Chandler off respirator

SANFORD — Philip Chandler, 16, was taken off the respirator this weekend at Central Florida Regional Hospital. Chandler was admitted to the hospital on July 17 after being locked in the trunk of his car where he was exposed to extreme heat.

He is breathing on his own but is being given oxygen. Hospital spokesperson Susan Prather said this morning. His condition however, is still listed as critical.

Chandler was admitted to the hospital with hyperthermia, a marked elevation of body temperature, 109 degrees.

He was abducted from a Pine Hills barber shop parking lot and forced into the trunk of his car by two teenagers. He was reportedly in the trunk for approximately five hours before he was found comatose and barely breathing in the parking lot of Daytona Beach Community College DeLand campus.

Twice-swollen jackpot deflated

TALLAHASSEE — A Florida Lotto jackpot inflated to an estimated $29 million by two weeks of winless rollovers has been deflated by nine winners.

Lottery officials said nine tickets sold for the Saturday night drawing had the numbers that turned up 1-11-23-34-44-46.

In addition to the nine big tickets, 1,309 matched five of the six numbers and are worth $441,500 each; 12,960 matched four and are worth $42 each while 177,446 had half and are worth $5 each.

Two of the winning tickets were sold in Hialeah, the others were sold in Brooksville, Jacksonville, New Port Richey, Pensacola, Sebring, Tamara and Valrico. Each is worth one ninth of the grand prize, the exact sum of which will be known today.

The jackpot like all of them based on a 20-year payout to one winner started at $7 million three weeks ago. It jumped to $16 million when the first week went by without a big winner, then ballooned to $29 million in another rollover last week.

This week's drawing will again be for a jackpot estimated at $7 million.

Review panel has problems in some areas

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — While Seminole County schools were rated favorably overall by a panel representing the Department of Education's Equal Educational Opportunity Program, the reviewers had problems with how the district operated in some areas.

The review was required by the Florida Educational Equity Act and the Vocational Guidelines.

Overall, I'm pleased with their report, said Supr. Paul Hagerly. There are some problems they have indicated and we are looking into them.

The panel visited the district for a week in May and went to 19 of the district's 16 schools and interviewed 122 employees, including administrators, teachers, coaches, guidance counselors and secretaries. They also studied 281 documents, including brochures, curriculum guides, letters, district statistics, district forms, organizational charts, handbooks, memoranda, newsletters, school advisory committee meeting minutes, staff and student handbooks and calendars.

Nancy Bond, director of the Equal Educational Opportunity Program, said the team had done a careful review, and that they were prepared to work with the school district to be sure the shortcomings were brought up to par.

The panel recommended that the district should clarify the roles of those in charge of overseeing the district's equity programs and should be sure that employees, students and the public should be aware of who they should contact with problems in these areas.

They also recommended that the district and the employee unions should review grievance procedures that require an employee report.

Budget, police department top Longwood agenda

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — Ordinances dealing with next year's budget and establishing the police department in the city charter top tonight's Longwood town commission agenda. Both ordinances are scheduled for 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. The commission accepted its review of the 1983-84 budget last month and proposed a tax rate of $9.06, six cents more than the current $8.12 rate. City administrator James McElhin advised the move was "absolutely irrefragable" because by keeping the same tax rate as this year, it would allow the city to build up its reserves. The majority of the commission voted for the lower rate.

A Longwood homeowner with a $100,000 home could $25,000 home-owners' exemption would pay $170,000 in taxes with the $8.06 rate. That is $4,000 less than he would pay with the $5.12 rate.

In other business, the commission will read the amendment of the ordinance establishing the city police department in the city charter. The amendment came about after Mayor Paul Lovstrand claimed the city would be required to add from 10 to 19 police to the department as a result of guidelines used in the original ordinance. After some heated debate over the main items provisions, Police Chief Greg Manning asked that a revision be made calling for a minimum of 22 sworn officers for every 1,000 citizens. That is about the current manning level in the department.

Fire destroys Midway home

Early Sunday blaze termed accidental

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A fire early Sunday morning totally destroyed a house in the Midway area. Fire investigators have classified it as accidental.

Fire fighters responded to the blaze at 7:04 Sunday morning at 2420 Randall Street, within a few blocks of the fire station on E.S.R. 46.

