BRIEFS

Main Street calendar

SANFORD — A Community Calendar of upcoming events is now being published monthly by the Sanford Main Street Program. It is available at the Welcome Center, 401 W. First St.

Chris Gramas, co-president of the Main Street group said, "It is a simple working instrument to make downtown business people and the Sanford community at large aware of events that might be of interest to them."

For the present, plans are to keep the calendar in a simple listing form, with distribution at the Welcome Center, Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce, several locations at City Hall and the First Street Gallery.

Copies will also be distributed during meetings of various organizations such as the Sanford Historic Downtown Waterfront Association and the Sanford Historic Trust.

Spokesperson Kay Bartholomew commented, "As contributions grow for the Main Street program, we will probably increase the distribution and create an attractive brochure one that will make people aware of all the things the community has to offer in the area."

The Welcome Center is now in operation from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. on Saturdays.

Talk to the Russians

SANFORD — People in the Sanford area will be able to converse with people in Russia, toll free, next week. WERC Radio in Sanford is presenting the Elton Rafter Show, direct from Russia and the Ukraine.

Between 1 and 3 p.m. June 22 through 25, local callers will be able to participate in an open-line telephonic conversation during the broadcast and ask questions pertaining to needs and conditions on the opposite side of the world.

Rafter says she will be interviewing a roster of English-speaking noteworthy guests in Kiev and Moscow on such topics as how the people in Russia are coping with economic hard times, how they feel about Yeltsin, and how they feel about us.

The broadcasting is under the auspices of the U.S. Agency for International Development.

The phone number to call to participate in the program during on-air times is 1-800-747-7444.

Lottery dispute settled

SANFORD — A Winter Park woman who sued her neighbor over a lottery prize accepted an $8,000 out-of-court settlement just as a Seminole Circuit Court jury had reached a verdict in the case.

Parola Apanah agreed to the settlement from Marsha Pearce. The verdict was sealed and both parties agreed not to discuss terms of the settlement.

Apanah had sued Pearce, alleging the two friends had bought Fantasy 5 tickets together and agreed on a hand shake deal that if either woman won, she would give the other one $50,000. The two women each put up $5 to buy 10 tickets in August. It was the first time they had played the game together, according to testimony. One of the tickets held by Pearce paid $142,000.

Apanah's daughter, Natasha, testified Pearce told her the two women agreed to share the prize if either woman won.

Pearce contended the women had no agreement to distribute the winnings but she gave Apanah a $1,000 check as a friendly gesture. Apanah filed the suit seeking $50,000 when the $1,000 check bounced.

'Gang' members jailed

Armed youths meet for alleged rumble in Sanford

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Two members of a Longwood-based youth gang were arrested in Sanford Monday night at the scene of what might have become a "rumble."

About a half-dozen youths armed with sticks had gathered in the parking lot of Northlake Village apartments, located off Airport Boulevard, at about 10 o'clock, according to police reports. The youths said they were waiting for members of an Altamonte Springs group, the "Sick Boys." Police report two of the youths had handguns. They were arrested on charges of carrying concealed firearms.

Reports state one of the youths told police they had an earlier confrontation with the "Sick Boys," but no such confrontation apparently occurred locally, said Sanford police spokesman Lt. Mike Rotundo.

Although Rotundo said the incident was not gang-related because only one group was involved, local gang specialists say they're familiar with the Sick Boys and the two arrested youths, who are associated with a Longwood group called the "Longwood East Boys."

Investigator Rob Bennett of the Longwood Police Department said the two arrested youths, Gary W. Clough, 18, and Nathaniel Garth Lloyd, 18, both of Longwood, were principals in the loosely knit Longwood East Boys.

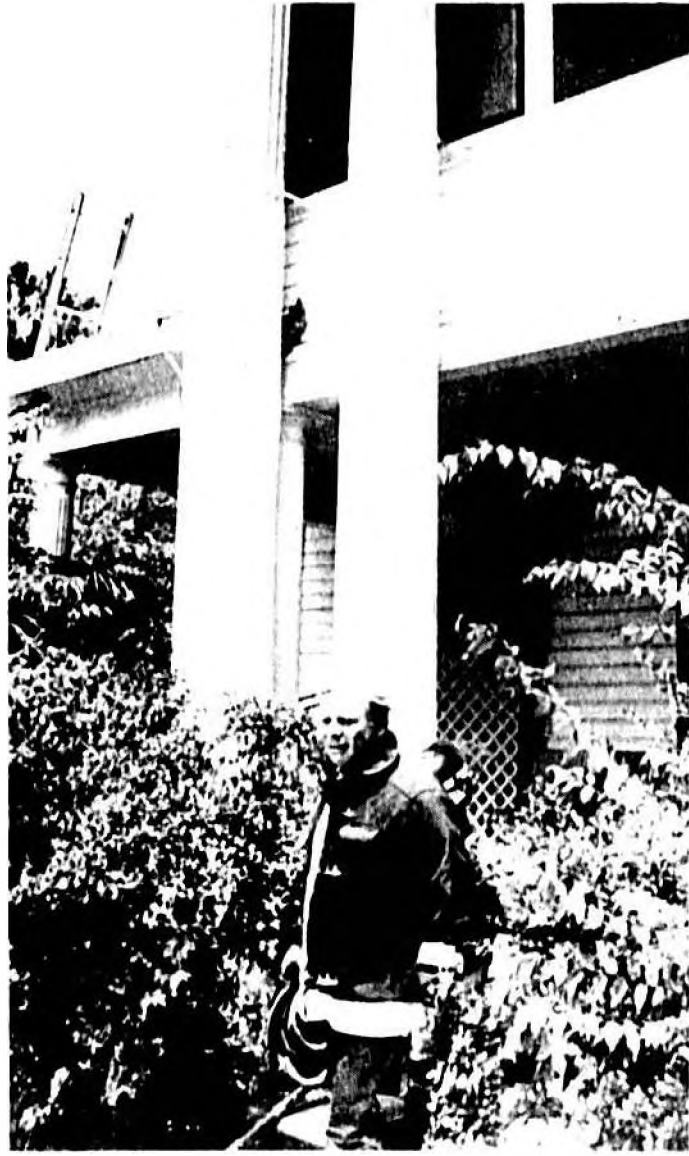

"We haven't had much of a problem with them during the past four or five months," said Bennett. Garth was kind of the leader of the group.

School board changes policy

SANFORD — Two Oviedo High School male students pleaded not guilty Tuesday in juvenile court to battery and false imprisonment charges.

A 17-year-old female student claims the youths, ages 15 and 16, sexually harassed her since the beginning of the year when she refused to date with one of them.

Assistant State Attorney Ralph Erickson said the underlying facts of the case indicated sexual harassment, although the assault is not a criminal charge.

The girls' charges on May 10, the pair followed her into an aerobics room at the school, kept her there against her will and hauled her. After a brief struggle, the girl escaped and reported the incident to a teacher. Prior to the May incident, the girl had not reported any

Borrow pit requirements reviewed

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The City of Sanford is working on expanding its requirements for borrow pit permitting. An emergency ordinance approved on first reading Monday may or may not continue in its present form.

The ordinance would place a 60 day moratorium on the city's acceptance of borrow pit or mining operation permit requests. It was approved by a unanimous vote.

The wording of the prepared ordinance said, "It is in the city's best interest to place a 60 day moratorium upon the permitting of borrow pits in agricultural and industrial zoned land located within the City of Sanford, so as to allow the city the time necessary to research and review the need for amendments or revisions to the city's borrow pit regulations."

City Manager Bill Simmons explained that the 60-day limit is the maximum which can be set by an emergency ordinance.

The city staff has met on this matter since Monday night, meeting and we are now of the opinion that an emergency ordinance may not be the proper direction at this time," said City Manager director of Planning and Development, this morning.

School head opts for a smaller raise than offered

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Supt. Pea Hagerty will be getting a relatively small raise this year in hopes that it will smooth the way when employer negotiations begin later this summer.

Though he could have received at least a two percent raise, Hagerty chose to accept only one and a half percent. His base salary will go up from $97,000 a year to $98,455 per year.

Board members said they believed that his willingness to accept a smaller raise than he was entitled to receive will help at a time when tight budget restrictions will probably force the district to offer teachers and other district employees only small raises this year.

Employees of the school district receive two percent cost-of-living increases each year plus whatever increase the negotiating team is able to work out with management.

"I think he has done a fine job during his first year," said board chairman Jeanne Morris. "He certainly deserves the money he is being paid."

Other board members agreed, saying that few CEOs of big corporations could be have for the amount that Hagerty is being paid.

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Officials impose fine

SHALIMAR — State environmental officials want Okaloosa County to pay a $30,500 fine for illegally dumping untreated sewage sludge at three sites, including at least one cattle pasture.

"Anytime you have a waste product with heavy metals, you don't want beef or milk cattle standing in it and eating the grass that grows in it," said environmental manager Rick Bradburn of the Department of Environmental Regulation.

The agency's district director, Bobby Cooley, signed a consent order Monday that would settle the complaint if the county agrees to pay the fine and the cost of a groundwater investigation, probably several thousand dollars.

On the basis of an anonymous tip, an inspector for the agency found untreated sludge had been dumped at an sewage effluent spray field near Fort Walton Beach and two farms in the Crestview area.

The inspector noted cattle were grazing in the middle of sludge piles up to four feet high that had not been spread out as required by state regulations.

Letter generates complaints

FORT WALTON BEACH — A letter warning that Gulf Power Co. will be quicker to cut off customers who fail to pay their electric bills on time has generated a barrage of complaints.

About 150 people have called about the letter mailed over the last two weeks to 155,000 of Gulf's 309,000 customers in the western Florida Panhandle, said spokesman Carter Haynes at the company's Pensacola headquarters.

He said the letter was sent only to customers who have a habit of failing to pay on time and new customers who have hooked on in the last 12 months.

It stated that power would be cut off within 24 hours of a 5 p.m. deadline on disconnect notices. In the past, the company has given customers a three- or four-day grace period after the deadline.

Lombardo connected to Colombo family

MIAMI — A man sentenced to 4 1/2 years in prison for poisoning a race horse and loan sharking worked with the Colombo crime family, a federal prosecutor said.

Lawrence Lombardo, 50, who ran New York Thoroughbred Productions Inc., of Elmont, N.Y., had pleaded guilty in April to 21 counts of mail fraud, loan sharking and conspiracy.

The prosecutor played tapes of Lombardo threatening clients who could not pay the 2 percent a week interest he charged on loans.

Lombardo's attorney Ronald Rubinstein called the calls "just puffing," but U.S. District Judge Federico Moreno disagreed.

