CUBA FACING NEW DANGERS SAYS MENOCA

Ex-President Finds Island Situation More Complicated Than It Ever Was

HAVANA, Nov. 24.—(AP)—Former President Mario Garcia Menocal gave out a statement here recently in which he summed up his views of the present situation in Cuba.

"When I left Havana for Miami some months ago," he said, "I had hopes the situation in Cuba would improve, but I must confess that on my recent return I have found it even more complicated.

"The government is wallowing among perilous reefs and gives the impression of being unable to make its way into a smoother sea. The picture is darker and more complicated because reproaches and accusations are piling up against the government.

"I try to form an accurate judgment of the government and I become confused. I find its attitude cold or indifferent and since this attitude seems unexplainably phlegmatic I feel that it has not taken into account the realities of the present.

"Reflection makes this hypothesis absurd because these realities are so grave and apparent that those who govern cannot possibly ignore them. This brings me to another conclusion I have to believe that the government must feel itself so strong that an optimistic idea of its strength has caused it to view certain delicate matters with disdain.

"The socially and economically active elements of Cuba, rich and poor, are deeply worried. They had out all their hopes in the government which took over last January. Now, in the very atmosphere we breathe in Cuba we find like a poisonous substance—distillation.

"Business interests find with sadness, surprise and possibly with some indignation, that their efforts go to pieces against the rancor and lack of confidence ruling in the island.

"There must be a reaction of (Continued On Page Two)

Government Statistics Bear Out U.S. Trade Body's View That Business Is Improving

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—(AP)—Better business and a better business outlook were reported yesterday by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and upheld by government statistics.

"Evidence of improving business sentiment, and a basis for it, seen in October, continue to appear in November," the chamber said noting "a six percent rise in the volume of check payments, steady retail sales, stable wholesale prices, favorable car loading reports, and increasing steel production."

Meanwhile, the commerce department prepared for its forthcoming monthly review a statement that business has been "slowly on the gain. It reported increased industrial production, employment, payrolls and construction. Only Thursday night, the labor department, giving figures for October, reported a 280,000 increase in employment and $11,300,000 gain in weekly payrolls. Secretary Perkins expressed pleasure at a pronounced payroll rise in the durable goods industries.

The chamber of commerce a week ago initiated a campaign for active co-operation between the Administration and business leaders in bringing about recovery. A ready response came from other business organizations and key New Deal officials.

The move was said to have (continued on page two)

MOFFETT BREAKS WITH ICKES ON HOUSING PLANS

Administrator Terms Federal Finance Plans As Ruinous

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—(AP)—The liberal-conservative conflict within the Administration broke sharply into the open yesterday as James A. Moffett, federal housing administrator, publicly termed ruinous a vast federally-financed housing program advanced by Secretary Ickes.

Moffett, labeled as more of a conservative than Ickes, declared the Public Works administrator's plans would wreck the National Housing Act. He advocated a central agency to handle all federal housing activities. This was interpreted to mean, also, one spokesman for those plans.

Only a few minutes before, Ickes called "misguided" a wide interpretation of his remarks Thursday. He said published reports that created "false impression that I am opposed to a resumption of private enterprise in the field of housing. Moffett is leading an effort of spur private capital into this field. Plainly he was aroused.

There were strong indications last night the White House had taken a hand in the differences between the two Ickes yesterday called Moffett to tell him he did not intend his program to conflict with the Housing Administration. Other Administration spokesmen. (Continued On Page Three)

Tropical Storm Veers Toward Bermuda

M. the tropical disturbance has moved to the northward, being central about 350 miles southwest of Bermuda, attended by shifting gales and by winds of hurricane force near the center. Caution is advised vessels in and near its path."

Warm weather hastened today to aid of the United States, gripped in a sudden cold spell that sent the mercury below freezing in many cities.

The forecast made early today was that temperatures would rise generally today and Sunday would be somewhat warmer, thus cutting short the cold wave before it could get a good start. Terre Haute, Ind., was the coldest place early today with 27 degrees.

RICHBERG'S CODE VIEWS DENOUNCED

Labor Will Not Take Ace Advisor's Interpretation Of Mooted Section 7A

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—(AP)—Organized labor yesterday denounced and termed "completely unacceptable" the interpretation of section 7a repeatedly expressed by Donald R. Richberg, President Roosevelt's recovery coordinator and ace advisor.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, asserted in an interview that Richberg's opinion flatly contradicted that of the national labor relations board. It served, he said, only to increase the "confusion" surrounding labor rights under NRA.

