Home Depot plan approved

LAKE MARY - The City Commission approved final changes in the site plan for the new Home Depot facility Thursday night. Construction work could get underway before the end of the week.

The 165,000 square foot store is to be built on the northeast corner of the Lake Mary Boulevard and Lake Emma Road intersection. The site, consisting of approximately 22 acres, is adjacent to the entrance of Primera.

Although original plans called for three outbuildings for additional business to be located on the Lake Mary Boulevard side of the Home Depot property, the number has been reduced to two. The additional land will be used to provide additional parking. The parking will replace another original proposal for spaces to be provided on the eastern side of the building. They will eventually be added, but not until further development on the property adds another business next to Home Depot.

Although final documents on the actual land purchase have not been signed, a representative of the developer told the commission the papers would be approved early this coming week, with actual construction work to start possibly by the following day.

No specific date has been announced for the completion of construction.

Grant $$ Process under way to dole out $1.7 million

By J. MARK BARFIELD Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD - A record 30 proposals totaling a record $6.6 million in county community development grants was received this year.

During the next several weeks, a citizen's committee will have the chore of screening the project proposals to decide how to distribute $1.7 million in grants. The process began Friday with a bus tour of the grant proposal sites in the county. It ends this summer with a county commission vote on the committee's recommendations.

Buddy Balagia, county community development planner, said the record number of requests represents a growing interest in community service proposals along with the more typical public service projects, such as street paving. Nine social service agencies are seeking funding this year.

Since 1986, the county has spent $11.6 million in federally-funded Community Development Block Grants in low-income neighborhoods and social service projects. About 50 percent of the grants were spent for paving streets and constructing drainage systems in low-income neighborhoods. Thirteen percent was spent for housing assistance. About 10 percent was used for administrative posts.

This year, the county expects to receive nearly $2.4 million from the CDBG program. Balagia said $1.7 million will be distributed to programs, up to $467,000 will be set aside to pay for project administration expenses and $200,000 will be aside for unforseen project expenses.

Balagia said an additional $1.5 million could be available for the county if Congress approves President Bill Clinton's jobs package. The bill has been blocked by Senate Republicans who want spending cuts.

Two project proposals this year could represent a change in county CDBG spending patterns. The Rescue Outreach Mission wants $100,000 to build a 27-bed shelter for homeless women and children. The shelter will cost $270,000 and all but $100,000 is committed to the project.

Sheriff Don Estinger is seeking $200,000 to build a work-release center at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility. The separate 100-bed facility would allow greater security from escapes by separating work-release inmates from fulltime lockup inmates.

Public defender's office bogged down

Chief: More attorneys and staff needed

By J. MARK BARFIELD Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD - During James Russo's first year in office in 1981 as the chief public defender for Seminole and Brevard Counties, his 20 assistants each handled an average of 250 cases during the year.

Last year, 36 public defense attorneys struggled to juggle an average 554 cases. Each.

"I don't mean to be complaining." said Russo. "It's bet-ter than 30 years ago when a lot of people couldn't afford an attorney to defend them. Getting appointed to an attorney is one thing. TULSA, Okla. - A Florida man is being held in the Rogers County Jail pending extradition to his home state in connection with the stabbing deaths of his father's girlfriend and her teen-age son.

Jason Mahn. 20, was captured Sunday after eluding Oklahoma officers by car, train and foot, police said.

Officers had sought Mahn since his father returned to his home in Pensacola, Fla., early Friday morning to find the body of girlfriend Debbie Jean Shanko, 36.

She and her son, Anthony, had been stabbed.

The 14-year-old yelled out, "She's dead. Jason did it," Michael Mahn told authorities.

Shanko died two hours later, after telling authorities the junior Mahn had attacked him and his mother.

Officers in Claremore in eastern Oklahoma spotted Mahn and a hitchhiker in the dead woman's car about 4 a.m. Sunday, Betty Jordan of the Oklahoma Highway Patrol said.

Officers chased the car about 30 miles from Claremore north to Vinita, where the car crashed into a building. Officers caught the hitchhiker but Mahn ran away, hopping a train south to just cast of Tulsa, Ms. Jordan said.

MARGATE - Police are looking for a man who has attacked at least 17 women, ripping off their bathing suits or other clothing while they are still wearing them.

"I was laying on my stomach by the pool and suddenly I felt a bad sensation around my waist," said Gyvel Berkley, 25, who was attacked last week. "Then he ripped my bathing suit bottom off."

Five of the women attacked say the man grabbed their buttocks or breasts briefly before running away. Those five were wearing dresses or pants and were on their way to their cars, mailtances or garbage cans, police reports show. In the remaining cases, a man approached women lying by the pool. The attacker tried and usually succeeded in tearing the top or bottom of a bikini bathing suit off the women before running away.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

By The Associated Press

MIAMI - A line of strong thunderstorms, pushed across the state this morning, rudely waking many residents with high winds, lightning, heavy rain and hail.

There were reports of twisters west of Okeechobee City, west of Sebring, in Plantation, and in Collier. Charlotte. Manatee. Sarasota and Dade counties.

In Fort Myers Beach, there were reports of power lines and trees blown down.

Charlotte County emergency management workers told National Weather Service forecasters of a tornado in Port Charlotte, which damaged numerous residences and commercial buildings; one minor injury was reported.

In South Venice, residents told forecasters that strong winds perhaps belonging to a tornado - took the porches off several houses and blew down pine trees.

