Rose Expresses Thanks To Those Who Aided Work

Adjutant and Mrs. Ralph R. Rose, of the Salvation Army, expressed their thanks today for the support and co-operation of the Sanford public during their three and one-half year stay, as they announced their farewell service Sunday. They will leave Tuesday.

"We would especially thank the members of the civic and fraternal organizations for the way which they have helped in the job we have had to do," Adjutant Rose said. "A great deal of credit for our success is due to the many people who have helped us in our work."

Stratosphere Flying Brings Queer Effects

SEATTLE, July 5.—(AP)—Some of the peculiarities of flying with the stratosphere are listed in the Boeing News, published by the big airplane plant which is making intensive tests for this high-altitude flying.

One of the things it is almost impossible to whistle through the air is to make a noise. Speaking voices are almost unheard and the sound of the engine is almost nonexistent.

Wavell Makes Report Before Going East

CAIRO, July 5.—(AP)—General Sir Archibald Wavell, in a farewell message Friday before leaving to become commander-in-chief in India, summed up the war situation in the Middle East, giving the main points as follows:

"Things are a bit sticky. Progress has been slow but is coming. We are holding on and we hope to overtake."

Cars Derailed But No One Is Injured

WINCHESTER, Tenn., July 5.—(AP)—A passenger train of the N. C. & S. C. Diesel Flyer, crack passenger train, was derailed today near Winchester, Tenn., but no one was injured.

The train was derailed on a curve near Winchester, Tenn., where it was carrying about 100 passengers.

W. J. Walker Wins $5000 Prize

WINCHESTER, Tenn., July 5.—(AP)—W. J. Walker, a 50-year-old man, won a $5000 prize today for his invention of a new type of airplane engine.

Walker's invention is a gas turbine engine, which is said to be the most powerful and efficient engine yet developed.

Roosevelt Calls For Sacrifices

President Declares Flag Waving Not Enough With Armament Effort On

In a pulse-quickenning ceremony of unprecedented scope, Americans in every corner of the land pledged fealty to their flag yesterday after hearing President Roosevelt, declare that the must stake their lives, if necessary, in the defense of liberty.

It was a Fourth of July marked by mingled emotions—for the traditional holiday enthusiasm was sobered by the shadows of events overseas and by the gigantic armament effort in this country.

Where First Glamor Girl Died In Plane Wreck

Spectators examine wreckage of plane which crashed into the breakers of Matunuck, R. I., killing society's original glamor girl, Eleanor Young, 22, and Nicolas Embiricos, Greek shipping magnate. Embiricos was flying the plane blind in fog from Newport to Roosevelt Field, L. I. He was killed instantly; the girl died an hour after her unconscious body was dragged from the wreckage.

BIBLE VERBS FOR TODAY

BUT DO IT TODAY. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon. — Isaiah 55:7.

COURAGE

You can afford to be defeated, ridiculed, denounced and persecuted, but you can not afford to be wrong.

When man resolves to do his best, shines in every word and deed. Sometimes he's made the butt of jest.

And though he's anxious to succeed, he's often looked on as a pest. He's indeed.

And life for him is none too sweet. No matter how he tries and tries to do what's right and be discreet. He lights the spark in jealous eyes.

And soon may have to own defeat because of lies.

But if he has the heart to stay the journey, giving ground to none. Upholding truth, keeping at bay the man-slayers one by one, a little courage, day by day, will keep him on.

— JOHN W. LEWELWAITE

Learning To Drive

The Parents' Magazine has an interesting article on teaching older children to drive automobiles. "When your son or your daughter backs down the street on his first night out with the car, will you watch the rear light disappear with a vague, restless apprehension? Or will you relax in your easy chair, confident that he really knows how to drive?"

"How young," we asked a friend of ours who with some success had raised a family of five fine children, "should one begin teaching his son to drive?"

"How old is your son?" our friend asked.

"Nine," we replied.

"Get started at once then," our friend declared, "you have waited too long already."