"You certainly sounded like a gangster on the tapes," said Moreno.

Federal law ignored

PALM BEACH — Local officials are ignoring a federal law that protects historic landmarks by their routing of jets over the Mar-a-Lago estate, an attorney for Donald Trump says.

The county, which operates Palm Beach International Airport, hasn't responded to Trump's request to devise a new flight path to minimize exhaust and noise damage to the Palm Beach estate, Thomas Richichi said in a June 9 letter to the county.

Palm Beach County commissioners are bound by the National Historic Preservation Act to protect Mar-a-Lago, which is a nationally listed landmark.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

'Open door' may close

Castor: Time to reconsider 'open door' policy of community colleges

By Associated Press

ORLANDO — Community colleges may be forced to change their open door policies of traditionally accepting all interested students, Education Commissioner Betty Castor said.

Because 46 percent of the students graduating from high school in Florida can't do college-level work, the state must provide remedial courses for those students wanting to continue their education.

"The cost of those college prep courses is estimated at more than $10 million for recent public high school graduates,"

The cost of those college prep courses is estimated at more than $10 million for recent public high school graduates.

-Betty Castor

Castor said Tuesday in a speech prepared for delivery to a joint meeting of the Board of Regents, the state Board of Community Colleges and the Postsecondary Education Planning Commission.

What's more, students who start their college careers by taking remedial courses are far more likely to drop out before getting degrees, she said.

"It is time for more direct, concerted action to address this problem," Castor said.

A task force in college readiness will be asked to make recommendations by the end of the year.

She suggested that the Regents and the State Board of Community Colleges consider minimum course requirements, especially in math, for high school graduates seeking enrollment in one of Florida's 28 community colleges.

Neighbors question state island deal

By Associated Press

NAPLES — Neighbors are questioning $13.5 million the state has agreed to pay for Key Island and are complaining the deal promotes development on the environmentally sensitive spit of land.

After more than a decade of failed negotiations and legal challenges to development proposals, owners have agreed to sell most of the 7-mile island south of Naples.

But neighbors are complaining.

A couple and another man who own homes north of the island have raised questions about the $13.5 million purchase agreement approved by Gov. Lawton Chiles and the Cabinet in March.

They contend the agreement fosters further development, contrary to the purpose of the state's $300 million-a-year land-buying program.

"The deal has been put together so that it really encourages the expansion of the hotel on Key Island, which will bring more traffic, and also, we think, will not be good for the island itself," said Nancy Stroud, a lawyer for neighbors Thomas Hickey and Craig and Rebecca Foxhausen.

Environmentalists, state officials and a lawyer for the owners disagreed.

"What the neighbors have claimed is that agreement requires the state to issue the permits. That's not the case," said Terry Lewis, a West Palm Beach lawyer representing owners, Bolton and Lucille Drackett of Naples.

The state Department of Natural Resources has denied the neighbors' request for a hearing to challenge the purchase. They have appealed.

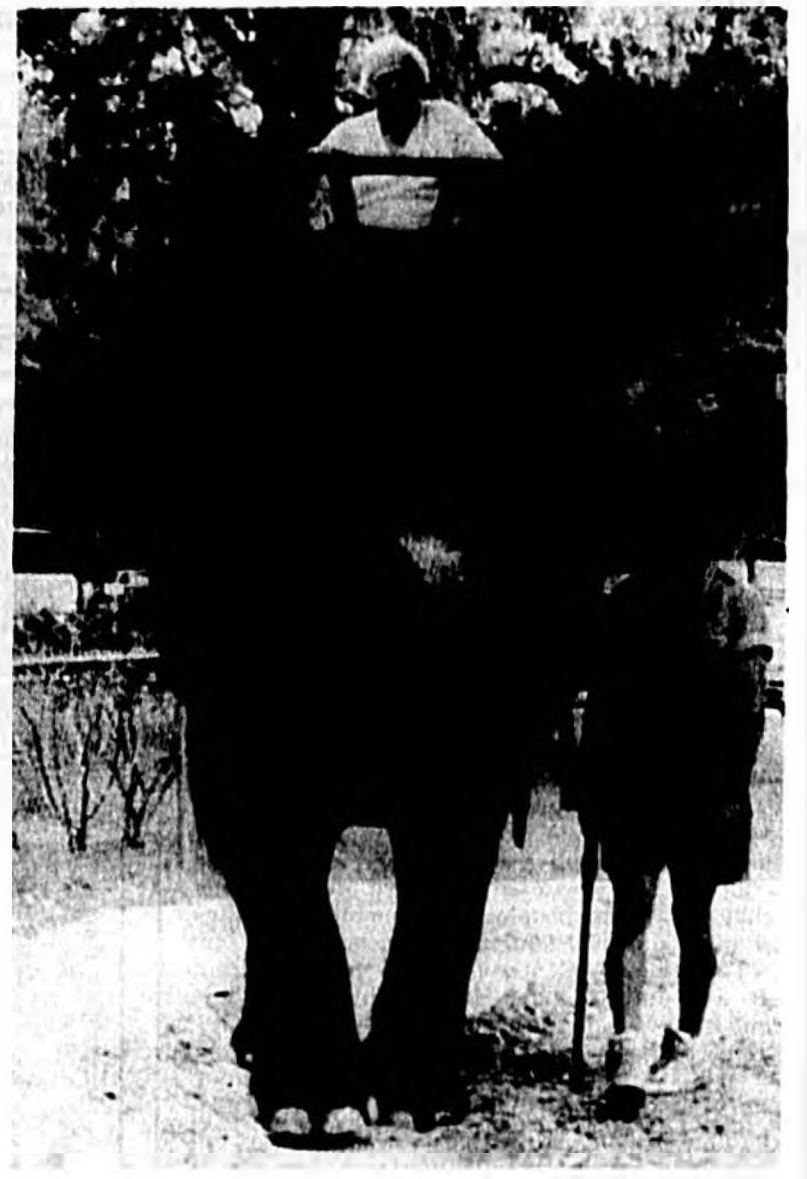

"They really want to have a fact-finding hearing that will be a forum to discuss the purchase price," Stroud said.

Lawyers for the neighbors say the Dracketts paid $15 million in 1989 for the island property and some valuable shoreline property. They say the state's purchase price was based on faulty, 2-year-old appraisals that assumed development rights that were later overturned. State officials say the appraisals are valid.

The agreement calls for the state to pay $13.5 million for 2,311 acres, free of development except for a small, rustic lodge called Keewaydin Club.

The Dracketts, whose plan to build luxury homes over much of the island has been stymied by legal challenges, would retain some 60 acres. They would expand the lodge, adding up to 100 new units.

The Dracketts still must get local, state and federal permits for club expansion, Lewis said.

AIDS is leading cause of death among young men in Florida

By Associated Press

MIAMI — Federal researchers found that AIDS and related infections have surpassed accidents, cancer and heart disease as the leading killer of young men in Florida and seven of the state's cities.

It's also the leading cause of young women in Miami and Fort Lauderdale, researchers at the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said in a report published in today's Journal of the American Medical Association.

Florida's high rate of HIV deaths doesn't surprise state AIDS-prevention officials, who a year ago reached conclusions similar to those in the federal report.

"These people probably got infected in their early to mid 20s," said Stephen Kindland, spokesman for the state AIDS office of the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services. "That is a prime time for people to be more openly engaging in high-risk behavior."

Health experts say the latest numbers show a need for expanding AIDS prevention efforts.

"Adolescent and young adult HIV transmission guarantees the continuation of the AIDS-HIV epidemic, barring a substantially expanded national prevention effort," wrote Dr. Sten Vermund of the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md.

In an analysis of 1990 mortality data, researchers found that AIDS and illnesses related to HIV were the No. 1 killer of men ages 25-44 in California, Florida, Massachusetts, New Jersey and New York.

Fort Lauderdale, Hialeah, Hollywood, Miami, Orlando, St. Petersburg and Tampa were among the 64 cities where AIDS was the No. 1 killer of men in that age group.

Among young women, AIDS wasn't the leading cause of death in any state but was the major killer in Miami, Fort Lauderdale, and seven other cities nationwide.

Dr. Richard Selik and his colleagues analyzed data prepared by the National Center for Health Statistics. They found 18,748 deaths of adults aged 25 to 44 nationwide in 1990. Most were caused by AIDS, but a few were caused by HIV-related infections that had not yet progressed to AIDS.

Figures from 1990 are the most recent available, but epidemiologist Susan Chu, a contributing author, said the numbers likely have increased since then.

"Because HIV has such a long latent period, the deaths are going to continue to rise," Chu said.

Nationally, AIDS and related infections were the second-leading cause of death among young men, behind unintentional injuries; and sixth among young women, after cancer, unintentional injury, heart disease, suicide and homicide.

Among white and Hispanic men, AIDS and HIV infections were surpassed only by unintentional injury; among young black men, only by homicide.

Little girl chooses death on tracks

By RAJU CHENNUM
 Associated Press Writer

DANIA — A 6-year-old girl fought off two siblings and a cousin to stay on train tracks as a locomotive bore down, telling them she wanted "to become an angel and be with her mother."

At the last minute, Jackie Johnson turned her back to the train and closed her eyes. She was thrown 20 feet, her neck broken.

"I told her to get off the train tracks," said Lakita Wimberly,

7, Jackie's cousin. "She said 'No, I don't want to. I want to die.'"

Jackie was living with relatives because her mother, Carla Johnson, has a terminal illness, authorities said. The nature of the illness wasn't disclosed.

Dr. Ronald Wright, the county medical examiner, ruled the girl's death a suicide.

Jackie was walking to Dania Elementary School with her sister and cousin, both 7 years old, and 8-year-old brother when they crossed the tracks about 7:30 a.m. Tuesday.

"The other three children stood clear of the tracks as the 63-car northbound train approached," said Jim Lejedal, spokesman for the Broward County Sheriff's Office. "But Jackie deliberately remained in its path."

The children told police that Jackie said she wanted "to become an angel and be with her mother," Lejedal said.

Jackie's brother, Valerius Fox, said she pushed him and the two others to safety but refused to leave herself.

"She pushed me off the track," he said. "I said, 'Get off the track!' She wouldn't get off the track though. When she ran up close to the train, she got hit."

Eugene Robinson, Jackie's adult cousin, said he talked with Valerius and the other children just after the girl was struck.

"She said she'd seen an angel, and she was going to heaven to be with the angel," said Robinson. "So she just stood there with her eyes closed and the train hit her."

Armed teens escape after firing shots

By DENIS M. SEARLES
 Associated Press Writer

DENVER — Two teen-aged boys escaped early today from a youth detention facility, armed with a semiautomatic pistol thrown to them over a 16-foot chain link fence, authorities said. Shots were fired, but no one was injured.