The Hardee County Sheriff's Office got a report of a tornado in a trailer park.

"Just one (trailer) was hit," said dispatcher Nancy Lee, who added that no one was hurt.

Metro-Dade police officers spotted tornadoes in Miami Springs and at another location in the northwest section of Dade County.

South of Miami, the wind woke Audley Samuels, whose home was severely damaged by Hurricane Andrew.

"It came up all of a sudden," he said.

The storms came ahead of a cold front which displaced warm, moist air, said lead forecaster Vince Carreras of the National Weather Service's Coral Gables office.

PERRINE - The stench of nearby swampland being dredged up by a backhoe sceps through the screened walls of a mess hall where sunburned, tired volunteers scrape and dice carrots.

Just down the road, insects buzz about the cars of workers who fight swollen fingers, aching muscles and inexperience to rebuild a hurricane-ravaged barn.

Ahhh the glorious sights and sounds of an alternative spring break in Florida - and hundreds of student volunteers would have it no other way.

"People need to do some-thing like this not only for other people, but for themselves," said Julie Ferrero. 24. a nursing student at Western Connecticut State University.

Ferrero and hundreds of other college students forfeited the typical beer, beach and babes-style spring break to volunteer in the relief effort still needed in the wake of Hurricane Andrew, which destroyed the area south of Miami on Aug. 24, 1992.

Through the coordinated efforts of the University of Miami Volunteer Services Center, more than 300 students from 19 universities as far away as Michigan. Virginia, Detroit and Maryland were placed in makeshift housing and put to work from Feb. 20 until April 10.

The motivation for the students to volunteer their week's vacation stemmed from a desire to help the less fortunate, to visiting a warmer climate, to wanting to spend time with friends among other reasons.

'It was the cheapest spring break there was," joked Craig Ortega, an 18-year-old freshman at the University of Toledo from Woodhaven, Mich. He is member of his campus' service group, Uni-versity YMCA.

Amy Cornelius, 19, a sophomore English major at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville, said she wanted to experience a lesson no classroom could offer,

"I expected it to be very fulfilling and useful," said Cornelius, who plans to join the Peace Corps. "But it's been much more of a learning experience."

Jill Funk, the hurricane relief coordinator at the University of Miami, said the energy and focus of the college volunteers compensate for theirs lack a skills. The only obstacle with the young workers was where to house them.

Identity of drug store sought

SANFORD - In a publication entitled "Sanford Now and Then," published by the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce, commemorating Sanford's 100 years as an incorporated political subdivision, this photo appeared and was listed as the Roumillat & Anderson drug store. The business was located on the northeast corner of First Street and Park Avenue. That spot became well known for many years as "Bird Dog Cor-ner." However, there are those - and that includes the Herald's "Way Back When" editor, Julian Stenstrom, - who say this is not a photo of the interior of Roumillat & Anderson's at all. Instead, they claim it is a photo of another early Sanford drugstore known as "Union Pharmacy." located on the south side of the 100 block of East First Street between McCrory's and Speer & Son. The store was operated by a

"Dr. Walker" who resided in the 800 block of East 20th Street. referred to by many as East Hughey Avenue. On the other hand there are those who are certain that this is a photo of the store operated by Gene Roumillat and Bruce Andemon.

Neither of these two people are with us at this time and neither is Roumillat's son. Francis, who operated the store for quite a few years after his father passed away. However, Lucy Roumiliat McLeod, daughter of Gene and Hortense Roumiliat, writes to say, "It definitely is 'Daddy's' drugstore: I remember it well." She says when this photo was made the soda fountain was on the right as depicted in the photo but was moved to the left side of the store when it was remodeled some years later.

Stenstrom remembers that the Union Pharmacy did not have a single or double door entrance. When the store was open it had a series of folding doors and the entire front of the business was open from side to side.

When the business was not open the series of folding doors were drawn together and locked at the center.

If you are certain one way or the other, please contact Stenstrom at 322-2860 and give him your opinion. A decision one way or another might help clear up the question for the sake of Sanford's future history.

Associated Press Writer

NARANJA - One young child dreams he is being attacked by a swarm of vicious tornadoes. Another says his nightmares include a giant who shakes his tiny home.

Others say they are afraid to make friends now that so many people have left the area, and they say they get scared whenever the wind blows. And there are the nightmares. "Last night I dreamed I was fighting Andrew," said fifth grader Marc Shwani, 11. "He looked like a big bunch of cloude with cyes."

A few children are tired of running from their lingering fear of Hurricane Andrew.

More than half a year since the storm devastated their homes and lives, some young children in South Florida are turning to a deadly solution: suicide attempts.

"We've had a second-grader jump from a second-story building. We have had kids trying to slit their wrists. We've had kids putting electrical cords around their necks and trying to string themselves up," said Joseph L. Jackson, supervisor for psychological services for Dade County schools.

Teen-age suicides are not uncommon, but such behavior by younger students are very rare, Jackson said.

"It something we did not anticipate," he said. "We anticipated a lot of other things. One of the key insues in suicide attempts is that it is a cry for help. Maybe we were missing some clues."

He said many students are coping well, but "kids who had problems before the storm are having more problems. ... Kids who were emotionally handicapped before are becoming severally emotionally disturbed.

Cathy Dallas, a counselor at Southwood Middle School, said there have been two related suicide attempts at her school since the Aug. 24 storm.

