Ernie Kovacs
The bacon is so good.

NEW YORK—Always true to my public, I went as promised to the Central Park West home of Ernie Kovacs and Edie Adams to see if it was true that they live in a 15-room apartment. It is. Next question?

Well, maybe there's a little more to it. Kovacs, just about my favorite comic since I learned that during his television days in Philadelphia he established the Early Evening Fraternal Marching society, and Miss Adams, a spectacularly talented dame with the most incisive imitation of Marilyn Monroe to be bought anywhere, were out. I buttonholed Vicki Martin, Ernie's right-hand man, who has a great set of un-masculine ankles, and she took me on what she called the 60-cent guided tour of the apartment.

It is not the usual thing. Down in Kovacs' office, for example, there's a photo of Lincoln inscribed "Fondly, Abe" to Rex Lardner, one of Ernie's writers. Edie's bathroom has wall-to-wall carpeting and her vanity has thousands of perfume bottles on it—and in the middle a picture of Ernie chewing thoughtfully on a cigar (he smokes 10 before noon). A clutch of Weigwood china lies haphazardly on a table in the living room and a Dictionary of American Underworld Lingo is on the Kovacs desk.

That kind of house.

THE KOVACS HAVE LIVED in this monstrous, echoing 15th-floor vault for more than a year now. The building is called El Dorado and we may note in passing that it is where Marjorie Morningstar lived, in the book of the same name.

"There is fierce rivalry," Miss Martin said with a straight face, "between Imogene Coca and Miss Adams to play Starjorie in the movies. Imogene, you see, has a similar apartment to this, across the hall." Louise Jourdan, the film star, has the one in between.

There are seven bathrooms in the joint, so Ernie can say truthfully why, I've got bathrooms we haven't even seen yet. Until recently it was fairly bare, but they've been haunting auctions and now the apartment is stuffed with stuff. Including a box of "instant pizza mix" in Ernie's office.

Edie's wheat germ, yogurt and brewer's yeast—she's a health addict—are stored in the kitchen, and other interesting items include a bulletin board studded with pinned-up, unpaid bills. "We pay a few a day," Miss Martin said.

ACTUALLY SIX PERSONS live in the place—the Kovacs, Ernie's two little daughters by a former wife, and a cook and a butler. "We have seven help," Ernie told me later when I dropped by his network's offices after his morning telecast. "It's pretty ridiculous, let me tell you." The apartment previously was rented by a uranium king, and before that by a Chinese importing mogul.

Formerly, Ernie and Edie had a three-room apartment on the East river, currently sub-leased to Grover (The Greeter) Whalen.

The Kovacs are show business' busiest couples—they seem always to be on radio or television, and Edie's currently singing at the Plaza—but they make a sharp point of being home each night at six to have dinner and fool around with the kids.

After that, however, it's every man for himself. Ernie said he couldn't honestly claim they ever spent a normal, John Q. Public evening at home. How do they bear up under this frantic pace? "Lousy," he said. "I feel rotten. Have for five years."

Harrassed, overworked, under-slept and virtually buffeted by fate, Ernie is not safe from care in any direction. For instance, he has a taxidriver named Lou Pack who lets himself into the 16-room layout around 5 a. m. daily, gets Ernie's briefcase, pencils, papers, etc., ready, and then goes into the kitchen to make coffee while Ernie fries the bacon.

The other dawnings, Lou, driving Ernie to the studio, turned around and eyed Kovacs reproachfully. "You didn't do the bacon so good today," he said.

Winds Whip Across Central Florida Areas Of Southwest

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Tornado winds whipped across wide areas of the Southwest yesterday and early today, killing at least nine persons, injuring an undetermined number and causing extensive property damage.

Oklahoma, Texas and Kansas appeared the hardest hit by the spring storms. Tornadoes killed at least four in Oklahoma and two in Kansas. Some 50 persons were injured in the twisters in Oklahoma.

Fast storms, with winds ranging up to 80 m.p.h., extended over parts of New Mexico, Colorado and Oklahoma but the main force was in west Texas. Three deaths in traffic accidents in Texas were blamed on the blinding dust.

The tornadoes slipped across more than a dozen communities in southeastern Kansas and northeastern Oklahoma. Biggest death toll was in Drumright, Okla., about 30 miles southwest of Tulsa, where a family of four was killed. A dozen others were reported injured.

leave the commissioners room. Commissioner Fouracre stated that he had something to discuss with both he and John Krider. However, Krider had left the room.

Two letters to be read by Clerk Commissioner Fouracre directed of Court O. P. Herndon. The first letter was a copy of a letter written by Commissioner Fouracre to State Road Board member William H. Dial of Orlando. The letter was dated March 20, 1956.

The second letter read was an answer from Dial written on April 2, 1956. He stated: "At the outset the State Road Board has only one plan to carry out. It will be included in the 1956 budget. But with the amount of work on the first section of the highway very little has been completed in the procurement of deeds for the second section. Our plans are to complete the project in this budget."

Odham, hearing the letters, said "The Road Board has never had any other intention than to build the highway. It was a hard push to get this Board underway, way (meaning the Board of Seminole County Commissioners).

Earlier, a company official had declared that applications would restore the diseased tree to a healthy appearance and would reduce the nematode count to a point where the tree would produce profitably.

"According to the information made available by the Citrus Experiment Station nematode counts generally are low when obtained this time of the year and from a dry soil as was present at time of the tests. The count will vary in a decline area from one to over 500 nematodes per sample," the commissioner explained.

"Tests of the grove treated with the product of this firm revealed that the count on burrowing nematodes in decline areas ranged from 52 to 1,000 per sample."

"In the margin of the decline area of this treated grove, the count varied from 81 to 401 nematodes per sample. Presence of the burrowing nematode in such numbers in any grove eventually will lead to a loss in production."

"The 'approved appearance' guaranteed in the company's claim could be obtained in many decline groves by the lavish application of fertilizer and water, Ayers said, adding, "This healthy appearance will last as long as the grove is willing to pour money into the grove."

The plant commissioner has pointed out in the past that there is no real cure at present for spreading decline.

Grace's Bridesmaid Can't Gain Weight

BELMONT, Mass. (AP) — Mrs. Francis C. Gray Jr. left today to be a bridesmaid at the Prince Raier - Grace Kelly wedding—under strict orders not to gain a pound or put on a quarter of an inch enroute to Monaco.

Mrs. Gray said the orders were from Mrs. Priscilla Beaudine, who executed the bridesmaids' sunlight yellow gowns with micro-metric precision fittings.

The charming blonde wife of a sales manager pointed out that a slight gain in weight before the wedding might spoil the fitting of the gown.

"Think of it," complained Mrs. Gray, "the sea air, wine with every meal, all those lobsters and saucers... and the parties... and those wonderful desserts."

"And I can't gain an inch."

 know the needs of the schools, the hospital, roads and county."
 Rudy Sloan promised Seminole County voters "If elected I promise you a new, permanent home-stead exemption system on a card basis which has proved valuable to other counties."

Jack Stemper in his appeal for support told his audience "I have been interested in taxation since childhood and have made a study of it. I am going to be a man of action. I am for the little man's interest and for the squandering of the tax structure."

Only three of the four candidates for the Board of County Commissioners, District one were present at last night's rally. Mayor F. D. Scott appeared for City Commissioner John Rhodes, a candidate for the commission post, and explained that he was out of town on City business but would not miss any of the other rallies.

Robert Bennett appealed for votes on the basis of more for the tax dollar. He said, "The problems are varied, but I would like to see a complete program outlined including roads, hygiene, control and youth center." He added, "I want to make Seminole County a better place to live for the people who live here."

Robert S. Billheimer sponsored the Board of County Commissioners sponsor legislation whereby all sections of Seminole County would be given adequate fire protection for I believe it is of paramount importance and will work unceasingly toward this end." He said, "I wish to bring to your attention the deplorable method which is used in the detention of juveniles. Young boys and girls are locked up in the county jail with drunks and criminals."

