McGregor's restrictions appealed

SANFORD — The legal defense battle against Circuit Judge Robert McGregor's anti-abortion protest restrictions waged on two fronts Mon-

Appeals were filed in 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeal in Atlanta and the 5th state District Court of Appeal in Daytona Beach by a team of local and national attorneys challenging McGregor's April 8 order. The federal appeal seeks to overturn U.S. District Judge G. Kendall Sharp's decision in Orlando last week to refuse to impose a temporary restraining order against McGregor's decision.

The state appeal seeks to have McGregor's order overturned. More than 100 people were arrested for violating the order at Aware Woman Center for Choice in Melbourne during the past two Saturdays. The order imposes a 36-foot buffer on three sides of the center property where protesters are prohibited from entering. although they are allowed closer along U.S.

Highway 1.

The protesters are also prohibited from approaching clinic clients within 300 feet of the clinic unless invited. Protesters are also prohibited from demonstrating within 300 feet of clinic employees' residences. McGregor imposed the restrictions after clinic attorneys presented testimony protesters had violated a 1992 order against blocking entrance to the clinic and demonstrated at the residences of clinic' employees and owners.

SANFORD - A Seminole County jail corrections officer resigned Monday rather than face suspension after his arrest in Volusia County last Friday night.

Clarence Brewer, S1, of DeLand, was arrested at his home shortly after 9 p.m. last Friday after his live-in girifriend reported to Volusia County deputies he threw dishes and glasses at her. Deputies report seeing broken dishes and glass throughout the kitchen and living room area. Furniture was also overturned.

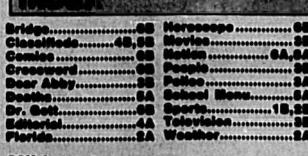

The woman also told deputies Brewer had struck her prior to Friday and showed Volusia County deputies bruises, according to Cheryl Downs, Volusia County sheriff's spokesman.

Brewer turned in his resignation Monday morning. He had been employed with the Seminole County Sheriff's Office for four years and a month, according to personnel director Elicen Long. Sheriff Don Eelinger said Brewer would have been placed on leave because of the arrest because he would not be able to perform his duties with the charge "hanging over his head," but Brewer resigned before the decision

Main Street: Rally for change

By MCK PFEIFAUF Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - Amid history, humor, music, and the urging of support, the Sanford Main Street program kicked off Monday night with a public rally that organizers said was a huge success.

Approximately 100 persons attended the fund-raising event at the Sanford Civic Center. During a meeting of the Sanford Historic Downtown Waterfront Association this morning, it was announced that $2,500 in piedges, checks and cash were donated to the project as a result of last night's meeting. "We received a number of additional donations this morning," said Kay Bartholomew, spokesperson for SHADWA.

formed in November, 1992. It was assisted with a $10,000 matching-fund donation from the city. Organizers have been working on preparing an application to be submitted to become part of the Florida Main Street program, part of the Main Street USA effort.

"We have now decided to go ahead with the project regardless of whether or not we get state support," said Neil Fritz, who has been hired to complete the applications.

Former Sanford Mayor Lee P. Moore led off the guest speakers. Moore has agreed to serve as fund-raising chairman for the program. "We have accomplished many projects in Sanford in the past," he explained, "such as the building of Park on Park, and the Magnolia Mall. The reason these were so successful," he added, "is the fact that it was the people working together in cooperation with the city."

Moore explained, "We can accomplish even more important things such as this Main Street program, if we keep people and the government working together, in unison with private enterprise.

Man dies from shot on I-95

JACKSONVILLE - A 41-year-old Jacksonville man died after being shot over the weekend on Interstate 95 north of downtown Jacksonville.

Patrick Lee, 41, was found about 10:45 p.m. Saturday in his red Mazda Miata in the northbound I-95 emergency lane near downtown Jacksonville, said police spokesman Howard Curry. Lee was apparently shot as he drove along the interstate, Curry said. His car left the road and hit a guardrail.

Police refused to say where Lee was wounded. He died at University Medical Center on Monday.

It was not known if the shot was fired from another vehicle or from the road or an overpass, Curry said. He added the shooting was an isolated incident.

Welder charged in medieval-style murder

DANIA — A welder living at a Dania hotel has been charged with shooting a man in his hotel room over the weekend and then beating him to death with a medieval-style mace.

Thomas Wheeler, 38, was in jail Monday, charged with shooting construction worker John Johnson in the shoulder and hand, then beating him repeatedly with a mace.

The mace is a replica of the weapon used by knights in medieval times — a heavy metal ball chained to a handle. Police said Wheeler invited Johnson, 30, to his room at the Pirate's Inn Saturday night and the two talked into the early morning hours Sunday while listening to music. Deputies arrested Wheeler just after 2 a.m. in his room at the hotel and he was booked at the Broward County Jail on a murder charge later in the day.

Suit filed to support white supremacist

MIAMI BEACH — The American Civil Liberties Union filed suit Monday in support of a white supremacist who wants to hold a rally at a memorial to Holocaust victims.

The ACLU asked a federal court for an injunction to allow former Ku Klux Klan member Hank Pritchard to conduct a white unity rally Saturday at the Holocaust Memorial in Miami

City officials last week gave Pritchard permission to hold a rally of his Society for the Advancement of White People, but it must be 400 yards from the memorial.

The ACLU contended in its suit that Pritchard's First Amendment rights were violated because the city restricted the site. It is fighting the $200 permit fee and $25,000 insurance policy Miami Beach officials said Pritchard must pay for the rally.

Commission in action

Hospital Road work advances

By J. MARK BARFIELD Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD - Work is advancing on the construction of Hospital Road between Lake Mary Boulevard and Seminole Community College.

The college has completed the purchase of lands lying between the college and roadway and is working with county staff to assure the new road will be compatable with the widened boulevard. The boulevard widening is scheduled to be under construction by January 1994, said county construction project engineer Frank VanPelt.

