NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE Parrot Jungle, Eagle Lake top ticket on featherweight Florida election day "We're going to be able to

By WILLLESTER Associated Press Writer

Parrot Jungle got a new home in Miami and voters in the tiny Polk County town of Eagle Lake rejected the election bid of a city council candidate accused of a bungled scheme to overthrow city government. Florida voters had their say in a featherweight schedule of municipal elections scattered across the state Tuesday. Walter Allen Young, who sat in his jail cell on $100,000 bond on election night, got 91 votes to 279 votes for Mayor Marty Kellner of Eagle Lake. Young, 65, is charged in a takeover scheme involving wiretaps, a prostitute and a loaded revolver.

'The election bore out my sentiment all along that the people here are good people who knew the government they had was a good government." Kellner said after his re-election. Kellner, chosen mayor earlier by fellow council members, faced Young in a bid for a council seat. Young and businessman Earl Wayne Rice plotted to plant a wiretap in the city manager's office, hoping to gather dirt on leaders, police say. Young also is accused of trying to hire a prostitute to seduce Kellner. Young purportedly planned to tape the encounter and blackmail the mayor.

The men allegedly recruited a third man to help, a policeman who took the scheme to the police chief.

Young faces numerous charges, including burglary, attempted extortion and soliciting for prostitution. He could not take phone calls in his jail cell

Tuesday night.

Young supposedly sought election to complete a takeover of the town, population 1,923, after a sharp rivalry started last year with the election of two new members to the five-member council. Two other candidates backed by the same crowd as Young lost Tuesday night, city officials said.

"The key to all this was power, power to fire the city manager. fire the police chief," said Kellner, who said he didn't expect the strife on the council to end anytime soon.

In Miami, voters supported a proposal to move Parrot Jungle, 59-year-old landmark attraction, from south Dade County to Watson Island, which is between Miami and Miami Beach. Bern Levine, owner and president, was delighted.

Photos lead to charges against Cub Scout leader

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TALLAHASSEE - A Cub Scout leader faces a hearing next week on charges of lewd behavior after photos of partially nude boys were found in his truck

Police alerted by a photo technician found photos of two boys, both under age 10, in the glove compartment and under the seat of Richard Duane Miller's vehicle.

Miller's arrest Oct. 26 sent a shock wave through scouting circles. Andy Hindman, scout executive at the Suwannee River Area Council of the Boy Scouts of America, said Miller was removed as leader of Cub Scout Pack 68 at Souls Port Pentecostal Church.

Miller had been acreened by the church, Hindman said. "The folks at the church had no reason to think anything like that would happen."

He said Miller had been a registered scout leader since April. Free on $25,000 hond, he is acheduled for a court appear-ance Tuesday. Tallahassee police said they obtained search warrants after the photo lab twice with nude photos of the same boys. He paid by check the second time and the lab technician took down his address

Pictures of the boys were on the same roll as photos of a Cub Scout outing and of Miller in a Cub Scout uniform, said Tallahassee Police Investigator Greg Adams.

The sheriff's department charged Miller with two counts of sexual performance by a child and two counts of lewd and lascivious behavior. Miller admitted taking the pictures but denied fondling the children. Schmidt said.

Police found photos of the boys in Miller's truck but not in his home, said Lt. John Schmidt of the Leon County Sheriff's Department. "Obviously his anticipation and hope was that nobody would see them."

Schmidt said Miller identified the boys in the pictures for police and police questioned the children and their parents, dis-covering that the photos had been taken at the poy's home, without their pagents' knowl-

NY banker gets Kennedy mansion

PALM BEACH - A New York banker says he spent about 05 million to buy the Kennedy mansion in Palm Beach - a steal compared to the salting price.

"We bought the house for $4,934,000 and paid about $60,000 for the furnishings," John K. Castle, chairman and chief executive officer of Castle Harian, a private merchant bank, said Tuesday in a telephone interview from New York. He and his wife, Marianne E. Castle, bought the house last

May. The asking price was $7 million

Castle said he and his wife have been drawing up plans for modernizing the house, which has seen no real renovations since 1928, five years before Joseph Kennedy bought it for $120.000.

The home became a gathering place for the Kennedy clan, including President John F. Kennedy and Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

'Another great Democratic house has fallen to the Republicans," Castle said with a chuckle.

The estate has six bedrooms, a three-car garage, a swimming pool and a tennis court. The house has about 10,000 square feet of living space, Castle said.

Police attribute this broken vault as the work of grave vandals at Pace Jackson Cemetery.

End grave desecration

A cemetery is considered "a final resting place." Such has not been the case at some of the cemeteries in the Sanford area. Some sick-minded individuals have been vandalizing graves, not just in recent times, but for years and years.

Apparently these vandals must believe they can prove their manhood (or womanhood, whatever the case may be), by breaking open a grave and often taking a skull or searching for jewelry which they believe may be contained in the coffin.

We can easily envision what goes on. We see them walking around their neighborhoods carrying a human skull, hoping younger children will admire them for what they have done. They show their friends to prove they are not fearful of ghosts, or worried about

Powell should seek '96 GOP nod

Two hot rumors are rattling around Washington about Colin Powell's plans for Veterans Day on Nov. 11. One has him announcing a campaign for president at his alma mater, the City College of New York. The other has him agreeing to run on a ticket with the GOP's other distinguished war veteran, Sen. Bob Dole.

Of the two, let's hope that the first is true. Powell should run for president in his own right and accept the vice presidential slot only after fighting for the top spot and failing.

Why? Because, as a new CBS/New York Times poll shows, Powell has a good chance to win the presidential nomination, especially if he can draw large numbers of moderates into the GOP primaries.

Second, if he were to accept the veep spot without running for the presidency, he would bring no demonstrated vote-getting power to the ticket and, if elected, could easily be made a purely ceremonial No. 2 by Dole.