MORE MORE
 Two candidates for the Board of Seminole County Commissioners, District No. 3 were heard at the Democratic Rally last night. Ole Fouracre briefly told his audience "I have appreciated working for you the past two terms as commissioner and hope that you will see your way clear to name me to the position again."

Lawrence Swafford, Mayor of Altamonte Springs, speaking the entire allotted five minutes said "I have a deep interest in schools. I believe and am in favor of a permanent law setting aside a portion of the race track money for schools. I will promote plans for the continued growth of Seminole County."

W. Hugh Duncan, incumbent for the office of Justice of Peace, Fourth District said "Four years ago I asked you to do something for me and you elected me to this office. I have tried to render a service. I believe the people are entitled to you. You are the ones to be the judge and I ask for your support."

Lawrence Tate appealed to the voters in his behalf on the basis of "I would like to serve the County as an assistant to your County Judge in the juvenile delinquency effort."

Paul Miller, candidate for the 37th Senatorial District seat in the State Legislature contended "I know the problems of the business people. With such a background you need such a man in the Senate." He said "I will do everything possible to create a central purchasing agent and thereby save your county many dollars in its purchases."

Senator Douglas Stenstrom reported that he had spent only $43 in his present campaign. "I have a feeling that the people of the 37th District will vote on the basis of qualifications and not on the basis of geography," and added, "I will not buy a seat in the Florida Senate, neither do I want anyone to buy the seat for me."

The four candidates for House of Representatives were the last speakers of the evening. Wilson Alexander spoke out on his platform of better schools, preservation of natural resources, maintaining segregation and "Will work toward the annexation of the fringe areas of Sanford on a fair and impartial basis."

Don Bales reminded the audience "You are here tonight as voters. And the question is 'is the person standing before you capable of representing me.' I believe it is time to send a business man to Tallahassee, and if elected I will truly be a representative of the people."

Thomas Slinger stated that "I am aware of the problems created by vast expansion. We must meet the growth with legislation to prevent slum areas and decay. I am interested in a long range program for our roads and if elected will stay well informed and avail myself of the facts."

Gordon Frederick in behalf of his candidacy said "I will not bow or bend to any group regardless of their weight. And on the segregation issue said, 'we won't be pushed around by rabble rousing people.'"

The chairman of the Seminole County Democratic Executive Committee, Jim Lee, said, in closing the meeting "We've had a fine group of candidates speak here tonight. It's going to be hard for the citizens of this county to select their representatives."

W. B. Miller, viewing his record as commissioner said "I have done the best I could with what we had. I ask for your support on May 8."

Two candidates for the Board of County Commissioners, District Five spoke at last night's rally. Homer Little, speaking briefly, told the rally audience "I have lived in Seminole County 29 years. I know that you think I am qualified for the position of commissioner and I earnestly solicit your vote."

Gus Schmah said, in behalf of his candidacy, "For the past 29 years the people of my district have urged me to serve as your commissioner. I have consistently believed in progress and am one of the few farmers that maintains a membership in the Chamber of Commerce."

New Way To Teach Johnny To Read

By DOROTHY ROE
 AP Women's Editor

Note to anxious mothers and fathers: If Johnny can't read at age 10, but is a wizard at mechanical things, don't give him up as lost. Just show him how words can help him put a hot-rod or a TV set together.

This is the advice of Frank Jennings, reading specialist and teacher of education in the Bloomfield, N. J., junior high school. He describes himself as a professional uncle.

"Though I have no children, I have five brothers all of whom have big families, and the problems of my nieces and nephews keep me in touch with the younger generation."

Jennings believes there's too much hysteria on the part of parents over current widely publicized reading problems of children.

"Actually today's teaching methods are better than anything they had in the good old days," says he. "The difference is that in 1893 only 7 per cent of children went to high school. Today 77 per cent go to high school. Back in the '80s and '90s the ones who got to high school were only the cream of the crop, and as of course they had no reading problems."

"Today boys and girls of all levels of reading skill are pushed along, and there are bound to be some backward ones in that 77 per cent. But any way you look at it we're still way ahead of former generations."

Jennings is an ardent supporter of the program of the Library Club of America to encourage children to read more books. But he says:

"The impetus to read must come from the family. If a child sees his parents reading, and obviously enjoying books, he soon gets the idea that this is something he wants to do too—it looks like fun."

An earlier effort to get the candidates to appear together fell through. The Florida League of Women Voters had invited them to speak at Lakeland. The league said it had to call off the dogs because of the candidates' schedule difficulties.

Candidates Asked To Address Student Organizations Soon

GAINESVILLE (AP)—The John Marshall Bar Assn. and the Young Democratic Club, University of Florida student organizations, have invited four candidates for governor to speak from the same platform here April 14.

The invitations, sent to Gov. Collins, former Gov. Warren, Farris Bryant and Sumter Lowry, said:

"We students here at the university feel that if the candidates will cooperate and appear together it will offer the voters of the state an excellent opportunity to compare at one time each of the candidates."

The event would be held on the courthouse square with each candidate allowed time to make a brief speech and outline his planned program.

Newsman Will Be Permitted To See, Report Bomb Test

WASHINGTON (AP)—The government announced Monday newsman and photographers will be permitted to observe and report an H-bomb test scheduled here about May 1 at Eniwetok in the Pacific.

The coverage will be on a "pool" basis with the number of newsmen limited to 15.

It will be the first time since 1916 that newsmen have been allowed to see tests of atomic weapons at the Eniwetok proving ground. They have seen a number of tests, however, in Nevada, the last time on May 5 of last year.

A joint announcement by the Atomic Energy Commission and the Defense Department did not say specifically that the upcoming Eniwetok test will be of an H-bomb. The announcement described it as a "megaton range nuclear detonation."

A megaton is the equivalent of one million tons of TNT.

If You Have Pet Birds Beware Of Psittacosis

By NORMAN H. BRIDGMAN, M.D.
 PSITTACOSIS is for the birds. Unfortunately, however, humans also may be infected by this disease which is somewhat similar to influenza.

The disease, caused by a virus, is found generally in parakeets, parrots and lovebirds, although a similar infection may also be harbored by canaries, pigeons and even poultry.

Ordinarily, humans develop psittacosis by inhaling dust from the feathers or cage contents of infected birds. A bite by a bird harboring the virus also may transmit it to humans. And humans themselves can spread it by coughing.

While quarantine regulations have greatly reduced the number of cases, they haven't eliminated the disease.

Symptoms of psittacosis might easily be mistaken for influenza. So, if you've been handling parakeets or other susceptible birds, you'd better mention this to your doctor when you seek treatment for that suspected case of flu.

The incubation period may extend from six to 15 days. After that, onset of the disease may be insidious or abrupt with chills, fever, backache, headache and a few lack of appetite. Coughing at

Collins Is Meeting Problems Of State In Capable Manner

Results of a poll recently conducted in Florida of both parents and students have been made known in an appeal to the United States Supreme Court by State Attorney General Richard W. Ervin.

In his appeal, The State's Attorney General requested permission from the Supreme Court for Governor LeRoy Collins, who is an attorney, to appear before the court with him and argue the case if a rehearing is allowed.

As a result of the poll made of students and parents, Ervin said there is "a strong probability of serious disruption" at the University of Florida if a Negro is admitted immediately as the tribunal has decreed. "If such evidence as revealed by the results of the poll is ignored, the public safety of Florida will be endangered and the administration and operation of institutions of higher learning in Florida will be disrupted," according to Ervin's appeal.

The tabulation of questionnaires sent University of Florida students showed that 32.39 per cent were willing to admit Negroes immediately; 21.04 per cent said they were unwilling to admit Negroes under any circumstances; 14.01 per cent said they thought it would be inadvisable to admit Negroes until after a reasonable period of preparation for integration.

Of the parents of students polled, only 9.34 per cent indicated a willingness to accept Negroes immediately.

