Steele Has Paid Himself $7,945 From Contributions

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

State Rep. Jason Steele, R-Rockledge, in his campaign for the District 17 seat in the Florida Senate, has paid himself in salary almost half of his campaign contributions.

While he has received contributions totaling $16,367, including $872 of that amount from "in kind" services or materials, his campaign fund has paid him 19 salary checks over the past seven months totaling $7,945.

In addition he has paid a campaign assistant, Frank Tsamoutales of Indian River, another $2,100 in salaries.

Steele said today he will hire a full-time campaign manager and pay him a salary beginning in September. But at that time Steele's salary from the campaign fund will cease, Steele said.

Steele said that since it became known that his campaign fund is paying him a salary, "I have found not one contributor who is upset about it."

In Steele's lengthy contribution list filed with the state elections office, only two Seminole County contributors were listed.

Mr. and Mrs. Johns Torcaso of Winter Springs were on the list as contributing $25. Torcaso is deputy mayor of Winter Springs and a candidate for mayor in the city's November election. While Torcaso was not available for comment today, Mrs. Torcaso said, "It (the salary) doesn't bother me one way or the other." She added she wouldn't have donated to the Steele campaign if she didn't want him to win.

Meanwhile, Barbara Robinson, spokesman in the state election office, said when Steele began filing campaign reports in December he also declared he would take a salary from campaign funds.

Ms. Robinson is assistant to Dorothy Glisson, deputy secretary of state for elections.

She said "a lot of" state candidates take salaries from their campaign accounts and it is permitted by law.

Steele started reporting campaign contributions in December for funds he began collecting on Nov. 24. At that time he was a candidate for re-election to the District 14 seat in the Florida House. (The district is mostly Brevard County).

After reapportionment, he decided to run for the District 17 seat in the Florida Senate held by John Vogt of Cocoa Beach for the past 10 years. Steele's old district after reapportionment had a large section of Seminole County.

Senate District 17 includes portions of Brevard, Seminole, Osceola and Orange counties.

Noting that the law allows candidates to take personal expenses and a salary from their campaign account, Steele said he opted to take $1,000 per month instead of reimbursements

"everytime I turned around to pay for gas for a particular function."

"I feel I don't have any time to dedicate to any other work than the people's work," Steele said. "And that's perfectly legal."

Of his assistant Tsamoutales' salary paid from the campaign fund, Steele said Tsamoutales has just graduated from Florida State University. "He has never helped in a campaign before. He is working in four different counties for me and that is difficult," Steele said.

Steele at first said he will pay income taxes on the salary he is drawing from his campaign account, but he added he has asked for a ruling from Mrs. Glisson's office on exactly what needs to be done.

He said the money he has been drawing as salary is actually being used for expenses of the campaign.

Estre-Lita Moving To Lake Mary

Construction of the first phase of a $1 million, five-story office warehouse distribution center for cosmetics is to begin on an eight-acre tract off Rinehart Road in Lake Mary in March.

Grace Perry, administrator of Estre-Lita Creations Inc., 5239 Edgewater Drive, Orlando, said the firm plans to move its entire operation to Lake Mary before the end of 1983.

The first-phase construction will be at least one floor of about 11,000 square feet or two floors, Mrs. Perry said.

The building site is adjacent to the Stromberg-Carlson plant.

The firm is associated with the Aloe Vera Cosmetic Co. of Oklahoma, and distributes cosmetic products in 43 states, Mrs. Perry said.

The eight-acre tract was purchased for $178,000 through Anne Wallace, a Sanford realtor.

Mrs. Perry said the firm currently has nine full-time employees as well as a number of independent representatives operating in the field.

"We are so cramped for space here," she said, adding that more employees will be hired once the new facility is constructed.

School Lunch Prices Going Up By 5 Cents

By MICHAEL BEHA
Herald Staff Writer

School lunch prices of 90 cents for elementary students and $1 for secondary students have been formally approved by the Seminole County School Board.

But that approval was not given without some harsh words by Board member William Kroll Wednesday about how certain items on the ala carte menus for high schools are priced and questions by board members Roland Williams and Allan Keeth on the pricing of lunches, particularly at the elementary schools.

Kroll told Assistant Food Service Director D.F. Kirkpatrick he felt some items on the ala carte menu particularly hot dogs and hamburgers, were overpriced.

"We're selling them for 75 cents," he said. Kroll went on to say that local restaurants serve hamburgers for less than the schools are charging.

But Kirkpatrick said restaurants cut their prices on some items to draw people into the store. Prices on other items are inflated, he said.

"I think your meat items are overpriced," Kroll charged. "I think you're trying to discourage them (students) from getting two slices of pizza instead of a full meal."

Kroll said, "I'd rather see them get two slices of pizza than get a full meal and throw it out." He said the students are getting more nutritional value out of the ala carte items than they would if they didn't eat.

Kirkpatrick said he would prefer the students buy full meals. But he said current federal regulations subsidize any school lunch that students buy which has three of five components of the full meals.

He said those components were dictated by the federal government as the minimum daily nutritional requirements in all five food groups.

The allowance for three of the five was approved by the government because many students wouldn't eat school lunches, Kirkpatrick said.

Prices for items on the ala carte menu were approved by the board and the menu includes ice cream products, which were taken off the menu last year. Several board members expressed surprise that ice cream had been removed from the menu and no objections were raised to including those products on the menu.

But several vendor-packaged items like potato chips, popcorn, cheese crackers and cookies were not allowed on the menu.

Kirkpatrick said those items were popular and would help subsidize the rest of the school lunch program.

But School Superintendent Robert Hughes recommended those items not be available for sale. He said they didn't fit in with the goals of the lunch program.

Keeth and Williams echoed concerns they had previously expressed that lunches at elementary schools would cost too much. In response to earlier questions by Keeth, Kirkpatrick presented to the board figures showing the revenues of the lunch program at various price levels.

Those figures showed that at the approved prices of $1 for secondary students and 90 cents for elementary students, the board would take in $1,238,600. That would result in a $192,000 deficit.

At last year's prices of 85 cents for elementary and 95 cents for secondary students, the board would receive $1,117,292 in revenues over the year, the charts showed. Those prices would put the deficit at more than $300,000.

By leaving elementary prices at last year's level and raising the secondary price to $1.05 the board would receive only $9,000 less than at this year's projected levels.

Only Keeth had any comment on the figures, expressing surprise at the narrow difference between this year's approved prices and the projections for 80-cent and $1.05 lunches.

Keeth voted against the prices and against the county's participation in the National School Lunch program.

Williams said he felt prices were too high, particularly at the elementary level but he voted in favor of the prices and for participation in the program.

JC Penney To Locate Center Here

J.C. Penney Co.'s new credit office, which will eventually serve six million customers in the eastern part of the United States, will open this spring in Sabal Point, a company official said today.

Ted L. Spurlock, vice president and director of credit for the company, said the facility, now under construction at Sabal Center, will begin taking applications for employment in February.

Spurlock said the facility will hire about 100 people initially and will eventually employ about 400 people when it reaches its full operational capacity in 1986.

The facility will be a one-story, 68,000-square-foot building and is located on 7.5 acres in Sabal Center, just off Wekiva Springs Road.

Spurlock said North Orlando Associates of Atlanta is the contractor on the building and Haskell Co. of Jacksonville is the architect.

He said the favorable climate, available transportation, favorable energy costs and strong work force were factors in Penney's decision to locate the center in Seminole County.

Sabal Center is part of the Sabal Point planned community being developed by Wally Temple of Seminole County. The community includes executive housing, a country club and plans call for construction of a bank, restaurant and offices.

Superstitions Bother You? Like Friday 13th?

By JANE CASSELLBERRY
Herald Staff Writer

Traditionally, Fridays and the number 13 have been regarded by some as unlucky. But when they meet on the calendar as they will Friday, they are doubly dreaded. Do people dread getting out of bed on Friday the 13th? Do they avoid trips and special events?

To find out, Sanford residents were quizzed about their pet superstitions.

"Nothing's ever happened to give indication to me that Friday the 13th is something to beware of," said Kay Bartholomew, director of marketing and public relations at Central Florida Regional Hospital, "but it's somewhat ingrained in all of us that it's something to beware, so we may cross our fingers or say an extra prayer just in case."

"I have no great fear. It's more something to joke about," she added. As for other superstitions, "when we were building the hospital, I was taking a photo when I realized I was standing under a ladder," she said. "But I decided my photo was more important than a superstition."

Seminole County Home Economics Agent Barbara Hughes says she tries not to be superstitious about Friday the 13th, but she tries to get around it by thinking of it as the 12th. She has been leery of Friday the 13th since she was in junior high school. She said she and another girl were throwing rocks at each other and she chipped the girl's tooth. As an added precaution, she sometimes wears her "lucky" jade ring.

Downtown Sanford businessman Richard Barnett says he wouldn't hesitate to plan a trip on Friday the 13th. "I wouldn't change my plans at all. As a matter of fact, I'd probably walk under a ladder on Friday the 13th," he added.

"Years ago when I was a young boy my grandmother visited us," he said, "and I opened an umbrella in the house. She had a fit and that was the first time I knew there was such a thing as a superstition. They are interesting folklore, and you wonder how they came about. But I'm not a believer."

"It's just another day to me, I don't even think about it," said Irene Brown, vice president of Flagship of Seminole. "I don't worry about ladders and all that jazz, I just take one day at a time. I follow my intuition and it's been good to me."

Two On Trial For Stealing Cash

By TENI YARBOROUGH

Two Sanford men, arrested for stealing over $500,000 in uncult U.S. currency after one man's jilted girlfriend turned her lover in, were being tried today in Orlando's U.S. District Court.

Kenneth Kroesser, 33, of C-5 Sandalwood Villas, 110 Airport Blvd., and Robert Harmon, 60, of 300 Art Lane, were arrested April 28 after Kroesser's girlfriend, Cynthia Lee Queen, 23, told police the two men had stolen money from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing in Washington, D.C.

The girlfriend, who at the time of the arrests was the ex-girlfriend of Kroesser, but they have since gotten back together, testified in court Wednesday," said a spokesman for the U.S. District Attorney's office in Orlando. "Today, Robert Connelly, the government's key witness and head of Orlando's Secret Service office, is expected to testify."

The girlfriend was reluctant to testify against Kroesser since their reconciliation, but was ordered to do so by judge John Reed and was granted immunity from prosecution, officials said.

The case is expected to go to the 12-member jury Monday.

Officials said the money was smuggled from the U.S. Treasury office under the men's clothing while other employees were out to lunch.

Impaired Physician

Herald Series To Begin Sunday

It's tough enough for the medical profession and society to deal with the problems of drug addiction and alcoholism in general. But what about when it happens to the doctor? And it happens often. The national statistics on the so-called impaired physician addicted to drugs or alcohol are growing. It happens to doctors in Florida...and Seminole County, too. What brings it about? What are the dangers to patients and the doctors themselves when it happens? How did Florida become a frontrunner in treating the impaired physician? What do two Seminole County doctors who underwent that intensive treatment think about the program? Herald Staff Writer Joe DeSantis answers those questions in a series titled the Impaired Physician beginning Sunday.

Oscar-Winner Fonda Dead At 77

Actor Henry Fonda died today at about 11:15 a.m. at a California hospital at age 77.

Fonda, whose long film career spans more than 50 years, was admitted to the hospital with heart problems a few days ago.

Fonda's wife, Shirley, was at his side at the time of his death this morning. His children were called immediately to the hospital. Fonda won an Oscar for his role in "On Golden Pond," this year.

NATION IN BRIEF

FBI Trying To Determine Source Of Jet Explosive

HONOLULU (UPI) — FBI bomb specialists flew to Hawaii today to determine the cause of an explosion that killed a passenger and blew a 3-foot hole in a Pan American 747 on a flight from Tokyo. Agents at the scene said a bomb may have been assembled aboard the plane.

The explosion apparently came from under the seat of Toru Ozawa, 16, of Japan, killing him. Fourteen other Japanese nationals suffered minor injuries. The blast occurred aboard Pan AM Flight 830 at 9:05 a.m. Hawaii time Wednesday as the plane, with 285 people aboard, neared Honolulu.

No one had claimed responsibility for the blast, and Tokyo police are trying to determine how explosives made it aboard the jumbo jetliner.

Reagan Rallies Tax Support

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan took to the road to sell a $98.9 billion tax increase to the public and now hopes to use a proved selling pitch to win over a reluctant Congress.

The applause he heard in the West seemed more a general endorsement of his policies than for the tax bill. But Reagan and his advisers left convinced they can make a formidable case to Congress on behalf of the package they say is necessary for economic recovery.

Reagan arranged to use his powers of persuasion today on at least three more delegations of House members — adding to the dozens he personally has lobbied at the White House in the past 10 days.

