Near death 'miracle'

Parents speak of son beaten, stuffed in car trunk

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Their faith in Jesus Christ and the support of friends and strangers has helped Jim and Eve Chandler pull through the ordeal that began on July 17 when their son Philip was found badly beaten, comatose and suffering from hyperthermia and hyposensitivity after he had been kidnapped and driven in the trunk of his car for several hours.

"It's been rough, but with the support of the community and our faith in Jesus Christ we've been able to pull through so far."

They said they have been praying for Philip's full recovery and believe his recovery to this point is nothing short of a "miracle."

Dr. Kevin Scanlon, a pulmonologist who represented the medical team that is working with Chandler at HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford, agreed that nothing else could explain his recovery so far.

Sanford business owner Bill St. John explains why he opposes President Clinton's deficit-reduction package which the Senate will vote on today. Retired Navy veteran David McFadden, right, also opposes the plan.

Plan to reduce the deficit

Leery local residents ask just what does it all mean?

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — City residents surveyed this morning turned a collective thumbs down on President Bill Clinton's deficit-reduction plan which was narrowly passed by the House and faces another close vote in the Senate.

Small business owner Bill St. John says the plan "will cost me a bunch of money" in his Sanford-based construction business. St. John and Son Electric Corporation. The company builds houses and does commercial, industrial and residential electrical work throughout Central Florida.

"The taxes on gas is going to cost us a lot of money," St. John said, "which basically means I'll have to go up somewhat on bids for jobs we do. If corporation taxes goes up too...there are so many hidden taxes in there that nobody knows about, it will hurt us. You can't name them all. The bill's that thick," he said, holding his hand several inches off the table.

The budget bill is about 1,800 pages.

St. John said he questions whether small businesses will really be a winner under the plan, as supporters claim, if they have to borrow money to invest in new equipment in order to get tax credits. Under the plan, small businesses could deduct $17,500 of the cost of new equipment, up from $10,000 now. Investors who put their money into small business stocks and leave it for five years would receive a 50 percent cut in the capital gains tax they owe.

St. John contacted U.S. Senator Bob Graham's office expressing his opposition to the tax plan.

Basketball court concerns bounced off commissioners

By NICK PFEIFAU

LAKE MARY — Basketball court noise and night lighting continue to upset Lake Mary residents who Thursday were still presenting complaints to commissioners.

Several months ago, in response to nearby resident complaints, the city began consideration of either closing or moving a double basketball court, located at the corner of Lake Mary Avenue and Country Club Road. Although the courts were located in an area designated as a city park, citizens objected to shouting and profanity on the part of the participants, especially in the late night hours.

As a result, the city established strict rules and See Courts, Page 5A

English-only ordinance repeal upheld

MIAMI — A Dade County Judge upheld The Metro Dade Commission's repeal of a 1980 English-only ordinance. Circuit Judge Peter Capua issued the ruling Thursday in response to a lawsuit by Anthony Martin, a Republican candidate for governor from Palm Beach.

The law passed after the 1980 Mariel boatlift was repealed in May by the Dade commission. Blacks and Hispanics gained a majority on the 13-member commission after a federal judge ordered an electoral overhaul providing district representation. Murray Greenburg, an assistant county attorney who argued the case on behalf of Dade County said the lawsuit had not interrupted the process of producing county documents in several languages, but could have caused problems if it had been successful.

The ordinance, adopted by referendum, barred the county from "utilizing any language other than English, or promoting any culture other than that of the United States."

Cause of death still unknown

COCOA BEACH — An autopsy has failed to reveal the cause of the death of a teen-ager who died following a beachside parking lot assault by other youths.

But Medical Examiner Dennis Wickham said Thursday further tests were scheduled on the body of Jason M. Downs, 18.

Downs, who recently moved into an apartment with two friends from his hometown of Pennsville, N.J., died after 10 youths attacked a parked car containing Downs and his two friends late Tuesday, said detective Steve Patterson.

The three exchanged words with the youths in two other cars, who became angry and began beating on the parked car. The driver, Eric Moore, 19, was punched in the face. The window on the passenger side of the car was smashed.

After the incident was over and the other youths drove away, Moore and the third teen, Jason Swiderski, 18, noticed that Downs was unconscious and called police.

Downs died later that night at Cape Canaveral Hospital.

Floridians concerned about travel safety

ORLANDO — Floridians are expressing concerns about vacation-travel safety this summer, and they are spending less money than last year on their trips, travel agents say.

Agents and travel counselors responding to an American Automobile Association summer travel survey found more than 71 percent of Floridians taking vacations plan to travel outside the state.

But about 24 percent of their customers have expressed concerns about safety when traveling.

Respondents from 15 AAA travel agencies in Florida cities said they had seen a 16 percent increase in travel this summer over last, with the big part of the increase coming from families taking auto trips.

Most popular travel destinations are the Orlando area; Branson, Mo.; the Grand Canyon and other national parks; California and the Smoky Mountains, the survey found.

Murder charges dropped

JACKSONVILLE — Prosecutors dropped a murder charge police filed against a 15-year-old Jacksonville youth arrested after his brother was fatally wounded by police.

Mandel Rhodes had been charged under a Florida law that allows murder charges to be filed against someone committing a felony if another person dies during the crime.

But State Attorney Harry Shorstein said Wednesday that a charge against Rhodes was "inappropriate and overreaching." Rhodes' 19-year-old brother, Chauntele, was killed July 26 during a struggle with police who had come to the family's apartment to arrest Mandel on a warrant.

The younger Rhodes is still charged with battery on a law officer, but Shorstein said the case would be handled in juvenile court.

Their mother, Sandra Jean Rhodes, 36, faces a misdemeanor charge of resisting and opposing police during the altercation.

Vagrant finds baby in crack house

MIAMI — A man looking for scrap aluminum in a crack house here found an abandoned baby, police said.

The baby boy was found Thursday in an empty box with his umbilical cord, and was rushed to Parkway Regional Medical Center, where he was in good condition, said Metro-Dade police spokeswoman Jo Ann Norris.

She said investigators have no clues as to the identity of the mother. They believe the baby was born in the 24 hours before he was found.

Police got the call on the baby just before 2 p.m., said Norris. "A vagrant was rummaging through a crack house when he came across the newborn baby in a box," she said.

He ran out to a police aide's car parked in the neighborhood, and the aide called police and paramedics.

The abandoned north Dade County home where the baby was found has the words "crack house" painted on its front.

Blue Cross to pay settlement

By The Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE — Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Florida Inc. and the federal government have reached a settlement in which the company will pay $10 million to settle a lawsuit the company mishandled Medicare claims.

In agreeing to the settlement announced Thursday, Blue Cross and Blue Shield did not acknowledge any liability, said Bruce Bagni, the insurance company's general counsel.

The settlement was announced by Assistant Attorney General Frank W. Hunger, in charge of the U.S. Justice Department's Civil Division in Washington, D.C., and U.S. Attorney Douglas N. Frazier of Tampa.

It will require the approval of the U.S. District Court in Jacksonville, where the original suit was filed.

"The settlement is the first of its kind against a Medicare claims administrator and

The settlement is the first of its kind and represents a substantial victory in our efforts to fight abuse in the Medicare program.

Assistant Attorney General Frank W. Hunger represents a substantial victory in our efforts to fight abuse in the Medicare program and to keep health care costs under control," Hunger said.

The company was pleased by the government's decision not to file any charges.

"We cooperated fully with the investigation knowing that a complete review of the facts would lead to this favorable result," he said.

In the suit, the government alleged in 1988 Florida Blue Cross awarded a new Medicare Part B claims-processing sub-contract to GTE Data Services Inc. and switched over to a new claims processing computer. The new computer was installed in December 1988.

Part B claims are payments for Medicare outpatient equipment and services such as a physician's office visits or the use of durable medical equipment by a Medicare beneficiary.

The government alleged the deficiencies in the GTE computer created a backlog of Medicare Part B claims payments beginning in early 1989. The government claimed Blue Cross bypassed computer audits, created false prescriptions and paid duplicate claims to Medicare Part B providers to try to reduce the backlog. The actions resulted in increased costs in the administration of the Medicare program in Florida.

Confederate flag to be removed from county seal

By The Associated Press

TAMPA — Arguments about rewriting history and denying Southern heritage failed to sway Hillsborough County commissioners who have voted to remove the Confederate battle flag from the county's seal.

"Don't tell me about rewriting history," responded Commissioner Sylvia Kimbell, the panel's only black member. "It is a function of who is doing the writing."

After a debate Wednesday, commissioners voted 4-2 to remove the flag that blacks see as a symbol of slavery and racism. The seal appears on county stationery, vehicles and property.

The panel asked Hillsborough Historical Commission to redesign the seal to better reflect the current character of the community.

Blacks have been trying to get the battle flag — red with white stars in a blue X — removed since the seal was adopted in 1965, but commissioners refused when the issue came up in 1979 and 1986.

The panel acted Wednesday after the issue was raised by a single white Tampa resident, freelance writer Richard Klos. He asked the flag be removed because it was "a poke in the eye of the black community."

Klos said he was inspired by the successful effort last month of Sen. Carol Moseley-Braun, D-Ill., to reject a federal patent renewal for the Daughters of the Confederacy. The patent included an earlier Confederate flag known as the Stars and Bars — red and white stripes with seven stars on a blue field in an upper corner.