And third, his chances of succeeding Dole as the GOP presidential nominee in 2000 or 2004 would be much greater if he had proved his political prowess with a strong run in 1996. Of course, it's still possible that none of the above will happen. Instead, Powell could decide, despite all the expectations he's aroused, that he won't run for anything in 1996, or that he'll run as an Independent. As most pundits agree, a decision not to run would render Powell one of the great political teases of modern times, damage his reputation, and make it difficult for him to run for national office in the future.

Certainly, he could serve as secretary of state, but that's not a route to the presidency. And almost certainly, refusing to run would make him an unattractive choice for the GOP vice presidential nomination in 1996 since he would have demonstrated no po litical strength or talent.

Running as an independent makes some sense because Powell doesn't seem to be ideologically at home in either party. The CBS/New York

Of the two, let's hope that the first is true.

Times poil shows that Powell, as an Independent, would tie President Clinton at 32 percent of the vote, with Dole as the GOP nominee behind at 26 percent.

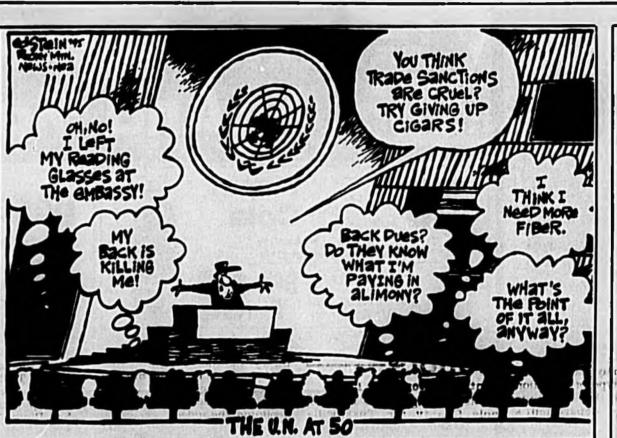

But mounting a winning independent can-didacy is exceedingly difficult financially and logistically. And in any event, Powell has virtually ruled it out.

The poll shows that, as a GOP presidential contender, Powell narrowly beats Dole, 34 to 29 percent, with all the other candidates trailing in single digits. When House Speaker Newt Gin-grich, R-Ga., was put into the running, he got just 10 percent to Dole's 32 percent. Though Powell was not included in that matchup, 14 percent volunteered a preference for him.

Republican conservatives are howing about the possibility that Powell will run, fearing that his election would stymic the 1994 Republican revolution. However, Gingrich's low preference number and other evidence in the poll indicate that Republicans aren't as conservative as the right likes to think.

Forty-nine percent of Republicans, for in-stance, think that the religious right is a divisive influence in the party. So, whether or not Powell wins the 1996 nomination, he ought to run for it. The fight alone will be worthwhile for Powell, the GOP. and the country.

Confidence gap: boys vs. girls

"Don't you wish that movie had been out when we were kids?" my friend Nancy asked as we watched the trailer for "Gold Diggers: The Secret of Bear Mountain." The movie showed two young kids climbing a mountain, searching for treasure and trying to outwit the bad guys - in other words, it was by-the-numbers Disney fare, a generic kids' adventure story.

But there was something about this movie that made it different from any. thing Nancy or I had ever seen: The kids having the adventures were girls. There is a lot of discussion about girls these days. We talk about building Despite the many gains of their confidence, the women's their horizons. Talk movement, many of the old of self-esteem and empowerment might sound a bit dated and remain firm in hokey in these young people's minds. back-to-basics, nofrills times. It also might sound a little condescending to say all girls need is a little confidence. That's not all they need, but it is an essential tool that many seem to lack. A 1991 report by the American Association of University Women found that there was a significant confidence gap between boys and girls, especially in the middle- and highgiris, especially in the middle- and high-school years. Boys were more likely to say they were "pretty good at a lot of things" than giris, while girls were more likely to worry about their appearance than their male counterparts. The study also found that teachers devote more attention to their male students, a result either of direct favorities or simply the fact that boys act out more and require more attention. Troubled by these findings, journalist Peggy Orenstein spent a year observing cighth-grade classes for her book. "Schoolgiris." At one San Francisco middle school, Orenstein watched as a teacher asked her class how their lives would be different if they were a member of the opposite sex. "I'd have to stand around at recess instead

Right now, CrimeLine, which operates throughout Central Florida, is concentrating on the Pace-Jackson Cemetery at 25th Street and Hardy Avenue in Sanford. CrimeLine is looking for volunteers to help get that cemetery back into a place of remembrance, rather than a victim of vandalism.

They are looking for clubs or groups who might be willing to accept some responsibility for maintaining parts of the cemetery.

On another matter, they are also calling for a rigid crackdown on persons who have and are causing this damage to gravesites. CrimeLine is urging anyone with information regarding a person or persons suspected of being involved in grave desecration, to contact them at 1-800-423-8477, the Sanford police at 323-3030, or the Seminole County Sheriff's office at 330-6600. You could be eligible for a reward up to $1,000.

By helping put these grave wreckers behind bars, you may be saving a great deal of misery for some family, maybe even your own.

We don't consider people who desecrate graves as brave, as a grand show of manhood, or anything else. We consider it a mental sickness which is causing some nice people undo pain and suffering.

Let's do what we can to bring this to an end.

Liddy Dole good at rescue work

BOSTON-Liddy Dole is taking family and medical leave again. It happens whenever her husband gets the presidential bug. She quits her tob to take care of him.

This time she's leaving her post as head of the American Red Cross. And while that does-n't mean that Benator Bob's campaign is a natural or manmade disaster t the front-runner could use a blood transfusion.

Liddy Dole has always been good at rescue work. In the language of her husband's han-diers t she's a political asset. When he sounds hard-edged t she softens it. When he lists to the right, she props up the middle. She's one of those wives whose smilling presence sug-dests that no matter what her husband says, he's really a dear.