Seminole County Sheriff Fire Investigator Bob Christian said an iron had reportedly been placed face down on a table. It was unplugged, he said, but apparently it was still hot enough to ignite a fire on some nearby clothing.

Christian said the only resident of the home, Mary Marable, 35, received small burns on her hand during the fire, but was not otherwise injured.

The fire report indicated the house was fully involved in the blaze when firemen arrived. Total damage was estimated at $20,000, determined to be a total loss.

Crime spree arrest

Man holds suspect at gunpoint while wife calls police

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Sanford police arrested Kevin Lee Smith, 19, with no local address, Sunday morning. Smith may have been involved in possibly more than a half-dozen burglaries.

According to Sanford Police Commander Dennis Whitmore, at approximately 3:04 a.m. Sunday, Donald Miller, 2912 S. French Ave., woke up when he heard a car engine outside his house. He looked out the window and saw a white male in his daughter's car.

Mr. Miller's wife called the police. Whitmore continued, and Miller went out and held Smith a gunpoint until officers arrived at the scene.

Whitmore said it has been determined the Smith apparently had also broken into the Miller home from where he obtained the keys to the car.

Whitmore commented, Smith has also confessed to a burglary on July 17 in the 1900 block of Park Avenue, when a woman in the house fired two shots at an intruder but missed.

He is also believed to have been involved in another break-in in the 2800 block of S. French, where a woman reportedly hit him with a lamp. He continued.

Additional burglaries Smith is believed to have been connected with include two businesses in the 2200 block of S. French Avenue, a home at 3071 S. McIlhennyville and possibly one at 919 E. Laurel.

Computer owners can now access public library

Brett Lochrie of Sanford uses computer to find a book at the Sanford library.

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

The future has arrived at the Seminole County public library system.

Beginning today, computer owners with telephone modems can call a library telephone number and have direct access to the 60-day old computerized book catalog system, Public Access Catalog or PAC. With DIAL-PAC, anyone with a computer and modem may link to the county's computerized listing of 309,500 books and 3,500 audiovisual materials. There's even a word-lookup dictionary service. The service is offered 24 hours daily.

From the comfort of home or office, library customers may scan the listing by author, title or subject. The system will tell users how many copies the library system has, if it is available and which of the five libraries has it. Library card holders can also reserve the book for checkout.

Suzi Goldman, library technical services director, said eventually PAC may be expanded to link with computerized listing of the state university and community college system and periodical article files. The system was financed by a $275,000 federal grant and a $30,000 contribution from Seminole County Friends of the Library.

For computer owners with modems who understand such things, DIAL-PAC accepts baud rates up to 9600 BPS. Data bits must be set to 8, stop bits set at 1, with full duplex and no parity. Several terminal types are offered.

EDITORIALS

Be aware, speak up about issues important here

Let's pack our tents and move. Seminole County is beginning to float out of existence.

That's a negative statement on the surface, but it appears to be the direction people are allowing it to take.

Many editorials published in the Sanford Herald have stressed good points about the county, its cities, and its people. There are times however, when negative points begin to accumulate.

Regardless of what some may think, we believe our residents are aware of what is going on. People know of difficulties which are slowing Seminole County's recognition as a vital part of Central Florida.

The problem is, they have not rallied together to combat the power base to the south.

Many objected but hardly a soul complained when an air show presented at Sanford's Central Florida Regional Airport earlier this year was called "Air Show Orlando."

There still has not been an outpouring of public support to keep the Central Florida zoo entirely in the Sanford area rather than moving some of it to land near Orlando.

Where were the taxpayers when the county discussed giving $1 million to benefit the Orlando Science Center? School officials seem almost ready to give a similar amount.

Consider money given to the now-defunct Orlando Symphony Orchestra early this year. Yet the Lake Mary/Heathrow Chamber of Commerce is pleading with the public and businesses for financial support for an upcoming one-band jazz concert to show off the city's new boulevard.

Long-time residents can undoubtedly recall other times when local money has been allocated for the benefit of our larger neighbor to the south.

It's time we started taking a closer look in the mirror. There are many ways to spend money wisely. We should begin looking out for our own cities and county.

Keep attuned to what is going on, and how money is being spent. Regardless of how much a dollar is worth these days, it's still our dollar.

