone also had three players in the singles finals (going head-to-head with Lake Mary in two matches) and still had both doubles teams alive. Dr. Phillips advanced only one player to the singles finals but also had both doubles teams still playing.

Lake Brantley, sixth in the team standings (14), was represented by Ed Tafur on the No. 4 singles final and Todd Thompson in the No. 5 championship match. Also, both of the Patriots' doubles teams were still alive.

Where the boys' team race is a four-team battle, the girls' playoff is shaping up as a two-team contest. Lake Mary holding a 24-23 edge over Winter Park. They're followed by Dr. Phillips and Lake Brantley (tied at 19), Spruce Creek (17), Boone (10), and Lyman (9).

Like the boys, Lake Mary's goals had three singles players in the singles finals. Amber Bradley was in the No. 3 final; Ashley Evans battled for the No. 4 singles crown; and Yvonne Carrico played in the No. 5 singles final.

Unlike the boys, both of the Lake Mary girls' double teams are still alive.

Winter Park advanced four players to this morning's singles finals and had both doubles teams still playing. Dr. Phillips was represented in the Nos. 1 and 2 singles finals and in one of the doubles draws.

How to buy clothing

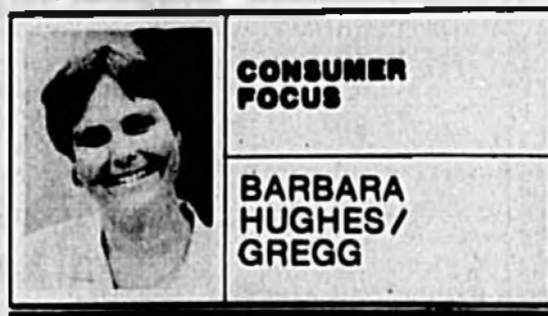

Try on and know your general size for a custom fit

When buying clothing we are all faced with many choices of style, construction, and price range. Although the lack of sizing standards can make it more difficult for you to find your correct size, there are ways to ensure that your clothes purchases will fit:

1. Try on all garments.
2. If you buy from mail order catalogs, use their body dimensions and size charts carefully.
3. Know your general size range under several garment sizing categories, such as Juniors and Misses, for example.
4. Continue to buy from sources where sizes tend to fit you well, whether retail locations or catalog shopping.
5. Make your purchases from reputable retailers who will cheerfully accept returns and exchanges.

Getting a good fit. A gorgeous ensemble can be ruined by a bad fit, so you should save your money for clothes that can be easily altered to suit you or, if you are fortunate, that fit properly off the rack. Remember, "ready-to-wear" allows you to buy designer styling at affordable prices. Expect to make some adjustments to achieve a custom-made look.

Many of us are so hung up on size that we buy small in hopes of losing weight — but the truth is that an easy, slightly loose fit makes an ample woman look slimmer while a tight fit has just the opposite effect! It makes clothes pull or wrinkle exactly where you don't want them to.

CONSUMER FOCUS

Have dresses and skirts altered so that the hem hangs evenly around and stops above or below the widest part of your leg, not on it. The same principle applies to sleeves — which shouldn't stop at the widest part of your arm. Button-front garments need extra ease so that they don't pull across the chest or stomach.

If the shoulders are too wide on a garment with set-in sleeves and you can't correct the problem with shoulder darts or tucks, filling in the area with shoulder pads will solve the problem on some styles and give you a fashionable look. Ragland or dolman sleeves as well as dropped shoulders can also provide a more comfortable fit and luckily, they are in style.

Skirts and pants with insets of elastic at the sides or back and a smooth-fitting front can be especially flattering. Make sure pants don't bunch or pull at the crotch; buy them in fabrics that give. If your hips are large in relation to your waist, you'll probably need the back of the waist taken in with darts.

Buying used clothing can save a lot of money if you know to shop for second time around garments. Taking a little time to individualize second-time around garments can mean financial savings for you and greater pleasure for the individual wearing — especially if that person is a child.

