Electric chair stays, judge rules in Orlando

Florida's electric chair was given a stay of execution on Monday. Circuit Court Judge Clarence Johnson rejected claims that the chair should be abolished after the bloody July 8 execution of Allen Lee "Tiny" Davis.

Johnson said, "Davis did not suffer any conscious pain while being electrocuted. Rather, he suffered instantaneous and painless death once the current was applied to him."

The Florida Supreme Court, which asked Johnson to conduct a four-day hearing in Orlando, will review the ruling later this month.

Unless justice intervenes, Thomas Provenzano will die in the chair on Sept. 14 for killing a bailiff during a 1984 shooting spree at the Orange County Courthouse.

Johnson did recommend the state get a better chin strap for those who will be sitting in the chair.

Armed robbery at Cracker Barrel

Investigators are looking for two armed suspects who stole a large amount of cash Saturday from the Cracker Barrel restaurant at 200 Hickman Drive in Sanford.

Two unidentified black males, wearing ski masks, gloves, and dark clothing, forced their way into the restaurant at 1:30 a.m. as a manager was letting an employee out of the front door. The restaurant was closed at the time.

Employees were placed in a back room while the suspects stole an undetermined, large amount of cash from a safe. One suspect was carrying a semi-automatic handgun, and the other was wielding a revolver, according to the Seminole County Sheriff's Office.

A surveillance video tape of the incident is not available to help investigators identify the suspects. The robbery took only minutes, and the suspects could not be found in an area search conducted by investigators shortly after the robbery.

Storms sweep through Sanford

By Bill Kerns
Staff Writer

SANFORD — Businesses along Sanford's Marina are recovering from Monday's severe winds that also damaged the roof and blew out windows at Sanford's City Hall.

The Marina Hotel, several boats, and an office building along Lake Monroe suffered damage in the late afternoon thunderstorm. Seminole County Fire Chief Terry Schenk said that another storm — possible more severe — could affect a wider section of Central Florida today. He said county emergency crews answered three calls on Monday in the Sanford area. Two were treated by county medics when their car windows were blown out.

"The winds reached 58 miles an hour," Schenk said. "There were reports, too, of 3/4-inch hail stones."

Guests in one wing of the The Marina Hotel had to be relocated as 22 to 24 windows in the hotel were blown out.

Eight cars in the parking lot also had their windows blown out. See Storms, Page 5A

Our flag was still there ... but barely. The U.S. Flag outside the Seminole County Courthouse was badly battered in Monday's storm.

A storm cell that ripped through Sanford Monday afternoon left trees uprooted and roots damaged. Here a palm tree in front of Sanford City Hall was blown over, blocking traffic at the intersection of Hood Avenue and Seminole Boulevard. For more storm pictures, see Page 5A.

Longwood ordinances draw fire from public

By Joe DeSantis
Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — A pair of controversial ordinances dealing with departmental reorganization and amendments to the city's charter, drew heated debate at the Longwood City Commission meeting Monday.

When the debate was over, commissioners by identical 3-2 votes approved a measure to move the city's code enforcement administration away from the Department of Public Safety and split responsibilities of code enforcement.

Building inspections in Longwood will now be handled by the city's Community Services Department and Code Enforcement responsibilities will fall under the Fire Division of the Public Safety Department.

Commissioners also voted 3-2 to place a modified and restricted version of proposed charter amendments before voters on the November ballot.

Both decisions came despite the fact no individual spoke in favor of either ordinance. The majority of the commission maintained its position that police should not be handling code enforcement. "There is no compelling reason to do this," said JoAnne Rebello. "This move is done under a current of deception and solely to placate one city commissioner. It smells of back-room politics."

"This is being blown out of proportion," explained mayor Paul Lovstrand. "We're moving two building inspectors from one building to another and from one supervisor to another. The majority of the board thinks it's the right thing to do."

Commissioners Steve Miller and Dan Anderson joined Lovstrand in the 3-2 vote. Miller said he was tired of the "usual four or five political activists accusing him of preferential treatment as a result of arm twisting."

"People have been sneaking into my backyard to investigate I've filed for a variance concerning my shed."

Others criticized the three commissioners for attempting to fix something that isn't broke, including commissioner Rusty Miles.