Spring cleaning increases trash

Recycling efforts up

By J. MARK BARFIELD Heraid Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD -- Overall recycling efforts edged up again in February as spring cleaning has begun. Yard waste collections increased by more than 50 percent between January and February.

Curbside garbage recyling ebbed slightly in February, from about 2 million pounds to 1.8 million pounds, according to the monthly report released last week by the county recycling office.

The county is required to track residential and commercial garbage collections and report their findings to the state.

Counties must reduce their garbage disposals at dumps by at least 30 percent by 1995.

Most residents in the county slowed their curbside disposal of recyclable materials in February, although Sanford collections increased. Unincorporated residents dropped their efforts from 1.1 million to 1 million pounds in February.

Lake Mary residents dropped from about 54,000 to 53,600 pounds and Longwood residents from 145,000 pounds to 128,000 pounds

Sanford recyclable garbage collections increased from 153.800 pounds to 156.900 pounds during the month. Newspapers remain the most-recycled garbage in the county. The 1.8 million pounds of recyclables left by curbs in February, newspapers accounted for 1.2 million pounds. Glass represented the second-highest amount with 483,000 pounds.

Curbside yard waste collections decreased in many areas, but commercial and residential deliveries to county collection facilities increased. Unincorporated yard waste collections plummeted from 428,700 pounds in January to 183,600 pounds in February.

Lake Mary and Longwood residents dropped their yard waste disposal efforts in February, but again, Sanford residents increased.

Lake Mary collections dropped from 68,200 pounds to 60,300 pounds Longwood collections dropped from 102,700 pounds to 42.600 pounds Sanford collections increased 294,000 pounds in January to 708.700 pounds in February.

But deliveries of yard waste to the county transfer station and dump increased by more than 50 percent. Deliveries increased from 1.4 million pounds in January to nearly 3.1 million pounds in February.

What it takes to rid Sanford of crime

Sanford did very poorly in the Florida Department of Law Enforcement crime rate statisticar Hopefully It will cause people-tobecome angry enough to get involved in fighting crime.

The high crime rate cannot be blamed on any single individual or government entity. Each of us must accept some of the responsibility for allowing crime to continue its upward movement.

Citizens become upset if city budget projections suggest additional police officers or more modern equipment. It means taxes may have to go up. Yet, paying additional taxes would be easier than suffering from the loss and misery associated with a homeburglary, robbery or murder.

Neighborhood watch groups have proven to be effective in combatting crime. Citizens often rally when such a group is set up. Within a short time however, fewer and fewer people are involved and the group loses its effectiveness.

Without realizing it, people may even have a pet-peeve crime. If there is a crackdown on drug sales, they may demand more protection against home burglaries. If patrol efforts move to residential areas, people in the business district complain about the lack of protection.

If business districts get new patrols, the homeowners may feel they are being slighted.

Individuals may also want more law enforcement at adult entertainment establishments, in congested traffic areas, or against speeding, loitering, or carjacking.

It's time we began to look at the total crime picture. We should not be satisfied with merely driving the criminal element out of

Was fetus criminally assaulted?

Ana Rosa Rodriguez was born in 1991 without a right arm. Actually, she was not supposed to have been born. Her mother, 19-year-old Rosa Rodriguez, a Dominican immigrant, 7 1/2 months pregnant, had gone to Dr. Abu Hayat on New York's Lower East Side for an abortion. It was botched. Ana Rosa was born the day after: but in the course of the doctor's attempts to dismember her the day before, Ana Rosa's right arm was torn off.

And the second s in February of this year, a jury in New York State Supreme Court convicted Dr. Hayat on a number of counts. One was performing an illegal abortion in the third trimester of pregnancy. While 11 states permit abortions during the final three months, New York prohibits it after 24 weeks.

ilf the Freedom of Choice Act passes Congress and is signed by the president, this kind of state restriction will probably no longer be allowed anywhere. The bill leaves the definition of viability — when the fetus can survive outside the uterus - to the physician performing the -abortion. Not to the indivídual district Rosa because of the arm that had been severed at the shoulder. The convictions are being appealed by the doctor's lawyer, Ronald J. jority of the Supreme appeal on the charge of an illegal abortion after 24 weeks. But Dr. Hayat may well get the assault charge against the child overturned. His attorney's argument is that. according to Roe v. Wade, a fetus is not a person. And under New York state criminal law, unless a person is assaulted. no crime has been committed. Justice Harry Blackmun, in writing the majority decision in Roe v. Wade, could not have been more clear: "... the word. 'person,' as used in the 14th Amendment, does not include the unborn."

If. says attorney Veneziano, the ma-

Veneziano. There would appear to be no basis for Court had held instead that "the fetus was a person, they would have found themselves in the position of sanctioning murder. They can't have it both ways."

The New York state appellate courts will almost certainly agree. And should New York appeal to the United States Supreme Court, I doubt that it would agree to review the case since there is not a majority to declare that fetuses are persons.

Yet, a sonogram of the 7 1/2 months old fetus on the day of the mishandled abortion would clearly show a viable developing human being who - just a day later - did indeed become an actual person under the Constitution. Of course, she had been a member of our species for quite a while.

If the assault charges are not dismissed, pro-choice organizations might find it somewhat uncomfortable, though necessary, to submit a Supreme Court brief on behalf of Dr. Hayat's innocence, under Roe v. Wade, of those assault charges.