And 32.29 per cent of the parents indicated they would transfer their sons or daughters to other institutions which do not admit Negroes if integration is required now.

At the same time, Governor LeRoy Collins' proposal to the President of the United States that he meet with Southern Governors to go over the questions raised by the United States Supreme Court banning segregated schools is meeting with stronger and stronger approval.

President Eisenhower himself has replied to Governor Collins' request and a presidential candidate is making known his endorsement of the meeting between the President, Southern Governors and their Attorneys General.

The President's indication was that he would consider calling a conference only if Congress doesn't create a segregation study commission.

Governor Collins has acted swiftly in the interest of the State when facts became known on which a concerted effort could be made to alleviate any fear of disruption to the State's school system, both in the higher learning bracket and in the lower grades of high school and grade school.

The wisdom of waiting until such time when materials and facts are available cannot be praised too highly. Had Governor Collins attempted to solve the situation in any other manner it would not have gained the headway and the approval of so many as did the appeal made through and by the State's Attorney General.

As we have said before, Governor LeRoy Collins is taking action on behalf of Florida and its problems concerning segregation. However, he is not basing his actions on explosive issues, and he is not creating distrust and commotion among the State's leaders and the State's people.

Rabble rousing can and will have serious effect on the State of Florida and its already highly touted growth. Slanted versions of the State's condition relative to the segregation issue can cause havoc among the peaceful citizens of Florida both white and Negro.

We have stated our stand relative to the choice for Governor of Florida and reiterate our support of LeRoy Collins primarily to commend on his able leadership and far reaching study into the problems that concern its citizens.

Rushing headlong into a stonewall of problems is in no way the proper approach for any problem that confronts the citizens of Florida. And we admit that there are many before us such as the phenomenal growth that is calling on the State's leaders for careful and forthright study of expansion; the problem of providing roads throughout the State on the basis of need and urgency; the problem of the dispersal of State owned lands, especially our valuable public beaches, are all deserving of the most capable and long range study.

Through demonstrated action, Governor LeRoy Collins has shown that he is meeting these problems in the most capable manner—in a manner that is unmatched in the modern history of our State.

FOSTER, DEAR FOSTER, COME HOME WITH US NOW

Western Union Has 100th Birthday Today

The 100th birthday of Western Union was celebrated today with special ceremonies in Rochester, N. Y., where the nation's telegraph system was founded April 4, 1845.

Descendants of the founders and their friends joined in the Rochester ceremony dramatizing the growth of the telegraph from the early days of the hand-operated Morse key to the present system of high-speed printing and facsimile systems by which telegrams are flashed automatically from coast-to-coast in seconds.

Men and women in the costumes of their illustrious great-grandparents' times portrayed the stirring struggles and final success of the men who dared plan a unified telegraph service for the entire nation.

In the Rochester Museum of Art and Science auditorium, residents acted the roles of such historic figures as Hiram Sibley, Judge Samuel L. Selden, Ezra Cornell, Henry S. Fetter and Isaac Butts, members of Western Union's first board of directors.

Descendants of the founders also visited, in the museum, the original one-room Western Union office which has been removed intact from the old Reynolds Arcade Building, and is faithful even to such details as an iron cupboard shaped like a plug hat.

Among the participants was Harper Sibley Jr., great grandson of Western Union's first president. He is a son of Harper Sibley who is a member of Western Union's board of directors. Also taking part were descendants of Judge Samuel L. Selden, Don Alonso Watson and other founders.

The dominating idea of Western Union's founders was to unite the numerous small, local telegraph companies which had developed by varying rates and poor service, and through extension of lines to all parts of the young, growing nation, from a unified telegraph system which would be the world's finest communication system. Their first step was to organize the New York and Mississippi Valley Printing Telegraph Company April 1, 1851. When a number of small lines were joined in 1856, in the states north of the Ohio River, which then was "The West," Ezra Cornell proposed the name Western Union.

The goal of the founders was realized long ago as Western Union became the nation's vital nerve system in peace and in war. Telegrams now flash with the speed of lightning over its high-speed automatic transmission system.

Private wire systems designed and installed by Western Union engineers are leased to thousands of users. Linking far-flung units of business and of government in speedy automatic communications. The five-fold growth of such systems in the past seven years is now being further stimulated by the increasing application of office automation principles, frequently called Integrated Data Processing. Many private wire systems have been specially engineered to handle the rapid transmission of statistical data in perforated tape or punched card form.

The telegraph today is a highly complex, technical business such as its founders never dreamed of. But it is today, as they first envisioned it, the world's finest telegraph system, kept so by constant research and technological progress.

Newspaperman's Tour Report

This is the 11th in a series of articles written by Mrs. Carnegie Wells who is representing The Sanford Herald on a tour of foreign countries.

Things have really been hectic and fast moving since we left Amman, Jordan last Monday and went to Jerusalem. This accounts for my not writing until now. Because of the complexity of the situation, I am working the week through for into three stories. This one about an Arab refugee camp we toured and U.N.R.W.A.'s work here; another about our Holy Land sightseeing; and still another story about our stay in Israel.

On last Tuesday we were taken through the Dheisheh Camp, a tent city housing 1,000 families, or about 5,000 refugees. Mr. Fischer, head of UNRWA (United Nations Relief and Works Agency), was a really wonderful guide for us—very intense, energetic and intelligent.

The days in this area are sunny but there is a chill wind always and at night it is very cold. When I saw these barefoot children in rags, living in tents and caves, I became actually ill. Always, of course, children tug one's heartstrings the most, but never to the extent that these did.

Some of the statistics and facts I got from observation and asking questions both at this camp and at a UNRWA briefing session that night are as follows: In Jordan there is the biggest concentration of the Palestinian refugees since there is more Jordan territory adjacent to the present Israel than any other country. There are 500,000 refugees in Jordan, two thirds of which are not in camps but who live out on the economy, a very few holding down professional jobs and earning a living and the rest (or big majority) living in caves and sking out existences by begging UNRWA help and work when and if they can get it. The other one third of the Jordan refugees live in 25 camps which as the one we visited. Incidentally, the refugees constitute one third of Jordan's total population.

UNRWA spends fifteen million dollars a year here with the United States contributing about 70 per cent - which so many Arabs appreciate but do not understand, since they realize that the United States helped set up the State of Israel eight years ago which development has put these refugees out of their homes and lands.

But back to the camp itself, Mr. Fischer and his seven man staff are doing a terrific job. The daily expense per refugee is ten cents - this is food, fuel, clothing, shelter, education and and more interested in working to read and write. Teachers of young refugees who have had the most education themselves, usually 8th grade or so. Hospitals and clinics, of which there are naturally not enough, are maintained before a refugee is admitted to a camp, he is checked for communicable diseases. So far there have been no epidemics and probably the age-old scourge of this area, malaria, has been 80 per cent licked in the camps.

Six per cent of the camp refugees are, according to the standards set up by World Health Organization, undernourished. This six per cent includes both adults and children, are given a hot noon meal of 700 calories. These people get this meal at a mess hall as supplemental food to their regular food which is prepared and eaten in their own huts or tents. They are examined by medical people for eligibility and removed from the list when their individual health is regained to such a point. Also, children up to age of 13 and expectant and nursing mothers are given one cup of milk a day in addition to their regular rations. It sounds unbelievable, I know, but these people, especially the children, generally look nourished - they are not fat, but they certainly are not starving.

The refugees in this one camp and the rest of the million who are elsewhere in the Arab countries are an appalling problem. Israel does not want them back and they are apparently bent on returning to their land of "Palestine" which term they use since they do not acknowledge the existence of Israel as a nation. This is their hope and dream and determination. The irony of the whole apparently insoluble question is that the Zionist Jews who, as a nation, have been homeless for centuries, now have a place, but another large group of Moslems have taken their place as "the homeless and unwanted ones." I wish I thought there could be a solution other than war but the more I see and observe, the more I agree with the many people, both Israeli and Arabs, who see war in the near future.

