FALL ALREADY KNEW WERE ABSOLUTELY INVALID.

The defense holds that these claims were good and that Harry F. Sinclair bought them up, so there would be no question as to the legality of the lease he subsequently acquired on Teapot Dome.

Compactness Characterizes Unique Alabama Residence

DEVELOPERS of the Spanish section in the Hollywood subdivision near Birmingham, Ala., selected concrete masonry because of its guarantee of permanent, fire-safe homes and because of its adaptability to the type of architecture they selected and limited all construction within the section to this material.

One of the Spanish section homes pictured. It is the residence of C. W. Brown and was designed by Turner and McPherson, architects, Birmingham.

Character in the small home has long been desired and until recently seemed difficult of achievement. Character is distinctly evident in this interesting residence, from its doorway with formal stone trim to the Spanish tile roof, and from the unusual lines of the front wall to the open breakfast porch in the rear. Bright colored awnings and a rough cement stucco texture are generally characteristic of the Spanish type.

The plan is compact and convenient, although the rooms are generously proportioned. There appears to be ample closet and storage space, and the front of the house has been designed to provide both a sun parlor and an open terrace. The two-story vestibule is an unusual and interesting detail. The two bedrooms, the bath and the central hallway form a single unit, while the large living room, the dining room and the kitchen are conveniently linked.

Handsome Home Of Ira B. Davis Nears Completion Here

Mr. and Mrs. Ira B. Davis expect to move into their new home on Magnolia Avenue, between 20th and 21st Street, the earlier part of November, according to Mrs. Davis. The major portion of the construction is about complete and it is stated that the house will be one of the most beautiful built here in some time.

The building is stucco and Spanish in design, and will contain 15 rooms and three baths. The plan is novel in that the entire lower floor will be occupied by Mrs. Davis, while the upper floor is arranged for two apartments. The design was drawn by Mr. Davis and is declared to be very unusual.

Some of the interesting features of this beautiful home are hardwood floors throughout both stories, tile, baths and wrought iron in the Spanish motif. The big fireplace in the living room is unusual in that there is no mantel shelf, but a niche with wrought iron ship model will be inset over the mantel.

The tiled floor of the sunporch is on a slightly lower level from the floor of the living room, and handsome Spanish gates separate these two apartments. The lighting fixtures throughout are Swedish iron and are considered particularly lovely and adapted to houses of Spanish order.

Watson secured permission for repairs to a house on Oak Street to the amount of $50. A permit was issued to Mrs. McDougall $20 to repair her residence on Second Street.

G. A. Miller secured a permit to proceed with repairs on a residence on Sanford Avenue to the extent of $200. W. L. Clark was granted a permit for repairs to a residence on French Street. Jay Hick will build a frame dwelling on Hickory Street, costing approximately $300. The cost of repairs in building on First Street will be $100 according to permit issued to Ed Lane Elizabeth Lowery was granted a permit for $50 repairs to dwelling on Pine.

ISLAND SAVAGES REVERT TO HEAD HUNTING HABITS

Natives Return To Ancient Custom In Fierce Attack On Missionary Station On Lonely South Sea Island

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 22.—Fears that the natives of the Solomon Islands, pin-prick dots in the far South Pacific, may have reverted to an ancient practice—head-hunting—were expressed today by seafarers and other persons familiar with the customs of the islands in comment upon the latest reported uprising there.

It was recalled by persons who have visited the spot which forms one of the last remaining strongholds of primitive savagery in the world that the customs of the natives still are largely barbaric despite the influence of the white man.

This was indicated by the fact that the natives were reported to have their most recent attack—upon a missionary station—while armed with their traditional accoutrements of war, the huge, grotesquely decorated canoes, the long spears and variegated body paint.

It is believed among South Sea authorities here that the attack may result in a reversion to head-hunting which was general in the islands up until 40 or 50 years ago. Before the missionaries had begun to dispel native tradition and custom, head-hunting was one of the predominant religious practices in the Solomons. A head-hunting expedition would be planned months in advance. New canoes would be constructed and sanctified by smearing the blood of a prisoner of war on their bows.