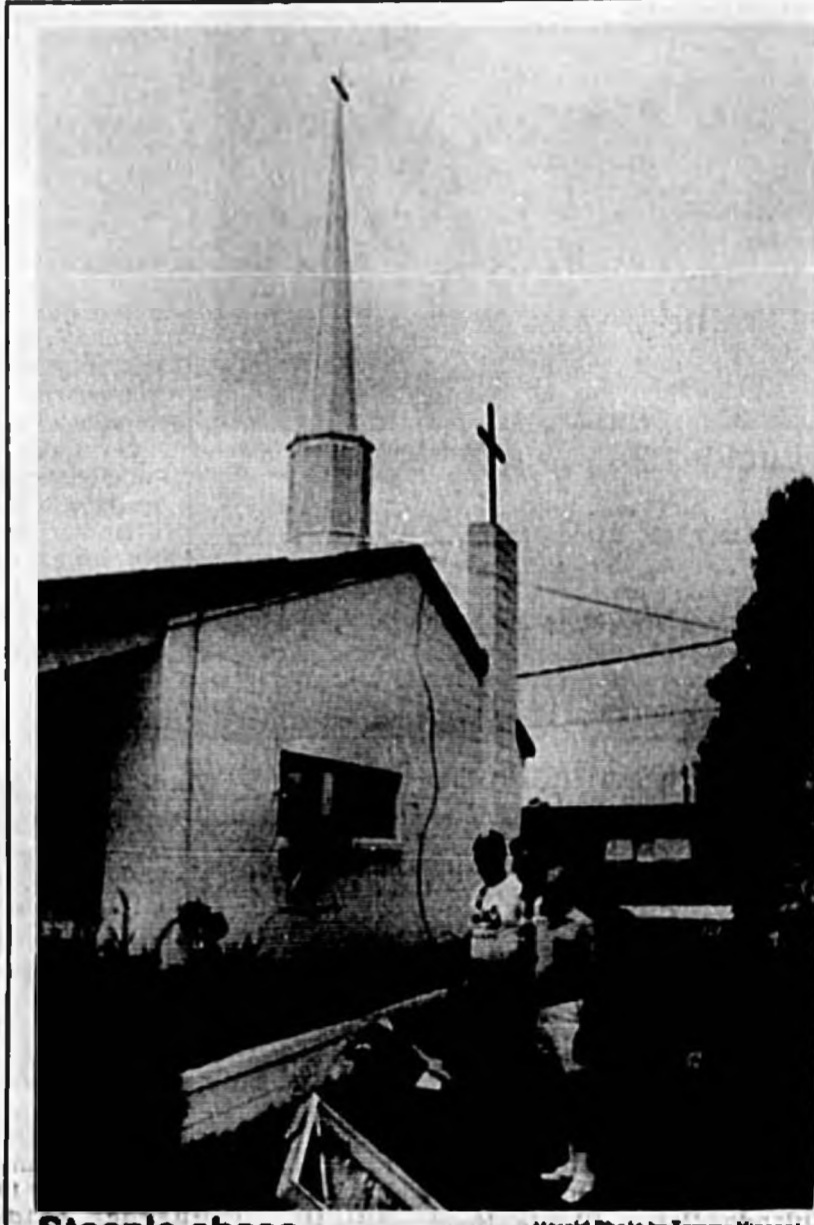

Commissioners Jan Platt and Lydia Miller voted against removing the battle flag, also known as the Southern Cross. Commissioner Jim Norman was absent.

"Instead of ethnic cleansing in this county, it's historic cleansing," Platt said. "Like it or not, Hillsborough County was part of the Confederacy."

But Commission Chairman Ed Turanchik said the seal was more about the image Hillsborough wants to present than a depiction of its history.

The Confederate flag has long been a source of controversy in the South.

Earlier this year, Gov. Jim Folsom agreed not to restore the battle flag after a court ordered it taken down from atop the Alabama Capitol. But Gov. Zell Miller abandoned his fight to have the banner removed from Georgia's state flag after the politically divisive issue dominated his state's legislature.

Kimberly: 'I want them out of my life'

By JAMES MARTINEZ
Associated Press Writer

SARASOTA — In a calm, confident tone, Kimberly Mays told a judge exactly what she thinks of the biological parents who have pursued her ever since a hospital baby swap came to light five years ago.

"I don't want anything to do with them," she said. "I want them out of my life. I want my life back."

On the stand for an hour Thursday, the blond, bespectacled 14-year-old stated her case with a poise that belied her age. Her nerves showed only when asked to recall the day she learned she was switched at birth.

"My dad sat me down outside on the porch ... and he said these people say I was their biological daughter," Kimberly said. "I started crying and I said, 'Daddy, don't let them take me away.'"

At that point, she bowed her head into her hands and wept.

As some spectators in the packed courtroom quietly sniffled along with her, the man who raised Kimberly since birth, Robert Mays, turned in his chair and looked for some reaction from the blood parents who are seeking to be a part of the girl's life.

Ernest and Regina Twigg sat stone-faced and held hands.

Kimberly's testimony capped the fourth day of a trial in which the ninth-grader is seeking to cut all ties to the Twiggs and preserve her life with Mays, the man she has lived with since the 1978 baby swap at a rural Florida hospital.

Circuit Judge Stephen Dakan has said he will hear all the evidence, which continues today with the testimony of two psychologists, and take a few days to decide whether to grant Kimberly's wish or allow the Twigg's visitation.

Through much of Kimberly's testimony, she spoke of a "loving, nurturing and caring" relationship she has with the people she calls father and mother — Mays and his current wife Darlena.

And she said she wouldn't even consider being friends with the Twiggs.

What pushed her over the edge, Kimberly said, was Mrs. Twigg's cooperation with the author of a book

Rape shield ruling probably won't cause change

By CURT ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — A top Florida news executive said an appeals court's decision striking a law barring public disclosure of rape victims' names probably won't result in major changes in most newsrooms.

Pete Weitzel, senior managing editor of The Miami Herald and president of the Florida First Amendment Foundation, said news organizations generally have no reason to disclose a rape victim's name.

"It has always been such a scarlet-letter kind of thing. Most newspapers have opted to follow a policy of not naming rape victims," he said Thursday. "What would change policy is a change in public perceptions about the naming of rape victims."

The 4th District Court of Appeal of West Palm Beach issued its ruling Wednesday in a case in which The Globe, a supermarket tabloid, was charged with two misdemeanors for publishing Patricia Bowman's name shortly after she accused William Kennedy Smith of rape in 1991.

Smith, nephew of Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, was acquitted after a sensational trial televised live around the country. Bowman's identity was hidden by a large blue dot when she testified, and many news organizations did not use her name until she decided to go public with her story.

The Globe was not alone in disclosing her name early, however: The New York Times and NBC-TV both did, yet former State Attorney David Bludworth brought charges against only the Boca Raton-based Globe.

The appellate court judges agreed with a lower court's ruling that the 82-year-old law — one of a handful in the country — violates the First Amendment's free speech protections.

"It imparts criminal punishment automatically, even to truthful information, lawfully obtained about a matter of public concern, without any discrete determination of whether the prohibition on publication is justified," they wrote.

The judges based their ruling on a 1989 U.S. Supreme Court case involving The Florida Star, a Jacksonville-based weekly. The Supreme Court threw out a $100,000 libel case against The Star that had been based on the Florida rape shield law, but the law was left intact.

Unless reversed on appeal, the 4th DCA decision is in effect statewide. Assistant Attorney General Richard Doran said the state planned to ask for a rehearing and may seek review by the state Supreme Court.

"We're still a long way from making a decision on that," he said.

Lynn Rosenthal, executive director of the Refuge House battered women and rape crisis center in Tallahassee, said the ruling could discourage rape victims from reporting the crime.

"Rape is a far different crime from any other. The private lives of the victims become so exposed, and that's difficult for our society to deal with," she said. "We believe the price of identifying rape victims is far too high."

Rosenthal said publicity is the very reason rape victims are often afraid to come forward.

"The defense strategy is usually to prove consent, and they try to bring up the woman's past," she said.

The judges said they heard no evidence that rape victims would fail to come forward, that disclosure of the names violated their privacy or that their safety would be jeopardized.

Editor's note: The Sanford Herald will maintain the policy that rape victims' names are not disclosed in news accounts.

Proposed gun ranges upset officials

By The Associated Press

ORLANDO — The city of Mickey Mouse and an image of family fun is having trouble with two proposed gun ranges that may open along the city's hotel-studded International Drive.

"I have a grave concern," Orlando Mayor Glenda Hood said. "I don't think gun ranges and high-tourist areas mix."

Hotellers, reeling from a spate of highly publicized crimes against tourists, strongly oppose shooting galleries opening anywhere near International Drive, said Cheryl Taubensee, director of the Central Florida Hotel and Motel Association.

"We do not believe it is the right image for our community...it's just not the right place to put it," Taubensee said. "Tourists are not going to come where there are guns (to rent) for practice. ... They come for the family atmosphere."

The proposals will be discussed by council members a little more than two weeks after several British tourists, including the widow of a postal worker killed in a motel parking lot, filed a string of lawsuits in Orange and Osceola circuit courts, claiming they weren't protected from crime during their Orlando vacations.

The attacks were part of a spate of tourist-related crimes that led London tabloid newspapers to label Florida a "State of Terror."

City officials may be powerless to stop the proposed businesses.

Sanford needs a convention center

Previous editorials have voiced objections about North Seminole County projects being moved to Orlando. There is one case however, where it cannot be avoided.

Sanford's lack of adequate convention facilities is forcing organizations to hold gatherings in the Orlando area or not hold them at all.

The Lake Mary Chamber of Commerce is moving its Fantasy Night to Orlando Hilton North in Altamonte Springs.

The Central Florida Zoological Park held its "Black Tie on the Wild Side" event at Disney World's Dolphin Hotel.

Area city and county government officials, members of various state organizations, refrain from asking that their annual conventions be held locally due to a lack of sufficient facilities. Such conventions often attract several thousand participants for several days at a time.

Sanford has several excellent motels. It also has a Civic Center. But they cannot be compared to the benefits of having a convention center. Large groups want access to several meeting rooms, areas where displays can be set up, and nearby rooms and suites for overnight occupancy.

Last year, Sanford City Commissioner Bob Thomas suggested Sanford would prosper if it could obtain a top-quality convention center. The idea apparently fell on deaf ears as no one has come forward to echo his concept.

Major conventions would bring thousands of people to Sanford. Not only would they spend several nights, they would also purchase their food, enjoy the scenic amenities, and do some shopping.