The county has worked together with the college to reconfigure a proposed boulevard drainage pond to allow Hospital Road follow a straighter course. SCC spokesman Craig Orseno said the road will generally follow a path along a power line extending north of the college and intersect with Lake Mary Boulevard at Art Lane. The county will add boulevard turn lanes for the road.

First appointments made to CRC

Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD - Seminole County commissioners have begun to make the first appointments to the Charter Review Commission, and some of the faces will be familiar.

When voters approved the Seminole County Home Rule Charter in 1988, they approved the creation of the 15-member CRC to be formed 12 months before the November 1994 general election. The commission has the authority to review the existing charter, propose amendments or new provisions and present them to county commissioners to be placed on the ballot.

The county commission is required to place the CRC proposals on the ballot without their own changes or exclusions. Any voterapproved changes would take effect Jan. 1, 1996 unless another date is specified.

Two former county commissioners, two former mayors and former county manager are on the list. So is a former member of the orginal Charter Advisory Committee that created the current charter.

The three appointments made by each commissioner were:

Pat Warren: John Howell, lawyer: Harry Kwiatkowski, former county commissioner, real estate broker; and one unfilled position.
Bob Sturm: Larry Conniff, former deputy and Seminole County aheriff's candidats; Ken

Hooper, consultant and former Seminole County manager; and Randy Morris, advertising consultant and former Lake Mary mayor.

Dick Van Der Weide: Scott Cahill, a builder; Fred Streetman, former Seminole County commissioner; and Ben Tucker, real estate appraiser and chairman of the Seminole County Board of Adjustment.

County Board of Adjustment.

Larry Furlong: Dave Locker, Seminole County sheriff's candidate, former state atcounty aheriit's candidate, former state attorney's investigator and detective; Chuck Meade, Fern Park homeowner's representitive; and Adrienne Perry, former Longwood mayor, congressional candidate and director of atudent teaching at Stetson University.

Daryl McLain - no appointments made.

No construction schedule for Hospital Road has been set, said Orseno.

In other county reports. county commissioners learned last week the building permit fee fund is regaining health. Al-though created to be a selfsupporting fund, permit deposits did not keep up with expenses since 1990 after a slowdown in housing construction and a fee decrease made at the request of the Home Builder's Association of Mid-Florida.

The county bolstered the account with $133,000 in property taxes last year after laying off 10 employees in 1990 to reduce expenses.

Also, the Seminole County Professional Fire Fighters have rejected a management proposa in their all-but accepted contrac with the county. According to firefighter's union, more than two-third of the voting members rejected the clause.

Negotiations are expected to continue, said German Romero personnel director.

By ROBERT MAYLOR JR. Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tracy Bailey once dreamed of being recognized at a White House ceremony for space travel. Instead, his penchant for teaching molecular biology and DNA fingerprinting to high school kids earned him the honor.

Bailey enthusiastically described how he gets even those students considered low achievers interested in experiments like harnessing lightening and photographing the strikes. But he also frets that society has too many expectations for schools and too few rewards for teachers.

"Most of our teachers are juggling a huge amount," he said in an interview. "I'm not griping. They pay me and I work hard for my money. But they're asking me to do more than I can reasonably do during the day."

Bailey, a 1988 graduate of Florida Institute of Technology, headed to college with the idea of becoming an astronaut. In his junior year, the space science and physics major was offered a scholarship through a federal program designed to lure would-be scientists into teaching.

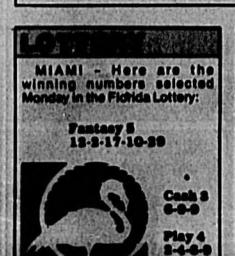

He needed the money.

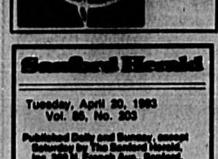

"I was on the beans and rice track," joked Bailey, a native of Goshen, Ind.

What's more, he said, "I had become a little bit disillusioned with the bottlenecking of quantum mechanics and atomic structure. You know how it is when you feel like you're learning more and more about less and less? You start to feel like you're going to become an expert on nothing.

As a rookie teacher, Bailey said he often stayed at school until 2 a,m. preparing for classes.

Fortunately, he said, "I was a bachelor for those first two years, so it worked out OK. Now, he's married to a community college teacher. They have two children, including

Koresh's cult devoured by fire

Associated Press Writer

WACO, Texas - As the walls came tumbling down around them, David Koresh's disciples apparently spread lantern fuel from room to room - and may have even polsoned their children - before taking nearly everyone to their deaths in a ghastly inferno that fulfilled

Koresh's apocalyptic prophecies. Koresh and as many as 85 others — including 24 children - were thought to have perished in Monday's blaze, which broke out after FBI agents used armored vehicles to batter holes in the compound walls and pump in tear gas in an attempt to drive the cultists out 51 days into the siege.

"We had hoped the women would grab their children and flee ... that the motherly instinct would take place," FBI spokesman Bob Ricks said. "That did not occur, and they bunkered down the children and allowed them to go up in flames.

Ricks said there was speculation that cult members poisoned the children to ease the terror and pain of the end.

"We've had some people report that they did have poison in there," he said. "We do not know. There were initially reports that injections were given to some of the children. As far as I can tell. I've tried to confirm that. That is total speculation."

At least nine cult members survived, but authorities said they wouldn't know the precise death toll until they could search an underground maze of passages. The search was expected to start today, after the ruins cooled down.

One survivor told authorities that as he fled, he could hear people inside saying, "The fire's been' lit, the fire's been lit," Justice Department spokesman Carl Stern said.

A man found in a bunker on the grounds told authorities the cultists spread lantern fuel throughout the wooden complex, dubbed Ranch Apocalypse by cult members, before setting fires in several places at once.