He then went on to explain that driving a car safely is not merely a matter of shifting gears, starting and stopping, turning a corner or driving in a straight line. Anybody can do that or can learn to do it at any age. What is important is knowing when to shift, into low or into high, when to speed up or slow down and how much, where to steer in order to avoid dangerous pockets.

These are things which cannot be taught in a few easy lessons, he went on, especially after one has reached an age approaching maturity. They are integral parts of his personality, are based upon his psychological training from away back, and have more to do with his general sense of responsibility than with his mechanical aptitude.

Others learn it through the patient persevering instruction from their parents. But not a few, unfortunately, grow to adult man and womanhood without any idea whatever of the responsibility which the driver should have for the lives and property of others.

Do you teach your children to take care of their toys, not to leave them out in the rain where they will get rusty, or on the living room floor for elder people to stumble over? If you do not, you cannot expect them to take care of your car, to avoid nicking the fenders and knocking out the headlights, when they are old enough to drive. Nor can you expect them to approach intersections cautiously where pedestrians are crossing.

Have you taught your children the importance of obedience? Can you trust him not to go out in the boat alone after you have told him not to? If you cannot, you cannot expect him to be home by twelve when you have left him have the car upon that condition, after he is old enough to drive. Have you trained him in courtesy? If you have not, you cannot expect him to await his turn in a long line of automobiles and not to try to crowd ahead of someone else.

In short, if you have not trained him as a child in the basic principles of personal responsibility, consideration for others, self-confidence combined with reasonable caution, obedience to law both of parent and state, good manners, courtesy, and respect for the rights of others, you cannot expect to be able to relax comfortably in your easy chair when his time comes to make his first trip out alone in the family car.

America's War Effort

Seventy-five percent of the war materials the United States has been able to produce have been shipped to England, according to a survey of the national defense program published in Collier's Weekly. In a detailed report on both personnel and material, the magazine gives an illuminating picture of the American war effort to date, with estimates of future production.

The draft has taken care of the Army's requirements, Collier's says, although there is considerable apprehension about the number rejected for physical shortcomings. In a long war requiring many replacements we might have our troubles in spite of our boasted manpower. We have about a million and a half men in uniform (if not under arms) as against 281,000 a year ago.

Our current Army enrollment is by no means all drafted. Two hundred and sixty-nine thousand are National Guardsmen. There are 462,000 Regulars doing three-year hitch. The rest are draftees, doing a heroic job under uninspiring conditions. Unless they are held over the vast majority will finish their year with little practical knowledge of modern weapons.

In only two gun classifications are we on schedule—machineguns and Garand semi-automatic rifles. We now have 200,000 Garands and are adding 1,200 daily. Three-inch anti-aircraft guns are being turned out at the rate of about 25 a day. They have a top range of only 20,000 ft. It will be a year before we get into production on the 80-millimeter blazers that can keep enemy planes way up. Heavy artillery production won't be effective for at least a year. Present equipment in this classification is outmoded by new developments.

Current production on light tanks, up to 18 tons, is at the rate of 18 to 20 a day. Medium tank production is behind schedule. Of the five firms having contracts to build 24-tonners, only Chrysler is showing the speed the Army wants. They will be producing 10 to 12 medium tanks a day in August. There won't be any heavy 60-ton tanks before next summer. The Army hopes for production of 6 to 12 daily late in 1942.

Two years ago the Air Corps trained 600 pilots a year. Since then it has stepped up its sights and soon the Corps schools will be turning out 30,000 pilots, plus bombers, gunners, photographers and navigators every year. About 25,000 more pilots are being trained every year. We are getting and training to fly will be able to fly the night off anything that can stay in the air.

By this time next year the air force will have adequate striking power. Today we are producing planes at the rate of 16,000 a year. In 18 months production should be at the rate of 42,000. At that time we will be producing 8,000 engines and propellers a month. Army Air Headquarters states that our new fighters are superior in fire power "surpassing those of European warplanes."