After Dr. Hayat's arrest, as Richard Perez-Pena reported in The New York Times, "more than 30 women came forward to say he had botched their abortions, often with serious consequences to their health."

Congress torn about more money for RTC

WASHINGTON - As the final credits are about to roll on the savings and loan cleanup, Congress is adding another political twist to the plot.

The Resolution Trust Corp., formed in 1989 to straighten out the savings and loan mess. says it needs $28 billion to finish the job. But the temporary agency has become a white elephant on Capitol Hill, as persistent revelations of fraud, waste and mismanagement have made many members of Congress reluctant to open the purse strings one last time. While Congress fidgets, ailing thrifts that stay open as a result are costing taxpayers an additional $3 million per day. Since RTC funding dried up last spring, overall cleanup costs nave risen by an estimated $1 billion. Last year, RTC funding died in Congress after a loose coalition of conservative Republicans joined with liberal Democrats to strike it down. This in the course of the doctor's attempts to dismember her the day -beistorAna Rosa's right arm was torn off.

Sanford, but with putting them in jail, and keeping them there.

People must get involved. Demand more police protection even if it does add to taxes. Join citizens groups trying to work on fighting neighborhood crime. Become more aware of your children's activities at night. People witnessing a criminal act should be willing to report it and if necessary, testify.

If crime continues to increase, we will only have ourselves to blame for allowing it.

Only through a concerted effort by everyone will we be able to remove Sanford from the top of the FDLE list for next year.

Save our sealife

As a manager for one of Florida's largest food fish aquaculture facilities. I know that farmed fish and hook-caught fish can easily replace the compara-tively small amount of food fish taken in the entanglement nets. In our case, we produce striped bass of the highest quality, available year around.

It is clear that the impact of commercial fishing nets on the marine environment is substantially negative and that benefits of netting are limited to profits made on a public resource by a relatively small group of individuals.

While we're concerned about those few individuals and support proposals to assist them when nets are eliminated, we are even more concerned about the short and long-term impact on the fisheries resources that hurts all the residents and visitors to Florida. Obviously, existing regulations are either ineffective or overlooked.

With the nets gone, we can bring back fish populations to high levels that will benefit everyone. We should all support the Save Our Sealife constitutional amendment enthusiastically.

Press conferences worthwhile?

When Bill Clinton held his first press conference as president the other day, one of the least important controversies of the new administration was temporarily laid to rest. By giving White House reporters an opportunity to question him in a direct, open and sustained way, the president in effect agreed with them that the formal press conference is an institution worth preserving. He and they are probably right, but just barely. Like the White House beat itself, the presidential news conference says more about modern journalism's considerable ego and show business instincts than it does about real reporting. In the end, it benefits the president more than it does the press or public. Even so, President Clinton's performance produced one unqualified benefit by eliminating any further excuse for the non-stop flow of self pity emanating from the White House press corps. Two months of their whines about the new administration's lack of respect for their needs and prerogatives has done more damage to public faith in the press than NBC's faked test of a GM truck. They sounded like spoiled children, demanding that Daddy do what they wanted, when they wanted it. It was a demeaning exercise from beginning to end. As for what the press conference revealed, it can be safely said the world was still in orbit when it was over. In his long opening statement, the president surprised no one by backing Boris Yeltsin in Russis and the administration's economic package on Capitol Hill. He proceeded to repeat both stands in the face of repeated questions that seemed based on the assumption that he would change his mind in the course of a press conference. Otherwise, Clinton demonstrated anew that he is an easy, graceful public performer who can bob and weave with the best of them when circumstances require it. They did so on the issue of gays in the military, his Chernobyl of political radioactivity. As for the rest, the president declared himself in favor of democracy in Cuba, health care for all Americana, a qualified appointee for the Supreme Court and campaign finance reform. The press conference casentially made news by not making news.

That is what should be remembered about presidential news conferences generally. Little more of substance is learned from them than from a White House handout or a presidential speech. When a president goes before the assembled reporters, he has two missions. One is to sell policy. The other is to avoid mistakes. What he is not there to do is to bare his soul or admit error. If he does - if he says that "mistakes were made" or that he is "not a crook" - it is because he and his staff have decided that damage control is required, not because reporters wormed something out of him.

Except in terminal moments, as in Richard Nixon's last days, the advantage is always with the president.

Not that most reporters are much inclined by self-interest or home office pressure to take on the president in verbal hand-to-hand combat. Occasionally there are hard-edged queries, but most press conference questions are either obvious softballs or whackily irrelevant. The president is not exactly dealing with a pack of ravening wolves when he steps behind the podium.

The explanation can be found in the nature of White House reportage. which from the government's point of view is close to ideally controlled. The most visible beat in American journal-ism is also the most constricted. Sources of real information in the White House are limited to nonexistent. Network benefits the president more than it

In the end, it

press or public.

From beginning to end, journalists assigned to the White House are captives of a situation tailor-made to protect the newsmaker. "Good" reporters are rewarded with choice leaks. "Bad" reporters are cut off. It is a claustrophobic existence, far removed from normal reporting and light years from investigative reporting.

That's why all the emphasis on the rules and conventions imposed by each new administration is misplaced. Nixon's last days notwithstanding, every president in the television era has handled press conferences with relative case. A graceful essayist can cover the White House with a certain satisfaction. You cannot be a digging reporter and experience anything but frustration there.

