Speeding to meet the press

BAINBRIDGE, Ga. — Two Bainbridge police officers handed Florida Gov.-elect Lawton Chiles a $70 speeding ticket after clocking him driving 80 mph in a 50 mph zone. Authorities said Chiles had come to the southwest Georgia community to hunt quail with Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., a longtime friend. Bainbridge Police Chief Larry Funderburke said the governor-elect and former senator was hurrying back to Tallahassee for a news conference Wednesday when the two officers pulled him over for speeding.

'Do your duty'

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — Saudi women are neglecting their families even though cheap foreign labor has freed them from the burdens of a job and housework, the kingdom's newly named guardian of virtue said. "In other civilized societies we find that women hold good jobs, but this does not affect their responsibilities towards their families," Dr. Abdul Aziz Bin Abdul Rahman Al-Said said in a newspaper interview Tuesday. "But the woman here does not do any of her duties. Unfortunately, she does not do her job at home or any other job," he said. Al-Said, recently appointed general president of the Organization for the Promotion of Virtue and Prevention of Vice, told the Arab daily Okaz that the importance of women in society cannot be underestimated because they are responsible for rearing children, particularly daughters.

Congress probes chief of Columbus anniversary celebration

United Press International

MIAMI — A congressional subcommittee is investigating allegations of cronyism and financial improprieties by a Miami man who heads the federal commission planning the 500th anniversary celebration of Columbus' voyage to the New World. John N. Goude was appointed to the commission in 1985 by President Reagan and was a prominent fund-raiser for Gov. Bob Martinez. Rep. Thomas Sawyer, D-Ohio, said his subcommittee, which oversees the Christopher Columbus Quincentenary Jubilee Commission, is investigating allegations of "potential financial improprieties, if not worse" about Goude. He said Goude gave "an inadequate accounting" of the commission's finances.

In anticipation of a New York Times report about the controversy, Goude said he sent his resignation to the White House Monday. "I felt that if this was a problem because of me, I thought it may be better if I just left," Goude told The Miami Herald. Goude insisted an audit would answer the questions and prove he did not use his appointment for personal gain.

The commission is $600,000 behind in payments to Spain for building reproductions of Columbus' ships, which will play a central part in the celebration. Goude blamed the snafu on a contract dispute with Texaco, the commission's sole private benefactor. As a result, Texaco stopped making contributions toward a $5 million pledge. Most Christmas tree shoppers want the real thing, roadside vendor says

By VICKI DeSORMIER

SANFORD — Don Tisdale sold the 75 Christmas trees he had cut in North Carolina and drove down to Seminole County. He thinks he could have sold more if he had had them. Tisdale, who lives in Wade, N.C., said he had never sold his trees outside of his home state before, but thought he'd head for warmer climes this year. "I thought I'd spend Christmas at the beach," he said. Tisdale had originally planned to sell his trees in Orlando, but decided instead to set up shop in Lake Mary on U.S. Highway 17-92 just south of County Road 427. He said he thought more people lived in Seminole County and worked in Orange County, so he'd catch them on the way home from work. "I think people still want live trees for Christmas," he said. "There's too much plastic in their lives. They want something real at this time of year." Tisdale, who had operated his tree sale business out of the back of a truck for three and a half days, was heading to Daytona Beach to spend the money he had made on a few days of "sun and fun in the sand." He said almost all the money he made from the tree sales was profit because his father

Recycle 'blues' hit here

By J. MARK BARFIELD

SANFORD — Here's what to do with that big blue bin that's probably been tossed on your front lawn by now, or will be by Friday afternoon. Place the bin in your garage or by your back door, fill them up with the stuff the city wants to recycle, not your regular garbage, and then put them by the curb on the day that's printed on the sticker on the bin. By the way, that same sticker has the city's recycling information telephone number, the same number residents have been calling at a rate of about 100 a day wanting to know where to store the bins and which day they will be picked up, said city recycling coordinator Ken Knickerbocker. Knickerbocker said he has received up to 10 telephone calls an hour since bin distribution began Monday. See Recycle, Page 5A

Sanford airport seeks growth

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Hoping to keep economic development efforts alive at Central Florida Regional Airport, members of the Sanford Airport Authority will ask local lawmakers next month to seek to maintain property tax exemptions for all businesses at the airport's industrial park. Airport officials fear taxing non-aviation businesses at the airport could send them flying and deter new businesses from locating there until regular flight service has begun, providing the main attraction for the airport. "It hurts our ability to generate revenue," said Steve Cooke, airport director. "A couple of non-aviation businesses have already come to us and asked that we lower their rent to compensate for the property taxes. The authority denied both requests." Cooke said one of the companies that sought the rent break was Codisco, which leases seven buildings and several land plots at the airport. The Fifth District Court of Appeals ruled last year that non-aviation businesses located at municipal airports could be taxed because the Florida Constitution does not grant certain property tax breaks to cities as it does to counties, schools and the state. If city-owned land is being used for a non-municipal or a non-aviation purpose it can be taxed, the DCA said. By comparison, because the Port of Sanford is county-owned, businesses there are exempt from property taxes, said county Property Appraiser Bill Suber. After learning of the ruling and studying it, Suber contacted Cooke this summer to obtain a list of all leases at the airport. After reviewing some 189 airport leases, Cooke said Suber determined 45 businesses would be required to begin paying

Top resignation stuns Soviets

By GERALD NADLER
United Press International

MOSCOW — Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, architect of Mikhail Gorbachev's foreign policy that freed Eastern Europe and ended the Cold War, resigned Thursday to protest conservative attacks and warn of the danger of an "impending dictatorship." The resignation, announced by Shevardnadze in a brief, emotional speech to stunned delegates to the Congress of People's Deputies, took Gorbachev by surprise, and a spokesman for the president said Shevardnadze had been asked to stay on the job. Shevardnadze aide and Foreign Ministry spokesman Vitaly Churkin said the decision to step down was "final." But presidential spokesman Vitaly Ignatenko said Shevardnadze indicated he would remain at the Foreign Ministry to provide a smooth transition and allow the perestroika with little resistance. Shevardnadze recalled conservative attacks on him for "giving away Eastern Europe" at July's 28th Communist Party Congress and at recent sessions of the Supreme Soviet or standing parliament. "There was not one person besides the chairman who could be found who would say this was dishonorable, this is not the way to act, this is not the way things are done in a civilized government," Shevardnadze said. He said the conservative backlash was continuing almost unimpeded, mentioning a publication by the right-wing Russian nationalist movement Pamyat that said "down with the clique of Gorbachev." "I say to you democrats, in the broadest sense of the word, you ran off," he said. "The reformers fled to the bushes." Shevardnadze said he feared the recent upsurge of criticism from the

"In any case, the political life of Shevardnadze will be long," Ignatenko said. "He may occupy any other post." In Washington, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said there would be no immediate comment from the administration because "it's not entirely clear yet" what the situation is in the Soviet Union. Shevardnadze said he was "deeply hurt" by the personal attacks from critics of his foreign policy. More importantly, he said, conservative "reactionary" forces in the country were being allowed to move against the ideals of

SANFORD — Day 2: Ron Rabun is still a prospective county manager. He hasn't turned down Seminole County's job offer yet. "Negotiations are proceeding at the anticipated pace," acting county manager Bob McMillan said Wednesday afternoon. "I don't anticipate any problems." McMillan said salary discussions with the Clearwater, Fla. city manager have centered in the "mid- to upper-90s" range and other areas of discussion are being resolved, McMillan said he expects an agreement will be reached with Rabun after Jan. 1 that he can present to commissioners at their Jan. 8 meeting. Serial murder probe continues

Woman's sentence reduced

TAMPA — A woman who originally received a 20-year prison term for beating her 17-month-old daughter to death was resented Wednesday to seven years in prison after an appeals court ruled the first sentence excessive.

Circuit Court Judge Harry Coe sentenced Naomi Lovett to the 20-year penalty for third degree murder after her conviction in 1988. However, an appeals court recently ordered Lovett's sentence reduced because the term handed down by Coe exceeded state guidelines.

Lovett, who was 27 at the time of her daughter's death, has spent the last three years in prison. She could be released before Christmas under the state's early release program.

In addition to the time served, Lovett may also receive time off for good behavior. The state Department of Corrections will decide if Lovett should be freed.

Lovett, who maintains she is innocent, was convicted of punching her daughter, DeAngelina, to death.

Chiles names Scruggs labor chief

TALLAHASSEE — Frank Scruggs, a Miami lawyer with extensive state government experience, will head the Department of Labor and Employment Security in the new administration, Gov.-elect Lawton Chiles said Wednesday.

Scruggs, a Fort Lauderdale native with Ivy League academic credentials, is a partner in the Miami law firm of Steele Hector and Davis, the same politically connected firm that contributed Lt. Gov. Kenneth "Buddy" Mackay to the Chiles administration.

Chiles promised during a news conference that Scruggs will play a prominent role in setting labor and economic policy for the new administration. Labor secretaries have traditionally kept a low profile in Tallahassee.

"I can assure you that Frank is going to be a key player in the design and implementation of the policies of the governor's team," Chiles said.

Couple accused of abuse will keep son

GAINESVILLE — A couple belonging to a secretive religious sect that accuses doctors has been allowed to keep custody of their 16-year-old son.

The state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services wanted to place the boy in foster care after he nearly died of an untreated heart ailment.

However, Eighth Judicial Circuit Judge Nath Doughtie ruled that William Myers should be sent home to his parents.

