

Major League "Farms" Are Seen As Unsatisfactory System Of Baseball Teams

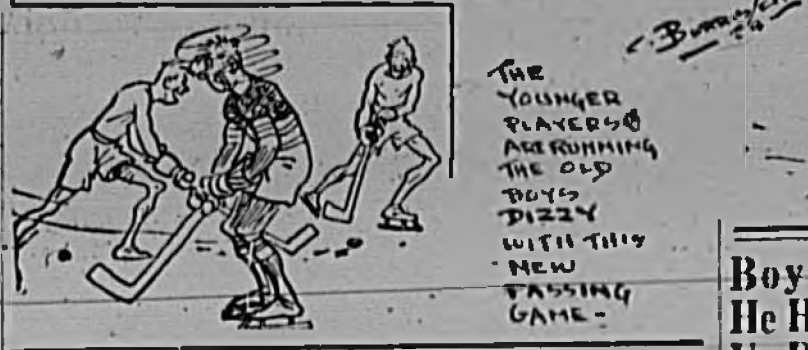

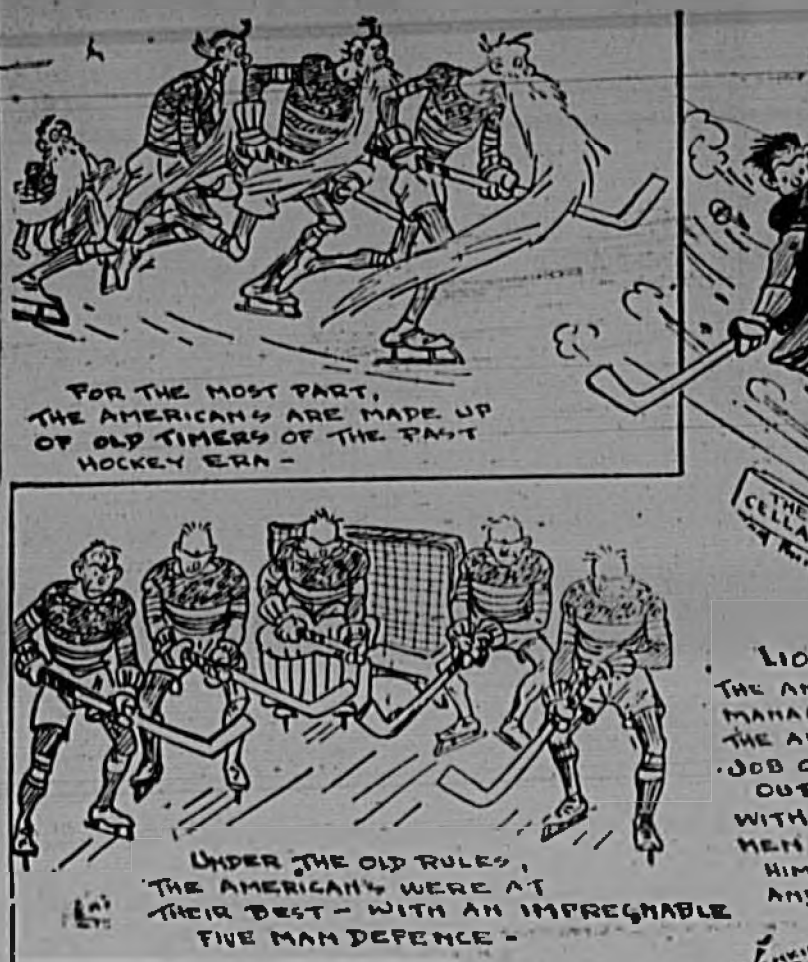

By Davis J. Walsh International News Service Sports Editor NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Like the chump who hit himself on the head with a hammer because it felt so good when he stopped, the Major League "farm" or "chickens" operator cannot long survive without one thing or the other. His immediate need is education, if he doesn't recognize this, his future need is bound to be a new head. The baseball "chickens" system is a menace to nobody, except the man who operates it, and to him, it is usually a menace.

Although the Piggly Wiggly Team has yet to win a game, it is admired for its perseverance and good sportsmanship in its losses, which after all is a moral victory.