"Two years ago we changed this. It doesn't make sense and I don't buy it. Why change supervision when the department is running well?" See Longwood, Page 4A

Shoppers take advantage of state's 'tax-free' holiday

By Bill Kerns
Staff Writer

SANFORD — Anyone looking for a relaxing stroll might want to avoid shopping malls this week. The rest of us will bump-and-grind through crowded malls in search of savings.

Saturday marked the start of Florida's nine-day sales tax exemption. Many articles of clothing, footwear, and other accessories priced under $100 are not subject to the state's sales tax in a "holiday" that coincides with the annual back-to-school shopping spree.

Wallets, blouses, coats and gym suits are among the tax exempt items. However, there are still taxes on items such as skis, in-line skates and swim fins.

Many retail stores reported that consumers did take advantage of the exemption, lasting from 12:01 a.m. Saturday through midnight, Aug. 8. The sales tax exemptions mean consumers will save six percent on items such as pants and socks.

Shoppers in Seminole County also not have to pay local-option sales taxes.

"It was huge (this weekend)," said John Moorhouse, district manager for American Eagle Outfitters, located in the Seminole Towne Center. "We almost doubled our business from this time last year."

The Florida Legislature this year approved expanding the program beyond last year's scope. See Shoppers, Page 8A

Altamonte Springs residents take part in National Night

By Joe DeSantis
Staff Writer

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Residents of Altamonte Springs will join communities around the country this evening in sending a message. They'll lock their doors, turn on their porch lights and take part in a number of activities from 7 to 9 p.m. designed to show they stand united in protecting their neighborhoods and strengthening partnerships with police.

Tonight marks the 16th anniversary of "National Night Out," sponsored nationally by the National Association of Town Watch and co-sponsored locally by the Altamonte Springs police department.

"This marks the third year Altamonte Springs has taken part in the national program," explained officer Paul Machovina, of the department's Community Oriented Police Services.

Machovina said the community show of force is designed to do a number of things, among them: heighten crime and drug awareness; generate support for and participation in the Neighborhood Watch Program; strengthen partnerships between the community and Altamonte Springs police; and send a message to criminals that neighborhoods are organized and they are fighting back against crime.

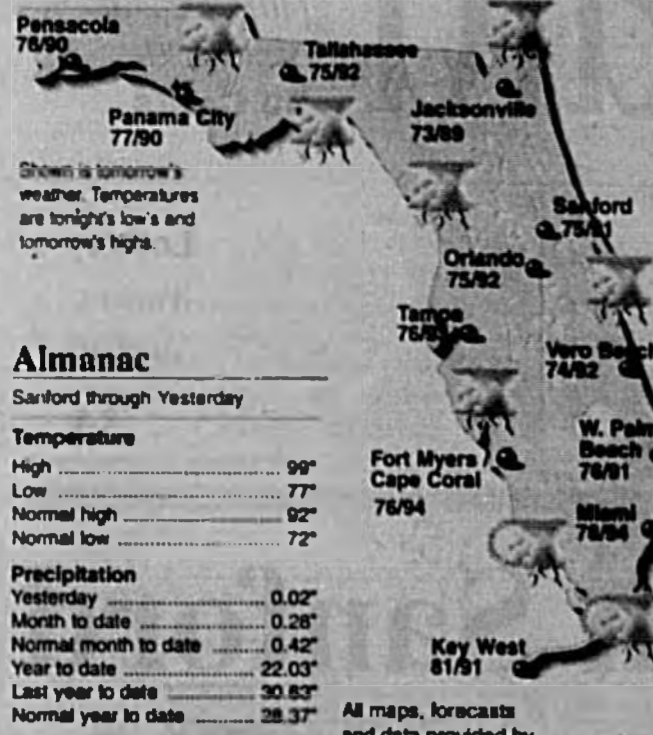

"This program has really helped raise awareness," Machovina said. "When neighbors get to know each other they know who belongs in their neighborhoods and who doesn't."

Tonight's events in Altamonte Springs include everything from ice cream socials, to pizza parties, to scavenger hunts and youth

How the county taps to the Morse code

As a child, Maryanne Morse picked cherries and apples on her dad's farm in Janesville, Wis.

Since 1989, Morse has been Seminole County's Clerk of the Circuit Court. That's as far away from Wisconsin's cherries and apples as one can get.

Actually, Morse holds three jobs in one. She is:

- Chief Financial Officer for the county.
- Recorder for the county.
- Record Keeper for the court system.