That's why the best way to cover the presidency is to invest less in the White House watch, a sterile pursuit, and more in covering its actions out in the world. In other words, concentrate on what it does rather than what it says.

time, the coalition includes several members of the freshman class, who see little point in writing out a $28 billion blank check to an agency with a well-carned reputation for fraud and waste. For some Republicans, it's more a matter of getting even with Democrats who refused to honor Bush's request last ycar.

Sen. Carol Mosely Braun, D-III., called it the "vote from hell," though she reluctantly voted in favor of the funding as it passed the Senate Banking Committee two weeks ago. But Braun and fellow freshman Patty Murray. D-Wash., helped tie acveral strings to the money. Under this carrot-and-stick approach, Treasury Secretary Lloya Bentsen will be required to periodically report back to the committee with assurances that the money is being spent wisely. But even if the full Senate authorizes the new funds, several observers expect the biggest test to come when it hits the House.

Still, even as Congress and the administration try to hammer out an agreement that can win approval, allegations of fraud and abuse continue to mount for the RTC.

In February, our associate Dean Boyd obtained a series of highly confidential reports on ongoing investigations by the RTC inspector general.

Since we published these embarrassing revelations of the ongoing IG probes, the agency has been looking hard for leakers, but to no avail. RTC spokesman Steve Kataanos would neither "confirm nor deny" reports from numerous sources that the FBI is investigating the source of the leaks. "Obviously, conducting a complete investigation of themselves (IG) would not be the most appropriate way to proceed."

In written responses to questions posed by the Senate Banking Committee, the IG recently added more horror stories to this long list of abuses at the agency. — One notable example involved a recent audit of an RTC office on the West Coast which showed that the RTC has paid, or will pay, about $1.8 million in disposition fees to asset managers for assets that the managers didn't even sell. The IG cited another audit, in 1991, which revealed that the RTC once made a $149,000 duplicate payment to a contractor, and then waited almost eight months to recover the funds after the contractor reported the mistake.

RTC investigators have found that much of the fraud and theft could have been prevented "if the RTC had proper controls in place and had complied with its policies." For example, poor acreenings of personnel led to the theft of some 6,000 money orders worth more than $6 million from an RTC-controlled thrift.

Gideon against charges of burglarizing a Panama City pool hall.

The Gideon decision required courts to appoint lawyers for all defendants charged with felonies. The high court later extended the rule to include all misdemeanor cases.

Since then, Congress has heard testimony about incompetent, even drunken, lawyers appointed by courts to represent murder defendants who faced execution if convicted.

Russo said no appeals have been brought against him for inadequate defense, but said the' spectre looms.

"You try to quickly go through the cases and decide which ones you can plea and not spend so much time on and hope no cases fall through the cracks."

Russo defines "falling through the cracks" as "I mean innocent people who might be upheld if you really spend the time to defend them.

Based on a state defender's staffing formula approved by the Legislature, governor's office and American Bar Association, Russo said he should have 174 attorneys and supporting staff instead of the 66-person staff he has now.

The state currently grants Russo about $3.6 million per year to provide services to the two-county circuit. State Atorney Norm Wolfinger receives 97.5, million, Russo renys. Last year, Russo was forced to lay off Spangenberg, a Boston criminal justice consultant who studies local public defender offices.

But the court has not said how much money local governments should pay lawyers representing poor defendants. In the tomuch. Brevard-Seminole County Eighteenth Judicial Circuit, courtappointed defenders are paid $60 to $150 per hour, based on the judge's determination of the complexity of the case, said assistant county attorney Henry Brown.

Russo said his office defends clients at an average of a $135 per case.

"In many states court appointed counsel receive paupers wages like $20 an hour or $25 an hour," Spangenberg said. "So what you end up with is the people who do it are often young and inexperienced, they take one or two cases and never do any more again or the old broken down lawyers who can't do anything else," said Stephen Bright, an Atlanta lawyer who specializes in death-penalty ap-peals for the Southern Center for Human Rights.

The Supreme Court has not set competency standards for court-appointed lawyers.

Russo said his attorneys have an average experience level of about five years, with an average of 614 years for felony attorneys. His attorneys earn from $24,000 to $36,000 annually.

"In a lot of places in this country, from misdemeanors to felony to capital cases, a warm body is all that Gideon means, a warm body with a bar card, Bright said.

The county is seeking $130,000 to pave and drain Bookertown's DuBois Street.

"This is definately not a bonanza." Hagerty said. "We're treading water rather than sinking the boat."

He said the money will not give the district the finances to meet the needs that have yet to be met.

'We're going to have to be struggling to maintain the cur-rent level of service." he said, adding that it was "going to be a tough spring."

Hagerty said that he was not going to make any decisions regarding the money until he receives word from the state Department of Education (DOE) as to how much they will be getting.

"When (the DOE) translates all this we'll see what happens." he said.

Similarly, Nancy Wheeler, executive director of the Seminole Education Association (the union which represents district employees), refused to speculate on what the district might do with the additional money until she gets official word on the amount.

"I don't want to comment," she said. "Right now, only an estimate is available. Nothing is firm until the final vote is taken."

meanor offenses, which comprise a major portion of the office case load. Attorneys with the most trial experience handle the capital cases, those where conviction would result in a death sentence or life in prison, and the remainder of the cases are divided among the staff.