Behind his statements lay: The labor board's ruling in the Houde case that a majority of the workers in a particular plant vote for collective bargaining representation by a particular union, that union shall speak for all the plant's employees, with the right of minorities to present grievances protected.

Richberg's contrasting view is that only those actually voting at the election are to be represented, by the union chosen, with those participating bound to abide by the results, but with that result entirely inapplicable to employees who refrained from voting.

"Mr. Richberg's interpretation has added to the great confusion that already exists," Green said. "Either the labor board is right and Richberg is wrong or Richberg is right and the labor board is wrong."

In this conflict of interpretations, labor accepts that of the national labor relations board, the judicial tribunal created by Congress for the purpose of interpreting section 7a and applying it to particular cases.

"Labor cannot and will not accept Richberg's interpretation. Under his interpretation an organization can absolutely control the economic destiny of all its workers."

The controversy goes back to the federation vote upon the company union. The union of the type referred to has been directed at giving the worker an opportunity to express his own ballot in preference to a union with national affiliation for the employee representative plan of the employer.

The Houde decision was hailed by labor as a monumental victory since it endorsed the national and international unions' view that such elections would have the legal right to represent all the workers in the plant in which the election was held. (Continued On Page Five)

Huey Under Attack Of Business Men

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 24.—Louisiana business men appealed to the federal government yesterday to smash Senator Huey P. Long's partnership, which they said was strangling private industry with illegal taxes.

Newspapers, power interests and sulphur companies went to federal court seeking injunctions against state taxes imposed on them.

New Orleans business leaders met to form an appeal to the Public Works Administration in Washington for release of $11,000,000 in PWA funds to this state. The PWA held up all loans from 1933 pending a complete study of the state which Long rammed through the legislature last week.

HOPKINS HINTS END OF DIRECT AID FOR NEEDY

Congress To Be Asked To Set Up Wide-spread Unemployment Relief Plan

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—(AP)—The United States conference of mayors today adopted a resolution demanding a large scale public works program as the "best stimulus to recovery."

The resolution said "We hold steadfastly to the belief that the best stimulus to recovery is a federal public works program prototyped on such a scale as to make an impact on industry."

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, intimated to the United States mayors' conference yesterday that the next Congress will be asked to establish a new program of unemployment relief, setting up a widespread job project and abolishing direct relief.

"I feel very strongly," he said, "that the present method of relief is the way to care for 17,000,000 destitute people. A new way can and must be found in the near future."

Hopkins said he did not see why we should continue relief as such a single day longer.

"Any influence I have got," he declared, "is am going to use to keep our relief system from being fastened upon the cities of America."

"I am convinced that we have a man in the White House and a Congress meeting Jan. 1 that will answer this question in a satisfactory way."

The relief administrator said he was more convinced than ever that work relief is the best way of meeting the unemployment problem, regardless of the fact that it may cost more than direct relief.

He seized the opportunity to reply in criticism of the federal administration of relief, including his former the American Liberty League.

"Some league," he said, "I forget what league it is, wants the relief budget cut a billion dollars. But it is a budget that no member of that league's executive committee has ever been within the home of one of these destitute families."

As long as the need is there it must be met and there is no use theorizing about it. I'm not going to let any two-by-four crowd or any selfish group take advantage of these people at this time."

Hopkins said the relief problem, in its broad implications, was (Continued On Page Four)

A verdict acquitting Mrs. Koester was returned after the jury deliberated three hours. When the verdict was read, cheering broke out in one section of the courtroom and this was severely rebuked by Judge G. H. Howard who called such conduct improper, unseemly, and almost shameful.

Slope Of Windshield Held As Difference Between Old, New Speed Records In Air

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE (Associated Press Science Editor) NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—(AP)—Modern Mercury's monocoque—the windshield of a 1934 airplane—is a perfect example of the things which are breaking records in the air.

Speeds were increased three to five miles an hour by redesigning the windshields of some planes. Many of these changes were just the opposite of what a layman would expect.

The slope of windshield is important, but far more so are little details in shape and form not discernible at first glance, that allow the fuselage to push through the air without forcing the air to turn sharp corners and be churned into eddies.