Such an event would be a great financial help for the entire city and northern Seminole County.

Suggestions have been made that there will be some type of convention facility but not in the downtown area, where the economy could use a boost. It will be west of the city near the planned Seminole Towne Center Mall.

There is excellent property available, including choice areas along the lakefront. Some of the property is owned by the city and would serve better if put back on the tax rolls.

It's unfortunate that no such facility has been attracted to this area.

If Sanford could obtain a convention facility larger than a bread box, it could start making some dough.

LETTERS

Keep writing

I thank the person who in a letter (with name withheld upon request) in the July 29 edition of the Herald had some kind words to say about my Sunday columns.

I noted they resented my frequent letters to the editor. I'm delighted they did and that they wrote their "first" letter to the editor. He or she didn't know a little secret. My frequent letters were in hopes letters from other readers would be generated. And they have been. By my calculations, the Herald has published more letters to the editor in the last six weeks than in the previous six months.

For some reason folks in Sanford have been notorious ever since I first joined the newspaper back in 1935 for not expressing opinions by writing letters to the editor. We hope this attitude now has been reversed and the paper will hear from many more of you readers.

Also, I want to thank the writer for his or her suggestions for generating more responses expressing views on local questions. I hope the Herald will follow them.

Let me ask one more question for reader response. There has been talk about the county and the school board merging some of its purchasing departments to save dollars. But it has been reported the two governmental agencies would have to buy land and build some new buildings. My suggestion would be for the school board to buy the old First Federal building downtown for its main headquarters and use some of the space that would be vacated at Thirteenth and Mellonville for the merged departments. This would help "downtown" and save buying new property and building new buildings.

I would like to know what folks think of this idea. Remember, at one time the school board was seriously considering the purchase of the old NCR building in Lake Mary and spending a small fortune on renovating it.

P.S. Since we're writing today about the future it would not "fit" in my "Way Back When" which deals with the past.

Letters to the editor are welcome. All letters must be signed, include the address of the writer and a daytime telephone number. Letters should be on a single subject and be as brief as possible. The letters are subject to editing.

Party unity is good for democracy

With his impishly sardonic partisanship, the U.S. Senate's Republican leader is making his Democratic adversary in the White House a more effective politician and, paradoxically, moving this nation closer to "responsible party government."

If that sounds like a political oxymoron, consider what Senate leader Robert Dole has accomplished in only six months of Bill Clinton's presidency.

The Dole-led Republicans have forced Clinton to bargain for their votes in order to get some of his more cherished legislation passed.

Because this is the first time in 12 years that they haven't controlled the White House, Dole's partisanship has unified Republicans more than ever.

With the Republicans' desperate resort to the filibuster, Dole's "tyranny of the minority" has been imposed on the American people.

This rock-solid Republican unity has triggered a counter-reaction from Democrats, who are gleefully disproving this observation from late 19th-century wit Mr. Dooley: "The dimocratic party ain't on speaking terms with itself."

This time, they are. According to an analysis by the Congressional Quarterly, congressional Democrats have not been as unified as they are now since Franklin D. Roosevelt's presidency.

In the first six months of Clinton's presidency, Democrats have hewed to the party line 90 percent of the time when the Democratic leadership has called for a party-unity vote.

Dual-party unity is good for both parties. If you're a Democrat or a Republican, either you vote with your party or do what South Carolina's Strom Thurmond and Texas' Phil Gramm did — cross over the bridge. Thurmond enjoyed political transvestism so much, he did it twice — from Democrat to Dixiecrat to Republican.

Consider what Senate leader Robert Dole has accomplished in only six months of Bill Clinton's presidency.

A political party has a right to demand party loyalty if a member is going to enjoy the political spoils — such as seniority and committee perks — that come with it.

Enforced party loyalty is also the first step toward responsible party government, a system that requires that if your party is in power, you vote with it or it strips you of your seniority. A moral consistency is operative here. As a member of Congress, you should not be allowed the luxury of voting against your party — especially on a party-unity vote — and then expect your party to treat you as a member in good standing.

In a responsible party government, the party that wins the majority of the national vote organizes the government.

In Britain, the party out of power is known as Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition. In America, they're called Republicans.

Right now, we have "responsible party government by accident" because the same party accidentally controls both houses of Congress AND the presidency. Intentional parliamentary government is democracy's fairest and most efficient expression.

Fleet grounded in mismanagement

WASHINGTON — The "Historic Aircraft Exchange Program" has a nice ring to it, but government investigators believe it operates more as a "cash-for-trash" enterprise — with taxpayers on the losing end.

A House Agriculture subcommittee headed by Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C., will examine in hearings this week how the Forest Service swapped $67 million worth of surplus federal aircraft for a fleet of ancient planes worth less than $1 million.

The deal dates back to the late 1980s, when a fleet of fire-fighting aircraft owned by Forest Service contractors began to show its age. To upgrade the quality of the fleet, the Forest Service established the Historic Aircraft Exchange Program. Under the program, the Forest Service transferred ownership of some surplus C-130 and P-3 military aircraft to contractors in exchange for the contractors' old aircraft, which would be placed in federal museums.

Between 1988 and 1991, the Forest Service gave 28 surplus military planes to the contractors and received the same number of private planes in exchange. But the dizzying deal was flawed in two respects: The aircraft the Forest Service received proved to be of little or no historical value — some were even rejected by government museums. And some of the planes the government handed over to fight fires were instead cannibalized for parts and a quick profit, defeating the purpose of the swap.

A 1992 Agriculture Department inspector general report cited the case of a contractor who earned $925,000 using surplus Forest Service planes to haul cargo in the Middle East. Later, he tried selling some of these planes to a Mexican company. The report found that nine planes had been stripped of their parts, which in some instances were sold for profit. One contractor used this method to collect $252,000.

As a fee for putting the swap together for the contractors, the man who brokered the deal ended up with four of the surplus aircraft and $97,000. He then earned more than $1 million selling the planes, according to the IG report.

All this was made possible by a federal government that allows its civilian aircraft to operate virtually free of oversight. A recent report by Sen. Jim Sasser's, D-Tenn., subcommittee on General Services, Federalism and the District of Columbia found that mismanagement is so pervasive that the government may be wasting more than $100 million per year on its civil aviation fleet.

Sasser's investigation was launched in the wake of the "Air Sununu" scandal, in which former White House Chief of Staff John Sununu and other top Bush administration officials were found to be using government aircraft for their personal travel. Besides bringing public scorn on the perks and privileges bestowed on the executive branch, the episode also helped focus the congressional spotlight on the troubled state of the government's air fleet.

If the private sector adopted the government's habits, commercial airliners would surely be grounded. According to Sasser's report, federal pilots aren't even required to have a license to fly, nor are their planes required to undergo routine safety inspections. When a government aircraft has an accident, it does not have to be reported, nor does it require investigation by the National Transportation Safety Board, both of which are required of privately owned aircraft. Still, taxpayers spent about $1.5 billion last year to keep the executive branch flying.

It operates more as a "cash for trash" enterprise, with taxpayers on the losing end.

ROBERT WAGMAN

Death of Clinton friend baffling

WASHINGTON — In a town where conspiracy theories abound, the mysterious suicide of White House Deputy Counsel Vince Foster Jr. in Fort Marcy Park overlooking the Potomac has ignited as much speculation as any event in recent years.

Lurid rumors are everywhere as people try to make sense of what appears to be a senseless act. But none of the dark theories seem to hold water, and the mystery only deepens.

Although Foster was not well-known to the public, insiders knew he was at the very center of power in the Clinton administration. He and other former members of the Rose law firm in Little Rock, Ark. — Hillary Rodham Clinton, Associate Attorney General Webster L. Hubbell and William Kennedy III, also of the counsel's office — formed a powerful back channel at the very center of power.

More than that, Foster may have been the person in the White House closest to both the president and his wife. A boyhood friend of Bill Clinton's from Hope, he was effectively Ms. Clinton's chief counsel and closest confidant.

Rightly or wrongly, it was Foster who accepted much of the blame for the failed nominations of Zoe E. Baird as attorney general and Lani Guinier as assistant attorney general, the White House Travel Office firings, the rocky Supreme Court nominee selection process, and the attempt to keep the proceedings of Ms. Clinton's health-care task force private.

Vince Foster was a brilliant lawyer with an unblemished history of accomplishment. Before coming to Washington, he was considered the best lawyer at the best law firm. His clients were the blue-chips of Arkansas: Wal-Mart, the nation's largest and most prosperous retailer and its billionaire owner, the late Sam Walton; the Stephens family investment banking firm; and Tyson Foods, the nation's largest poultry company.

By all accounts, Foster had enjoyed a career absolutely free of criticism. In Arkansas he was universally acclaimed as the best and the brightest. But once he arrived in Washington, the perception — at least outside the White House — was that he stumbled constantly.

It was said about Vince Foster that he was one of the so-called "Arkansas-mafia" Clinton brought with him to the White House, and that he was a minor-league all-star in over his head in the big leagues.

Most around the White House seem to believe that, somehow, all this overwhelmed Foster and that something in him snapped. Those closest to him seem to believe, as the president has said, "I don't think any of us will ever know why his life ended as it did."

But in the aftermath of the tragedy two things do stand out.

The White House seems to be trying almost too hard to portray Foster as a depressive who went out of control and over the edge. In hindsight, everyone seems to have a tale of the stress that Foster was exhibiting and how many people, especially his wife and the president, were concerned about his state of mental health.

In the days following his funeral, any number have compared him to John Wilson, the chairman of the District of Columbia Council who also took his own life recently. But there are flaws in this comparison.

John Wilson had a long history of depressive behavior, more than one previous failed suicide attempt and clear, deep personal problems that finally overwhelmed him. Vince Foster had never before exhibited any signs of clinical depression, had never sought or been treated for depression, and no one seems able to pin point any kind of triggering event that normally is present when someone with a depressive illness takes his own life.