Most of the cases Lebo deals with are misdemeanor criminal charges such as driving under the influence (DUI), driving with a suspended or revolved license (DWSRL), assault and battery, petit theft, resisting arrest without violence, domestic violence and possession of drug paraphernalia and cannibis-(under 20 grams).

Thirty years ago, a U.S. Supreme Court ruling on a Florida case stated individuals charged with felonies were entitled to court appointed legal counsel if they could not affort to hire their own lawyer. Later. the ruling was expanded to include misdemeanor cases as well. The number of individuals requiring court appointed counsel has continued to grow with more criminal cases filed and a weak economy placing private attorneys out of many people's monetary reach.

handled 3,318 cases in Seminole County in 1986-87. That number more than doubled to 6,775 cases in 1991-92. For the entire circuit, Russo's office caseload went from 6,124 in 1982-83 to 19,967 in 1991-92.

The often told horror stories of public defenders who are incompentent or burnt out lawyers appointed to represent indigents even though they are little more than a warm body with a bar association card, sometimes anger Russo.

You have to realize some states don't have any type of public defender program." Russo said. "Florida is in about the top 5 in the country with its public defender system."

Networking with other at-torneys helps newcomers and experienced attorneys alike in doing their jobs.

"My first impression when I came to the office," Lebo said, was despite taking over someone's caseload, the people in the office were willing to help me. 1 found they are excellent at-torneys and they were happy to help out, no matter how much I bothered them. I think I've learned more in two weeks here than I did in all my time in law achool."

warding. "Everyone has a sense they are working for the public." he added.

Management is the key to handling a large case load, Haft said, recalling a full trial docket he carried about three years ago. After reviewing and taking notes on 82 cases, taking clients' calls and being in court, he said he could recall what a defendant looked like, the pending charges and case facts after glancing at his notes. "It was my most successful docket." Haft said.

Haft explained one of the major advantages to working in the public defender's office is there is a good chance you will run into another lawyer who has handled a case similar to one you are working on and is willing to discuss it.

Public defenders also get more courtroom experience than most private attorneys.

two attorneys when the state withheld some appropriations when revenues fell below expectations.

Russo said he will approach Brevard and Seminole County commissioners this year requesting appropriations to hire more attorneys and staff. Currently, the counties provide only office space and supplies. "If they refuse, I may have to go to the chief judge and declare a conflict of interest from further appointments based on the workload," said Russo.

If upheld, Russo said judges in the circuit would appoint independent attorneys to defend indigent people accused of crimes. The county is required to pay the expenses of those appointed attorneys at a cost Russo says averages four to five times the average public defender cost.

The problem is by no means isolated to Central Florida and the state.

"With few exceptions, the states have not lived up to their requirements to provide competent counsel to indigent de-fendants," said Robert

The budget troubles of local governments coupled with a significant increase in the number of indigent defendants in the last decade has put a strain on an already overburdened system. Spangenberg said. In 1982, 50 percent of all felony defendants couldn't hire their own lawyers, he said. Last year, 80 percent needed courtappointed lawyers, he said.

But some experts say the Gideon decision still is important.

"I agree that Gideon has not fulfilled the great hopes that some of us had," said Abe Krash, one of the lawyers who assisted the late Abe Fortas in preparing the Supreme Court argument.

But "it's still of very great importance and significance" because "it affirms the right of every accused person to a lawyer in every case for a felony prosecuted in this country," Krash said. clated Press contributed in this The Ast

Marlins set to play ball

MIAMI - A capacity 'crowd, hundreds of reporters and a television audience stretching from Venezuela to Japan will witness history Monday when 45-year-old knuckleballer Charlie Hough delivers the Florida Marlins' first pitch.

So. Charlie, what will you throw?

"A strike," Hough said.

With that, the Marlins' first season in the National League will begin. Their opening day opponents are the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Floridians have waited a lifetime for this occasion. No longer are they being left behind by baseball at the end of spring training. Instead, as a new season begins, they'll pack Joe Robbie Stadium to root, root, root for the home team.

HB 899 further confuses softball controversy

Who's driving this bus? Just when we thought the ongoing battle for softball supremacy (slowpitch vs. fastpitch) couldn't get any stranger, it did. For the record, the 1992-93 Florida High School Activities Association's Spring Sports Contest Regulations handbook, 132 high schools will play fastpitch this year while 297 - including the six Seminole County public high schools - will play slowpitch.

Florida community colleges. including Seminole Community College, play slowpitch while those four-year colleges and universities that play softball play the fastpitch game.

And there lies the problem.

Because the four-year schools play (and offer scholarships) for the fastpitch games, parents across the state have been pushing for their area high schools to play fastpltch so that their daughters might better compete for those scholarship dollars argue that switching to fastpitch will make the game less accessible. excluding girls of lesser skills for the benefit of those select few players who might win college scholarships.

Proponents of the slowpitch game

Fastpitch supporters shoot back that once all the schools are playing the same game, then more and more Florida female athletes will acquire the skills needed to compete at the university level and keep those available scholarship dollars in the state.

So it goes. Now the Florida state legislature has taken a hand.

I told you it was getting stranger.

On Friday, the state Senate unanimously approved House Bill 899, intended to "offer women equal sports opportunities in schools and colleges," and sent it to Gov. Lawton Chiles to be signed into law. What does this mean? That's a great question.