Not all gays the same

Several areas of our country have recently voted to forbid civil rights protection for gay people. It sends a message to employers, landlords and others that it's legal to fire, evict or otherwise discriminate against gays for no other reason.

Who can blame people for voting this way when the press coverage of Gay Pride Week always shows men sauntering around in wigs, dresses, chaps and harnesses? The press ignores 99 percent of the crowd that is respectable and normal and focuses on the strange.

I'm a 40-year-old gay professional who has been in a monogamous relationship for 12 years. I cringe when I see the bizarre antics of a small minority of the homosexual community shown on television.

I refer to the effeminate, limp-wristed, nasal-voiced queens who jump in front of the camera and make a spectacle of themselves. Those weirdos do not represent me or my gay friends. Moreover, they are the reason homosexuals are considered freaks and "queers" and must hide their sexuality.

Every minority has its lunatic fringe, extremists and nut cases who impede progress and make life hard for everybody. They deny ordinary gay people the opportunity to be accepted as decent, constructive members of the community — which we are.

Feeding gators

I'll admit I'm a softy regarding all species of animals and reptiles. I read in the paper today about the alligator who was destroyed because people were feeding this gator and it had become too friendly. I really wish people would not feed the gators so this situation would not have happened. The quote in the paper regarding the alligator having a brain the size of a dime should also apply to people who feed these alligators.

Pro-lifers scorn new abortion method

Through the years I have known nurses who refused to take part in second-trimester abortions. Most were not pro-lifers and had participated in many first-trimester abortions. But, they told me, they could not bear seeing — during D&E (Dilation and Evacuation) — the dismemberment of the fetus in the uterus. Some lost their jobs in states that had not yet adopted "conscience clauses" for nurses in hospitals that performed abortions.

There is now a new approach to second- and third-trimester abortions. It is D&X (Dilation and Extraction) and has led pro-lifers to use this development in an attempt to kill the Freedom of Choice Act. In American Medical News (a publication of the American Medical Association), reporter Diane Gianelli notes that "scores of calls from congressional staffers and others" have been received by the National Abortion Federation asking about the pro-lifers' brochures and ads illustrating D&X.

The anti-abortion forces had obtained a copy of a description of D&X at a National Abortion Federation seminar in Dallas last September. Dr. Martin Haskell, who has performed the procedure more than 700 times on patients from 20 to 24 weeks — and some up to 26 weeks — explained that he takes a large grasping forcep to grab hold of a "lower extremity" which he pulls into the vagina. Then, with his fingers, he removes the rest of the fetus except for the head. In most cases, the fetus is still alive.

At that point, according to the official report of the seminar, "the surgeon takes a pair of blunt curved Meizelbaum scissors" and "forces the scissors into the base of the skull," spreading it to enlarge the opening. With a suction catheter, he "evacuates the skull contents." The fetus is now dead, and the skull is small enough to join the rest of the fetus.

Dr. James McMahon of Los Angeles — one of the relatively few physicians who, so far, perform D&X — told American Medical News: "If I see a case ... after 20 weeks, where it frankly is a child to me, I really agonize over it because the potential is so imminently there. ..."

"On the other hand, I have another position which I think is superior in the hierarchy of questions, and that is: 'Who owns the child?' It's got to be the mother."

I reminded Jesse Jackson, a while ago, that when he was a spellbinding pro-lifer, he used to liken the claim of ownership of the unborn child to the slave-owning plantation owner who said he could do anything he liked with his property. Jackson did not deny having said that, but, looking uncomfortable, he said nothing more to me.

Anyway, say the pro-choicers, there are so few second-trimester abortions that all this fuss over D&X is a tactic to end all abortions.

That is true for the activists, but many onlookers wonder about the definition of "few." Diane Gianelli quotes the Guttmacher Institute as estimating that in 1988 — the last year for which figures are available — there were close to 168,000 second- and third-trimester abortions. Of these, according to Dr. Martin Haskell, probably 4,000 are done in the third trimester.

There is now a new approach to second and third trimester abortions.

Gay rights take big leap forward

The people of the United States have moved faster and further on gay rights than on any comparable social issue in the nation's history. Having done so, they are profoundly divided about the wisdom of their journey and ambivalent to negative about the wisdom of going much further.

Given both realities, it was no surprise that Bill Clinton produced considerably less than half a loaf on his campaign pledge to end all discrimination against homosexuals in the military. What is and was surprising was that he made the promise in the first place, was elected despite it and delivered as much as he finally did.