Finally, the absolute mystery here is why Vince Foster would take his own life without leaving any kind of explanation.

Above all, Foster was said to be the most meticulous of men, with almost an obsession for detail. How is it possible, his friends ask over and over, that Vince could have done this without saying why.

As one longtime Arkansas friend now in the White House said, "I am resigned to accepting the fact that something just gave out in Vince and that he succumbed to the belief that his only available response was to take his own life. I may not understand it, but I am resigned to it."

"But what I cannot understand, and what I will never be able to accept, is that Vince would do such a thing without leaving an explanation. If taking his own life seems totally out of character for him, doing so without leaving a note is just incomprehensible if you knew Vince Foster."

Lurid rumors are everywhere as people try to make sense of what appears to be a senseless act.

Tax

"I hope it doesn't pass," he said. As partial solution to the deficit, St. John said the government should take another look at its "giveaway programs" to cities, counties and towns which sometimes result in local government raising taxes to come up with matching funds to get the federal money. He cited the $18 million Orlando Science Center as an example where local funds are required to match federal money. "That project could have been put off for a couple of years," St. John commented.

Retired Navy man David McFadden said he is unclear how the plan will impact his life, but he opposes it.

"I do know this country was founded on a tax revolution and all I see is tax, tax, tax," he commented. "and I'm surprised the American people haven't revolted already on taxes. If we have one, I'd like to be one of the generals."

McFadden said he worries about the Clinton military cutbacks and added that in the plan being voted on in Congress there appears to be a penalty placed on a man who works hard and makes a lot of money. He also voiced his opposition to the plan through the Fleet Reserve and to his congressmen.

"I don't mind taxes to pay the police and fire, they are very necessary taxes," McFadden said, "but when the federal government gets their hand in, it's a catastrophe."

Bessie Mann and Helen Mitchell also expressed opposition to the plan over breakfast and coffee at a downtown restaurant. Both retirees, the women said they have followed some of the discussions on television.

"I don't know if it will affect my Social Security," Mann said, "but it will affect my young uns because they're working and paying taxes."

"I'm not for the plan, I'm not even for him (Clinton) so how can I be for something he does? I didn't vote for him and I wouldn't vote for him again." She said it all. Mitchell said, "I agree with her whole heart-

What the plan says

Although the plan will not increase income tax unless taxable income exceeds $115,000 for individuals, $127,000 for heads of households or $140,000 for married couples filing jointly, a proposed hike of 4.3 cents a gallon on gasoline will be paid by all drivers. The Treasury Department estimates the average family would pay $3 more a month in gas tax.

The wealthiest 13 percent of Social Security recipients with incomes of more than $34,000 for a single beneficiary or $44,000 for couples would pay taxes on 85 percent of their benefits. At the present time, 50 percent is taxed.

Health care experts say small businesses and people with private insurance would get stuck with the bill for most of the $56 billion in Medicare cuts in Clinton's deficit-reduction plan.

The Medicare cuts — singled out to be the deepest in any federal program — were tailored to minimize the impact on the elderly, administration officials say. Most of the savings are supposed to come out of the pockets of hospitals and doctors.

But that's not the way it works, business and insurance executives say.

And because many big employers have clamped down on runaway health costs, the real losers could be small businesses and individuals who buy their own health insurance.

Hospitals already are losing money on Medicare patients.

Medicare rates covered just 88 percent of what hospitals spent treating Medicare patients in 1991, said Dr. Donald A. Young, executive director of the Prospective Payment Assessment Commission, a congressional advisory board.

The hospitals made it up by charging private insurers 130 percent of their costs, Young said.

The government will spend almost $1 trillion on Medicare over the next five years even with the proposed cutbacks. If Congress passes Clinton's plan, hospitals and doctors would get higher fees — but not as much as they would have — to treat the 31 million elderly and 4 million disabled workers.

Congress and the Reagan and Bush administrations have nibbled repeatedly at Medicare, but never by this much.

The bulk of the Medicare savings would come by reducing annual cost-of-living increases for physicians and hospitals.

The hospital increases would be trimmed by 2.5 percent in both 1994 and 1995, 2 percent in 1996 and 0.5 percent in 1997 to save almost $21 billion.

Some $4.4 billion would be shaved from increases in physicians' fees. Surgeons would have gotten a 12.2 percent increase from Medicare next year and other physicians 6.6 percent. The bill now before Congress would limit the raises to 8.6 percent for surgeons, 6.6 percent for primary care doctors and 4 percent for the rest.

Dr. James S. Todd, executive vice president of the American Medical Association, said some physicians with large numbers of Medicare patients may have to "stop taking new ones. They won't be able to make ends meet."

"How much of a Medicare discount can a physician absorb? Their costs are not being controlled," Todd said. "Salaries are going up and they have to pay for new equipment and supplies."

Medicare beneficiaries themselves would contribute $7.8 billion by continuing to pay monthly premiums covering 25 percent of the cost of their so-called Part B benefits for physicians' services. The rest comes out of general revenues.

Affluent retirees also would pay more income tax on Social Security benefits, while upper income workers would be hit with the 1.45 percent Medicare tax on all wages. The tax now cuts off at the $135,000 income level.

The bill also would save $1 billion by making it more difficult for families to shed assets to get Medicaid to pay their nursing home bills.

Rural and inner city hospitals will "take it on the chin" from the cuts, said Rick Wade, senior vice president of the American Hospital Association.

Information from the Associated Press is contained in this report.

Courts

regulations governing the use of the courts, and decided to relocate them to the new sports complex nearing completion west of Rantoul Lane.

During a July commission meeting, Parks and Recreation Director John Holland presented a plan to construct some new courts at the sports complex which he believed would alleviate the problems in the old courts in the downtown area.

Although previously scheduled in Phase II of the complex construction, Holland suggested the courts be added in the current Phase I, and be located just to the right of the entrance area, near Rantoul Lane.

During last night's city commission meeting, two residents who live near the area spoke on the proposal.

"I live directly across from the new sports complex," said Bruce

Burton. "I've read in the papers about problems with the fights and foul language used at the courts downtown. Now I'm wondering why you want to move them directly across Rantoul Lane from where we live?"

Mayor Lowry Rockett explained, "We are taking every step to avoid any problems. The city has already passed new rules and regulations covering the activities allowed at the courts, and we will have an adequate buffer zone between the courts and the residential area."

"By moving the courts to the sports complex," he added, "I believe the city will be able to maintain much better control over the problems."

"There is already activity at the sports complex," Burton responded. "So far, I have no problems with that, but the traffic is a growing concern, and the basketball courts will produce even more."

He added, "And the stop signs (near the entrance) on Shealey Road and Rantoul Lane are ineffective. No one uses them."

Holland reported that there would be approximately 150 feet of buffer area between the basketball court areas and the nearest residence. "There will also be a difference in elevation, and we'll have a large berm," he added. "Plans also call for a curfew to be in effect."

Mary Shelley, also a neighbor near the sports complex area, asked if there would be an age limit placed on the use of the basketball courts to be relocated. "I just drove past the courts downtown," she said, "and those weren't children, they were grown men playing and shouting at each other."

Litton explained that the sports complex was, in part, built with state grant money

"Because of that," he said, "we cannot restrict players by age. The city has no leeway. The sports complex is built as a benefit for all."

On another matter, Shelley asked Holland if a walking/exercise course might be added to the sports complex. Holland said it would be considered.

During last night's meeting, the commission authorized funds with which to construct the basketball courts. Originally, money was planned to be taken from funds designated for sidewalks.

"We will be taking it out of our parks impact fees now," Holland said this morning. "We will be bringing the site plan up for approval on the 24th of this month," he continued, "and we expect to start construction on the new courts immediately after that."

immediately west of Interstate 4. Residents of the area say they prefer stores or self-owned residences to transient-occupied apartments.

In Chuluota, near the southeast section of the county, George Vele proposes to build 390 homes on 227 acres in an area commissioners reserved for one-acre lots last year. Nearby residents say keep the lots to one acre.

The hearings on the two projects are required before commissioners submit the development proposals to the Florida Department of Community Affairs for state review. Commissioners may decide not to forward a proposal, although they do not formally approve the project until Dec. 14. Tuesday's hearing began at 6 p.m. in the County Services Building commission chambers.

Developers propose to build the Sweet Gum Lake apartment complex immediately north of Sweet Gum Lake, actually a borrow pit used to provide dirt to the construction of I-4. Land to the north and south are vacant. Lake Forest, a development where homes can cost $1 million or more, lies west of the site.

Of the 424 apartments, proposed to be built in two phases, 127 will be reserved for low-income families and 191 will be reserved for moderate-income families.

Residents of the area say they don't want transient residence in the area.

"We have said many times there is a need for affordable housing," said Jean Metts, who lives about a half-mile from the site. "What we would like to see is homeowners if they (developers) want to offer affordable housing. The most logical zoning is what it is now, commercial. It's located right at Interstate 4. We'd like to see professional buildings in there."

Sandra McKinney agreed with Metts. She raises thoroughbred horses on 92 acres southeast of the site. "We don't have a problem with commercial there. At least people are not there some times. Affordable housing isn't the problem. Transients are."

Carlton Edge, president of the Bookertown Community Improvement Association, said he has concerns Sweet Gum traffic may enter the development through Bookertown, which has narrow streets. He too, said he would personally prefer to see affordable owner housing or businesses rather than apartments. Edge said the association directors will consider the proposal this weekend.

Near Chuluota, developer George Vele has proposed a suburban housing development with densities of up to three homes per acre in the rural area. Last year, commissioners established Chuluota and downtown Geneva as the only locations in east Seminole County where a minimum of one-acre lots were allowed. Most of the eastern areas of the county allow minimum lots of three acres or larger.

Eighty-four residents have signed Vele's petition favoring the project. Much of the wording in the petition refers to the proposed Chuluota Bypass, not scheduled for construction until 1997.

Petition wording suggests "It may be possible to re-prioritize the chuluota by-pass and move it to the top of the construction list if a substantial portion of the necessary right-of-way could be donated to Seminole County."