FBI anipers positioned outside reported seeing a man in a gas mask and black uniform throw something inside, followed by a fireball. The man "was knelt down with his hands cupped, from which a flame erupted, the congress, there were calls

At least 75 to 80 rounds of gunfire came from the compound in an initial volley after agents started ripping holes in the walls and pumping in tear gas via compressed air, rather than explosive canisters, the FBI said. The FBI said it did not return fire.

"I can't tell you the shock and the horror that all of us felt when we saw those flames coming out;" Ricks said. "We thought.

The blaze, fanned by stiff winds, erupted six hours after the initial assault and raced through the prairie compound in just 30 minutes, reducing it to smoking ruins. Koresh's mother, Bonnie Haldeman, lashed out at the FBI. "There were law-abiding, Godfearing people in there. They didn't hurt anybody. It's ridiculous. They're going to pay," she said, her voice shaking.

Campaign launched to hike cigarette tax to build prisons

By CURT AMDERSON Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE - Gov. Lawton Chiles launched a campaign Monday to drum up support for a cigarette-tax in-crease to build 21,000 new prison beds and combat Florida's image as the nation's violent crime leader.

The governor, flanked by prosecutors, law enforcement officials and victims' rights advocates, said at a news conference that he would travel the state in the coming weeks to seek support before calling a reluctant Legislature back for a special session on prisons.

"Violent criminals must know when they're taken off the streets and the cell door closes, it's going to not open up for a long time," Chiles said. "I think it is a crisis right now."

The governor would not set a date for the session, but said his campaign will last until "we think we've got the votes. We're talking about three or four weeks.

Because of court-imposed population caps, most inmates serve less than one-third of their sentences, leading to intermittent horror stories about rapiets and murderers who are released after only a few years behind bars.

Even those releases aren't fast enough. In October, a group of less violent inmates selected for early releases will be gone. possibly forcing the wholesale release of those convicted of even worse crimes.

The tourist industry, which drives Florida's economy, is also nervous about worldwide headlines following the killing in Miami of German tourist Barbara Meller Jensen. The two suspects had lengthy rap sheets and might have been in prison had there been room, authorities have said.

"That's not a future for Florida. It's a formula for a state of fear," the governor said.

Chiles, who failed to persuade the Republican-led Senate to support the 25-cents-a-pack eigarette tax increase during the

The so-called "Safe Streets" program would eliminate credits that automatically shave off about one-third of most inmates' sentences and would ensure most violent offenders serve 75 percent of their sentences.

Some serve merely as members of a group. Others give financial assistance.

Those who bring about accomplishments however, are the volunteer workers. These are the people who deserve support and appreciation from everyone.

Most volunteer workers give much more than time. Depending on whether they have regular employment or are retired and able to work long hours, people who become involved in helping others are a special breed.

The size of an organization matters not. There are situations where only a handful of people spend time on a project, such as people who man the telephones and welcome visitors at the First Street Gallery in downtown Sanford.

Other groups such as neighborhood watchs. food kitchen cooks and servers, and the home rebuilding efforts of Habitat for Humanity use

The range of volunteer work even carries over to much larger organizations such as the American Red Cross.

Many people who have retired from their jobs will admit they are now working harder than ever. They seldom object however, as they are fully aware of the goals of the group they represent. Their lives are enriched because they are helping those who cannot help themselves.

Bill would punish disfavored thought

A swastika painted upon the wall of a Jewish around last year's U.S. Supreme Court ruling, synagogue. A cross set aftre on the front lawn of which found unconstitutional a St. Paul, Minn., a black family's home. Anti-gay epithets hate crimes ordiscrawled outside an AIDS hospice.

Few crimes are as repugnant as those motivated by hatred of another's race, religion or sexual orientation. But only slightly less of-fensive to those who cherish individual liberty is the notion of a federal law that would unduly punish certain forms of expression.

That is precisely what will come to pass if a bill sponsored by New York Congressman Charles Schumer ever becomes law. It would impose longer than usual jail time on individuals convicted of committing hate crimes.

Rep. Schumer is understandably concerned about the apparent increase in crimes — many violent — against such minority groups as blacks, Asians, Jews and gays. More than one-third of cities surveyed in 1991 by the U.S. Conference of Mayors reported that acts of bigotry were on the rise.

A hate crime is defined, for purposes of the Schumer bill, as one in which the offense is motivated by hatred, bias or prejudice, based on the actual or perceived race, color, religion. national origin, ethnicity, gender or sexual orientation of another person or group of people.

The proposed federal law is crafted to get nance that banned cross - burnings, swastika displays and other expres-sions of racial supremacy and bias. A majority of the justices held that the ordinance punished speech based on content.

The high court left unresolved the matter of hate crime penalty i enhancement laws. Threefifths of states have such laws on their books, although challenges have been put before the supreme courts of Florida and Vermont and in the lower courts of California and several other states.

Rep. Schumer and the 62 co-sponsors of his federal hate crime bill are wagering that the U.S. Supreme Court will ultimately uphold the constitutionality of stiffer sentences for hate crimes. They argue that the law would punish certain forms of conduct rather than expression. And they point out that motivation often is considered by judges and juries to mete out

The high court may view things differently, however. The justices are slated to hear oral arguments later this month in a case challenging Wisconsin's five-year-old hate crime law, which, like the Schumer bill, imposes sterner sentences for offenses against protected minorities. The high court very well may follow the reasoning of Wisconsin's Supreme Court, which struck down the state law on grounds that it enhances the punishment of bigoted criminals because they are bigoted.

That would be the net effect of the proposed federal hate crimes law. There would be differential treatment of identical crimes, according to the mind-set of the criminal. If the criminal could be proven to have bigoted ideas, he would receive one-third more jail time than if he were unbigoted. This clearly amounts to punishment of disfavored thinking.

Limits to food oceans yield

The idea of limits to finite natural resources is a subtheme to our generation's understanding of how we're getting on with the world. There is concern it may become the next generation's preoccupation. We're attuned, as we've never before had to be; to rain forests, and osone shields, and species flickering into extinction like stars going out in the night.