Woman-Hater Questioned

HOUSTON (UPI) — Coral Eugene Watts, described as a quiet, inethodical woman-hater who has confessed to 22 murders, may be a suspect in a total of 40 slayings in Texas, Michigan and Canada, authorities said.

Watts, 28, led authorities to the graves of at least two of his victims after implicating himself in nine Houston killings and 13 other deaths in Austin and Galveston, Texas; Ann Arbor, Detroit and Kalamazoo, Mich.; and Windsor, Ontario, police said.

Authorities said their investigation in the case resulted in the recovery of a third body Wednesday night and Watts will be questioned about as many as 40 killings, 33 of which are unsolved.

Budget Cut Compromise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate and House budget leaders are trying to split their differences over $11.2 billion in budget cuts, a key part of the 1983 budget resolution approved by Congress in June.

Of the $27.2 billion in spending cuts mandated in the 1983 budget resolution Congress approved in June, $16 billion were to be found in entitlement benefit programs and the $11.2 billion were to be found in all other federal programs.

The entitlement cuts, in Medicare, Medicaid and welfare, were included in the tax-increase bill now in a slow-moving joint conference committee.

Teen-Agers Jailed In Burglaries

By TENI YARBOROUGH
Herald Staff Writer

Two Altamonte Springs teenagers are being held today on burglary and theft charges in connection with numerous burglaries reported by residents of an Altamonte Springs neighborhood.

Tony Rozell Maxwell, 18, of 127 Salem Court, and a 16-year-old Altamonte Springs youth were charged with burglary and theft and are suspected of committing at least 25 burglaries in the neighborhood near lakes Elaine and Phyllis, deputies said. Maxwell is being held in the county jail today under $10,000 bond, jail officials said.

Lin Palmer, of 763 Franklin St., reported that his home had been burglarized June 23, and as a result deputies were able to obtain fingerprints of the burglary suspects and traced the prints to the two teens, deputies said.

"A lot of homes in that area were being hit and people had asked Sheriff (John) Polk to concentrate on their area to catch the people responsible," said sheriff's spokesman John Spolski.

Spolski said he and Polk visited with about nine homeowners in the affected area to hear their complaints and assure them that every effort would be made to apprehend the thieves.

2 ARMED ROBBERIES REPORTED

A Casselberry service station and an Altamonte Springs automotive repair shop were robbed by armed gunmen, who netted $100 and $10 respectively.

A clerk at the Eastern service station, State Road 436 and Lake Howell Road, Casselberry, told deputies he was robbed at gunpoint by two men at about 1:23 p.m. Wednesday.

The clerk told deputies that two men, one holding a gun and wearing a handkerchief over his face, entered the station. He said the gunman walked toward him, put his elbow on the counter with the gun pointed at the clerk and demanded cash. The other man kept watch for customers at the door, deputies said.

The two men then fled on foot. About an hour and a half later, Altamonte Springs police said two men wearing stocking masks and armed with a small gun held up S&A Automotive Engineering Inc., at 222 Sanford Ave.

The bandits entered the shop, showed the clerk the gun and went behind the counter, took the cash, and fled on foot, police said.

LAWNMOWER LIFTED

A lawnmower was reported stolen from the garage of James Newman, of 1295 Lake Lucerne Circle, Casselberry, at about 11:15 p.m. Tuesday, deputies said.

CAR ENGINE DAMAGES

Vandals broke into a south Seminole County man's garage between 12:15 p.m. and 12:45 p.m. Tuesday and poured laundry detergent on his daughter's car engine.

Louis Bowman, 56, of 2519 Eastbrook Blvd., Winter Park, told deputies he is unsure of the amount of damage caused to the vehicle.

STOLEN VEHICLE FOUND BURNED

A vehicle, reported stolen from a Sanford man's home at 7 p.m. Tuesday, was discovered near railroad tracks at Wynn Drive and Sanford Avenue at about 12:20 a.m. Wednesday. However, the vehicle had been burned.

Police said the vehicle is the property of Timothy Mark Prevatt, 24, of 3806 Cypress Ave.

PAIR PLEADS GUILTY TO CALF THEFT

Moments before lawyers were to begin selecting a jury to hear the case of two men charged with stealing a cow, the pair pleaded guilty.

Steven Girtler, 29, of 132 E. Woodland Drive, Sanford, and Joseph Thigpen, 31, of Osceola Road, Oviedo, were arrested March 17 and charged with theft of a 250-pound calf from Thrasher Farms, owned by James Partin, just southeast of Sanford, deputies said. Shirley Crouch, 27, of Edgewater, was also arrested with the two men in connection with the theft, but charges were later dropped.

Circuit Judge Robert B. McGregor accepted the two men's guilty pleas and scheduled sentencing for Oct. 14. The men could each face up to five years in state prison and $5,000 in fines.

COMPRESSOR STOLEN FROM POULTRY FARM

A 3-horsepower air compressor was stolen from the egg cooler room at Geneva Poultry Farm, along Old Mims Road, Geneva, between 9 a.m. and 6:32 p.m. Wednesday.

Farm Manager Johnny Finch said the compressor is valued at about $375.

SAVE THE RIVER

Cooperation was the key word at the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce-sponsored cocktail party Tuesday night in honor of the governing board of the St. Johns River Water Management District. The chamber's task force to "Save the St. Johns," headed by Douglas Stenstrom (second from left) was lauded by district directors, Chairman Fran Pignone (left), and Michael Gray (second from right), while Seminole County Commission Chairman Bob Sturm observes. The committee encouraged the directors in the plan to acquire wetlands along the river to regulate its flow.

Parents Sue Man Charged With Molesting Girl, 10

Parents of a 10-year-old south Seminole County girl, who was sexually assaulted last month, are suing the man accused of the crime seeking payment from him for the child's much-needed psychiatric care.

The parents, whose names are not released in order to protect the molested child's identity, filed the suit in Seminole Circuit Court on behalf of their daughter, who suffers with cerebral palsy.

The lawsuit claims that as a result of the sexual assault their daughter suffers from nervousness, loss of sleep and appetite, insecurity, inability to concentrate, distrust of adult males, a personality change, increased sensitivity and needs extensive medical and psychiatric care.

"If their lawyer had not recommended the civil action, then I would have," said Prosecutor Steve Brady, who is prosecuting the man accused of the crime. "The child needs immediate care and they are just not in a position to afford it."

Richard Roland Rodgers, 66, of 3470 Arnel Drive, Winter Park, was arrested July 6 on charges of lewd and lascivious acts on a child and is scheduled for trial during the week of Sept. 9, Brady said.

"I wish you could see this child," Brady said. "I have had her and her father in my office twice a week, every week since the thing happened. I have been trying to get her accustomed to me and to the courthouse and to this environment.

"In order for us to get a conviction in this case, she will have to take the stand and testify," Brady said. "We're trying to prepare her for that."

Brady said the child is "frightened and terrified of men" adding that she "feels she has done something wrong and that I'm here to prosecute her."

Bids For New School To Be Opened Next Month

By MICHAEL BEHA
Herald Staff Writer

The Seminole County School Board is preparing for the opening of school... one that isn't even built yet.

School Board members Wednesday were shown architect's plans for construction of a new elementary school in the Tusawilla area.

Architect Robert Pierce, of Watson and Co., Orlando, told board members the plans for the school are ready to be submitted to the state Department of Education (DOE) for approval. All school construction projects costing more than $100,000 must be approved by the DOE. The school is expected to cost about $3.7 million.

Bids on the project are expected to be opened Sept. 14 and Pierce said his company will recommend a builder at the Sept. 22 school board meeting.

Construction should begin by Oct. 1 and the school is expected to be open for students in September, 1983, Pierce said. He added, however, that the timetable could be altered by changes to the plans and by construction delays.

He said that costs for building the school in eight months, as the board has suggested so that it will be available for use at the beginning of the 1983-84 school year, could drive costs higher. Pierce said contractors might charge a premium for building it so rapidly.

The project will be let for bids two ways, as a 14-month job and as an eight-month job. The school board will then decide which plan to accept.

School Superintendent Robert Hughes warned that lower construction prices for building the school in 14 months could hide other costs to the school district.

"We could be exchanging capital outlay dollars for operating dollars by doubling up on classes and extra bus runs," he said. Hughes said if the school is not ready for use at the beginning of the school term, students would have to attend classes at another school until it is ready. That would cause makeshift scheduling at the other school, he said.

Another delay in the project could come from redesigning a portion of the kitchen. Pierce's plans include the use of a combination cooler and freezer, a device he said has been used with no complaints in facilities designed by Watson and Co. for the past 18 years.

But board member William Kroll said his conversations with food preparation personnel indicated that the design would not work for school use.

Pierce was instructed to come up with alternate design schemes that would allow for use of a separate cooler and freezer.

He warned that a major design change, could delay the project and cost more for architect's fees.

"If we have to change the configuration of exterior walls it could be a major change. If we just change the layout within existing walls it's not so major," Pierce said.

Pierce offered some optimistic news about the project. He said because of the current slump in the housing industry bids on the project might be significantly lower than expected.

"Contractors are hungry and are bidding much lower on projects. That could be to your benefit," he told board members.

School Board Balks At Computer Salary

If someone is going to get paid at least $17,000 a year to program computers for the Seminole County school system, the School Board says they should have more training than just a high school diploma. That's why the board on Wednesday refused to approve a job description for the post and directed Assistant Director of Personnel Ann Neiswender to toughen the job requirements.

In the original job description submitted to the board by Mrs. Neiswender, the job would pay between $17,568 and $21,958 and would require only that the successful applicant have a high school degree.

The description said completion of some computer programming courses would be "helpful" but did not set any mandatory computer training as a requirement.

The job, as described, would entail programming, preparation of flow charts and a knowledge of current computer languages.

"What bothers me the most is that this is like a training position," board member Nancy Warren said. "And all you need is a GED (General Equivalency Diploma). A person could come in and know very little about programming."

Board member Allan Keeth objected to the salary being offered for the post and for another job, a community resource specialist who would be responsible, in part, for coordinating volunteer services. The salary for that job starts at $10,407. The job description for the position was approved Wednesday.

"I'm having a terrible time justifying the salaries for those two positions," Keeth said. "I grant you I'm not familiar with what people do with computers, but $17,000 for a junior programmer with a high school education seems out of line."

Mrs. Neiswender said the field is highly competitive and the salary is in line with what a person would be paid in private industry.

"We will be able to fill this job with these qualifications. If we ask for much more we won't be able to. We had this opening all last year," she said.

But Keeth was adamant in his opposition. "We all recognize that we're talking about a 12-month job, but it's still too high. If we're going to have to pay money like that we've got every right to ask for someone with a four-year (college) degree."

Board member William Kroll said employees in other areas should receive similar salaries.

"I wish we could pay our master electricians and plumbers this much. It's more important to keep the schools running than to operate a computer," he said.

The board voted unanimously to reject the job description and directed Mrs. Neiswender to make the educational requirements for the post more stringent. She is expected to resubmit the job description at the board's next meeting Aug. 25. — MICHAEL BEHA.

Commissioners' Trial Enters Its Third Day

The civil trial of Seminole County commissioners accused of denying the civil rights of a Casselberry developer entered its third day today in U.S. District Court in Orlando.

The defendants, commissioner Bill Kirchhoff and former commissioners Richard Williams, Robert French, John Kimbrough and Harry Kwiatkowski and county arbor inspector Irving Kaufman, are accused of denying the civil rights of real estate broker Arthur Lee Seligman, owner of Cross County Realty, by refusing to grant a zoning variance in 1977 allowing him to cut trees on property he owned near the ecologically fragile Spring Hammock area. Seligman reportedly wanted to clear the land for use as a pasture.

Seligman said the commissioners' refusal to grant the variance cost him about $94,000 after he sold the tract back to its original owners.

The Spring Hammock area is under consideration by the state for purchase under the environmentally endangered lands.

The plaintiff rested his case and the defendants' attorney Howard Marsee, was presenting his case today, court officials said.

Patrol Probe To Yield Formal Criminal Charges

TALLAHASSEE (UPI)—The prosecutor heading the investigation into the alleged misuse of state airplanes and other property has concluded that criminal violations occurred and says formal charges will likely be filed.

State Attorney Don Modesitt confirmed his finding of criminal violations Wednesday after Gov. Bob Graham signed an executive order expanding his jurisdiction beyond his Tallahassee-based judicial circuit to include four other circuits.

Modesitt has been investigating officials of the Department of Highway Safety and Motor Vehicles and its component agency, the Florida Highway Patrol, for the alleged misuse of state aircraft, vehicle and employees.

Former Florida Department of Law Enforcement Director Jim York, asked to take over the troubled agency on an interim basis by Graham, has said investigators also are looking into allegations that low-level employees of the Division of Motor Vehicles have sold blank driver's license forms.