Opponents and proponents of unfettered military service for everyone regardless of sexual orientation are united in finding the president's decision unacceptable. For myself, while I think he should have gone further, I doubt that was ever a realistic political option in this democratic society. His new 11-point policy guideline, though muddled, is best understood as a small but significant step in an arduous process of change.

For anyone over the age of 35 or 40, it is the rate of change that has been so surprising, not the difficulty. Less than a half-century ago, homosexuality was considered so unspeakable that virtually no one dared admit to it. Outside the furtive, secret world they had to construct for themselves, gays and lesbians were invisible. Gay-bashing, physical as well as rhetorical, was not the condemned exception but the approved rule if anyone were unlucky enough to be caught out of the closet.

Underlying society's attitudes were religious precepts and profound sexual fear. On the latter point, males in particular (thought of homosexuality as learned behavior or a personal choice, and therefore dangerous in much the same way that an infectious disease is dangerous. On the former, Judeo-Christian teachings were straightforwardly opposed to sexual "deviation." They proscribed anything outside of heterosexuality and the missionary position, and endorsed both only after marriage.

Today, the picture is radically different. Religious Jews and Christians are split all over the lot, from strict rejection to tolerant acceptance. The Bible is quoted liberally by all sides. Science, too, has moved away from former certainties. Psychiatry no longer officially thinks of homosexuality as a form of mental disorder, to be treated and cured. Recent research lends impressive weight to the theory that gays and lesbians inherit their sexuality with their genes, rather than by choice or seduction.

Perhaps most importantly of all, the once-closeted "other" have shed their roles as victims. Gay pride and gay rights have become familiar phrases. Younger and more educated

Americans are less inclined to knee-jerk bigotry than people of my generation, but even some of us older folk have been forced to rethink our assumptions as relatives, old school friends or fellow workers have dropped their masks and declared themselves.

The military services, as deeply conservative as President Clinton described them and for largely understandable reasons, have not moved as far as the nation. Many military men believe homosexuality is incompatible with unit cohesion and morale.

And it undoubtedly would be if gays and lesbians who joined the military treated their fellow servicemen and women as fair game. But a point worth remembering is that these are people who have volunteered as individuals to serve their country — volunteered despite knowing how hostile the new environment would be to their sexuality. Only an idiot would leave the relative openness of the civilian world in hopes of easy sexual pickings in the military. A second important point is that countless individuals who are gay or lesbian have repeatedly proved what every study of the subject has confirmed. Sexual orientation has nothing to do with a person's military aptitude or performance.

The president's new doctrine places the burden almost entirely on behavior. There will be no more witch hunts for gays and lesbians. There will be no preliminary screening before a volunteer is accepted and no automatic assumption of forbidden behavior. Hypocrisy and lying will be the order of the day, which is shameful, but not half as shameful as overt repression and sexual purges.

All of which is not only more than the military command had been prepared to accept, it is also more than a majority of the American people seem willing to support. But something else needs to be added. Familiarity, rather than breeding contempt, has demonstrably led to greater understanding and acceptance. In every poll, those who actually know gays and lesbians are markedly more supportive of their rights than those who don't. If the chain of command enforces the new rules, that is the likely outcome in the armed forces as well.

Underlying society's attitudes were religious precepts and profound sexual fear.

Anti-NAFTA support grows in Congress

WASHINGTON — If Congress rejects the North American Free Trade Agreement this fall, the administration might point to scenes like the one that played out on the House floor one recent evening.

Most members and their staffs had already departed for the day, and the evening news had ended an hour earlier. Yet, there was Majority Whip David Bonior, D-Mich., a sworn enemy of the agreement and commander of the anti-NAFTA brigade, holding court on the House floor accompanied by a group largely composed of freshman Democrats.

"Mr. Speaker, you will have to excuse my exuberance here tonight. I am here once again to talk about this thing called NAFTA," Bonior began. Another evening in the House, another round of "spectral orders" by NAFTA opponents.

Bonior's trade continued for nearly one hour, interrupted at times by Rep.