An attorney for parents Charles and Marilee Myers told Doughtie in a closed hearing Tuesday that her clients were remorseful for not seeking care. They have agreed to allow medical care for their child in their home.

The judge also ordered the state to monitor the boy's condition.

The couple is affiliated with End Time Ministries, a group of several hundred people who practice faith healing and reject medical treatment.

HRS spokeswoman Alwyn Casali said the agency's involvement in the case had nothing to do with the couple's involvement in that group.

Hypnosis helps in abduction probe

GAINESVILLE — Hypnosis has helped police determine that a woman who mysteriously disappeared for two days in July and returned without her memory was abducted.

Alachua County Sheriff's spokesman Spencer Mann said he did not say what University of Florida law student Elizabeth Morris revealed to her hypnotist.

But Mann said police have developed some information about a suspect in the abduction.

The results of the hypnosis are important because there was no evidence of a criminal action, Mann said.

Morris, 32, was reported missing July 14. Deputies found her car in the parking lot of the Oaks Mall west of Gainesville and conducted a two-day search of the woods around the mall.

On July 16, Morris walked into a Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant in a confused state and asked for help.

Police said she did not know her name or where she was and did not recognize friends, relatives or her three children.

Mann said she has regained almost all her memory, except for the two days she was missing.

Contractor pleads guilty to cheating

TAMPA — A former supervisor for a defunct Lakeland defense contractor has agreed to plead guilty to cheating on artillery quality tests.

Harion C. Holdbrooks, 44, of Plant City agreed to plead guilty Wednesday to concealing from the U.S. Army information that Sooner Defense of Florida was altering its test results.

Holdbrooks was in charge of Sooner's testing division before the plant closed in the summer of 1988. The company filed for protection from its creditors in U.S. Bankruptcy Court, but it was declared bankrupt in December 1988 after reorganization attempts failed.

JACKSONVILLE — Police questioned two women in the highway slayings of at least eight men in Florida and Georgia Wednesday, but released them saying they were not involved in the killings.

The two women, who have not been identified but were described as 28 and 38 years old, consented to a search of their belongings by police, said Jacksonville police spokesman Gary Higgins.

"We found nothing. There wasn't any evidence they were connected with the murders," said police detective Ann Higga.

An early morning tip that two women matching the descriptions of two suspects were staying in the hotel led police to the women's room.

Higgins said the women cooperated completely with investigators.

Authorities in several counties have been flooded with reports of sightings of a female duo wanted for questioning in the deaths.

The reports include 25 sightings in Volusia County alone. They have been pouring in ever since sketches of the brunette and blonde were released by the Marion County Sheriff's Office three weeks ago.

The men's bodies were found between December 1989 and November of this year along highways in north-central Florida and Georgia.

The victims have all been middle-aged men and were blue collar workers. Most apparently were just passing through the north Florida and south Georgia area on business.

Each of the victims had been shot with a small caliber gun. Their cars were stolen and wrecked. The victims' money also had been stolen and sometimes their clothes.

Marion County Sheriff's Department Sgt. Robert Douglas said "somehow these women, if they are women, are getting these men to let their guard down. Maybe they are posing as women with car trouble alongside the road. Maybe they are approaching them in convenience store parking lots. We just don't know."

Police began searching for the two women after they were spotted in Marion County driving the car of a Jupiter man missing since early June.

One of the women was described as 5-foot-2 with a heavy-set build. The other has blond, shoulder-length hair and a tattoo of a heart on her right upper arm.

NASA seeks better view of universe

That's a rap: Galileo Earth movie released

By WILLIAM HARWOOD
UPI Science Writer

A remarkable, first-of-a-kind movie shot by the Galileo probe as it raced past Earth earlier this month shows the blue planet spinning in the vast night of space, giving elated scientists a taste of the view they can expect of Jupiter in 1995.

Captured by Galileo's state-of-the-art solid-state cameras, the movie showed the blue-and-white Earth from a vantage point below the planet, a view that included snowy white Antarctica and brownish Australia that extended as far north as Florida and the Persian Gulf region.

$40 million Hubble repair plan proposed

By BOB STEIN
UPI Science Editor

NASA has developed a $40 million plan to fix the Hubble Space Telescope by replacing one instrument on the orbiting outpost and sacrificing another to make room for a corrective device, officials said Wednesday.

The repairs, which would be conducted during a spacewalk by shuttle astronauts in 1993, should restore the telescope to at least 90 percent of its intended capacity, said deputy program manager David Pine.

"The telescope today is the best optical telescope — by far the best ultraviolet telescope — in the world, even with the problems. Having the oppotunity to bring it back to its original pre-launch expectations is certainly very pleasing to everybody," Pine said. "It's looking really good."

The plan was submitted to top NASA officials this week as part of planning the agency's budget and a decision on whether to proceed was expected by the middle of January, Pine said.

The $1.5 billion telescope was expected to revolutionize humanity's understanding of the universe by using a highly advanced optical system to peer deep into the cosmos from its perch high above Earth's atmosphere.

But about two months after the long-awaited telescope was placed into orbit in April, scientists were shocked to discover the instrument's supposedly perfect primary mirror was shaped incorrectly, preventing the telescope from focusing properly.

State saved $99 million, group says

By MICHAEL MOLINE
United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Offering rare praise for a bureaucracy grappling with $270 million in budget cuts, a business coalition said Wednesday that improved efficiency by state agencies has saved taxpayers $99 million.

What's more, reforms currently being undertaken could eventually save taxpayers additional millions, according to a report card issued by Partners in Productivity, a joint effort by Florida TaxWatch, the business Council of 100 and the state.

"We're often lambasting the Legislature at Florida TaxWatch," TaxWatch President Dominic Calabro told a news conference. "But here's a case where I think they've done some unusually good work."

Earlier this year, the coalition identified reforms that it said could save the taxpayers $727 million.

NAACP accuses Lord & Taylor of discrimination at Dade store

United Press International

MIAMI — The NAACP filed an employment discrimination complaint against a Lord & Taylor department store Wednesday, claiming the upscale store illegally eliminated qualified Dade County blacks from its payroll.

The 10-page class-action complaint was filed by the local NAACP branch with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. It seeks unspecified damages and asks that the EEOC initiate action to ensure Lord & Taylor cannot continue to practice hiring discrimination.

The NAACP said the complaint was filed because of complaints it received and because of a test the association conducted earlier this month.

"The branch has received numerous unsolicited complaints of discrimination against major department stores, whose track records for hiring blacks has historically been far worse than that of many far smaller retail outlets," it said.

"The NAACP's visual study, as well as anecdotal information received by the branch, indicates that many Dade County major

Minorities seek equality on their own

GAINESVILLE — Indifference from the white majority and large cuts in federal aid are forcing Southern blacks to depend on themselves to achieve social and economic equality, an expert said.

"Many whites seem to feel that they have gone about as far as they are willing to go in helping blacks to achieve equality, and from now on, blacks are going to have to make it on their own," said James Butts, a University of Florida political science professor.

department stores subject blacks to subtle discrimination, unreasonably high rates of job turnover, or outright exclusion."

Lord & Taylor spokeswoman Jann Walker was not available for comment.

In its employment discrimination investigation, the NAACP compiled a list of blacks observed in sales and management positions in the county's 21 largest department stores and then sent testers to the eight at the bottom of the list.

Each of the two test groups consisted of a black and a white female and in each case the black female was more qualified for the job. All testers used their own names when applying for work, but their names were withheld from the complaint to protect their identity.

On Dec. 7 the black testers were discriminated against at three stores owned by different companies, the complaint said.

Jane Doe, a black female law student with extensive work experience, applied for work that morning at a Lord & Taylor store in the International Mall. Later that morning, Jane Roe, a white undergraduate with limited work experience, also applied at the store.

Doe was not hired and Roe was given a job on the spot.

In a second test at the store Monday afternoon Sarah Doe, a black undergraduate with little work experience, and Roe, a white undergraduate with no experience, applied.

White Christmas here only a dream

By VICKI BOGGS
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — A heavy, dense fog draped over Seminole County this morning was the only hint that this might actually be the last full day before winter begins.

By late morning the fog, which had reduced visibility to less than a quarter of a mile in many places, had burned off leaving a hot, summer-like day.

Though the winter solstice occurs at 10:07 p.m. tomorrow night, there is no hope that we will experience the scattered snow flurries that were seen last year at this time.

The winter solstice marks the start of winter and the day of the year with the shortest amount of daylight. There will be 10 hours and 21 minutes between sun up and sundown tomorrow.

Forecasts for today call for temperatures in the low- to mid-50s with southerly winds of about 10 miles per hour. Little change is expected over the next few days.

According to Bob Osborne, of the National Weather Service office in Orlando, the temperature variations of one year to the next are not cause for alarm.

Hank Alvarez, 36, of Sanford, fishes on Lake Monroe in the fog this morning.

"It's not global warming," he said. "They're predicting winter will be here soon enough."

Last year, temperatures dipped into the 20s and 30s for nearly a week around Christmas, causing power outages as Floridians tried to cope with the cold to which they were unaccustomed. Some areas of the county were without full power in their homes for several days.

According to Osborne, the fog this morning is caused by high humidity coupled with the radiational cooling following an exceptionally hot day yesterday.