TEMPTING HARD-BOILED EGG DISHES

Those hard-boiled eggs the Easter Bunny left are perfectly good eating. Any number of delicious luncheon dishes offer tempting ideas - for one, Egg Goldenrod made by slicing cooked eggs, warming in condensed cream of mushroom soup, serve over toast points. Another is Rice Bake, in which a layer of cooked rice covers the bottom of a buttered casserole followed by quartered hard-boiled eggs, a few leftover peas or beans and over all a can or two (depending on amount of eggs and rice) of undiluted celery soup, to which two tablespoons of prepared mustard have been added.

New Technique - Stagg Fears Purdue

By RELMAN MORIN
NEW YORK (AP)—Some recent bulletins from the presidential campaigns indicate that the new technique in political strategy is what you might call the "Stagg Fears Purdue" strategy.

In this classic maneuver, you fight hard for the role of the underdog.

For instance, after the Minnesota primary, Adlai Stevenson said his defeat there showed, plainly, that he was not out in front in the race for the Democratic presidential nomination. He would have to struggle harder, etc.

But his canny rival, Sen. Estes Kefauver, wasn't letting Stevenson have that place in the race. A few days later, the senator asserted his own position—"behind but gaining."

Then, rang a small bell "way down along memory lane." The great Amos Alonzo Stagg was head coach at the University of Chicago. His teams were among the powerhouses in the nation, but Stagg would never admit this until after a game or the whole season was over.

Chicago's particular meat was Purdue. During one stretch of 16 consecutive years, the Hoosiers lost every game and were unable to score in 13 of them. Nevertheless, on the eve of each year's Purdue game, the sports writers would find Amos Alonzo apparently sunk in gloom, the very picture of pessimism. On the basis of his sad report, the sports pages invariably would announce, "Stagg Fears Purdue."

And then Chicago would beat Purdue 40 to 0 again.

In time, this became standard operating procedure for coaches. But in politics, the approach has always been just the reverse.

The candidate himself, and everybody in his organization, usually contends that everything is rosy, and that the election is in the bag. The idea is always to reflect sunny optimism, and to lose confidence.

This is particularly true in the pre-convention maneuvering. On today, neither Stevenson

A MOUNT KISCO SQUIRE overheard a passel of very subtle girls playing "Apartment Hunting" on the back porch. One kid asked the girl who had assumed the landlady role, "How much is the apartment you've advertised?"

"Just a moment," admonished the landlady. "Have you any parents?"

"Two, I'm afraid," said the applicant.

"Ah-hah!" clucked the landlady. "Can't have you as a tenant. Parents are too noisy and destructive. I don't want any part of them. Good day!"

Lloyd David Lowe was honored on his sixth birthday with a party given by his mother, Mrs. Lloyd J. Lowe Jr. at their home 2404 Orange Ave. recently.

The guests gathered in the portico which was decorated with Easter fixtures. Games were played by the young guests with prizes going to Carol Sue McLellan, Tommy Tindall and Clyde Morrison.

Those who assisted Mrs. Lowe in serving the children were Mrs. C. D. Hayes and Mrs. Jack Benton Jr. along with Mrs. William M. Brown.

Now he's back playing a parson in a Western called "The Killer and 21 Men." He says it's merely coincidental that he is also listed as the producer.

"I never had any thought of acting again," he smiled. "But we were working over the script and the parson's part started to develop very nicely. Several people thought I should do it, and I began to think about it. I don't think I was in favor of it, but I did it anyway. Now I'm glad I did it and I think she is too."

The last picture, he explained, was eight years ago. It was a farce called "Don't Trust Your Husband" with Fred MacMurray and Madeline Carroll, and it's now making the rounds on the TV circuit.

Buddy is enthused about getting into production.

"There's a big field for well-made action pictures in color these days," he remarked. "The major studios aren't coming up with them. We figure we can make them at a good price, sell them reasonably and then turn them over to television."

He and his associates have a full program planned. Their next project may be an underwater subject to be filmed in the West Indies or another Western to be shot in Mexico.

More acting for him? "Could be."

KITCHENS NOW HAS PERSONALITY

Time was when the living room or the bedroom was the busiest place in the personal characteristics of a house's occupants. Now it's the kitchen that's becoming the key to a family's personality. In modern living means spending more time there. In turn that means wanting a kitchen that is more pleasant, congenial and attractive than the one-time clinical-looking cooking quarters or the cramped apartment scullery.

Buddy Rogers Goin Back To Movies

HOLLYWOOD — Buddy Rogers, exuberant but as handsome as ever at 31, has once again gone back to movie acting.

Buddy's career dates back to the silent. He was a popular leading man during the '30s and quit films to fly for the Navy during the war. Afterwards he had one brief fling at acting, but in recent years has stuck to producing films with his wife Mary Pickford, plus night club and TV appearances. His trick of playing all the instruments in the band has always been a show-stopper.

Now he's back playing a parson in a Western called "The Killer and 21 Men." He says it's merely coincidental that he is also listed as the producer.

"I never had any thought of acting again," he smiled. "But we were working over the script and the parson's part started to develop very nicely. ## Final Plans Discussed At Meet For Annual Sorority Banquet

Gamita Lambda Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi held its regular monthly meeting Monday night at the home of Mrs. L. E. Batten.

The group learned of the tentative resignation of Mrs. James Castano, as Vice-President due to the possible transfer of her husband who is stationed at Sanford Naval Air Station. Final plans were discussed for the annual Beta Sigma Phi Banquet to be held at the Yacht Club Friday night, April 6. Members are urged to remember their gifts to be presented at that time to their "Beta Buddies."

The Girl of the Year will also be named and presented at this time, and a report of the year's activities will be given for the benefit of the husbands and escorts present.

A voluntary committee consisting of Mrs. Sam Thornmond, Mrs. Harold Chapman and Mrs. James Castano was asked to make plans for the Mother's Day Tea, a traditional affair held every year for the mothers of the members. A letter was read by the President, Mrs. Harold Chapman, from the chapter in Gainesville which stated that through the contributions of the 36 Florida chapters, they were able to purchase a large swing set and three television sets.

Refreshments of punch, cakes, cookies, nuts and mints were served by the hostesses. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Robert Cushing, 1803 Madeira, with Mrs. Robert Berg as hostess. Mrs. Sam Thornmond will have the program.

IN HER NEW YORK APARTMENT, actress Grace Kelly holds her French pooch, "Oliver," who will go along with her to take up his residence in the palace at Monaco after her marriage to Prince Rainier III, on April 18. Shortly after this picture was taken, Mrs. Kelly was presented with a silver medal and citation by the U. S. Treasury Department for her contribution to the Savings Bond program. # THE QUICKSILVER POOL

CHAPTER THIRTY
Lora slept fitfully that night and was early awake Saturday morning. Everything in her mind of the day ahead. It was a day which was likely to be fraught with hurt and resentment and argument. Or if not those things, then a cold, armed truce in which resentment seethed beneath the surface. That rain washed against the windownpanes was a matter which suited the mood of the day.

At breakfast Mother Tyler was cheerful and triumphant. How fine, she said, that they were having a little rain. Not only because the farms on the island needed it, but because the woods were too dry and that always made for a fire hazard. Too often in both spring and fall, fire swept through the beautiful woods, destroying them.

After breakfast Mrs. Tyler said: "I know just what I'd like this morning, if you're free, Lora—a good back rub. If the day clears later and the sun comes out, perhaps I'll sit on the front veranda for a while. When Ambrose comes to spend the garden I want to talk to him. I've some notions of my own on the subject this year."

Lora followed her into the sitting room where she was out of Jenny's earshot.

"I'm sorry, Mother," she said evenly, "but I've made plans for Jenny this morning. After the loss which has been inflicted upon him he needs comforting. I won't have time for your back rub today."

Mrs. Tyler looked plainly shocked at this open defiance. "Don't be ridiculous! You can see that the boy is already over his upset about the dog. He never had one before, and he doesn't need to suffer over not having one now. Besides, it was not I, but his father, who gave the order. You needn't try to take it out on me."

