Representatives in Washington

should sponsor a bill broadening the lending powers of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to include cities having bond difficulties. A million dollar loan from the R. F. C. would be a big help to Sanford.

A defense attorney in the Scottish case is quoted in a New York paper as saying upon return to the metropolis following his defeat in the Alabama trial, "If you ever saw these big boys whose mouths are shut in their shoes, whose eyes pop out at you like frogs, whose chin drip induces juice, whiskered and filthy, you would not ask how they could do it." No attorney capable of such a remark should be allowed to practice in Alabama courts.

Who suffers when inheritance taxes are raised 100 high may be indicated by the will of Robert W. H. Straus of New York City, who died at 47. Mr. Straus had drawn a will leaving over $300,000 to numerous charitable institutions. But when he died, it was found that he had been changing, reducing the charitable bequests, with the following declaration: "Owing to the passage of the Revenue Act of 1922 increasing the estate tax, owing to the present condition of the value of stocks, and owing to the high price of my automobile, I have decided to make a new will."

The Moscow Trial

The sensational trial of six Britishers in Moscow on charges of espionage and sabotage has presumably come to a close. Three of them were ordered deported. Two were convicted and sentenced to prison terms of two and three years respectively. One was acquitted. The Russians, tried at the same time and on the same charges, received various sentences up to ten years. One Russian was acquitted.

The outcome of this trial has all the earmarks of a fair one. It had been feared that the lives of the Englishmen were in danger. The Soviet is well known to deal severely with all acts contemplated to be against the interests of Russia or the Communist party. Yet the severity of the penalty was three years. And there was no discrimination against the foreigners apparently. Their Russian co-defendants fared worse than they did.

There is a feeling, however, particularly among British statesmen, that the charges, the trial, and the whole affair were a wretched fake. No Englishmen seriously believe any of the British engineers guilty of tampering with the property of their employers, or of having the slightest undue interest in Russian affairs of state. Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon says that the defendants were subjected to what is known as the "third degree" in this country in order to get damaging testimony and confessions from them.

The English believe that their engineers were arrested and made the objects of a sensational trial as a sort of "Roman holiday" for the Communists. It is well known that things have not been going so well in Russia lately, particularly with Stalin and his cohorts. Something to divert the attention of the masses from their own hungry stomachs and impoverished condition to the "treachery" of the foreigners was needed.

That this is the final conclusion of the British governments can hardly be doubted. The news of the convictions had scarcely been received before King George had signed a proclamation placing an embargo on Russian goods. Thus, trade between England and the Soviet, which has been greatly to the advantage of the English, will be practically eliminated as a protest against the prosecution of the British engineers.

The placing of the embargo well indicates the seriousness with which the King's government views the whole affair. It not only means a costly loss of trade at a time when all business is dangerously depressed, but it also adds considerably more fuel to the European fire which may break into a conflagration at any moment. Wars have been declared for far less cause than arbitrary trade embargoes.

The Right To Life

Fear and ignorance have combined to make the parents of pretty, curly-haired Helen Vasco resist efforts of doctors to perform an eye operation on the child in order to save her life. A malignant tumor has developed and unless it is removed, death is a certainty, and it is not sure that even an operation may not result fatally.

With unrestrained devotion the mother has guarded her offspring against every attempt to relieve her condition and in pathetic defiance has avowedly stated: "God gave her to me, and God can take her away if He wishes."

Now the State of New York has taken a hand and the appellate division of the supreme court of the state has ruled unanimously that parents have no right to forbid a child's life by forbidding an operation. The court upheld the right of the Westchester county children's court to order the operation.

The court's decision seems to be fair and intelligent. Of course one cannot overlook the fact that a mother, fighting for her child, whether or not in ignorance of the dire results of her action, is not easily persuaded by man-made laws. It is perfectly conceivable that the terrified and defiant Mrs. Vasco may, in her motherly devotion, commit an act which will result in greater tragedy.

But the court has evidently placed greater consideration on the child than on the mother. The operation will probably be performed in the near future. If it is successful the mother will likely become reconciled to the "strange" science of surgery and will look upon the doctors as divine creatures. If it is not successful she will doubtless believe that the State of New York murdered her child and that surgery is a curse of the devil. At all events the infant will have been given every chance for its life which science and intelligence can provide.

The Song of the Printing Press

Dedicated to the Men Who Make the Printing Press Sing

I AM THE PRINTING PRESS. I am the printing press, born of the mother earth. My heart is of steel, my limbs are of iron, and my fingers are of brass. I sing the songs of the world, the oracles of history, the symphonies of all time. I am the voice of today, the herald of tomorrow. I weave into the warp of the past the loom of the future. I tell the stories of the world. I make the human heart beat with passion or temperance. I stir the pulse of nations, and make brave men and women die. I inspire the midnight letter, weary at his loom, to lift his head and gaze with fearless eyes into the constellation of a joy eternal.