POLICE

Seminole County DUI arrests

SANFORD — The following persons face a charge of driving under the influence in Seminole County:
 • John Chandler Adams, 21, of Daytona Beach, was arrested at 1:57 a.m. Wednesday after his car failed to maintain a single lane on Lake Mary Boulevard, Lake Mary.
 • Pamela Jane Jaques, 25, 100 Sugar Maple Court, Sanford, was arrested at 12:27 a.m. Wednesday after her car was in an accident on U.S. Highway 17-92 at County Road 427.

Child abuse charged

SANFORD — City police here charged Edwin Wesley Tyrrell, 26, 2815 Grove Drive, Sanford, with child abuse at Seminole Centre, at about 8:30 p.m. Wednesday. Tyrrell's estranged wife was also arrested after allegedly battering a shop worker who tried to shelter the Tyrrell's 4-year-old son.

Police were called to the parking lot near Pants USA, after a man reported seeing Tyrrell allegedly spank a small boy. According to the witness, Tyrrell allegedly began striking the child with his fists. The boy ran. Another witness said she saw the man grab the child by the throat and saw him allegedly hit the boy up against a car. Police said four persons reported witnessing the alleged incident. Bond is $2,000.

When witnesses intervened to aid the boy, Sanford Police Chief Steven Harriett said, Lian Lynne Tyrrell, 26, of New Salisbury, Ind., identified as Edwin Tyrrell's estranged wife, allegedly battered and threatened to kill a woman who took the boy into a shop to protect him. Lian Tyrrell was charged with battery and disorderly intoxication. At the county jail she was also charged on a warrant for obtaining property with a worthless check. Bond is $1,000.

Store offers strange mix of holiday gifts

By CASEY SELIX
Dallas Morning News

FRANKENMUTH, Mich. — With an address like 25 Christmas Lane you expect to find replicas of baby Jesus and Santa Claus on the front lawn. But an 8-foot-7 Statue of Liberty?

Wally Bronner, owner of Bronner's CHRISTmas Wonderland, is used to questions about the strange mix.

"Here in the U.S., we have the freedom to decorate in a religious expression," says Bronner, a 63-year-old devout Lutheran. "I see it as a tribute to the nation for the freedom of religion. Some countries are not allowed to have Christmas items."

There are other incongruities for sale inside the one-acre store, which houses 50,000 items from 78 countries. Such as the ornaments commemorating the fall of the Berlin Wall and the unification of East and West Germany. Thanks to a CNN story on the store, thousands have been sold since they debuted the day before the Oct. 3 unity celebration.

To mark the event, Bronner's has designed an ornament with the wall, East Berlin and its dates of birth and death etched on it. The unification ornament has a white background and a yellow-and-black map of Germany bound by a red ribbon. The glass ornaments each sell for under $6.

Another hot seller is an ornament for the 500th anniversary (in 1992) of Christopher Columbus' discovery of America. Ten thousand of those have been sold, primarily through a catalog house that initiated the idea, Bronner says. The red, white and blue ornament features Columbus' three ships — the Nina, the Pinta and the Santa Maria.

If these aren't what you had in mind for your Christmas decor, there's much more to choose from at Bronner's: — 6,000 styles of religious, traditional and toyland ornaments.

Here in the U.S., we have the freedom to decorate in a religious expression. I see it as a tribute to the nation.

—Wally Bronner, store owner

—500 types of Nativity scenes, from miniature to life-size.

—200 kinds of nutcrackers, miniature to life-size.

—800 animated figures.

—Bibles in 30 languages.

Bronner's, dubbed the world's largest Christmas store, is one of Michigan's top tourist attractions. It draws 2 million visitors annually, and its busiest day is no surprise — the day after Thanksgiving. Still, the store is open 361 days a year, and visitors come from all over the world. Aiales in this land of twinkling lights are becoming so cramped that Bronner and his family have decided to double the size of the showroom to 100,000 square feet.

Before the expansion plans, two trade organizations had designated Bronner's as the world's largest Christmas store. Bronner has no doubt that's true, since he sells his decorations to 1,000 retailers. Bronner's certainly pays one of the biggest electric bills — $500 a day to keep 100,000 individual lights and animated whatnot going.

Anything seems possible at Bronner's: a 36-inch lighted Santa face, a $72.50 Beatrix Potter Christmas music box, a $2,950 life-size nutcracker, all kinds of Christmas china and even some holiday steins.

Among the ornaments, take your pick. There are dinosaurs, mushrooms, onions, Statues of Liberty and one for the Republican Party. There's even a yellow happy-face ornament for the overly cheerful folks in your life.

Each year, one million feet of lights are sold, including the Southwestern chili lights. There are ornaments honoring Florida, Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin and Michigan.

If you're looking for a theme for your tree, there are 280 on display. Consider:

—The Spirit of Liberty, complete with Statue of Liberty and other red, white and blue decorations.

—The All-Sports tree for the sports fans in your family. It includes bowling pins, footballs and uniformed players.

—The Heavenly Hosts, with angels and other residents of heaven.

—Peach Prelude and Lavender & Lace for those who are tired of red and green.

Prices at Bronner's range from a 25-cent postcard to a $17,000 Hummel figurine. Nearly half of the decorations sell for under $10 apiece, according to Bronner's fact sheet.

There could be something for everybody and every mall at this growing development on the outskirts of Frankenmuth, about a two-hour drive north of Detroit.

There's even an Israel exhibit with Hanukkah items as well as ornaments inscribed in Hebrew for Christians in that country.

If it's not there, Bronner's gladly will design an ornament for you. Artists on the premises annually personalize 50,000 ornaments. And about half of the glass ornaments sold at Bronner's are designed there. The custom ornaments are made by glass blowers in Europe.

Among the custom designs are ornaments for astronaut Neil Armstrong and Presidents George Bush, Ronald Reagan, Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford. Hometowns of the famous people usually order the ornaments for special events, Bronner says.

P.S. That Statue of Liberty will cost you $2,000.

Mayors report increase in hunger, homelessness

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
United Press International

WASHINGTON — A survey of mayors in 30 major cities reported a rise in both hunger and homelessness during the past year and most expect the economic recession — now hitting most cities — to heighten the problem, the U.S. Conference of Mayors said.

At the same time, the city officials also reported Wednesday that public sentiment is turning against the homeless.

More than three out of four of the survey cities report that they have experienced an economic slowdown in recent months and all but one of the cities which reported it had not experienced an economic slowdown ... anticipated the recession will affect the problems of hunger and homelessness during the next year," the report said.

Every one of the responding cities said they expect the demand for emergency food assistance and shelter — especially by homeless families — to increase during the next year.

The mayors' survey confirms a report issued last week by the National Coalition for the Homeless predicting that as the recession deepens, many Americans — especially those working in low-wage jobs — are at risk of becoming homeless and the problem could become critical if the Bush administration fails to respond.

"During the past year," the mayors' survey said, "requests for emergency shelter increased ... by an average of 24 percent, with four out of five of the cities registering an increase, 10 percent reporting that the number of requests remained the same and another 10 percent reporting a decline."

Just under 75 percent of the survey cities reported an increase in the number of homeless families needing emergency shelter, ranging from an increase of 60 percent in Phoenix, 40 percent in New Orleans, and 36 percent in Cleveland to 10 percent in Norfolk, Va., and 5 percent in San Antonio, Kansas City, Mo., Minneapolis and San Francisco reported declines in the number of homeless.

In 70 percent of the cities, shelters are forced to turn away homeless families needing aid because the shelters lack resources.

The city officials estimated that overall 19 percent of the requests for shelter by all homeless people went unmet last year and 16 percent of the requests by homeless families could not be met.

Mailbox magic

The U.S. Postal Service needs your help in coping with the 500 million pieces of mail it handles each day, and the much larger blizzard of greeting cards that hit about this time every year. This, the USPS promises, will speed up mail delivery.

How can you help, you ask? First, stop addressing letters in longhand; use block letters, please, black ink only. Follow the format shown in the Postal Service flyer you got in the mail the other day. You didn't? Of course that will make the envelope containing your perfumed love letter look like a summons for jury duty, but public needs demand private sacrifice.

The Postal Service may want to go further, however. If a new procedure now being tested in Akron, Ohio, works, it would go like this: You type up your Christmas card list and send it to the post office, which photocopies it and files it away (so you can add or delete names of those who please you or make your life a living hell next year), then sends you a set of bar-coded mailing labels. These you stick on your Christmas cards and — presto — the post office's automated mail-sorting machines speed them to your cousins and old roommates and creditors faster than you can say "no pickup on Saturdays, Sundays or holidays."

Disbelief in this newest promise of better service from the most reviled institution this side of the IRS is not the only reason some object to entering this brave new world. Civil libertarians, always the spillover, claim this may result in all sorts of unwanted parties — the tax folks, the FBI, your political enemies and any number of people selling things — getting their hands on your private mailing list, with who knows what consequences, all for the sake of a dubious efficiency.

A Postal Service spokeswoman says no such unpleasant things will happen, that they will not sell, or otherwise provide such information to outside parties. She also concedes, however, that this is a policy, not a law, and that change-of-address lists already are sold to private parties. You read it here first.

The new neo-neoism

White House policy planner James Pinkerton looked at the intractable problem of poverty and came up with the answer: the New Paradigm.

Where the Democrats' Great Society and War on Poverty failed, the Republicans' New Paradigm Society would succeed.

Poor people would throw off the shackles of an oppressive and costly government bureaucracy and empower themselves. With a boost from self-help programs, they would lift themselves up by the bootstraps. And, out of gratitude, they would vote Republican.