No More Green Fruit Shipments

According to a recent announcement by Nathan Mayo, commissioner of agriculture, not a single complaint has been received this season from northern consumers of Florida citrus fruits. Despite the fact that last year at this time the market had been considerably slowed up because of the premature movement of green fruit, not a single instance of this kind has been reported this year. This is indeed gratifying information, and shows on the part of the growers an awakening to the fact that the reputation which this state has for good products is one of its most priceless possessions, and on the part of the federal inspectors what may be perhaps increased vigilance. O. G. Strauss, the inspector in charge of the work in south Florida, was recently the subject of special praise from the Lakeland Ledger. Mr. Mayo further says in his announcement that the inspection tax of 2 1/2 cents a box is quite enough to accomplish all necessary work without any additional appropriation from the state. Of the twenty-eight licensed federal inspectors, it is pointed out, thirteen are residents of Florida, and of all those employed by the state, more than one hundred in number, all are residents of Florida. But what Mr. Mayo says regarding green fruit shipments is of vastly more importance than the place of residence of those who make this salutary situation possible. If Florida men can prevent the shipment of green fruit, well and good; but if they can't, it would be far better to get out-of-state men than to permit again such a condition as existed last year. It is gratifying to know that the inspectors now on the job have the situation well in hand.

Strange Viols

What should be of particular interest to Floridians and especially to those who inhabit Florida's oldest city, was the announcement published several days ago in the New York World that part of the coffin, which for several centuries contained the remains of the founder of St. Augustine, has been made into fine violins, said to be of excellent quality, as a memorial. Nine years after Pedro Menendez built a fort which marked the beginning of America's first city, he died and was buried in Aviles, Spain, where his body rested until 1924 when it was removed from its tomb to be placed in a mausoleum. The coffin, said to be a remarkable piece of workmanship in Spanish walnut, and surprisingly well preserved, was presented to the city of St. Augustine. After lying in the city vaults for four years, apparently unappreciated, and deteriorating at a rapid rate, it was discovered by Robert Runson, of the Florida Historical Society who rebuilt the top and restored it as best he could to its former condition. From the bottom sufficient wood was removed to enable him to turn over to Dr. W. H. Heintz, a violin maker and connoisseur, enough so that he could make two violins. Although made largely from wood three hundred and fifty years old, the violins are reported to have an unusual beautiful tone, and are really a pleasure, in the hands of an expert, to hear, despite the fact that one could hardly help feeling that the tone must come from the grave of Menendez.

A Deputy Gets Bit

We have heard of nearly everything in the world happening to deputy sheriffs, but never before have we heard of one getting his ear chewed off, especially by a bootlegger who of all people on earth should have plenty else to put into his mouth. But that very thing has happened in Canal Point, and this is the way the Fort Lauderdale News tells it: "A bootlegger at Canal Point, Fla., chewed off the ear of a deputy sheriff. Had he submitted to arrest and kept his teeth to himself, he would have been fined for bootlegging and that would have been the end of it. Now he is charged with the crime of mayhem. The maximum sentence is 20 years' imprisonment. "His lawyer will contend that sudden heat and passion" was responsible and that the defendant should not be severely punished; but when the deputy sheriff presents himself to the jury minus one ear, the chances are that twelve good men and true will not think a maximum sentence too severe. For the rest of his life the officer will present the appearance of the man with "one shoe off and one shoe on." BARCLAY H. WARBURTON, formerly mayor of the exclusive winter colony of Palm Beach, is now president of the Miami Jockey Club. He and Frank J. Bruen, general manager of the club, have been officially welcomed to the city of Miami. Mr. Warburton issued a statement that the "horse racing of the Miami Jockey club will be operated rigidly within the limits of our charter and in entire accord with the laws of Florida." This is particularly interesting in view of the contemplated legal action announced by some West Coast individuals who are opposed to the gambling features usually connected with racing. Lake Worth Herald.

Will The President Fight For The Court?