Another 10 to 20 miles an hour came from picking the right positions for engines. To work best, on some planes, they should stick their heads out about like turtles. This is called the "optimum" position. (Continued On Page 2)

LIPPMANN TELLS OF CRISIS FACING FOREIGN NATIONS

Editor Believes New War Near Unless Prosperity Returns

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—Walter Lippmann, formerly executive editor of the New York World and later a special contributor to the New York Herald Tribune on political and economic subjects, has returned from Europe full of dark forebodings.

He was optimistic about the United States, but he described the whole continent of Europe as suffering from a growing organic disease of the body politic, from which war may result at any time. To avert widespread social disintegration abroad, Mr. Lippmann believes some form of international monetary stabilization is immediately necessary.

Mr. Lippmann's conclusions, dwelling as they may seem from so temperate an interpreter of events, are not the result of any hasty investigation. He has passed the last four months studying the world situation. He was, he said, anxious to "settle his mind" with a "general look round."

Since September he has been abroad, on vacation in Egypt and before he sailed for home he passed some time in France and Italy, where he added much first-hand information to his knowledge of affairs.

"I am delighted to back at my work," said Mr. Lippmann. "There is a great quantity of things that I feel want saying very badly, and I am anxious to say them. They are not, I may say, peculiarly cheerful. I have come to the conclusion that there is a real (Continued On Page 2)

RED BAY, Ala., Nov. 24.—(AP)—Three unmasked bandits yesterday held up two employees of the Bank of Red Bay and escaped, after scooping up approximately $2,500 in currency and shoving the two employees into a vault.

Charles Cashon and Olney Naher, cashier and assistant cashier, respectively, were alone in the bank when confronted by two bandits who ordered them to "put 'em up." A third member of the band waited at the door.

Reynolds Predicts Big Sweep By Pensionists

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—(AP)—A prediction that a demand for old age pensions will sweep the next Congress was made yesterday by Senator Reynolds (D., N. C.).

"The movement for the federal government to take the leadership in formulating a plan for old age pensions is gaining momentum," he said in a statement.

"In every section of the country groups are being formed to press this cause. It is a just one."

BALDWIN LAUDS INFLUENCE OF UNITED STATES

Vice Premier Claims Collective Peace System Of Little Value Without U.S.

GLASGOW, Scotland, Nov. 24.—(A.P.)—Vice Premier Stanley Baldwin in an address here last night, declared impossible the proper working of any collective peace system that did not include the U. S.

He went as far as to assert, in effect, his personal determination that Great Britain's fleet should never be used as an instrument of a collective system without previous consultations with the American power.

"Never as an individual will I sanction the British navy being used for the armed blockade of any country in the world until I know what the U. S. is going to do."

Lamenting the withdrawal of Germany and Japan from the League of Nations, Baldwin declared no collective peace system would ever be undertaken without those two nations and the U. S.

The vice premier and lord president of the privy council, addressing 4,000 persons here, said he could not tell whether the U. S. would ever abandon its traditional policy of isolation.

He said he was sure, however, that would never be a League of Nations with the power and influence it ought to have "until that great country is a member."

The League of Nations, he pointed added, could not function with two great countries like Japan and Germany outside.

"What we've got to do," he said emphatically "is to go on working largely by faith, I admit, to try to get back into the League those who have belonged to it, and trust that the day may come when the world circle is complete by the admission of the U. S."

His audience greeted this expression with cheers.

Whole urging the efforts to strengthen the League never relaxed, Baldwin said at the same time there was no collective security which could give Britain any guarantee. He cited as an instance the recent utterance of Naji Baker, prominent labor leader and secretary to President Arthur Henderson, that Britain must have some defense "when there is a possibility that a fact power or powers might make was upon us."

Folks who think that the Supreme Court is influenced, or even controlled, by public opinion, should consider the Knutson case. We are not always quite sure in what process the Supreme Court does arrive at its decisions, but we are confident that public opinion is not an important factor.

Speaking of taxes, there's something for instance, where the city council is making a strenuous effort to hold this year's millage down to 2.000. The total assessed valuation of all the property in the city is $675,983, while judgments alone, ordered paid by federal courts, amounts to $125,000. Other debt service items push the budget requirements up to $1,684,000 for this year. That's almost three times the value of all the taxable property in the city.