It sounds wonderful. But haven't we heard this before? It has the ring of the Democratic populism of the '60s, with a conservative twist.

Some of the "empowerment" proposals are intriguing. For instance, we like the concept of giving poor people opportunities to purchase or control their public housing. The child-care aid and earned-income tax credits approved this year will provide some relief for extremely poor families. But can Pinkerton's model work for the entire welfare system? Probably not.

That is why President Bush's budget director, Richard Darman, dismisses the New Paradigm as a fashionable idea instead of a pragmatic approach. He calls it "neo-neoism."

Yes, the government should experiment with different programs. But let's not pin our anti-poverty efforts to one simplistic slogan. Otherwise, the "New Paradigm" could rapidly degenerate into the "Same Old Folly."

Know the facts about South Africa

South African President de Klerk and African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela have stalled around as long as they can now, and the curtain is about to rise on the second act of "The End of Apartheid." It will be very different from the first.

Just about everything that could be done to please "world opinion" (meaning Western liberal opinion) has now been done. Nelson Mandela has been freed from prison. Various remaining vestiges of apartheid legislation have been scrapped, or soon will be. All that remains (if) is to devise some constitutional system under which the peoples of South Africa can live together peacefully and democratically.

I wouldn't blame any American newspaper reader or TV viewer for assuming that, after some negotiations over the details, there will be a large public ceremony in which President de Klerk will in effect sign over the government to Mr. Mandela and the ANC.

But I can also assure you that that is the least likely of all conceivable things to happen. And the reason for the widespread American misconception on the subject is the truly disgraceful performance of the vast majority of the American media over many years in reporting the facts about South Africa. In more than 40 years of observing American journalism, 30 of them from the inside, I have never known a worse example of systematic, long-standing misrepresentation.

An American who has never been to South Africa can hardly be blamed for knowing little or nothing about its complex problems. He will almost automatically make the major blunder of assuming that the "race question" in South Africa is, like ours, basically a matter of blacks vs. whites.

But no reporter who has spent so much as a week in South Africa can possibly be under any such illusion. He will know, at a minimum, that South Africa's blacks are divided into nine major tribes, most of which detest one another, and that in addition to 5 million whites there are a million "Asians" (Indians) and 3 million "coloureds" (a well-defined mixed-race community), many of whom would not consent to black rule even if the blacks could unite.

None of this, however, has been conveyed to Western readers and viewers by their media. The surprising truth is that nothing — absolutely nothing — has yet been agreed upon, or so much as publicly discussed, even between de Klerk and Mandela, concerning the nature of the future government of South Africa. The ANC's position is clear: They want everything — now. The white government has not revealed so much as a clause of its counterproposal, but you can be sure that it will have to take into account all of the interests described above, which the Western media have so breezily disregarded.

Any attempt to do otherwise would result in swift revolt by the Zulus and perhaps other tribes as well, probably in de facto alliance with the largely black (but white-officered) South African army, the entire right wing of the white public, and major elements of the Asian and colored populations. Mandela could probably count on a majority of the Xhosa, some smaller tribes, the leftist unionized blacks in the cities, and the liberal fringes of white, Asian, and colored opinion.

Various remaining vestiges of apartheid legislation have been scrapped, or soon will be.

Leaving the kids 'Home Alone'

BOSTON — There is a scene in "Home Alone" when Kevin McCallister stands before the mirror in his parents' bathroom, slaps some after-shave lotion on his tender eight-year-old skin, and lets out a howl. It comes just in time. One bracing shock of reality, to remind us that Kevin is not quite yet the man of the house.

For the rest of this delicious movie, the son of the suburbs, the delinquent child accidentally left behind in his family's frantic vacation exit, is nothing if not self-sufficient. He protects himself. He protects his home. And in the process, it seemed to this contented viewer that Kevin McCallister protects parents from the worst of their anxieties.

"Home Alone" is the surprise hit of this season. The smart money in Hollywood never figured it would reach the top. They didn't count on the longing for a family movie in which the hero is a delight, the criminals are comic and you don't have to put your hands over the kids' eyes.

But it's also a hit because "Home Alone" taps the most primal plot: the fears that kids have about being abandoned and the fantasies they have of being on their own.

Kevin is the latest in a long line of deserted children. Before the McCallisters took off for Paris without their youngest son, an entire anthology of children had learned to survive without parents: the lost boys of Peter Pan who had fallen from their prams never to be found again. The children of Disney, Dumbo and Bambi, left motherless in the world.

For a generation, Pippi Longstocking personified a child's fantasy of independence. Even Dorothy, mysteriously orphaned into her Aunt Em's home and then wrenched away by another natural disaster, fended for herself in Oz.

There was never any need for a psychiatrist to analyze this theme. At some point, children become aware of their dependency on adults who aren't always reliable. Parents can be anything from absent-minded to abusive, from benignly neglectful to untrustworthy. Even the best of us can be busy or distracted. Even the most secure childhood can be shattered by death or divorce. This recognition stirs a child's longing to be strong.

The theme has taken a harder twist lately as we fear that family life is coming loose at the seams. Steven Spielberg's fractured families had parents too distracted to see even an "E.T." in their midst. In "Honey I Shrunk The Kids," a harried father absent-mindedly put his children in lethal danger in their own backyard. There was obvious symbolism in the dialogue of the quarter-inch children lost in the suburban grass: "We're too small. He can't hear us."

But "Home Alone" does more than appeal to the child's need to believe in his survival. Nowadays parents need to believe it as well. And that's what has changed.

At the risk of turning comedy into sociology, Kevin is a poster child for worries about "self-care" that euphemism for no-care. Well over two million kids between five and 13 are "home alone" every weekday afternoon.

Kevin's parents left on vacation, but most have gone off to work. Kevin's neighborhood was emptied for Christmas, but usually it's empty by 9 a.m. Today's working parents, anxious in their absenteeism, set up hotlines and rules...over the phone.

The movie's upper-class family setting, a houseful of expensive electronic gadgets, stands in as a visual accusation often launched against working families: that we are neglecting children for luxuries. Kevin's mother is not the only one who asks herself in crisis, "What kind of a mother am I?"

Onto this sociological backdrop, steps an eight-year-old boy saying: "Hey, I'm not afraid anymore." Kevin taking care of himself. Kevin protecting himself, his home and hearth from criminals who are less threatening than comic.

If "Home Alone" is every child's fantasy, it is also every parent's fantasy. It's all there: the universal and anxious wish that, in this uncertain time, the kids will be all right. And the hope for a happy ending.

Would U.S. use its arsenal in Gulf?

WASHINGTON — The agonizing in America about when Saddam Hussein will have a usable nuclear weapon must strike the Iraqi leader as ironic. His own intelligence people have told him that there are already more than 400 nuclear weapons in the Persian Gulf, and Saddam didn't put them there.

They all belong to the U.S. Navy. President Bush has not yet given what is called "nuclear release authority" to his commanders in the Gulf, so they cannot use nuclear weapons without consulting him. If nuclear weapons are fired, they will be fired on the president's say-so and no one else's. But Bush also has not renounced the use of nuclear weapons if the Gulf stalemate turns to war. Instead, Bush has said that the United States will hit Iraq, and hit it hard, implying everything America has in its arsenal. Reasonable military strategists agree that the use of nuclear weapons in the Middle East would be a disastrous decision. It would rob the United States of the moral high ground in future arguments against nuclear proliferation to Third World countries. And one nuclear explosion in the Persian Gulf would introduce a near-apocalyptic element in a region that will always be a tinderbox.

William Arkin, a military expert now with Greenpeace, argues in the current issue of The Nation that if Bush expects to wave his nuclear capability in front of Saddam's nose as a deterrent, "this would be a disaster of unimaginable proportions. It is unacceptable for the United States to create even the remotest possibility that nuclear weapons will be used."

And if the American nukes are not there as a deterrent, "then we are foolish to have them in the area in the first place," Arkin says. "By their mere presence, we take grave risks with a leader the president equates with Hitler."

From our sources we have assembled a picture of the kind of nuclear punch Bush has sent to the region. Some of our sources complain that since it is standard operating procedure to have nuclear weapons on aircraft carriers, those should not be counted in any debate about whether the United States has gone too far. Yet a number of the ships in the region were specifically dispatched to the Persian Gulf for this crisis and the Pentagon made the decision to leave the nuclear weapons on them. Three aircraft carriers are already in the Gulf, and another is on the way. Each has approximately 100 nuclear bombs on board. Of the bombs already sitting on ships in the Gulf, 240 of them are air-dropped B-61s with a yield varying from 10 to 300 kilotons. Ten kilotons is equivalent to 10,000 tons of TNT. Just one ton of TNT decimated the U.S. Marine barracks in Lebanon in 1983.

There are at least 84 nuclear Tomahawk cruise missiles in the Gulf on two battleships, four destroyers, six cruisers and five attack submarines. Miscellaneous nuclear weapons and depth bombs on destroyers and frigates in the Gulf bring the total to more than 400.

When the aircraft carrier Ranger arrives, it will bring another 100. If that isn't overkill, the United States has about 300 more nuclear bombs at U.S. bases in Turkey, which borders Iraq. What that means to Saddam Hussein's strategy is a question only he can answer. But the question that remains for George Bush is this: Will he forswear the use of nuclear weapons or fire them if push comes to shove?

Strategists agree that the use of nuclear weapons in the Middle East would be a disastrous decision.