On Monday, I asked Maryanne Morse about her plans for 2000. Of course, she was going to run a fourth time. There was no rush, she said. Yes, she heard the rumors Longwood Mayor Paul Lovestrand might run against her.

"First, there were rumors he (Lovestrand) would run against the tax collector Ray Valdez," Morse said, naughtily. "Then, he's going to run against me. When he grows up, maybe he'll make up his mind."

Furthermore, Morse said, "Paul Lovestrand has no clue until he sits in this desk."

The desk Morse refers to is in a corner office on the fourth floor of the Seminole County Courthouse in Sanford. Some say activity at the courthouse would come to a screeching halt if Morse were not there.

"She's larger than life," said Deputy Clerk Bob Lewis. "Call her colorful, fiery, bold. Her IQ is at the genius level."

Russ White

Lewis worked with Morse for eight years in the county's Chamber of Commerce, eight more at the courthouse.

"You could bargain in an old Mid East bazaar better than you can with Maryanne," he said.

Commissioner Dick Van Der Weide found out how tough Morse was a year ago when he came back from a trip aboard without his meal receipts. Morse docked pay from two of the commissioner's pay checks. A court case continues.

Morse has strong opinions about the commission's recent decision to build a criminal justice center at Five Points.

Basically, she said, the courthouse is going to take too long to be built, cost too much and cause confusion to jurors, judges and legal staffs.

"It'll be two years before the design phase, another of delay and at least two years to build the center," Morse said. "We need something right away. With the center not near the courthouse, we'll need staff increases. Legal staff and sheriff's deputies for security."

Also troubling to Morse is that there would be much confusion for jurors and judges as they scrambled to be at the right location — downtown at the old courthouse or the new criminal justice center at Five Points.

For awhile Morse scoffed that the County Commission was not capable of making a decision to fix courthouse overcrowding. "I'd pass out if they did," she said one day. Then, they made what she considered an uneducated choice.

Before being elected as a constitutional officer of the county, Morse earned a bachelors degree in economics from Rollins College and a masters in finance and marketing.

She managed an Orlando law firm for 14 years. She understands the language of law and the function of a courthouse.

"What most people fail to understand is that a courthouse is not an easy thing to run," Morse said. "We're not Disney. What goes on at a courthouse isn't fun. No one really wants to come here. They're here for a divorce or because the law wants them put away. They're here as witnesses or as kids in trouble. A few do come to get a marriage license or adopt a child."

"Our job is to get them through here as rapidly as we can," she added. "We need to be efficient. We need to know exactly what we're doing. That's one part of it. The other part is we try to do all this with a smile."

Morse said she was with 100 or more clerks of the court and heard one clerk brag that her court staff had reduced the waiting time for traffic court offenders from 30 minutes to 15 minutes. "My heart started to beat," Morse said. "Our waiting time was 4 1/2 minutes. I felt better in a hurry."

Russ White's column appears Tuesday through Saturday in the Seminole Herald

Longwood

Still others criticized the commission for the move, leveling charges that the ordinance was the first step in dismantling the police department, and that code enforcement under the Direction of Public Safety was working because code enforcement was being handled in an efficient, proactive manner and that all of Longwood now had to play by the same rules.

Commissioner Annamarie Vacca said, "We need to take a step back — this thing is wrong. Not one survey that has been done has indicated a negative action with Code Enforcement under Public Safety. The City Administrator and the Director of Public Safety oppose this move — why are we opposing them?"

Miles pointedly asked city administrator John Drago if Code Enforcement was working for the city under the supervision of Public Safety.

"It is working now," responded Drago. He added that it was not his intention to predicate his personal wants on the commission and that he expects department heads to support what the commission votes for.

"If, over time this change doesn't work, it will show," Drago said.

Lovestrand added that it was the commission's charge to assign the duties of Code Enforcement and Public Safety.

"There's not a city or town or county that I'm aware of in Florida that has building inspections under the police. I believe the police should be able to do police work and building inspection should be under planning."

Rex Anderson, speaking against the reorganization complained, "Commissioner Miller's focus of the change is on self interest and gotcha politics. This opens the door for nothing more than more harassment of city employees. We don't need to put the citizens of Longwood through this again."