County planner Tony Mathews said it is possible to move a road project up on the sales tax construction list, but only if four participating cities agree to have their projects be done later. County commissioners didn't ask the cities to move up the Silver Lake Drive extension to Sanford airport, considered a major economic necessity.

Another group of residents, primarily in the nearby Chuluota subdivision, are circulating their own petition opposing the density increase.

Bosnians make promise to lift siege of Sarajevo

By MAUD S. BEELMAN
Associated Press Writer

PALE, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Faced with the threat of NATO air strikes and intent on resuming talks on how to divide up the republic, Bosnian Serb leaders have pledged to lift their devastating 16-month siege of Sarajevo.

But Western officials, hardened by the broken promises that have littered Bosnia's civil war, said preparations for air strikes would continue. And the U.N. commander for Bosnia said he was skeptical the siege would actually end.

"I think they're good proposals," Gen. Francis Brigue-mont said after meeting with Serb leaders for three hours Thursday. But he added, "I've become a bit of a doubting Thomas. Actions speak louder than words."

The Serbs promised to allow free flows of aid and civilian travel in and out of the Bosnian capital, and withdraw their forces from two strategic mountains overlooking the besieged city.

The promises appeared to meet terms set by the Muslim-led government for returning to peace talks in Geneva. Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic indicated he would be willing to meet Monday with Bosnia's Serb and Croat leaders, said John Mills, a spokesman for international mediators.

The Serbs' professed goal is to negotiate a division of Bosnia along ethnic lines. Croats, former enemies of the Serbs but now allies in Bosnia, also seek partition. Muslims, once 44 percent of Bosnia's people, fear they will be squeezed into a small landlocked territory.

By agreeing to lift the siege, the Serbs have left the Muslim-led government with little choice but to return to the talks — from a position of weakness — or stand accused of wrecking the peace process.

The announced withdrawal came Thursday at a meeting in Pale, 12 miles east of Sarajevo, with Brigue-mont, Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic and Serb military commander, Gen. Ratko Mladic.

They told Brigue-mont that Serb forces would withdraw from Bjelasnica and Igman mountains overlooking the city, and turn them over to U.N. officials.

Two roads, north to Zenica and southwest to Konjic, both of which pass through Serb territory, would be opened for aid convoys and civilians. Karadzic said details would be worked out at a meeting today at Sarajevo airport.

Serbs and Croats have repeatedly held up aid convoys to Sarajevo.

German town wins its first battle with writer

By ARTHUR ALLEN
Associated Press Writer

PASSAU, Germany — For more than a decade, the Danube town of Passau has tried to defend itself from a one-woman assault on its reputation.

On Thursday, it won its first battle.

A judge ruled that Anna Rosmus, whose books and articles about the Nazi period made her a symbol of Germany's difficult reckoning with its past, had overstepped the bounds of truth in describing a Nazi obstetrician.

Rosmus, 33, was the subject of the 1989 film, "The Nasty Girl." The movie portrays the reactions of hostility and rage among Passau's leading citizens as Rosmus, barely out of her teens, began digging up Nazi links to politicians, priests and other notables.

In previous works, Rosmus has described Passau as a deeply anti-Semitic town that was the hearth of several Nazi leaders, and that wholeheartedly accepted Hitler. She also has documented Passau's now-extinct Jewish community.

Her fourth book, "Wintergreen — Suppressed Murder," due out in Germany at the end of August, describes some of the most horrifying crimes in the Passau area during the war: mass poisoning of children, execution of prisoners of war.

The verdict was applauded at Passau city hall, where archivist Richard Schaufener said that Rosmus exaggerated the evils of Passau's Nazi years in her writing.

"We don't want to defend the Nazis or to say it wasn't so bad here, but we think the portrayal of Passau should be correct," he said. "Passau was a normal — that's a horrible word, but it's true — town during the Nazi period."

Because such SS leaders as Heinrich Himmler, Adolf Eichmann and Ernst Kaltenbrunner passed through Passau — Hitler lived here briefly as an infant — the town acquired guilt through association, Schaufener said.

Rosmus bitterly contests this.

"Hitler, Himmler and the others didn't give Passau its hatred for democracy and the Jews. They got it here. The Catholic tradition of Passau is unbelievably full of hatred for Jews, and has been for centuries."

Rosmus said she will press ahead with the publication of her book, saying the statements she is accused of were taken out of context, and that the writing in the book does not violate the verdict.

All of Hollywood buzzing about prostitution scandal

By JOHN HORN
AP Entertainment Writer

LOS ANGELES — Never mind dinosaurs or TV violence. Hollywood's real obsession this summer is prostitution and the showbiz movers and shakers who might be in Heidi Fleiss's little black book.

For four weeks, ever since the arrest of the alleged movieland madam, Hollywood has been whispering names and trading gossip tales of high-priced call girls coupling with some of the industry's top stars and moguls.

No big Hollywood players have been linked by law enforcement authorities to the 27-year-old Ms. Fleiss, who was charged Thursday with pandering and cocaine possession. And until today, no actual list of her alleged clients had surfaced.

The Daily News of New York said today it was given a peek at three days' worth of Ms. Fleiss' Gucci calendar book, containing the first names of alleged clients, their hotel rooms, their phone numbers, and a checklist of "girls" she would try to match up with them.

The newspaper said it got the partial list from Ms. Fleiss' ex-boyfriend, producer-director Ivan Nagy, who has been linked to a different call-girl ring.

A call to a phone number next to "Barry" was answered by a machine that said: "You have reached Barry Josephson, Columbia Pictures," the Daily News reported. A Columbia spokeswoman refused to comment, the newspaper said.

Nagy claims he photocopied the entire calendar for 1992, the newspaper said. Police seized the book Thursday, Nagy said.

Police maintain Ms. Fleiss ran an exclusive call-girl ring from her $1.6 million home, formerly owned by Michael Douglas, and charged clients $1,500. Authorities also say they found 13 grams of cocaine in the home and traveler's checks signed, according to Ms. Fleiss, by a well-known actor.

Ms. Fleiss has said she will tell all — and name all names — for $1 million. And according to the Los Angeles Times, an unidentified film executive has offered her $300,000 for rights to her story. She is free on $100,000 bail.

In an interview with the newspaper, Ms. Fleiss refused to discuss the allegations. Her lawyer, Anthony Brooklier, had no comment Thursday.

In the meantime, at least one studio executive and British rock star Billy Idol have come forward to deny industry rumors they used Ms. Fleiss' alleged services.

Columbia Pictures is investigating whether company executives used studio money to pay for drugs or prostitutes, according to the Times.

And employees at major studios have been spending hours on the phone, regaling one another with the latest twist in the sordid story.

One tale had a top studio executive spotting his own daughter among prostitutes "catering" a Hollywood party. Another tale was told of a hidden-camera videotape of a party showing a well-known actor with prostitutes.

On Wednesday, police arrested Nagy for investigation of trying to induce someone to commit prostitution. Nagy allegedly ran a prostitution ring of 15 to 20 women, including some would-be actresses. Nagy, whose credits include the TV movies "Midnight Lace" and "A Touch of Scandal," was freed on $25,000 bail.

A book listing his clients, prostitutes and their schedules was seized at Nagy's home, said Capt. Glenn Ackerman, who leads the police vice detail.

"They're individuals of substance from all walks of life, including the film business," Ackerman said. He said police would not release the names.

Nagy's arrest came one day after Michael Nathanson, president of Columbia Pictures' worldwide production, said he was not a client of Ms. Fleiss and had not used studio money to pay her. Nathanson's name had come up repeatedly in the industry gossip, and his lawyer decided it was time to stop the rumors.

Idol, the spike-haired rock singer whose hits include "White Wedding" and "Rebel Yell," said he knows Ms. Fleiss socially, but he, too, denied using her services. "Fortunately," he added, "I've never had to pay for sex."

Norma Jean Almodovar, leader of the prostitutes' rights group Coyote and author of "Cop to Call Girl: Why I Left the LAPD to Make a Living as a Beverly Hills Prostitute," said hookers have been "servicing" Hollywood moguls for years.

"Whenever you have men that have a lot of money and power, you have call girls," she said.

Administration uneasy over U.N. conference on nuclear test ban

By RUTH SINAI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration is struggling to decide whether to risk offending longtime nuclear powers France and China by attending a United Nations conference on a global nuclear test ban.

The United States is among 140 nations invited to the two-day meeting, Tuesday and Wednesday next week, to discuss whether to replace the 1963 Partial Test Ban Treaty on above-ground nuclear testing with a ban on all testing.

Indonesia is chairing the forum, which is strongly backed by Third World nations, including some with nuclear programs.

But the Clinton administration objects to such a broad international conference for reaching a comprehensive test ban, preferring consultations among the world's five declared nuclear powers to try to reach a ban in 1996.

Two of those countries — France and China — are boycotting next week's conference and neither has signed the 1963 treaty.

The administration is trying to get France and China to negotiate a test ban and is concerned about angering them by attending next week's conference, two U.S. officials said Thursday, speaking on condition of anonymity.

"It's the easiest way to unsettle them," one official said.

But boycotting the conference could raise doubts about President Clinton's stated commitment to a comprehensive ban and alienate developing nations that support an end to all nuclear testing.

In recent days, White House and State Department officials have been looking at the legal, diplomatic and policy implications both of attending and staying away from the meeting.

Already, some developing nations have warned privately that a U.S. snub of their initiative could endanger the renewal in 1995 of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty — an agreement the United States badly wants extended to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons among such militarily ambitious countries as India, Pakistan, Iran and North Korea.

"We urge the administration to seize the moment, to exercise real leadership and to put us solidly on the road to a comprehensive test ban agreement," said Sen. Jim Jeffords, a Vermont Republican who joined a handful of lawmakers Thursday in celebrating the 30th anniversary of the Moscow signing of the Partial Test Ban Treaty.