Sex-transmitted-diseases epidemic

United Press International

WASHINGTON — At least 250 million sexually transmitted infections occur worldwide annually and the growing epidemic is creating "a public health nightmare," the World Health Organization reported Wednesday.

Young adults account for the largest share of the 250 million infections, with the highest incidence reported among people ages 20 through 24, WHO said. "Sexually transmitted infections and diseases have reached epidemic proportions globally. And if sexual behavior is not modified and effective new prevention and control programs are not implemented immediately, the resulting disease and mortality rates will be even more staggering," WHO Director General Dr. Hiroshi Nakajima warned.

WHO emphasized that diseases spread by sex are not harmless and can cause serious health problems, such as sterility, blindness, brain damage, cancer and even death. In addition, there is evidence the sores and inflammation caused by sexually transmitted infections boost the risk of contracting the deadly AIDS virus during sex.

Trichomoniasis, a parasitic infection, is the most common sexually transmitted infection — making up about 120 million of the 250 million new cases that occur each year. About 80 million cases stem from chlamydia, a bacterial infection that can cause infertility. In some inner city areas of the United States, 10 percent to 30 percent of sexually active teenage girls have the infection.

Genital warts account for about 30 million cases; gonorrhea, about 25 million; genital herpes, 20 million; syphilis, 3.5 million; hepatitis B, 2.5 million; chancroid, 2 million, and the AIDS-causing human immunodeficiency virus, 1 million.

"In many countries, sexually transmitted infections have become a public health nightmare," Nakajima said in a statement. Dr. Andre Meheus, head of WHO's sexually transmitted disease program, noted that the infection rate in industrial countries is rising faster than those reported in the 1960s and 1970s. In many Third World nations, recent migration to cities often leads to new sexual habits that increase the risk of such infections, he said.

"Sexually transmitted infections are not under control either in the developed or the developing world," Meheus said.

In addition to people failing to take protective measures like using condoms during sex, WHO said the incidence of some sexually transmitted diseases appears to be increasing due to development of microbe strains that are resistant to antibiotic drugs.

Jaques elected to civil service board

SANFORD — Seminole County Sheriff's Deputy Carol Jaques has been elected to serve a two-year term on the department's civil service board.

In employee election's results reported this week, Jaques, the first woman elected to the board, received 108 votes. Sgt. Steven Walker, who held Jaques' board seat and who sought re-election, received 99 votes. Corrections officer Sam Juntto received 89 votes, according to board secretary Pat Chandler.

The board, which decides some employment matters for the sheriff's department, is comprised of two members elected by employees, two members appointed by the sheriff and one member appointed by the board.

Four re-appointed to SIB

SANFORD — Four members of the Sanford Scenic Improvement Board were reappointed to three-year terms by the city commission this week. They are Anne A. Hayes, Jean C. Skipper, Connie Williams and Mary L. Atkins.

Legislation aimed at weapons

By DAN GARRETT
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Congress will be the key battleground over a new city measure holding assault-gun merchants and manufacturers responsible for deaths or injuries caused by the weapons, observers said.

The measure, which was signed by outgoing Mayor Marion Barry, faces a review by Congress before it can become law, under the District of Columbia's unique "home rule" charter.

Barry, who leaves office in two weeks, signed the measure late Monday, saying, "We don't need these guns on the streets."

The legislation covers a variety of assault weapons, including the Uzi, the Beretta and the Tec-9. Shooting victims, or their families, could recover damages from the manufacturers or retailers. The City Council approved the measure in the wake of record violence in the nation's capital. More than 485 people have been slain in the city this year.

"We are real confident about our chances in court. We're very confident," said Bernie Horn, legislative director of Handgun Control Inc., an anti-gun lobby. "The question is Congress."

The politically active National Rifle Association is expected to lobby hard, asking Congress to scuttle the measure.

"There's nothing unconstitutional about it," Horn said Wednesday. "There's no decent legal argument against it. The Congress is a fight. I think we can win this fight, but it's a big fight."

Richard Gardiner, the National Rifle Association's legislative director, said, "It's an absurd bill. It flies in the face of every notion of justice that we've ever known in our law, by holding innocent manufacturers financially liable for the criminal acts of people in the district."

Gardiner said, "It doesn't have a prayer constitutionally. The courts are going to practically laugh it out of court."

Richard Muchnick, legislative director of the Coalition to Stop Gun Violence, said, "We've favored his legislation. I honestly don't know what's going to happen in Congress — fighting the NRA is always going to be difficult."

If Congress allows the measure to become law, "Our attorneys have told us it shouldn't have a problem at all, constitutionally, in the courts," Muchnick said. "Law professors also have told us it should get through the courts."

Gun sales have been illegal in Washington since 1978. But there is a steady flow of weapons from neighboring Maryland and Virginia.

right would lead to the return of a dictatorship in the country, but he made it clear he was not attacking his close ally, Gorbachev.

"No one knows what kind of dictatorship it will be and who will come to power, who will be the dictator and what kind of regime it will be," Shevardnadze said.

"(Therefore), I would like to make the following announcement. I am resigning," he said. "Don't dare make any reactions. Don't try to dissuade me. Don't scold me."

"Let this be my contribution if you wish, my protest against the impending dictatorship."

"I consider it my duty as a man, as a citizen and as a communist. I cannot reconcile myself to all the events that are occurring in our country, and all the trials that are awaiting our people."

"I am nevertheless sure that a dictatorship will not happen, that our future is one of democracy, of freedom."

The delegates to the fourth Congress of People's Deputies listened to the resignation speech in stunned silence, then rose at the end and gave him a standing ovation.

Leaders of the "Soyuz" group of deputies that has been calling for a return to firm state control in the Soviet Union said they were pleased that Shevardnadze was leaving.

"This deed of his was unsecretly, but it was a step in the right direction," said Col. Viktor Alkhanov, a founder of the conservative group. "Shevardnadze is leaving a sinking ship."

Most officials and deputies agreed, however, that Shevardnadze's decision to quit was a blow to Soviet foreign policy and Gorbachev's government in general. Some said they hoped it would shock reformers out of their complacency.

Knickerbocker said most callers want to know when the program starts, what day their bin will be emptied and what materials are wanted. Some people want to know where to store their bin. Knickerbocker said. Most of that information was given to residents either on the sticker on the bin or in the pamphlet included in it.

"The day for their pickup is right there on the sticker on the side of the bin," said Knickerbocker. "Right by our telephone number."

Knickerbocker said after a tour of neighborhoods this morning, he found many residents have left their bins by the curb and others are using them for garbage.

The city will begin weekly pickup of recyclable materials

Jan. 7 and on following weekdays indicated on each bin. The city has begun the program in cooperation with other cities and the county to help reduce garbage flowing to the county dump near Geneva by 30 percent by 1984 under state law.

Items wanted by the city are newspapers with all the advertising inserts and "flyers" pulled out and thrown in the garbage; plastic beverage bottles such as those used for milk, water or soda; aluminum beverage cans such as those for soda or beer; and all colors of glass. Remove the caps from the plastic and glass bottles before placing them in the recycling bins.

If you still have questions not answered in the pamphlet included with the bin or printed on the sticker, call Knickerbocker at 330-8678.

owns a tree lot in Wade and had given him the trees to sell and to do what he wanted with the money. "I just want to make sure I have enough to buy gas to get home," he said.

Tisdale said he asked his customers why they chose to buy a live tree when so many of the artificial trees looked realistic.

"Almost all of them told me that it just didn't seem like Christmas unless you went to a tree lot, tied the thing to your car roof and dragged it into the house to decorate it," he said.

Lauren and Kerwin Smythe of Lake Mary arrived too late to get a tree from Tisdale. "Just sold the last one," he called to them as they got out of their car.

Kerwin said it had been a tradition in his family to buy a live tree the week before Christmas and set it up in the house, but not decorate it until Christmas Eve after the children were in bed.

"We'd wake up Christmas morning and the lights and tinsel and everything would be on the tree," he said. "And it'd smell and look like Christmas."

The Smythes said they would look elsewhere for a live tree, but thought they might want to consider a fake tree just to save money in the future.

"Maybe a few more years with the real thing," Lauren said.

"We'll have to see after that." Many grocery and discount stores which used to sell live trees at Christmas time no longer do that.

"I guess it just wasn't profitable enough," said Rosemary, a sales clerk at the Wal-Mart in Seminole Center on 17-92. "Most people just want to get their gifts at the store, they want to tromp through the dirt on a lot for their tree."

Live-cut trees are selling for about $5 to $7 per foot in the Sanford and Lake Mary area. A few nurseries, such as Rhodes and Sons Christmas Tree Forest on U.S. Highway 17-92 in Longwood, are selling potted trees for about $35 apiece, regardless of the size.

property taxes because they did not provide an aviation service or product.

Those businesses previously did not pay taxes because general interpretations of state taxation laws held that they were exempt because they were on city airport property.

Reaction to the request, which will come before local lawmakers in January, was one of cautiousness by two House members. Rep. Art Grindle, R-Altamonte Springs, said companies at the airport are already paying low lease rates compared to companies at private industrial parks, which should offset any new tax payments.

"I don't have a closed mind to it," Grindle said. "But I also need to look at the price they're paying and what the competition is paying. I would think the average rate paid in the county for industrial space is anywhere from $4 to $9 a square foot. I need to ask myself, 'Is this of benefit to the public?'"

Cooke said Codiaco is paying $2 or less per square foot for the buildings they are leasing.