Except for clothing worn for play, most children's clothing is outgrown before showing much sign of wear. Many items are in good enough condition to pass onto another child.

Individualize by adding trims, appliques, fancy stitching or buttons. Look in catalogs and stores for ideas. Consider personalizing with a child's name or initials and adding a special applique (sometimes used to cover up stains or worn areas). Ribbons, fringes, braids, fabric paint are other ideas that fit into the wearable art emphasis of today.

Remember to think about care — be sure what you "add" has the same care as the garment.

Permissiveness a factor in teen chemical abuse

DEAR PARENTS: Results from a survey released in March 1993 bring some surprising and disturbing insights to those of us concerned about chemical use among our kids. The study, done by the Johnson Institute of Minneapolis, Minn., questioned 15,000 students in grades 6 through 12 in 13 school districts across the nation for information on the impact of parental permissiveness and peer pressure from schoolmates as key risk factors in teen chemical dependence.

The survey results indicate that as Pogo once so aptly stated, "We have met the enemy, and he is us." It appears that parental permissiveness is a strong risk factor in teens' chemical use, and peer pressure from schoolmates may be far less important a factor than expected.

When asked, "Do your parents allow you to use alcohol or drugs?" most students answered, "No." But when responses were evaluated through nine different parental permissiveness responses such as, "Are there times when your parents permit you to drink alcohol, such as for a toast at a wedding? At family parties? As long as they're present? Or as long as you don't drink and drive?" it was discovered that many parents do make exceptions and bargain with their kids over alcohol or other drug use.

Other insights drawn from the data include:

- When school-age kids are allowed to drink alcohol at home, they are not only more likely to use alcohol and other drugs outside the home, but are also more likely to develop behavioral and health problems related to their use of alcohol and other drugs.
- When parents "bargain"

DRUG COUNSELOR

with their kids — perhaps allowing a son or daughter to drink as long as they promise not to drink and drive — those kids are actually more likely to be in a vehicle driven by someone who has been drinking, or to drive when they themselves have been drinking.

• Thirty percent of seniors surveyed reported drinking and/or using drugs while driving during the past 12 months; 9 percent of senior males reported drinking and/or using other drugs while driving 10 or more times during the past year.

• By 11th grade, 10 percent of the students surveyed were experiencing alcohol and other drug problems that fit the criteria for chemical dependency.

One finding from the Johnson Institute survey was not surprising. Family support and parental involvement with the student (i.e. how comfortable kids feel talking with their parents) is a strong protective factor. Students who feel connected with their families are less likely to develop alcohol or other drug problems.

Good grammar makes a difference

DEAR ABBY: Shame on you! Your answer to "Bugged in St. Paul," the woman who corrected her husband's poor grammar, didn't help my cause one bit.

I make my living teaching college students. I teach them that using correct grammar can make all the difference in the world in determining how they are viewed by others. I am constantly reminding them to speak in a refined and educated manner. With the competitive job market we have today, speaking correctly is of the utmost importance. Let's face it — if you had to choose between two job applicants, and one said, "It don't matter," and the other one said, "It doesn't matter," which one would you hire?

Your reply indicated that because "Bugged's" husband was making a good living, he shouldn't be criticized for his grammar. Perhaps if he had spoken correctly, he would have made even a better living.

Abby, it does matter how we speak. You, of all people, should know better.

CATHERINE BEMBAS, ROCHESTER HILLS, MICH. DEAR CATHERINE: Granted, it does matter how we speak in most instances, but this could have been married for 20 years. He is an excellent provider and skilled in his work, and according to his wife, he doesn't take criticism very well, so in the interest of matrimonial harmony, I advised "Bugged" to stop bugging him. I operate on the "old dogs, new tricks" principle — so, no mea culpa on this one.