In 1988 when the distaff side of the Washington power couple left her Cabinet post, Peter Jennings led the evening news by announcing: 'One of the most important women in government has given up her job for a man." This sent shivers up the spine of many a two-worker family.

This time the news is that Liddy is just taking a leave. If she becomes first lady, she intends to go back. She would be the first of the first lacies with a real, live, paying job. In the vernacular of the new economy: "Id be a full-time first lady with a full-time job at the Red Cross."

The way I figure it, only a brain surgeon could leave the White House in the morning. drive to work, open up a cranium or two and come home for dinner, without incurring pub-lic criticism. Nobody would trash the clothes she wore-surgical green. Nobody would criti-cize her hairdo-under one of those little paper hata. She could even make her beeper go off in the middle of some truly boring state dinner.

Moreover, brain surgery is important, do-good, and utterly apolitical work. Unless she scrambles the inside of a world leader's dome, abe's home free.

By now Hillary Clinton has just about run through the Rolodex of other options. And on the power scale, she's the mean for the new crop of candidate spouses-whom we may

For all the working-woman bashing of the 1992 Republican convention, we now have a number of Republican candidates whose wives seem more like Hillary than Mamie

Phil Gramm may say: "I don't think my wife ees herself as some kind of surrogate president." But Wendy is an economist and, former chair of the U.S. Commodity Putures Trading Comm

Lamar Alexander may insist his wife has no plans to be "co-president." But Honey has served on the board of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting and done consulting.

Shelley Buchanan, who once shocked Pat by saying she'd rather be called "Ms." than

'Mrs., has presided over his one-man corporation. And Joan Specter is both the wife of Sen. Arien Specter and a Philadelphia City Council member in the last week of a tough re-election campaign.

As for Bob and Liddy, the beat goes on. Bob recently told a cheering luncheon of chiroprac-tors that "If I'm elected, Elizabeth will not be in charge of health care policy. " Liddy, however, is a two-time Cabinet member who once wrote that "I wasn't going to spend the whole campaign answering reporters' questions with a demure 'I don't do issues'. ... The genie couldn't be put back in the bottle."

Nor can the woman be put back in her place, even if Bob Dornan's wife once said that she would call her autobiography, "Second Banana. " This is an era of two-worker families when we give more than lip service to partnership marriages. But we're still confused about the first ladyship.

Now, as a first lady watcher who's seen the travails of Jackie, Lady Bird, Pat, Betty, Rosalynn, Nancy. Barbara and Hillary, I have long believed that there's only one way a woman of the '90s is going to solve the first lady job thing. She's going to have to try brain sungery. No, I don't mean having a lobotomy. I mean becoming a brain surgeon.

In America we want the president to be both a beloved king and a powerful prime minister So on Inauguration Day, we settle for him being prime minister and expect her to be queen. He gets a job and she gets a role. We ask him to be a leader and her to be a role model-even the virtuous repository of all our ambivalent attitudes toward women, work and DOWC

fin the laguage of her husband's handlers, she's a political asset.

While Hillary Clinton struggles with the job description and real life there are a lot of folks who want the first lady to be a political. Or as the publishers of George magazine might put it' t 'post-partisan." Maybe the only way to resolve this is to let the president's spouse get outside work.

The Red Cross is about as safe as it gets. Despite an occasional flap, it doesn't offer much conflict of interest. It isn't pillow talk. It isn't political talk.

On the other hand, it also isn't brain surgery.

of getting to play basketball," said a boy. "I could stay out later," said a girl.

"I'd have to help my mom cook," said a boy.

"I'd get to play more sports," said a girl. Despite the many gains of the women's movement, many of the old stereotypes remain firm in young people's minds. "By remain firm in young people's minds. "By sixth grade." writes Orenstein. "It is clear that both girls and boys have learned to equate maleness with opportunity and femininity with constraint."

Now the AAUW has published a new study that outlines strategies for bridging the confidence gap. The study is based on programs that have worked for girls, and it emphasizes techniques to which girls are particularly receptive. For example, teachers noticed that girls tend to be more intereste in using computers to achieve a particular goal, rather than to play a game. They also found that girls tended to prefer cooperative problem-solving, while boys were more tikely to enjoy problems based on competition, apeed and repetition.

That's not to say that their findings will suit all girls or are uncless in the education of hove. Indeed, one of the most interesting boys. Indeed, one of the most interesting points in the study is the effectiveness of the role of interested adults. In one study of American Indian girls and women, those who stayed in school said a caring adult, mentor or role model was the most important factor in their decision. Bimilarly, teachers in a flan Diego writing project found that student writing improved after teachers visited stu-dents' homen and altered their assignments dents' homes and altered their assignments to the students' daily lives.

Senators seek hearings before floor vote on late-term abortions

By DIANE DUSTON Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - Senators opposed to rushing to a vote against certain late-term abortions want hearings first to get more information about the controversial procedure.

The House has already passed the ban on "partial birth abortions." but senators agreed to vote today on whether to send it to the Judiciary Committee for review.

Proponents of the bill decried the delay.

"We could have hearings until hell freezes over. It's not going to change anything." said chief sponsor Sen. Bob Smith, R.N.H. Delaying this accomplishes nothing except delay."

"We've had hearings on the House side," said Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan. "It's not that complicated."

Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., said, however, that the Senate's 46 Democrats were united in favor of sending first step toward an outright ban the bill to committee. What's more, the motion to do so was being offered by Republican Sen. Arien Specter of Pennsylvania. President Clinton opposes the legislation.

It would impose a prison term of two years and fines on any doctor who "partially delivers the living fetus before killing the fetus and completing the delivery.

The doctor also would be liable for civil damages if sued by the woman's family. The bill pro-vides, however, that during court proceedings an acceptable defense would be that the procedure was necessary to save the mother's life.

The measure wouldn't apply to abortions performed by Caesarean section or hysterectomy or when the fetus dies before removal through the birth canal.