The commission's 3-2 vote to limit the number of charter amendments to go before voters in November brought equally contentious debate. The commission originally voted at a July 12 special meeting 3-1 to place all 13 recommendations before voters on the fall ballot. The commission reversed its position a week later by eliminating several amendments that dealt with issues of hiring and firing key city employees, filling a commission vacancy and the mechanism for the city administrator's annual evaluation.

Commissioner Dan Anderson explained his vote reversal in one week's time by stating his 180 degree change of heart was misinterpreted.

"The first time I saw the proposed changes I was not completely convinced either way," Anderson said. "I wanted to talk to more people and get more information. I'll support the ones I think I can support. This is not a demonic dictatorship. If anyone disagrees that this is a grave injustice we have a petition process where the people of Longwood can bring this forward."

Commissioner Miles countered that he felt the commission's action was "almost authoritarian."

"I still feel this is censorship," Miles said. "If this is representative democracy, this is a scary proposition."

Lovestrand told audience members the modified charter amendments approved by the commission's 3-2 was a compromise — without it voters would have a say on zero of the proposed amendments.

"A half a loaf of bread is better than none," said Lovestrand.

"Your bread has mold on it," responded Miles.

Lovestrand added that Longwood residents can still force the original proposed amendments on the fall ballot with a successful petition drive.

"I've personally been involved in three ballot initiatives, two in the city and one in the county," Lovestrand said. "Democracy provides for that if you choose to go that way."

In other commission action

Monday, the board approved expenditure of $40,000 of an encumbered $500,000 for initial payment to Seminole County for its share of a CR 427 widening project.

Commissioners rejected a proposed agreement with Eller Media on the relocation of a billboard currently located on Lyman High School Property to another location on 434 that would require a zoning exception.

Petition organizers say drive is making progress

By Joe DeSantis
Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — Organizers of a petition drive designed to force 13 original amendments to the city's charter onto the fall ballot say after one weekend their move to gather the required signatures from Longwood voters is making progress.

"We're doing well after one walking weekend," said Nadine Tolos.

"We have over 200 signatures, the people are paying attention and concerned about democracy in Longwood," added JoAnne Rebello, a member of the Charter Review Committee which brought the amendment recommendations to the board of commissioners.

Monday's debate over the commission's limited version of the original 13 changes may have been the only thing hotter than yesterday's temperature. By evening's end a relatively full house began chanting in the background as roll call votes were registered.

"3-2, 3-2," came the muted chant, in reference to a consistent block vote that had commissioners Paul Lovestrand, Steve Miller and Dan Anderson in one corner of most issues and commissioners Annamarie Vacca and Rusty Miles in another.

There were more accusations and charges leveled Monday between disgruntled city residents and the majority trio of commissioners over the charter issue — even an argument about which version of Robert's Rules of order the city operates under for public meetings.

Petition drive organizer

Nadine Tolos accused Lovestrand of violating parliamentary procedure at the commission's July 19 meeting in which the board reversed its decision and struck down five of the more controversial amendments to the city's governing document.

"You made motions without passing the gavel and vacating the chair," said Tolos. "You did an injustice."

Lovestrand responded that Tolos was using an outdated version of Robert's Rules and that revised versions indicate that at small meetings he has the same privileges as other board members and has every right to make motions.

Commissioners Miles and Vacca joined a small chorus of residents on hand to oppose the limited version of approved charter amendments.

"It's miraculous how in seven days we went from approving these by a 3-1 vote to watering them down by a 3-0 vote — that's what happens when a published agenda gets altered and flip flopped."

Miles' comments were in reference to the commission reversing its agenda items at the July 19 meeting and moving to strike down several of the key changes prior to his arrival and Vacca's arrival.

"The amendments you removed were important and could create sweeping changes for the city of Longwood," Miles said. "I maintain that this is censorship and hold my position that the people of Longwood deserve the right to vote on the proposals in their original form."

"The average Joe on the street came from England about 300 years ago because of the dictatorship there," he added. "I kind of like what they did in setting up democracy."

"This is a slaughtered version of what the Charter Review Committee proposed," said Tolos.

"It's butchered," added Rebello. Resident Dan McCoy said he felt the modified version wasn't right.

"The public is being censored, we're telling you what we feel is right," McCoy said.

Commissioner Miller said it was necessary to remind those in attendance that the Charter Review Committee's responsibility was to report their findings to the city's elected officials and that proposed amendments should not be viewed as a carte blanche for sweeping changes.