The youths, aged 16 and 17, had held authorities at bay since about 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Gilliam Youth Services Center, said police Det. Tracie Harrison. Their identities were not released because of their age.

Authorities thought the teens were trapped in a kitchen area, but they probably escaped on foot about 2:45 a.m. after climbing through a ceiling, Harrison said.

"Someone threw a gun over the fence to them," said Police Chief David Michaud. "A counselor saw it but the kid got there first, the kid fired a couple of shots — we think to stop the counselor from chasing him."

The weapon appears to be a .380 caliber semiautomatic pistol from the shell casings found, Harrison said. Police don't know who threw the gun to the inmate.

The counselor pursued the armed youth and a second youth inside the facility. The two locked a double door behind them and ran into an area that includes a kitchen, offices, a pantry, and two doors leading to a dock area.

Pepsi takes PR crisis to TV

By GUY WOLLENBERG
 AP Business Writer

As reports of syringes and other foreign objects in Pepsi containers spread to more states, Pepsi-Cola Co. confronted a growing public relations crisis by putting the head of its U.S. operations on national television.

The Food and Drug Administration said Tuesday it was investigating at least a dozen complaints, while at least one person was arrested on charges of making a false report.

Appearing on ABC's "Nightline" show Tuesday night, Pepsi's North American division president and chief executive Craig Weatherup said there was no "logical explanation" for how cans were tampered with during Pepsi's highly mechanized production process.

The cans are typically turned upside down, blasted with hot air and water and then flipped to be filled and sealed, a process that takes seconds.

"That container of that can is probably the most tamper-proof package of any food or beverage product in this country," he said.

Pepsi-Cola Co., based in Somers, N.Y., has said it has no plans for a recall, and federal officials caution that the claims appeared unrelated and many could be hoaxes.

But over the last six days, national and local media have reported cases in more than a dozen states, including Arkansas, Connecticut, Illinois, Iowa, Louisiana, Michigan, Mississippi, Missouri, New York, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Washington and Wyoming.

FDA Commissioner David Kessler, who also appeared on the "Nightline" broadcast, said that a central Pennsylvania man had been arrested on federal charges of making a false report of finding a syringe in a Pepsi can.

Kessler said the man had gone to a hospital Sunday to report the discovery, and later reported it to Pepsi. Kessler did not identify the hospital or the town where the arrest occurred.

FDA spokesman Jim O'Hara said conviction carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Kessler had earlier said once "an initial complaint of tampering receives widespread publicity, there are always subsequent complaints, many of which turn out to be false."

The maker of soft drinks, bottled at more than 400 locations, is one of the most prolific and aggressive advertisers. But until the "Nightline" show, it was keeping a low-key approach to the growing reports of tampering.

"We have yet to confirm that any of these reports concern an unopened container," said Andrew Ciaglia, a Pepsi spokesman. "There have been no injuries reported, and there is no health risk to consumers. We see no reason for a product recall and the FDA concurs."

But there were some signs of growing uneasiness. A grocery in Iowa pulled all Pepsi products from the shelves Tuesday after a customer reported finding a syringe in a can of regular Pepsi purchased two days earlier.

In Mustang, Okla., an Okhahoma City suburb, a Circle K convenience store customer reported finding a syringe in a can of Diet Crystal Pepsi on Tuesday. Circle K pulled all Pepsi beverages from its area stores.

In Melvindale, Mich., a man told police he found a syringe inside a Diet Pepsi can purchased from a vending machine.

A third person in Louisiana reported finding a needle in a can of Pepsi. In Wyoming, police said a Rock Springs woman reported finding a syringe in a Pepsi can purchased last week.

A woman in suburban Chicago told police Tuesday that she found a syringe in a can of Caffeine Free Diet Pepsi she bought from a vending machine.

In Ohio, a Columbus man told police he found a syringe in a can of Diet Pepsi bought from a vending machine. And a suburban Cincinnati woman said she found a one-inch nail in a can of Mountain Dew, another Pepsi product.

The FDA advised consumers across the country to empty containers of Pepsi into a glass before drinking it.

Woman critically ill, not dead

By TOM NAYS
 Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Her body was cold and stiff. No pulse. No respiration.

Indeed, the cloak of death covered Nancy Vitale so completely, everyone thought she was dead. They were wrong.

More than two hours after the Brooklyn woman was officially pronounced dead Monday night, a medical examiner noticed she was breathing.

The 40-year-old teacher was in critical condition at Coney Island Hospital with an undisclosed ailment Tuesday. Authorities tried to sort out how a person who lay dying at the feet of a medical examiner was mistaken for a corpse.

The city's Emergency Medical Service team that responded to the scene "followed all EMS guidelines and New York state procedures involved in giving a presumptive diagnosis of death," said EMS spokeswoman Lynn Schulman.

The city medical examiner's office, which was called after the EMS pronounced the woman dead, also denied a any negligence.

Vitale was found in her basement apartment in the borough of Brooklyn on Monday evening after her landlord let himself in to deliver a message, said Detective Joseph McConville, a police spokesman.

The landlord called 911 and an EMS technician pronounced the woman dead less than a half hour later, police said. The medical examiner arrived, and after finding no signs of life more than two hours later, he ruled her dead, police said.

But while the examiner was seated at a table doing paperwork and interviewing family members, he noticed Vitale breathing. The time was 9:04 p.m., about three hours after Vitale's landlord found her.

Ellen Borakove, a spokeswoman for the medical examiner, disputed the police account, saying the examiner never pronounced the woman dead.

"We never pronounce deaths," Borakove said. "If (EMS) decides a person is dead, we assume they're dead."

The examiner only checked the body after it appeared Vitale was reviving, she said.

Schulman insisted the ambulance crew did its job.

Officials use wasps to combat fruit flies

Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH — As many as 1.5 million parasitic wasps, harmless to animals and people, are being released each week in three counties to combat the destructive Caribbean fruit fly.

Officials are releasing the wasps in the citrus-growing areas of Martin, St. Lucie and Indian River counties as an alternative to chemical pesticides, Agriculture Commissioner Bob Crawford said Tuesday.

"This program will open another front from which to attack Caribbean fruit flies while still protecting the environment," Crawford said. It is the first time, other than in tests, the wasps will be released in Florida.

The tiny wasps lay their eggs in larvae of the Caribbean fruit fly. When the wasps hatch, they eat the Caribbean larvae. The state and U.S. Department of Agriculture have been testing the use of parasitic wasps as an alternative to chemicals against Caribbean flies for several years. Earlier tests took place in Clewiston and the Florida Keys.

The flies pose a tremendous problem to growers and distributors because Japan and other citrus-producing countries and states, such as Texas, Arizona and California, will not accept Florida citrus unless it comes from a certified Caribbean-free zone or has been treated to kill larvae, said state Agriculture Department spokeswoman Maeve McConnell.

For 10 years, the Agriculture Department has been administering the Caribbean Fruit Fly-Free Protocol, which establishes regulations for certifying citrus-producing areas as Caribbean-free.

Under this program, Caribbean flies are eliminated from groves through removal of host plants and through spraying, said Ed Burns, an administrator for Florida's division of plant industry. But this year, more Caribbean flies were detected than in the past decade due to successive mild winters, Burns said.

The first parasitic wasp release took place June 2. The wasps, grown in a laboratory in Gainesville and transported as pupae to Fort Pierce, are initially being released at sites where groves and residential areas meet, where spraying and other control measures are not feasible.

Getting things done by being an instigator

A car's motor won't run until the starter is activated. Similarly, a problem cannot be resolved until at least one person gets involved.

Problems exist everywhere. Sanford, Lake Mary, Longwood, and northern Seminole County are not without their share. Attempts at solving them however, cannot be made until they are identified and properly reported.

An examination of how recent actions got underway, serves as an example. Included are an investigation into the diesel fuel being pumped into Lake Monroe, area-wide concern over borrow pits, refurbishing of Hopper School, improvements downtown and along the Sanford waterfront.

None of these projects or concerns would be moving forward without a person or group taking action. Possibly one person, seeing a need, created an idea and attracted others to examine the situation.

From that point on, an idea may grow to include additional people and/or a type of governmental body. Eventually, a problem or need may involve the entire community or be of area-wide concern.

A few individuals who initially create an idea, may jump on the grandstand and shout, "Hey, I'm the person who started this, I deserve all the credit."

Most people however, realize that even their own plan can improve with input from others. These are the instigators, the type people who make a neighborhood, city, county, state and nation a better place in which to live.

If something can be proven wrong, it should be reported. Problems should be called to the attention of leaders. If a viable and economically feasible solution for a problem is possible, it should be suggested.

One person, starting a movement and gaining support from others can cause major changes. Without that first person however, nothing will start.

Individual thinkers and doers are our true leaders. We applaud them all and hope others will follow their example.

Howell's residence

I have been reading with interest Commissioner Lon Howell's problem with his homestead exemption and his apparent feud with Property Appraiser Bill Suber. The articles were interesting because the rumor has been around for some time that Mr. Howell doesn't live in Sanford, but in DeBary.

The articles say that the Volusia school district provided copies of an affidavit to Suber, signed by Howell, stating that Howell and his son, who was to attend school in Volusia County, lived in DeBary.

Lon Howell went on to run for city commissioner in spite of the fact that he signed a legal affidavit stating he lived in Volusia County, not in the City of Sanford.

Didn't he have to sign a legal document stating he was a resident of his district in Sanford before becoming eligible to run for office? Which one has he disassembled about?

He stated that he doesn't remember signing the affidavit. Regardless if he remembers or not, he did sign it. And for him to state that it's a moot point because his son will be out of school and enrolled next year in Seminole County doesn't change the fact that he ran for office illegally. He's dissembling on one or the other. Which is it Mr. Howell?

The only honorable thing for Mr. Howell to do is to resign his position immediately. We citizens deserve better than this from elected officials. It's the same old politicians' standby to lie and deny.

Praise should be given to Bill Suber for not backing down in the face of political pressure.

I truly believe that the citizens of Sanford want good, honest government, by good, honest people, who work for the good of all instead of the few. Our problem is that we've become so apathetic and jaded about government, that we either consciously or unconsciously expect that no matter who's elected we're going to be lied to, ripped off, or put down. But we can't give up, or expect someone else to look out for our best interest. We must all take a hand in not only running government, but, constantly looking over the shoulders of those whom we elect to make sure that the will of the people is followed.

I know this may sound hokey to some people but in my daily prayers I pray for a good and benevolent government. I have faith that someday God will answer that prayer. In the meantime I will stay involved and try to stay informed. All that I ask is that my fellow citizens try to do the same.