We have adopted a shell-firing catfish as our patrol ship which has been tested in the Gulf of Mexico. Lockheed interceptors ships and of course the Air Corps. These two fighters can be compared with the heaviest fire power of any in the world.

HOW MUCH LONGER IS HE GOING TO IGNORE IT

Books And Authors

There probably won't be any argument about the outstanding seller announced for July—its "The Keys of the Kingdom" by A. J. Cronin. It would be a best seller if Cronin had never written another book, and if it were not advertised at all, but Cronin is the author of other books (and "The Citadel" would guarantee top sales to a pretty bad book), and it is to receive a $20,000 advertising campaign which has already begun. All in all, "The Keys of the Kingdom" isn't the year's best seller it will do until one comes along. There may be arguments about whether it is better than "The Citadel" or not, but there will be no arguments about whether it is a good book or not.

The story is of Francis Chelmsford, son of a Scotch fisherman, who becomes a Catholic priest and is sent to a mission in China. Francis is a rebel against petty restrictions, against narrowness of view, he is crowned upon by his superiors. But he comes as near deserving the adjective Christ-like as anyone in fiction. He works like a navy for his mission; he shares his clothes and his food with the poor; he risks his life to fight a plague; he risks it again to save his mission from a bandit army; he undergoes humiliation, weariness, hunger, and pain without a murmur. And his reward—well, what do you think?

Cronin has managed to get as much conflict and excitement into his story of a humble missionary as he put into his story of an hottest hot, sorely tempted doctor. And once more, back of his story, is a vision of a Citadel where tolerance and justice and kindness dwell. Francis will not believe that his friend, the doughty artist, has gone to hell. He does not believe that a "rice-Christian" is any better than heathen Chinese. What's more, he never does learn that clothes and diplomacy make for success in any walk of life.

"The Keys of the Kingdom" is a fine book—perhaps a better book than "The Citadel"—and it is unquestionably the most promising best seller published this year. It is crowned upon by his superiors. But he comes Sir Hugh Walpole, popular and prolific British novelist, died at his home in the Lake District on June 1. He had failed to recover from a heart attack suffered a week before.

Sir Hugh was 57. He was born in New Zealand, and at the age of eight was taken to New York, where his father taught dogmatic theology at the General Theological Seminary. In 1898 the family returned to England, and he was sent to King's School at Canterbury and later to Emmanuel College, Cambridge.

In the last war he earned the Order of Saint George for conspicuous bravery. Just before his final illness, he had been busy with broadcasts from London, on behalf of the nation's cause, and his voice was a familiar one to many listeners here.

"When I started as a writer everyone was against me," Walpole said. "I was told I had no creative gifts at all; if I had any they were critical gifts. But he had faith, in abundance, and his services to literature both creatively and critically were rewarded with knight-hood in 1927—but will be further honored in secret of initiators."

J. Wallace Woolly, Jr., solid English-speaking world. There have been some interesting comments in the press and elsewhere on the soldier's reading. At short notice the New York Times quoted the librarian at Fort Dix as saying the men in the camps were "most vocal" in their demands for books.

General Wavell told the Lord Mayor of London that "books are perhaps the most acceptable form of gifts that can be sent to the Forces in Africa."

The libraries in Camp Shelby reported that they had $1000 apiece to spend on books and had spent it. The "most popular reading" in comic sheets and comic books followed by the "pulp" and picture magazines, the "slicks" and the news weeklies and similar magazines; the "cham" magazines, western and detective novels, adventure novels, and serious historical, modern "Grade B" novels, biographies and other non-fiction. There are three libraries in Camp Shelby and 50,000 men. The libraries now average between 250 and 400 volumes apiece. The librarians report that the draftees demand a higher type of reading than did the National Guardsmen stationed at the camp.

When a publisher gets $500,000 into book advertising, the publisher is spending the money to advertise a technical book, the "New Encyclopedia of Machine Shop Practice," although the book will be sold at full trade discount.