FP&L Leak 'Not Dangerous'

MIAMI (UPI)—Florida Power and Light officials said a leak of 11,027 gallons of radioactive water from the Turkey Point nuclear reactor March 17 poses no health or environmental problems for Biscayne Bay.

The leak occurred when a valve mistakenly left open in the reactor led to an unpublicized leak of radioactive water, about enough to fill a small swimming pool.

"There is just no danger," FP&L spokesman Tony Burns said Wednesday. "If you drank that water for over a year, you would get no more radioactivity than you'd get from background radiation in the environment."

Solution To Lebanese War 'A Couple Of Days' Away

United Press International

U.S. Envoy Philip Habib, "a couple of days" from a peaceful solution to the Lebanon War, took his shuttle diplomacy to Beirut today where Israel squeezed the Palestinians with a shelling blitz, air raids and a limited tank advance.

Military sources in Lebanon said the pullout from west Beirut by the outgunned and outnumbered PLO guerrillas could begin by the end of the week and be completed within 15 days.

In an ominous comment, Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon said Israel would not withdraw from Lebanon until Syria removed 40,000 troops stationed since the 1975-76 Lebanese civil war in the eastern Bekka Valley.

Paris Reels From 6th Bomb

PARIS (UPI)—The mayor of Paris charged "blind, hideous terrorism" struck the city for the sixth time in two weeks with a remote-controlled bomb that wounded six people and set fire to the Iraqi embassy center.

The victims of Wednesday's second bombing in the capital included three children of an embassy guard, officials said. Three of the six wounded, including one of the children, were hospitalized.

Sales Up Slightly, Outlook Uncertain

United Press International

Retail store cash registers rang up just 1 percent more sales in July, far from making up for the 3.3 percent drop in sales the previous month.

The figures seemed to add fuel to a new prediction the economy faces another year of stagnation, but the administration insisted — despite Wall Street's concerns — the trend is positive.

The Commerce Department reported Wednesday, despite July's debut of a 10 percent cut in federal income tax withholding designed to encourage spending, the 1 percent rise in sales did not cut much into June's drop.

At the same time, a new study by the Brookings Institution, using computer projections, predicted the economy will continue to slide this year and will only grow a tiny bit next year.

Durable goods sales, including automobiles and other large items, rose 1.6 percent in July after being bludgeoned into a revised 7.8 percent decline by the recession in June.

The value of retail sales for July, after adjustment for summer buying trends, was $88.7 billion, the department said, only 1.6 percent ahead of sales volume 12 months earlier.

The Brookings Institution study, by Christopher Sims of the University of Minnesota, is one of several relatively somber views of the economic outlook contained in the nonprofit think-tank's latest volume of "Brookings Papers on Economic Activity."

Altamonte Man, 59, Sentenced To 15 Years In Stabbing, Drug Case

A 59-year-old Altamonte Springs man has begun serving a 15-year prison term in connection with the stabbing death of another Altamonte Springs man and drug charges.

Tommy Lee James, of 325 Longwood Ave., pleaded guilty to attempted manslaughter in the January 1979 stabbing death of Herbert Bouey, then 36, of Longwood Avenue, and entered a plea of no contest to charges of possession of heroin.

Circuit Judge Robert B. McGregor sentenced James to 10 years in prison, less 212 days already served, in connection with the drug charge and a consecutive five years in prison for attempted manslaughter.

McGregor adjudicated James guilty during sentencing which provides that even after serving the sentence, James' criminal record will reflect the offenses.

Altamonte Springs police arrested James on the drug charges after they observed a man carrying a plastic bag containing silver packets of heroin, outside an abandoned pool hall in that city. Upon seeing police, James reportedly ran back into the pool hall, where he was arrested.

In addition, police discovered that Bouey, also named Sonny, had been stabbed in the chest at the North Street pool hall. Bouey died as a result of the stabbing and James was charged with his death, police said.

Exposing The Cuban Connection

Federal investigators now appear to have pieced together compelling evidence that Cuba's communist government is directly involved in abetting the flow of illicit drugs into the United States.

Specifically, Cuba is reportedly providing sanctuary to Colombian smugglers transporting bulk shipments of cocaine and marijuana bound for the United States. According to a Colombian drug runner now cooperating with the Justice Department, ships hauling narcotics anchor in Cuban waters and then transfer their drug cargoes to fast boats for the run to Florida.

The evidence clearly suggests that Cuban officials not only know of these rendezvous but, in fact, help arrange them. The standard practice seems to be for Cuban patrol boats to meet the drug ships as they enter Cuban waters and then escort them to the off-loading points.

Fidel Castro's motives for becoming a co-conspirator in drug trafficking would seem to be obvious enough. The Cuban connection provides a desperately needed source of hard currency, mostly in the form of coveted American dollars. When the occasion demands, the drug runners can be turned into gun runners for Castro's surrogate guerrillas in various Latin countries. And, lastly, increasing the flow of drugs into the American market creates additional problems for the country Fidel loves to hate.

It is no surprise that Cuban officials have denied all this. No government admits its own complicity in fostering the human misery the drug traffic leaves in its wake.

But the evidence exposing Castro's hand in the flow of cocaine and marijuana to the United States is so strong that the Justice Department is considering indicting Cuban officials. No one expects them to surrender to U.S. jurisdiction, to be sure. Even so, an indictment and its attendant disclosure of the detailed evidence implicating the Cuban government would serve to illuminate a dark secret Castro can only want to keep hidden.

Population Growth

It took somewhere between 2 million and 5 million years for the world's population to reach the first billion souls. The second billion arrived after 130 years. The upcoming billion mark — the fifth — will be reached in 1987, and it will be accomplished in a time span of 12 years.

Most of the growth is taking place in Third World nations, where food, housing, sanitation and economic opportunity are lacking. It may be the year 2040 before zero growth is reached. In the meantime, the world will be hard put to avoid widespread famine and disease.

Populations are exploding at an awesome rate. By the year 2000, the population of Latin America will have jumped 45 percent, Africa 70 percent, and the world, now populated with 4.6 billion people, will contain more than 6 billion.

Mexico City is expected to grow from its present 15 million to a supercity of 31 million in the next 18 years. Other supercities will include Sao Paulo, 25.8 million; Shanghai, 23.7 million; Tokyo-Yokohama, 23.7 million; and New York-New Jersey, 22.4 million.

By the end of the century, more than half the world's population will be living in large cities, a situation that brings on social and political pressures, leading to racial, class and regional unrest.

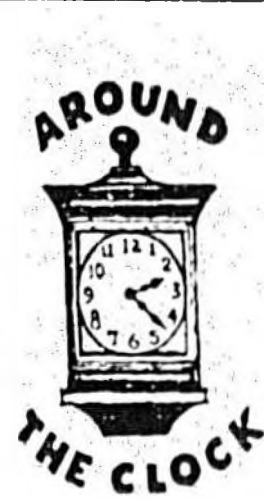

All these figures point to one conclusion. There's got to be some control over the birth rate and the sooner it's obtained, the less painful it will be. The crowding of the globe will become so apparent within a few years that there will be few who will argue against birth control.

The world has to work out a solution before it's too late.

BERRY'S WORLD

"I'm a lobbyist for organized crime!"

By TENI YARBOROUGH

"If guns are outlawed only outlaws will have guns."

"You can take my gun away when you pry my cold, dead fingers from around it."

It hasn't been that long since bumper stickers could be seen on many a car and truck advocating or denouncing gun control. Now, the subject is rarely mentioned in this area.

But just because we haven't read or heard much about gun control or the lack of it in this area, doesn't mean a silencer has been placed on the subject.

Recently, San Francisco became the largest American city to outlaw pistol ownership. That action has spurred lawsuits citing violation of a citizen's right to bear arms under the U.S. Constitution, as one might expect. It'll be interesting to watch what happens. Could this action be the proverbial shot heard round the world?

In that city, persons other than gun collectors, private detectives, private store owners and a select few, could face a $500 fine and a 30-day stint in jail if convicted of owning a pistol. San Franciscans were given 90 days from the date the ordinance was passed to hand over their guns.

However, very little enforcement of the controversial law is expected because officials say they plan to rely on public cooperation to put an end to handgun ownership.

Before those who advocate gun ownership come down too hard on our west coast comrades, we must remember that this town, fiddled with political liberals, an activist homosexual community and a variety of other diversified interest groups, watched as their mayor and a city supervisor were shot to death by a former supervisor not too long ago.

San Franciscans are afraid and who wouldn't be with their city's crime rate? While crime on the whole was down 2 percent last year, murder rose 16 percent.

Sure, gun-control may not be a guarantee that gun-toting criminals and crime will be wiped out. But how do we know that gun-control wouldn't have made it more difficult for a killer to get his hands on a gun?

On the other hand, let's take a look at Kennesaw County, Ga., where it is illegal for a person not to own a handgun.

Opponents of gun control in Kennesaw County apparently have their own motive for passing the mandatory gun ownership law. Perhaps they reason that a gun is also synonymous with protection against crime. In any case, Orville residents (living north of San Francisco) are drafting their own pro-handgun statute.

Tax Cuts And The Compromise

President Reagan's greatest legislative victory of 1981, and his opponents' greatest regret, was his three year, across-the-board individual tax cut. It was at once hailed as a symbolic turn away from the tax-spend-tax fiscal policies of two decades, and damned by liberals as a giveaway to the rich.

It is hard to remember now that the President originally wanted a one-shot, 30 percent cut. That was too much for the tax establishment in Congress to swallow, however, and it was whittled down to 25 percent and stretched over three years. As a result, it has had nil effect on the U.S. economy, either in terms of new capital investment, or even higher hopes for it. The first, 5 percent increment, which went into effect last fall was all but unnoticed by American taxpayers. The first full 10 percent phase, effective July 1, has been the butt of derisive jokes. Retailers who planned on a surge of consumer spending have scaled back their expectations. Executives at major corporations, while endorsing the President's program, are non-committal on capital spending plans.

What went wrong? In the autumn of 1981, the president insisted that his program would so excite the nation that the economy would begin booming apace. Real gross national product had increased at an annual rate of 2.2 percent in the third quarter of 1981. Hopes were high for a big improvement in early 1982.

Instead, the recession deepened. In the first quarter, GNP fell an adjusted 5.1 percent, and 5.3 percent in the second. As conditions worsened, most Reagan advisers wilted. As early as last December, White House staffers tried to get the President to announce various tax increases in his State of the Union message. At the time, he resisted. But the compromisers, who distrusted the idea of a tax cut from the start, weren't deterred. They have never missed a chance to remind Mr. Reagan of liberal criticism of his budget package, submitted in February, which projected a deficit of $98 billion for fiscal 1983. That the liberals in Congress were responsible for that deficit was ignored.

The President thus agreed to new taxes to raise $122 billion over three years while the administration butted heads with the relevant Congressional committees over a budget compromise. The President refused to consider reform of Social Security, which accounts for more than 20 percent of federal outlays. The Washington compromise apparatus was running at full throttle.

Meanwhile, the economy began to recover. The Dow Jones industrial average rallied for five weeks through April, and housing starts shot up 22.5 percent in May. Auto sales and consumer spending grew. Then in mid-May, Congress lowered the boom. A House-Senate conference committee agreed on a budget projecting a $103.9 billion deficit for FY 83. The administration, worn down, went along.

Almost immediately, the economy reacted. The stock market sank, and nearly every economic indicator declined in June. The political and economic developments were not coincidental. The first determined the second.

It is now apparent that the Reagan administration has broken under liberal pressure. In early July, the Senate Finance Committee approved a package of tax increases on business to raise $20.9 billion in fiscal '83, and nearly $100 billion over three years.

Public Could Suffer In FTC Battle

WASHINGTON — "Let the buyer beware" is a doctrine beloved by conservative Champions of free enterprise. But it's too radical to suit the health-care establishment.

Professional medical groups are fighting desperately to keep the Federal Trade Commission from stopping their monopolistic practices or even telling the public what it should beware of when it needs medical or dental care. Unfortunately, Big Machine has found willing helpers in Congress who are trying to protect the doctors at the expense of their patients.

This is big business we're talking about here: Medical-dental expenses amounted to $1,255 per patient last year, or a staggering 9.8 percent of the gross national product.

Over the years, the FTC has found that lack of competition — active discouragement of it, in fact — has contributed to the skyrocketing increase in health-care costs. The commission has brought restraint-of-trade actions against the American Medical

DON GRAFF

El Salvador Conflict

Still on the subject of El Salvador, the administration has been making a considerable effort to persuade the American press of the importance of seeing the civil war its way.

The argument is that the conflict cannot be lost in El Salvador, but it may be in this country. Meaning if opposition in Congress and public opinion to the excesses committed in the pursuit of a military solution choke off American aid, the Salvadoran government and armed forces will be denied a victory that is within their grasp.