PERA officials announce that minimum wages on relief work will no longer exceed the prevailing rate of pay for similar work in local communities. For some time it has seemed queer that relief workers on government made projects should be paid more, sometimes two or three times more, than employees doing the same kind of work in private business or agriculture. It has not been surprising under such circumstances that relief rolls have increased.

The Blue Eagle has been gradually passing out of the picture during the past year, and the work in NRA offices in Washington has considerably lessened, but as is so often the case with political business and commissions, expenses have continued to rise. About a year ago General Johnson put a cap to NRA salaries of $6,000. Today more than 90 persons in NRA are getting more than $6,000 a year, and 250 are getting more than $4,000. The chief of the NRA, Donald Stewart, Blackwell Smith, is less than 40 years old, gets $12,000 a year.

Free Education

There was considerable excitement in New York the other day when a group of young radicals who were students at the City College of New York burned the president of that institution in effigy, conducted a campaign to encourage other students to strike, and finally concluded the day's performance with a near riot in which a number of students were beaten and at least four or five professors badly handled.

Ordinarily such an exhibition might pass unnoticed beyond the campus grounds. If considered at all, it would be attributed to a childish prank, the good natured razzing of a really beloved prexy, or simply a little harmless letting off of steam by healthy and vigorous young men. But in this instance there seems to have been an element present which is strangely akin to the propagation of the seeds of communism.

When one stops to think that the City College of New York is an institution of higher learning to which it is not necessary to send boys and girls in order that they may be literate, but to which students are sent in order to study professions, to prepare themselves for a standard of living far beyond the grasp of the average individual, to furnish them instruction which not alone will enable them to earn a living, but which will make it possible in ordinary times to enjoy many of the luxuries of life, it seems but natural that agitation for a strike among the students would not get anywhere.

And when one remembers that the City College of New York is supported almost entirely by taxation, that the City of New York alone contributes more than $3,000,000 annually to this institution, and that the state appropriates whatever else may be required, it is surprising that anyone would have the gall even to suggest a strike. Being handed a liberal education on a silver platter by taxpayers not even known to them, strange animals, it is indeed, who would strike for want of more.

All of which brings up the question, goes the public really owe it to any particular individual to give him training in medicine, law, or engineering, which is denied to the average citizen? Of the value of higher education, there can be little doubt. And we would be the last in the world not to recommend to anyone to get it if he can. But is it the public's job to educate one man far beyond the abilities and intelligence of another man so that the former may earn a larger compensation? Should the public provide educational facilities for one which it cannot provide for all?

We are reminded that the FERA is at the present time contributing vast sums of money to students who presumably would not be able to remain in college if aid were not given them by the government. These contributions are made even in the case of students attending privately endowed universities, not in any way connected with the state. Is it a part of a relief organization's duty to continue the education of some when there are millions of others who cannot be so aided?

Do the taxpayers themselves feel called upon to buy college educations for the children of certain other people at a time when, perhaps, high taxation prevents them from sending their own children to college.

Hitler's "Feeble Minded"

We see by the papers that the German government has decided to extend the Nazi sterilization program so as to include those who are only "slightly feeble minded." When the sterilization law first went into effect on the first of this year, only those who were habitual criminals, or were totally insane, or had incurable hereditary diseases, were to be prevented from having children.

Now before a single year has passed, those who are "slightly feeble minded" must also submit to the operation. One may well begin to wonder just how feeble minded one has to be in Germany before he is "slightly feeble minded," and whether that definition might not be applied by Hitler and his crowd to anyone who happened to differ with their policies and methods.

The supposed purpose of sterilization laws is to improve the human race, in Germany, of course, it is to improve the German people, to make supermen out of them. Naturally if morons and imbeciles are prevented from breeding, if people with incurable diseases can be kept from having children to whom they pass these diseases along, there should be in the course of a few generations a marked improvement in the physical average.

However, one wonders whether there is any real social service in attempting by such drastic measures to eliminate defective humans from civilization as long as other humans already in the fittest possible physical condition are in imminent danger of being shot to pieces at every whim of such dictatorial leaders as Herr Hitler himself. It would seem to us that between being "slightly feeble minded" and suffering from severe shell shock, there is not much choice.