ADVICE

DEAR ABBY: The mother of a close friend passed away recently. I made several phone calls to offer support and condolences, and to inquire about arrangements. My friend is a sincere and loving person. I was told that the deceased didn't care much for flowers, but liked plants — so I sent a flowering plant. I was told that the funeral arrangements were for a graveside service, and would probably be for family members only (and not all of them) for personal reasons. Based upon this, I felt I shouldn't attend the funeral.

The day of the service, the funeral notice was in the newspaper, including the time and place of the service. Because of this, I went to the service.

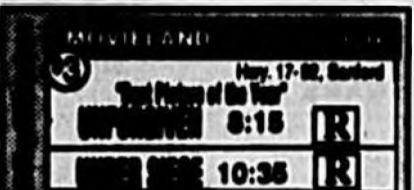

Now a mutual friend is telling me that I should not have attended because I was not invited. I thought that since the newspaper notice didn't say "private service," I should show my respect for the family by attending. I'm very distressed that I did the wrong thing. How gully am I, and what should I do or say to all involved? My friend called and thanked me for attending. I even feel guilty about the plant.

NO NAME OR ADDRESS, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: Since your bereaved friend called and thanked you for attending, take your cue from that gesture. Forget the guilt — your mutual "friend" is mistaken.

Problems with heart warrant a follow-up

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have a right and left bundle branch block. I've been given the green light by my cardiologist regarding exercise; however, I remain very anxious about my condition. If anxiety can cause the problem in the first place, I'll feel better about retiring at an early age, despite the successful thallium stress test I recently underwent. Can you direct me?

DEAR READER: Cardiac muscle is stimulated to contract by nerve impulses that travel in two pathways: the right bundle and the left bundle. Sometimes, the impulses are delayed in their journeys down each of the bundles. This is called right or left bundle branch block. These are diagnosed by the electrocardiogram.

RBBB is the less serious condition. Its presence does not necessarily indicate a heart problem; in fact, some people develop RBBB early in life and suffer no adverse consequences from it. On the other hand, RBBB can indicate heart disease if it appears late in life or in conjunction with a recognized cardiac ailment, such as a heart attack.

LBBB is a frequent indicator of arteriosclerotic heart disease or heart strain from hypertension. It is always abnormal until proven otherwise, as I'll describe in a moment. LBBB ordinarily indicates that the blood supply to the left bundle has been reduced, a consequence of arteriosclerotic blockage.

The simultaneous presence of RBBB and LBBB is, in an older adult, ominous because the two electrical abnormalities usually reflect severe narrowing of the arteries to the bundles.

In a patient with the two blocks, further investigation is always warranted. In your case, the doctor properly suggested a thallium stress test, which is a very accurate way of measuring the blood supply to the bundles and to the cardiac muscle as a whole. Your physicians might also have elected to obtain coronary angiography, during which the cardiac circulation is evaluated using X-special X-rays.

I am pleased -- although somewhat surprised -- to learn that you passed your stress test. Your success indicates that you do not have a significant degree of coronary arteriosclerosis; you need not restrict your life at this point, and you can continue to exercise, under your doctor's supervision.

By Phillip Alder
This is St. George's Day in England, commemorating the patron saint who supposedly killed a dragon.

How do you view the English? Truman Capote -- many years ago -- claimed that the most dangerous thing in the world is to make a friend of an Englishman, because he'll come to sleep in your closet rather than spend 10 shillings on a hotel. Less uncomplimentary was George Mikea, who said that an Englishman, even if he is alone, forms an orderly line of one.

Today's deal occurred during an English intercounty tournament played late last year. It looks as though five clubs must make. Suppose East wins the heart lead and switches to a club. Declarer draws trumps, plays three rounds of spades, cutting the last in hand, and leads a diamond to the king. When that wins, he ruffs dummy's last spade before playing a second diamond. East wins and is employed into conceding a ruff-and-discard, on which South's last diamond disappears.