The House's 288-139 vote on Nov. 1 marked the first time since the Supreme Court's 1973 Roe vs. Wade abortion ruling that Congress has moved to prohibit a specific abortion procedure.

Boxer and others say the procedure is rare, used only when the life of the mother is in grave danger.

However, in a late secondtrimester or third-trimester abortion, the fetus is so large that it cannot always be removed vaginally without collapsing the skull. That is accomplished by sucking out the brains, said Smith, who dis-played drawings of the procedure.

Democrats have reason to cheer

UNDATED - After two years on the defensive. Democrats had reason to cheer after fending off Republican bids to claim the Kentucky governorship and legislatures in Virginia and Maine. The best news for the GOP was in Mississippi, where Gov. Kirk Fordice easily won a second term.

Tucsday's ballots included dozens of mayoral contests, including a mudslinging brawl in San Francisco that pitted incumbent Frank Jordan against former California Assembly Speaker Willie Brown and prominent lesbian activist Roberta Achtenberg.

With more than half the precincts reporting, Jordan, a former police chief, and Brown were in a dead heat with both receiving about 34 percent of the vote. Achtenbery, a former federal housing official, conceded the race early today and endorsed Brown. With no candidate expected to get more than 50 percent of the vote, a December runoff was almost a certainty.

Incumbents who had a far easier time winning re-election included Democrats Kurt Schmoke in Baltimore and Edward Rendell in Philadelphia, and Bob Lanier in Houston's nonpartisan contest.

Tornado rips through Georgia

ALBANY, Ga. - A tornado tossed cars, snapped trees and ripped the roof off a grocery store, leaving dozens of people injured in a neighborhood still rebuilding from last year's flooding.

"This is what you call the double whammy - when you get rebuilt and then get hit again," said Maj. Mike Turner, who headed a police command center after the tornado struck Tuesday afternoon.

Tornadoes also raked South Carolina, where 22 people were injured, including a 15-year-old Williamsburg County girl trapped inside a truck by a wind-tossed mobile home.

She was in serious condition with head injuries. The other people were treated for their injuries and released.

The Georgia twister injured at least 30 people - two of them scriously - and caused millions of dollars in damage. Georgia Gov. Zell Miller declared a state of emergency in Albany.

Government on crash diet

WASHINGTON - Republicans in Congress are advancing temporary spending and borrowing bills designed to put the government on a crash diet until President Clinton signs legislation balancing the budget in seven years.

House Republicans were preparing to act today on a stopgap spending bill that would keep the government running until Dec. 1. But many programs would be financed at only 60 percent of the spending level provided in fiscal year 1995, which ended Sept. 30. The Senate was expected to take up a similar bill Monday.

Separately, the House Ways and Means Committee overrode unanimous Democratic objections Tuesday and approved. 21-13, legislation extending the government's ability to borrow until Dec. 12.

It would raise the government's $4.9 trillion debt limit by 967 billion. Otherwise the government's ability to borrow is likely to run out Nov. 15, risking an unprecedented default that most economists believe would batter financial markets and push interest rates up.

The relentless sun had already killed his brother-in-law.

The little energy Wages had left was boosted by the sight of a rescue helicopter, and he was able to stand and let out a faint cry of joy. "I'll never forget that man running toward me in the gully with a jug of water, yelling "Poquito, poquito!" like, don't drink too much." Wages said tearfully Tuesday. "Yes, he was a sight," he said as he waited with his wife and daughter at

Phoenix's Sky Harbor Airport for a plane home to Okiahoma City. Wages cursed the desolation of El Pinacate, a volcano park that had been just another leisurely destination for him and Robert Harrison on one of their annual excursions.

Their visit turned tragic Oct. 22 after they stopped for a break about 30 miles inside the park: Their Jeep wouldn't start. Wages, a 61-year-old businessman, and Harrison, 73, a retired engineer with Parkinson's disease, didn't have a map. They relied on Harrison's past visits to the park, about 60 miles southwest of Yuma, and gut instinct as they made their way through the desert in search of help. They had a gallon of water in an ice chest.

"We should not have gone forward." Wages recalled a day after being released from the hospital. "After walking those first couple of hours, we should have returned to the (Jeep), where we had more ice and water. Every day we would realize the stupid things we had pulled off the day before, and then we got to the point of no return."

Harrison, from Rye, Colo., died Oct. 27.

When Wages was rescued three days later by the Mexican Park Service - which arrived in a helicopter - only his heart and brain were fully functioning. Doctors later told him his system had nearly shut down from dehydration.

He recounted the eight-day ordeal during which he cut open cactuses for nourishment. A lack of rain the past eight months had left them mostly dry. He used hair spray to start fires.

"We'were looking for protection from the elements." Wages said. "There wasn't a cloud in the sky, and the heat — it was the heat that killed ligh. We tried to stay close to anything that was green. "I couldn't even find a snake to eat. I tried to catch a lizard, but the damn things were too fast," he said.

During the day the pair found some shelter, laying with their heads under the meager shade of bushes and praying for help. "We talked about living, trying to stay alive." Wages said.

At night, Wages kept his camera at the ready to flash planes or helicopters for help.

After five days of no food and little water, Harrison died. In the three days and nights that followed. Wages said he never strayed more than 15 feet from his brother-in-law's body.

Police believe the bodies were those of 13-year-old Maryling Flores and 14-year-old Christian Davila, missing since Sunday. Pending autopsies, the bodies were not positively identified. The teen-agers appeared to have taken their own lives, like Romeo and Juliet in Shakespeare's play about forbidden love, said Sweetwater police detective Ramon Quintero. Both left behind autoide notes. behind suicide notes.

"We don't suspect any foul play." Quintero said. "The mother of the girl did not want the boy seeing her daughter. It is very sad.'