This is not the first time that strenuous efforts have been made to improve the human race by destroying those portions of it which did not conform to the particular standards accepted by the parties in power. It was not so many centuries ago that people were burned to death in this country, not for being "feeble minded," but for being witches. It may yet come to pass in Germany that Hitler will decide witches, too, should be sterilized. Surely witches should not be allowed to propagate!

SANFORD TWENTY YEARS AGO

The annual thank offering meeting of the Missionary Union of the Congregational Church was fittingly observed yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. E. Walker. Mrs. Henry Wright led the devotional which was followed by a program on the women of mission lands. Those taking part were: Mrs. Harry Pilkington, Mrs. Charlotte Smith, Mrs. C. E. Walker, and Mrs. Moughton. Those present were: Mrs. C. E. Walker, Mrs. A. D. Smith, Mrs. Charlotte Smith, Mrs. G. B. Frank, Mrs. Thomas Krigle, Mrs. Semmes, Mrs. Harry Pilkington, Mrs. Moughton, Mrs. Peckard, Mrs. Anna Walker, Mrs. Henry Wright, Mrs. Jewett, Mrs. Enaminger, Mrs. Findlay Munson, Mrs. Macy, Mrs. Bertha Hand, Mrs. E. T. Woodruff, Mrs. R. A. Terhune, Miss Flora Walker, Miss Alice Tetherly, and Miss Albina Frank.

Mrs. J. W. Dickens, who attended the Federation meeting at Lakeland, has returned home after spending a few days pleasantly with friends in Tampa. Mrs. Dickens brings back one of the honors of the Federation, having been selected recording secretary of the State Federation of Women's Clubs. The regular fortnightly meeting of the Literature Department of the Woman's Club will meet in the club rooms on Oak Avenue next Wednesday. Those who will take part on the program were: Mrs. M. Martin, Mrs. A. D. Key, and Miss Mary Chappell. Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Buchanan came in from their country home to attend the recital Friday evening. They were the dinner guests of Mrs. Henry Wright. It has been definitely decided now to hold the Seminole County Fair for four days in February, beginning Feb. 3 and lasting four days. The fact that it will be strictly a street fair will enhance its value with the business men of the city, giving, as it will, the main attraction on the street and keeping the immense crowds in the main part of the city during the four days of the Fair.

Washington Daybook

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—From the looks of things at present Mr. Roosevelt may be in for trouble with Congress on the question of his program for social security.

Some foresee prospects for the stiffer bill he has had with Congress thus far if he clings to the position he outlined before the advisory council of the National Conference on Economic Security in Washington. His reference to old age pensioners, then, that he didn't know whether this liberal program for any such federal legislation, is certain to have repercussions on Capitol Hill when the legislators gather in January. Members of Congress, new as well as old, had been led to expect a different attitude on the part of the White House.

Just before the last Congress adjourned, in a special message President Roosevelt declared: "I am looking for a sound means which I can recommend to provide at once security against several of the most serious causes of unemployment and old age." There was considerable sentiment in the last Congress for old age pension legislation. Representative Conroy of Massachusetts, chairman of the House Committee, and Senator Dill of Washington sponsored such a measure.

The bill would have provided federal aid to states with old age pension laws. Word came up from the White House, however, that the Administration was at work on a general program of social security and the bill was side-tracked. How far members of Congress, especially the new ones, would be opposed to the Administration on the issue of a more liberal program in this field than offered by the President is problematical.

Those elected on the Democratic ticket Nov. 6, particularly those in the Senate, will think hard before openly opposing the President's wishes. They are aware of the fact that it was largely through the popularity of Mr. Roosevelt they were able to pile up majorities and this thought alone will make it difficult to tear them away from their opinions.

The White House, however, always has had a tendency in the past to avoid an open conflict with Congress. It is possible that if Mr. Roosevelt finds himself confronted with an overwhelming sentiment for liberal program of social security he may revise some of the views he expressed before the advisory council of NCEC, or at least compromise.

Statistics Bear Out View That All Business Improves

(Continued From Page One) It has been based upon a realization that President Roosevelt apparently would be an office for six more years, that more was to be gained by working with rather than against him, that business sentiment at the moment was highly optimistic and should be nurtured into the sustained drive of recovery.

The cooperative effort followed a period in which the President and officials close to him sought to reassure business men that they could safely proceed with plans free from the fear of sudden restraint of radical tendencies. Yesterday the chamber asserted that the conditions of the moment were such that reassurances of this nature were less needed now than several months ago. It emphasized, however, that business should not have to cope suddenly with unforeseen governmental obstacles.

