the discount table in the public marketplace of ideas.

He can at least take comfort in the belief that his ideas are so true, so devastating, so fatal to the established order that the authorities cannot permit their expression.

In a democracy, the dissenter does not have this security. Once he speaks out, his ideas are accepted or rejected on their own worth. He is even denied the consolation of martyrolom.

This is what is frustrating to

This is what is frustrating to some people—from the ranting philosopher in the city park to the publisher of an extremist political pamplet to the placard-waving college student demanding an immediate withdrawal from South Viet Nam.

Vice President Humphrey was referring explicitly to the latter the other day when, addressing the annual congress of the National Student Association at the University of Wisconsin, he said of pickets chanting outside the hall:

"The right to be heard does not automatically include the right to be taken seriously. To be taken seriously depends entirely upon what is bely depends entirely upon what is being said."

The words apply to everyone, how-ever, and especially to those whose frustration at not being taken seri-ously is aggravated by the certain-opposed by some powerful conspir-acy—whether of the devil, the Com-munists, the Washington bureaucra-ey or just plain human stupidity.

That their ideas may simply be lacking in merit is something that does not occur easily to these peo-ple. Thus, since it is a conspiracy and not common sense that is a minet ple. Thus, since it is a conspiracy and not common sense that is against them, they all too easily make the transition from words which are ignered to actions that cannot be.

They hit somebody over the head with a bundle of tracts or they circulate libel against a public official or they tear up their draft cards or they stand in front of troop trains.

It was Veltairs who said that while he may not agree with what a man he may not agree with what a man said, he would defend to the death his right to say it.

In a country where that right is firmly established by custom and protected by law, the Vice President has given timely emphasis to the first part of the motto.

There is no automatic right to be taken seriously, and demonstrations have never been a good substitute for faulty logic.

FLOWER SHOP to grace the refreshment table for a stylish after theatre party. The publisher and his attractive wife are avid supporters of the Mutual Concert Association and their efforts to bring cultural opportunities to the community and the surrounding area.

Mrs. Arthur S. McCallum knows just where to buy tickets to the concert series and where to find shoes to complement the beautiful clothes she has bought in anticipation of the fall social whirl. John Ivey of IVEY'S SHOE STORE is fashion wise with his selective shoe line and concert-wise as well, as he and Mrs. Ivey are on hand for every musical event.

The American way of life is to support organizations that attempt to improve the cultural climate in their community. Here, B. R. thers have their sights set on this week's tilt. Last year, the boys from Pantherland were defeated by the Terriers by a score of 37-7. However, Coach Holt's chargers have never lost to Gainesville here. Therefore they have somewhat of a psychological edge. Coach Holt expects a real hard-nosed game this week. Incidently, Jessie Heard, head mentor of Gainesville, and Holt were team mates on the finals.