Jeffords, Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, and several other lawmakers are pressing the administration to send a representative to next week's meeting that will consider whether to convene a conference on amending the Partial Test Ban Treaty to make it a comprehensive ban.

Standing by a bust of President John F. Kennedy, the author of the 1963 treaty, the lawmakers urged Clinton to complete the work of his political mentor by endorsing amendment of the original accord and thus quickly reaching a total test ban agreement.

Clinton last month extended a nine-month moratorium on nuclear weapons testing, to last through September 1994 providing no other country tests first. He also sent envoys to start negotiating with France, Russia, China and Britain — all of which have also stopped testing — about a permanent ban going into effect in 1996.

The administration would prefer that such consultations lead to the drafting of a new treaty by the 39-member Conference on Disarmament in Geneva, of which France and China are members.

But critics say the Conference on Disarmament is a slow-moving body that operates only by full consensus and that drafting such a treaty there could take a long time.

"Consider the difficulty of getting Iran, Iraq, Libya, Ukraine, Pakistan and India, Brazil, Argentina and Israel all to sign an entirely new treaty," said Aaron Tovish of Parliamentarians for Global Action, a non-partisan advocacy group of lawmakers in 70 countries.

All these countries — which either have nuclear weapons or the potential to develop them — are already signatories of the 1963 test ban. Under the rules of that treaty, a simple majority vote in favor of amending the agreement to a full test ban would force them to comply with its terms, Tovish noted.

Advocates of negotiating within the Conference on Disarmament note that China and France are members of that body, and the world's other major nuclear powers feel far more comfortable within that framework which recently negotiated a chemical weapons ban treaty.

High waters force the movers of goods to be flexible and creative

By FRANK FISHER
Associated Press Writer

CALHOUN, Ill. — Huge corporations, small-time fruit growers and just about every business in between are doing whatever they can to get their products around a mess of water. The Midwest's river basins are flooded.

The flood has stranded rail lines, stranded barges and cost millions of dollars because of transportation delays.

Tim Weigel, a Calhoun County peach farmer, said he can't harvest his crop until it can be moved.

The Associated American Railroads said it could cost $200 million to repair flood-damaged tracks, cars, engines and other equipment in the Midwest.

The Santa Fe Railroad is reporting delays of up to 48 hours on some tracks. A big bridge between Kansas City, Mo., and Chicago that normally would take about 10 hours now takes 20 to 30 hours, must travel slowly, yet soaked railroads between Kansas City and Fort Madison, Iowa, spokeswoman Cathy Westphal said Thursday.

The Union Pacific Railroad, which had 1,700 miles of railroad other than grain and oil service, reported similar problems.

Dwayne Andreas, chairman and chief executive of Archer-Daniels-Midland, the nation's largest grain processor, said flood delays are costing him $1.5 million a day.

Most of his 2,000 barges on the Mississippi and Illinois rivers cannot move, and Andreas has been forced to ship by rail, which he said costs about 50 percent more. He doesn't expect the river to reopen to barges until about Sept. 1.

At the height of the flooding, he said, to get from Decatur, Ill., to the West Coast we had to go through the Dakotas. In some cases he said the company is using trucks, which are even more expensive than rail.

Trucking companies also are having a hard time. An Alford Van Lines driver who made a recent trip from Kansas City to Burlington, Iowa, normally a 270-mile journey, had to make an 180-mile detour, spokesman Tom Wildeman said.

Bridges up and down the Mississippi are closed. The only working bridge along a 200-mile stretch is only partially open with a 15-mph speed limit.

An transportation also is in trouble. Lighter small airports in Iowa, Illinois, Kansas, Missouri and North Dakota are closed.

A railway is crucial for peach farmers in Calhoun County, a long peninsula about 2 1/2 miles northwest of St. Louis, bordered by the Mississippi on the west and the Illinois River on the east. They're looking at a bumper crop of 100,000 bushels this season, and their only bridge across the Illinois was knocked out after this month.

Weigel and others have been trucking peaches about 120 miles over a rutted gravel road to get to Jerseyville across the river, usually a 20-mile trip.

Roy Jacobs Jr. and his father are using a small, flat-bottom boat to ferry 30 bushels at a time across the water several times a day. The hazards of the rushing water mean little to the elder Jacobs, whose main concern is not that he can't swim but that he has crops going to waste.

I guess you could call it dangerous, but I call it safe as can be, he said.

It's also a slow process that can add $2 to the cost of a bushel, the younger Jacobs said. They hired a commercial pilot to fly from his regular job to help them to ferry their goods.

The Illinois Transportation Department said ferry service across the Illinois River may resume this weekend in Calhoun County for the first time in about a month.

Coast Guard stops monitoring Morse Code distress frequency

By NELSON WANG
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON — In the end, the Coast Guard's Morse code emergency distress system went out not with a bang, but with a dash.

Now closing down continuous watch began the East Coast Guard message broadcast by the Coast Guard on Saturday. Far winds and following seas with 7 ft best wishful from all of us.

With these words transmitted in the code's familiar dots and dashes, Coast Guard veteran Rusty Demerway closed out an era.

The Coast Guard began monitoring the 500 kilohertz radio frequency for distress signals at the turn of the century, and in 1924 set up its first radio station to monitor the frequency continuously.

Since then, Coast Guard cutters have answered thousands of distress calls that's SOS or three dots, three dashes, three dots, and saved countless lives.

But with the advent of satellite and digital technology such as marine phones, ship-to-shore teleprinters and electronic beacons that can pinpoint a ship, the Morse code frequency has been made obsolete.

It's a step forward, like going from the horse and buggy to the car, said Lt. Cmdr William C. Glidden, who oversees communications in the Boston-based Coast Guard First District.

Coast Guard radio men expressed nostalgia for the code, which many had used for most of their careers.

It's another link in the winding down of a culture, like when people stopped speaking Latin, said Rick Booth, a Coast Guard spokesman. Coast Guard officers are realists, they see that it's time to go, but they're still a little misty-eyed.

That doesn't go away, but it was inevitable that the digital technology would take over, said Demerway, the 40-year Coast Guard veteran, who was asked to send part of the final message.

Responses to the last message — broadcast at 8 p.m. Eastern Daylight Time — came from ships ranging from a Bar Harbor ferry to a luxury liner in the Caribbean. Many wished good luck and goodbye to the senders.

Morse code was invented in the 1800s by Samuel F. B. Morse. It was a vital part of long-line Marconi's wireless trans-Atlantic system at the turn of the century.

It's as popular as ever among ham radio operators because it's reliable and easy to use.

Had Steve, Monstrolous, spokesman for the Amateur Radio Relay League, the 500,000-member radio enthusiasts' nationwide organization, acknowledged that the use of Morse code is no longer practical on a large scale.

The commercial arena has many more modes of communication now, it's likely that Morse code is going to be a small code, he said.

Drug dealer shoots up courthouse, kills self

By JOHN HANNA
Associated Press Writer

TOPEKA, Kan. — A small-time drug dealer got off a courthouse elevator firing guns and tossing pipe bombs, then blew up himself up with explosives strapped to his body. A guard was killed and two others were wounded.

Jackie McKnight, 61, had been scheduled for sentencing later in the day and may have been bent on suicide by cop, when he stormed the Frank Carlson Federal building Thursday. FBI agent Brian Carroll said McKnight was facing up to 40 years in prison and a $2 million fine.

Carrying two handguns, McKnight traveled up to the fourth floor by elevator. When the doors opened, he began firing and lobbing bombs that caused at least three explosions, the FBI said. Some employees escaped down stairs.

Jackie Williams, U.S. attorney for Kansas, said McKnight told an employee in the U.S. District court clerk's office, "You're not the one I'm looking for."

McKnight killed 61-year-old guard Gene L. Goldsherry, shooting him at point-blank range, the FBI said. An employee of the U.S. marshal's office, Goldsherry had been a body guard for former Gov. George Dooling three decades ago.

The gunman also shot and wounded two others. Terry Morrow, 37, of Junction City was listed in fair condition to day while Dana Earnold's condition was not disclosed.

Workers evacuated from the building said they heard at least two dozen shots, and possibly as many as 30.

About an hour after the rain-pipe-bomb explosion, a pipe bomb exploded, apparently in the clerk's office, Carroll said. Three women employees of the office were wounded by the blast and were listed in satisfactory condition today.

Authorities didn't know until about six hours after the blast that the man was dead, and about nine people spent the time helping to locate the offices.

Jordan, Cardinals rip Marlins

ST. LOUIS — Brian Jordan led a season high 19-hit barrage with four hits, including his sixth home run, as the St. Louis Cardinals pummeled the Florida Marlins 16-6 Thursday night.

Rene Arocha (9-3) was the beneficiary of the offensive attack. He allowed 11 hits while striking out three for his third straight win and his first career complete game.

Florida starter Chris Hammond (10-7) who recorded his eighth straight win July 2 against Atlanta, has now lost three straight decisions.

'Who do I play for?'

DENVER — If Kermit Holmes is looking to settle down, he better find another line of work at the Continental Basketball Association player was traded four times Thursday.

It began when the Columbus Horizon shipped him to the Rochester Renegades for a third round draft pick and future considerations.

Then the Renegades sent the 6-foot-7 forward from the University of Oklahoma to the Hartford Hellcats for guard James Martin.

Hartford followed suit by trading him to the Rapid City Thrillers for a fourth round pick.

Not to be outdone, the Thrillers dealt him to the Oklahoma City Cavalry for guard Dell Demps and a sixth round pick.

Cancer claims 'Coach Pete'

By BRENT KALLESTAD
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Bill Peterson, who helped develop many of the nation's outstanding football coaches while building Florida State into a collegiate power, died Thursday. He was 73.

Peterson, a native of Empire, Ohio, also coached the Houston Oilers for two years in the National Football League after spending the 1971 season as athletic director and head coach at Rice University.