In responsible modern enterprise there is such a long interval between origination of additional undertakings and accomplishment, with so large outlays for labor and materials and so small a margin for profit or loss, that a feeling of freedom from the danger of unpredictable outside influences is necessary to released initiative," it said. "To give this feeling in many directions it will now require less in the way of reassurance than at any time since last spring."

Of the month's business omens, it said: "Such a broad index of national activity as the volume of payments by checks in the commercial and industrial centers of the country is running six percent over the level of last year, and 20 percent over the year before. "There is an obvious tendency in these figures to even up as among the sections of the country. Retail sales keep a steady course. With such factors as signs

Windshield's Slope Affects Speed Of Planes Through Air

(Continued From Page One) "Even the thickness of this 'turtle's' neck is important to speed. Many a plane stepped up 20 miles an hour by having its face lifting" has been the adjustable out by use of fillets.

In the classic a fillet is an ornamental headland. On a plane a fillet is still a thing of beauty, but its shape has changed. It's really a "filler" and it cuts down air resistance. The wings are "filleted" where they join the body. That is, they are flared so that they join with the same smoothness as if the angle between wing and body were filled with curved molding clay.

Where wires are still used, the points of attachment are filleted. Recent American planes are filleted so far that the tail fins are a part of the body. More important than the "face lifting" has been the adjustable pitch propeller. Without them some of the latest big planes could not get off the ground with a load, despite being able to fly perfectly once in the air.

For getting off the ground the propeller works best nearly flat, but for efficient cruising needs tilted blades to take larger bites of air. Still more speed is in sight from making these variable pitch propellers automatic. The first of these has just been announced, with a claim that it adds 12 miles an hour. Apparently due soon is the wing which can change its size, and grip both longer and wider under the pilot's control. This is an old idea whose realization has been slow.

Taper of wing tips, making them more pointed, is another growing speed element. It was evident from the care with which he expressed himself that he felt his opinions to be somewhat sensational in their pessimism. Yet he talked with a complete and serious conviction. "The Continent is still in the grip of a truly terrible deflation which is paralyzing private initiative," he said. "It is steadily reducing the standard of life, and is provoking a struggle for existence among classes, regions and nations."

"It would be foolish to try to predict what will happen. There is a possibility of widespread social disintegration. And there is the use of pretending that these possibilities are not real. They are in the minds of every informed and responsible person in Europe. The hopeful side of it is that everyone realizes the danger, and that therefore steps may be taken to avert it. "If it is to be averted, it is clearly essential that the international monetary position should be stabilized. Only then can the continental deflation end, either by revaluation at a new parity, or conceivably by internal readjustments at the present parties. In either event, only through monetary stability can the restrictions which are destroying the trade of Europe be relaxed, and fresh air circulate once more in the stifling atmosphere. "Such an end to the continental deflation is the only method I see by which the class war, which rages openly or is held down by autocratic violence, can abate, and with it the pressure of desperate peoples for policies that, if pursued to their logical ends, must mean another general European war. At the same time, it is necessary to unite the European nations which want peace in a common determination not to permit a revision of the map of Europe by force of arms. "It seems to me that our own position has plenty of difficulties, but they are of a less tragic kind," he said. "We are rocking, as some one recently remarked on a solid base. We are not threatened by war. We have, as compared with most nations, a margin of safety in the strength of our material resources. We have an unusually solid government. "All peoples are fighting for progress and well being and while the frontiers of thought are disappearing as between nations and races, each state is seeking economic advantages that are positive. Many feel that Cuba is missing magnificent opportunities. It would be unparadise if we should only return to sanity after other nations have taken advantage of circumstances which seem to favor us in a most privileged way at the present moment. "If order and peace are supreme benefits of civilization we should make every sacrifice that they may again reign in Cuba where there are so many respectable interests and homes of foreigners which have been established under the protection of our civilization and of our laws."

Mr. Lippmann explained that he did not include Great Britain and the Scandinavian countries in his picture of European conditions. In them, he feels, government is more stable and conditions are less serious. For the rest, he described the

THEY HIRED THE MONEY

MIAMI HERALD

Another dream of the 1920s boom which seems slightly fantastic today was the arrangement for financing the harbor in Broward county now known as Port Everglades, but which began as a part of the dream development of the late Joe Young at Hollywood-by-the-Sea.