To avoid making all this our children's proccupation, it's time to become attuned to what's happening to one of the most vast resources of them all, the world's oceans. There are limits even to the fishes in the sea.

For the pest decade or so a picture has emerged that humankind is already harvesting the maximum amount of food the see will yield before the whole resource slips into decline. Within this picture, severe depletions are already decumented for many of the most popular stocks of marine life.

In broad outline, three factors are testing the

One is the polluted water we dump into the sea, it's this problem that led the Japanese to eport recently that nearly 60 percent of the leb and shellfish surveyed in their waters contain PCBs, a chemical textin that accumulates in the food chain.

Another is the less of coastal wetlands, the essential habitat and hothouses of a great many inshore species that are the staples of commercial fishing. This is a major concern, for example, facing our own Quif of Mexico shrimping industry. Eighty percent of the industry's catch depends on Louisians's coust-al wetlands, which are disappearing faster than any other wetlands in the country.

But by far the biggest contributor is the abeer size of the annual catch. Within U.S. territorial waters, 42 percent of all commercial fish species surveyed are already being depleted, taken in greater numbers than the stocks can regenerate, according to the latest findings of the National Marine Fisheries Service. Globally, the United Nation's Food and Agriculture Organization reports, "Fishery resources around the world are closer now to their maximum catch limits and many show signs of biological degradation and economic waste."

Determining the maximum sustainable catch is not an exact science. So far the best we have is an educated estimate. The PAO says that an annual catch of 100 million metric tons is about the most that can be sustained indefinitely. According to the FAO, the 1989 worldwide catch was the first ever to come in at just over 100 million metric tons. The 1990 catch, the latest for which figures are available, totaled 97 million metric tons.

In short, we're already treading on the threshold. Then we get to the projections. The next 1 billion people added to the total global population are also expected to add to the need for protein from the sea by another 20 million metric tons each year. Those folks will be with us in the next 10 years. And another billion will likely follow them in the decade after that: about the time we turn things over to the next

Some signs of the crunch are already here.

- Nearly all tuna stocks, the FAO tells us, "are under heavy pressure and are intensively to fully flahed" already.

— A mong the stocks the FAO lists as fully exploited, overexploited or de-pleted are salmon. halibut, pollack. perch, kingcrab. snow crab and shrimp in the Northeast Pacific; and cod, hake, haddock, redfish, herring, crab, lobeter, prawn and shrimp in the Northwest Atlantic. Both areas are prime U.S. fishing waters.

There are ilmits even to the fisher in the sea.

- Three decades ago, two-thirds of all the species in the abundant Georges Bank off New England consisted of prised catches of cod, haddock and flounder. Today, according the NMFE, those species make up less than 25 percent of the total. The haddock catch plummeted from 28,000 metric tons in 1980 to only 5,400 metric tons in 1980.

- Nearly all stocks in the Mediterranean are in decline, all Atlantic blue and white marlin stocks are overexploited, and some shark species are even in trouble.

The natural way out of this looming problem is to stop polluting the occass, to preserve constal wetlands and to manage flaheries on the basis of sustainable yield. Intensified fish farming can help. So could reducing the bycatch, the 20 million metric tone of fish that are wasted each year as part of the incidental catch to the species being sought.

The first step to doing any of this, of course, is understanding that it should be done.

Chelsea Clinton is a beautiful girl

Chelsea Clinton is a beautiful child. Caught by either video or still camera at this stage of little-girl-almost-woman, she has taken my breath away — her innocent freekled face suddenly puckering to smooch her mother's nose at the inauguration; her curly red hair spun by the wind and sun as she sits on bleachers with new friends on her first day of achool.

To those of us who have loved little girls. she is perfect.

Hers is not the classic beauty of a "Wonder Years" Winnie, or a Brooke Shields, the cutest girl in class ever since conception. Rather, Chelsen is the beauty under construction. es of the attractive woman to come flashing across the giggly adolescent face. She is what most women were at her age, and she is the face featured in ads from the trendiest kids' fashion designers — Cap Kids, Benetton, Espirit, Fresh, sweet. No little chiseled noses and doe eyes. No Winnies, or

I guess I'd have to say that few things surprise me any more. I understand that not everyone has the ability to recognize the beauty in unfinished structures.- I drew portraits for many years and even taught art to middle-schoolers, so maybe I'm more attuned to art-in-progress.

I am not surprised that not everyone recognizes how attractive Chelsea Clinton is. But I am genuinely stunned that some adult comedians and writers have had the oafish cruelty to mention that they don't see what I can see. That is something usually left to one's churlish, pimple-headed, immature schoolmates who are trying to bolster shaky self-esteem by establishing a pecking order of

I thought my ears would fall off recently when I was listening to a popular comedy program and the host succumbed to the temptation of an easy laugh at Chelsea's expense. What absolutely awed me is that the host has a 2-year-old daughter himself of whom he speaks often. Forgive him, Father. for he is obviously a saphead.

What have we come to when a child's looks are fair game for comedy? In my 41 years, I don't remember this happening before. Comedienne and author Fannie Plags, when doing her imitation of Lady Bird in the 1980s. used to refer to Mrs. Johnson's "two semi-beautiful daughters." But those young women were almost grown. I can recall a few cracks about the Nixon girls, but not harsh ones.

Of course, comedy itself has changed much since the Johnson and Nixon girls lived in the White House and in the public eye. Nothing is sacred to the writers of programs such as "Saturday Night Live" and "In Living Color," not even children.

What message do we send when we accept this hurtful using of children as joke fodder? That we are as loutish as those who use them? When you consider how any of those comedians would feel if his or her child became material for cheap jokes, the issue is taken out of the realm of censorship. It is simply decency.