Perot's budget numbers don't add up

WASHINGTON — Ross Perot has been constantly on television pushing his new book, "Not for Sale at Any Price." At the heart of this book, and Perot's pitch, is his promise to eliminate the deficit by 1998 without really raising taxes. However, his numbers simply do not add up.

Perot is now finding that his immense popularity has one drawback: Policy planners from both parties are taking him seriously. They are examining his proposals closely, and Perot is finding he can no longer hide behind vague promises mixed with down-home homilies.

Perot's latest theme is a furious assault against the Clinton plan as just another "Democratic tax-and-spend" program that will not eliminate the deficit. However, a close look at his own plan shows that, at best, the deficit might only be a little lower after five years than under the Clinton plan.

The latest group to look at the Perot plan is the Congressional Budget Office. They say Perot has overestimated savings and deficit reduction over five years by about $450 billion.

There are probably few exercises as arcane as predicting federal budgets five years into the future. One must estimate — "guess" would be a better term — exactly how robust or weak the economy will be during the five-year cycle.

Government runs on tax revenues. So the healthier the economy, the more money people and businesses will make, and the more tax revenue will flow in.

Likewise, the healthier the economy, the higher the employment rate and the less government will have to pay out in unemployment benefits and welfare. Finally, if interest rates go down, then the government will have to spend much less on what it borrows, and its interest payments will be reduced.

No two economists agree on a long-term forecast of economic growth, unemployment rates, interest rates and other key factors. Even slight disagreements can end up in multibillion-dollar differences in deficit estimates over a five-year period.

Perot is now finding that his immense popularity has one drawback.

The CBO says Perot has adopted an unrealistically positive outlook on which to base his revenue, interest and spending projections.

Perot has used a set of projections issued by the CBO in January 1992. These numbers were almost rejected out-of-hand by most economists as wildly optimistic; they have been downgraded three times since by the CBO.

If Perot were to use the most recent set of projections, issued in March 1993 — a set of numbers most economists think is fairly solid — his overall deficit-savings projection would be off by about $100 billion over five years. Then, when you add in some of the really arcane calculations on interest costs and the like, you add perhaps another $80 billion to $100 billion over five years.

Even this assumption gives Perot the benefit of the doubt. But few budget experts take the Perot budget at face value.

For instance, the Perot budget assumes savings of $145 billion over five years in interest payments alone. Most government finance experts — Democratic, Republican and non-partisan — scoff at this number. The CBO thinks it is inflated by a factor of two or three. The Clinton budget, attacked by Republicans as overly optimistic, assumes $51 billion in interest savings over the same period.

Post-graduate adulthood

I am leaving Cambridge as my old classmates are returning. Personal landmarks come too swiftly these days to give them all due attention. A 25th college reunion followed by a 50th birthday and now a 30th reunion. I have passed up this trip inward for a trip outward.

But I cannot resist bringing some classmates with me. These fellow travelers through our mutual demography have been neatly packed, their lives bound, between the crimson covers of our reunion book that is titled with deceptive simplicity: Harvard and Radcliffe College, Class of 1963.

I read about them, one at a time, with a fascination we reserve for old friends or even for strangers who have done time together.

In the eyes of others, I suppose, we have much in common. A group of students of roughly the same age with roughly the same SATs and roughly the same bright prospects who went through the same school at the same time. We arrived in Harvard Square in 1959 on the last train out of the Fifties. We left just months before President Kennedy's assassination and the true beginning of the Sixties. Together we went through our 20s during those 1960s and landed in our 50s in these 1990s.

But reading through these brief and lengthy, sunny, dull, amusing, painful mini-autobiographies of lives in progress, I am struck less by some unified class theory — The Tale of the Class of '63 — then by our stories. A word comes to mind that now seems out of place for the Harvard-Radcliffe of our youth: diversity.

There are among us — as predicted and carefully produced — a disproportionate number of doctors and lawyers and authors of far, far too many books. But we seem as different as the subjects of those books: a guide to the combat fleets of the world, a memoir of sexual abuse, an interpretation of Genesis. We include a Buddhist monk, a meteorologist who has flown into the eye of 225 hurricanes, one "unpublished thinker," a prison minister and prisoner. The prisoner reports that he won the inmates' chess tournament.

Many of us, especially the men, became as successful as the alumni association of the 1960s would have smugly predicted in their annual fund-raising projections. But others have felt the shifting ground of the '90s.

Among the graduates of this Ivy college are 52-year-olds who are "seeking new employment" and "looking for my next job." One writes of "experiences which have led to a new awareness of the fragility of so-called security. Perhaps it is a false god." Which is newer, an unemployed academic upper crust or the fact that they admit it to each other?

At midlife, I am not surprised to find these pages filled with stories of empty nests and aging parents. But we didn't do a core curriculum in family either. We seem to have equal numbers of first-time grandparents and first-time parents, or at least fathers. "After three years of progressively higher-tech reproductive technology," writes one father, "we finally got knocked up in a petri dish." We would have expected that in '63?

The most frequent word used by those who have lived through enormous change is now "still." "Still in there pitching," "Still trying to act locally while worrying globally," "I'm still doing business at the same old stand." A professor — we have more than our share of those too — writes that "My middle age has had a luxuriant stillness to it."

Although some of us report breezily about "new family, new spouse, new firm" and others tell of climbing Mt. Killimanjaro, I read into that "stillness" a greater fear of uprootedness than longing for adventure.

We have come — together — to an age when there are intimations of mortality and not just in the 27 obituaries at the back of this book. But we have arrived at this awareness through separate experience. Indeed the most riveting part of the continuing plot of 1963 is in the blows life has dealt, the hands of the deck.

We hear about a daughter who is "coping much better on Prozac," a son who is putting up a "gallant fight against cancer," another boy killed in a skiing accident, a girl who fell to her death from an apartment window. "My wife of nearly a quarter century," writes one among our mourners, "died of AIDS acquired from a blood transfusion." Thirty years of post-graduate adulthood — life — leaves few people untouched.

Compared to the Class of 1993, are we a rather similar bunch? Three-quarters male, nearly all white, we don't fit the current definitions of diversity that typify any campus conversation or admissions policy these days.

But in a country that talks increasingly about groups, about cultural differences, 30 years out we offer a much more vast portrait of diversity: uniqueness, individuality, autobiography.

What we have in common are lives as unique as their own pleasures and disasters.

A word comes to mind that now seems out of place for the Harvard Radcliffe of our youth: diversity.

Watergate and the 'Greek connection'

WASHINGTON — Twenty-one years after the infamous Watergate burglary poisoned the Nixon presidency, conspiracy theories are still evolving about the true motives behind the political scandal of the century.

This week's anniversary of the burglary gives us a chance to detail an intriguing theory about the mysterious motives of the break-in. The theory, known as the "Greek connection," was first reported by us a decade ago.

It revolves around the persecution of a distinguished Greek journalist named Elias Demetracopoulos, whose investigative reporting dogged the Nixon administration. A few weeks before the 1968 election, Demetracopoulos presented explosive evidence to the Democratic National Committee that had the potential to doom Nixon's candidacy.

In a meeting with then-DNC Chairman Lawrence O'Brien, Demetracopoulos alleged that the Greek KYP — a spy agency founded and partially funded by the American CIA — may have been secretly bankrolling the Nixon campaign. He was able to trace three cash payments of $549,000 from the Greek KYP to the Nixon campaign. In essence, the CIA was indirectly contributing to the Republican candidates.

The conduit for the illegal contributions was Thomas Pappas, a high-rolling Greek-American businessman, whose enterprises were alleged to be fronts for CIA operations in Greece. Pappas was a major fund-raiser and contributor to the 1968 campaign of Nixon and his running mate, Spiro T. Agnew, who became the highest-elected official of Greek-American background.

In 1971, Demetracopoulos laid out his evidence to a congressional subcommittee — resisting pressure from Nixon's longtime adviser, Murray Chotiner. The "Greek connection" was lent credence in 1976 when a former U.S. ambassador to Greece confirmed before Congress the funneling of money from the Greek junta to the Nixon campaign.

According to some theories, Nixon's curiosity about Demetracopoulos and the dirt he supplied Democrats in 1968 compelled Nixon to authorize the Watergate break-in four years later.

It sounds far-fetched, but strangely complements what G. Gordon Liddy — convicted for being one of the co-conspirators in the burglary of the DNC headquarters at the Watergate hotel — has long contended: that the break-in "was to find out what O'Brien had of a derogatory nature about us, not for us to get something on him or the Democrats." Another Nixon aide testified that the purpose of burglary was to "do photocopy work of documents."

The theory is explored in the only scholarly account of the scandal, "The Wars of Watergate: The Last Crisis of Richard Nixon," which was recently penned by Stanley I. Cutler, a Guggenheim Fellow and a professor at the University of Wisconsin. Cutler spent a decade researching and writing the book.

As Cutler points out: "Significantly, the 'Greek Connection' theory of Watergate caused the most anxiety for the longest period of time for the Nixon administration, and the agencies that served it. The FBI, the CIA, the State Department and the Department of Justice all maintained files containing allegedly hostile information on Demetracopoulos — information that each agency eventually acknowledged was wrong."

Conspiracy theories are still evolving about the true motives behind the political scandal of the century.

Hurricane aftermath addressed

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — County and city officials sit at their posts in the county's Agricultural Auditorium, listening to the grim news crackling in over the radios.

Hurricane Karen passed over Seminole County last night with sustained winds of 115 mph and gusts of 140 mph, wreaking havoc. Reports arrive of 30 people dead and hundreds of injuries, mostly in Sanford, Geneva, Chuluota and Oviedo. Most major roadways are blocked with debris and are flooded. Most utilities, power, telephones and water, are affected or completely disrupted. What are you going to do?

That is the question Seminole County leaders faced today in their annual disaster exercise. County and city officials will meet in a table-top simulation to prepare for the day when they must make real-life decisions in a similar situation.

All the death and destruction is fake. It is a paper simulation to test the resources and responses of local officials to prepare them for the eventuality of a real crisis. The storm scenario was crafted with help from the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables.

Unlike the past two years when the officials grappled with a make-believe storm as it approached and passed over the county, disaster-melster Ken Roberts said he wanted them to deal with the storm's aftermath. "We had primarily focused on preparedness, but we've never really dealt with the aftermath," said Roberts, coordinator for the county's Division of Emergency Management. "After (Hurricane) Hugo and Andrew, we felt we needed to practice our responses under those situations."

Ken Roberts, emergency management coordinator for Seminole County, Ron Rabun, county manager and Gary Kaiser, director of public safety, gathered to discuss county disaster relief.