Marcy Kaptur, D-Ohio, and freshman Rep. Sherrod Brown, D-Ohio, among others. Red faced and shouting, Bonior recited the litany of why free trade with Mexico would doom the United States: unfair labor and unionization policies; the implicit endorsement of a "repressive" Mexican regime; and gross disparities in pay between American and Mexican workers. He even dished out blame to the media for cheerleading for NAFTA.

If passion produces votes on Capitol Hill, Bonior proves it's time to administer last rites for NAFTA. Anti-NAFTA forces are running more on emotion than economics. Eruptions are daily occurrences, and they are beginning to make the White House and lawmakers like Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M., wince. While congressional supporters of NAFTA wait for the administration to conclude the "side agreements" on the environment and labor practices — the last trump card for wooing wavering Democrats — opponents are capitalizing on the downtime to their strategic advantage. A well-organized, grass-roots effort to win the hearts of their undecided colleagues is working.

NAFTA supporters are losing ground despite being better-financed. By some estimates, outside interests have spent $50 million to win approval for the pact, with much of the money coming from Mexico. Still, the issue is colored by Ross Perot, and the "great sucking sound" of jobs moving south of the border. It's an argument Richardson calls "demagogic."

"The other side is definitely better organized," concedes Richardson, himself a deputy whip, who introduced the first free-trade initiative with Mexico as a freshman lawmaker in the early 1980s. "We have to have a product to sell, and it makes no sense to mount a campaign without a final product."

Though people "laughed" at Richardson's free-trade overtures at first, he has watched the issue gather momentum over the years, culminating in the granting of fast-track authority for the Bush administration to negotiate a treaty. By the time the Republican Convention rolled around last summer, Bush was touting NAFTA as one of the pinnacles of his presidency. It might also prove to be Bush's revenge if Clinton can't rescue the agreement, which must be ratified by Dec. 31 or it will die.

Among Democrats, the fast-track vote in 1991 might have been high tide for NAFTA supporters. Democrats lent 93 votes to the narrow victory margin that allowed the Bush administration to nail down the deal. But many of those Democrats are gone now, replaced by feisty freshmen, many of whom ran against the agreement last fall. When NAFTA comes down to the wire, the freshmen could become the mouse that roars.

Red-faced and shouting, Bonior recited the litany of why free trade with Mexico would doom the United States.

Bates bounces Dodgers on one-hitter

ALBUQUERQUE — Mitch Kahn and Chris Quivres combined to strike out Sunday's host Bates Team Sports in a 2-1 win over the Alamogordo Springs Dodgers in the Florida Amateur Baseball Association regional tournament at Apopka High School's Jay Barnes Field.

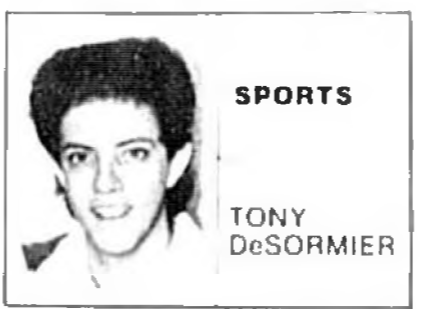

Table with 3 columns: Team, W, L, Pct. Rows include Altamonte Springs, Bates Team Sports, and other teams.

What are city's plans for newest acquisition?

The City of Sanford, reclaiming Sanford Memorial Stadium, provokes the same response as that of a man grabbing a tiger by the tail. Now that you've got it, what are you going to do with it?

In the past, the School Board supposedly wanted to level the stadium, which hides Hamilton, a beautiful structure from view. But since the building housing the School Board's offices has been determined to be 'sick' that may no longer be a priority.

Hamilton Elementary School remains a cold, hard fact that the city probably will be forced to decide its fate on dollars and cents criteria.

Weight gain should be investigated

DEAR DR. GOTT: My wife gained 52 pounds in five months, with no change in eating habits. She is 39 and has to wear maternity clothes to cover her hard stomach. She's had a myriad of tests including CT scan, pregnancy, ultrasound, pelvic probe, blood and liver function. She's now on tranquilizers for depression and anxiety over this unsolved, undiagnosed condition. Her next referral is to a nutritionist. Is this a logical next step?