The book is published in response to the great demand for machinists for defense industries. It has been prepared by Professor G. Barnwell Sturtevant, Professor of Production Practices at the Stevens Institute of Technology, with the assistance of a staff of experts. The book is planned as a reference library, describing and illustrating every basic machine shop operation. It will have 575 pages, with over a thousand illustrations. Though it is planned primarily for beginning, it is complete enough to be of value to the expert. The price is $1.98. Advertising in newspapers, magazines, over the radio, and by direct mail should create a nation-wide demand for the book.

For those who have spent the past seven years in hoping, the publishers are pleased to announce the discovery of a new original Thorne Smith! Thorne left behind him a complete skeleton manuscript of this novel, crowded with the funny situations, beleaguered characters and inimitable dialogue with which Thorne Smith became famous. Now refurbished and edited for publication in the capable hands of Normant Mabson, "The Passionate Witch" will burst like a bombshell on the consciousness of a million fans who for seven years have lived on a diet of reprints. A hilarious story of a monk's marriage to a Grade A witch—the wealth of a wacky invention which had been the despair of a secret of initiators.

For those who have spent the past seven years in hoping, the publishers are pleased to announce the discovery of a new original Thorne Smith! Thorne left behind him a complete skeleton manuscript of this novel, crowded with the funny situations, beleaguered characters and inimitable dialogue with which Thorne Smith became famous. Now refurbished and edited for publication in the capable hands of Normant Mabson, "The Passionate Witch" will burst like a bombshell on the consciousness of a million fans who for seven years have lived on a diet of reprints. A hilarious story of a monk's marriage to a Grade A witch—the wealth of a wacky invention which had been the despair of a secret of initiators.

J. Wallace Woolly, Jr., solid English-speaking world. There have been some interesting comments in the press and elsewhere on the soldier's reading. At short notice the New York Times quoted the librarian at Fort Dix as saying the men in the camps were "most vocal" in their demands for books.

General Wavell told the Lord Mayor of London that "books are perhaps the most acceptable form of gifts that can be sent to the Forces in Africa."

The libraries in Camp Shelby reported that they had $1000 apiece to spend on books and had spent it. The "most popular reading" in comic sheets and comic books followed by the "pulp" and picture magazines, the "slicks" and the news weeklies and similar magazines; the "cham" magazines, western and detective novels, adventure novels, and serious historical, modern "Grade B" novels, biographies and other non-fiction. There are three libraries in Camp Shelby and 50,000 men. The libraries now average between 250 and 400 volumes apiece. The librarians report that the draftees demand a higher type of reading than did the National Guardsmen stationed at the camp.

When a publisher gets $500,000 into book advertising, the publisher is spending the money to advertise a technical book, the "New Encyclopedia of Machine Shop Practice," although the book will be sold at full trade discount.

The book is published in response to the great demand for machinists for defense industries. It has been prepared by Professor G. Barnwell Sturtevant, Professor of Production Practices at the Stevens Institute of Technology, with the assistance of a staff of experts. The book is planned as a reference library, describing and illustrating every basic machine shop operation. It will have 575 pages, with over a thousand illustrations. Though it is planned primarily for beginning, it is complete enough to be of value to the expert. The price is $1.98. Advertising in newspapers, magazines, over the radio, and by direct mail should create a nation-wide demand for the book.

Household Hints

Leftover wallpaper can be used effectively for covering up the ends of closed pipes, about your apartment, store if you have inadequate and irregular closet space.

—Since sliced cheese often dries out easily, put it away in the outside end of your refrigerator. Keep it well wrapped in waxed paper and in the refrigerator.

If you bruise a finger by catching it in a door or window, soak it in salt water for a few minutes in 90 hot water as you can stand. Add more hot water as the water cools.

If you like to have your cookies soften up when placed in a bag, keep a slice of bread or an orange or apple slice in the bag with the cookies.

Browned coated honey use in part for the honey in the bread. Potatoes.

Dry all colored clothes in the sun. Do not keep the color bright.

DeLand Faces Best In Field At All-Star Game At Daytona Tonight

DAYTONA BEACH, July 5 (AP)—It will be first-place DeLand against the field tonight in the Florida State League's fourth annual All-Star game here.