Family members told police the teens - both honor students at Ruben Dario middle school in northwest Dade County - ran away from their homes early Sunday morning, carrying little money and no extra clothes.

"I can't go on living. I've lost my Maryling. That's something that hurts me very deep inside in my heart," Christian wrote in his note to his family.

"I'm not leaving you. I'm escaping from the realm of reality into the darkness of the unknown. Nothing can stop me now. I'm taking my life because without Maryling, there is no life." Police held the girl's notebook and a note she left on her family's kitchen counter as evidence, but would not release their contents.

The children probably drowned themselves, according to Quintero, a friend of the girl's family. Neither knew how to swim.

"Farewell to all." Christian wrote. "And as the immortal Beethoven once said: 'Applaud friends, the comedy is over."

Disease cutting into turkey stock

RALEIGH, N.C. - A disease is killing 1,000 turkeys a day on some farms in North Carolina, the nation's leading producer of the birds.

The illness may be contributing to a 5-cent a pound price increase compared with last fall, though the impact on consumers wasn't clear because turkeys are commonly sold below cost around Thankagiving. Mostly younger birds get the sickness; they die within days.

"I've been studying turkey diseases for 25 years and this is by far the most serious disease I've come across," said John Barnes, a researcher at the North Carolina State University College of Veterinary Medicine.

Exact numbers were not available, but some farmers were losing 1,000 birds a day, said Willie Featherstone, director of the Union County Cooperative Extension Service. The disease, called "spiking mortality," is transmitted through feces and direct contact, and can also be spread by flies and beetles. The illness was discovered in 1991 and has since spread to Virginia, Georgia, Indiana and New York. Turkeys are a $519 million-syear industry for the state. Nationwide, the industry has suffered other setbacks this year: More than 2 million birds died in the summer's heat wave.

Tight security surrounds release of Beatles

Extra security is stationed sutside the Capitol Records compact disc plant in Jackson-ville. Fla., where millions of copies of the first new Beatles music in 25 years are being produced.

U.S. preschoolers have health nsurance gaps

By DRENDA C. COLEMAN AP Medical Writer

CHICAGO - Almost onefourth of the children in the United States lack health insurance coverage for significant periods during their first three years, endangering their health care, a federally funded study found.

Children who don't have insurance are less likely to see a doctor when they're sick and more likely to require hospitalization when seen in an emergency room, authors said.

Coverage gaps threaten even healthy children by discouraging preventive care such as immunizations, said authors led by Michael D. Kogan, an epidemiologist with the National Center for Health Statistics, part of the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Impending Medicaid cuts will further crode coverage for young children - more of whom are poor than any other age group, a co-author said.

"I don't think it's going to get better. I think it's going to get worse,'' said Martha A. Teitelbaum, a senior health analyst for the Children's Defense Fund, a children's advocacy group based in Washington, D.C.

The 1991 study, involving 8,129 children, found that 22.0 percent went without health insurance for at least a month during their first three years. and nearly 60 percent of those children had gaps of six months

Lewisohn, who's writing the liner notes for all three antholo-gy CDs, and Capitol executives won't discuss the material on the succeeding discs. But Lewisohn suggests the material improves simply because the Beatles spent much more time in the studio.

"There is somewhat of a paucity of material during the carly years," he said. "Once they got into working in the studio, at Abbey Road, the material got a lot more interesting. I think this is an interesting first double CD. I think the other two doubles will be better."

The second "new" Beatles song, "Real Love," is another Lennon recording left behind and sweetened by the others. It's actually been released before: on a soundtrack to the movie "Imagine." The Beatles use a slightly different version, according to the CD newsletter, lce.

An attempt at cobbling together a third "new" song recorded by Gerry and the from Lennon's archives re-

"Gape in insurance coverage create a more chaotic environ-ment in which families are more hesitant to seek out and main-tain a regular source of primary care," said Dr. Stephen Berman of the University of Colorado Health Sciences Center in Den-Health Sciences Center in Den-ver, in an editorial accompanying the study.

Also, doctors are reluctant to take on youngsters who lose insurance or often change health plana, said Berman, who was not involved in the study.

From 1991 to 1993, over 3 million children lost private cov-crage, Berman said. Economic changes have shifted jobs away from higher-paying manufactur-ers with good health benefits to the lower-paying service sector with poorer benefits, he said.

A separate editorial agreed that Medicaid cuts are likely to harm youngsters, who have not fared well in federal or state budget battles. The Republican-sponsored

Assassin's family apologizes

JERUSALEM - The man in charge of guarding Israeli leaders and two top police officers may lose their jobs today when the Cabinet meets to discuss security lapses surrounding the assassination of Yitzhak Rabin.

A preliminary report by the Shin Bet internal security service found there were too few bodyguards surrounding Rabin just before he was shot at a peace rally in Tel Aviv, and that unauthorized people were allowed to get too close, security sources said.

The report also suggested Rabin's bodyguards, who work under the Shin Bet, might have been indoctrinated to focus on potential Arab assailants, and thus were inadequately prepared for the possibility of attacks by Jewish extremists.

Police are investigating whether the confessed assassin, Yigal Amir, was part of a right-wing conspiracy. Police believe his brother, Hagai Amir, is a member of the outlawed anti-Arab group Kahane Chai.

Although Yigal Amir has shown no remorse, calling Rabin an enemy of Israel for turning over land to the PLO, his family begged forgiveness from Rabin's widow and all Israelis.

'A great calamity has befallen us and the people of Israel with the assassination of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, may his memory by blenaed, by our son." the family wrote in a letter to Leah Rabin that was read early today on Israel Radio.

Russian military role in Yugoslavia

BRUSSELS, Belgium - Defense Secretary William Perry and Russian Defense Minister Pavel Grachev are making what could be a final effort to break an impasse over Russia's military role in postwar Bosnia.

The United States, its European allies and Russia itself all want Russian forces to help keep peace in Bosnia along with 60,000 NATO troops, many of which are already trained and ready to move in as soon as the warring factions in the former Yugoslav republic make peace.