"Some of these are self serving on the part of the city administrator," said Miller.

Lovestrand questioned whether it was more democratic to put the wishes of a review committee ahead of the wishes of elected officials.

"I can't in good conscious vote for all of these. I think they'll hurt the city. In voting against them I'm doing my job."

Lovestrand reminded those in opposition to the approved limited amendments have the petition drive as redress to the commission's vote.

"I've been part of three petition drives," he said. "That is democracy."

Petition organizers have until Aug. 16 to secure the signatures of 10 percent of Longwood's registered voters if they intend to force all 13 original amendments on the ballot for a Nov. 2 vote.

The Marina Hotel in Sanford received major damage when high winds shattered several windows. The damage was cleaned up quickly, and hotel officials were awaiting the arrival of crews to replace the windows.

The roof of the Sanford City Hall was damaged during the storm. Estimates for the damage will be gathered today.

However, there were no injuries, said Dennis Baldwin, general manager of The Marina Hotel.

"We're assessing the damage on the roof this morning," Baldwin said. "We'll recover fine, it will just take time."

A commercial storage building in Marina Isle suffered roof damage, and an office building lost a sky light. Several boats were also damaged. However, management at Sanford Boat Works said its business escaped storm damage.

Tree limbs falling on City Hall damaged part of the flashing on the building's roof. Many cars in the parking lot also had their windows blown out, said City Manager Tony VanDerworp.

"It was a very localized storm cell," VanDerworp said. "Most of the damage from gusts of high winds was localized at City Hall and the Marina."

WIN AT BRIDGE

If you bid up, play up

PHILLIP ALDER

By Phillip Alder

How much information is our government keeping from us? Oscar Wilde felt that some of it related to the discovery of the country: "Of course, America had often been discovered before, but it had always been hushed up."

In today's deal from the Vancouver Spring Nationals, South wanted his line of play hushed up, but he was being kibitzed by a journalist, Maureen Dennison from England. See if you would have done better. You push into the adventurous seven no-trump. West leads a diamond. How would you continue?

After winning with dummy's diamond ace, declarer played a spade to his king, led a club to dummy's ace, and cashed the spade ace. (If the spade queen had appeared, South would have had 17 top tricks.) However, he didn't know which red suit card to discard. When the spade queen didn't drop, the contract was history. Declarer had to lose the last trick to East in the red suit from which he didn't discard.

Instead of going for the spades immediately, suppose declarer starts by taking his four club tricks, discarding a couple of spades from the dummy. Then he unblocks the spade king, crosses to dummy's heart king, and cashes the spade ace. What does East discard? He is down to three cards in each red suit. And when he commits himself, South discards from the other suit.

Let's suppose East releases a heart. Declarer throws the useless diamond 10, plays a heart to his jack, and cashes the heart ace, which establishes the

ASK DR. GOTT

Hormone won't make grandson taller

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My grandson is 19 years old and 5 feet 3 inches tall. Would growth hormone injections make him taller?

DEAR READER: Growth hormone is useful for certain short-statured individuals, but it must be administered before a youngster's bone-growth centers have closed. By 19, most young people have lost the ability to gain height; therefore, the use of the hormone would serve no beneficial purpose. Your grandson will have to learn to put up with being short.

On this topic, let me editorialize. I believe that your grandson should be encouraged to emphasize the really positive things in his life. Is he creative, bright, honest and outgoing? What are the numerous goals he is equipped to achieve? Many happy and successful short men have enjoyed stupendous accomplishments by "accentuating the positive."

If your grandson makes the mistake of equating his height with being a valuable person, his world will shrink. He will learn to behave in inappropriate ways to compensate for his height. He runs the risk of becoming a "little Caesar." On the other hand, if he believes that size is unimportant in the larger scheme of things, he will come to trust his abilities and believe in his validity. Body size need have little relation to the development of really worthwhile human characteristics.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Are cough syrups and non-prescription cold remedies really beneficial, or do their ingredients (such as alcohol) just make people think they feel better?

DEAR READER: Your question raises two issues.

Cough and cold remedies have absolutely no effect on the causes of colds and upper respiratory infections. Viruses are obliviously unconcerned about most medicines, antibiotics included. Rhinoviruses could bathe in a tub of Nyquil, step out refreshed and return to work. Coronaviruses could sit down to a seven-course meal of aspirin, Tylenol, Contac, Dristan, Actifed, Formula 44 and Robitussin — burp, giggle and ask for more. Make no mistake; these critters are hardy and immune to over-the-counter products.