DeLand and St. Augustine have been alternating in first place since the start of the season, but DeLand took over top position Thursday night to gain the right to play the All-Stars.

The Red Hats, a hard-hitting team, will face an all-star lineup with a collective batting average of .327, exclusive of the pitcher. On the other side of the ledger is DeLand's advantage in having played as a team all season while the All-Stars have not worked together previously. Consequently, the game is regarded as just about a toss-up.

Headline the All-Star pitching staff is Bloise of Leesburg, left-hander with a record of 11 won and six lost, and Righthander Swindell of Orlando and McCann of Gainesville. Swindell has won 14 and lost two and McCann has won 11 and lost six. Jack Fincher of Ocala was placed on the All-Star pitching staff to replace Henry Muerlen of Daytona Beach who was released.

Neither Manager Good or the All-Stars nor Manager Trammell of the Red Hats has announced a starting lineup or starting pitchers.

Aside from the pitchers, however, the lineups are expected to be about as follows:

DeLand—Harrington, cf; Sheon, 2b; Cates, 3b; Holsing, lf; Danyo, rf; Sterling, 1b; Madjeski, c; Trammell, ss.

All-Stars — Leonhardt, Ocala, 1b; Conroy, Leesburg, 2b; Jusczyk, Daytona Beach, 3b; Williams, St. Augustine, ss; Pruitt, Gainesville, lf; Groat, Leesburg, cf; Carroll, Daytona, rf; Schilo, Ocala, c.

The All-Star squad, selected by vote of fans, also will include Goolbsy of St. Augustine and Boyd of Orlando, utility players.

The game, starting at 9:00 P. M., will be preceded by ceremonies at which starters of the seven league cities will be introduced and trophies will be awarded to Gainesville for best attendance and St. Augustine for the best opening day attendance.

Most important to players, eight major league scouts are expected to be in the stands.

"THE GREAT AMERICAN BROADCAST" starring Alice Faye, Jack Oakie, John Payne and Cesar Romero will share honors with the official pictures of the Conn-Louis fight, at the Ritz tomorrow and Monday. Featured in this great musical comedy are the Four Ink Spots and the Nicholas Brothers.

LEADED AS "A Cyclone of Action," "In Old Cheyenne" starring Roy Rogers with J. Farrell MacDonald, George "Gabby" Hayes, Joan Woodbury and Sally Payne, will be part of the exciting program arranged for next Friday and Saturday at the Ritz.

"HORROR ISLAND," said to be something different along "thrill picture" lines, will be the feature attraction of the special midnight show tonight at 11:30 o'clock at the Ritz. A fine program of short subjects has also been arranged for those who will be in town over the holiday weekend.

DONNA REED and Robert Sterling are the answer to the cry for "new screen faces" in "The Get-Away," M. G. M.'s dramatic new picture coming to the Ritz next Friday and Saturday. Charles Winninger and Henry O'Neill are also in the cast.

Gone With The Wind Opens 3-Day Engagement At Ritz

Full-Length Version Of Outstanding Film Will Be Shown Here In Technicolor On Tuesday, Wednesday And Thursday