It is an argument that much of the press has difficulty with for a number of reasons. For one, the excesses are too appalling and the regime's responsibility for most too blatantly obvious to be downplayed. It is an invitation to selective reporting that cannot be accepted.

For another, it assumes a simplicity to the Salvadoran situation that does not exist. This is not a two- but a many-sided struggle. Within the government camp are Christian Democrats, right-wing elements bitterly antagonistic to them and now in control of the civilian governing apparatus, and a military establishment that continues to hold the real power, as it has throughout El Salvador's modern history.

The opposition is far from the monolithically Marxist threat the State Department's information specialists see. Or say they see. An alliance of necessity rather than ideological affinity, the guerrilla front includes five mutually suspicious groups ranging across a political spectrum from dissident Christian Democrats and Socialists to the Salvadoran Communist Party — a relative late-comer to the struggle — and more extreme Marxists.

If this coalition is not already completely under Communist control, as is the State Department view, it is being driven to that end by post-election policies of the military and rightist-dominated constituent assembly rejecting negotiations that might tempt the non-Communist factions.

The United States is not only a contributing but quite possibly the dominant influence in this polarizing process.

In a recent dispatch on ambiguous power relationships following the March elections, Raymond Bonner noted that in the cynical Salvadoran view the country's real president is the American ambassador.

It is more than a joke. Ambassador Deane R. Hinton, operating out of an embassy that is a heavily fortified bunker, is playing a role that has long been that of U.S. envoys throughout Central America, although rarely in such lurid circumstances.

It is nowhere more physically evident — nor more spectacularly defunct — than in Nicaragua, where the American embassy residence sprawls huge and white in the hills dominating Managua. The ambassador has settled for simpler digs since the downfall of the Somoza dynasty installed by U.S. Marines, but the proconsul's palace remains as a monument of Nicaragua's recent past and the present in much of the rest of Central America.

In currently certifying to Congress sufficient progress on the part of Salvadoran authorities in curbing atrocities and pressing reforms to merit continued U.S. aid, administration spokesmen argue there is no evidence of increasing support for the guerrilla opposition despite acknowledged official excesses.

Maybe so. But neither is there any evidence of loss of support or military effectiveness. Guerrilla forces still control large areas of El Salvador, still interdict highways and destroy bridges, still mount operations against military units and evade retaliatory sweeps.

But say for the sake of the administration's argument that the Salvadoran armed forces given sufficient American support should succeed. It would be only for the time being. A military solution will not solve the problem. If all the arms from Havana and Moscow the State Department so fears should disappear tomorrow — if Havana and Moscow should disappear — the causes of the Salvadoran civil war would remain. And it would erupt again.

That war is not being — cannot be — lost in this country. Such a struggle can be lost only at the scenes of battle, by the excesses and errors of those waging it and those who support them.

As one was lost in Nicaragua.

Cancer Research Progress

By JAN ZIEGLER

DAYTONA BEACH (UPI) — Cancer research must sometimes seem like the old myth, where a king of Corinth was condemned to push a rock up a hill through eternity.

Every time the luckless chap neared the top, the rock fell back again.

But the American Cancer Society likes to remind people this is not so. Treatments which weren't even a glimmer in a scientist's eye are today producing what one doctor called "miracles on Main Street."

Some of the most resistant forms of cancer 30 years ago are considered curable today. But the disease marches on. The ACS estimates 430,000 Americans will have died of cancer during 1982. Of every five deaths in the United States, one is from cancer.

Let anyone fear the battle is not still raging, the ACS gathers scientists and writers together at a hotel somewhere every year to talk about what's going on.

A key area of interest in many laboratories are proteins called monoclonal antibodies. They are made by fusing antibody-producing cells from mice immunized with human tumor cells.

Thus they can be programmed genetically to attack cancer cells, and have received a lot of publicity over the past few years as possible custom-tailored diagnostic tools and treatments for cancer.

They can, theoretically, head straight for cancer cells and thereby identify them. It is hoped they can ferry drugs or the highly-touted naturally occurring protein interferon to wipe out tumors and other abnormal growths.

Dr. Robert Baldwin, director of the Cancer Research Campaign Laboratories, England's version of the American Cancer Society, and professor of tumor biology at University of Nottingham, reported on the use of monoclonal antibodies for cancer detection purposes.

Nottingham, in collaboration with Dr. Vera Byers, University of California at San Francisco, produced monoclonal antibodies which react with human osteogenic sarcoma, a highly malignant tumor of the bone usually affecting people in their 20s and 30s.

Combined with radioactive iodine, the antibodies "light up" sarcomas on a camera. The Nottingham group is now conducting tests to see if monoclonal antibodies detect cancer of the colon, breast, pancreas and ovary, Baldwin said.

Baldwin said his researchers don't see any possibility of using monoclonal antibodies for cancer treatment yet.

"There are many, many problems still to be resolved in the use of monoclonal antibodies," he said at the cancer society meeting.

He said doctors would be unable to use the antibodies to ferry anti-cancer drugs to tumors until scientists are sure the antibodies seek out offshoots of malignant tumors as well as the original growth.

Raiders' Pick Of Litter Kittles Heads For Texas

Rod Kittles, Seminole Community College's pick of this year's basketball recruiting litter, is believed to be going elsewhere, according to coach Bill Payne.

Kittles, a 6-7 power forward from Lakewood High in St. Petersburg, was signed by assistant coach Tony Mandeville this summer.

Mandeville, however, turned down the SCC head coaching job and Payne, the second choice, accepted. SCC said the players signed by Mandeville were free to go elsewhere if they desired.

"We hate like heck to lose him," said Payne. "His coach (Danny Wright) told me he was going to San Jacinto (Pasadena, Tex.) Junior College."

Letters of intent or waivers are not valid outside of Florida, Georgia and Alabama in the junior college ranks, according to Payne.

"I've tried getting a hold of him, but he doesn't have a phone," said Payne. "I knew something was funny when he didn't show up at the (North-South) All-Star game (in Gainesville)."

Despite Kittles earlier indication of going to SCC, former Raider coach Joe Sterling wasn't fully convinced. "I felt we had a 50-50 chance of getting him," Sterling said. "There's a lot of people after him."

The Raiders will begin practice the first week of September. — SAM COOK

Swimmers Begin Aug. 23

Seminole High School's swim team will begin two-a-day workouts Aug. 23 at the Sanford Bath and Tennis Club at the Sanford Airport, according to coach Donalyn Knight.

"I'm really excited about it," said Knight Wednesday. "We have a lot of people coming out. It should be a good year."

Morning practices will be from 6:15 to 7:45. In the evening, practice is from 6:15 to 8:30. All students from Crooms and Seminole are invited to participate.

If you have never participated in a sport for Seminole, a birth certificate is needed.

Hollwedel 5th At Nationals

Sanford's Chris Hollwedel competed in the 17-year-old National Junior Weightlifting competition in Memphis, Tenn. last weekend and came away with a fifth place spot.

Hollwedel, who lifted for coach Bill McDaniel's Seminole High squad, snatched 170 pounds and clean-and-jerked 236 pounds for a combined weight of 406 pounds.

The competition is scheduled to be televised on ESPN later this month.

Dolphins Add 4 Kickers

MIAMI (UPI) — The Miami Dolphins are hoping to solve their suddenly shaky place kicking situation with sheer numbers, at least for now.

The Dolphins as of Wednesday number four place kickers on the roster, although that includes incumbent Uwe von Schamann, who is out at least until the regular season with a siege of colitis.

The Dolphins' latest acquisition is Rex Robinson, a former Georgia place kicker and all Southeastern Conference selection. Miami picked him up on waivers from the Denver Broncos Wednesday.

Robinson was a sixth round draft choice by the Cincinnati Bengals last year and spent most of the season there. He was picked up by the Broncos as a free agent during the offseason, but waived earlier this week.

Also on the Dolphins' roster this summer are place kickers Hans Nielsen, a former Michigan State player who spent parts of the 1981 season with the Chicago Bears, and Jorge Portela, a local resident who graduated from Auburn two years ago.

Portela has failed tryouts with Buffalo, Syracuse and, two weeks ago, the Miami Dolphins. The Dolphins decided to give him a second chance last week.

The Dolphins have been happy von Schamann's performance over the last three years, but he came down with the colon inflammation before summer training camp.

Floyd, Green Lead Assault

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (UPI) — Defending champion Hubie Green and PGA winner Ray Floyd lead an assault today on the short Wethersfield Country Club course in the opening round of the $300,000 Greater Hartford Open.

They head a field of 156 players in what is expected to be a battle of birdies on the fast 6,534-yard course where well below par is the rule necessary to win.

Green, 35, will try to retain the title he won with a 20-under-par total of 264, one stroke ahead of a group of three players.

Barring bad weather, the tournament could better several 1981 tour records achieved in GHO play.

Scores of 29 for nine holes, 62 for 18 holes, 129 for 36 holes, and 264 for 72 holes last year equaled or tied tour records for low in 1981.

In addition, the GHO had the lowest cut of 139 players and most players (91) to make the cut. Also, Green's final round of 64 was the second lowest finish by a winner for the year.

McEnroe, Connors Breeze

TORONTO (UPI) — John McEnroe has spent the first two days of the Canadian Open Tennis tournament analyzing his personality, his goals and his playing style.

The weak opponents offered the top three seeds in the $300,000 event has left plenty of time for such amusement.

The top-seeded McEnroe, No. 2 seeded Jimmy Connors and No. 3 Ivan Lendl have yet to lose a set after the first two rounds of play.

While Connors has breezed along in an upbeat tempo both on and off the court, McEnroe has talked about the need to behave himself and re-vitalize his serve.