However, East set a trap. After winning trick one with the heart ace, he switched to the diamond jack. West won with the ace and returned a diamond.

If East had a singleton diamond, the contract was impossible to make. And if West began with A-Q-x of diamonds, why would he win trick two? He would play low, establishing two certain tricks in the suit. However, declarer fell for the ruse. He played low from the dummy at trick three, allowing East to score his diamond queen to defeat the contract.

They can be tricky, these English.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be hopeful and expectant today regarding a matter that you deem important. If you feel optimistic and lucky, you'll act accordingly. Something good could result.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Matters that relate to your career and finances should be given priority over your other interests today. This is the area where you could run up your biggest score.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Conditions that could have a favorable effect upon your future plans are starting to trend in that direction now. It's time for you to hitch your hopes to this red wagon.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Two friends whom you've helped in the past are both working on ways to repay your favors. Neither one is aware of the other's efforts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This is a good day to get together with someone you recently met whom you would like to know better. The feeling is mutual, and interesting results are indicated.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't back away from situations today just because they appear to be tedious or tough. You'll function best when confronted by challenge.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Temporarily try to shelve things today that tie you down to mundane, boring routines. Make arrangements to be with a fun friend who is also interested in escapism.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you anticipate negative results today, chances are you will do things that will help bring them about. The opposite will be true if you think positively.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If there is an important matter you have to discuss with another today, do it on a one-to-one basis, without having kibitzers looking on. It should work out very well for both parties.

House hunters are now hiring their own brokers

By VIVIAN MARINO
AP Business Writer

The major players

NEW YORK — With a baby on the way, Kim and Marc Klingelhofer finally decided to give up the rental scene. But after weeks of house-hunting in the San Francisco Bay area, they found themselves up a dead-end street.

"We looked around on our own. I stopped counting after 25 (houses)," Mrs. Klingelhofer said. "Then we contacted real estate agents, but they seemed like they were just looking to make a sale. They weren't interested in what we really wanted."

It was only after the Klingelhofers hired their own broker that they got what they wanted: a $360,000 three-bedroom ranch in suburban Redwood City. The broker negotiated a deal in which the seller, who already knocked off $100,000 from the list price, agreed to throw in some appliances and furnishings and pay part of the closing costs.

"We haven't had to do anything at all, except sign papers," said Mrs. Klingelhofer, 36.

Such transactions were virtually unheard of a decade ago. All residential real estate brokers and "subagents" historically represented the seller, a role obscured by the nature of their work — finding buyers.

But experiences like the Klingelhofers are becoming more common as consumers take an increasingly aggressive approach to home buying in a buyer's market.

Today, as many as 50,000 real estate agents have been trained as home buyers' brokers — about 2,000 of them represent buyers exclusively — compared with just a handful in 1983, mostly on the West Coast.

While home-buyer agencies and franchisees have been springing up nationwide, even the larger, traditional real estate firms have expanded their agents' services.

"We've gone through a major growth period," said Luke Graves, who operates Buyer No. 1 in Austin, Texas, the first home buyer agency in the state. The firm has represented buyers in 300 transactions since 1988, one-fourth of them last year alone.

"It (buyer brokering) has been known within the real estate community for a long time. It's just that traditional brokers didn't understand it and never thought it would work for many years," said Graves, noting traditional brokers' initial reluctance to share sales commissions with buyer brokers.

It wasn't until several months ago that the 750,000-member National Association of Realtors formally recognized this new breed of agents. The trade group also helped establish strict disclosure guidelines for agencies providing both seller-broker and buyer-broker services.

While traditionalists maintain buyer representation isn't necessary since they're required to treat everyone fairly under an Industry code of ethics, buyer-broker proponents argue the one-sidedness simply cannot be avoided.

"Sellers' agents can't negotiate effectively for the buyer because they're prohibited by law," said Raymond J. Stokloss, the Belmont, Calif., buyer agent who found the Klingelhofers' home.