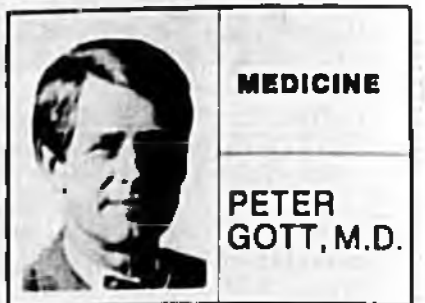

DEAR READER: Weight gain and increasing abdominal girth may, as you'd suspect, be caused by pregnancy or overeating. These symptoms can also be caused by abdominal tumors. Therefore, I was relieved to see that your wife's doctor had performed the appropriate tests to investigate this possibility.

Nonetheless, one serious condition may elude even the most meticulous examiner: cancer of the ovary. This highly malignant growth can "seed" the lining of the abdominal cavity, causing increasing girth. Before it becomes evident on the CT scan. Consequently, your wife should consider laparoscopy, a technique in which a surgeon or gynecologist examines her abdominal cavity with a lighted tube.

I don't mean to alarm you -- and I hope that your wife's problem is, as her doctor has concluded, merely a question of too many calories. Nevertheless, 52 pounds is a lot to gain without changing one's eating habits.

Also, I'm concerned about her "hard stomach," which could reflect ascites, the accumulation of excess fluid in the abdomen. In my view, you'll lose nothing by having your wife examined by a gynecologist. Such a specialist should be able to offer more helpful advice than a nutritionist. In the event that I'm off track and your wife ends up with a nutritionist, I am sending you free copies of my Health Reports "Winning the Battle of the Bulge" and "Weight Control Through Calorie Control."

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

If you would like to mix a vacation with bridge, think about going overseas. One of the most popular tournaments is held in Tel Aviv every February. Today's deal won this year's prize for the best-defended hand.

The deal occurred during the Open Teams and featured the Israeli international player Eliakim Shaufel (West) and the American professional Michael Polowan (East).

The bidding wasn't by the book. Polowan's one-spade overall was very thin; he was trading on the favorable vulnerability. South's jump to three no-trump was an overbid.

Shaufel, holding nine points, knew East had made a light overall. And judging that South was ready for a spade attack, Shaufel led his fourth-highest diamond.

Declarer decided to retain his options in the suit by calling for dummy's ace. Polowan smoothly unblocked the king.

South played on clubs, West winning the third round. Realizing that if declarer had the diamond 10 he would have played low from the dummy at trick one, Shaufel continued with the diamond jack. Now the defenders couldn't be stopped from winning six tricks: three aces and three diamonds.

If East doesn't make the spectacular unblock at trick one, declarer still has a view to take when West leads a second diamond. But why give declarer a chance to get it right?

Also, if West had continued with a low diamond at trick five, declarer would have ducked the trick to East's 10 and made his game.

It was a very pretty defense, fully deserving the award.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Tuesday, Aug. 3, 1993

Your skills and talents for being able to manage or being able to supervise things for others may be utilized extensively in the year ahead. Personal gains could result through persons you help.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Turn about is fair play. Today you might have an opportunity to do something nice for a friend who has frequently assisted you. Make an effort to even the score. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You might get what you want today, but it could carry a rather hefty price tag. Don't fulfill your ambitious expectations at the cost of another.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Put your best foot forward today if you have an opportunity to make new social contacts within a rather influential group. These will be people who can do what they say they can do.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Conditions are favorable today for resolving an old, serious family problem. Get everyone together and keep at it until matters are cleared up.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Think carefully before speaking today. There is a possibility you might express yourself in a manner others will find offensive and then not be able to convince them it wasn't intended.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Use your common sense regarding the management of your resources today. If you hope to acquire something big, base your ability to do so upon what you have, not what you hope to get.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't be discouraged today if something important isn't achieved on the first try. Fire and fall back to regroup your forces and try again. Repeat this procedure until victorious.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Upon occasion you sometimes get emotional and worry over things that may never happen. Don't let these thought patterns dominate your life today.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Until a misunderstanding with a friend is totally resolved, it might be best not to confide in him/her at this time. Ammunition to use against you could be an irresistible temptation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your ability to achieve your objectives could be impaired today owing to both self-created obstacles and opposition from others. Don't be too demanding of yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You might have a touchy situation with which to contend today similar to one that caused you discomfort in the past. Don't make the same mistakes twice.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Business or financial matters should not be treated indifferently today. Be cautious and prudent, and make sure all of your moves are founded upon logical assumptions. (C)1993, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.