The United States supreme court very properly held that the bonds issued to pay for this harbor were valid obligations of the port district, even though lands 50 miles to the interior of Broward county might be considered today as not benefiting by its operations. In 1927, when Young found he could not pay for the harbor, promised in his real estate prospectus, he got the government of the city of Hollywood and the city of Fort Lauderdale to join him in bonding for $4,000,000, which was to be added to another $2,000,000 from the Young properties. Even in those days it looked as though the back country of Broward county soon would be feeding directly into such a harbor.

But the Young properties collapsed, the money from the two cities was spent in dredging out the slips and channel to deep ocean water, and the subsequent years failed to bring the back country development that was expected. It is only lately that any situation with pain-taking clarity. It was evident from the care with which he expressed himself that he felt his opinions to be somewhat sensational in their pessimism. breakdown due to dissipation and reckless living. "My chief feeling at the moment is that the time has come to stop being what H. G. Wells once called Gawsdakers—that is, people who rush about shouting 'for Gawsdake do something.' Last year it was perhaps true that action, and plenty of it, was what we most needed. Now it is much more important to make up our minds as to which actions have proved to be correct, and which are failures and should be scrapped. "I am, therefore, in favor of a steady, considered demobilization of the emergency power, and above all of the uncritical mood which prevailed in the emergency. We have got as far as we can get by audacity and improvisation, and we need, I believe, definiteness in place of indefiniteness, regular and orderly procedure and a clear sense of what are the rules of the game. We must decide, in fact what is worth salvaging in the New Deal."

Medical Journal Has Praise For Roosevelt

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—(AP)—The Journal of the American Medical Association in its current issue editorially declares President Roosevelt's stand on old age pensions and sickness insurance to have been "the most encouraging words" to the medical profession to come from the recent national conference on security. President Roosevelt told the conference that while organizations promoting fantastic schemes have increased the difficulties of getting sound legislation, he hoped some security for the aged could be provided through a sound and uniform system.

Republican Fiasco Of Nov. 6 Fourth Suffered By Party In History Of U. S. Politics

By CARL C. CRANMER
WASHINGTON, Nov. 24. (AP)—The history of American politics has been marked by four all-time "lows" in the fortunes of a party, the most recent being that suffered by the Republicans in the Nov. 6 elections.

Incomplete returns from 1934 election indicated the next Congress will have the following membership:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Democrats	322
Republicans	103
Independents	10
UNITED STATES SENATE
Democrats	69
Republicans	21
Independents	2
Uncertain	1

On this basis, Republicans will have but 23.6 percent of the members of the House and only 20 percent of the Senate.

Since 1855, when Republicans and Democrats began their 80-year-old feud, it has been axiomatic that the party in power would lose in the off-year election of Representatives in Congress.

The federalist party, disintegrated during the rule of Jefferson and his successors, Opposition was more violent during the Jackson period, but the whig party, too, faded away.

Lincoln introduced the period that saw the Republican party in the dominant role for an almost unbroken period of 72 years and the Democrat party reduced several times almost to vanishing point in its representation in Congress.

Republicans who look at the figures and discover that in 1855 after the party had scored its first big campaign, it was more powerful in Congress than it will be in 1935, need not jump to the conclusion, however, that their party is on the point of disintegration.

In 1855 Republicans had 16 Senators, or 24 percent, and 108 members of the House, an actual majority in that chamber.

The Democratic party fortunes at times have ebbed in a level even lower, or nearly as low, as Republican fortunes may seem to be in 1935.

For instance, from 1861 to 1869 Democrats had only from 10 to 12 members of the Senate. The all-time low for Democratic representation in the Senate was in 1869 when, with 11 senators, they had only 14 percent of the body.

In 1861, too, Democratic fortunes were very low in the House when they had only 21 members, just 23.5 percent of that body.

Democratic representatives all so were rare in 1873 and 1821, when they had only 30 percent of the House members.

Republicans fortunes were at a lower ebb than they were after the "Bull Moose" split and the Wilson landslide, for in 1913 they had 127 House members, 29 percent of that body, and in 1917 they had 39 Senators, 40 percent of that branch. Both of these figures were at the low point of Republican representation during the Wilson administrations.