But NATO members want Russian ground forces to be under the same command as all other troops, while Russia has so far resisted any deployment under the control of the Western alliance.

Russia has only agreed to send in a force of about 2,000 to do such things as build roads, repair bridges and other such work alongside similar American and possibly other forces working outside the NATO structure.

Final details of that deployment also were being worked out today among U.S. and Russian officials accompanying Perry and Grachev at NATO headquarters. And efforts were being made to get other countries to join the non-NATO operation.

CARACAS, Venezuela - A judge was caught with $882 in bribe money stuffed in her underwear, authorities said Tuesday.

She had stuffed the money inside her pantics, he said. Twenty officials witnessed the search at police headquarters.

In a similar case in February, authorities caught a judge suspected of adjepting $11,700 in bribes as she threw some of it out the window of her house.

Mystery leader remains in shadows

By PAUL ALEXANDER Associated Press Writer

SEOUL, South Korea - About once a month, North Korean leader Kim Jong II emerges from the halls of power, providing a fleeting glimpse of the reclusive man in charge of a reclusive country.

Immediately, analysts of the hardline communist North begin poring over every nuance for clues into the policies, hierarchy and inner workings of a society that has taken old Soviet-style secrecy to an extreme.

But the video footage of Kim never includes his high-pitched voice, leading some to speculate that North Korea fears his squeaky tone won't command respect.

Ordinary South Koreans now have the chance to decide for themselves. A South Korean magazine, the Monthly Chosun, gave away 200,000 cassette tapes of Kim talking with a recent issue, tapes that had been in government hands for a decade but never heard publicly.

Aside from what Kim says about his country - he talks about the shortcomings of the North's policy of self-reliance, among other things - the tapes have attracted interest for what they say about Kim.

tapes concluded the 53-year-old hairstyle; that he faces opposileader is an extrovert, a poor listener and a fast talker who dominates conversations and Jumps from topic to topic.

His almost-constant highpitched tone could reflect a man who is easily excited or is very energetic, and his word use is more commonly associated with people with little education, said Lee Kun-hu, a psychology professor at the Medical College of Ewha Women's University, who studied the tape with the help of four researchers on sociology and psychology.

Facts about Kim are appallingly sparse:

He is the son and designated heir to his father, longtime leader Kim II Sung, who died in July 1994. He holds North Korea's top military title and has never traveled outside the communist world.

The rest is extrapolation or pure rumor.

He may have married up to three times. There's no word on children.

There are reports that Kim has been seriously ill; that he drinks heavily and brings in blonde foreign women for trysts; that he has more than a dozen residences and a fleet of cars; that he is so sensitive about his height - about 5-foot-3 - that A psychological analysis of the he wears lifts and a bouffant

Some analysts speculate that Kim's image as arrogant, testy, ambitious, crude and temperamental could stem from a childhood in which he lost his mother around age 7 and was raised in the shadow of the personality cult that revered his father as a near-god.

The North is trying to build the same type of cult around the younger Kim, touting him as a genius in all fields while, paradoxically, he stays out of

His only public address has been a one-line speech when he was named supreme military commander four years ago.

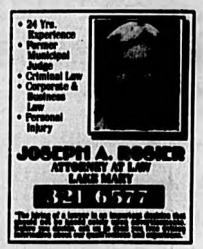

The biggest question now and the one that carries the most impact for the rest of the world is why he has yet to take his father's top two titles, even though analysts say he appears to be firmly in charge of a country suspected of nuclear weapons development.

His speech to his father's funeral was given by someone else. Most of his appearances since then have been at military facilities, a reflection of the army's widespread influence and Kim's need to keep it happy.

But he has not spoken to any large gatherings and has not shown up at some major events at all. He did not make the New Year's Day radio speech that his father traditionally used to outline the year's goals.

The nearly one-hour audio tape released by the magazine consists of excerpts of alleged conversations between Kim, South Korean actress Choi Un--hee and her film director husband, Shin Sang-ok.

QUITO, Ecuador -Ecuadoreans once liked to describe their small oil-exporting nation, which is wedged between Peru and Colombia, as an "an island of tranquility" in a sea of regional turbulence.

But a costly border war and persisting political and economic turmoil is making them increasingly pessimistic about their country's future. With less than a year to go in his term, President Sixto Duran-Ballen is facing mounting problems, womened by daily power rationing, and fears of a coup.

Compounding the sitution is that the government of this Andcan nation of 10 million people has been confronting street demonstrations led by labor unions and leftist student groups.

Industrialists and business people - who normally would be expected to support the pro-free market administration - have added their voices to the discontent over the govern-ment's failure to resolve the on-going energy crisis that threatens their livelihoods.

"If necessary, we Ecuadoreans must take to the streets in protest," said Luis Trujillo, president of the Chamber of Commerce in Guayaquil, Ecuador's second-most important city. "There's desperation. Many small industries are already closing or letting people go because of the lack of electricity," added exporter Juan Jose Pons.

Business leader Joyce de Ginatta announced she and other business people would begin a hunger strike if Congress does not approve a new law on electrification by Nov. 20.

Ecuadoreans have been enduring blackouts for up to nine hours a day since August due to rationing caused by a 50 percent reduction in the capacity of the country's main hydroelectric generating station in Paute. which provides two-thirds of Ecuador's electricity.

The station is operating below normal because of a drought that is not expected to case before the end of the year. in stitutions.

and in some

Deforestation in the watershed of the Paute River has reduced rainfall and contributed to keeping the dam under normal levels for the last several years.

The rationing comes on top of a series of problems that have battered the Duran-Ballen government in recent months, among them the flight of former Vice President Alberto Dahik. who escaped to Costa Rica in October when he was ordered arrested on corruption charges.