KEEPING THE PUBLIC INFORMED

Chas. Louis McHenry Howe recently asked, in an article in the New York Herald-Tribune, why it is that the people do so little toward stopping crime, particularly organized crime. He answers his own question by saying that the people pay little attention to the punishment of crime. They read about crime in the newspapers and they are duly shocked about it, but "usually, when the criminal is found, the public considers the arrest a triumph and the ending of the case, and only once in a hundred times inquires later as to whether the man was actually convicted or not. Yet when a case, where the prisoner escapes through one legal loophole or another, is brought to the public's attention, it always brings a demand that 'something must be done about it.'"

WAR WOULDNT PAY

There is no denying that the immense cost of war in Europe is regarded with singular complacency by large numbers of persons of all classes both abroad and here. What appears chiefly to lie at the bottom of this complacency is the belief that war would stimulate business and restore prosperity. Simply because this belief is such a positive force making for war, it may be wise to stand of merely discounting it, instead of making ourselves calisthenic.

MOUNTING DEBT OF U. S. IS CAUSE FOR UNEASINESS

Wall Street Enthusiastic In Praising Roosevelt's Work

NEW YORK—While the financial district views with more or less equanimity the occasional introduction into the congressional hopper of new bills proposing to cut the gold equivalent of the dollar, it is inclined to take a less complacent view of the possible effects upon the dollar of the huge government debt, and of the frank adoption of an "extraordinary budget."

The Street is enthusiastic in praising the President's achievement in balancing the "ordinary" budget, and it is willing to recognize the need for the really huge burdens being placed upon the back of the Treasury for various "extraordinary" things. U.S. are even calculating how to profit from these appropriations. But the wonder grows as to what effect these are going to have upon the value of the dollar.

Since the summer of 1930, or a little more than two and a half years, the public debt of the United States has increased from about $16,000,000,000 to over $21,000,000,000 every six months. The increase, moreover, has been at an accelerating rate. This is the first cause for concern in Wall Street.

The present government debt of about $21,000,000,000 compares with an all-time peak in August, 1912, in terms of wholesale commodity prices, was over twice what it is today. Moreover, at that time the taxable incomes and the dollar volume of goods subject to excise taxes were greatly in excess of what they are today, or of what they are likely to be in the next few years. In 1929 the tax payments were about four times the interest on the public debt. Even as recently as the fiscal year 1923-1930 income taxes covered the interest on the public debt about four times. But at present every dollar pair in income taxes goes merely to cover the interest on the public debt. It is probably a conservative estimate to say that the actual burden of the government debt is now at least 50 percent higher than it was in 1919.

A further cause of concern is the size of the so-called floating or short-term debt. Between now and next Christmas the Treasury will have to borrow enough money to meet over $2,500,000,000 of certificates and over $300,000,000 of bills which will be coming due at short intervals. Thereafter for the next five years and a half maturities come due at the rate of about $1,000,000,000 every six months, and at the end of that time $2,250,000,000 of Liberty bonds must be paid.

A large short-term debt under favorable circumstances is safe and has obvious advantages. It enabled the Treasury during the past year to take the advantage of the extraordinary low interest rates for short-term money. But its virtue is also its weakness, for it creates the risk that in a money pinch the Treasury may have to pay very high rates indeed. To cite a mild example, although the Treasury paid as low as the equivalent of one-eleventh of 1 percent interest on its short-term debt under favorable circumstances, it is safe and has obvious advantages. It enabled the Treasury during the past year to take the advantage of the extraordinary low interest rates for short-term money. But its virtue is also its weakness, for it creates the risk that in a money pinch the Treasury may have to pay very high rates indeed.

Annual Junior Class Play Set For Friday

The annual play of the Junior Class of Seminole High School, "Who Wouldn't Be Crazy?" a farce comedy in three acts, under the direction of the class sponsor, Mrs. J. M. Stinescoper, will be presented on Friday evening at 8:00 o'clock in the auditorium of the school.

"Who Wouldn't Be Crazy?" is a new play and comes to Sanford highly recommended as one that will drive the "blues" away and make one forget the depression. The scenes are laid in the courtyard of the "Good Samaritan Sanitarium," an insane asylum. The cast is made up of 16 of the best actors in high school who have been rehearsing for several weeks.

The plot centers around "Speedy" Marshall, played by St. Clair Cameron, who is forever chasing "Speed" and a girl, Miss Kathleen Jones. General Stovall will portray the part of Marshall's father who has traced his son to the sanitarium.

Comedy bits will be furnished by "Pindie," the colored maid, Miss Eloise Winn, "Fluribus," general utility man at the asylum, George McClelland, "Raggy Mortimer," a young millionaire, David Butler, and "Hardboiled McCarty," pride of the force, Jack Russell.

There will be mystery, a kidnapping, and a robbery which centers around Inmate Number One, John Dighton, and Inmate Number Two, Miss Carolyn Cogburn, who are guarded throughout the play by Superintendent Higgins, Joe Thompson, and Nurse Lovell, Miss Sally Rayburn.