On the night of the start, the chief and the warriors would gather in the Gemal, (native clubhouse), and work themselves into a religious frenzy before departing to another island for their victims. The raid would be executed usually in the small hours of the morning. Women and children never were spared, their heads being considered as valuable, if not

Davis Says Three Men Are Qualified

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Oct. 22.—(NS)—In an official opinion rendered to a Florida newspaper, Attorney General Fred H. Davis declared that membership in the last legislature which raised the governor's salary will not affect the gubernatorial candidacy of W. A. Mackenzie, John S. Taylor and John W. Watson, whose eligibility was questioned under provision of the state constitution which says that "no legislature shall during his term be elected to any civil office the emoluments of which had been raised during his term."

Some prisoners would be taken back to the village, their legs and arms being broken to prevent escape. The bodies of the victims would be decapitated on the scene of the raid, their heads taken back, dried and placed upon shelves projecting from the front of the Chieftain's house.

BUILDING THE BRIDGE

An old man, going on a lone highway,
Came at the evening, cold and gray,
To a chasm vast and deep and wide,
Through which was flowing a sullen tide.
The old man crossed in the twilight dim;
The sullen stream had no fear for him;
But he turned when safe on the other side,
And built a bridge to span the tide.
"Old man," said a fellow pilgrim near,
"You are wasting your strength with building here;
Your journey will end with the ending day,
You never again will pass this way;
You've crossed the chasm, deep and wide,
Why build you this bridge at evening tide?"
The builder lifted his old gray head,
"Good friend in the path I have come," he said,
"There followeth me after today,
A youth whose feet must pass this way."
This chasm that has been as naught to me,
To that fair-haired youth may a pitfall be;
"Good friend, I am building this bridge for him!" —Anonymous.

Too bad the Gators had to lose Saturday to North Carolina State. However, there's some consolation in knowing that it took a Floridian to beat the Gators, Jimmy McDowell, the Wolfpack's star halfback who accounted for both of the Carolinian's scores, is a Gainesville boy.

Ed Lambright of the Tampa Tribune and Joe Lambright, formerly of West Palm Beach, now editor of the Brunswick, Ga., pilot, the brothers, disagree on presidential candidates. Joe wants Al Smith and Ed is "agin him. Ed was a delegate to the National Democratic Convention in 1924, and they say his temper has never recovered from the fearful strain it put on during those dreadful Madison Square Garden days.

"Oh, Poor Mr. Amos"

Writing under the caption, "Oh, Poor Mr. Amos," J. H. Benjamin in the Palm Beach Independent says, "in consequence of the explosion of the Seminole County Bank, Ernest Amos, state comptroller, has been indicted by the Seminole County grand jury, two true bills for malfeasance in office having been found against him." The Independent continues as follows:

"Mr. Amos waits that he is being persecuted. To a man up a tree, it looks like he is being greatly favored. A great many banks have failed since he became comptroller, and to said man up a tree it also looks like the people being persecuted are the depositors in state banks which have incompetent and dishonest officials. They have lost a lot of money, very few have recovered any, prosecution of bank officers have always failed, and as for Mr. Amos he hasn't missed a meal nor seen the inside of a jail.

"Mr. Amos' policy in Seminole county seems to have been a duplicate of his policy here. He knew the bank officials were breaking the law and banks were in a shaky condition, but instead of closing the banks, as he had power to do, he wrote the officials sweet, big brother (or was it little brother?) letters, and let things rock along until the banks had to suspend. There does not seem to be any weight to the banking laws of Florida except moral responsibility, and morals seem to be scarce and growing scarcer.

"Mr. Amos, we understand, is a candidate for re-election. If the people elect him, and elects a legislature which refuses to enact banking laws that will bite—well, we will be sorry for Florida."