NEW YORK WORLD
Within a few hours of the reading of the President's Message announcing the early submission of the World Court problem to the Senate and urging its speedy approval, the answer comes which indicates a determined opposition. Senator Borah, always opposed to the Court, and Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, expressed the opinion that the Court cannot be regarded for consideration at this session. Since this is a long session, and such sessions have been known to extend into September, those desiring for ten months the Senate's assent as to the possibility of reaching it is surprising. It can only mean that there is to be no cooperation between the President and the Committee on the Court. Even more serious than the opposition of Senator Borah is the opposition of Senator Watson, the Republican leader of the Senate, who with the exception of the Senate is not even on the Court. This means one of two things—either that Senator Watson realized that the opposition in his party to the Court is strong enough to pre-

THE RAINY DAY

BY JOHN BLAKE
It was hardly necessary for Mr. Longfellow to remind us that "into each life some rain must fall." But his admonition to the effect that it should cease raining remains all largely unheeded. It is natural for man to indulge in the illusion of hope, as Patrick Henry is quoted as saying, and the most dazzling and unresisting illusion that he indulges in is that because to-day is fair to-morrow will in all probability be likewise. In spite of the fact that we all know that trouble may be just around the corner, we are constantly neglecting to make any preparation to meet them when they come. This is written at a time when the condition of the stock market has not been altogether satisfactory to imprudent investors and when a number of people are wondering why they invested so much of their money in securities about which they knew nothing except that they happened to be commanding high prices when they were purchased. These people bought not wisely but too much, hoping to make quick fortunes without an effort—for who could think that the financial skies would not always be bright and that these stocks would not continue to rise to their blue zenith? Now they are unhappy and agitated. But if they have learned anything their losses may result in considerable good. Keeping the rainy day constantly in mind is very useful not only in matters of finances but in other matters. There is, for example, the matter of spending a little more than in acquiring more knowledge about our daily earnings. When times are all right at home and one is in good health there is time for this. But if there is illness at home or one is ill himself it strains the endurance to keep on the job at all, to say nothing of learning more about its duties. Rainy day saving includes not only putting a little something into the bank or into some investment now and then but in putting a little more skill into the hand, or a little more special knowledge into the mind. We cannot see around the corner. But we can be reasonably sure from our own past history that around some corner or other there will be trouble. So when everything is going it will help to do a little extra work, and save, if we can, a little extra money in that when the rain descends and the floods come we shall not be in quite such a bad fix. Republican Party, but his support of the League at one time was not as profuse as Mr. Barry indicates. Every one he insists that through the Court is a creation of the Wilson League it has no connection with it, and being thus secure that we may enter without interfering with our "sovereignty" he should be in position to fight it. It is hardly reasonable to learn that he will sign it, lay it on his desk and keep it there until he is good and ready to submit it. In that he will have the hearty approval of the members of the Court to his policy promises to the effect of that courageous leadership which has thus so compassionately absent in Washington during the last eight years. They have converted a murder in Chicago, which suggests a patriotic protest against the duty of jurors who continue to report or telling in the most unqualified old home town. TELLING THE WORLD

BY NEAL O'HARA
THAT ANNUAL THIRD DEGREE
It happens in every home: "How, Bobby, it's time for school. And if you're a very good boy, Santa Claus will bring you something for Christmas." "Well, he got his things mixed in your mind. I ordered a pony and electric trap and he brought me a toy chest." "Nothing, Santa Claus is very old and sometimes has memory slips." "How old is he?" "I think he must be at least eight." "When's his birthday?" "On Dec. 25th." "What he give presents today for this?" "He ought to be getting one instead." "Santa Claus, my dear, is very generous. He loves to give things to children." "Where he get all these things?" "He and Mrs. Santa Claus make them at the North Pole." "What's got the connection at the South Pole, mammy?" "I don't think there's anyone at the South Pole." "Why not?" "It just happens—that's all. Santa Claus is at the North Pole." "Why don't the mice go to the South Pole?" "Because he got factories at the North Pole, the wouldn't want to move it." "I don't think he'd build another one at the South Pole." "Perhaps he will, dear." "When?" "I don't know. Maybe next year or the year after." "He'll be eighty-two years old then." "That's right, darling. Now, how do you like your toy and go to sleep." "Yes, mammy. But does Santa Claus really live at the North Pole, too?" "Yes. All the reindeers are there in a stable." "How many stables in the table?" "Oh, there must be a dozen at least." "And do the reindeer fly out?" "I believe so, darling. Now, mother'll put the light out and you can go to sleep." "Well, I don't think I'm going to number go home and go to sleep." "Yes, I suppose it is a good little boy. Now go to sleep, and don't rain and a good night and a happy Christmas." "That's quite a lot for Santa to bring out. I'll be." "Don't tell me he can't be at the North Pole. But how can a many children to care for?" "What will he bring me, then?" "I think he'll probably bring you a fire truck and a sled. But we will talk about that to-morrow, baby." "What is he going to give you out of my Christmas toy?" "I don't think Santa Claus makes electric trains. Three years ago you got a train." "An electric train? What kind of a factory is it running?" "Santa is so busy he can't make everything. That's all now, honey. Good night." "I don't see why he don't make electric trains." "Perhaps we'll find out more about it to-morrow. Now good night, honey-lamb." "But, mother, why can't he?" "Listen, if you don't shut your-