Chelses, Clinton will be OK. She has many people who love her, who will champion her strengths and help her find her beauty when some others cannot. The rest of us who went through some of what she's going through, both men and women, could have used some champions when we were sacrificed to the accial pecking order all those years ago.

If this were a just world, Congress would empower the president to put into stockades anyone who makes fun of children, and supply the rest of us with rotten tomatoes.

meeting, the commission voted to change the agenda after citizen Nadene Tolos, Highland Hills asked that it be addressed earlier. Mrs. Tolos' husband, Ernest, is on the city Code Enforcement Board. Baker often delivered material to him, Mrs. Tolos said.

She told the city commission she heard Baker say on March 16, that Miller had asked him to "snitch" on fellow employees. She said Baker further stated Miller told him there were other people who snitched in city hall, and that anything that happened in city hall was known by commission members within ten Miller cited an opinion from former city attorney Jerry Korman in 1985 on what constituted "interference" with city employees. He claimed his casual conversation with Baker did not constitute interference according to that opinion. Miller . said commissioners deal with city employees on an almost daily basis.

For example, when we call city hall, we deal with the telephone operator; when we ask to speak with the administrator. we deal with his secretary; we often "give direction" when we ask that our calls be returned," the letter said, citing further dealings with the city staff which did not constitute interference.

He also said any employee has a right under the First Amendment of the Constitution to speak to a commissioner or anyone else when they are off

"In addition, it must be noted that even if everything that the administrator has stated were the truth, the conversation did not and does not constitute interference. No orders were given to Mr. Baker (see the Charter). Mr. Baker knows this, and so too, does the administrator. The city attorney's opinion certainly takes into consideration many things, including the First Amendment rights of all Americans. Any employeee of this city who wishes to call me at home after working hours and vent his frustration is welcome to do so. Such conduct is protected by the First Amendment and is not interference. I have confidence that any court in this land will agree." A six-page letter was read into the record from Baker who claims "There is a cancer that is consuming the morale of the employees of the city and the effectiveness of the service to the city residents." Baker said the administrator's open admission that he is leaving his job when he gets another one, along with Mayor Paul Lovestrand threatening to fire the administrator contributes to the unstable condition. McFellin charged that Baker quit his job because of interference and political pressures. Baker said he left because he did not like code enforcement and the pay was too low to justify the stress. Baker, along with two code enforcement members resigned at the April 12 commission meeting, over criticism of the handling of a case against AAA Tree Service. The business is owned by the parents of former Mayor Hank Hardy.

The commissioners questioned why Baker's letter was not signed and voted 3 to 2 to withhold three days pay from Baker's final check until he signa the statement. Miller and Lovestrand voted against withholding the pay.

The commissioners plan to have city attorney Becky Vose look into the situation when she returns from vacation to see if an independent investigation can be launched.

Commissioner Harvey Smerilson noted that the two letters contained contradictions and inconsistencies and reminded the group past Long-wood City commissioners have been removed from office and prosecuted for violations of the state "Sunshine Law."

The program meets several needs in the judicial system. Its goals are to provide the juvenile an informal hearing as an alternative to the court system: emphasize the juvenile's awarness of his or her responsibility to society and law; reduce court case load by removing some cases from the system, allowing the state attorney and the court to concentrate on more serious cases: and to allow community involvement in the Juvenile Justice System.

"Every citizen in Seminole County should have to come to the juvenile court one time to see how bad the problem is," said Nancy DeLong, manager of the PAY program. "The community needs to overcome its denial that there is problem."

In 1991 hearing officers heard 1.107 juvenile cases, in 1992 1,254 misdemeanor cases were serviced.

When a juvenile is charged with a crime, the state attorney reviews the charge and the youth's prior record to de-termine whether to recommend the case to PAY. If the youth and parents agree to participate, the staff schedules a hearing and notifies those involved, the youth, parents, victim, arresting officer and any witnesses.

"When we have a case of a private victim, it makes a difference when the victim participates," DeLong said. "It personvictim an opportunity to participate in the sanction process."

At the hearing, the officer determines the case facts through questioning and listening. If it is found that the juvenile committed the offense. sanctions are assigned. Sanctions, may include community service, restitution, law awarness classes, a jail tour, drug awareness classes, enrichment classes and/or counseling.

The juvenile has a time period in which to complete the sanctions. Progress is monitored by the staff at PAY. When sanctions are completed, the office closes the case successfully, notifies the state attorney's office, and the charges are dropped. If sanctions are not complete, the case is closed unsuccessfully and returned to the state attorney for prosecution in juvenile court.

"In 1992, 94 percent of the cases heard successfully completed assigned sanctions," said DeLong. "There was a 91 percent non-recidivism rate for one year back and a 76 percent for two to three years back."

The program boasts a total of 90 volunteers, 70 of whom are regularly active, as hearing officers. These volunteers are residents from throughout the alizes the crime and gives the community and make up the heart of the PAY program. They must complete a 30 hour training course at Seminole Community College in order to become certified and complete a minimum of six hours in-service training annually.

"Doreen Freeman has been an active officer since 1979," according to DeLong. "She is an outstanding volunteer.

"She was originally a victim in a case," DeLong said. "Fifteen to 20 percent of my volunteers are either parents of defendants or victims.

"When they go through the program they see how effective it and and join in.

"In Seminole County we use more volunteers than any other program in the state," according to DeLong.

The PAY program is jointly funded by Seminole County Board of County Commissioners and the State of Florida Department of Health and Re-habilitative Service, and is managed by the Seminole County Department of Management and Budget, in cooperation with the Office of the State Attorney.

Statistics on the $1 deaths in 1992 showed that 67 percent of the boat operators involved hadn't taken a boating safety course and 80 percent of the victims weren't wearing life preservers. Thompson told the Department of Natural Resources' 11-member Boating Advisory Committee.