Originally, the bill would have required that any Florida public high school or community college that plays softball to offer the fastpitch game, basically legislating the slowpltch game out of existence at the interscholastic level.

But HB 899 contained an amendment to "ensure schools can continue women's slowpitch softball even if they don't have a fastpitch team ... the amendment would require schools to offer fastpitch softball for women if they offer softball at all, but they wouldn't have to drop slowpitch if a fastpitch team couldn't be fielded."

Hunh?

Exactly. Forgetting for now whether or not it's appropriate for the state legislature to be involved (it's my opinion that if the Florida High School Activities Association was doing its job, state laws governing athletics wouldn't be necessary), the fact is that the legislature has become involved and, predictably, further muddled the water.

Unless I'm reading HB 899 wrong (always a possibility, I admit), the state is telling public schools that they have to play fastpitch softball, but not really. It looks like the state has constructed a law with a loophole the size of the Okeechobee.

Instead of answering questions, it multiplied the unanswered ones. What does "offered" mean? Are tryouts required? What about scheduling? Who gets to determine whether or not a fastpltch team can be fielded? The coach? Athletic director? Principal? Conference?

instead of having a definitive decision, right or wrong, it looks like the state legislature has given us the right to be confused.

Good Job.

S.S.S.S.A.S.S.S.S.S.S.S.S.S.S.S.

At least we won't be breaking the law.

Trees can save money Shade helps reduce cost of air-conditioning

Temperatures are already on the rise and our air conditioning bills are sure to follow. According to Dr. Bob Black, of the UF's Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences, proper placement of trees around your home can reduce air-conditioning costs by more than 30 percent.

Trees modify local climate extremes by providing shade, insulating the home from heat gain or loss and cooling the air surrounding their leaves. Once established. trees require little maintenance and increase the value of your home.

"Before central heating and air-conditioning, homes were designed and built to take advantage of environmental features," Black said. "Today passive methods of climate control are once again of interest, and new information has substantially improved many energy-saving concepts from the past."

IFAS research-based program called Environmental Landscape Management (ELM) planting sites that conserve energy by using appropriate landscape design practices. Matching the correct type of tree to the proper location to achieve the desired effect is one goal of ELM.

For instance, whether a tree is evergreen or deciduous will affect its performance. Deciduous trees, which drop their leaves in winter, are recommended for southern, southeastern and southwestern exposures. In summer, they will provide desired shade. In winter, the bare canopy of these trees will allow the sun's rays to warm your home, creating additional energy savings.

On the other hand, evergreen trees, which keep their leaves all year, used on northern and northwestern exposures will provide an effective barrier to cold winter winds, in addition to summer shade.

If air-conditioning alone will be used to cool your home for most of the five to seven-month hot season, a summer windbreak on the southeastern exposure is advisable, because summer winds can reduce cooling efficiency by increasing hot air inflitration around window and door fittings or cracks in siding and masonry. --

The correct placement of trees chosen for. shade involves considering the mature height of the tree, the angle of the sun's rays and the height of the structure to be shaded. Realistically, sidewalls are the most practical structures of the house to shade, because it takes many years for newly planted trees to shade the roof.

The target areas for shading during Florida's warmer months are the side walls on western, eastern and southern exposures, respectively. Windows provide the most direct entry for heat into the home, so special attention may need to be given to walls containing the most windows.

The benefits of new shade trees should be feit within five years if the trees are planted 7 to 20 feet from the sidewall depending on each tree's ultimate height and on the size of the lot. The closer a tree is planted to the house the longer its shading effects will last during the day. The shadow of a tree planted 10 feet from the home will move across the shaded surface four times slower than a tree planted 20 feet away.

The shape of a tree also influences the duration of shade, because spreading, round and vase-shaped canoples will provide the longest periods of shade over the day. If shade requirements are immediate, a fast-growing tree will increase in height by 3 or more feet per year and provide shade within the 5-year period. But most fast-growing trees are both short-lived and weak-wooded, so plan carefully.

instead, plant both a small, rapidly growing tree and a moderate or slowgrowing species nearby. The fast-growing tree can be removed once the other tree begins providing shade.

Dr. Black cautions homeowners not to ... overlook trees native to Floride, Interest in native trees has increased greatly in the state, and in some cases these trees may be better adapted to local soil and weather conditons than exotic trees.

Environmental Landscape Management makes sense for everybody, as nearly half of Florida's residential energy use goes toward cooling the home during the long, hot summer. And as utility rates escalate, "so does the cost of staying comfortable in your home."

For more information about the proper selection and placement of trees in the landscape call the Agriculture Center at 323-2500 ext. 5550 and ask for Circular EES-41 "Landscaping To Conserve Energy - Trees for Central Florida."

My sister died after a lengthy battle with cancer. She was only 34. I honestly can't even remember who attended her funeral. There were many floral arrangements, but I was so numb, the last thing on my mind was reading the cards that came with flowers. My sister had left a 10-year-old son, and my greatest concern was looking after him.

If anyone held my actions on that day against me, I would be saddened because I wasn't my usual self.