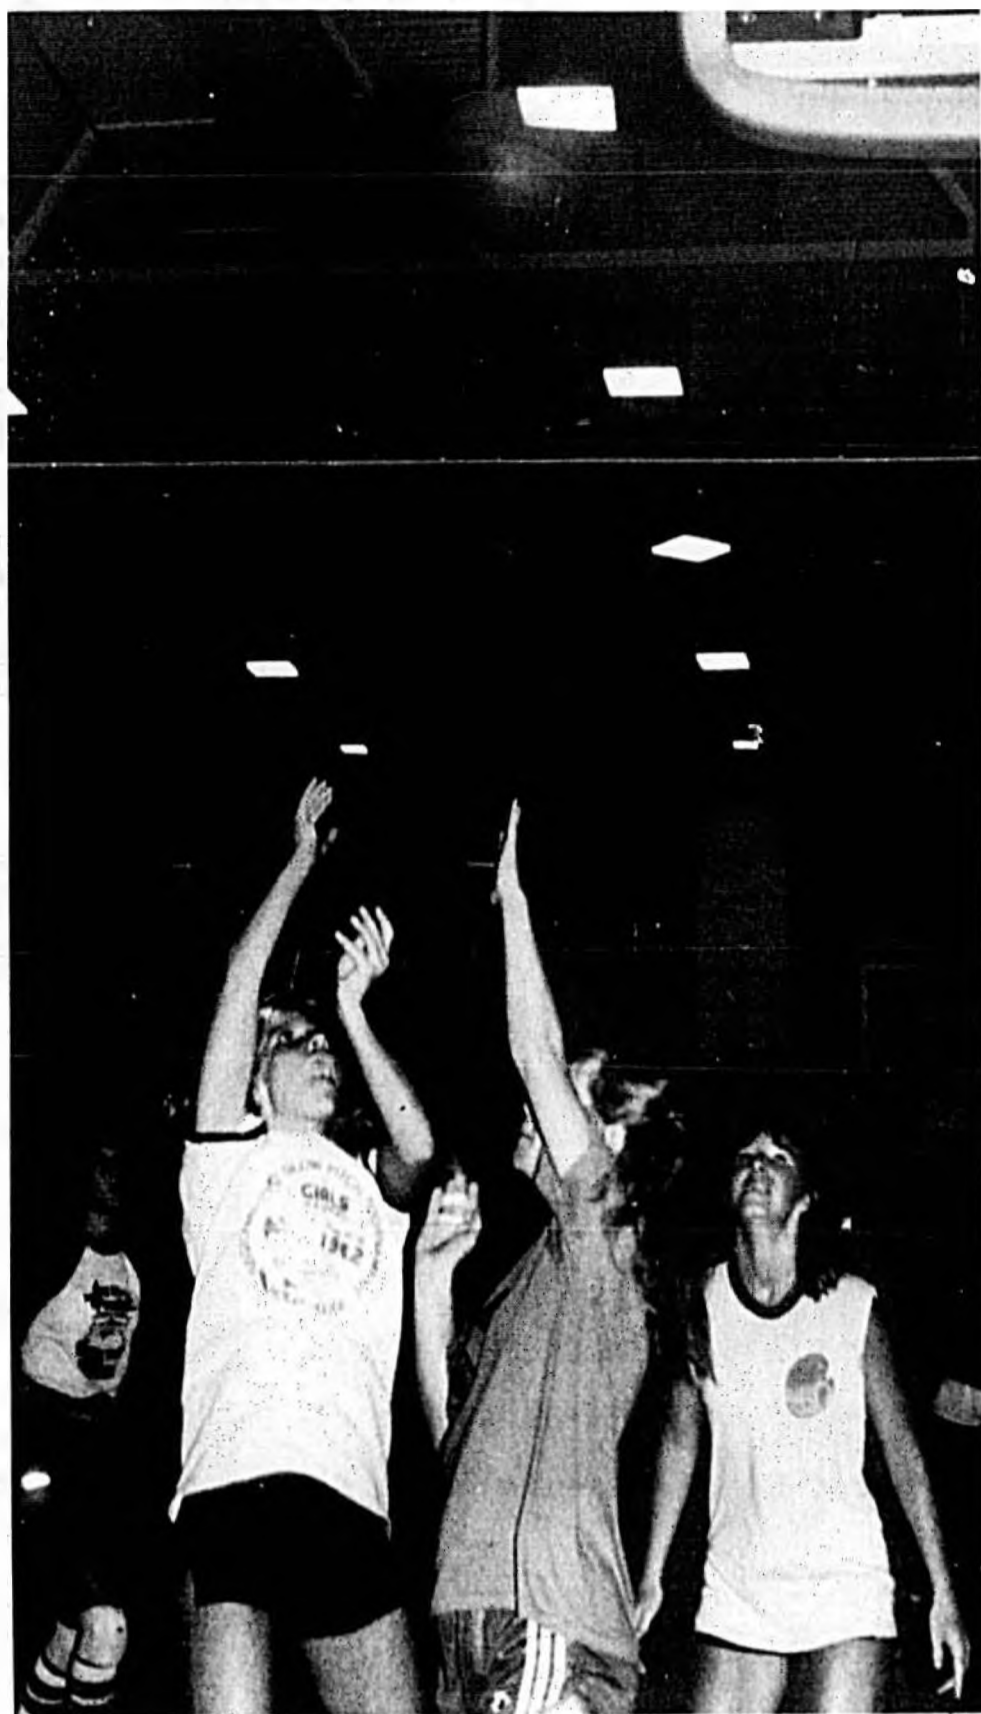

Lendl, meanwhile, is stoic, careful of his words and quick to scold.

"I am playing well," said the Czechoslovakian star after he demolished Andrew Pattison, 6-0, 6-4, Wednesday to move into the third round.

Lendl does not like to elaborate.

Connors is happy to elaborate but wants it known there is really no need to, the bottom line is "I am playing fine tennis right now. If I keep it up I will be No. 1 in the world."

But the current No. 1 sizes up his prospects and his game modestly.

Wednesday night at Tinker Field in Orlando, however, right was wrong and left was right.

Kelly sandwiched southpaws Jack Hobbs and Eddie Hodge around ineffective right hander Eric Broersma to stymie a Jacksonville comeback as the O-Twins secured a 5-3 victory over the Suns before 515 fans.

Orlando, defending Southern League East Division champion, trails league-leader Columbus by just one game in the second half after it lost to Birmingham, 5-0 Wednesday.

The O-Twins started quickly, scoring three first-inning runs on RBI-singles by Andre David, Dave Meier and Ivan Mesa. The outburst offset two Jax runs it accumulated against starter and winner (4-3) Bob Veselic in the second.

David's ringing double to left center picked up another run in the second and Mark Funderburk's smash over the center fielder's head in the third ignited another score when catcher Rick Austin chased him home with a base hit for a 5-2 lead.

Jacksonville nicked Veselic for a run in the fourth on Russ Stephens' singles. The Suns chased Veselic in the sixth with a pair of one-out singles.

Kelly summoned Hobbs, the Twins flamboyant portside, to extinguish the rally. Jim Scranton grounded his first pitch near the line where third baseman Mike Sodders gloved it near the bag, stepped on third for the force out, but then gunned it way over the first baseman's head.

At first, the umpires waved one runner all the way from first to score and placed Scranton on third. After a few choice words from Kelly, though, each was moved back a base.

Hobbs then got leadoff hitter Bob Hegman to hit another ground ball and this time Sodders made a nice grab and throw to first base to kill the rally.

Hobbs sailed through the seventh and the eighth, then retired the first batter in the ninth before Hegman lifted a fly ball to right fielder Meier, who appeared to catch the ball and when transferring it to his hand dropped it.

This time Kelly's choice word was to no avail. He then lifted Hobbs in favor of Broersma. "I had to go with a right hander instead of Hobbs because Butch Davis (a pinch-hitter) had been hitting us pretty good," said the redhead.

Broersma promptly walked Davis and Bob Ferris stroked a single to load the bases. Kelly made another trip and called for Hodge.

The big left hander struck out Jim Atkinson and Mike Brewer to end the game and earn his second save.

"It was especially nice to do well tonight because I have been letting in a lot of runs lately," said Hodge. "We really needed this game bad."

Mesa led the O-Twins attack with three hits including a double while David singled and doubled and Astin chipped in two singles.

Orlando attempts to creep closer to Columbus when it hosts Jacksonville tonight at 7:30. It's "Ladies Nite" as all women will be admitted for a $1.

FORT PIERCE — Altamonte Springs American Legion manager Bob McCullough knows he is not taking a powerhouse into this year's State Tournament which opens here today.

With that in mind, McCullough is seeking every break possible. He feels Post 183 got one Wednesday when it drew the host team, Fort Pierce, in tonight's first round game at 8:30.

"I think it was as good a draw as we could hope for," said McCullough. "Fort Pierce didn't have to go through a tournament since they are the host team, so we don't know how good they are."

Ex-Lake Howell High right hander Billy Stripp will be on the mound for Altamonte tonight. Stripp authored a no-hitter during the regular season and was 4-1 record-wise.

"Stripp can be very tough if he has his stuff and keeps the ball down," pointed out McCullough about his curveballing right hander. "We'd like to knock off the host team and go from there."

Baseball

Getting the Legion attack going, as usual, will be leadoff man Kenny Brown, who recently signed a scholarship to play for Valencia Community College this fall.

Brown is a slick-fielding third baseman with good speed. He's a threat to steal any time he gets on. Second in the order is lefty John Reich, another fine fielder at first base and a good contact hitter. Both Brown and Reich attended Lyman.

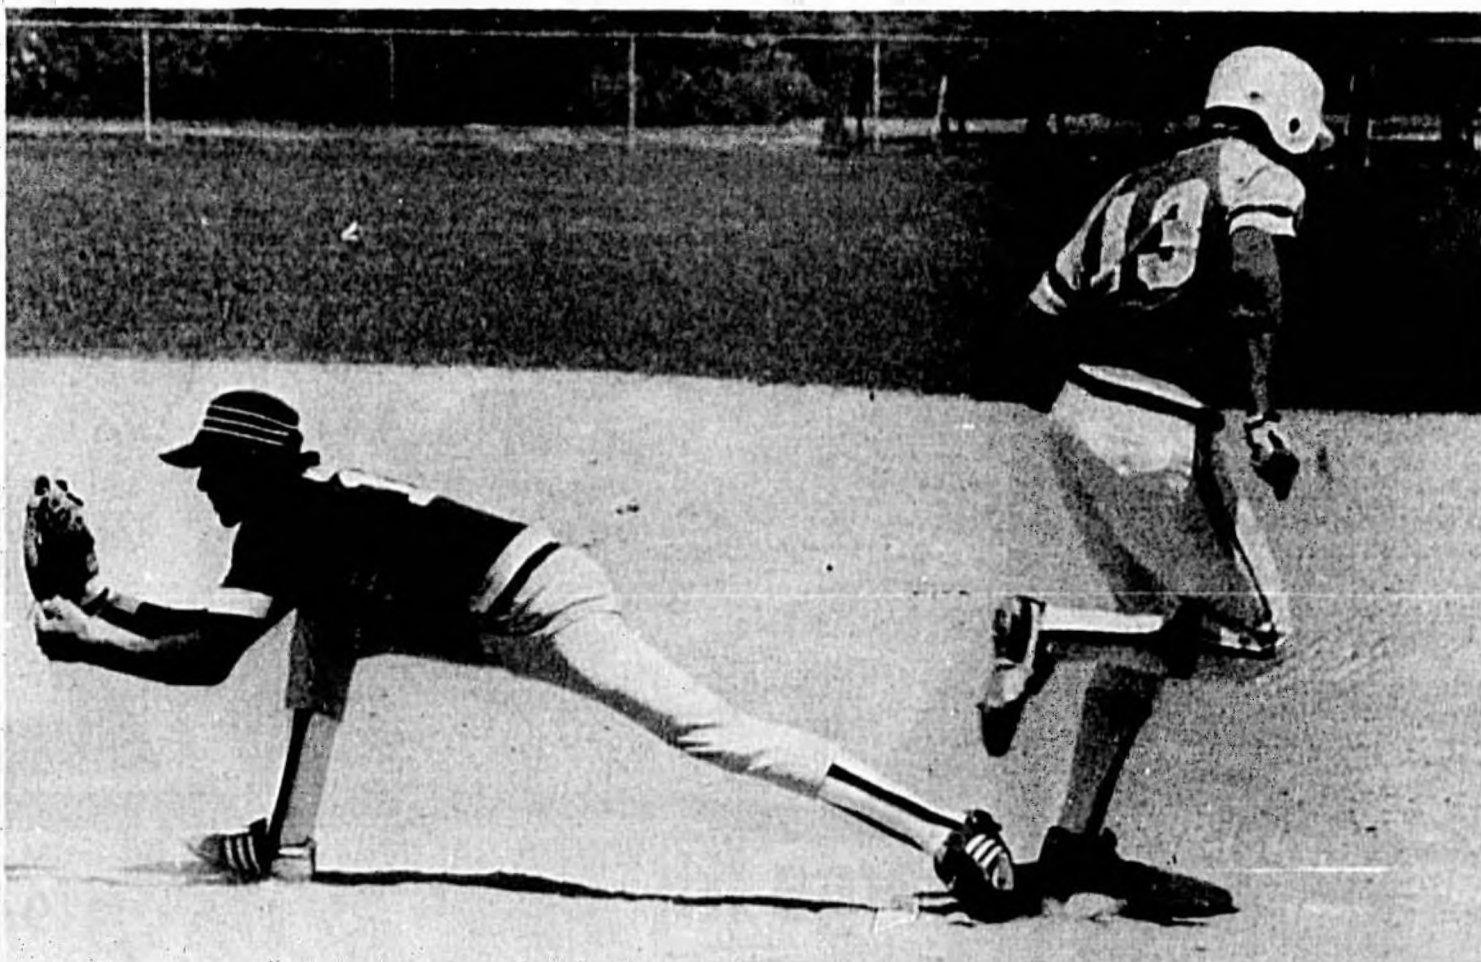

Sweet-winged David Martinez is next. Also Valencia-bound, the former Silver Hawk will patrol center field. Tom Perkins, a senior this fall at Lyman, bats cleanup and plays left field.

Another Greyhound senior, Mike "Duck" Sawyer, handles the catching chores and bats fifth. Ex-Howell outfielder Doug Chiodini will bat sixth and play right field. Chiodini will probably be McCullough's choice as a second pitcher, too.

A couple of Lyman youngsters — Steve Lorenz and Tom Gibbons — anchor the infield. Lorenz will bat seventh and play second base while Gibbons will bat eighth and play shortstop. Stripp will hit ninth since so designated hitter is allowed in state tournament play.

Altamonte will play at 5 p.m. on Friday regardless of whether it wins or loses tonight.

Griffin Wants Out

United Press International

All in all, Archie Griffin would rather be in Philadelphia ... or anywhere but Cincinnati.

Not as a backup, anyway. Griffin, the only two-time Heisman Trophy-winner, is unhappy in his role as fill-in half-back for the AFC champion Cincinnati Bengals. He wants to play full time, he says, and if he can't do it in Cincinnati, he'd like to do it somewhere else.

"I asked to be traded (several years ago) because I just wanted to give it my best shot somewhere else and see if it would work."

Picture-Perfect Hayes Can't See Need For Aid

Jackie Hayes was one of those picture ballplayers.

He had a pair of magnificent hands and a brain to match and he did everything so easily, so smoothly, he was a pure delight to watch.

Ask anyone who ever saw him play in the American League for 14 years. Or, ask anyone who ever played with him or against him.

Today, more than 40 years later, living in quiet retirement in Clanton, Ala., with his devoted wife, Alice, he is still a fine picture of a man. Much more energetic and independent than you'd normally expect for a 76-year-old with a seeing-eye dog always at his side.