Mr. Amos has had and is having his day, but the people of Florida have one coming to them. As the Independent points out, the comptroller comes up for re-election next year and that will most certainly be the people's day. When the votes are counted, Mr. Amos may have occasion to wish that he had closed a few banks before they "busted" themselves.

Better Buying At Home

From time to time we have had the advantages of trading at home set before us by those who have studied the appeal of mail order houses and have revealed the falsity of their claims. As a result of the continued campaign of newspapers all over the country, the buy-at-home movement has gathered momentum and gradually but surely the home merchants are coming into their own.

The Herald has often spoken for the local merchants and has defended them against those whose false bargain hunting ideas have overshadowed their consideration of the welfare of local business houses. The Tampa Tribune recently set forth some new thoughts in connection with the buying at home. The Herald passes the Tribune's comments on to its readers: The Tribune says:

"Before you mail that order for merchandise to an outside concern think it over a few minutes. 'Perhaps you'll change your mind about it. The dollar sent out of town is gone forever. The dollar spent at home remains and works for you.

"It circulates at home either in civic improvements, taxes, better schools, churches or goes into more merchandise for your next needs.

"Your neighbor takes better care of your needs and wants than does the stranger, who has no interest in you, further than to get your dollars.

"Your merchant-neighbor's future depends upon holding your confidence. He's always here to make mistakes good.

"When you spend your money with the home merchants you help them, you assist in fostering home industries.

"They in turn help to build up the city, and to make greater opportunities for you and for your children. Spending your money at home is like putting amortgage upon it to come back to you.

"Spending it away from home is simply bidding goodbye to it, and its further usefulness in you. Your home purchase is better.

"You can see and measure its value before you part with your money. Buying at a distance you are buying a 'cut in a bag. The merchandise may not be satisfactory. Often it is not.

"Then it isn't a case of going to your home merchant, who wants to hold your confidence, and to make good everything he sells you.

"You are then dealing with an outsider who has no interest in you. He has your money, and is through.

"Consider these things and we believe you will not mail that order."

SIGNS ARE PROMISING

PALM BEACH NEWS

The best news that has come out of Washington for some time, as far as the state of Florida goes, is that the treasury department will present a tax revision plan to congress shortly which will include, among other reductions, the dropping of the federal estate, or inheritance tax.

Here is one of the most striking instances of what the people can do when they start out in earnest when they get their minds on a matter and stay with it. In the last general elections the people of the state of Florida adopted an amendment prohibiting any tax from being levied on inheritances. Today it is one of three states that does not have such a tax. Congress, however, practically nullified the effect of this Florida law by passing a rebating bill permitting inheritances to deduct from federal an amount up to 80 per cent of all such taxes paid to the state. In other words, by invasion of the state field for taxation, the government virtually offered the states a bribe of 80 per cent for adopting or continuing the inheritance tax.

Started by the people of Florida, but joined in by a number of other states, the matter was laid before the supreme court of the United States, which held against the

IS BORROWING A SIN?

MIAMI HERALD

It is somewhat surprising that some parts of Florida still cling fondly to the notion that the State government ought to be conducted along the narrow financial lines of a roadside soft drink stand, along lines that no successful business man would consider for his own business.

The other day the chairman of the State Road Department received permission from the Gov-

Hirohito will review his navy, warships, submarines, almost as big as battleships, and fighting airplanes will show the Mikado what he could do.

A MOCK ATTACK will be made on Japan's northern naval base and chiefly offense will consist of bomb-dropping planes. Japan did not invent the flying machine, but realizes its power and knows that floating steel targets cannot stand against swift, bomb-dropping airplanes.

EXACT JUSTICE IS rare. L. E. Armstrong beat his daughters, 13 and 15 years old, savagely and was freed on probation. The judge regretted that he could not have Armstrong flogged as he had flogged his daughters.

Mr. Bash, who helped to pour gasoline on a cog, setting fire to it, burning the dog so horribly that it had to be killed, was fined $18. What would you have done in those child-baiting, dog-baiting cases? The second judge, of course, did not regret that he couldn't pour gasoline on the mad and set fire to him. Justice imitating the criminal, as when a hangman's noose is no remedy for crime. The remedy is education, and that is slow.