The complete, full-length version of David O. Selznick's production of "Gone with the Wind" opens at the Ritz Theater Tuesday for a three-day engagement. The picture begins at 12:30, 4:30 and 8:30 P. M. It is probably the most discussed picture since the inception of talking pictures, the story of the film of Margaret Mitchell's world-famous story is a fascinating story in itself. David O. Selznick bought the picture rights of "Gone with the Wind" on July 20, 1936, for $50,000, the highest price ever paid for a first motion picture. The title is a quotation from Ernest Dowson's poem "Dyana." The book, which consists of 1,021 pages, had sold about fifty thousand copies on the first day of sale, shattering search for a girl to play the part. Their records show that 1400 candidates were interviewed; 90 screen-tested; 149,000 feet of black and white film and 13,000 feet of Technicolor shot in these tests. The cost of the studio has been computed by studio accountants at $22,000, of which about two-thirds represent cost of the screen tests. Magnitude of this figure is apparent by comparison with the cost of casting the other 50 principal characters, which totaled "only" $10,000. The burning of the military supplies of Atlanta, one of the major spectacular scenes in the picture, was filmed on the night of December 15, 1939, at which time David O. Selznick met Vivien Leigh, a spectator who had accompanied her brother, Byron, the well-known talent representative to the studio. Struck by her physical resemblance to the Scarlett described by Miss Mitchell, in that she has the green eyes, narrow waist and pert features, he suggested a test. It was made and on January 10, 1939, he signed her for the role. To insure her mastery of the Southern accent Selznick engaged Will A. Price of McDonough, Mississippi, an expert in Southern dialects, and Susan Myrick of Macon, Georgia, known as the "Emily Post of the South," to assist her in her cultivation of it. Miss Myrick was also entrusted with the job of technical adviser in the matter of Southern customs and manners. To authenticate all details of the production historically, Wilbur G. Kurtz of Atlanta, distinguished historian and critic of the South was added to the staff. Other noted individuals to whom credit must go for exacting phases in the production are William Cameron Menzies, who was given the general Allied assignment of supervising the picture; and William Fox, head of the Fox Film Corporation, who supervised the picture's production.

tests, though rarely in the history of pictures has an actor been such a unanimous choice of public and press as Gable was for the role of "Rhett Butler." While no exact percentage has been measured, the dialogue in the picture is predominantly from the book. William Cameron Menzies, Lyle Wheeler, and the art department prepared more than 3000 sketches, visualizing in full color all the principal scenes in the picture. More than 5500 separate items of wardrobe were required to be designed by Waller Pfunkett, for which he had to draw more than 400 sketches. His task was complicated by the historic fact that during the eleven years covered by the events described in the novel, men's and women's fashions underwent three complete changes. He thus had to reconstruct not only the fashions of the hopakrit era before the war, but the makeshift models of the poverty-stricken war years and the bustle robes of the "reconstruction" period. Production of the long-awaited film was officially begun on January 26, 1939. Victor Fleming, the director, made the final shot on November 11, 1939, the anniversary of Armistice Day. It is fair to say that this has been the most important directorial assignment of all these Fleming's outstanding skill in piloting large casts through fast-moving plots has been gained during the motion picture career that began in 1910. While his directorial talent was well recognized in such productions as "The Wizard of Oz," "Tom Mix," "Captain Cassidny," "Frontier Island" and many others, nevertheless he will be remembered for "Gone With The Wind" as the man who brought to the screen the most magnificent picture of the year.

County Defense Councils Organize To Collect Aluminum For Defense

TALLAHASSEE, July 5—(Special)—Have you a hoard of aluminum pots in your home? Uncle Sam wants it. County defense councils are organizing all over Florida to collect aluminum scrap to help fill the national shortage now bottlenecking the defense effort. But note that word scrap; it means that only broken parts, old stoves, discarded articles made of aluminum are wanted. It would save rather than help the defense effort to discard good, usable aluminum since this could eventually require men and machines to replace them. If your aluminum is good and in service, keep it. One patriotic housewife asked: "Would it be all right for me to keep my aluminum pots and make a money contribution of their value, instead?" It is all right to keep them and if anyone has a few extra dimes or dollars, the thing to do is buy defense savings stamps and bonds. Uncle Sam hasn't the hand out for donations of money, either. All of us will help pay for defense through taxation. No one should make unnecessary sacrifices at this time. Beginning July 21, all scrap aluminum will be accepted at special points in all cities and towns. Let it be sorted and stored. It will not go into aluminum because aluminum is too with a variation but it may go into other products. These materials will be available through the Aluminum Company of America. New aluminum is now being used and July 21, the date when the aluminum will be ready to go into the hands of the war effort, is a date to remember. The aluminum which is being collected will be used in the production of aluminum products which are needed for the war effort.