Roberts said public safety and law enforcement officials will first work to respond to the 30 or so deaths left by the storm and transporting dozens of injured people to area hospitals when most roads are impassible. Food, water and shelter will be provided to the homeless. Public works officials will direct their crews to clear roads.

But Roberts said the role-players will then focus on their administrative response to the pretend catastrophe. Roberts said emergency ordinances may be needed to redirect disposal of debris to avoid overflowing the county dump. Appropriated tax money for road construction and other service improvements may have to be diverted to repairs, Roberts said.

"It's designed to be a learning experience for them," said Roberts. "We want to expose the participants into the things they will experience in a real-life situation."

the ordinance ready for the commission at the next meeting on June 28. "It will be up to them to decide if they want to go ahead and approve the emergency ordinance on second reading, or if they will accept this new ordinance in its place," he said.

The proposal scheduled to be discussed this past Monday night, had been made by DeWitt Excavating, Inc., owned by BGM Mining. The company asked to have property south of North Street and north of East 24th Street rezoned from BR-1 Single Family Residential, to PD, Planned Development for the purpose of establishing a borrow pit/mining operation.

The proposal was scheduled for discussion at the May 20 meeting of the Planning and Zoning Commission, but was tabled. The P&Z also heard from a large delegation of representatives from the Washington Oaks subdivision, who asked that the applicant address several issues such as depreciating property values, construction hours, traffic, fencing to protect children, and what would be done to the property when digging is completed.

When the subject of the moratorium was brought up for discussion during Monday afternoon's commission work session, Kenneth Wright, an attorney representing DeWitt Mining, said the company would request their application be tabled for an indefinite time period. The commission agreed, and did not vote on the request during the regular meeting.

The city was required to conduct a public hearing on the moratorium however, and several citizens of Washington Oaks again spoke in opposition to the borrow pit proposal.

James Davis lives on Drew

Avenue, which would abut the proposed pit. "I'm sure most people in my neighborhood approve of this delay," he told the commissioners, "but what we really would like is an ordinance that would not permit any borrow pits in the entire city."

"A hole they plan, the size of a football field, and deeper than several Shaquille O'Neills will ruin our entire neighborhood," Davis said. "They will damage the texture and character of our entire community," he added.

Davis said, "I would urge the city to enact a permanent ordinance against any borrow pits so these people won't come back in a couple of months again with another request. We are getting tired of coming up here to object every time they submit an application," he commented.

Janet Bell, also a Drew Avenue resident questioned if something couldn't be done by the city at the present time, to have some of the property at the proposed site cleaned up. "It's an unsightly mess, and mosquitoes are terrible," she explained.

Mayor Smith suggested something could probably be done in that situation and asked that it be turned over to the city staff and Code Enforcement for further investigation.

"The problem we have," said City Manager Bill Simmons, "is that constitutional law says we cannot prohibit allowing such uses on land such as this, unless we adopt a complete change to a portion of our Land Development Regulations." He added, "We'll just have to work on this on a case-by-case situation."

The enacting of the 60 day moratorium against accepting borrow pit applications, first reading, and the tabling of the DeWitt Excavating's request for the land rezoning, were each approved by a unanimous vote of the city commission.

Former Gov. Connally dead

HOUSTON — John Connally was a three-term governor, former Cabinet member and a business tycoon who made and lost a fortune. Tall, handsome and a war hero, he cast a long shadow.

But to a certain generation of Americans, he was always the man wounded in the gunfire that killed President Kennedy that fall day in 1963.

Connally died Tuesday of pulmonary fibrosis. He was 76. He and his close friend and political partner, the late President Lyndon B. Johnson, were dominant forces in Texas politics for decades until the early 1970s.

Above all else, friends say, the 6-foot-2 Connally was a Texan, from his silver mane down to the tip of his Western boots.

pack and he's been in jail for a long time. I guess he's out now. I've heard they were moving to Sanford. You definitely have your hands full with these two."

Both Hemmert and Detective Gordy Gibb of Altamonte Springs said neither the Sick Boys or the Longwood Lost Boys meets the classic definition of being a gang, that is, they don't commit crimes to benefit the group or its leaders. Instead, individuals who commit crimes such as burglaries and deal in drugs for themselves, say they are affiliated with the groups.

detectives said. "They are a loosely-knit group of kids that hang together and do stupid things," said Gibb.

Investigator Kent Showalter, of the Seminole County Sheriff's Gang Suppression Unit, said he doubted the two groups would have come together in a "rumble" or fight.

"I think it's a lot more talk than action," said Showalter. "They always say they're going to get into it, but I don't know of a situation where the two groups actually came together, for a confrontation."

blem to school officials. She said she tried to avoid the boys by walking away when they approached, according to police records.

Although the three teens were not in the same grade, they had at least one class together, according to Eriksson. Shortly after the charges were filed against the boys, Eriksson said two female teachers from the school wrote letters defending the youths stating they were the nicest boys and couldn't have committed the acts charged.

Dr. Hortense Evans, administrative assistant to Seminole County Schools Superintendent Paul Hagerty said this morning she was unaware of the Oviedo incident but said the school board Tuesday approved new guidelines dealing with sexual harassment.

"We are really trying to get the message out," Evans said, "that sexual harassment should not and will not be tolerated."

Staff training sessions on identifying and dealing with harassment are planned and information on the subject will be printed in the 1993-94 student handbooks, Evans said.

A nationwide survey conducted by the American Association for University Women Educational Foundation released this month stated 80 percent of girls and 75 percent of boys say they have been sexually harassed at school. A total of 16,300 students from eighth to eleventh grades took part in the survey.

If a student thinks he or she is being sexually harassed, Evans said, the incident should be reported to her office, as well as to the individual school authorities.

Evans said school principals will be requested to report harassment complaints to the district office as well.

"We have to do anything we can to get the word out to the students about sexual harassment," Evans said.

On Tuesday, Seminole County Juvenile Court Judge Leonard V. Wood entered a not guilty plea, on behalf of the 15-year old charged in the Oviedo High School incident. An attorney for the 16-year old entered a written not guilty plea.

The pair are scheduled to return to court in August for a scheduling conference when a trial date may be set.

"And the school district is the largest employer in Seminole County," board vice chairman Sandy Robinson noted.

Hagerty's monthly car allowance was also increased $100 to $550 per month.

At Hagerty's request, the contract cycle of three years in length with an annual review and annual extension will begin this year rather than in the fourth year of the contract.

"That will eliminate the person who for political reasons runs on the platform that he'll get the superintendent out because he'd have to buy out at least two years of the contract," board member Larry Strickler, who applauded the change, said.

Hagerty's contract has been extended through June 30, 1997.

Robinson added that she believed the contract and salary increases were in line with the district's cost containment practices and reiterated that Hagerty was well worth the money he was being paid.

"He's worth 10 times what we're paying him," she said.

Clinton says Europe may turn to his get-tough plan

By NANCY BENAG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Clinton says U.S. allies may have to bend to his get-tough strategy to end the war in Bosnia.

Clinton, at a news conference Tuesday, held out hope that America's European allies still could agree to his proposal to arm Bosnian Muslims and use air strikes against Bosnian Serbs to force a settlement in the former Yugoslavia. "I still think they may be compelled to do that or something very near like it if they want to get anything done over there," he said.

At the same time, the president pledged his support for the protection of U.N. peacekeeping troops in Bosnia, saying the United States "has made it clear we would take action" if peacekeepers were attacked there.

With 300 Americans headed for Macedonia as part of the U.N. effort to contain violence in the Balkans, Clinton insisted U.S. troops would not be unduly endangered.

"Obviously, we're going to protect our own soldiers," he said. "I believe that the Macedonian deployment carries minimal risk and carries maximum gain in terms of the statement that we don't intend to see this conflict widen."

He acknowledged, however, that "whenever we send people around the world, even if they're on peacekeeping missions, there is some risk to them."

Clinton also sounded a stern message against aggression in Somalia, where warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid came under U.N. attack after being blamed for ambushes that killed 23 Pakistanis serving with U.N. peacekeeping forces.

"We cannot have a situation where one of these warlords ... decides that he can go out and slaughter 20 peacekeepers," the president said.

Clinton sought at his news conference to portray his foreign and domestic policy efforts to date as evidence of "the most decisive presidency you've had in a long time on all the big issues that matter."

He said that on Bosnia, his policy had been frustrated by the refusal of European nations to accept his strategy.

"On Bosnia I made a decision," the president said. "The United Nations controls what happens in Bosnia. I cannot unilaterally lift the arms embargo. I didn't change my mind. Our allies decided that they weren't prepared to go that far at this time. They asked me to wait, and they said they would not support it."

On his economic package, Clinton insisted he has "a pretty good and decisive record" although the plan has undergone significant changes as it works its way across Capitol Hill.

Where are women over 35? Disabled? And minorities?

By DIANE DUSTON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — If TV provided one's only view of the United States, this country would appear to be mostly devoid of women over 35, disabled people and minorities.

It's not even close to reality, two actors' unions said Tuesday as they released a 10-year study of broadcast and cable television programming.

The problem has existed so long it can legitimately be seen as a civil rights issue, said University of Pennsylvania television expert George Gerbner, who conducted the study for the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists and the Screen Actors Guild.

Not only is a whole range of non-white, not young, non-male acting talent being discriminated against, but children are being fed a radically inaccurate picture of society through the tube, he said.

Most of the stories that modern children hear about people, life and values are from television on shows pushed by the manufacturers of products, rather than from parents, schools, churches or those in the community in which they live, he said.

Two-thirds of the roles on TV are male, an imbalance that was the same in the 1991-92 season as in 1982-83, Gerbner said.

While the age range of men is greater, women's roles tend to be concentrated in the younger age groups, he said.

"I was an actress who had a good career," said Kathryn Swink. "Then I turned 35."

She and many of her contemporaries are not finding television roles because "we are not babes and we are not grandmothers."

But the grandmothers don't have it so easy either, according to actress Geena Goodwin. "The only time they find us interesting is if you've lost all your marbles someplace," she said of TV scriptwriters.

The two unions gather for a four-day conference this week in Washington and are meeting with other organizations representing women and minorities to pressure the entertainment industry to change.

"It is an uphill battle," said actors guild president Barry Gordon. "There is going to have to be some education of consumers."

"We are working with their women's committee," said Katherine Spillar, national coordinator for the Feminist Majority,

In Maryland, it's either shots for kids or lose $25 in welfare money

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

CHESTERTOWN, Md. — It's never been easy for some of Dr. John Morgan's patients to get into town from their trailers and tin and tar paper shacks in this rural country nestled between the banks of the Chester River and the Chesapeake Bay.