Other characters are Beatrice, Marjorie, and Janet, guests at the Sanitarium, and friends of Lois, played respectively by Miss Thelma Benson, Miss Martha Bishop, and Miss Elizabeth Methvin.

The only serious part in the entire play will be portrayed by Miss Betty Wheelers as Evelyn Winslow, and Richard Deas, as Edward Gordon, her fiance.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Turner save as their guest this week, T. G. Drake, of Atlanta, Ga.

HOME OF MRS. SCHWARTZ SCENE OF LARGE GARDEN PARTY TUESDAY

One of the largest and most important events of the spring social season took place yesterday afternoon when Mrs. S. M. Schwartz entertained about 225 guests with a large garden party at her home, Marquette Lodge, on Golden Lake in honor of her daughter, Mrs. H. B. Odham, Jr., and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. A. K. Powers. Guests were received from 4:00 o'clock to 6:30 o'clock in the garden of Mrs. Schwartz's home by Mrs. Schwartz, Mrs. A. K. Powers, Mrs. H. B. Odham, Jr., Mrs. H. B. Odham, and Mrs. F. W. Bender.

Guests were greeted upon their arrival by Mrs. Valle Williams and Mrs. C. E. Kirtley, who escorted them to the reading line. They were then served punch and taken through the garden by Mrs. J. C. Benson, Mrs. S. D. Higleyman, and Mr. Schwartz. Later an ice course was served on the lawn after which the guests were invited into Mrs. Schwartz's home where coffee was poured and music was enjoyed by Harry Wester, pianist, and Elmer Wester, violinist.

Among those assisting the hostesses in caring for the guests were: Mrs. C. F. Herndon and Mrs. J. O. Laney who greeted the guests as they entered the Schwartz home, Mrs. C. Boyce Bell, Mrs. Edward Higgins, Mrs. W. M. Thigpen, and Mrs. A. D. Zachary, and Mrs. Wallace W. Bell and Mrs. Peter Schaal who presided at the punch table. Assisting in serving refreshments were: Mrs. Jean S. Adams the Misses Rose LaVerne Hurt, Mary Dighton, Grace Williams, Katherine Schirard, Jane Sharon, Betty Wheelers, Carolyn Cogburn, Frances Mahoney, Kathleen Laney, Adelaide Higgins, Thelma Benson, Martha Bishop, Caroline Hill, Eunice Tyler Eleanor Hickson, and Dorothy Marshall.

An afternoon gown fashioned by Mrs. Taber, of the National Council, will be presented.

MONDAY

Mrs. A. C. Ford and Mrs. E. Compton will be hostesses for "Ladies Day" at the Sanford Country Club.

Circle Number Three of All Souls Catholic Church will meet at 8:00 P. M. at the home of Mrs. A. E. Mallem, East First Street.

tan chiffon combined with tan silk lace was chosen by Mrs. Schwartz for the occasion. The dress was fashioned along simple lines, had a long flowing skirt and was worn with a short jacket fastened with a rhinestone clasp. Completing the outfit was a shoulder corsage of mixed flowers.

Light shades of pink and blue were the colors chosen for the afternoon frock worn by Mrs. H. B. Odham, Jr. It was made of net and tulle, with a high waistline and a long net skirt banded in ruffles of tulle. Cape sleeves of tulle ruffles adorned the waist which was tied with a pink and blue taffeta sash. She also wore a corsage of flowers.

Mrs. A. K. Powers received the guests wearing a gown of soft green eyelet embroidery. A long full skirt extended to the floor from a high waistline which was marked with a wide girde. Ruffles of green organdy marked the large bertha collar, and the hem of the dress. Her corsage was of roses and other garden flowers.

A "shoulder corsage" of yellow roses and fern was worn by Mrs. H. B. Odham with her dress of French blue chiffon. The square décolletage of the dress was finished with scalloped of chiffon while other details were a long flared skirt and normal waistline.

A brilliant shade of yellow was the color of the linen lace afternoon gown selected by Mrs. Bender for the occasion. The color of the dress was complimented by a wide sash of bright blue velvet and a shoulder corsage of pink and blue roses.

As the guests strolled about the Schwartz garden which extended down to the shores of the lake, they admired the several plots on the long expanse of lawn where quantities of Spring flowers were blooming, making a mass of bright colors against a background of green. Special attention was given to the large rock garden which was made attractive by several varieties of succulents.

The table from which punch was served on the lawn was overlaid with a white cloth and decorated with purple bougainvillea and asparagus fern. The rooms of the Schwartz home, which were opened en suite for the occasion, were decorated with a profusion of Easter lilies, gladioli, roses, larkspur, and other garden flowers arranged in large vases and containers against the walls of the rooms.

The tea table was overlaid with an Italian cut work cloth and centered with a silver basket of lavender and pink larkspur, and white gypsophila, around which were placed green candles in silver holders which cast a soft glow about the room.

Miss Frances Gibson left today for Arizona to join her parents after visiting Mrs. H. L. Gibson and Mrs. E. D. Brownlee at their home, here for several months.