"It is something I would be willing to look at," said Rep. Frank Stone, R-Oviedo. "But there's kind of a Catch-22 here. Local governments are strapped for money but you want to attract businesses to maintain the viability of the airport. I would hate to ruin the opportunity for that to develop."

Although commissioners enthusiastically and unanimously agreed to offer Rabun the job Tuesday, a county track record of two rejections from equally sought-after candidates has left them waiting with about the same degree of anticipation as a groom whose bride is a bit late to the altar.

The Herald said several congressional sources and private businessmen had accused Goudie of unilaterally awarding contracts to friends. Others said he was inept.

"It was a five-year junket into chaos," said Washington, D.C., lawyer Richard Elias, who represents a businessman allegedly stung by misdealing.

Goudie's competency came under question when the Florida Real Estate Commission suspended his license in 1989.

General says troops won't be ready to fight Jan. 15

By LEE STOKES
United Press International

American forces in the Persian Gulf will not be ready to fight for at least a month after the U.N. deadline for Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait, and Iraq told its citizens to stock up on heating oil in case of war.

The second in command of U.S. troops in Saudi Arabia told a group of eight journalists, including representatives of The Washington Post and The New York Times, that American forces might not be ready until the middle of February.

Lt. Gen. Calvin A.H. Waller made the comments Wednesday as Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, arrived in Saudi Arabia for briefings.

"I'm like a football coach," Waller said. "I want everything I can possibly get and have at my side of the field when I get ready to go into the Super Bowl."

In Washington, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater played down the comments, saying, "What he really said is they might not be as ready as they would like to be ... for all the contingencies."

Waller, who ranks behind Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf in Operation Desert Shield, said major reinforcements ordered Nov. 8 by President Bush were still in transit from Europe and the United States and would not be ready to fight possibly until the middle of February.

But Waller himself hinted the troops might be more prepared than he was letting on. "One of the last things I want to do is to give Saddam Hussein what our plans consist of."

The Iraqi oil ministry proved again it was taking the threat seriously by asking people to stock up with domestic heating fuel to confront shortages should a winter war erupt in the Gulf, Baghdad Radio said.

In another indication Iraq was preparing for war, Egypt's Middle East News Agency reported that Iraqi armored columns, tanks and artillery units were being withdrawn from the Syrian border and deployed in Kuwait.

The move was an apparent bid to reinforce the defenses of the occupied emirate against U.S.-led attacks, according to the agency, which said some 450,000 Iraqi troops were already stationed in Kuwait and southern Iraq.

Two senators who just returned from a visit to Saudi Arabia met with Bush in Washington and said they had been told by U.S. commanders that a war with Iraq would last no more than five days because of overwhelming U.S. air power.

When asked about the assessment given by Sens. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, and Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, Fitzwater said, "Obviously our commanders feel confident about their strength and abilities, but we would be most reluctant to put days or minutes on it."

On the diplomatic front, Fitzwater reported no progress in trying to set dates for Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz to visit Washington and Secretary of State James Baker to go to Baghdad.

Jordan's Crown Prince Hassem told Amman Radio that he did not think Saddam Hussein would withdraw from Kuwait before a Jan. 15 U.N. deadline, and that peace "will require a miracle."

In an interview with Turkish television aired by Cable News Network, Saddam said Wednesday there is "still a chance of peace instead of war." He said a diplomatic solution must address the Arab-Israeli dispute and the Palestinian question. Bush has refused to link the gulf crisis with any outside issue.

Panama invasion protest set

By JOHN OTIS
United Press International

PANAMA CITY, Panama — Opposition groups called on the people of Panama to return to the streets Thursday on the one-year anniversary of the U.S. invasion to call for the removal of U.S. troops from their country.

Twenty-one years of military rule came to an end Dec. 30, 1989, when 25,000 U.S. troops swarmed into Panama to oust dictator Manuel Antonio Noriega. Although there was broad support for the invasion a year ago, some Panamanians appear to be souring on the U.S. action.

The Committee for the Rescue of Sovereignty, a coalition of opposition groups, is sponsoring the march which is designed to honor Panamanians killed in the invasion, to protest U.S. intervention and to call for the removal of the 10,000 U.S. troops based in Panama.

"Panama is an occupied country where true power resides in the Yankee embassy," said a statement released by the committee. "On Dec. 20, we will demonstrate to the world ... that Panama is alive and that the national flag vibrates in the heart of Panamanians."

The invasion caused more than $1 billion in damages, and left thousands homeless and more than 800 Panamanians dead. Twenty-three U.S. troops were killed in fighting.

While the overthrow of Noriega was celebrated, many Panamanians are now disenchanted with President Guillermo Endara, who was sworn in on a U.S. base as the invasion began.

Endara is widely viewed as a weak leader. A police rebellion two weeks ago had to be put down by 500 U.S. troops while recent anti-government rallies have been broken up by riot police with tear gas and shotguns.

Panamanians are also bitter over the U.S. response to the invasion. For a number of reasons, just $108 million of a $461 million U.S. recovery aid package has been released. The U.S. government has refused to compensate for Panamanians killed or injured in the fighting.

Opposition legislators sponsored a bill to have Dec. 20 named a day of mourning but other lawmakers said Dec. 20 should be a day of celebration. To appease both sides, Endara has declared Dec. 20 a "National Day of Reflection." Public offices will be closed.

"We must reflect on the causes that led to (the invasion) so that they are never repeated," Foreign Minister Julio Linarez said Wednesday.

Police say they expect thousands of Panamanians to demonstrate Thursday.

"We don't expect any problems," said Louis Martinz, Endara's foreign press secretary. He said Endara would spend Thursday "reflecting."

The committee will also hold a mass Thursday morning at the Jardin de Paz cemetery in Panama City where 123 invasion victims were buried.

New tax, spending battle looms

By BILLY CAPPS
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The White House has signaled it is prepared for trench warfare in Congress next year over tax and spending issues, while Democrats have begun fortifying their policy positions for what promises to be intensely partisan combat.

White House Chief of Staff John Sununu told a National Press Club audience last week that while the Bush administration may have been "held hostage" by Congress and forced to accept a budget package that included a "tax ransom," the president's battle plan next year will be "Read My Lips, Part II."

Democrats are expected to return Sununu's fire soon after Christmas, when Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, is slated to release his personal assessment of the health and prospects of the U.S. economy.

The Democrat-controlled JEC plans to play a central role in the debate.

Hamilton's theme will be "growth with fairness," according to JEC staff members privy to an outline and a draft of the document he will issue between Christmas and New Year's.

JEC Staff Director Joseph Minarik said the Hamilton theme is rooted in a desire to "have economic policies that make the economy more efficient but that do so without attempting to provide selective incentives for people on the basis of how much wealth they have or how much income they earn."

Minarik added, "In other words, 'trickle-down' doesn't work."

Economist Murray Weidenbaum, who was chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers in the Reagan administration, said the "growth with fairness" theme not only has the right buzzwords and asks the right questions but should focus debate on identifying growth policies that are not regressive.

Weidenbaum stressed it is difficult to create policies that do not place a disproportionate financial burden on low-income groups "because if you look at the initial effect on income redistribution, you can show that any investment incentive is regressive."

In his unprecedented JEC chairman's report a year ago, Hamilton surprised many when he became one of the first members of Congress to insist that increasing tax revenues might be necessary to reduce the federal budget deficit.

Despite Hamilton's effort to distance his report from the work of the full economic committee, more partisan debate on economic policy seems inevitable in the next congressional session.

The JEC staff is laying plans to zero in on potentially volatile issues, such as the gap between incomes of the richest and poorest Americans, investment and productivity in key industries and defining the post-Cold War international economic order.

Soon after the release of Hamilton's report later this month, Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., a key figure in Foreign Relations Committee hearings on economic sanctions and military deployment against Iraq, is expected to regain the JEC chairmanship from Hamilton. Sarbanes chaired the committee in 1987-88.

The JEC is comprised of 12 Democrats and eight Republicans, drawn evenly from the House and Senate. The chairmanship alternates between ranking House and Senate members of the dominant party in each body.

"An era of complacency about economic policy during the '80s" is coming to an end in the United States, said JEC chief economist Steve Quick, who was tapped by Sarbanes to become staff director of the committee in January.

Domestically and internationally, Quick said, it is "time for another burst of economic statesmanship," such as the initiatives that followed World War II. International economic leadership "almost has to come from the United States" since it has the largest single economy and the U.S. dollar is the leading currency, he said.

Congress chartered the JEC in 1946 amid fears that post-World War II demobilization might trigger a depression unless U.S. resources were redirected from warfare toward economic growth.

The committee is required by law to produce an annual report each spring that often serves to counterbalance publication later in the year of the president's economic report.

The JEC also is responsible for tracking the world's planned or government-controlled economies, with emphasis on Europe, the Soviet Union and the People's Republic of China. JEC scrutiny of planned economies often provides a forum for public and private testimony by such U.S. agencies as the CIA and the Defense Intelligence Agency.

GNP up 1.4 percent for third quarter

By BOB WROSTEN
UPI Business Writer

WASHINGTON — The U.S. gross national product, the output of goods and services, increased 1.4 percent, or $14.9 billion, in the third quarter, the Commerce Department said Wednesday.

In its final report on third quarter GNP, the government said the economy firmed during the third quarter from a real GNP increase of 0.4 percent, or $4.5 billion, in the second quarter.