But now they're hustling in to see Kent County's only pediatrician, some for the first time in years. If they don't show up for the appointment, the state will chop $25 from their monthly welfare checks for every preschool child not up to date on shots and checkups.

Children's advocates say Maryland's experiment with welfare reform is punitive and unfair to families with an average monthly income of just $359.

But Maryland officials believe they've begun to change the priorities of mothers who put their children's health at risk by falling behind on checkups and immunizations.

In the first six months of the program, health providers have found children with elevated levels of lead in their blood, a boy about to go blind and a youngster on the brink of a diabetic coma, said Carolyn W. Colvin, Maryland's secretary of human resources.

Some members of Congress also are eyeing Maryland's approach to preventive health care as President Clinton's $2.1 billion immunization proposal moves through the Senate.

The legislation seeks to boost immunization rates of children under 2, now estimated at 37 percent to 86 percent, by providing free vaccines to uninsured families and those on Medicaid.

But some Republicans believe the solution is also in motivating parents.

Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., wants to let other states copy Maryland's Primary Prevention Initiative without having to get permission first from the Department of Health and Human Services, which runs Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

HHS Secretary Donna Shalala said she is "willing to listen to any proposals that sound reasonable, that don't withhold food from the mouths of children."

Maryland won approval for its five-year experiment from Shalala's predecessor, Republican Louis Sullivan, last summer.

Under the program, children must attend school at least 80 percent of the time and get their immunizations and a certain number of checkups: two a year for infants up to 18 months old and one a year for children to age 6.

The stick: a $25 sanction, which families can avoid if they show good cause or receive counseling. The carrot: $20 a year for any school-age child and adult who gets an annual checkup, and $14 a month for pregnant women who get prenatal care.

State officials say 90 percent of the 75,000 families in the program are in compliance. Most of those sanctioned have lost benefits for a month or two, but about 3 percent have been out of compliance longer.

A family sanctioned for three months will get a call from a social services worker, who will ask to visit the home and help resolve the situation and any other problems.

The Children's Defense Fund, on whose board Shalala served for a dozen years, believes many Maryland families have been injured by the reductions in their AFDC check.

National archives exhibit celebrates democracy's feisty Athenian origins

By NITA LELYVELD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — If you lived in Athens in 490 B.C., it really didn't pay to be unpopular. A majority of your fellow citizens had the right to banish you from town for 10 years simply by inscribing your name on terra cotta ballots.

Ostracism by majority vote is one element of the world's first democracy that didn't make it into later copies. But other aspects of the Athenian legacy can still be seen in America in everything from jury trials to a bicameral legislature.

Now the National Archives is hosting an exhibition of artifacts to mark the birth of democracy in Athens 2,500 years ago. It's on display — fittingly enough — in view of the vault that holds the Declaration of Independence, the Bill of Rights and the Constitution.

The exhibit, which opened Tuesday, was organized by the archives, the Greek government and the American School of Classical Studies at Athens, which conducts archaeological digs.

Most of the items were excavated from the ancient Athenian agora — or marketplace — where the government buildings were located.

They include a selection of the terra cotta ballots — called ostraka — and dining crockery from the Tholos, a building that housed the executive committee that presided over the legislature.

Demokratia, or power of the people, came to the city-state of Athens in 508 B.C. when the populace rebelled against the ruling aristocratic families and the occupying Spartan army.

A popular ruler, Kleisthenes, broke up the old power bases by dividing all Athenians into tribes — each of which included people from all over Attica, the state surrounding Athens.

He set up a legislature that included the ekklesia, or assembly, where all citizens could come; and the boule, or senate, made up of 50 representatives from each of the tribes.

Athenian democracy often was crowded and rowdy. Thousands attended assembly meetings, and at least 200 jurors served on each jury. Socrates was condemned to death in 399 B.C. by a jury of 500.

But the system had strict limits too. On display is a reconstructed ancient water clock — called a klepsidra — used to keep arguments in court down to about six minutes. Water would flow out of a hole in one vessel and into another vessel below. Time was up when the last trickle had stopped.

"The really good speakers watched the flow carefully, and when they saw it get down to a trickle they neatly wrapped up their remarks," said Diana Buitron-Oliver, the curator of the exhibit.

Water clocks weren't used at the assembly, which was regularly attended by at least 6,000 citizens. And anyone who showed up had the right to stand up and give a speech. But there were limits there too. If the speakers got boring, they were sure to be shouted down by the crowd.

MIAMI — The Robbie family says it wants to sell most of the Miami Dolphins — keeping 20 percent — and half of Joe Robbie Stadium to two Palm Beach investors to pay off nearly $50 million in estate taxes.

The family said Tuesday it is working on a deal with real estate mogul Bruce Froy and millionaire investor Nelson Peltz for a reported $140 million and $157 million. But the family still wants a hand in managing the team.

"The transactions contemplated will ensure that the Dolphins will continue to play at Joe Robbie Stadium under an ownership and management structure that will maintain the Dolphins' status as one of the NFL's flagship franchises," the Robbies said in a statement.

ATLANTA — A man suing Atlanta Braves outfielder Ron Gant for allegedly breaking his ankle during a bar fight is the son of Florida U.S. Sen. Connie Mack, the senator's aide said.

"This is between the senator's son and Ron Gant," Mark Mills, spokesman for Mack, R-Cape Coral, said Tuesday. "It will be settled in court. Other than that, we have no comment."

Connie Mack IV, who is in his 20s and lives in Las Vegas, filed a lawsuit last week in Cobb County State Court, seeking unspecified damages. Mack claimed his ankle was broken in an altercation in a restaurant Feb. 4, 1992. Gant denied the charge.

Orphans, Gager pad advantage

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — For all intents and purposes, the Sanford Recreation Tuesday Men's Slowpitch Softball League at Pinchurst Park has turned into two leagues.

After Tuesday night's round of games, the Orphans and Gager Pest Control remain the only teams in the league with winning records while Mobil Tech, the Mobilite Corporation, Signature Homes, and Orkin are all operating in the deficit.

Last night, Gager Pest Control ripped the Mobilite Corporation 17-2 and the Orphans blanked Orkin 15-0 before Mobil Tech outlasted Signature Homes 12-10.

The Orphans (7-0) maintain their one-game lead over Gager Pest Control (6-1). They're trailed by Mobil Tech (3-4), Mobilite Corp. and Signature Homes (both 2-5), and Orkin (1-6).

Next week, Mobil Tech challenges the Orphans at 6:30 p.m., Mobilite Corp. and Signature Homes tangle at 7:30 p.m., and Orkin goes up against Gager Pest Control in the 8:30 p.m. game.

In Tuesday's first game, Gager Pest Control scored three runs in the top of the first inning and slowly worked its way up to a 15-run rout of Mobilite Corp., scoring at least three runs in five of the seven innings.

Mark Bolton paced Gager Pest Control's 21-hit attack with a double, two singles, two runs scored, and two RBI. Rich Heminger contributed three singles, one run, and two RBI. Phillip Sutherland also hit three singles and scored a run. Scott Wade tripled, singled, scored three runs, and drove in another.

Scott Williams chipped in with two singles, three runs, and an RBI. Stan Inmitch had two singles, two runs, and three RBI. Wayne Gager added two singles, two runs, and two RBI. Donnie McCoy had two singles, a run, and an RBI. Todd Morgan singled, scored twice, and had an RBI. Frank Turner had a single and an RBI.

Tony Sarna hit two singles for the Mobilite Corp. Mark Smith drove in both runs with a single. Angel Figueroa and Chris Walton each singled and scored a run. Chris Brooks and Keswick Lashley each hit a single.

Leading 2-0 through three innings, the Orphans struck for five runs in the top of the fourth inning, then burned Orkin with an eight-run avalanche in the 10th inning, ending

Unbeaten Hopkins maintains lead

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Hopkins Meat Packing continued to show its heels to the rest of the field with an easy victory, but Meyer's Tree Service and Papa Joe's are doing their best to hang on in the Sanford Recreation Department Women's Spring Slowpitch Softball League at the Ft. Mellon Park Softball Field Tuesday night.

Hopkins was outstanding on both offense and defense, collecting 21 hits while holding Suzanne's Oyster Reef to only three hits in winning its seventh game without a defeat, 20-1.

Papa Joe's (5-2) also had an easy time of it, using a pair of five-run innings to shutout Vicky's Permit Service 12-0.

Mice, Toucan Willie's drop openers

WINTER PARK — Nine wasn't the lucky number for Mickey Norton's Oviedo-based adult softball teams Tuesday night at Central Winds Park.

Paddy McGee's Mice, the Norton-managed women's team, suffered a 9-6 setback at the hands of the Missits in the Winter Park Recreation Women's Summer League while Toucan Willie's, the men's team managed by Norton, dropped a 9-5 decision to Certified Slings in Men's Class C League action.

Hendy Greene and Denise Levinson each had two singles and two RBI for the Mice. Cathy Tolletson added two singles and an RBI. Connie Thomas contributed a single, two RBI, and a run scored.

Theresa Wallburger singled and scored two runs. April Stoner singled and scored a run. Brenda David hit a single. Lori Lingo scored a run.

For Toucan Willie's, Bob Neufeld had two singles and an RBI while Eddie Norton collected two singles, a run, and an RBI. Chuck La Peters singled and scored two runs. Kenny Tuttle and Billy Stripp each singled and scored a run.

Next Tuesday at Central Winds, the Mice are to play Lewis Drywall while Toucan Willie's will play City Nights Valley. Both games are set to start at 8:30 p.m.

Walker's infield single points Marlins toward win

From Staff Reports

WINTER PARK — It's not how hard a ball is hit, but where it's hit that determines its relative effectiveness.

For example, a ball hit by Chris Walker of the Oviedo Marlins never left the infield but it still produced a run that broke a 3-3 tie and sent the Marlins on their way to an 8-3 win over host Winter Park in a National Amateur Baseball Federation game.

The winning rally started when Tim Slavik led off the fourth inning with a double. Mike Rugenius then beat out a bunt single to move Slavik to third. After Rugenius stole second, Todd Bellhorn was walked intentionally to load the bases and set up a force play.

Walker rounded the strategy with his RBI infield single that scored Slavik and left the bases loaded. Adam Coleman followed with a double off the right field fence to score Rugenius and Bellhorn, but Walker was thrown out at the plate trying to score.

The Marlins, Oviedo High School's summer league team, added two runs in the seventh.

Scott Haggie (2-1) was the winning pitcher for the Marlins, allowing three runs (all earned) on six hits through four innings, striking out three without walking a batter.

Brian Hendricks came on in the fifth and worked two innings, allowing two hits and striking out one. Jason Fore pitched the seventh inning and gave up two hits.