A mandatory boating safety training bill passed the Senate in the legislative session that ended April 4 but wasn't taken up in the House. The panel also promised to look into a DNR anti-pollution rule that member Jerry Sansom said could hit small commercial flahing operations with new costs for equipment to fuel their Starting July 1, the rule will require hoses and shut-off

1991. The first-degree felonics involved oral sex which allegedly occurred in a church parking lot, cutside Oviedo High School, at Paterson's house and in the Lakeview Middle School bandroom. The lewd and lascivious counts involve macturbation which the youth claims took place at Paterson's

Another charge of lewd and lascivious assault was filed based on information provided by another youth who alleged Paterson masturbated him while the two set in the teacher's car in the driveway of his (Paterson's) Lake Mary home in November 1990.

A petition is being circulated by parents in the Lakeview Middle School district to have Paterson's teaching license revoked. Paterson, who was suspended without pay Feb. 10 from the teaching job he had held for 10 years, was on probation at the time. The Seminole County School Board delayed firing Paterson after he requested a state hearing officer be appointed to hear the case. That hearing will be on or after June 15. Paterson was suspended without pay for five days in 1991 for playing a comedy tape containing racial slurs and using sexually explicit language in front of some students. He was also placed on four years proba-tion by the State Department of Education. The probation period was to run from June 1992 until June 1996. Periodic reports by Lakeview principal Jim Schupe were filed with the state on Paterson's performance up until his suspension Feb. 10. State officials will not confirm an investigation is underway to pull Paterson's teaching license.

According to the ball bond schedule used in the county. Stone said bond on the six count information would be $25,000 and on the remaining lewd and lascivious count it would be $10,000. After being arrested in February, Paterson left jail after posting $20,000 bond. A motion by the state attorney to have a judge increase Paterson's bail on a 33-count information was denied. A judge will set bond in the two new cases.

Paterson said this morning he has no comment on the new charges upon the advice of his attorney.

"Anything I say can and will be used against me," Paterson said. His only comment on a petition being circulated to remove his teaching license was "Oh, Lord. I guess some people don't have anything better to

"I wouldn't go back there (Lakeview) even if I'm not fired." he said. "I should have left there a long time ago."

Although he declined to any were he is working, he said his plan now is to make money. He said he will turn himself in after the new arrest warrants are issued and has already arranged ball on the charges. The father of one boy said he is angry that parents were not told about the 1991 investigation.

"Going through reports and letters now," he said, "I'm finding out they talked to my son. They never notified the parents. How can all these poople and groups be investigating this and the parents never be informed?" The mother of a youth, who was involved in the investigation two years ago, said she hopes the teacher is jailed and remains there until his trial.

All four of the youths who have made allegations against Paterson were band students at Lakeview.

Witnesses to home violence By JENNIFER DIXON Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — One in three Americans have witnessed domestic violence, and 14 percent of the nation's women say they have been battered by men, according to a survey.
"Our personal lives are not free from violence or fear of physical harm from the people we love," said researchers who conducted the survey for the Family Violence Prevention Fund, an advocacy group based in San Francisco. The survey, released at a House hearing Monday, found that half of all women believe battering is not uncommon in relationships with men. One-third of Americans reported eyewitness knowledge of violence in the home.

And such witnesses are not merely "unaffected bystanders," says Dr. Mark Rosenberg, a psychiatrist with the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta.

Boys who witness violence in the home have an increased chance of growing up to be perpetrators of violence when they create their own family, and girls who witness repeated violence in the home have an increased likelihood of growing up and becoming victims of their spouse," Rosenberg said.

Esta Soler, executive director of the Family Violence Prevention Fund, said the survey showed more women are seriously injured by beatings than by car accidents, muggings and rape combined.

Domestic violence fills emergency rooms and morgues, contributes to juvenile delinquence and destroys families." Soler told the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on health and the environment.

The survey found that shoving, pushing and throwing things are not rare when a man and woman fight. But as the level of physical violence escalates, both men and women acknowledge that men harm women more than women harm

The survey was based on telephone interviews with 1,900 Americans 18 and older, with a statistical margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

After 200 years, scientists still measuring gravity

By MALCOLM RITTER AP Science Writer

NEW YORK - At the doorstep of the 21st century, as physicists probe deeply into the atom and out to the farthest reaches of space, an experiment planned on a lonely New Mexico mesa sounds downright quaint.

Its job: to measure how strong gravity is.

Yep, our old friend gravity.

Despite nearly 200 years of careful experiments, this familiar and fundamental force has eluded the kind of precision measurement that physicists are used to obtaining.

The mass of the neutron, the electrical charge of a single electron and the speed of light in a vacuum, for example, all are known to an accuracy of 1 part per million or better. But the strength of gravity is known only to 128 parts per million.

That still can be equated with knowing the weight of a 790-pound grizzly bear to within the weight of a candy bar, which sounds pretty good to a layman. But for a handful of physicists, it's a call to action.

'We aren't to first base on measuring the strength of gravity." said Alvin Sanders of the University of Tennessee. "I think that's important, to know how big the darn thing is."

The goal is not measuring Earth's gravity. which can be determined very precisely. Rather, it's the strength of gravity in general, as it applies to any two objects in the universe. This is the Newtonian constant of gravitation, called "G" or

Sanders concedes that the current estimate for big G is good enough for now and that most physicists don't care about pinning it down further.

But he maintains that greater precision will be needed in the future to help choose between competing fundamental theories of physics and to aid in understanding the interior of stars. Some other physicists aren't so sure.

"Do we really need it better?" asks Jim Faller of the joint Institute for Laboratory Astrophyics at the University in Colorado at Boulder, who has tried to improve the measurement.

'I'm not sure we do," he said, "other than it's sort of like climbing one of the great mountains and if you're so clever as to figure out a way to do

The measure of G is somehow embedded in the several-hundred-year-old culture of physics.

You're competing with some great minds of 100 years ago or 200 years ago. They weren't dumb."
So why is G so elusive? One reason is that gravity is extremely weak. When a magnet picks up a paper clip, it defeats the gravitational pull of the entire Earth. And scientists can't even use Earth's gravity in their experiments, in part because its density is too uneven.