What does make a difference to the viruses is our own immunity: those wondrous defense proteins that inactivate and destroy microorganisms without the help of the pharmaceutical industry. Therefore, if you have an upper respiratory virus infection, build up your resistance by getting additional rest, avoiding strenuous exercise, stopping smoking and generally taking care of yourself.

DR. GOTT

You know as well as I do that colds sometimes make us feel awful. Here's where cough and cold medications can give relief, to the extent that we are able to sleep and rest. So, while a viral respiratory infection will run its course (about a week if untreated, about seven days if it is), medicine may help make that course more bearable.

Shoppers

Last year, there was no sales tax for items priced $50 or less, and the exemption lasted for nine days instead of one week.

In addition, more items are exempt from the sales tax than during last year's pilot program.

The state estimates it will lose out on nearly $35 million in revenue as a result of the program. This is more than double the $16 million the state lost in tax revenue last year.

Sonia Spliteri, assistant manager for Cache Women's Clothing in Seminole Towne Center, said that customers started calling about making purchases before the tax exemption sale even began.

Retail stores expect to draw more shoppers because the tax-free days begin July 31 this year, instead of in mid-August when many schools have resumed classes. In Seminole County, school starts on Aug. 9.

"That's a great thing," Spliteri said. "It's a lot better than last year."

Shoppers can purchase an unlimited number of items, while still qualifying for the exemptions. If 12 dresses for $70 each are purchased, plus six book bags for $20 each, the exemptions will still apply.

However, there are limits to where the exemptions apply. Clothing sold in theme parks, entertainment complexes, hotels and airports will still be subject to sales taxes.

Items that normally sell for more than $100 cannot be separated to obtain the exemption. For instance, a $125 suit cannot be separated into separate articles sold at under $100.

When exempt items are normally sold together with taxable merchandise as a set, the full price is subject to sales tax. For example, a $120 wallet with a key chain is taxable because the price is more than $100.

Clerks working in retail stores will need to remember how to operate the "tax-exempt" keys long after Aug. 8.

When a consumer produces a receipt or invoice for an eligible item from Saturday through Sept. 30 showing that tax was paid, the tax will be refunded.

Shipping and handling charges are included as part of the sales price.

Eligible items purchased by mail order, including transactions over the Internet, will receive the exemption if the order is accepted by the mail-order company during the exemption period for shipment.

Daniels graduates from leadership school

Air Force Senior Airman Vickie A. Daniels has graduated from the Airman Leadership School at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Dayton, Ohio.

The five-week course focuses on preparing and better equipping senior airmen to serve as supervisors, managers and rating officials as they progress in their military careers.

The course is the first of three levels of recurring professional military education used to develop and cultivate leadership and supervisory skills required of airman in today's Air Force.

Daniels is a civilian medical records manager with the 74th Aerospace Medicine Squadron at Wright-Patterson.

She is the daughter of Sylvia I. and Harold C. Helms of Casselberry.

Her husband, Darrell, is the son of Darrell Daniels of Palatka, Fla., and Linda Ferguson of Palmetto, Fla.

The senior airman is a 1990 graduate of Lyman High School, Longwood.

activities.

Specific gatherings are scheduled at Cranes Roost Villas, Hermits Trail and First Street, Oakland Estates, and Oak Harbour subdivisions. On the city's westside, other gatherings are being held at Spring Valley, Brookhollow, Hidden Springs, Montgomery Square Townhomes, Renaissance Pointe Apartments and San Sebastian Knolls.

"This helps put a human face on the police department," Machovina said.

"Residents like to get to know the individual road patrol officers and bike unit officers who work their neighborhoods."

He added that strong support comes from older, more established residential sections while mixed support for the movement has come from newer subdivisions that tend to be home for younger residents.

"Another focus of tonight's participation is to overcome complacency," he added.

"Sometimes residents see something in their neighborhoods that they know isn't right, but are reluctant to contact police because they don't think it's significant. We would much rather investigate in a proactive manner than have to do follow up with a 15-page report after something has happened."

The Altamonte officer also encouraged residential areas within Altamonte Springs that do not currently have established Neighborhood Watch programs to contact him at the city's Community Oriented Police Services.