A GENTLEMAN, LOOKING the field over, carefully finds the average American citizen the keeper of a "one man clothing store" in a small town. He belongs to a church but does not go regularly, had an "average education," which means none to speak of, takes little interest in anything except his family, and his business, never reads the foreign news, just goes along through life very much like any other in his chicken yard, if he has a chicken yard. Fortunately for the nation it is not made up exclusively of average citizens.

GARNETT WRIGHT, BRITISH expert in surgical pathology, says something that fifty million Americans should remember. "Eating rapidly is the most common cause of stomach ailments." Napoleon, he boasted that he never spent more than 10 or 12 minutes at a meal, died of ulcers of the stomach in his St. Helena prison. He should have remembered the wise French saying: "un bon repas, est difficile digerer." A dinner well talked is half digested." Allowing 30 minutes more for slow eating with friendly talk means adding years to your life.

THE UNITED STATES labor bureau says an American woman spend $5,000,000 a day, $1,825,000,000 a year, on beauty shops and aids to beauty. Women spending the five millions a day would be more beautiful, if they kept the money. But spending it makes them happy, and happiness is worth its price.

CONRAD ZELLER, 65, years old, father of 20 children, retires from postoffice work on a pension of $60 a month. His average pay from Uncle Sam during 28 years was $85 a month. Not very generous from a country rich enough to let its women spend eighteen hundred millions a year on wrinkles, education, face-lifting, artificial curls and complexion.

reduced that it is necessary to borrow funds for road work. Would the people of Florida want the State Road Department to keep its accumulated millions in the vaults at 3 per cent interest and leave the highways of Florida remain rutted and unpared? We hardly think so.

We can agree heartily with the Tribune in declaring the gasoline tax as it now exists wrong in principle and in form. But to argue against a temporary financing arrangement such as any large business house is constantly called upon to make when its returns are not always steady, simply on the grounds that the greatest crime this State could commit would be to let the taint of debt hang over it. Seems a strange logic.

If the revenue from the gasoline tax has been reduced, of course the road building must come down a bit. But to halt any program on the dot, as the comics have the laborer stopping the swing of his pick at the blast of the noon whistle, when money is not immediately available, is hardly good business. The State loses too much in starting up again.

The fact that Florida has no bonded debt is undoubtedly a good talking point, and makes for attractiveness to foreign capital. But no good can come of carrying abhorrence of the appearance of debt to the point of fanaticism.

This borrowing by the State Road Department means that needed contracts can be let at once. Within a few months the collections from the gasoline tax will equal the amount borrowed. The State can either borrow now and have the roads several months sooner, as big business would do, or it can wait until the money is on hand before proceeding, as small merchants have to do. It would seem that the State's business ought to be conducted on a scale equal to its importance, rather than reduced to that of a way-laid dog stand.

MISS MARY DIGHTON HOSTESS AT FANCY DRESS HALLOWE'EN PARTY

Miss Mary Dighton, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Reed Dighton, was hostess Saturday evening at a most delightful fancy dress hallowe'en party at the Yacht Club.

The spacious club house which is ideal for entertaining, presented a festive appearance on this occasion with numerous black cats, witches, bats and owls, as well as festoons of orange and black. Placed here and there were tall floor baskets filled with goldenrod, daisies and other yellow cut flowers. Shading the lights were large grinning Jack o' lanterns.

The evening was merrily spent in all sorts of appropriate games as well as several novel features. Much fun was afforded by the lucky number dance, the prizes for which were won by Louise Hickson and Eugene Estridge. Both were given books.

At a late hour the hostess assisted by her mother, Mrs. S. R. Dighton and Mrs. R. R. Deas served brick ice cream in the preferred colors and cakes. Each young guest received an orange and lack snapper which contained a gay colored crepe paper cap and souvenir. About 50 children enjoyed the cordial hospitality of Miss Dighton.