So researchers are stuck with measuring the vanishingly small gravitatioal tug between objects small enough to fit into a laboratory. Measurements of something that small easily can be thrown off by such things as tiny, undetected variations in the density of the objects.

What's more, since everything exerts gravity and there is no way to block it, scientists even have to worry about interference from gravitational tugs by other things.

Most Wanted traps "Mice"

CASSELBERRY - The Paddy McGee Mice women's softball team from Oviedo came out on the short end of an 8-6 score in a battle for first place with Most Wanted in Seminole County Recreation Department Women's Class C Slowpitch Softball League action at Red Bug Park Monday night.

The Mice were up 6-4 going into the bottom of the sixth inning when Most Wanted came up with four runs. The big blow in the inning was a pinch hit bases loaded double with two outs that plated the seventh and eight runs.

Denise Levinson led the Paddy McGee offense with two hits and two RBL Oviedo High School player Andrea Sparrow also contributed two hits, including a triple. Kathy Tollefson, Debbie Leigh and Lorf Lingo added two litts each.

Most Wanted improved to 6-1 with the win, while the Mice fell to 5-2. Paddy McGee's will play at 7:30 p.m. next Monday against Silent

UCF loses basketball coach

ORLANDO - Central Florida basketball coach Joe Dean resigned Monday after compiling a 37-73 record in four years, including a 10-17 mark last season.

Athletic Director Gene McDowell said Dean stepped down to "pursue other interests" and that Ben DeVary, 26, will serve as interim coach until a new athletic director is hired and decides the tenure of the basketball position.

McDowell, who is also the school's football coach, plans to give up his administrative duties this summer to concentrate solely on the football program.

DeVary has been at Central Florida for three years. He was a restricted-earnings coach on Dean's staff for two seasons and became a full-time assistant last year.

AROUND THE STATE

Panthers name president

FORT LAUDERDALE - Bill Torrey, who helped build the New York Islanders from an expansion team to four-time Stanley Cup champions, was named Monday as president of the expansion Florida Panthers.

"We know expansion is not without pain and difficulties, but like with any birth comes the excitement of growth and hope for the future," said Torrey, 58, who was general manager from 1975 through 1988 for the Islanders, who held the NHL title from 1980 through 1983. He had recently been an advisor to the Islanders.

The Panthers will begin the 1993-94 season at the Miami Arena, co-tenants with the Miami Heat. Torrey said he's excited about working alongside longtime rival Clarke, a former Philadelphia Flyers all-star center.

Huizenga said he decided to use Florida instead of South Florida in the team name when the state animal, the panther, was selected in a name-the-team contest. The National Hockey League approved the name, even though the Florida Panthers were the second NHL team in the state.

Barberie hurt

FORT LAUDERDALE — The Florida Marlins on Monday placed second baseman Bret Barberie on the 15-day disabled list.

The Marlins have not announced a replacement for Barberie on the 25-man roster.

Barberie was hitting .286 with one RBI and two stolen bases in 10 games.

All of the Sanford leagues are sanctioned by the ASA (Amateur Softball Association) and 33 teams are registered to play this Spring. including several new sponsors and new teams.

The Seminole High School softball team committed nine errors and fell behind 3.0, 4-1 and 5-4 before the offense exploded for 11 runs in the fifth and sixth innings to stop visiting Orangewood Christian 15-5 in six innings at Seminole Field Monday afternoon.

Dancers ready for high-stepping action this weekend

By ED KORGAN Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — Bailet Guild of Sanford-Seminole winds up its 1992-93 dancing season this Saturday 8 p.m. and Sunday 2:00 p.m. at the Lake Mary High School Auditorium. Their presentation of "Young at Heart" will include an alumni-studded cast which will take the audience back 25 years to the original formation of BGS.

Included in the cast of "Young at Heart" will be 16 alumnae dancers, 16 guest male dancers and 38 regular members of the guild plus Mayor Bettye Smith and Dr. Frank Clontz. The show will bring back old favorites as the "Blue and the Gray,"
"Grand Tarantella," "Jump Shout," "Amazing Grace," and
"Rock Around the Clock." A special pas de deux from "Le Corsaire" will be presented by Laura Moore and Jackie Hansen, alumni members now dancing professionally.

The choreography team of Valerie Weld and Miriam Doktor have put together a masterpiece of work that displays their talent as it has evolved over the 25 years BGS has been in existence. Their clever interplay of the old and the new has to be noted. Many of the old favorites are immediately followed by vignettes which showcase the 1992-93 members of BQS.

Sara Lee Roberts-Smith, a charter member, will be dancing in "Amazing Grace" and "Young at Heart." The latter is new choreography presented for the first time by the alumnae

My legs just don't go as high or balance as well as they used to, but at least I still have them. I probably have had the most difficult time of everyone picking up the steps. It has been wonderful."

Snooping in wastebaskets: Innocent, illegal, immoral?

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in reference to a recent letter in your column. The writer who had witnessed a colleague going through her boss's wastepaper basket after office hours asked if she should inform the boss. You said "no," and saked for readers' comments.

I'm with you all the way, Abby. There could be many reasons why a secretary could be going through her bose's trash. For example, she could be having an affair with the bose, and she lost (or inadvertently threw out) the room number of the motel she had booked for their weekly rendezvous. Or, perhaps she misplaced an important memo and was too embarrassed to admit it.

MELEN IN HACKENBACK

DEAR ABBY: As a manager in a computer software company, I feel it would be an invasion of my privacy for someone to be going through my wastebasket. The courts have held that police cannot seach through an individual's trash without a search warrant. I can think of no innocent reason why someone would go through another person's wastebasket. On the other hand, I can think of several reasons that would be grounds to terminate someone's employment. First is industrial espionage. Second, that employee is trying to find out who the boss is seeing.