"Whenever you hire a buyers' agent, you hire an advocate. They can do everything that you authorize them to do."

That includes everything from locating property up for sale, to negotiating contract terms, arranging for home inspections or appraisals and obtaining mortgage financing.

The agents may charge a fee equal to 2 percent or 3 percent of the buyer's target purchase price, or hourly rates ranging from $60 to $100. Many, though, settle for a share of the sales commission agreed upon in the listing contract.

Barry Miller, president of Denver-based Buyer's Resource Inc., the nation's largest buyer-broker franchise, claims buyer brokers provide a wider selection of homes for sale since they can find properties not included in traditional sources like the Multiple Listing Service.

Miller said buyer-broker clients also pay on average 4 percent to 7 percent below what they would have paid had they worked with a traditional agent, who is motivated by getting a better price for the seller.

A survey conducted last year by U.S. Sprint substantiates that claim. The company found that 232 relocating employees who hired buyer brokers paid on average 91 percent of a home's list price, while those using traditional agents paid 98.5 percent.

"In traditional real estate (transactions), both agents ... must negotiate the highest price for the seller," said Miller, a pioneer in the buyer-broker movement. "In buyer brokering, our legal duty and our training is to negotiate the lowest price, best terms for the buyer."

Exclusive buyer agents like Miller are especially critical of buyer and are legally bound to negotiate the lowest price and best terms for their clients. Many provide added services like arranging for mortgage financing, termite inspections or appraisals. They usually share in the listing agents' sales commission. Some are paid a flat fee or hourly rate in lieu of or in addition to the commission.

•Dual agents. These agents represent both buyers and sellers. They're required in most states to disclose for which party they work, as well as the potential of representing both parties in the same transaction. Should that occur, they must keep opposing strategies confidential.

so-called "dual agents," trained to represent both buyers and sellers.

"Have you ever heard of an attorney representing both the plaintiff and defendant in a lawsuit? It's the same thing," he said.

But Sharon Millett, who chaired the Realtors advisory group on agency disclosure, says agents avoid conflict of interest questions by explaining they can represent both sides in the same sale. She noted that most states require this type of disclosure.

"Whatever confidential information you know will not be used against the other party," said Millett, who runs Millett-Potvin Realty in Auburn, Maine, and has represented both buyers and sellers. "Our goal is to help the sellers sell and the buyers buy. The safeguards are all built in."

While Millett sees the advantages of buyer brokering, she notes that services and fees vary. She advises consumers to take time in choosing a broker and to discuss compensation before making any commitment.

Buyer brokers may be especially helpful for first-time buyers or those with little knowledge of the real estate market.

Such was the case with the Klingelhofers. Attracted to the colorful Victorian-style homes in the San Francisco Bay area, they began house-hunting for their expanding family in the neighborhood where they had been renting. But they were quickly discouraged by the high prices.

Their hired broker suggested looking several miles south in the more affordable suburb of Redwood City. "We never would have bothered to look in that area," Mrs. Klingelhofer conceded. Then he guided them through the negotiating.

IBM engineer Michael DiBriano shares a similar experience. With the help of buyer-broker Graves, he bought his first home — a $129,500 three-bedroom house — after transferring to Austin, Texas, from Kingston, N.Y. a year ago.

New atomic clock accurate to 1 second over million years

By JENNIFER HEARS
Associated Press Writer

BOULDER, Colo. — An atomic clock known to be within one second of accuracy over a million years was placed in operation Thursday at the National Institute of Standards and Technology.

Researchers hope that after a year of evaluation, the clock will prove to be accurate to within one second over three million years, which would make it the world's most accurate clock.

The clock will benefit government agencies and private businesses in need of ultraprecise timing, said Don Sullivan, chief of the NIST time and frequency division.

The accuracy is needed primarily in navigation and telecommunications, because digital transmissions require more synchronization and therefore better timing, Sullivan said.