Russian Farmers To Be Shot For Neglecting Crops

TASHKENT, U. S. S. R., Nov. 21. Two more farmers were sentenced to death for sabotage and theft of government property, bringing to eight the total number of men who must face a firing squad for neglect of the cotton crop.

The Uzbekistan supreme court is still holding trials on other collective farms with more than 40 defendants.

Latest men condemned were M. Kadrov and M. Murodov, chairman and chairman, respectively, of the harvest department of the collective farm.

The farm fulfilled only 26 percent of its cotton plan, the worst record so far revealed in the trials. The defendants were charged with destroying 200 acres of cotton by discharging "shock workers" on trumped-up charges and also with the theft of livestock, wheat and 1,200 rubles belonging to the farm.

Two other workers were sentenced to 10 years imprisonment each.

Auto Accidents On Increase, Hays Finds

One of the most serious problems that Florida has in face is the increasing number of automobile accidents for the number of deaths for this year through August was 366 as compared with 288 for the same period last year, according to the report of Walter L. Hays, president of the American Fire and Casualty Company. This company writes a large volume of the automobile insurance business in the State of Florida.

According to Jack Finnell, local representative, the increase in the number of automobile accidents has caused great loss of property as well as loss of life and many large damage suits are being entered against motorists. "Any motorist who drives without insurance is taking a long chance of losing a sizable portion of his savings," he said.

Rickenbacker Predicts Establishment Of Service In 3 Years

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—Ten-hour air transportation service, on regular schedules between New York and London, was predicted by Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, American war ace.

Marked progress in engine design and development of personnel efficiency, will make this possible, said Rickenbacker, adding that he expected to see regular trans-Atlantic and trans-Pacific air transport service established in "three years."

"In six to eight years," he said, "it should be possible to go from New York to Los Angeles in six to eight hours, from New York to London, in eight to 10 hours and from the west coast to Hawaii in the same period of time."

"All this," he emphasized, "can be accomplished with perfect safety and comfort for passengers."

Rickenbacker's prediction was made as he reviewed events that permitted him to establish a near record for air transport flights between New York and Miami, Fla.

Recently, Rickenbacker, using a transport plane, completed a flight from Los Angeles to New York, 3111 miles in 12 hours and 30 minutes. His average speed was 215 miles per hour. The distance between London and New York, by water is 3333 miles.

"With proper cooperation from the English and French," he said, "I think we'll see trans-Atlantic and trans-Pacific service in three years. I predict that the success of American engineers will stimulate long range airplane service to Europe and the Orient, beyond their conception. In Europe, they have just awakened to the progress we are making here."

America, Rickenbacker asserted, is "way ahead of Europe" in the manufacture of airplane engines and equipment, with the possible exception of the manufacture of large engines, of 1600 horsepower or more, which are mainly produced in the British Isles, and used for large "flying boats."

What American engineers and manufacturers actually have done, in speeding up airplane motion used in transport planes, is to "move California east, to a point corresponding with Pittsburgh and Miami to a point far closer to New York than before."

European countries, Rickenbacker observed, should feel that they must keep up with America in the development of air equipment and facilities, so that distance may be shortened, improving international relations.

"Such cooperation from Europe would eliminate petty intrigue and selfishness," said Rickenbacker, "and insure peace."

Rickenbacker observed that his New York to Miami and return was not staged for "stunt" purposes, but "to prove that you

The previous edition of the New York social directory carried the Elliott Roosevelts' names and also the announcement of their engagement at Burlington, Iowa, in July, 1932.

HOPKINS HINTS END OF DIRECT AID FOR NEEDY

(Continued From Page One) the most important political issue before the people at the present time, "as shown by the recent election." He charged partisan politicians with offering figures to the electorate with the purpose of intimidating the relief expenditure had a political motive.

"I don't like the implications of these figures," Hopkins said, "which show how much an out-got of the government's money. The unemployed on relief aren't interested in any fine economic philosophy.

Hopkins complained of the manner in which some states refused to co-operate with the federal government in meeting the emergency but paid tribute to the cities.

"Many states," he said, "have quibbled about how they are going to raise the money and progress has been restricted because of that. But the courage of your cities has been splendid. Don't go back on us now. By 'us' I mean the 4,000,000 families on relief."

Before Hopkins arrived, the mayors heard a demand for creation of a new cabinet office to be known as the department of welfare, which would correlate the national administration of unemployment and social relief.