In either case, the boss should be told! Sign me...

A BOSS IN SCOTTSDALE DEAR ABBY: Snoops in a business office are insubordinate, and can be downright dangerous to a company. By having access to privileged information affecting sales, production or competition, release of such information into the wrong hands can destroy a company. What that employee did was dishonest and she should be reported. If she had a legitimate reason for going through the boss's wastebasket, let her explain. In all probability, she had no business in the boss's office to begin with.

As for any boss who is reading this, I advise you to get a shredder - and use it.

SHAKER MEIGHTS SHREDDER, OHIO

DEAR ABBY: As a private investigator and certified protection professional who specializes in frauds, embezzlements, etc., I can assure you that there could be several crime-related reasons for an employee to be searching the trash can.

A loyal employee would notify the boss.

WITHHOLD MY HAME IN TUCSON

DEAR ABBY: While you can't rule out "monkey business." here are some legitimate reasons why a secretary would be going through her boss's wastebasket: (1) She was looking for the name or address on an envelope because:

(a) She couldn't read her bosa's handwriting.
(b) She couldn't read her own shorthand. (c) She couldn't understand the dictation.

(2) She was looking for an "enclosure" that wasn't attached to the correspondence. (It was probably still in the

(3) She was looking for a name or phone number on a phone (4) She is a stamp collector, or has a friend who is. In my 48 years as a typist stenographer or secretary, I have done all of the above many ST. PAUL SECRETARY

DEAR ABBY: I am a supervisor of a large business and regularly have to dispose of notes, reports, correspondence and files containing sensitive and confidential information. I take great pains to properly dispose of those materials; an office "snoop" would not find much of interest in my trash.

Even though dishonest employees could get little information of value to sell or use as grist for gossip, I would be interested in the fact that they had made an attempt. I would not overreact or confront the snoop. But from then on, I would lock the door to my office at night.

Is tinnitus linked to drug for heart?

er trevriet etter

cause ringing in my ears?
DEAR READER: Mitral valve prolapse, which occurs with age and is common in women, is a looseness of part of a heart valve. This floppiness is ordinarily harmless but causes an extra heart sound (either a murmur or a click); the condition is diagnosed by a cardiac ultrasound examination, during which a picture is obtained of the heart's interior, using electromagnetic waves.

In most cases, MVP causes no symptoms, although patients who have it should receive antibiotic therapy before dental cleaning and other medical procedures that release bacteria into the bloodstream.

In some cases, however, MVP is associated with a variety of symptoms, including dizziness, fatigue, chest pain, low blood pressure, difficulty breathing, and bursts of rapid heartbeat. It's the latter symptom for which you were prescribed Lanoxin, a form of digitalis, that stabilizes the pulse. Beta-blocking drugs are also used for this purpose.

Lanoxin does not cause tinnitus (ringing in the ears). You should bring this symptom to your doctor's attention because you need an ear examination to determine if a treatable condition, such as the accumulation of ear wax, is the cause.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm in my 60s and have recently noticed that my semen has become rather dark in appearance. Should this be investigated further, or is it part of the aging process?

DEAR READER: This should be investigated because the semen staining may be due to blood, which could indicate a prostate infection or tumor.

Make an appointment with a urologist who will examine your prostate gland, obtain a PSA

DEAR DR. GOTT: I take blood test (for prostate cancer) Lanoxin. Can this medication and, possibly, perform a cystoscopy during which he examines your lower urinary tract with a lighted tube.

Someone in England posed this question: What exactly are the odds of being run over by a bus?

One person calculated the chance to be about one in 10 million. But a wag answered. 'One can lie in the road for hours without being touched but as many minutes."

Most bridge deals feature plays we have seen before. Yet occasionally something different comes along. How do you think the play should go in five clubs,

West leading a trump?
South's four hearts was a splinter bid showing slam interest and at most one heart. North wasn't interested.

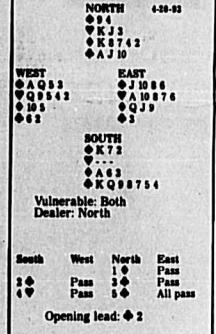

As West hasn't led a spade after an auction that strongly suggested an initial attack in that suit, he is likely to have the ace. If so, East must be kept off play while the diamond suit is being established for discards.

The declarer's first thought was to lead a low heart from the dummy at trick two, trying to look like a man with a singleton queen. But he realized that if that ploy didn't work (or couldn't work because West had the heart ace), he would be

South's second thought was much better. After winning the first trick in the dummy, he called for the heart king. When East covered with the ace, de-clarer ruffed, played a trump to the dummy and led the heart jack. This time East played low, so South discarded one of his low diamonds.

West was welcome to the trick. but now South could establish dummy's diamonds without letting East on play. The contract was made for the loss of one trick in each major suit.

The help might come from an individual who has never obliged you previously. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) An entgnte can be achieved today through a frank discussion between you and another who share a mutual interest. There are benefits for both.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your best asset today is your ability to transform whatever is outmoded into something useful and functional. You should be able to do this with both tangibles and intangibles.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Generally speaking, it's unwise to gamble on situations where you have little control of the end results., However, today you might be lucky with something another dominates.

SCORPSO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Instead of introducing new methods or techniques into your working procedures today, right now it might be best to operate along traditional lines with which you feel comfortable.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Even though you might not be the first one out of the starting block today, you have the potential to be a strong finisher. Don't quit early just because you're a bit behind the others.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Something you're involved in has a better chance of working out to your satisfaction today than it might have tomorrow. This is not a time to coast or drag your feet. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)

You have a gift today for taking

Even though you might prefer staying in the wings today, another's success could be due, in large part, to your guidance and contribution. You'll share in the substance, if not the glory.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you operate along traditional lines, there is a good chance you could gain access to something today that you've been hoping for. Be both persistent and patient. (C)1993, NEWSPAPER EN-