Green-Eyed Beast Served By Connie Talmadge In Film

An old saying has it that the best way to win the heart and love of a man is through his stomach. The aged prescription still works wonders, but what should a girl do when her beau takes his meals out?

In "Breakfast at Sunrise," which comes to the Milane Theatre today, Constance Talmadge employs the green-eyed monster, jealousy in a futile attempt to regain the affections of her first love.

She fails because jealousy isn't the proper food to feed a man who doesn't care, but the old saying later proves its worth when she wins the love of Pierre (Don Alvarado) through the medium of a five-course dinner.

"Breakfast at Sunrise" is an amusing farce of sophisticated Paris and was directed by Mal St. Clair, a master of subtle comedy. An excellent cast supports Miss Talmadge in the picture. In addition to Alvarado, the film has such noted players as Bryant Washburn, Marie Dressler, Alice White, Burr McIntosh, Nelle Bly Baker, Paulette Duval, Albert Gran and David Mir.

RUTH ELDER'S GIRLHOOD, AS SEEN BY THE CAMERA

Ruth at a Masked Ball

She loved to ride horseback

In a snowball battle

As a high school graduate. Starred in athletics

ANNISTON Ala., Oct. 21. —Ruth Elder, who became the nation's heroine and Anniston's especial darling when she was rescued from her trans-Atlantic plane by a Dutch tanker of the Azores, has always been known here as a bit of a tomboy.

Her attempt to fly over the ocean, while it gave everybody here a big thrill, didn't surprise the home folks very much. For everybody in Anniston was well aware that Ruth Elder had a fondness for spectacular stunts, and that she wasn't afraid of anything. They tell you about her most famous tomboy trick and chuckle as they tell it.

Rode An Unbroken Horse

Shortly after the World War, Ruth's father, Oscar Elder, bought an unbroken horse from the army cantonment, at Camp McClellan. The Elder children were warned not to go near the stable because the horse was vicious.

Oscar Elder's back was hardly turned before Ruth went to the stable. Without a saddle, and with only a bit of bridle, she managed to mount the untamed animal. Down the street she rode, the horse bucking and plunging trying to throw her. But she stuck to it, and with half the town watching, and at length came back home hiding a much subdued horse.

'That's Ruth Elder for you,' say her friends. Ruth was quite an athlete during her high school days. She starred at forward on the basketball team, and often said she wished she was a boy so that she could play football.

One of the stories Anniston tells has to do with Ruth's Halloween gangs, and Ruth's gang was known as the most daring in Anniston. On this occasion she tried to find a stunt that would be different. She did.

She organized her crowd and, masked in fantastic costumes, the group of boys and girls boarded a trolley car. They rode until they were tired, then tripped up the conductor and got off without paying their fares. This was repeated on every car line in town, until a harassed utility company had to notify the police.

Another story deals with Ruth as a little girl. When she was 6 years old she was sitting in the school room one day when, looking out of the window, she saw a man pass by leading a cow. She recognized the cow as belonging to Mrs. Reeves, a neighbor.

Without saying a word Ruth ran out of the building, overtook the man and demanded to know where he was taking Mrs. Reeves' cow. The man replied that he was the pound keeper, that he had found the cow in the street and that he was taking it to the pound. Ruth was unimpressed. She insisted that the cow be returned to Mrs. Reeves—and finally won her point.

They All Like Her

The fact that Anniston is full of stories about Ruth's escapades should not be misunderstood, however. They are stories that are repeated with honest admiration, and there is nothing in them that reflects on her in any way. Ruth had no childhood sweethearts—they were all pals, instead.

Ruth Elder was an outdoor girl all the way through. She was young and peppy and she liked fun—lots of fun; and she didn't care what the gossips might say about her.

And, even so, they never found anything to say about her except that she was a bit of a tomboy, out for a good time. Which helps to explain why she tried to fly across the Atlantic.

When Ruth Elder Was Five

for want of sufficient evidence.