Jackie Hayes' best position was second base. He played it for the Washington Senators from 1927 through 1931 and the Chicago White Sox from 1932 until 1940 before eye trouble forced him to quit. He played second base as if he had been born there.

Sad Sam Jones, who was one of his teammates with both the Senators and the White Sox and pitched in the big leagues for 22 years, once said, "If the game was gonna depend on one pitch, and the ball was gonna be hit, I'd want it to be hit to Jackie Hayes."

Unlike so many other players of his era, Hayes does not downgrade the present ones.

"I don't think they live the lives we did, but there are some mighty good players around today," he says. "You got some good ones and some poor ones, same as we had."

Nor does he resent the modern players' salaries.

"That's just their good luck," he laughs.

Jackie Hayes is still able to do that even though he gets no pension at all from baseball. That's because he retired after 1940 and the players' pension plan didn't go into effect until 1947.

At the moment, Hayes draws $196 a month from Social Security. His wife, who taught school and also worked selling insurance until she had to retire, gets $416 from Social Security. That gives them a total annual income of $7,704 and neither has any other source of revenue.

Like her husband, Alice Hayes is not bitter but she certainly is outspoken about the situation he and other ex-players like him find themselves in.

"I think it's a disgrace that all those old-timers like Jackie... do not get any kind of pension," she declares.

But, the Hayes' are not looking for charity.

"I've worked hard in my lifetime, and so has Jackie, but I'd scrub floors if I had to before accepting charity," says Mrs. Hayes, who'll be 70 in October. "We received a $300 check some time ago from the Association of Professional Ball Players of America. But we returned it. Not only that, I sent back another check to them for Jackie's dues. He's a lifetime member. Chuck Stevens heads that organization. He wrote thanking us for the check and telling us to let him know immediately if there was anything we needed. All we would want is for the pension plan to be made retroactive and he has nothing to do with that. Even a small pension would help."

Milton Richman
UPI Sports Editor

Hayes still recalls how his eyesight suddenly began to fail him.

"We were playing an exhibition game in Hollywood, California, in 1940 and I got three hits in the game," he says. "After the game, I was showering and got some soap in my right eye. It burned a little bit but I didn't think a whole lot about it. We went to Tucson the next day and it got worse.

"I told Jimmie Dykes, our manager, 'I can't play today. I can't see the numbers on the players' backs.' That night, we went to Phoenix. I couldn't see out of my right eye and I went to the hospital. The doctor said there was too much glare from the sun in a place like Arizona for the shape my eye was in and suggested it would be better if I went back to Chicago.

"But I remembered being hit in the eye with a ball playing pepper back in Pasadena the day before. Anyway, I went back to Chicago and my wife joined me. Then I went to doctors all over the country trying to get help... It wasn't too long afterward the sight in both eyes went. I got my first seeing-eye dog in 1943."

With the help of others Hayes still played golf for six or seven years after he became blind.

He no longer does but he still follows baseball.

"He's an inspiration to everybody who knows him," says Alice Hayes, who couldn't be more proud of her picture ballplayer

Williams Gets Blase Action From Falcons

SUWANEE, Ga. (UPI) — The Atlanta Falcons appeared blase about the return of William Andrews, but it's a pretty good bet that was an act.

Andrews won't play much, if any, Saturday night when the Falcons open their pre-season schedule as host to Minnesota. But he called off his contract holdout early enough to be fully ready before the regular season begins and that could very well make the difference in whether the Falcons will be playoff contenders or also-rans this fall.

"I wouldn't have liked going into the season without William Andrews," said Falcons Coach Leeman Bennett. "He's been our bread and butter man."

Andrews, a 200-pound fullback drafted in the third round of the 1979 draft for his blocking ability, last season was only the fifth player in NFL history to gain more than 2,000 yards in rushing and pass receiving combined — running for 1,301 yards, seven less than the team record he set the year before, and catching a team-high 81 passes for 736 more.

But, after also becoming only the fifth NFL back to rush for more than 1,000 yards in each of his first three seasons, Andrews, at the suggestion of his agent George Kickliter, decided to hold out for more money even though he still has two years to go on his present $250,000-a-year contract.

He held out for a week before deciding he wasn't making any headway in his effort to renegotiate his contract, then showed up this past Monday.

"I just wanted to go to work," said Andrews. "I missed the guys. I missed the sweat part of it, the soreness, the bumps and bruises. It may sound strange, but it's true."

The Atlanta Falcons never dreamed that Andrews would instantly become one of the premier runners in the NFL. He had been an outstanding runner for Thomasville (Ga.) High but spent most of his collegiate career (at Auburn) blocking for Joe Cribbs and James Brooks.

When he chucked up a teamrecord 1,023 yards as a rookie, Bennett quipped, "I feel like the guy who buys a Cadillac and discovers that he gets 25 miles a gallon."

Andrews scored only four touchdowns while rushing for 1,308 yards in 1980 (the year the Falcons were 12-4) but rushed for 10 touchdowns last season. After just three seasons, the 26-year-old Andrews already holds the Falcons career rushing record with 3,632 yards and is fourth in pass catches with 170.

"I don't think there is any question he's the best all-around running back in the NFL," said Bennett. "When you consider what he has done as a runner, a blocker and a receiver — he stands alone."

Although Falcons Executive Vice President Eddie LeBaron says Andrews returned with no promises, there are plans on both sides to renegotiate his 1983 contract and Kickliter says, "If William stays healthy, his salary will be among the top six backs in the league."

Although Andrews worked out on his own during his eight-day holdout and appeared in top shape when he finally reported to camp, Bennett said he doubted he would play against the Vikings Saturday. "It's not a questioning of conditioning," said the coach. "It's timing that it will take him awhile to get."

Andrews said he never worried about how his teammates might react to his holdout.

"I don't think I'm an outlaw because I was doing something I believed in," he said. "These guys are the ones I play with year in and year out and they know I have a certain loyalty to them. I think a lot of the comments (made during his holdout) were misleading and unnecessary. But I accept that."

"William missed being in camp and felt an obligation to his teammates," said Kickliter. "The week bothered him because he has always been a team player."

Bennett feels Andrews may have been overworked last season when he rushed 289 times and caught those 81 passes.

"That's one of the reasons we drafted Gerald Riggs (first round draft choice out of Arizona State). Having Riggs will give us a chance to rest William and also Lynn Cain (the Falcons' other starting running back). We hope Riggs can play both positions so we can rotate the three and keep them all fresh."

Don Baylor, California designated hitter, watches his grand slam home run clear the fence Wednesday night as the Angles came back to beat Minnesota, 6-3.

No Longer Easy Mark, Blue Jays Sweep Bosox

United Press International
Once considered an easy mark in the A.L. East, the Toronto Blue Jays are now getting high grades from their opponents — including the Boston Red Sox.
Jim Clancy, Dale Murray and Roy Lee Jackson scattered eight hits and Damaso Garcia had two hits, stole two bases and drove in the tying run with a bases-loaded single Wednesday night to give Toronto a 4-3 victory over the Red Sox and a sweep of their three-game series.
"We've been swept before but never by the Blue Jays," said Boston Manager Ralph Houk. "It's their pitching that was so good."
It was the last-place Blue Jays' sixth straight triumph, putting them just three games under .500 and a half-game behind Cleveland in the battle for the basement.
"Anytime you win six in a row and three at home from a club you've never swept a series from in your entire history, it sure makes me emotional," said Jackson, who picked up the victory by retiring the final seven batters. "The guys want to play because we know we have the personnel to win."
In other A.L. games, Texas clipped Milwaukee, 6-3, Detroit edged New York, 3-2, in 12 innings, Chicago defeated Baltimore, 4-1, Kansas City crushed Cleveland, 8-0, California clubbed Minnesota, 6-3, and Seattle beat Oakland, 7-4.
In the National League, it was San Francisco 7, Atlanta 6 in 12 innings; Montreal 3,

American League

Chicago 0; Philadelphia 4; Pittsburgh 1; Houston 3; San Diego 0 and Cincinnati 2. Los Angeles 1; St. Louis at New York was postponed by rain.
Rangers 6, Brewers 3
At Milwaukee, Buddy Bell's run-scoring single ignited a four-run seventh to pace Texas. Tigers 3, Yankees 2.
At Detroit, Jerry Turner's sacrifice fly with the bases loaded in the bottom of the 12th lifted Detroit.
White Sox 4, Orioles 1
At Chicago, Richard Dotson and Dennis Lamp combined on a five-hitter and Steve Kemp had two RBI to lead Chicago to a sweep of their three-game set with Baltimore.
Angels 6, Twins 3
At Minneapolis, Don Baylor's grand slam capped a five-run seventh to lead the Angels. Minnesota pitcher Terry Filton broke a 68-year-old, major-league record with his 11th straight career loss.
Royals 8, Indians 0
At Kansas City, Mo., Amos Otis collected three singles, drove in two runs and scored twice to spark Kansas City.
Mariners 7, A's 1
At Seattle, Floyd Bannister and Bill Caudill combined on a five-hitter and Dave Henderson drove in two runs to pace Seattle.

Smith's Homer Furthers Atlanta Demise

United Press International
When Reggie Smith deplored his lack of playing time earlier in the season Giants' Manager Frank Robinson put him in the lineup.
Now, with Smith playing regularly, the Giants, not coincidentally, are embroiled in a pennant race.
"I think we are ready to play with anyone and I'm as excited as any of our younger players," Smith said Wednesday night, after belting a two-run homer in the bottom of the 12th inning to give San Francisco its 10th straight victory, an 8-6 triumph over the fading Atlanta Braves.
"I've never been on a ballclub that has been so far back and made such a splurge as this club has," Smith said.
For the Braves, in the midst of a slump, it was the ninth straight loss and Manager Joe Torre can't seem to find a solution.
"It's a classic slump and I wish ... it would end," said Torre. "In this game we got enough hits and enough runs, but our bullpen let us down. Of course, I'm very concerned."

National League

There will be a lot of irony as the two teams tangle. As recently as a year ago, Smith was a Dodger and a true-blue Giant killer. His bat had played a big part in making the series between the two teams so one-sided. Now, he is banging the ball for the Giants and no one on the San Francisco club is as anxious for tonight's confrontation as Smith.
"What I did in years past is history," said Smith of his Dodger career, which ended on a sour note when Los Angeles released him. The Giants signed Smith last spring and he above all others has been the man to lead them to where they are today.
"I'm a Giant now," continued Smith, "so my job is to help beat the Dodgers. I think we are ready to play with anyone and I'm as excited as any of our younger players. That's because I've never been on a ballclub that has been so far back and made such a splurge as this club has.

The important thing for us right now is to play well and let it go at that. I think we are as good as the Dodgers, and that's saying a lot because the Dodgers are still a very good team. They've been there and they know what winning is all about. I'm just going to relax and have a good time."
Fred Breining, a San Francisco native who only a few short years ago was buying his way into Candlestick to watch the Giants and Dodgers, pitched one-hit ball over the last four innings Wednesday and when Smith hit the game-winning homer he was rewarded with his seventh victory in 11 decisions.
"If we're ever going to play the Dodgers, let's play them now," said Breining, "while we're hot. If I was a fan I'd pay to see this series. Hell, I did it before."

Expos 3, Cubs 0
At Montreal, Gary Carter belted his 22nd home run and Charlie Lea yielded three hits in 7 2/3 innings to help the Expos snap Chicago's six-game winning streak.
Phillies 4, Pirates 1
At Philadelphia, Bo Diaz drove in the tie-breaking run with an eighth-inning groundout and Garry Maddox followed with a two-run single to lift the Phillies.
Astros 3, Padres 0
At San Diego, Nolan Ryan pitched a one-hitter and drove in a run with a second-inning single to spark Houston.
Reds 2, Dodgers 1
At Los Angeles, Cesar Cedeno stroked a two-run double in the first inning to back the strong pitching of Bob Shirley and bring an end to the Dodgers' eight-game winning streak.

'Suppose The War Goes Badly...'

Doomsday Plan Gets Washington OK

By TOM TIEDE

WASHINGTON (NEA) — When author Philip Wylie published a book called "Triumph" in 1962, the critics called it interesting fantasy. And it did seem a bit farfetched. The book was a novel, the plot of which concerned a thermonuclear war between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Naturally there was a twist. Two twists, in fact. Wylie's war was a complete and devastating holocaust, and both nations were mercilessly pounded into rubble and waste. But the first twist was that the Russians had a strategic reserve, a "doomsday" plan; they launched an arsenal of hidden weapons to destroy the remaining life in America.

And the second twist? The United States also had hidden weapons. The "Triumph" came when life in Russia was ended, too. The book didn't sell particularly well. But perhaps it should be reissued. For the farfetched doomsday idea of 20 years ago may now be becoming something of a reality. The U.S. government presently is considering the secret storage of hydrogen bombs to use as a last resort in the event of war.