ART DISPLAY IN PARIS FEATURES OLD FURNITURE

Sobriety Seen In Paintings And Sculpture Along With 'Nudes'

By Alice Langlier International News Service Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Dec. 12.—"It isn't an art exhibition, but a 'furniture store'—this is the remark heard from many visitors to the year's Salon d'Automne now being held in the Grand Palais. To be sure, there are blocks and blocks of canvases—2,327 of them, to be exact, but the crowds are to be found around the furniture display on the ground floor where the real exhibition is.

Chairs, some of metal rods, tables, are in glass, low beds of brass and steel or other metal and even pillows, made of something which looks so soft. Chinoiserie galleon ornamental over glass, bedroom screens and woven carpets in as many colors as the rainbow coat of Joseph, Leon Zak, a new clay-colored grape harvest, are not as terra-cotta table ornaments and Lalique's Greek nudes are crystallized as table lamps. The entire furnishings of one little house are made of strong wire.

Relative sobriety is the feature of the paintings and sculpture on display, with the usual number of unattractive nudes in all possible poses. One of Van Dongen's typical contrasts a thin young lady, with nothing much to say for herself, aside from her high-heeled hat and faded green eyes.

Thirty-eight American artists are in evidence, with more or less interesting exhibits, among them Charles Thorneike of New York, with four large canvases of soldiers, racks and sea and Marguerite of Berkeley, California, with two unusual landscapes, called "Les Deha quent" and "Blue in Face."

Margaret DeLoe of New York City, is showing a simple line study of Janet Schuyler and P. H. Bruce, American lumber who took up this vacation at the age of 10, two old life. Hugo I. Seneca of San Francisco, has a set point in the soft light following a storm and Leidy Pitts two line studies.

Splendid engravings are shown by Anna Lee of New York, John McFarth, Gerald Vixen Davis of Brooklyn, Mary Blanton of Toledo and Minna Zeline Weiss of Philadelphia. Harry Bonner, of Texas, has a busy landscape, Henry Canton of New York, two American sculptors include Bruce Callender with a large, much-antique, White II (man with portrait in sculpture, Maurice Mullin with two plaster busts and Katherine Schütz with a heavy, rickety bust of a woman.

MAN, WIFE, KILLED MUNCIE, Ind., Dec. 12 (AP)—Mr. and Mrs. George Heath, both 70 years old, were found blown to death at their farm home about four miles south of here today. The couple apparently had been dead since last Tuesday.

Quiet Reigns After Normal Conditions Attempted Prison Break In New York Coast After Gales

The situation in the prison and two much mixing of depressed prisoners serving long terms with short terms convicts were responsible for the latest Auburn outbreak.

Governor Roosevelt was notified of the outbreak while spending his vacation at Ithaca. When he arrived at Syracuse last evening he found the situation under control and proceeded to New York instead of returning home to take personal charge.

He announced he would accept special recommendations to the legislature when it convenes January. Three recommendations, it is expected, will take the form of an expansion of the state prison building program. Much of the discontent in prison is blamed upon overcrowded conditions.