The GNP price index rose 4.2 percent in the quarter, compared with a gain of 3.9 percent in the second quarter.

Increases were posted in real personal consumption spending, which gained $18 billion during the quarter after rising $1.5 billion in the second quarter.

Non-residential fixed investments also rose, posting a gain of $10.9 billion during the quarter after decreasing $6.2 percent in the second quarter.

Residential fixed investments decreased by $9.6 billion after slipping $5.5 billion in the second quarter. Net exports fell $1.9 billion after tumbling a sharp $9.2 billion in the previous quarter. But exports rose $10.4 billion in the third quarter after falling in the previous quarter and imports increased.

Federal government purchases of goods and services increased $100 million in the quarter after gaining $12.9 billion in the second quarter. National defense purchases increased by $1.7 billion after rising $2.1 billion in the previous quarter.

Final sales for the quarter increased 1.9 percent, or $19.7 billion, during the quarter after falling 0.7 percent, or $7.2 billion, in the second quarter.

Business inventories subtracted $4.8 billion from the third-quarter change in real GNP, the government said, after adding $11.7 billion to the second-quarter figures.

Businesses increased inventories by $4.7 billion during the quarter after hoarding inventories by $9.5 billion in the second quarter.

Many Soviets are ashamed of food aid

By PETER SLEVIN
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

MOSCOW — A class of Moscow 13-year-olds was asked the other day whether they thought international food aid for the beleaguered Soviet Union was a good idea.

Only one said yes: "We cannot manage without it." The others all thought it was bad for the economy, bad for morale, unnecessary and humiliating.

Credits by the billion and food by the ton are arriving in Moscow to help the Soviet Union through a bitter winter. But not everyone thinks charity is a great idea, or welcomes the food with gratitude.

"It's a disgrace for Russia," said Mikhail Gladyshev, chief engineer at Refrigeration Plant No. 14. He described the demand for aid as "useless."

"It's the attitude of a dependent. People will think, 'Why should I work if I am given everything?'"

Of course, Soviet workers are not famous for their good work habits, even without charity. It seems unlikely that relatively small amounts of aid in such a vast and troubled country will further diminish efficiency.

The political and psychological dimension of international charity weighs more heavily than the modest improvement in conditions provided by donations of cereal, powdered milk, apple sauce, butter, meat and chocolate.

"Aid has nothing to do with economics. It has nothing to do with whether this country is going to survive," said Yuri Chernichenko, a writer who leads the Peasants' Party. "It's like treating symptoms. Candy is good, but a thrombosis is a thrombosis."

President Mikhail Gorbachev has resisted radical economic moves, including the creation of private property, advocated by opposition legislators such as Chernichenko. Preoccupied with holding the country together, Gorbachev is struggling to reimpose a measure of familiar Communist discipline.

"They're still fighting each other to see who has the upper hand. The food aid will be a part of the power struggle," predicted Andrei Kortunov, a political analyst in Moscow.

Gorbachev sought the aid at last month's Paris meeting of world leaders. He wants to protect the Soviet Union's increasingly fragile peace and to be seen domestically as the soviet leader best able to deliver goods from his foreign allies.

Yet, there is increasing talk of the need for a firm hand as the country's economy, infrastructure and system of government continues to disintegrate.

"People will survive, but with great hardship," Kortunov said the coming winter. "They will be irritated, and they will put the blame on Gorbachev and the generals who are in charge, and they will be more willing to seek strong hand."

The country's food problems cannot be called famine. At this point, referring to hunger would stretch the truth.

Those who oppose charity believe the country should concentrate — out of shame, if nothing else — to solve its own problems.

COLLEGE HOOPS

OSU Cowboys dump Dolphins

STILLWATER, Okla. — A final exam made Oklahoma State's Johnny Pittman run a little late Wednesday night, but he passed a big test once the game began.

Pittman had career highs with 22 points and five blocks in leading the Cowboys to a 91-58 victory over Jacksonville, Oklahoma State improved to 7-1, its best start since beginning 12-1 in 1982.

The Cowboys led by 17 at halftime and Jacksonville (4-4) got no closer than 13 after that.

Reggie Law led Jacksonville with 22 points, 18 of those in the first half.

Deveaux paces Tampa

TAMPA — Drexel Deveaux scored 36 points to lead The University of Tampa to a 114-90 victory over St. Mary's of Michigan Wednesday.

Bryan Williams scored 19 points for Tampa, 5-2. Karel Dopovnik added 17.

St. Mary's was led by James Gillespie, who scored 31 points, including being 4 for 7 from the 3-point range.

St. Leo tops Belmont Abbey

ST. LEO — Tyrone Graves scored 25 points to boost St. Leo to a 93-72 victory over Belmont Abbey Wednesday night.

Eric Brooks scored 21 points for the St. Leo Monarchs, 2-8. Errol Wooten led the Belmont Abbey Crusaders, 7-5, with 14 points. Shane Trull added 10.

BASKETBALL

Heat loses ninth straight game

MIAMI — Patrick Ewing took control late in the game, scoring nine straight points, to give New York a 104-94 victory over the Miami Heat Wednesday night and even John McLeod's record as Knicks coach at 4-4.

The Heat closed to 88-84 with six minutes to go in the game when Ewing went to work. He started with a free throw, scored two field goals underneath and then sank four straight free throws and the Knicks had a comfortable 98-89 edge with 2:54 left.

Miami was led by Sherman Douglas and Glen Rice with 23 points each.

Jankovich headed north?

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. — The New England Patriots, facing massive rebuilding of their on- and off-field images, are finalizing the hiring of University of Miami Athletic Director Sam Jankovich as Director of Football Operations.

A Patriots spokesman said New England owner Victor Kiam, Jankovich and current General Manager Patrick Sullivan continued meeting at Kiam's Manhattan town house but that the deal has not been finalized.

New England has lost 12 straight games since a controversy over players' sexual harassment of a female sports writer. In addition, star receivers Irving Fryar and Hart Lee Dykes were involved in a brawl at a Rhode Island nightclub.

Lake Mary, Seminole bounced in Classic

By DEAN SMITH
 Herald sports writer

There wasn't much Coach Greg Robinson (above) or Kerry Wiggins (below) could do to keep Seminole from losing to West Orange.

SANFORD — Winter Park stunned Lake Mary, West Orange rolled over foul-plagued Seminole, Oviedo stayed alive and Lyman won its first game of the season in second round action of the 1990 Central Florida Classic at Seminole Community College Wednesday night.

William Brooks tipped in a miss at the buzzer as Winter Park nipped Lake Mary 72-71. West Orange continued to be impressive with a 75-53 triumph over Seminole while Oviedo outscored Bishop Moore 75-68 and Lyman held on for a 32-29 victory over University.

Today at SCC's Health and Physical Education Center, Lake Mary plays Lyman at 4 p.m., Seminole faces Oviedo at 5:30 p.m., West Orange squares off with Lake Howell at 7 p.m. and Lake Brantley challenges Winter Park at 8:30 p.m.

The final three games will be played Friday starting at 5 p.m.

Lake Mary trailed 70-67 with 1:00 left in the game but a three-point play by Matt MacDonald and a beautiful steal at midcourt and layup by Mike Merthle gave the Rams a 71-70 lead with 0:22 left. After a time out, the Wildcats worked the ball to Riley McKenzie, who missed a jumper with 0:03 left. Both teams tried for the rebound but no one could control it until Brooks tipped the ball at the basket. The ball sat on the rim before falling through as the horn sounded.

Both teams got off to a slow start with the game tied 10-10 with 2:00 left in the first quarter. That's when things started to heat up. In the last 1:49 of the stanza, the teams combined for 10 points with Winter Park leading 17-13 at the end of the first period.

The teams took turns at leading in the second quarter, but at the intermission, it was still a four-point Wildcat lead, 35-31.

Jason Hamelin of the Rams overcame a first-half shooting slump to nail two straight 3-pointers to tie the game at 37-37. The rest of the game saw one team, then the other, take the momentum. After three quarters, Lake Mary led 56-54.

Brooks for the Wildcats and Merthle for the Rams had the big fourth quarters for their respective teams as Brooks scored nine points in the stanza and Merthle scored six points and had several assists.

Brooks led Winter Park (6-3) with 19 points followed by Chris Beauford (17) and McKenzie (13).

For Lake Mary (3-3), Hamelin and Merthle had 18 points each, John Roche 13 points and Alonzo Brundidge 12.

Rams, Hornets romp in openers

By TONY DESORMIER
 Herald Sports Editor

LAKE MARY — Now with the formality of the first round out of the way, things should start getting interesting in the bracket of the Burger King Girls' Soccer Classic being played at Lake Mary's Don T. Reynolds Stadium.

Both Bishop Moore and Fort Lauderdale's St. Thomas Aquinas — the last two Class 3A state champions — used strong second halves to advance, the Bishop Moore Hornets turning a 1-0 halftime lead into a 6-1 win over Melbourne while St. Thomas scored three second-half goals to beat Dr. Phillips 3-0.

Host Lake Mary cakewalked by overmatched Melbourne-Eau Gallie 11-0 while Tallahassee-Lincoln bounced West Orange out of the tournament with a 2-0 decision.

Today, Melbourne would have played West Orange at 2 p.m., but because Orange County schools are still in session and Orange County does not allow students to miss classes to play sports, West Orange will have to forfeit.