From 1982 to 1984, Peterson was the athletic director at the University of Central Florida. Current UCF head football coach Gene McDowell was a three-year letter winner for Peterson at FSI, and was the captain of Peterson's 1962 team. McDowell later became a member of Peterson's coaching staff.

Funeral services are scheduled for 2 p.m. Saturday at Trinity United Methodist Church. Peterson was survived by his wife, Marge, and five sons, one brother, three sisters and eight grandchildren.

The Seminoles were 62-11-11 and went to four bowl games under Peterson between 1969 and 1970. Peterson's best year at Florida State was in 1964 when the Seminoles went 9-1-1 and defeated archrival Florida for the first time. They clinched the year with a 36-19 victory over Oklahoma in the Gator Bowl.

Peterson's teams were known for a wide-open offensive style. He coached Fred Biletnikoff and Ron Sellers — two of the game's all-time great receivers — at Florida State.

We're going to throw the football come hell or high water," said Peterson, who was almost as famous for mixing up his words and phrases as he was for his football success. "We're not gonna be any three clouds and a yard of dust kind of team."

Sellers, now a South Florida businessman, had taken a early morning flight to Tallahassee hoping for a last brief visit with his old coach.

He'd already passed away when I landed," said Sellers. "He surrounded himself with great assistants and made it easy for the players to learn. He did so much with the talent he had."

And Peterson began a tradition continued by his predecessors of taking on all comers. His '60s teams defeated Miami five straight times and Georgia four straight before the Bulldogs dropped him from their schedule.

Known fondly by Florida State fans as "Coach Pete," he was also among the best at spotting rising coaching talent. His assistants at Florida State included current coach Bobby Bowden, Bill Parcells, Don James, Joe Gibbs and Dan Hennig, Vince Gibson and John Coatta.

Tampa Bay, Miami play first preseason games

Buccaneers go for a win

By FRED GOODALL
AP Sports Writer

TAMPA — Preseason results generate expectations, so Tampa Bay coach Sam Wyche is playing a premium on winning Saturday night's exhibition opener against the Denver Broncos.

Instead of using quarterback Steve DeBerg at the beginning of the game, the Buccaneers will call on their starter in the fourth quarter when he could make a difference on the scoreboard and impact fan morale.

"I don't care how much you tell your public the score is not important, they do watch the score," said Wyche, who'll likely start second-year pro Craig Erickson and also play Mike Pawlowski and Mark Vlasic before turning to the veteran old DeBerg.

"I think that's the way preseason games ought to be played. I think you ought to play your starters as their starters in the fourth quarter when the game may be on the line rather than let a lot of younger players decide the game because some of them won't be on the team."

Wyche's strategy won't affect Denver's plans. Broncos coach Wade Phillips intends to play John Elway and most of his other starters about 10 or 12 plays, then spend the rest of the night evaluating younger players.

Dolphins lose Alexander

Associated Press

MIAMI — Miami Dolphins cornerback Bruce Alexander underwent arthroscopic surgery on his knee as his teammates prepared for their first exhibition game tonight against Atlanta.

Alexander, who had cartilage removed from his left knee Thursday, was expected to be out two to four weeks, according to a release from Dolphins camp.

Meanwhile, coach Don Shula was making plans for who will play against the Falcons. At halfback Aaron Craver was slated to start with Terry Kirby coming in on third-down situations. Kirby will be the primary tailback in the base offense in the second half.

Running back Mark Higgs will sit out of the scrimmage, because Shula wants to see what the these guys can do.

After practicing on Thursday, the Dolphins said running back Keith Byars should be ready to play in Atlanta. Byars will play when Dan Marino and the starting offense is in the game. If Byars is not able to play, the Dolphins said James Saxon is ready.

The Dolphins today will get their first official look at O.J. McDuffie, a first round draft pick and currently the team's No. 1 wide receiver. He will return punts and kickoffs most of the game and play wide receiver part of the game, mainly with the Dolphins second-team unit.

Jones signs with Jets

Associated Press

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. — Marvin Jones, the fourth player chosen in the NFL draft, agreed to a five-year contract with the New York Jets on Thursday.

Jones, a linebacker from Florida State, got a signing bonus valued at slightly more than $3 million and playing-time and performance incentives that could bring the total value of the package over $6.5 million.

Jones will fly from Miami in time to take a physical Friday, then accompany the team on its charter to Pittsburgh for their exhibition opener Saturday.

He is expected to begin practicing Monday.

"Now it's up to Marvin," Jets coach Bruce Coslet said. "He missed 21 practices, one scrimmage and one preseason game.

"We know our coaches will work extra with him. Now it's up to him."

Jones was doing a daily regimen of running and weight lifting under the supervision of his older brother, Fred, during his holdout.

"I really don't know how difficult it will be," Jones said of beginning workouts. "I think it's just a matter of me getting back into the flow. I'm glad the situation has been resolved and I can get back to playing football."

Team president Steve Gutman struck a deal Thursday after intensive talks with Jones' agent, Drew Rosenhaus.

in playing that we created a fifth team and called them the Recreation team for now, hoping we could find a sponsor," said Schaefer, a Sanford Recreation Department Supervisor. "The cost is only $100 per team and that's pretty cheap to help the boys and get your company name in the paper twice a week. Anyone interested should call me at 330-5697."

Sanford Housing Authority hit four three-pointers and Lee Washington, Leo Butts and Otha Canty combined for 27 points to remain within striking distance of Arrow Force II, who got 17 first half points from Nathaniel Hall, at the halftime intermission.

But the second half was all Arrow Force II as the Seminole High School summer team outscored Sanford Housing Authority 38-16 over the final 16 minutes. Brinson and Burke netted 10 points each, while Hall and Eric Roberts contributed six points each. Washington and Michael Smith led SHA with five points each.

Hall led Arrow Force II with 23 points, with Brinson (12 points) and Burke (11 points) also hitting for double figures. Completing the Arrow Force II scoring were Roberts (nine points), Deon Daniels (seven points), Ray Perkins (six points), Terry Howard (three points) and Robert Ruffin (two points).

Washington was the lone Sanford Housing Authority player in double figures with 17 points. Also in the scoring column were Butts and Canty (eight points each), Smith (five points), George Beasley (four points) and Randy Waldo and Cedric Nelson (three points each).

Jane scored a season league-high 28 points and Evans netted 22 counters, including eight-for-eight at the charity stripe. Hitting outside the arc were Keith Roberts (seven points), Bernard Sparrow and Curtis Peterson (six points each), Richard Anderson (two points) and Larry Griggs (one point).

Hunger Hotline helps those in need

A toll-free Hunger Hotline helping people locate emergency food in their community is now available statewide through the Florida Association for Community Action (FACA). This hotline, 1-800-329-FOOD (3663), directs callers to local resources like soup kitchens, churches and food pantries.

Details on food stamps centers, government surplus food distribution and a variety of meal programs for specific groups like senior citizens and farm workers are also available. Additionally, Hunger Hotline volunteers can refer callers to nearby agencies offering free information on shopping wisely, feeding children on a low-income budget, nutrition for breast-feeding mothers, etc.

Supported by a grant from the Department of Community Affairs, the hotline is the first of its kind in the state. It operates weekdays, 8 a.m. until 5 p.m., from FACA headquarters at 901 N.W. 8th Avenue, Suite A-2, Gainesville, Florida, 32601.

FACA is a non-profit federation of the state's Community Action Agencies, Head Start programs and Weatherization programs. Incorporated in 1980, it promotes exchange of research and communications, networking between social service providers, and professional training for its members on issues affecting poor people.

Who qualifies as self-employed?

How do you determine whether someone is self-employed, and thus handles his or her own taxes, or is your employee? If the latter, and you pay wages of $50 or more in a calendar quarter, you must report the wages to the Internal Revenue Service and pay Social Security tax. When quarterly wages top $1,000, you must pay federal unemployment tax. (A worker employed by a firm, say by a home-cleaning service, isn't your responsibility.)

Householders who fail to pay employment taxes don't even make a blip on the IRS's radar screen. But, if an unreported employee later seeks Social Security benefits, a taxpayer could be nailed for back tax, interest and penalties.

Congress soon may end the confusion over payment of Social Security taxes for household help by changing a 1954 law. The quarterly threshold for filing will be raised from $50 to $300, and taxpayers will be allowed to file data as part of Form 1040 and to include payment with their income taxes.

CONSUMER FOCUS

BARBARA HUGHES/GREGG

In non-IRS jargon, here are the key factors to distinguish if it's employee or independent contractor:

- Work for others? The greater the number of people someone works for, the more likely the odds the IRS would consider the worker to be self-employed. A person who works solely for you, even once a week or less, probably is your employee.

- Behave self-employed? People who have business cards, send invoices, solicit customers and claim to be self-employed if asked, have a good chance of being treated as such by the IRS, especially if they pay their taxes.

- How is the payment made? Paying someone by the hour intimates status as an employee. Paying a flat amount in response to a bill carries weight in proving someone is self-employed.

- Degree of control. Telling someone when to show up, how long to stay and how to do his job are signs of status as an employee. The more discretion you allow, the stronger the case for self-employment.

- Whose tools? The kid who cuts your lawn and brings his own lawnmower might be self-employed. A kid who uses your mower is more likely to be an employee.

So what about a teenager who baby-sits on occasion for you and seems to be an employee? Does anyone really pay Social Security in such cases? Responds Jack Porter, national director of tax practice at the accounting firm of BDO Seidman: "Only if you want to be attorney general."

Curtailing alcohol availability has little affect on use

DEAR MARY: It certainly seems strange to me that so many people are spending so much time, energy and money telling kids that it's bad for them to drink alcohol, but then magazines, television, and newspaper advertising tell them it's relaxing, it makes you feel sexy and lets you have more fun. It's no wonder that kids grow up confused and not knowing who or what to believe.

I'll bet if alcohol wasn't so easily available and so highly promoted, there would be fewer alcoholics and alcohol-related traffic crashes and crimes.