"Would you like Ellie to rub your back?" Lora asked, moving toward the door.

"Come here!" the old lady cried. "I'm not accustomed to having people leave while I am speaking. As I've said before, you've been badly brought up, Lora. You need to learn courtesy to your elders."

Lora returned calmly to stand beside Mrs. Tyler's chair. "I am listening," she said.

"Then do as I ask," Mrs. Tyler snapped. "Jenny and his imaginary sorrow can wait. Surely the comfort of an old woman must come before that of a small boy."

"Not for me," Lora told her quietly. "You are strong and healthy and ought to be up and around, instead of bawling yourself in a wheel chair. Now, if you don't mind, I'll go tell Ellie you want her."

"I do not want Ellie!" Mrs. Tyler raged, and now there was a shrill note in her voice. She enjoyed a fight only so long as she was winning.

But this time Lora went out the door and down the hall, leaving the silver bell ringing indignantly behind her.

Jenny had already climbed the stairs to his room. When she looked in on him he was playing with his turtles, though without any great enthusiasm. Turtles must seem insipid company after a boisterous, affectionate little dog.

"Do you think Hamlin misses me?" he asked as Lora looked in the door.

She nodded her conviction. "I'm sure of it. Just as you miss him. But you may go up and see him again when it stops raining, and in the meantime I hope you'll be patient. If Hamlin comes back this time, let's make sure he'll never be sent away again. Next time Peter might have to take him somewhere else. So let's wait a while, Jenny, until everything can turn out for the best."

He nodded and looked out the window. "It shouldn't ever rain on Saturday."

"Why not?" Lora asked. "A rainy Saturday is just right for doing things you don't do other times."

"What things?" he asked, a faint interest stirring.

"Well, we could explore the attic. You said you'd like to—remember? It would be warm enough up there today, since the sun beat on the roof all day yesterday. I'm going to put on an old dress. Then I'm going to dip into some of those old trunks and see what's there. Your papa said I might. Of course I wish I had a helper—but if you're too busy with your turtles—"

He dropped Lancelot back on his stand pile with a plop and grinned at her.

"You make schemes, don't you, Lorie? I like surprise schemes."

They had brought a half-dozen candles and Jenny set them around in places where they would do the most good and not catch anything on fire. Ham patrolled comely over their heads and gurgled in pipes and gutters, shadows retreated to the corners, or swung themselves up the slanting beams of the roof, hovering there like giant birds. It was not exactly warm in the attic, but at least the cutting chill of winter was gone.

The nearest trunk offered itself and Jenny raised the lid eagerly. There were the usual old clothes, hats, shoes, faded artificial flowers. Jenny found a battered top hat and set it on his head, where it slid down to his ears and made them both laugh.

"Look," Jenny cried, pulling out several copybooks, "these must have been Papa's composition books."

But he was more interested in toys than in schoolbooks, so he dumped them beside Lora and reached into the trunk again. She picked one of them up and leafed through it idly. He had written a neat and decorative hand, that small boy. She glanced at the slanting writing on one page and saw that his description was of a visit to the docks, and she read a few lines, her interest caught. The writer's excitement and response to the color and life, to the odors of spices and tea, came through in his words. What a shame that his mother had discouraged these efforts and had discouraged them. It seemed that there was talent here that stultified effort at a novel which he had read to her. She would take these books downstairs and read them more carefully.

Monroe Boat Bowl Being Developed By F. Beam, E. Cox

What may soon grow to be one of the outstanding outdoor recreation spots in Central Florida is being developed on the outskirts of Sanford by co-owners Fred Beam and Ed Cox. The Monroe Boat Bowl on the Volusia county side of the Sanford-St. Johns River bridge provides 30-acres of shorelands for fishing and boating enthusiasts.

In process of construction is a large, improved boat launching ramp, storage docks, and a gasoline pier extending into the lake for fueling small craft.

Service facilities already in operation at the Monroe Boat Bowl include boat and motor repairs, sales and service on outdoor motors, live bait, soft drinks, confections and beer. The bowl and service store are open seven days a week from dawn 'til dark.

A feature of the Monroe Boat Bowl not found in even much larger marinas is a complete equipped Trailer Court. The owners just recently announced the completion of the modern wash room and laundry, and space is now available for parking over 10 house trailers.

No charge is made at the Boat Bowl for shore fishing or for use of the launching ramp. Boat rental is available at moderate rates, either with or without motors.

20th Masters Golf Tourney Begins Thursday

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—The 20th Masters Golf Tournament, an event the players say is approaching, if not equal to, the National Open in importance, will get under way Thursday with a record entry list and probably a record attendance.

By sundown Monday, 76 players from the carefully selected invitation list had checked in at the Augusta National Golf Club and nine others had sent acceptances. The number of starters is almost certain to break the record of 79.

As for the galleries, there's no telling how many will pay the $7.50 for the final day, especially if a couple of celebrated golfers like Sam Snead and Ben Hogan are battling for the title as they did two year ago. The crowds at the Masters sometimes run as high as 18,000.

They're well-behaved, golf-wise fans too. That's one of the features that makes the Masters unique. Another is that it's played every week, never has to be toughened up for the tournament.

For this reason a couple of seasoned pros, Gene Sarazen and Johnny Palmer, have tabbed the Masters as a better tournament than the Open.

"You never have a fluke winner here, any more than in the British championships that are played on a few real good courses," said Sarazen. "For the Open they take any kind of a course and then send Trent Jones out to build some new tees and traps."

Most of the other players said they'd rather win the Open because of its greater prestige and financial return but agreed that the national tournament has been losing ground in recent years while the Masters has been gaining.

Giants Are Beaten By Pirates 7-3 In Rotary Game

The Rotary League Pirates yesterday downed the Giants 7 to 3 when they massed all their scoring in a big fourth inning.

The Bucs capitalized on Jim Gracy's generosity in that frame when he passed the first four batters to face him and they racked up singles by Getman and Brooks.

The winners had been trailing up to that point because the Giants scored three runs in the second inning on four passes that Tony Getman issued; a single by Larry Busby and Alex McKibbin's fielder's choice.

In the third Wendell Brooks took the mound for the Pirates and in the two innings he pitched, fanned the only six men to face him.

Robbins Believes Disc Jockeys Are Failing To Do Duty

NEW YORK (AP)—Fred Robbins, for many years a popular CBS disc jockey and now the host of CBS radio's Young Men, believes that many of the nation's 8,000 disc jockeys are failing to do their duty.

"There's so much musical junk these days that it's hard to be heard," he said the other day. "Some writers and singers ask, 'Why do a good song? They aren't selling.' With a few exceptions what's selling is rock 'n' roll. And that's because too many disc jockeys are playing the stuff."

There are probably well over 100 million people in America who agree with Robbins. Certainly I do. In the past year I've just about given up listening to disc jockeys. The D.J.'s are okay. It's the awful stuff they're playing that makes me turn them off.

Just so I thought I was getting old, along comes Robbins—who is younger than I and far better trained musician. This guy knows what he's talking about. Listen: "Rock 'n' roll is a perversion of rhythm in blue. It's best in all that matters. Just best and a little bit..."

"A disc jockey has an important role, and too many D.J.'s are failing to live up to it. A disc jockey should be a musical officer. While he has to cater to public taste to a point, he also has a duty to cultivate public taste in music. He's an important part of a subculture. We've had about 20 years to learn to like good music. Good disc jockeys could accomplish it in a few months. The trouble with a lot of them is that they're usually ignorant. They've been assigned to the job of being D.J.'s. They do the best they can, but all a lot of them do is keep playing the top 40. They're expanding us to death."

Commission Is Warned About Use Of Public Funds

TALLAHASSEE (AP)—The State Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission has been warned against buying gifts and providing entertainment from public funds.

A state audit criticized the commission for buying two silver trays which were presented to outgoing acting Gov. Charles B. Johns and incoming Gov. Collins and for purchasing food for a party for new legislators.