Duran-Ballen, whose four-year term ends in August 1996, is engaged in a protracted battle with the opposition-controlled Congress. Both sides accuse the other of being responsible for the country's ills.

Cesar Verduga, former interior ministry and now a newspaper columnist, said there exists "a deep institutional crisis whose effects are not only felt socially and morally, but also economically.

The government was forced to lower its economic goals for the year as a result of Ecuador's border war with Peru earlier this year. It lowered its expected economic growth for 1995 from 4 percent to 3.1 percent, and adjusted its projected inflation from 15 percent to 21 percent.

Dahik's replacement, new Vice President Eduardo Pena Trivino, said the affects of the war with Peru, the energy crisis and the political instability on the country's economy were "disastrous.

Angry over the high cost of living, students in recent weeks have clashed with police in street demonstrations that have left one student dead. Their leaders promise to escalate the demonstrations. Labor unions are expected to do the same.

Adding to this political and social instability, rumors of a military coup have repeatedly surfaced over the last six months, and were confirmed recently by the head of the air force. Lt. Gen. Fernando Martines.

"Some voices are calling for intervention by the armed forces." Martinez said. But these calls were ignored, he said, because the armed forces' mission "is to back democratic

When I think of "fall" I think of New England, and it's not just because I live here. Even when I resided on the West Coast, my thoughts revolved around all those colorful leaves falling back East, and my olfactory memory recalled the acrid-sweet scent of wood smoke and the sweet-sweet scent of a baking apple pie. My sister, who lives in southern California, feels nostalgic about fall, too, and calls around this time each year, asking wistfully for a full foliage report. So when I think "fall dessert" I think of New Englandy goodies: all those crisps and crumbles and pies and puddings that are as tempting in real life as they are in magazine pictures. I think of my mom's apple crisp, which has a melty, stick-to-your-teeth crust that my kids have been known to inhale, leaving the underlying apples un-touched. I think of spiced pumpkins and pear tarts and, well, look below and you'll see exactly what I'm thinking. Now here are two of my favorite fall desserts. We press cider each fall, and

Now here are two of my lavorite hall desserts. We press cider each fall, and I invariably make these two treats after pressing. You need REAL cider, the fresh, needs-to-be-refrigerated-un-pasteurized kind, not the glorified apple juice sold in bottles. The first dessert is Cider Stush (you may call it "Apple Cider Granite" if you are feel-ing fancy) and all it requires you to do is put cider into your ice-cream maker and churn until it is frozen. You may add a few tablespoons of Calvados if you like, but plain is just fine, espe-cially if you are serving it to children. The second cider dessert I make is Gider Syrup. This requires boiling a gallon of cider for 4 to 6 hours, until it becomes syrup. Mine usually boils past syrup to jelly, but that's OK. I pack it into sterilized jars, and give it a 3-minute boiling water bath. It's great on toast, FABULOUS to spread on the bottom crust of an apple or pear ple, and can crust of an apple or pear pie, and can be made into cider syrup by heating with a bit of water (or more cider). Serve it warm over ice cream. Yum. A gallon of cider makes a pint of jelly.

The recipes here are my own, and are pretty simple, with the exception of the Harvest Pumpkin Ice Cream, which comes from Marcelle Desaulniers' "Desserts to Die For" (Simon & Schuster, 1995). I feel dutybound to call attention to this amazing book, which gives step-by-step instructions for some of the most elaborate desserts I have ever encountered. For those who find pumpkin ice cream too prosaic, you are free to at-tempt the "Autumnal Pastiche," a Reising sorbet served on a bed of leaf-shaped cookies with warm cinnamon Anglaise and a garnish of hazelnuts and currants. Now doesn't apple crisp sound yummy?

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

When a child is subjected to peer abuse, it is not fair to blame his or her social skills. Courtesy is a basic right. Children are entitled to courteous and respectful treatment. We do not lose our entitlement to decent treatment because of social clumsiness. Children who engage in peer abuse are the ones lacking in good social skills. They show a basic incivility and disrespect for others. A hostile atmosphere interferes with learning. It is the responsibility of educators to create an accepting and respectful environment so that all children are able to learn. Children who behave abusively should receive counseling, and teachers and principals must make it clear that such behavior will not be tolerated. Children who continue to abuse their classmates should be suspended. No one has the right to interfere with the education of another.

Wars, intrigue, history found in houses of St. Augustine

By ROH WORD Associated Press Writer

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. - In the beach house where novelist Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings wrote "Cross Creek" and entertained literary icons Robert Frost, Dylan Thomas and Ernest Hemingway, a new book has been born, filled with wars, intrigue and history. The subject? "The Houses of St. Augustine."

St. Augustine author and historian David Nolan, artist Jean Ellen Fitzpatrick and photographer Ken Barrett Jr. worked on the new book at Ms. Rawlings' former beach home, Crawl-ings-by-the Sea, at nearby Crescent Beach.

Nolan's book even contains a whiff of scandal since many of St. Augustine's seemingly historic homes are reconstructions to impress tourists in a city marketed as the nation's oldest.

"If Marjorie Rawlings' spirit was around, we took advantage of it," says Nolan, former president of the Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings Society.

The story of Rawlings' home, where she lived with her husband Norton Baskin, and other tales about houses that span St. Augustine's four centuries of wars, rail barons, and scalawags are told in the richly illustrated volume. Much like Ms. Rawlings' work. Nolan weaves a tapestry of beauty and grandeur. linking the city's most notable homes with the characters who lived in and visited St. Augustine.

Will Rogers talked about his visit to St. Augustine in a 1926 newspaper column. "I ooze tradition," he quipped.

The book grew out of Nolan's work surveying old buildings for the Historic St. Augustine Preservation Board from 1978 to 1980. Four pairs of shoes and 2,500 buildings later, the survey was completed.