The rest of today's schedule has Eau Gallie and Dr. Phillips tangling at 4 p.m., Bishop Moore facing Lincoln at 6 p.m. and Lake Mary taking on St. Thomas at 8 p.m.

Three games are also scheduled to be played today at Lyman High School (see related story).

For Lake Mary Coach Bill Eisele, the most difficult part of the Rams' win over sartorially sharp Eau Gallie was keeping the score respectable without stifling the effort of his team.

"It's tough to tell the young kids who don't get to play much not to go forward and score," said Eisele. "We tried to work the ball and find the open player. We were trying to be more creative in our attack."

The Rams were all of that and accomplished the feat with great efficiency. Eight different players scored goals as Lake Mary launched 31 shots on goal, 23 of which either went in or required the Eau Gallie keeper to make a save.

"I'm very happy with our shooting," said Eisele.

It took over 14 minutes for Lake Mary to get on the board, Joy Gorman converting on a pass from April Goss at 14:06 of the first half. After that, the longest period of time between Ram goals was 1:43.

Gorman finished with three goals while Jessica Dibble scored twice, both goals coming in the second half. Adrian Hemmerly, Darby Felder, Shayne Thomas, Jen Evans, Dana Mills and Angela Cooley each scored one goal.

Jen Preston and Megan Coduto shared the goalkeeping chores for Lake Mary, each playing a half. Preston had to make two saves while Coduto did not face a shot in the second half.

In Bishop Moore's win over Melbourne, Amy Geltz and Stephanie Feulner each scored two goals. Christine Bourne and Mandy Ross scored a goal apiece. Stephanie Gringer passed out a pair of assists while Feulner had one assist. Cori Valleau and Sara Eslinger combined on the shutout.

"The ladies are playing really well," said Bishop Moore Coach Larry Betsinger. "In the first half, it was the typical stuff of playing in the Burger King jitters. But they got over it in the second half and started playing a little bit better."

For St. Thomas, Heidi Foster and Misti DIMeola each scored a goal while Dr. Phillips contributed an own goal. Theresa Lols assisted on Phillips' goal.

Lincoln outshot West Orange 23-3 in the nightcap. Angie Van Landingham and Meghan Boudreau scored goals. Goalie Carly Reiter made two saves to post the shutout. Each team had four corner kicks.

'Hounds, Silver Hawks join Patriots in quarterfinals

LONGWOOD — Tracy Sher scored a goal and an assist to lead the Lyman Greyhounds to a 3-0 victory of the Boone Braves in the first round of the Burger King Girls Soccer Classic Wednesday evening at Lyman High School.

In other games played at Lyman, Lake Howell blew out Tampa-Berkley Prep 8-0 and Winter Park topped Deltona 2-0.

Today at Lyman, Berkley Prep faces Boone at 4 p.m. in an elimination game while Lyman plays Lake Howell at 6 p.m. and Lake Brantley tackles Winter Park at 8 p.m. in winners' bracket games.

Three games will also be played at Lake Mary High School this evening (see related story).

The Greyhounds improve their record to 10-1-1 with a superb defensive effort from Cindy Kirkconnell. Amy Meyers, Kristina Musante and Jessica Martinson. The Braves only managed three shots on goal during the contest and only mounted one serious scoring opportunity.

"We had Meyers and Kirkconnell back in the line-up together for the first time this season," said Lyman Coach Jim Thompson. "They've both been out with injuries. Their presence really helped make a difference."

Lyman dominated the match at midfield due to the excellent play of Sher, Danielle Garrett, Sheri McClellan and Amy Smith. The Greyhound midfielders set up the offense time and time again, winning almost every ball and taking it away when they lost one.

The Greyhounds struck early, scoring on their first shot on goal. Sher made an excellent crossing pass from the left wing, connecting with Smith in stride in the center of the penalty box. Smith one-timed it into the net, giving the Greyhounds the lead only 1:45 into the contest.

Kirkconnell scored from 25 yards out at the 10-minute mark when the Boone goalkeeper kick a loose ball right to her and Kirkconnell promptly booted a shot into the upper left corner of the net.

In the 20th minute, Sher got to a loose ball in the box, maneuvered past two defenders and scored to make it a 3-0 contest.

'Hounds, Silver Hawks join Patriots in quarterfinals

Although the Greyhounds did not score for the rest of the game, they continued to dominate the match, creating several other scoring opportunities that did not result in goals.

"Everybody got a chance to play and all of the girls played very well," said Thompson.

In the first game played at Lyman on Wednesday, Michelle Harris scored a hat trick and had an assist while Joanna Abbott scored twice to power the Lake Howell Silver Hawks past the Berkley Preparatory School Buccaneers.

Monica Compton and Erica Brickheroff each had a goal and an assist. Kim Baggett scored a goal, and Joelle Fries and Jessica Cardarelli each assisted on a goal to add to the Silver Hawk attack.

Lake Howell's defense was equally impressive, not allowing a shot on goal during the match.

Brandye Batten and Christina Lawhorn each scored a goal to lead the Winter Park Wildcats to a 2-0 victory over the Deltona Wolves. The Wildcats outshot the Wolves 25-4 and had six cornerkick opportunities.

Drugs and surgery correct thrombosis

DEAR DR. GOTT: Can you enlighten me regarding deep venous thrombosis — the causes and possible prevention?

DEAR READER: Blood returns to the heart through a low-pressure system of veins, some of which are visible (superficial veins) and some of which are deep in the extremities and in the pelvis.

If blood flow in these veins slows appreciably, blood clots may form (thrombosis). Clots in the superficial veins are unusual and rarely cause harm: A vein may swell and become tender and hard, but no serious complication will ensue.

In contrast, thrombosis in a deep vein should not be ignored because pieces of that clot can break off and be carried in the bloodstream back to the heart and lungs where it can lead to tissue damage and, in some cases, death. Deep venous thrombosis is common in the legs, where it causes pain and swelling. The affliction is related to a host of factors, including varicose veins, pregnancy (because the enlarging uterus impedes venous blood flow), birth control pills, pelvic infection and prolonged immobility (which slows blood circulation). The diagnosis is confirmed by Doppler ultrasound, a test of the veins using electromagnetic waves.

Prevention involves leg elevation (to assist venous circulation), moderate exercise, avoidance of prolonged standing (and sitting with legs crossed), treatment of infection (if needed), elastic support hose (for varicose veins), alternate methods of birth control and rapid mobilization after surgery, to mention a few.

Treatment consists of anticoagulant drugs (such as Coumadin) and surgery (to remove dilated veins that repeatedly become thrombosed).

Because prevention and treatment must be individualized, depending on the cause, I urge patients with deep venous thrombosis to follow their doctors' advice.

DEAR READER: To my knowledge, brittle fingernails are not caused by aspirin. More

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

After North's artificial preemptive opening, East-West failed to reach their vulnerable small slam. South doubled (two spades, the premise being that North would pass only when his true suit was spades. When North showed that his suit was hearts, South bid four clubs to show the ace in that suit as well as length. West now asked for ace. North bid five clubs to get in the opponents' way, and East's double was intended to show one ace. Unfortunately West misinterpreted the meaning of the double and passed. This type of thing happens all the time, even in the semifinals round of World Team Championships. The defense functioned perfectly. Down six, in the revised scoring scheme for tournaments, gave East-West 1400, a small loss, since their teammates at the other table were minus 1430, their opponents having reached the small slam in spades. Unfortunately, in the stress of competition, everyone mis-scored the result. The score card indicated that declarer had taken six tricks, and the total entered was only 1100. Later, before the final match began and within the prescribed time for correction, all contestants realized that the actual result should have been 1400. Despite the fact that the German team, the ostensible winners of the match, agreed that they actually had been set 1400, the appeals committee, on the grounds that the score card manifestly indicated that six tricks had been taken, let the result stand. This strange decision will long be criticized. (C)1990, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

YOUR BIRTHDAY
Dec. 21, 1990

Financial indicators should be trending upwards in the year ahead and improved material conditions are likely, provided you capitalize on opportunities. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today you might expect more from persons than their capabilities warrant and end up getting angry because they can't deliver. Strive to be tolerant. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences which are governing you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Upon occasion you are sometimes overly generous with the wrong people while ignoring the deserving. It looks like this might be one of those days, so be careful. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This is a good day to reevaluate your objectives, because you might be trying very hard to achieve a goal that won't gratify you once it is attained. PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If something disturbs you today you are likely to suffer in silence instead of bringing it out into the open where it can be resolved. Don't hold things in. ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be extremely selective today regarding your choice of companions. If you're careless, you might associate with a person who may do something underhanded and you could be accused of complicity. TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're an independent thinker who likes to set his/her own goals, but today this assignment might be entrusted to an individual whose aims are not in harmony with yours. GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You might have problems working with co-workers today, especially if you are critical of their efforts and overly insistent upon doing things your way. Strive to be considerate. CANCER (June 21-July 22) Someone who is presently indebted to you might not comply to your demands for repayment today if you attempt to pressure him/her. In order to get that to which you're entitled, you must be tactful. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Today you might have to make a hard decision that affects someone else as well as yourself. If you do not consider his/her interests, a problem could erupt. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Persons over whom you have authority will emulate the example you set today. If they perceive you to be indifferent or lazy, they'll mirror your behavior. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You might not be too proficient today at managing your resources or those of others. You won't be chastised for your losses, but be prepared to take some heat for your other mistakes. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Guard against inclinations today to overreact when you have to contend with unexpected frustrations. There is a possibility you might blow small infractions out of proportion.