"Gifts and entertainment expenses should be made from private contributions and not from state monies," the auditor said.

The trays and food were bought during the term in office of former director B. B. Jones who resigned last April to be state representative from Madison County.

The auditor also reported serious doubt as to whether the commission will be able to collect $6,018 owed it for advertising in its official magazine and $2,894 owed it for salaries by employees who no longer work for the commission.

The magazine, Florida Wildlife, stopped accepting advertisements some time ago and most of the ad bills are overdue.

State Republicans Seeking To Build Up Party Strength

TALLAHASSEE (U.)—Florida Republicans long a negligible factor in state politics, have tasted blood and are embarking on a long range program of building party strength from the ground up.

Spurred by their feat of carrying the state for Eisenhower in 1948 and sending a Republican congressman to Washington for the first time since Reconstruction days, GOP leaders now are seeking recognition on the local office level.

State Republican Chairman G. Harold Alexander of Fort Myers said that at present new voters are told by many county registration supervisors that if they register as Republicans they will have no voice in electing local officials since these are almost always Democrats.

With the exception of a few counties which have shown strong Republican leanings in recent years, Democrats have had the field to themselves in local races with GOP opposition either lacking or purely token in nature.

The Republican drive to qualify local candidates is expected by party leaders not only to put some of those members in office but to boost GOP registration totals.

Alexander says the lack of local candidates "costs us thousands of registrations."

He estimated the GOP has some 200 candidates running on all levels in the state this election year. A spot check of representative counties by The Associated Press shows nearly a hundred per cent increase in Republican candidates for such offices as county commissioner, school board member, sheriff, and the like this year over 1949.

Alexander reported a GOP increase in precinct committee members, too. He said Republicans have precinct workers in some 100 of the state's 1,780 voting precincts this year in comparison with 427 organized precincts in 1949.

"Four or five years from now we'll be able to elect Republicans to almost any office," he predicted.

He pointed out many Democrats cross party lines in the general election even though they are not registered as Republicans and cast a vote in GOP primaries. He cited as proof that many voters of both parties believe a strong two-party system would be good for the state.

At present registered Democrats outnumber registered Republicans in Florida by better than eight to one but in 1952 the ratio was nearly 11 to one. In 1954, the Republicans outtrumped the Democrats not only per cent but also numerically in numbers of new registrants.

Nixon Was Shy, Country Boy

WASHINGTON (U.)—Richard M. Nixon developed from a shy country boy, who played the piano better than he could play football, into a square-jawed, hard-driving man of high political voltage and a future that quite conceivably could include the presidency of the United States.

His rise has few parallels in the nation's political history: Ten years ago he was just one more lieutenant commander in the Navy. Today—after membership in the House and Senate—he is vice president. There is only one upward step remaining. Dick Nixon would like to take it—when the time comes.

At 43—younger than President Eisenhower by 22 years—Nixon is a dark-haired man with restless but rigidly controlled energy. His manner is serious but affable. Few persons have ever seen him lose his temper. He doesn't believe in it—takes too much time, he says. And Nixon is a man who budgets his time to the minute.

It would be hard to name many men in politics who stir up as directly conflicting reactions as Nixon.

His admirers (and Eisenhower is among the most outspoken of them) credit him with integrity, loyalty, political skill, devotion to duty, warm patriotism, a high degree of likability.

His detractors (who include many highly placed Democrats) picture him as a ham actor, an unscrupulous campaigner, an over-ambitious Johnny-come-lately with more cunning than conviction.

One thing nobody questions: This earnest young man in the blue suit—with his nice-looking wife and their two daughters and the much-publicized cocker spaniel—are likely to be in the public eye for years to come.

Nixon's rise has been dramatic—especially for a once reserved youngster from a hardworking Quaker household. His career has been pushed forward by a series of unlikely, sometimes spectacular, single episodes.

There was his unorthodox entry into politics, for instance.

Out in California's old 10th Congressional District, a committee of Republicans was looking for a candidate to run against veteran Democrat Rep. Jerry Voorhis. In Baltimore, still on duty with the Navy, Nixon heard about it. He flew at once to his native Whittier, Calif., applied for the job, got it—and won the election. He was then 33 years old.

In the Senate Nixon, sometimes in association with Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis.), pressed his anti-Communist campaign. He came to the attention of, among others, Dwight D. Eisenhower. When the general was nominated for President in 1952 he made a list of six younger men acceptable to him for second place on the ticket. Nixon's name was first on the list. He got the nomination.

Then, in the ensuing campaign, came the most dramatic episode of all.

It was brought to public notice that as a senator Nixon had accepted a private expense fund from a group of well-to-do Californians. The Democrats quickly blew this into a scandal of major proportions. There were demands that Nixon get off the GOP ticket—and there were plain indications Eisenhower debated whether to push him off.

Nixon's political life was at stake. He saved it in an unprecedented personal appeal by television—an emotional harangue of his finances, an unqualified denial that he ever benefitted personally from any gift unless... WELL, there was checkers, that cocker-spaniel a Texas friend had given the Nixon daughters and:

"I just want to say this right now, that regardless of what they say about it—we're gonna keep it."

Nixon, his wife at his side, was in tears when he finished. The public response, measured by an avalanche of telegrams was overwhelming. And, for all that the Democrats cried "cheap melodrama," it was solidly pro-Nixon. He stayed on the ticket. "You're my boy," Eisenhower told him. And he has been Eisenhower's "boy" ever since.

As vice president he has been seemingly tireless in liaison work between the White House and Capitol Hill. Eisenhower has given him—more than ever since the President's heart attack—duties and responsibilities beyond those entrusted to any previous vice president.

Theodore Blakeslee Devises Pushbuttons

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Reporter
Theodore M. Blakeslee brought the pushbutton age into his home, and now has gone a step beyond.

He devised nearly 200 pushbuttons to turn on music or heat in any room, open the garage door, warm up the car, do other tasks by easy remote control in his Los Angeles home.

But installing and expanding the panels of pushbuttons in many different spots was becoming costly. So he fixed it so he can merely dial automatic jobs over an intercom telephone system. He can dial almost anything from any of seven rooms, or do them by push buttons.

Dialing 74 opens the garage door, and 73 starts the car engine. Dialing 743 does both.

Dialing 29 turns on a radio, and 303 brings the music over a speaker in the kitchen; 204 plays the music in his den. Dialing 1 changes stations.

Partly because of such anti-Nixon sentiment, there were those in the Republican Party who thought Eisenhower might do well to get another running mate for this year's campaign. The President refused to commit himself specifically until the nominating convention—and he said that, in any case, he had left Nixon free to chart his own political future.

Nonetheless, Eisenhower bristled indignantly at suggestions that he should "dump" Nixon. He declared at a news conference that anyone trying to drive a wedge between him and the vice president "has just as much chance as if he tried to drive it between my brother and me."

"I would be happy," said the President in March, "to be on any political ticket in which I was a candidate with Dick Nixon."

No doubt about it—Nixon was still Eisenhower's "boy." And his stock rose further when, with no organized campaigning on his own behalf, he received a spectacular 22,000 write-in votes in the New Hampshire primary election.

Nixon served as ground officer for the combat Air Transport Command at Vella Lavella, Bougainville and elsewhere in the South Pacific, receiving two battle stars and two commendations. He sums up his war experience: "I was there when the bombs were dropping, but I didn't get hit and I didn't hit anyone. All I got was a good case of fungus."

For Blakeslee, it is all a hobby. But it's also a glimpse of the kind of automatic controls you may have in your home of tomorrow.

Blakeslee, an electrical engineer in the Los Angeles department of water and power, began pushbuttoning his home about 15 years ago. Many of the 200 buttons are duplicates, controlling a total of 33 operations.

At the front door is a panel of indicator lights showing whether any lamps are burning when you are going out, whether the back door is locked. Buttons on that panel operate the garage door, start the car, control the radio, turn on various lighting and heating circuits.