Nothing has been decided yet. But defense authorities say that a "fairly substantial" effort is under way to put warheads deep underground, or possibly deep in space, so that even in defeat or utter destruction the country would have the ability to deliver a final "doomsday" blow to the Kremlin.

The authorities say that the hidden missiles would constitute a certification of American security — that is, they would keep the peace. The advocates claim that no nation would conceivably attack the United States if it knew with assurance that its people would be wiped off the earth in the final outcome.

That logic has always been the lure for the doomsday concept. And it apparently has tempted every American administration in the nuclear era. Dwight Eisenhower is said to have been the first president to have actively considered the idea; but Ronald Reagan may be the first to lend it financial support.

Reagan's White House has set aside about $150 million for a first phase of design and testing. The money is buried in the large and complex appropriations for Pentagon research and development. Defense authorities say the administration hopes to have the doomsday plan in place by the early 1990s. "The president," they add, "is enthusiastic."

The president seems to have gotten his enthusiasm for doomsday from Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger. And Weinberger apparently came by it through physicist Charles Townes. Townes chaired a 1980 panel that concluded that the United States must have the means to hit the Russians after an initial exchange.

Townes doesn't think that's the case now. He claims the United States could be a quick loser in any East-West showdown. He says the Russians could use their greater nuclear firepower (the Soviets have fewer warheads but more megatons than the United States) to destroy American capabilities in a matter of hours.

Other defense observers scorn such pessimism. They say the United States has nearly 25,000 nuclear warheads, and its allies have 10,000 more, thus even if the Russians were to execute an annihilating sneak attack, the Western nations would have enough bombs left to reply in kind and then some.

Yet the administration wants to absolutely guarantee the United States can reply in kind. And some of its members insist that burying bombs in a secret cache is the best way to do it. One middle-level security adviser says anything less would be too risky: "We don't want to guess here; we must be sure."

So the doomsday planning is reportedly going on at government laboratories and public universities throughout the nation. And the research seems to be centered on the idea of hiding a reserve arsenal from the effects of an all-out confrontation, and, so to say, launching it from the rubble.

One plan is called "Deep Underground," and it is based on the tested principle of protecting the reserve with layers of earth. An official of the Defense Nuclear Agency says that if the missiles are placed in stations 2,000 to 4,000 feet underground, "the Russians could not possibly get to them."

The doomsday scenario, then, might be as follows: The stations would be manned by technicians and mechanics, and they would keep the missiles ready for a final offensive. They would be completely self-contained. They would have plenty of food and water. They would be able to function regardless of what was taking place up on earth.

"Then let's suppose the war started to go badly," the DNA officer continues. "Let's say the Russians were winning and ordered the United States to surrender. That's where the underground reserve would come in. The crews would send the intercontinental missiles to the surface, and fire them in a last effort."

Defense planners believe the missiles could be sent to the surface in various ways. One might be through pneumatic tubes, prefashioned in the rock. The tubes would be battered at the surface ends, of course, but they might be rebored by blasting devices that would be affixed to the missile cones.

Or the rockets might be floated to the surface through tunnels. The weapons would be encased in containers, and the tunnels injected with moving sand. As the sand filled the tunnels, the capsules would rise on top of it, and, again, the last few feet of debris could be cleared with explosives.

And if the tubes were too twisted, or the tunnels were destroyed, the missile routes might be carved to the surface with gigantic drilling machines. The machines would make the holes, the missiles would follow, and, above ground, the warheads could be electronically set up, targeted and fired.

It sounds curious. Absurd even. But doomsday specialists think it can work. They say the electronics technology is mostly available, and the deep tunnel capability has existed for years. A deep tunnel was built in a Virginia mountain in the 1950s to house the White House staff in time of war.

And the specialists add that the concept can be marketed. They say the hidden reserve would provide Americans with unprecedented security, and it would cost far less than the never-ending search for exotic new surface weapons. Properly presented, the advocates say the people should approve.

But the advocates admit there are drawbacks as well as benefits to the doomsday potential. And the principal one is that deep tunneling may not necessarily secure the invulnerability of strategic weapons. There are any number of Pentagon experts who insist that the notion just would not work.

For one thing, the critics say the buried missile stations would be at the mercy of communications links. The Russians might knock out the links with blockbusting detonations. That could destroy the subterranean connection with the outside world, and the crews might not then be able to function.

Actually, the underground crews might not be able to function in any event. For the psychology of their existence may get to them before the Russian blockbusters. Defense Nuclear Agency official Gene Sevin says that it's possible that men living below the earth in time of surface holocaust may lose their minds.

The men would be chosen for psychological stability. And those with families could be permitted to bring them along. But the nations of the earth now have the capacity to blow 50,000 nuclear warheads, that's the equivalent of 20 billion tons of TNT, and no one can count on the resulting human reaction.

For this reason the United States is also considering the creation of a doomsday plan that can be automated. In other words, the deeply buried missiles might be maintained by robots and computers. That would rid the strategy of human weakness; besides, some designers think the robots could do a better job.

They would require no sustenance other than mechanical repairs, which they could do themselves. They would need no comforts or elaborate facilities. They could be programmed to carry out a variety of missions, and choose the best one with a logic and precision that no human being could equal.

They wouldn't even have to be in communications with command. In fact, it would be best if they weren't. If the robots were subject to surface control, they could be manipulated by the emotions or whims of the times. They might likewise be commandeered or reprogrammed by enemy interceptors.

The robots would communicate with each other, however. And they could do it in space as well as beneath the ground. Some defense strategists believe the U.S. missile reserve should be piloted to the stars, remotely, where it couldn't be found, and then preordered to return if a doomsday shot is necessary.

Beep-beep. Or maybe it's beep-boop. For not everyone is convinced that Armageddon should be left to the robots. In 1980, Defense Department computer failures were responsible for two erroneous nuclear alerts.

Yet research in the area goes on apace. And whether robots or soldiers would be in charge, the Reagan administration seems committed to a doomsday strategy of some sort. It says the United States must have the ability to renew the next war as much as one year after the nuclear demolition begins.

One year later? Defense people believe that in all the debris and confusion it may take that long to figure out which nation has won. And if it's not the United States the reserve arsenal will be tapped, the hidden missiles will be retrieved and fired off, and doomsday will likely follow.

Doomsday for both sides, of course. Philip Wylie predicted it in his book of 20 years ago. If the U.S. government is planning to kill every man, woman and child in the Soviet Union, if it becomes necessary, there is no reason to doubt the Soviet Union in planning the same thing in return.

Bomb-Grade Plutonium Lost

AIKEN, S.C. (UPI) — The Savannah River Plant's loss of enough plutonium to make an atomic bomb is no cause for concern, government officials say.

About 35 pounds of the bombgrade material was reported missing from the facility during the first six months of last year. But officials at the Department of Energy, operator of the factory that makes components for the nation's nuclear weapons, have ruled out the possibility of theft, blaming the loss on accounting errors.

"The absence of any theft attempt, support a finding that during this period no theft or diversion of strategic special nuclear material has occurred," Ralph E. Caudle, director of the DOE's Office of Safeguards and Security, said.

The plant, operated by the Du Pont Corp., also lost 6.8 pounds of enriched uranium during the same period, reports indicate.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE

For Bertha Williams of Maitland this year's birthday proved the most memorable of her 87 years, for she was "queen for a day" of the Magic Kingdom riding in the Walt Disney World Tenthennial Parade Monday as grand marshal, a surprise treat arranged by her granddaughter Cathy and her husband Dave Welch. Two of her five great-grandchildren, Michelle Casselberry, 8, of Neptune Beach, left, and Shannon Casselberry, 10, of Casselberry, accompanied their "Mamma" in the parade. She was greeted by Snow White and other Disney characters.

Car Seats For Kids Save Lives

DEAR ABBY: "Learned Too Late" lost Tina, her precious 6-month-old daughter in a car accident because the child was not secured in a car seat. She wrote, "If writing this saves only one child, Tina's death will not have been in vain." I want Tina's mother to know what she has done for

Dear Abby

We have a 7-month-old son, Steven, who has always had the safest surroundings we could provide — except in the car. There I lovingly placed him in a carrier beside me. Tina's mother made me see that all the love in the world could not keep our precious child safe in a car without a car seat and seat belt.

The awful truth is that I have a car seat but have never used it. I found all sorts of excuses — too much trouble, Steven fussed and fought it, takes too long, etc. What a selfish, careless mother I've been. But no more! A trip may take a few extra minutes, but Steven's life is worth it.

Thanks to Tina's mom for being brave and selfless enough to tell her story. This mom.

LEARNED IN TIME IN CLOVIS, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: Bravo for your letter concerning safety car seats for children.

It takes about 20 seconds to put my 11-month-old daughter into her seat, stick her arms through the straps and buckle up. Some people say, "Kids refuse to ride in those things." Hogwash! Who's in charge anyway? If children were placed in car seats from the time they were infants, as mine were, they would be trained to climb into the seats themselves to be buckled in. Our neighbor was in a car accident with her two young children. The little ones were thrown around so violently that even their father was not allowed to see their bodies before the funeral!

Safety tests were made using 18-pound dummies instead of live infants. The adults were instructed to hold onto the dummies as they would a live baby while riding in a car at 30 miles per hour. The car stopped suddenly as though in a collision, and even though they knew it was coming, not one of the adults could hold on to the dummy. All lost their grip, and the dummies flew forward!

CONCERNED MOM IN INDIANA

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for printing the letter from "Learned Too Late." We also learned too late. We didn't use our child, but our child lost an eye while standing up in a car that came to a sudden stop. He was thrown against an open metal ashtray on the dashboard and cut his little eye so badly it couldn't be saved. Had that child been buckled into a seat belt as he should have been, it never could have happened. We will always feel a terrible sense of guilt because it was our fault. Not his.

ALSO LEARNED TOO LATE. DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from "Learned Too Late," I started shaking in my shoes. I had just dropped off my daughter (I'll call her Amy) at the babysitter's. Amy was not in a car seat, nor was she belted in by a seat belt. Why? Because she cried and screamed, "I want to stand up, Daddy!" After reading your column, I made a decision: I would rather listen to Amy scream than never hear her voice again.

First I am going home to pick up our unused car seat, then I will go get Amy at the sitter's. And from now on, she will never again ride without being protected!

Thank you, Abby, for printing that letter. And thank Tina's mother for having the courage to write so that other parents could learn from her tragic loss.

SMARTER NOW IN ILLINOIS

DEAR SMARTER: What a pity Tina's mother will never know how many children her letter will save. My mail showed a tremendous outpouring of love, sympathy and appreciation.

Had that child been buckled into a seat belt as he should have been, it never could have happened. We will always feel a terrible sense of guilt because it was our fault. Not his.

ALSO LEARNED TOO LATE. DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from "Learned Too Late," I started shaking in my shoes. I had just dropped off my daughter (I'll call her Amy) at the babysitter's. Amy was not in a car seat, nor was she belted in by a seat belt. Why? Because she cried and screamed, "I want to stand up, Daddy!" After reading your column, I made a decision: I would rather listen to Amy scream than never hear her voice again.

First I am going home to pick up our unused car seat, then I will go get Amy at the sitter's. And from now on, she will never again ride without being protected!

Thank you, Abby, for printing that letter. And thank Tina's mother for having the courage to write so that other parents could learn from her tragic loss.

SMARTER NOW IN ILLINOIS

DEAR SMARTER: What a pity Tina's mother will never know how many children her letter will save. My mail showed a tremendous outpouring of love, sympathy and appreciation.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

HOROSCOPE

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

For Friday, August 13, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY
August 13, 1982
Organizations and clubs will have a special appeal for you this coming year, but you must be careful to budget your time and money so that you don't spend hours and resources you could utilize better.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
You're basically very generous. It's hard for you to understand why others, such as those you might be associating with today, aren't equally so. Predictions of what's in store for you in the seasons following your birth date and where to look for your luck and opportunities are in your Astro-Graph Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
Even though you may feel a bit superior to your peers today, it's best to keep it to yourself. Associates need pats on the back, not put-downs.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
Unfortunately, you may find more reasons why you should postpone projects today than you'll think of ways to accomplish them. Put your mind in gear.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
Unless you have truly constructive suggestions today to offer a friend who is trying to sort out a problem you'd be wise to say nothing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
Don't be taken in today by someone who has all the exterior trappings and knows how to talk impressively. The substance of what is being espoused may be nil.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Normally, when you set your mind to a task your powers of concentration are rather keen. However, today your thoughts may wander and cause you to make mistakes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
Should unflattering remarks come back to you today which were supposedly said by another, don't take them to heart. Others will consider the source.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
Get together with your mate today before laying down rules you want the children to follow. If you don't, you may contradict each other.