"The rates at which data move is growing considerably," he said.

The clock will be one of several atomic clocks monitored by the Paris-based International Bureau of Weights and Measures, which reports the standard Coordinated Universal Time.

Known as the NIST-7, the clock is a refinement of atomic clocks in France and Japan, researchers said at a news conference Thursday.

The NIST-7 is more accurate than other atomic clocks because it uses lasers instead of a magnetic field to stimulate atoms.

Atomic clocks are based on the phenomenon that all atoms and molecules have well-defined natural vibrations. The NIST-7 uses Cesium-133, a metallic element similar in appearance to mercury, which vibrates at a very predictable rate and has been used to measure time for a number of years, researchers said.

The NIST-7 heats Cesium-133 to 100 degrees Celsius, then pushes the atoms through a laser field. The atoms travel through a 1.5 meter-long microwave cavity where they reach a resonance of 9,192,631,770 vibrations per second. That resonance is monitored by another laser, allowing physicists to define time.

The NIST-7 replaces the NCS-6, which was placed in operation in 1975 and kept time to an accuracy of one second over 300,000 years.

The clock was developed over seven years at a cost of at least $3 million. NIST is an agency of the Commerce Department's Technology Administration.

La Jolla Playhouse, AIDS charity, 'Oklahomal' receive special Tonys

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — A theater-community charity that has raised more than $7 million to battle AIDS will receive a special Tony Award.

The charity, Broadway Cares/Equity Fights AIDS, will receive its award at the annual Tony Awards on June 6, said the League of American Theaters and Producers. All special awards announced Thursday will be presented then.

The annual regional theater award will be given to the La Jolla Playhouse in California. Its production of "The Who's Tommy" is playing on Broadway.

A third honorary prize will be awarded to "Oklahomal" The Rodgers and Hammerstein musical celebrated its 50th anniversary in March.

Also receiving an award will be the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Machine Operators. The labor union, representing some 900 entertainment industry locals, celebrates its 100th anniversary this year.

Competitive Tony nominations will be announced May 10. Lisa Minnelli will be the hostess for this year's telecast honoring the best of the 1992-93 Broadway season.

School psychologist encourages weight loss through ridicule

By The Associated Press

CONCORD, N.H. — While some weight-loss programs boast of providing a caring, supportive atmosphere, Michael Clampitt's advertising is more blunt:

"See mammals of all sizes welcome," reads his flier, which pictures an elephant.

Clampitt, a school psychologist, believes that ridicule is the key to permanently shedding that spare tire.

"The group will critique, encourage, and help you enforce your (weight loss plan) by weekly weigh-ins, banter, taunts, bets and other forms of male camaraderie," says the flier.

Clampitt, who weighs 240 pounds, calls his club "The Men's No Whine Weight Loss Group."

Through the years, Clampitt has lost more than 1,000 pounds. He's also put back on 1,050. Some doctors say such ups and downs can be less healthy than not losing weight at all, but Clampitt's approach is not for everyone.

"Taunts and insults are powerful forms of male solidarity and camaraderie," Clampitt said. "But I think it only works with men. Weight isn't as big an issue for a person's self-esteem with men as it is for women."

The ribbing, Clampitt said, should be good-natured. Something along the lines of "lazy fatso" might do for someone who doesn't stick to his weight-loss regimen.

Clampitt envisions a program that begins with a weigh-in for each member. First, everyone would be reminded of the member's stated weight goal from the previous week. If he's over, he'll be called "Chubba-Bubba" or some other appropriate name.

"Most men know how to lose weight. You eat less," Clampitt said. "It's willpower that's the problem. But, when you think how good that piece of pie looks on Sunday, but what kind of hell am I going to get at the next meeting. It might keep you from eating it."

Clampitt, who had heart bypass surgery three months ago, said he's gotten a few calls about his group, and hopes publicity will draw more attention.

He's willing to let women in, but under one condition: "So long as they act like men."