But the freelance writer, who is interested in history and architecture, wasn't satisfied with a catalogue of old buildings. He wanted to know more about the homes and the stories of the people who lived in them. "This book is the result of a 20-year love affair with St. Augustine buildings," Nolan says. On a walk through St. Augustine, Nolan points out various types of architecture from Spanish to British to Victorian.

"Al Capone slept there," Nolan said, stopping outside a house on St. George street. The book points out two homes where Dr. Martin Luther King stayed during civil rights demonstrations in 1964.

"I'm a sucker. Anyone can stop me in the street and tell me something," said Nolan, who backs up what he has heard with hours of research, up what he has read 10,000 pages of govern-ment documents on St. Augustine. A controversy continuing today deals with the oldest house in St. Augustine. As Nolan says, "old is gold" in a city that thrives on tourists attracted by its history.

At one time, three houses claimed to be the oldest house in the oldest U.S. city.

and former mayor of St. Augustine, was present at the death of Osceola in South Carolina. He removed the head of the Indian leader and brought it back with him to St. Augustine, placing it on his children's bedstead at night when they misbehaved.

St. Augustine's ancient history can be divided into three parts: First Spanish (1565-1763), the British (1764-1784), and Second Spanish (1784-1821).

Only 10 buildings survive from the First Spanish Period and only the Castillo predates 1700.

A significant project in the First Spanish Period was Fort Mose in 1738 - the first legally sanctioned community of former black slaves in the country.

The greatest remnant of the British Period was not the buildings, but the Minorcans, who came to St. Augustine in 1777 after being indentured laborers for an indigo plantation at New Smyrna Beach.

Most of the city's ancient buildings date from the Second Spanish Period, but only about two dozen of those remain.

Many of the buildings which look historic are the result of 20th century remodeling and reconstruction programs, inspired by Colonial Williamsburg. "A lot of buildings in town try to make you think they are older than they are," Nolan says.

After the periods of Spanish and British occupation came the Henry Flagler era, when the Standard Oil magnate developed huge hotels, a church and his mansion in the ancient city. They were followed by 20th century blockhouses and a boom in homes.

One of the problems confronting Nolan was which homes to put in the book. "A let of my favorite places got left out," says Nolan.

And some of the homes featured are gone forever -- bulldozed in the name of progress.

"It hurts so much when you lose them." he says. "I hope that everyone will have the politeness of a junkyard dog the next time someone suggests demolishing yet another of our old buildings for a parking lot, gas station, or fast-food joint."

Ring Lardner, in his 1917 story "Guilible's Travels," has a character talking about his visit to St. Augustine: "First, we went to St. George Street and visited the oldest house in the United States. Then we went to Hospital Street and seen the oldest house in the United States. Then we turned down St. Francis Street and inspected the oldest house in the United States. Then we turned down St. Francis Street and inspected the oldest house in the United States." The house now holding the oldest designation is the one on St. Francis Street, built in the 1720s. But the oldest structure in town is the imposing Castillo de San Marco, a Spanish fort completed in 1606. Molan spends hours reading microfilm, pouring over old maps and city directories. Some of the stories in the book are not related to the houses, but are intended to bring the work to life and give it historical context, he says. The book, for example, tells the story of the 1837 capture of Seminole leader Oscoola near St. Augustine. # Flu: Protecting yourself this winter table in the winter as are chilly, short days. It is caused by various strains of virus and, for the most part, is a self-limited illness marked by fever, achiness and malaise. However, the flu can be dangerous to certain people, chiefly the elderly, those with chronic illnesses, and patients with compromised immune systems, such as caused by AIDS. Flu can also be a problem for health-care workers, who have added exposure to patients with flu during the winter season.

In susceptible individuals, influenza can lead to pneumonia and other serious complications. The Centers for Disease Control estimate that an average of 20,000 people in the United States die from influenza-related illnesses each year. (The flu season lasts from December through March.)

Therefore, it is no surprise that the CDC recommends flu shots for adults, especially those over 65. (People who are allergic to eggs should not receive the shots.) Such injections, far from causing flu, exert a protective effect and have been shown to reduce significantly the incidence of the disease, its severity and its complications. This year's flu vaccine contains three strains of virus: A/Johannesburg, A/Texas and B/Beijing. These strains have been specially treated so that they cannot cause infection. Rather, they stimulate the immune system to manufacture antibody proteins that kill the natural influenza viruses when a person comes in contact with the "real" infection.

It takes approximately a month for the flu shot to become effective; immunity lasts about five months. Consequently, the CDC advises that flu shots be given in late October/early No-vember to anticipate the beginning of the season and carry through the end of the season in early apring. Until the last few years, there was no useful therapy for flu: Doctors relied exclusively on prevention and treated the prevention and treated the complications - often unsuc-cessfully - as they arose. Now, however, two anti-viral pre-scription drugs are available: rimantadine (Flumadine) and amantadine (Symmetrei). Both drugs are 70 to 80 percent effective in ameliorating influen-za, particularly if they are taken za, particularly if they are taken

Influenza seems to be as inevi- carly in the illness (ideally, able in the winter as are chilly, within 72 hours). The medicines can cause disziness, nausea and insomnia, but they can be life-saving in unprotected elderly or immuno-compromised patients.

As a result of more aggressive immunization programs and the availability of anti-viral drugs, experts have their fingers crossed that this year will produce fewer cases of flu and a lower rate of complications. Even though this year's flu has not been predicted to be a major health hazard - certainly not on the scale of the 1957 epidemic -prudent adults, especially those at high risk, should take steps now to prevent influenza.

Flu shots are a safe and reasonably inexpensive preventive measure. For those people unfortunate enough to experience flu, the use of rimantadine or amantadine, when prescribed early in the course of the discase, may be especially helpful. One last word. Flu symptoms often mimic those of the common cold -- which, however, usually causes more congestion, watery eyes and runny nose. If your illness is associated with acute muscle aches, headache, fever, and profound malaise --and shows no signs of abating within 48 hours -- you should probably see your doctor.