Coleman led the 12-hit Marlins attack with a double, two singles, and three RBI. Slavik doubled, singled, and scored two runs while Rugenius finished with a pair of singles and a run scored. Walker and Mark Metcalf each had a single and an RBI. Haggie hit a double. Ted Brown and Mike Hynes each singled.

Now 8-2, the Marlins will host the Lake Mary Mudcats in a doubleheader this evening scheduled to start at 5:30 p.m.

Simple strategy yields Modified feature win for Anderson

By PAUL MARSELLA
Special to the Herald

NEW SMYRNA BEACH — Modified driver Jeff Anderson's strategy was simple last Saturday night, June 12, at New Smyrna Speedway: drive hard through traffic, get to the front, and save the car in case he had to make a run in the final laps.

The plan worked as Anderson held off hard-charging Danny Keinitz to take top honors in the feature event.

"We had a good field of cars tonight and they all ran pretty well," said Anderson, 35, a former drag strip and motorcycle racer. "Hellyer Racing of New Smyrna set up our car this week and I think that gave us a good advantage."

"I knew I had to drive hard at the beginning to get to the front. Once in the lead, I backed off a little bit so I could save the car. The last five laps, I really had to push the car because several drivers broke from traffic and started to close on me."

With five laps to go, Keinitz of New Smyrna Beach closed to within three car lengths of Anderson. But despite the repeated challenges, Editor's note: Saturday's results from Volusia County Speedway will appear in Thursday's Sanford Herald.

Anderson maintained his advantage to score his third FASCAR win of the season.

"I was hoping for a caution," said Keinitz, who drives the John D. Rue-sponsored Chevelli. "We were closing the distance when we ran out of laps. A caution would have bunched the field and I could have got a real good jump on him."

Keinitz, who sat in for car owner Bob Rainey four weeks ago, has one victory, a second, third, fourth, and fifth place finishes to his credit.

"I drove that car for several years," said Rainey. "The smartest thing I did was to put Danny (Keinitz) in the car. I guess I'll just be a car owner for now and let him do all of the racing."

Dave Savicki, Irv Sutphin, and Marc Kinley rounded out the top five.

Wayne Anderson, fresh off a victory the previous night at Orlando Speedworld, dominated Late Model action to pick up his eighth checkered flag of the season. Starting the race from the fourth position, Anderson grabbed the lead before the end of the first lap and went on to lead every circuit.

James Powell was second with Joe Middleton, Duke Southard, and Glen Hume in tow.

John Palmer bested a 15-car Go-Kart field to score his first ever feature win at the New Smyrna speedplant. Palmer, a seven-time Florida State Champion and two-time national champ, crossed the stripe two car lengths ahead of James Crawford.

"This track is a good change for us as we usually run two-mile tracks and road courses," said Palmer, 28, a resident of Orange City. "For a half-mile track, it's pretty fast. At Daytona International Speedway, we hit a little over 100 mph on the straightaway. Tonight, we were clocking about 83 mph on the front and back stretch."

Chasing Palmer and Crawford to victory lane were Rod Pruitt, Jeff Hall, and Steve Mullen.

Jacob Warren went flag to flag in Limited Late Model action, picking up his 13th win of the season.

On the first lap, pole sitter Charley Disney crashed violently into the outer retaining wall in turn three.

"I don't know for sure what happened," said Disney. "I think the throttle stuck. I was headed for the wall wide open and knew I was going to hit hard and there wasn't anything I could do about it. I'm not hurting now, but I'll be sore come tomorrow."

The finishing order behind Warren was Claude Collignon, Joe Strehle, Michael Williams, and Disney.

Conrad Grenier also led every circuit to win the Mini-Stock main. Bobby Sears, Ted Vulpius, Gary Kehm, and J.D. Duncan followed Grenier to the checkers.

Tony Newsome outduelled Tommy Johnson, Dale Howard, Art Chapman, and David LeBeau as he scored his second sportsman win of the season.

Wally Semrow was the winner of the Bomber special race with Bob Richardson, Mike Trocki, Billy Bellflower, and Robert Douglas rounding out the top five.

Lee Wagner was the winner of the Run-About race while Tim Cordell came out on top in the Spring Crunch Demo-Derby.

Robinson dodges wrecks on way to Sportsman victory

By PAUL MARSELLA
Special to the Herald

ORLANDO — Titusville driver Jim Robinson avoided several race mishaps as he cruised to victory in the Sportsman feature event Friday night, June 11, at Orlando Speedworld.

Robinson, a Cocoa High School teacher who now has three feature wins for the season, took the lead on lap four and, by the halfway sign, had a half a track advantage over the rest of the field.

A caution flag with five laps to go bunched the field for a restart. At the drop of the new green flag, Robinson regained his lead and charged to victory lane, crossing the stripe three car lengths ahead of Barbara Pierce.

Trailing the lead duo to victory lane were Billy Gerdy, Rick Johns, and Scott Wood.

"The car was flawless tonight, thanks to my co-owner and engine man, Roger Cady," said Robinson, 45, who has been racing for six years. "We have a real good team. Roger does the motor work and I do the chassis and fabrication."

"Lady Luck was on our side tonight. All of the accidents were behind me. For a change, I can go home without a scratch."

A year ago this month, Robinson's car was totally destroyed in a multi-car collision at the Orlando speedplant. Since then, it's been a weekly ritual of fender banging and paint scraping.

Pierce was not as enthusiastic about her ride.

"The car was just awful," said Pierce, a three-time FASCAR (Florida Association of Stock Car Automobile Racing) champion. "It ran hot and mised all night. The only good thing about the car was the handling. I found its way around the track with no trouble."

"Tonight was a survival of the fittest. I'm glad we missed the wrecks."

Current FASCAR sportsman points leader Bill Loomis was eliminated from competition in a first lap wall cruncher. With five laps to go, Johns and Jeff Moyer tangled in turn one. While Moyer went behind the all, Johns was able to continue the race.

Wildwood's Wayne Anderson outduelled Jim Crowe, with six laps to the checkers, to take top honors in the Late Model feature event.

"I got involved in a couple of spins and had to restart on the tail end of the field," said Anderson after picking up his ninth win of the season. "Traffic was bunched up tonight and I didn't think I was going to have enough time to run down Jim (Crowe), who had a good lead on the field."

"But I picked my way through the pack and, close to the end of the race, I got around him."

Dave McCabe, Ricky Wood, and Marc Kinley rounded out the top five.

Jon Compagnone Jr. used all the grooves on the race track and parts of the infield to take the checkers in the Modified main event. Trailing Compagnone to the stripe were Bruce Thompson, Bentley Mead, Kenny Heckle, and Kelly Jarrett.

Jacob Warren, who led every circuit, took the checkers less than a car length ahead of Michael Williams in the Limited Late Model main event.

Following a first-lap incident that eliminated Mike Todd from competition, Warren and Williams brought the crowd to its feet with their five laps of bumper-to-bumper and wheel-to-wheel racing.

Taking the checkers behind Warren and Williams were Jimbo Bjorkland, Gary Schlichter, and Claude Collignon.

Bobby Sears bested J.D. Duncan, Gene Merritts, Gene Van Alatine, and Richard Newton in the Mini-Stock division.

In the Bomber main event, Wally Semrow grabbed the checkers ahead of Mike Hughes, Johnny Mitchell, Greg Noc, and Don Lake.

Donald Blake won the Run-About feature event. Chasing him to victory lane were, in order of finish, Paul Hudson, Kevin Lawrence, Lee Deese, and Jeff Anderson.

Joe White claimed the top spot in the Mini-Bomber main, beating Robert Freund, Gary Tyler, Chris Harden, and Bill Lucas.

Earnhardt extends NASCAR points lead

Associated Press

DAYTONA BEACH — Dale Earnhardt took advantage of Rusty Wallace's mechanical problems to extend his lead in the chase for the $1.5 million NASCAR Winston Cup stock car racing championship.

Earnhardt finished 11th in Sunday's Champion Spark Plug 500 race at Long Pond, Pa., but finished well ahead of then second-place contender Wallace. But Wallace's engine failure relegated him to a 39th-place finish, dropping him from to the fifth spot.

"It wasn't a great race for us, but we did gain some points on everybody, and that's what we're looking to do," said Earnhardt, who chased eventual race winner Kyle Petty most of Sunday.

"I hate Rusty had bad luck like that. But I hate it for him; I'm kind of happy about it for us," Earnhardt said Monday.

Davey Allison moved into second in the standings, but trails Earnhardt by 225 points, 2,031-1,806. Earnhardt would maintain his lead with that kind of margin, even if he finished last in the next race.

Daytona 500 winner Dale Jarrett is third with 1,784 points, while Petty moved into fourth with Sunday's win, with 1,750. Wallace fell to fifth with 1,733.

Rounding out the top 10 were Morgan Shepherd, 1,718; Ken Schrader, 1,692; Geoff Bodine, 1,678; Jimmy Spencer, 1,637; and rookie points leader Jeff Gordon, with 1,570.

Earnhardt, who will surpass $1 million in winnings for the season in his next race, leads the circuit in money-winnings with $987,990.

The NASCAR Winston Cup circuit next heads to the two-mile Michigan International Speedway in Brooklyn, Mich., for Sunday's Miller Genuine Draft 400. Pole qualifying is scheduled for Friday.

Cook of the Week

Meal preparation for family of 7 can get 'pretty hectic'

By RENÉE KEITH
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — It's a family affair when it comes to cooking at the home of Cook of the Week Rosalyn "Ros" Johnson. Ros and her husband, Jerry, share their home with their daughter, Cindy, and her husband, Jamie Evans, along with their three children. Ros said, "I really love having them here." "We have more than enough room and I have my beautiful grandchildren right here for me to watch them grow and just be a part of their everyday life."

Ros and Cindy share in all of the household responsibilities, however, meal preparation always takes top priority. With seven people to feed and different schedules to consider, it can become pretty hectic at times. So, meals are prepared with that very thought in mind.

Ros and Jerry have been married for 27 years. They have two daughters, Cindy and Tammy, and they also have five grandchildren. Jerry was born in Georgia, moving to Florida when he was 16 years old. He has been employed with Sanford Electric for 15 years where he holds the position of president.

Ros has lived all her life in Florida and is currently employed with the new Target in Lake Mary. With 144 positions available there were over 1,200 people who applied. "I feel so proud that I had that certain something that they look for in an employee. I mean to be picked out of 1,200 applicants, that really means a lot to me," said Ros.