A thermostat responding to the sun's heat operates an awning over the kitchen window.

The lawn sprinkler goes into action at 1 a.m. daily. An automatic switch activates a detector to measure moisture in the ground. If it's dry, the sprinkler goes on for five minutes. The same testing and re-sprinkling, if needed, is repeated hourly until 3 a.m. Brief sprinklings avoid waste from water runoff.

Another switch sends power along a heating wire in the groove between the lawn edge and sidewalk. That burns off any shoots of the low-growing clover-dickcweed—that try to reach out over the sidewalk. After five minutes of heat, the sprinkler goes on.

putting out any fire that might be started in loose paper or leaves. "The height of scientific laziness," Blakeslee says.

Life in a pushbutton and dial system home is just fine, says Mrs. Blakeslee. "It saves many steps and energy."

Blakeslee's idea of dialing came from a sideline hobby of telephony. He already had an interconnected system of telephones in each room, separate from the telephone used for outside calls.

He says he cannot estimate the cost of his automatic system. It would be very expensive to duplicate, starting from scratch and using hired labor.

It operates from a six-volt storage battery. Naturally, it has an automatic charger.

MOTH PREVENTATIVE

When hunting for moths, don't forget to look close to baseboards, particularly if you have wall-to-wall carpeting. Preventative measures include a good washing with hot soapy water and a carpet cleaning before the summer heat sets in.

Highway Planning Group Discusses Proposed 17-92 Extension Plan

Patrolmen Urge Folks To 'Walk To Stay Alive'

The Citizens Long Range Highway Planning Committee headed by J. Bralley Odham discussed the causeway extension of French Ave. and 17-92 over Lake Monroe and into Volusia County to connect with 17-92 again immediately south of Orange City at a meeting last night held at Today's Restaurant.

Representatives of both De Bary and Orange City attended the meeting to learn more of the proposed plan to shorten the highway by 4.1 miles and to join the already four-laned and planned four-laned sections of the highway.

J. E. Marshall, president of the Orange City Chamber of Commerce was in Sanford for the meeting.

Those from De Bary, hearing the details and plans for the proposed extension and routing of 17-92 were: Everett Swift, secretary of the De Bary Chamber of Commerce; Harry G. Hunter, chairman of the De Bary Road Committee; Dwight Baker, Road Committee member; Carl O. Lind, Road Committee member; Mrs. Kay Henninger, president of the De Bary Civic Association; and Ed Healy, Fire Chief of the De Bary Volunteer Fire Department.

John Krider, who proposed the highway route, explained that the new four-lane thoroughway would not eliminate the present route through De Bary but would continue to be a State maintained road. He said, "The new route would connect four lanes into Sanford from the north and south and provide six lanes through Sanford."

Unless this route becomes a reality, with Federal assistance in its construction, the Federal limited access highway, planned for the future, would eliminate future expansion of the highway," Krider told the citizens attending the meeting.

Plans now include a public hearing of De Bary citizens to get the details could be made public and everyone informed of its feasibility. Date of the meeting will be announced by De Bary officials.

Senator Douglas Stenstrom proposed "This is the time a 17-92 Highway Association should be formed." He said, "With tourists using US No. One and the Turnpike, 17-92 will not be used as frequently as we would like."

Prior to the discussion of the proposed route for 17-92 the Citizens Long Range Highway Planning Committee proposed that the Seminole County Commissioners be requested that the following projects be included in the 1956-57 State Road Budget for Seminole County: the completion of State Road 46 across Sanford; the widening and resurfacing of Park Ave., Lake Orora Road from the Sanford Naval Auxiliary Air Station to 17-92; the widening of State Road 415; and the request of a new bridge on State Road 415 and to continue 415 into 46 by the most feasible route.

FSL Directors Will Complete League Plans Here Sunday

The FSL President said that the opening date had been set back one week from April 13 to April 20 but the season would end on August 31 as originally planned by the league.

The Sunday meeting will be the final get-together before the season starts, said Krider.

Clubs entering the Florida State League for the 1956 season are: Daytona Beach, Cocon, West Palm Beach, St. Petersburg, Orlando, Gainesville, Leesburg, and Palatka.

Gruenther Declares NATO Is Stronger; Soviet Keeping Pace

Collins Supporters Urged To Attend Public Meet Tonight

A public meeting will be held tonight at 8 o'clock at the Seminole County Court House of all who are interested in supporting LeRoy Collins for Governor.

Dan Wright, recently appointed by Governor LeRoy Collins as his Campaign Director in Seminole County, has stated that every person interested in the Collins for Governor Campaign is invited and urged to attend this important meeting, the first slated for Seminole County.

Presiding over the meeting will be Dan Wright and T. E. Tucker, appointed by Governor Collins as his Deputy Campaign Treasurer. Bob Folkes, state campaign manager for Governor Collins will be present at tonight's meeting to discuss and outline the campaign and how each person can play a part in helping to re-elect Collins as Governor.

Walls Attends Session

Carmage Walls, a stockholder in The Sanford Herald, is now on a tour of foreign countries conducted for newswriters. Mrs. Walls is currently representing The Sanford Herald on the tour. However, Mr. Walls was fortunate in being able to attend a briefing session in Paris by Gen. Alfred Gruenther. We are publishing Carmage Walls' account of the session and his comments evolving about the important event.

"We were fortunate to be able to have a briefing session here in Paris by General Alfred Gruenther, head of NATO (or North Atlantic Treaty Organization). General Gruenther is a small man physically. He is one of the biggest men mentally that I have had the pleasure of meeting.

The dynamic mental drive and capacity of this man are magnificent. As head of the very important NATO he, contrary to some briefings we have had, said everything he said was on the record." Naturally, a newspaperman likes this kind of self confidence.

NATO had some rough going recently when the Greeks stayed away from their posts after the arrest of Archbishop Makarios of Cyprus by the British government. However the Greeks at NATO are again at their posts and there is hope of a settlement of the differences between the NATO allies, Britain, Greece and Turkey.

"When General Eisenhower first came to NATO in 1951 the participating member nations did not have a common concept of what needed to be done." NATO had few air bases. Effort was made to refit air bases. "Now," said General Gruenther, "the participants have a good common concept. The air bases have been built to materially improve our capacity for defense. This building program is still going on. Now this line of defense extends from Norway on the north and circles around to Turkey on a four thousand mile front. We are four times as strong in NATO as we were in 1951." He continued, "But, the Soviet, and its satellites, have kept pace with our progress."

"What are the capabilities of the U.S.S.R. and her satellites?" asked the General and then he proceeded to give the answers.

The Soviets have 175 divisions. Thirty of these are in satellite countries. They are ready to go where sent and are ready to die when ordered without question. This makes for the strongest land army in the world today.

On the air side, in 1951 the Soviets had some 20,000 planes, mostly propeller driven. Now 80 per cent of their planes are modern jets and they still have a minimum force of 30,000. Their short and medium range bombers are very good. As of now they have not caught up with us on long range planes.

The Russians copied one of our planes during the Korean War that was forced down in Chinese territory. They called it the TU. It was a good plane but is now obsolete.

However, this week a new Russian plane, which they have designated the TU 104 arrived in England carrying Serov, head of the Soviet Security police, referred to by the British press as the "head hunter." This plane was a modern one. It traveled at 33,000 feet and arrived from Moscow to London with a flying time of three and three quarters hours.

"The Soviets, obviously, put this plane on world exhibition prematurely," said General Gruenther, "because the cabin was not pressurized. This necessitated the crew and passengers using oxygen on the whole trip."

The Soviet Navy is at a disadvantage because it is bottled up in the Black Sea and the Aegean Sea. The Soviet fleet is not competitive with the West. However, we estimate that the Soviets have (Continued on Page Eight)

Wreckage Of Plane Sighted On Peak

TOKYO (U.S. Air Force)—The U.S. Air Force reported late today wreckage of an aircraft—believed to be a missing C-119 Flying Boxcar with five Americans aboard—had been sighted on a mountain peak of Shikoku island.