He returned to his old home in the Okfuskee territory and a few years later murdered Jack Larney. For his crime he was found guilty of first degree murder and sentenced to prison.

Dark grim walls and long days of solitude took their toll and Bear died in prison before completing a heavy sentence. Another link in the kinship chain was removed.

Oil Discovered

Discovery of oil in great quantities on the land was the signal for a mad scramble for property, and alleged relatives of the child who was hanged were resurrected from all parts of the Creek nation. Several hundred have presented claims as heirs to the property.

In the past five years, lawsuit after lawsuit has been filed and fought in courts at Okmulgee and Sapulpa, but the dispute over ownership of the Eagle estate still is unsettled.

It is the opinion of attorneys that the wrangle over sudden riches is far from completed. To date, none of the kinsman has benefited from the estate, as the earnings are held in trust by the government.

Jumbled records of early day Indian rolls may play a part in delaying a final settlement of the case. Three months of digging in to history and revelations of the genealogy of Ullie, Hanna and Bear is in prospect for the federal government.

Odd Shaped Rocks Found On Farm Are Subject Of Study

READING, Pa., Oct. 21 (INS)—Historian and archaeologists of Berks county are making a study of forty or more oddly shaped stones unearthed near Birdsboro by a Birdsboro contractor engaged in the building of a road from Birdsboro to Philadelphia pike.

The stones bear the appearance of those possibly used by grist mills and for medieval threshing. The historians are of the opinion that the aged stone pieces were used by Indians who inhabited the section centuries ago.

According to tradition, Daniel Boone, the famous Indian hunter, born in the Oley Valley helped to chase Indians who molested early settlers on the barren farm lands of Berks county.

Descendants of pioneers of Oley Valley often tell of how the early settlers, when hearing of approaching Indians, hid their farm implements such as grist mills, stone teeth harrow and plow shares. Very frequently in the rural section uninhabited until the advance of automobile highways excavators have dug up odd stones

INDIAN ESTATE IS WORTH MORE THAN $25,000,000

Courts Review Tragedy And Death In Tangle Of 150 Oklahoma Tract Of 160 Acres; In Court 40 Years

Seek Right Owners Of Oil Lease Lands

Will Study Earliest Records Of The Redskins; Many Lawyers Have Been Involved

OKMULGEE, Okla.—Tragedy and gruesome death in a drab setting of 40 years formed the background for an Indian estate tangle, which has caused 69 attorneys to appear before a federal referee to determine the rightful heirs of oil lease lands valued at $25,000,000.

It is over a 160 acre tract of land in northwestern Creek county, in section 27-17-7, between Drumright and Shamrock, that heirs of Ullie Eagle, Creek girl, are now battling.

Ullie Eagle, enrolled as a Creek, died a violent death in 1902. Dave Eagle, father of Ullie, was shot and killed in 1890, when Okfuskee county was nothing but unproved prairie land. Tochee, widowed mother of Ullie, maintained the Okfuskee county homestead with her son but tired of the struggle, and March 6, 1894 died, leaving Ullie, then about 4 years old, to the care of an old Indian woman, called Sellie, said to have been Tochee's grandmother.

Becomes Orr's When the last roll was made of the Creek people, Ullie was registered with Sellie. Later, Sellie died and the little brown-skinned orphan girl, who had been shifted from one home to another, was rescued by Paro Bear and his wife Hoota or Hanna, who had no children. They agreed to raise the child as their own.

Late one Sunday in the summer of 1902, little Ullie and Hanna were found hanged in their little log cabin near where the post office of Tuskegee now stands. Neighbors were skeptical and relatives of Hanna demanded a federal investigation. Paro Bear was questioned but theory of murder and suicide persisted.

Both bodies were dressed neatly and revealed no marks of violence. The last rope around the neck of Paro Bear was released

However, there is nothing in the law to prevent the Republican or the Democratic national committees, or other organizations, from buying all the radio facilities they want or can afford, for the broadcasting of political propaganda on behalf of any candidate.