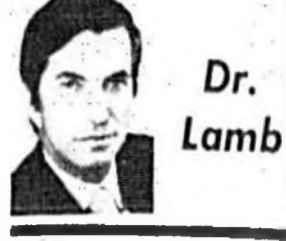

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Be careful what you say or write today, especially where your work or career is concerned. Ill-chosen words will be hard to erase.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
It's unlikely you'll make large errors in handling your resources today, but you might make a number of small ones which could add up to a perturbing total.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
Family members are apt to take your promises far more seriously than you do today. Don't say you will, if you don't intend to follow through.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
Screen what's told to you very carefully today so that you don't pass on hearsay information which could hurt another's reputation.

Managing Chronic Allergic Asthma

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 25 years old with allergic asthma. A year ago my doctor advised me to quit smoking so I did. Everything went fine until I had my baby. Since then I've had nothing but problems. I get allergy shots once a week but they don't seem to help. I have a Pulmo-Aide machine that I use with Alupent. That helps me for a while. But when I start cleaning or exercise I run completely out of breath and have to use my inhaler. I even had to go to the hospital and was treated with I.V.s for four days.

I keep having to go on tapering doses of Prednisone. Nothing is helping. I couldn't even play ball this year because I would run out of breath. I hear that swimming is good for asthmatics. Is this true? I'm 20 pounds overweight and it is hard to lose weight if you can't exercise. Do you have any suggestions? I am getting desperate.

DEAR READER — You have a chronic disease and you will have to learn to adjust your life to it. Sometimes a trial-and-error approach is necessary to find the best management for people with allergic asthma.

I would suggest a complete allergy work up. That includes being sure you don't have a food allergy. The allergen that causes the asthma or other allergic conditions does not have to be inhaled. It can be ingested. Some asthmatics can't tolerate aspirin because it causes attacks. Benzoic acid derivatives, including tartrazine often used in food coloring, affects some. If you can identify all the things that you are allergic to and avoid exposure to them in your food or through contact or inhalation your asthma may be much easier to manage.

And before you do any exertion you might benefit from a preventive medicine, cromolyn sodium (Intal). It will not relieve acute attacks but may prevent them. Swimming is good exercise. Cold makes asthma worse so swim in water that is at least 85 F. Swim a few minutes and rest, then swim again. Short periods of exertion work best for the asthmatic.

Exercise in asthmatics is discussed in more detail in The Health Letter number 8-6, Asthma, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — A month ago I was stung on the palm of my hand by a bee. I put Campho-phenique on it but it hurt for about six hours.

A week later the area started to itch badly with a bit of inflammation around the sting. I wonder if I did the right thing or is there a better way to treat a sting?

DEAR READER — If you got some relief of pain initially that is about as much as you can hope for. I would have preferred that you apply ice to the area intermittently for the next two hours.

Bee and wasp stings can be quite serious, particularly in people who are sensitive to stings. In those instances a sting can be fatal. To prevent generalized serious reactions both adrenaline and antihistamines are used. Of course, in these sensitive cases it is important to see a doctor at once.

Sensitive people can be desensitized. This is best done with extracts of the venom as opposed to extracts of the whole body of bees and wasps.

Sensitive people should have an emergency kit available in case of a sting.

WIN AT BRIDGE

ry just shows his hand and concedes down one.

The man who knows a little about squeezes will also concede. He will see that East, in back of dummy, will be long in hearts and clubs and that a simple two-suit squeeze won't work.

The man who knows all about squeezes will expect to make his contract by means of a crisscross trump squeeze.

He simply runs off all but one of his trumps while discarding dummy's two small clubs. East will have to make three discards. Two will be easy. They will be the four and two of clubs. The third will be impossible. If he chucks another club, South will cash dummy's ace-kings of both suits. Then he will ruff back to his hand with his last trump and make the last trick with his last club. If East chucks a heart the ace-king of hearts and a heart ruff establish dummy's fourth heart.

Why didn't squeeze expert South claim right away? Because if West held three clubs the criss-cross squeeze could not be developed.

Candy-Striped Awnings In Furor

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — The candy-striped awnings on the restored 1902 Capitol have created a furor of sorts and led to complaints the building looks like a barber shop or ice cream store.

The red-and-white striped awnings have to be on the restored building, however, acting curator Lee Warner says, because they were used on the Capitol in the early 1900s.

And Warner says that once people get over the shock, most will become fond of the awnings.

Restoration of the old Capitol as it existed following the 1902 expansion designed by North Carolina architect Frank Milburn is almost complete. The building will be dedicated Sept. 19 and used as a museum of state government and for office space for state historians and archivists.

The awnings went up only recently after the outside walls had been restored and painted. Tallahassee residents and out-of-town visitors to the Capitol complex were shocked.

Dozens of letters were written to editors of the Tallahassee Democrat complaining of the gaudy awnings. Warner and other state officials received a flood of telephone calls.

"Oh my gosh! A restored Miami Beach resort hotel!" Democrat reader Bruce Cramer wrote. Gov. Bob Graham "should remove the art deco stuff and make our Capitol something we can be proud of."

If not, Cramer continued, "the next time Ringling brothers, Barnum and Bailey comes to town, they won't need a tent. Just (let them) hold the show on the front lawn of the old building."

Another reader complained the building looks like "a Baskin-Robbins ice cream store."

A St. Petersburg visitor complained to the St. Petersburg Times the building looks "like a barber college."

Come to think of it, Cary Cooper wrote, that makes sense because "a lot of scalping, trimming, clipping, shaving and plain old blood-letting" went on in the building through the years.

The old Capitol was originally constructed in 1845 and then expanded in 1902 to become what was, at the time, a modern 20th century office building. High windows were placed in both the 1845 and 1902 Capitols because of the need for air circulation.

Heat generated by the sun beating down on the windows became unbearable, curator Warner says, so awnings were added in the early 1890s. The awnings were replaced as part of the 1902 expansion, although the new ones may not have actually gone up until 1903 or 1904.

New Column By William Rusher To Appear Regularly In Herald

There is a new columnist on the opinion pages of the Evening Herald: William A. Rusher, who will analyze national and international issues twice each week in the Conservative Advocate.

For more than two decades Rusher has been a leading voice of the American Right. In fact, he has been described as "the conservative movement's Bureau of Weights and Measures" by no lesser authority than William F. Buckley Jr.

The Conservative Advocate is being distributed to some 700 U.S. newspapers by Newspaper Enterprise Association.

Since 1957, Rusher has been the publisher of the National Review, a leading journal of conservative opinion.

He is also a familiar television and radio personality. For four years he was the conservative spokesman on "The Advocates," the Emmy-winning program on the Public Broadcasting System.

More recently he has been a regular commentator on ABC-TV's "Good Morning, America" and on the "Group W" radio stations.

A prolific author, Rusher has four books and many magazine articles to his credit. His 1975 book, "The Making of the New Majority Party," sold more than a quarter-million copies in hardcover and paperback. His latest book, "How to Win Arguments," was published by Doubleday in 1981.

Rusher is a graduate of Princeton University and Harvard Law School. He served in the Air Force in India during World War II and was an associate for seven years in the litigation department of Sherman and Sterling, one of Wall Street's largest law firms.

He entered the public arena in 1956 as associate counsel to the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee. He spent 17 months on Capitol Hill before joining the National Review.

Rusher was one of three men who in 1961 launched the draft of Sen. Barry Goldwater for the 1964 GOP presidential nomination. That effort is credited with transforming the Republican Party and making possible the election of Ronald Reagan in 1980.

Rusher also served as vice chairman of the American Conservative Union and was a member of the National News Council from its inception in 1973 until December 1980.

Rusher has traveled widely as a speaker and author throughout the United States and on six continents.

Praise for Rusher and the Conservative Advocate has come from across the ideological spectrum, from politicians, writers and other leading public figures.

"Bill Rusher is a columnist not to be missed," says television host David Susskind. "I make it a point to read the Conservative Advocate because he is part of my continuing education in things political, economic and sociological."

"Reading Bill Rusher's column is the only alternative I know of to taking megagrams of daily vitamins," adds Buckley. "The latter is a bore; the former is educational, stimulating and even exhilarating."

"Bill Rusher is one of the most honest, intelligent, fluent and persuasive conservatives in America today," says Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah. "His column is must reading for everyone who loves, cherishes and wants to strengthen and preserve our country."

"The Conservative Advocate is aptly named," notes Rep. Philip Crane R-Ill. "Bill Rusher blends advocacy, analysis, wit and wisdom with a brilliance that is captivating."

And, says actor Charlton Heston "Bill Rusher is an eloquent and incisive observer of the public scene. God knows we need someone who talks sense about it."

Getting Away From It All On The Appalachian Trail

United Press International
The 2,134-mile Appalachian Trail — a 14-state wilderness walkway along the crest of the Appalachian Mountain chain — is a refuge where man can escape sprawling urban development that has claimed much of America's wilds.

"Remote for detachment, narrow for chosen company, winding for leisure, lonely for contemplation, the Trail leads not merely north and south, but upward to the body, mind and soul of man."

So author-hiker Harold Allen describes the corridor that spans much of the Eastern seaboard, linking eight national forests and two national parks.

From Mount Katahdin, Maine, to Springer Mountain, Ga., the trail offers a 5-million step endurance test for the elite "2,000-milers" who have devoted months to trekking its length, or an easy afternoon stroll for picnickers.

This remarkable trail, the world's longest continuous woodlands path, was conceived in the early 1900s by forester Benton MacKaye who envisioned a sanctuary from "the scramble of everyday life."

The trail can provide a refuge for someone who "can't slow down, who is compelled to organize their life every second of every day, who needs to have everything predictable," said Dr. Janice Castles, a psychologist.

"It (camping on the trail) might be a very frightening experience for them, but it might set them free." She said the remoteness of the trail might put off many people but most would find they are more self-reliant than they thought.

For John and Martina Linneman of Sarasota, Fla., who decided to hike the entire trail although "we had no outdoor experience," the six-month trip was a growing and learning experience.

"We became deeper people in many ways — emotionally, spiritually."

He said they began considering the trip after reading a series of hiking articles in a local paper.

"I came to a point where I felt I needed a wilderness experience," the 54-year-old real estate salesman said. "We felt we needed to find our identity with nature, with the animals and trees. It incorporated the oneness of life for us — we were just part of the whole system."

Linneman and his wife, 44, set out from Springer Mountain last March 27. They finished the 2,100 miles in just over six months, reaching Mount Katahdin on Sept. 30.

"We said the number, but we never really realized the distance until we were through." This year, 134 people set out from Georgia.

"About 80 percent of those will finish," said Jean Cashin, Appalachian Trail Conference spokeswoman. She said many less experienced hikers will give up "after the first 30 miles. Some push too hard and just burn out. The first post office box they reach, they send their pack and get on a bus and go home."

Linneman said the walk is a tremendous physical challenge — but the biggest obstacles and the greatest rewards are internal.

The first mile was cut and marked in 1922 in Palisades Interstate Park, N.Y. An almost exclusively volunteer workforce spent 16 years completing it. Maintenance still is largely a volunteer endeavor, coordinated by the West Virginia-based ATC. The organization oversees 64 hiking clubs who preserve and manage the trail.

The existence of the trail is important because it "opens you up for all kinds of experiences" and provides a testing ground for many people, Dr. Castles said. Linneman agreed.

"We found many young people out there who said 'If I can do this, I can attain many other goals in my life.'"

But supporters say until the entire trail is purchased by the federal government its future is unsure. Stretches are still privately-owned and in 1978, President Carter authorized $90 million for land purchase. About $35 million has been spent to buy 300 miles of the corridor.

The ATC estimates it will take an additional $32 million to complete the federal purchase but it is not yet clear whether the 1983 budget will include the trail. Legislators plan to consider the issue early in August.

The Conference also is exploring alternatives to federal land purchase, including establishing leases, cooperative management agreements and private donations.

Crime, although relatively rare on the trail, has become more of a concern since hiking surged in popularity in the early 1970s. Since 1974, four murders and four rapes have been reported on the trail. The most recent was a double homicide last summer near Pearisburg, Va. Randall Lee Smith has admitted slaying Susan Ramsey and Robert Mountford, both 27, but no clear motive was ever established.

"We feel it was more related to the town and the fact that there was access to the trail by road. That road has since been closed," said Bob Proudman, a New England hiker and ATC volunteer.

In 1979, five Tennessee men admitted raping four R. Lehigh, N.C., teenagers who were camping on the trail.

"We encourage preventative programs," Proudman said. "If it gets to an enforcement problem, in a way, you've already failed."

He said the hiking clubs that provide maintenance crews also organize safety patrols, particularly in the busy summer months. Fire and police protection is the responsibility of local communities.