There was no word that any survivors had been seen.

The site is 29 miles south of Saijo on Shikoku, and more than 400 miles southwest of Tokyo.

The wreckage was reported 100 feet from the top of the 6,100-foot peak. An attempt will be made tomorrow to reach it with a rescue team dropped by parachute.

The C-119 disappeared early Tuesday on a cargo flight from Takahashi, near Tokyo, to Aomori, on the northern coast of Kyushu, Japan's southernmost island. It was made its last report as it was passing over Takamatsu on Pagan's curving inland sea. The sea is bordered by the main Japanese islands of Honshu, Shikoku and Kyushu.

Names of the missing men have not been announced.

First Federal Open House Is Tomorrow

Tomorrow night between the hours of 7 and 9:30 the First Federal Savings and Loan Assn. will be hosts to all who care to share the "open house" at its office on West First St.

In addition to the opportunity to look over the attractive office, visitors will have a chance to see some of the modern methods now employed in the industry that was started in April, 1941, in Philadelphia.

Favors will be given to adults and their youngsters and refreshments will be served.

The local association was started in 1934 and in serving Seminole County and the surrounding territory for over 20 years has grown to a $6 million organization.

S. F. Dandney and Howard Paville, officers of First Federal now, were among the founders and have been associated with it since inception.

Candidates Keep Campaign Hot In Hunt For Votes

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Florida's gubernatorial candidates kept the campaign trail hot in central and northeast counties today in an intensified hunt for votes.

Farris Bryant and Gov. Collins used the handshake approach to the voter in concentrated efforts in Duval and Polk counties while Fuller Warren and Sumter Lowry stumped with sound trucks.

It was the first concerted campaigning of the week for Collins who has indicated he expects to spend more time away from Tallahassee now on.

Collins flew to Tampa, then moved over to Lakeland to get his handshaking tour under way. Bryant worked Jacksonville.

Bryant drove into Jacksonville for a television speech last night a short time after Lowry pulled out for St. Augustine.

Speaking in the downtown plaza of St. Augustine last night, Lowry said he will not only keep Florida's schools segregated but will strive to modernize the school system, promote the tourist industry, work for more industry and build more roads.

Warren got off another challenge yesterday to Sen. R. B. Gautier of Miami, a Collins supporter, for a debate Saturday night in Miami's Bayfront Park.

In speeches yesterday between Tallahassee and Jacksonville, Bryant pledged his efforts to help certain counties to provide more funds for increased teacher salaries and needed school buildings.

Collins' headquarters announced the governor would make a filmed talk about a dozen television stations Friday night in which he will discuss further his views on the segregation issue.

Atty. Gen. Ervin got his campaign for reelection under way officially with a statement at Tallahassee in which he said he was asking another term on the basis of his record over the past two years.

Circus Opens Without Clown

NEW YORK (U.S. —) The circus opened last night without its most famous clown and with none of the stage, screen and television stars who usually take part in the premiere benefit performance.

A dispute involving the American Guild of Variety Artists kept the sad-faced tramp clown Emmet Kelly away. This time there was no Kelly to get the children chuckling right away by trying to sweep a spotlight beam under a rug.

But Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey's circus was an glittering and bespangled as ever without the glamorous frosting of outside stars who were to perform for the benefit of the Police Athletic League.

Stripped of this hollyhock, the opening night turned out to be just plain circus—more than enough of it.

A cymbal clashed and the lights dimmed to a blue glow, and then spotlights picked out the traditional animal opening act—lions and tigers and bears doing the bidding of a brightly uniformed trainer.

There were acrobats, elephants, jugglers, high wire performers, balancing acts and the classic, ever-graceful trapeze artists.

Pop-eyed children and grown-up-munched pink cotton candy and gasped as the Four Nocks away in sickening circles atop their 70-foot wooden spars.

Mayor Asks Citizens To Aid Cancer Crusade

Mayor F. D. Scott urged Sanford's people today to give their generous support to the 1956 American Cancer Society Crusade. The annual fund-raising and educational campaign was launched last Monday.

In a proclamation citing April as Cancer Control Month, Mayor Scott noted that one-third of the deaths in Sanford and Seminole County last year could have been avoided by earlier diagnosis and adequate treatment.

Sanford's Mayor called for increasing recognition of the Society's leadership in the fight against cancer through its programs of research, education, and service.

The text of the proclamation follows: "Cancer is one of the most critical public health problems of our times. Some 250,000 Americans, many of them in our own state, will die of cancer in 1956, if present rates continue. Moreover, at present rates, one American in every four now living will some day be stricken by that disease."

"But in the last decade there has been marked progress in the diagnosis and treatment of cancer. Although one cancer in four is now being cured, two out of four patients could be saved if they were treated early enough. This would mean saving 20,000 additional lives a year. Approximately that many such patients were saved last year."

Public Is Invited To Auxiliary Easter Dance At Mayfair

The first annual Easter Dance of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Seminole Memorial Hospital will be held tomorrow night at 9 o'clock at the Mayfair Inn.

The general public is invited to attend the dance. Proceeds will be used to purchase much needed equipment for the Seminole Memorial Hospital.

Mrs. F. E. Rountillat, finance chairman of the ticket sales, said today that the Seminole County Junior Chamber of Commerce is cooperating by conducting the ticket sales.

Mrs. Rountillat said that the sale of tickets but the Woman's Auxiliary is expecting an unprecedented turnout for the first annual Easter Dance given by their organization.

Tickets may be purchased at the Joyce booth on Park Ave. or at the door.

Numerous persons offered to give the girl a pool.

Hosiland accepted one from 7-year-old Wendy Hall, whose mother owns a kennel in Betham.

"That poodle was one of a litter of six. Wendy had planned to sell those six dogs to buy a pony.

"The pony can wait, said young Wendy.

9-Year-Old Girl's Generosity Is Matched By Joy

MILTON, Mass. (U.S. —) The generosity of 9-year-old Rosalind Jordan was matched today by her joy.

Rosalind, bedridden with a rheumatic heart, had wanted a French poodle.

She saved her pennies and in four weeks had acquired $4.40 toward the price.

Then, on March 11, while watching a televised Roman Catholic Mass, she learned that four Jesuits perished in a fire that destroyed a Jesuit novitiate at Lenox.

Rosalind sent her savings in a letter to the Rev. George V. McCabe of the Jesuit Shadowbrook Fund. "I want you to have it," the letter said. "I am sorry your house burned down. I hope this money will help you."

Father McCabe wrote back, thanking her for the donation and assuring her every Jesuit in the New England province would pray for her recovery and that she would get the French poodle she wanted so badly.

Numerous persons offered to give the girl a pool.

Hosiland accepted one from 7-year-old Wendy Hall, whose mother owns a kennel in Betham.

"That poodle was one of a litter of six. Wendy had planned to sell those six dogs to buy a pony.

Hammarakjold Will Examine Tension In Arab, Israel

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
UNITED NATIONS—U. N. Secretary General Dag Hammarakjold, armed with unanimous Security Council authority will leave Friday to investigate causes of tension between Israel and the Arab states. He is to report to the Council within a month, proposing steps to restore peace.

WASHINGTON — Middle East tensions and efforts to ease them are reported straining the U. S.—British-French alliance. France is considering supplying Israel with arms to restore the balance of power in the Middle East, a balance upset when Egypt began receiving arms from the Communist bloc. France, renouncing supply Israel will relieve some Arab pressure for independence of Algeria. Britain reportedly has urged a firmer line in the Middle East, but President Eisenhower has denied this. Both France and Britain are disturbed by U. S. reluctance to grant Israel's request to buy American arms.

CAIRO—Newspaper reports say Saudi Arabia has brought the Arab kingdom of Yemen into the military alliance of Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Syria which puts all their military forces under an Egyptian commander. Yemen's joining the pact is seen as a threat to its neighbor, the British pro-Israleite of Aden.