I say, be forgiving and kind: it hurts no one, and to do so might lighten the load of the bereave J.M.H., HOUSTON

DEAR J.M.H.: Your answer was better than mine. Please read on:

DEAR ABBY: I read your reply to "One of the Family," who was insulted by the

thank-you card she received from the Jones family after the funeral. Abby, the poem was not inappropriate, as you suggested. It was a lovely poem - one I have received many times from and loved ones. Perhaps the insulted lady did not realize that the funeral home often provides the family with a packet of thank-you cards that are included in the funeral costs. Did the insulted lady attend the funeral and send flowers just to be recognized for her sacrifice? If so, she should have stayed home and sent flowers to herself. The Jones family will probably be relieved that they will not hear from her again.

You sympathized with the wrong injured party. Abby. JEANNETTE GRAVES.

CARL JUNCTION, MO.

DEAR ABBY: I had a mastectomy 17 years ago when I was in my early 40s. Only a few months later, I met an attractive man, a brilliant scientist years younger than me. He certainly had many choices, but he chose mel What impressed me was not that it clearly made no difference to him that I had only one breast; rather I was moved by the fact that he wanted to make a commitment to me when my prognosia was still uncertain. He offered love of such depth I would have been ally to be self-conscious about the fact that I was a bit lopsided. We were married that spring.

Our marriage is one of the happiest I know. One of the lessons I learned from having been forced to confront the fact of my own mortality is to use what time I may have, and not to put off living. Any man worth loving will love "inhibited and Embarramed" just the way she is. Please tell her to drop both those adjectives and use "alive and well" instead.

Evaluating cause of a leg ulcer

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have an doctor to explain the cause of wheelchair and wonder what X-ray. you would recommend.

DEAR READER: Leg ulcers are commonly caused by poor circulation due to diseases of the veins or disorders of the arteries. In the first instance, slow venous blood flow (as occurs with varicose veins) leads to stásis dermatitis, a chronic skin affliction that results from pooling of blood in an extremity. Eventually, the skin deteriorates and becomes infected; an ulcer

Treatment includes meticulous attention to skin hygiene (avoidance of minor trauma and careful washing), frequent elevation of the affected leg, support stockings and antibiotic cream. Resistant cases may re-quire an Unna's boot, a special dressing made with a gelutin/glycerine/zinc oxide paste applied in a spiral bandage. Patients who fall to respond to these non-surgical techniques may have to consider an operation to remove the veins.

Arterial skin ulcers appear when insufficient nutrients and oxygen reach portions of the skin because of an arterial blockage. This is a more serious condition than venous ulcers because death of tissue can occur and gangrene may appear.

In addition, these ulcers are notoriously resistant to medical measures, although the following may help in selected cases: better control of diabetes (a common cause of arterial disease), discontinuation of smoking (because nicotine worsens circulation), and increased exercise (to stimulate blood

In my experience, arterial ulcers usually demand surgery to remove blood-vessel blockages or to by pass them.

Today's deal is a good example. West leads the club queen against your contract of three no-trump. How would you plan the play? Also, assume you misbid slightly and got to five diamonds. Would that change your line?

In three no-trump, you have seven top tricks. The other two tricks must come from the diamond suit.

If the diamonds are breaking 3-2, all plays work. But if they are 4-1, you are in danger. If West has king-fourth, you will fail. If East has king-fourth, you _ nesse again.

Here you make an overtrick, and you are home even if East has king-fourth of diamonds.

will be safe by finessing. However, if you take a first-round finesse and lose to a singleton king, you will perish. The safety-play is to win trick one and immediately cash the diamond ace. If only low cards appear, cross to dummy with a spade or heart and play a diamond toward your honors.

In five diamonds, you should anticipate a loser in each major. True, if you find a 3-3 split, you can avoid one loser, but that is against the odds. And if you have two major-suit losers, you can't afford a diamond loser. You must hope that East has K-x or K-x-x of diamonds. Win trick one in the dummy and take a diamond finesse. Assuming it wins, return to dummy and lead another trump, planning to fi-

Some unproductive associations you've formed look like they could go by the boards in the year ahead. These will be replaced by new alliances that will be stronger and more advantageous.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be a peacemaker, not a provoker, if there are family disagreements today. A serious confrontation could ensue if your response is biased. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker in-stantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 plus a long, selfaddressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspa-per, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This is not the right day to try to shift your responsibilities onto others or let them do it to you. In either instance you're not apt to like the results GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

Just because a friend of yours is not getting along too well with a mutual friend, it doesn't mean you have to take sides. Whoever you choose could be the wrong choice.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) In your zeal to gratify your am-bitious objectives today, you might not be aware of the consequences and ultimately discover that what you thought you wanted isn't worth the price you pay. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Even though you might think you have the best ideas today, your peers may not be equally enthralled. They could have valid reasons, but you're not apt to take criticism gracefully.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Someone who didn't have a hand in an endeavor you recently accomplished might be looking for acknowledgment or rewards today. Be careful how you handle this development.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Usually you do rather well in partnership arrangements, but today those whom you team up with could be liabilities instead of assets. Use your best judgment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) There's a chance today you might become involved with someone and you both make mistakes. These problems can only be resolved by sharing the blame equally, not by pointing fingers.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be optimistic regarding the outcome of events today, but also be realistic. If your expectations have faulty foundations. they could collapse.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Keep your intentions to yourself today in matters that pertain to your career. If you tip your hand prematurely, it could give a competitor a chance to beat you to the draw. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)

If you try to use flattery to gain your ends today, it isn't likely to work. In fact, others could lose respect for you if they think you are insincere.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't be careless with the possessions of others today and don't permit them to be careless with yours. Something unsettling could happen in either case.