In the Johnson household, there are several different interests and hobbies. Ros loves playing bingo and is a volunteer bingo caller a few nights a week for Sanford Bingo. Cindy keeps herself busy with the three children. Now that there is year-round school, there is always a project or a school activity that requires Cindy's help. Ros and Jamie love to hunt. Deer hunting in Florida, deer hunting in Georgia, and fishing anywhere they can, keeps these two men very happy.

Ros has no complaints when Jerry goes on one of his hunting trips. In fact, as Ros lovingly said, "Hallelujah." She knows that the guys love to hunt and it gives her that little break for a few days.

Shepherd's Pie is a recipe that normally calls for hamburger, however, Ros commented, "I've even made this with venison when Jerry comes back with some deer meat." "Believe me, it tastes wonderful."

Jerry and Jamie love Cindy's creation of Sweet Potato Casserole. "In fact, I've never had anyone say that they didn't really love this casserole," Cindy commented.

Pretzel Jello Mold is a longtime family recipe. Both Ros and Cindy agree, this recipe is very easy to make. It has that certain yet different appeal and its taste is absolutely out of this world.

Try creative eggplant recipes

As I see the eggplants in my garden producing a bumper crop I need to find some creative ways to use this beautiful vegetable. Some of these recipes I have used several times before and one like this recipe for soup I have not tried as yet. This recipe is adapted from a recipe by Paul Prudhomme, the New Orleans chef. It "reads" well so I'll try it. (I'm sure you've done that with many recipes.)

CREAM OF EGGPLANT SOUP

- 1/2 cup butter
- 1 large eggplant, peeled and finely chopped
- 1 large onion, finely chopped
- 4 large ribs celery, finely chopped
- 1 large potato, finely chopped
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1/2 tsp. thyme
- 1/2 tsp. basil
- 1 1/2 tsp. curry powder
- 1 quart chicken stock
- 2 cups cream

In 4-quart casserole, combine butter, eggplant, onion, celery and potatoes. Microwave, uncovered on 100 percent power 8-10 minutes, stirring once or twice. Stir in seasonings. Continue to microwave an additional 10 minutes, stirring once or twice. Vegetables should be very soft with no visible moisture in casserole. Stir in chicken stock. Microwave on 100 percent power 10 minutes or until mixture begins to thicken, stirring once. Puree in several batches in food processor. Stir in cream. Return to microwave. Microwave 4-6 minutes on 70 percent power or until heated thoroughly.

Eggplant makes my favorite meatless meal. Try one of these recipes, one is Italian, the other Lebanese.

EGGPLANT PARMIGIANA

- 3 medium eggplants
- 2 Tbsp. olive oil
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 1 Tbsp. flour
- 1 28-oz. can Italian tomatoes (crushed with puree added)

MICROWAVE MAGIC

MIDGE MYCOFF

- 1 tsp. salt
- 2 tsp. sugar
- 1 tsp. basil
- 1 12 oz. package Mozzarella cheese, sliced
- 1/2 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese

Beauty queen is tall and tan and young and lovely — and male

By The Associated Press

TWEED HEADS, Australia — Tall and tan and young and lovely, the winner of the 1993 Winterson Quest beauty contest is no lady. And unlike the Antonio Carlos Jobim song, he's not from Ipamea either.

Damian Taylor, a 24-year-old hotel doorman and part-time lifeguard, defeated seven women in a beauty contest Tuesday that he initially entered as a joke at this beach resort 60 miles south of Brisbane.

Holding back tears to accept the winner's sash and a bouquet of flowers, Taylor said he now plans to enter the national Miss Australia pageant — which has been exclusively female for 58 years.

"Who knows how far I can go?" said the six-foot-tall Taylor, whose win brought thunderous applause and wolf whistles from the audience.

"I think it is fair. I believe in change." Taylor, who advocates sexual equality, raised $7,000 for charity to take part — the most of any entrant.

In Australia, many beauty pageants mandate that participants raise money for worthy causes.

Organizers said a panel of judges, consisting of business people and tourism operators, also considered the entrants' deportment, personality and knowledge.

Contest director Barry McNamara said Taylor's unprecedented entry forced the pageant's name to change from the traditional "Miss Winterson" to the genderless "Winterson Quest."

"These are times of equal opportunity," explained another official, David Fox.

Some female competitors were disappointed that a man had overhauled them.

"We (were) left in the dark," said entrant Madine Roas, 22.

Others were happy with the result.

"He had a lot of guts entering something like this. We just treated him like one of the girls," said Janette Leonard, 18.

Unlike many beauty contests this one did not include a swimsuit parade. But Taylor, who wore a tuxedo for Tuesday's event, said he's ready to wear his swim shorts anytime.

Boy protests 'Jurassic Park' merchandise

By PAM SCHMID Associated Press Writer

MINNEAPOLIS — Alex Boyd wants to know why he should spend his allowance on Jurassic Park action figures — not to mention the gummy dinosaurs, pencil packs and pillow cases — if he can't see the movie.

The six-year-old plans to pose the question to the film's director, Steven Spielberg.

"He said he felt like he was being teased with all the merchandise," said Alex's mother, Julie Boyd, who has deemed the blockbuster dinosaur movie — rated PG-13 — too scary for her son in see.

"Jurassic Park," based on Michael Crichton's novel, is set in a theme park inhabited by dinosaurs recreated through scientific wizardry. Eventually, the animals rampage, eating each other and a few park visitors.

Despite its cautionary rating, the film has been marketed for families. A crowd of specially invited youngsters attended its opening in Washington last week, which was also a benefit for the Children's Defense Fund and the Children's Action Network.

Also, youngsters are the target of much of the related merchandise, including toy weapons, plastic lunch kits, bubble bath, jawbreakers, sleeping bags, coin purses, temporary tattoos and walkie-talkies.

Alex had looked forward to seeing the movie. When it came out, though, "I looked at the paper and it said it was rated PG-13. I was bummed out about that," he said Tuesday.

The Rosemont kindergarten is trying to get friends to boycott the film-related products. Some agreed with him, but others thought he was "from a different planet," according to his mother.

Still, Alex is planning to write to Spielberg, the movie's director, to tell him it's not fair to aim a $65 million merchandising campaign at kids too young to see the movie.

"I'm going to tell him. It's too late now, but never make this mistake again," Alex said.

Executives from Universal Pictures' parent, MCA Inc., did not immediately return a phone call seeking comment.

The boycott puts Alex's father, Tom Boyd, in a sticky situation. Boyd is a studio musician and played the oboe on the "Jurassic Park" soundtrack. Nevertheless, he said, he's proud of the stand his son is taking.

"How can I allow my child to say no to something he believes in?" he said. "I couldn't force my son to keep his mouth shut."

Alex believes his letter will draw a response. So does his dad.

"I predict this won't end until he literally gets a call from Steven Spielberg," Boyd said, sighing.

Consult cardiologist about ischemia

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been told I have a silent myocardial ischemic condition. What is the meaning of this and what medication is needed for control?

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my new Health Report "Heart Disease." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10183. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR READER: For unknown reasons, some people have painless heart attacks or show (on the cardiogram) evidence that the heart muscle is deprived of oxygen (ischemia) without having pain.

As you know, these serious conditions are usually accompanied by chest pain or discomfort. As in other situations, pain is Nature's way of informing us that something's not right. Therefore, you're at a disadvantage because, without the pain warning, you have no way of knowing when your heart is ischemic.

The customary treatment for this affliction is the same as that for heart pain: beta-blockers or calcium channel blockers (to reduce the oxygen demands of the heart), nitroglycerine (to improve coronary circulation), and aspirin (to prevent clots from forming in the coronary arteries). Your doctor can decide on appropriate dosages by monitoring your progress with cardiograms or stress tests.

Given the situation you describe, some authorities would recommend a coronary angiogram, a type of X-ray test designed to diagnose the location and extent of blockages within your coronary arteries. If the blockages are circumscribed, they might be broken open with a balloon device (angioplasty). If they are diffuse and extensive, you won't be a candidate for the balloon treatment; some other therapy, such as bypass surgery, would be needed.

In my opinion, you need a consultation with a cardiologist because if the ischemia remains untreated, you are at risk of having a heart attack.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

After the dummy comes down, you plan your campaign. Sometimes you will devise a complete itinerary. But there will be other deals on which you must take things trick by trick, seeing how the play develops and the opposing cards lie.

This latter scheme was true on today's deal. It occurred during the final of the 1971 World Team Championship, in which the United States defeated France.

South felt confident when he saw the dummy. But, as you can see, the cards lay badly. After winning trick one with the spade king, you finesse the heart jack. East wins with the queen and, let's say, returns a spade. (If he returns his diamond, you must win, cross to dummy's spade ace and take the club finesse.) You win in the dummy and take the club finesse. However, it loses and West tries to cash a spade trick. You ruff and carefully cash the club ace before leading the heart 10. You plan to take a second finesse (the best play in the suit), but West's discard puts paid to the idea.

Now you seem destined to lose four tricks: two hearts, one diamond and one club. But there is one faint chance remaining. Win with dummy's heart ace, cash the club jack, discarding a diamond, play off the A-K of diamonds and exit with a trump.

If East started with at most two diamonds, he must concede a ruff-and-discard, on which your diamond loser disappears.

Both declarers in the world championship went down in four hearts. If you would have made it, perhaps our international team needs you.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
June 17, 1993

Prudent management of your resources will be required in the year ahead. You'll have better earning potential than you previously had, but you may also be a bit more extravagant than usual.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Until the funds are safely in your bank account, don't consider it a full accomplishment. Something on which you're counting might be unexpectedly withdrawn. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you to understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It's best not to ignore your better judgment today and go along with an individual who has always been dependable or misinformed. Think for yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Irresponsible work habits might catch up with you today. The closet in which you've been stuffing those unfinished projects may finally give way.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today you might have to explain your way out of a complicated situation if you get involved with the wrong associates. Be discriminating.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be sure your objectives are clearly defined today. If not, you might get off on a bad start and later not be able to correct your course.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Today if you get involved in a critical endeavor with others, don't be afraid to ask questions about things you don't understand. Keep your ego out of the picture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This might not be one of your better days for being either a buyer or a seller. In each instance, you might impulsively do something wrong.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be very careful as to whom you go for advice today. Someone might give you some way out suggestions, which you could compound into something even more foolish.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If your methods and routines are too firmly structured today, they could inhibit rather than enhance your efforts, because you won't be prepared to deal with the unexpected.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A misunderstanding with a close friend might erupt today. If you don't take time to hear what he/she is trying to tell you, it might jeopardize your relationship.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Listeners might not be very receptive to your ideas today. They may either feel you're forcing your views on them or they could think you're a little kooky.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may be harboring some misconceptions regarding something you were recently taught. Before you pass onto others what you think you know, have your information verified.