NONDRINKER

DEAR NON: Certainly, there is something of a paradox in our society that both promotes and discourages alcohol consumption but in a free market economic system, whenever there is a demand for a product or service, there will always be a supply. The idea of curtailing the supply of alcohol was tested during Prohibition from 1920 to 1933. It didn't work. Most people drank just as much as before, they just did it secretly. Some people even began drinking because it seemed adventurous when it was against the law.

DRUG COUNSELOR

If alcohol was completely eliminated, people who need a psychological crutch would turn to some other drug to medicate their feelings.

The most effective control has proven to be demand reduction. As we continue to educate people to the realities of what the consequences of alcohol and other drug consumption can be, consumers will regulate the supply.

Pat on the back

The Sanford Optimist Club held its regular meeting at Shoneys recently with president Bill Shepard presiding. Shepard presented Peggy Hardin with a special pin for bringing in four new members.

Fiance's intimate confessions aren't good for women's soul

DEAR ABBY: I am going to be married in a few months to a man I love very much. He told me recently that he wanted to be totally honest with me, then he launched into a series of "confessions" about the women he had been intimate with. There were literally dozens of them! He said many were one- or two-night flings that didn't mean anything.

I am confused and disturbed not only because he has been intimate with so many women, but that he is still in contact with them and plans to invite some of them to our wedding because "now they are just friends."

He insists that what he did before he met me has nothing to do with me, but I am very uneasy about this. What are your feelings about this? Now I am having second thoughts.

DEEPLY TROUBLED
DEAR TROUBLED: I wonder if your future husband was confessing or bragging. In either case, only a cad would name names. (He could also be lying.)

I think you are wise to have second thoughts. You'd be even wiser to have third and fourth thoughts about this man. He has shown a glaring lack of sensitivity for your feelings. (P.S. In view of these revelations, I hope you will give serious thought to being tested for sexually transmitted diseases.)

DEAR ABBY: I am in my mid-40s, still attractive, and know that the odds of finding a partner drop tremendously at my age. I am engaged to a man that I'm not "in love" with. I admire, respect and love him — as a friend. We have a lot of fun together and the companionship is great. He supports me in my career and accepts me exactly as I am. He's handsome and treats me like a queen, but there is no chemistry.

I have been married before and I have also been in relationships where incredible electricity flowed, but one of them turned out to be the most personally destructive situation I've ever been in. (He was handsome, charismatic and abusive.) I have come to the conclusion that intensity often characterizes sick relationships, and I won't get into another one if I can avoid it. But I also know I'm missing that wonderful feeling of being in love.

ADVICE

Any advice, Abby?

ANONYMOUS, PLEASE

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Although it is not necessarily true that intensity often characterizes sick relationships, the intensity seldom lasts in any relationship. Your fiance sounds like a first-class "catch." And you appear to be an intelligent woman who knows herself well.

You have a decision to make: Do you want to remain single on the chance that "the man who has everything" will come along, or will you settle for a man who has everything — except sex appeal? Only you can answer that question.

(Problems? Write to Dear Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.)

VOLUME

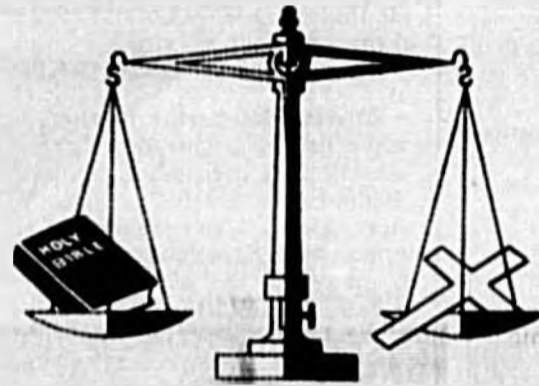

VS. VALUE

The story surfaces often in the business world. Two brothers entered the watermelon business. They bought a truck and loaded it with watermelons. They paid $1.00 each for the melons, drove into the city, and sold the melons for $1.00 each.

Business was booming, but they finally discovered they were making no profit. They had a meeting and decided the solution to their profit problem was to buy a bigger truck!

They were guided more by passion for the product than wisdom of profit. Often the passion to produce - to succeed at whatever cost - blinds us to the reality that life is not measured by VOLUME but by VALUE; that profit in life cannot be measured by what is gained, but by what is paid and what is lost in the process.

Jesus said it centuries ago: "What does it profit a man if he should gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" (Matt 16:26). He indicated that volume is not a criterion for success. Even the volume of gaining the whole world is too small a gain to pay one's soul for.

Tending His Flock—Medical Mission

Members of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Lake Mary, and volunteer doctors from throughout Central Florida recently returned from Quince de Enero, Honduras. Their mission was to provide medical and dental assistance to the residents of the remote area. Villagers, top left, came from near and far to participate in the free weekend program. Father Beverly Barge, pastor of St. Peter's, and his wife, Anne, top right, are no strangers to the area. They, along with the local congregation, built a church in the village, San Pedro Church.

Stephen S. Israel, of Sanford, was one of the coordinators of the journey. He washes the scalp of a young lady with a medicinal shampoo formulated to remove lice and mites often found in the jungle.

The mission of the trip was to involve the village people in learning to help themselves. Over 30 volunteers worked along side the locals and learned the value of not only self-help, but helping others. Each volunteer was given a T-shirt to remember the visit.

In all, the group of 19 Central Florida residents treated 1,000 patients in five days. Others included in the group were: Dean Byers, Ty and Bettye Dadman, Lois Jackson, Dr. Stephen Knight, Friley Knight, John and Susie Millonig, Annabella Torres, Ruben Torres, and Christine Young.

Are beverages linked to diarrhea problems?

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband suffers from daily diarrhea, which is very inconvenient socially. He drinks water, tea and other beverages daily (about 10 cups), and I feel this may be contributing to his condition. Am I correct?

With therapy, however, the outlook is much more encouraging; most patients live out a normal life span.

Therefore, you should carefully follow your physician's instructions about treatment and supervision; you will need to

DEAR READER: Probably not. The fluid he drinks should be absorbed from the intestine and the excess excreted through the kidneys. More plausibly, your husband has an intestinal disorder, such as irritable bowel or colitis. He should be examined by his doctor, undergo blood and stool tests, change his diet if necessary, and follow his physician's instructions.

Although caffeine-containing beverages (such as coffee, tea and cola) can cause irritability, insomnia, nervousness and frequent urination, they do not ordinarily lead to diarrhea.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a black female diagnosed with polycythemia vera. My doctor doesn't provide me with much information. Can you?

DEAR READER: Polycythemia is a blood disorder of unknown cause, marked by an excess of red blood cells that makes the blood too thick. Symptoms include weakness, headache, lightheadedness, fatigue, difficulty breathing and a tendency to develop thrombosis (the formation of blood clots within the blood vessels). Polycythemia is also associated with liver/spleen enlargement, peptic ulcer and bone pain.

Patients with this disease are diagnosed with blood tests, specifically a low level of erythropoietin, which is a natural substance produced in the body to stimulate red corpuscle production.

Unless the disorder is treated with blood-letting and drugs (such as hydroxyurea), the prognosis is grim: 50 percent of patients die within two years.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
Everyone makes mistakes. For bridge writers, there just aren't enough hours in the day to analyze every deal to death. I was going to use today's deal in a book-review column. Can you spot why I had to discard it?

Declarer looked expectantly at partner.
"OK. OK. Well played," said North. "But if East returns a diamond, you would have to guess right, of course."

After winning trick one with the spade ace, East returned a spade. Declarer ruffed and saw that drawing trumps was dangerous. With the actual layout, it would be fatal. South runs out of trumps before the clubs can be established. The defenders collect three spade and two club tricks.

"Playing on clubs looked right from my position," declared East. "In any case, South couldn't go wrong in diamonds. I had shown up with 10 points outside diamonds and I was a passed hand. I couldn't have the diamond king."
"Exactly," agreed South. "You can't see that, partner?"

Instead, at trick three declarer finessed dummy's club jack. East won with the queen, cashed the club ace and led the club five, hoping for a trump promotion. But South ruffed high, drew trumps and claimed, using the diamond ace as the entry to

Does anything strike you as odd?
How does declarer know East has 10 points? If East switches to a diamond at trick four, declarer doesn't know who holds the club ace.
As someone once said, to err is human, but to exonerate is heavenly.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Saturday, Aug. 7, 1993

Capitalize on any opportunities you get in the year ahead to increase your knowledge in your present field of endeavor. What you know, instead of who you know, will bring the rewards for which you're hoping.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Avoid making snap decisions today because your initial assumptions might be inaccurate. After taking a hard second look, you should be able to see things for what they really are. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today you might be better equipped to manage things for others than you will be to do things for yourself. Joint endeavors could offer you the greatest rewards at this time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) In a partnership arrangement today your associate's judgment might be more discerning than yours. If you feel dubious about something, let him/her call the shots.

mind its exact worth and the maximum amount you're prepared to pay for it. Do not exceed your top line.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) This could eventually turn out to be a rather rewarding day for you, even though you might be a slow starter. Don't drag your feet too long.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Try to select companions today who set good examples and inspire you mentally. Avoid persons who are nonthinkers and who rarely have any fresh ideas.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Have an alternative plan prepared today where a major objective is concerned. You can achieve your desired results, but you might have to take another route.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Concepts or ideas you envision today are apt to be good ones, yet they can be improved upon by others. Listen carefully and give associates a chance to express their views.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you're making a major purchase today, first establish in your own

ARIES (March 21-April 19) An opinionated companion might try to impose his/her views and selections on you today. When dealing with this forceful individual, heed your own counsel, because you know what's best for you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your intentions will be genuine today but you might be inclined to try to help others in areas they prefer you wouldn't butt in. Put your good deeds temporarily on a back burner.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Have fun and enjoy yourself today, but try to do so without overindulging financially or physically. One could give you a pain in the purse, the other a pain in your tummy.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Early in the day you might overlook financial opportunities. However, your awareness sharpens as time ticks on. Eventual favorable gains are likely.