"We consider the residents of Altamonte Springs our customers and we try to keep them satisfied."

Groups interested in establishing watch programs within Altamonte Springs can contact Machovina at 830-3913.

Three strikes and you're out

The two-time defending State Champions, the first team to ever win two straight state titles in Florida, from Post 53 still had slim hopes of an at-large bid to this week's State Tournament in DeLand, but a problem that gave the club those hopes was ironed out and the squad will not get a chance at defending their title and trying to add to their amazing record over the past four seasons.

Last-minute hopes fall through, no tourney bid for Post 53

By Dean Smith
SPORTS EDITOR

SANFORD - Unbeknownst to most disheartened fans when they left the Seminole High School Baseball Complex last Thursday night, the two losses to Port St. Lucie Post 318 in the American Legion "A" Area Tournament did not end Sanford Post 53's hopes of making the State Tournament.

There were negotiations going on behind the scenes that could have possibly led to Post 53 getting an At-Large Bid to the State Tournament that will open in DeLand on Wednesday.

There are six areas in Florida and the winner's of those tournaments, plus the host team, are invited to the tournament along with an At-Large spot that is given to the runner-up from an area on a rotating basis.

The At-Large bid for this year's tournament was supposed to go to the runner-up from the Miami area, but some problem early last week was going to keep the runner-up from coming to DeLand.

With that in mind, the plan was to move the At-Large bids up a year and with the Area to which Sanford Post 53 belongs scheduled to get the bid in 2000, they could have gone this year.

But the problem was ironed out on Friday and Post 53 was denied its final hope of getting to defend their State Championship.

The final strike ends an amazing streak by the Campbell-Lossing Post 53 team over the last four years.

The team was the state runner-up in 1996, was the state, regional and World Series champions in 1997, became the first team ever to win back-to-back titles.

Florida Hospital, Miracle team up to fight breast cancer

Special to the Herald

ORLANDO - Florida Hospital and the Orlando Miracle are teaming up in the fight against breast cancer for "The Orlando Miracle Bounce" on August 15, 1999 beginning at 5 p.m. at the Orlando Arena.

An estimated 1,000 people will be bouncing their basketballs through the streets of Downtown Orlando to raise funds for breast cancer.

The route is a two-mile loop around downtown Orlando, which starts and ends at the Orlando Arena.

The minimum pledge is $25, and all participants will receive an event T-shirt and a ticket to that night's Orlando Miracle game.

Proceeds will benefit Miracle Makers which is a supporter of the Florida Hospital Women's Center Mammography Scholarship Fund and the Florida Hospital Start Talking Fund - both funds help under-served Central Florida women pay for breast cancer detection and diagnostic procedures.

In October, Florida Hospital, RDV Sports and the RDV Sportsplex will team up again to encourage women to "Start Talking" about breast cancer.

Wayne Gager and his Westview Baptist Church teammates improved to 9-2 on the season and into a three-way tie with the Knights of Columbus and Central Baptist Church without even having to take the field Monday night as Celebration Church of Lake Mary could not field a team.

K of C throws Church into three-way tie

From Staff Reports

LAKE MARY - It's showdown time in the City of Sanford Recreation and Parks Department Spring Church Slow Pitch Softball League.

Monday night at the Lake Mary Sports Complex, Jim Davis capped a two-run rally in the bottom of the seventh inning as the Knights of Columbus edged league-leading Central Baptist Church, 6-5, in the completion of the game suspended two weeks ago.

But Central Baptist Church avoided further damage, using a five-run sixth inning to pull away from Christians United and holding on for a 9-4 victory.

The other two scheduled games were not played as Westview Baptist Church and Sanford First Church of the Nazarene both got 7-0 forfeit victories from Celebration Church of Lake Mary and Centro Cristiano (1-10).

The win was the sixth straight for the Knights of Columbus, while Central Baptist Church saw its five game winning streak come to an end.

Central Baptist Church, Knights of Columbus and Westview Baptist Church are all 9-2 on the season with one game left.

Completing the standings are Christians United (5-6), Sanford First Church of the Nazarene (4-7), Celebration Church of Lake Mary (2-10) and Centro Cristiano (1-10).

The league is scheduled to finish the regular season next Monday at the Lake Mary Sports Complex with Sanford first
