Roof collapses on downtown building

By Dan Ping Editor

SANFORD — Heavy rain Saturday afternoon may have led to the collapse of a roof on a building on East Commercial Street in downtown Sanford.

Emergency crews responded after the east wall of the building and a portion of the roof collapsed. The Sanford Flower Shop, located next door at 209 E. Commercial St., was also damaged in the collapse.

"Our best theory is that an accumulation of rain water on the roof caused the collapse," said Pete Tucker, an inspector with the Sanford Fire Department. "We think the drain pipes may have been clogged, and that let the water accumulate on the roof."

"Actually, it was probably a combination of things that caused the collapse: the clogged drain pipes, the water collecting on the roof, and with the age of the building, the trusses may have been weak."

Tucker said Tuesday morning that a portion of the building was demolished to prevent the entire structure from collapsing.

The building is owned by Jenio Paulucci, the multimillionaire frozen food king. The building was being used as a storage facility by Paulucci.

Until recently, the building housed Pat's Auto service, but that business closed after the first of the year.

Built in 1923, the structure was known as the Kent Garage Building. The building served a number of businesses throughout the years, including an auto dealership, a parking garage, a roller rink and a justice of the peace.

The building also earned some Hollywood status in its latter years, serving as the back drop for some scenes in the movie "My Girl," starring Macaulay Culkin, as well as an episode of the syndicated television show "Superboy."

Jonotan Fonseca earns trip to Goldsboro's Kids Space Center

By Michelle Jeria Managing Editor

SANFORD — Jonotan Fonseca spent Thursday flying the space shuttle and walking on Mars. Not bad for a kid who hasn't been able to venture outside his house in two months.

The trip to the Goldsboro Elementary School's Kids Space Center was Jonotan's reward for keeping up with his school work — something that hasn't been easy for the first-grader.

More than a year ago, Jonotan was diagnosed with leukemia. He went into remission for 16 months, but in April, he had a relapse. "That's when they decided to do a bone marrow transplant," said his mother, Elba Fonseca. "Jonotan's twin brother, David, was a perfect match."

In July, Jonotan and David went through the transplant procedure. As the donor, David was able to recover in a matter of days. However, Jonotan still had to go through chemotherapy, which left his immune system weak.

In August, Jonotan's immune system was still not strong enough for him to attend school, and he was put

Nicholas won't publicly endorse McLain

Despite distaste for West's agenda, Nicholas says he's sitting this one out

By Russ White Staff Writer

SANFORD — Don Nicholas, who twice ran against Daryl McLain for the District 5 Seminole County Commission seat, said today that he will not endorse either McLain or Bob West in the October 3 Republican party run-off.

Nicholas, 52, ran against McLain in 1996 and lost and came in third behind West and McLain in this year's Republican Primary. Nicholas, who has been vocal in his distaste for West's agenda, was expected to endorse McLain.

"Privately, I will support the candidate I feel is better suited, but I will sit this out publicly," Nicholas said.

This past weekend, Nicholas talked to friends and supporters about his endorsement choices and decided Tuesday morning not to make a choice.

Nicholas said that he had been approached by McLain for an endorsement but told him today he would not comply.

County to exchange thermometers

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Remember when Peggy Lee sang "Fever" and the refrain by Madonna? Now, the Seminole County Solid Waste Division has its own version.

Beginning Monday, county residents can exchange their old mercury thermometers for a new environmentally preferred fever thermometer. On Monday, exchanges will be available at the Seminole County Landfill Scale House in Geneva and at the Central Transfer Station, Suite 101 at 419 W. Longwood.

The goal of the mercury thermometer exchange is to reduce the amount of mercury contaminating our environment and increase awareness of less toxic alternatives to products containing mercury.

The exchange is sponsored by the Florida Pollution Prevention Roundtable and funded by the Seminole County Solid Waste Division, Florida Department of Environmental Protection and the United States Environmental Protection Agency.

Sanford residents can exchange thermometers on Saturday, Sept. 23, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Fire Station # 35, W. County Home Road, Sanford.

Lake Mary residents will be served on Wednesday, Sept. 20 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Fire Station # 24, 1800 Lake Mary Boulevard, Lake Mary.

Mom angry about daughter's new man

DEAR ABBY: My mother is a dear lady, and I love her very much. She is long divorced and hasn't remarried. She lives alone quite far from me. We have been very close for the past few years, because I have been single for a long time. We have visited each other often, traveled together, talked on the phone every other day, etc.

Dear Abby

I have finally met the man of my dreams. I love him and like to spend a lot of time with him. My mother is not happy for me. In fact, she is devastated that I no longer wish to spend all my vacation time with her or travel with her or talk on the phone quite as often.

I feel I have abandoned her in favor of my new love, and I feel terrible. Yet I also feel it is time to focus on making a life of my own — maybe even marry and have my own family. However, Mom is living alone, and seems so sad when I tell her I will be spending my vacation with my new love. Abby, am I being cruel to her? I love my mother very much and don't want to hurt her.

WAVERING IN WASHINGTON, D.C.

DEAR WAVERING: I'm not surprised that your mother is less than overjoyed at your new-found love. You have been her confidante, travel companion and major source of entertainment for a long time. She'd be less than human if she didn't want that to continue.

Wanting to marry and make a life of your own is not cruel, it's normal. Your mother is unfair to lay a guilt trip on you.

It's time to encourage her to reach out to contemporaries for the emotional support she needs. There are any number of ways she can meet them — adult education classes, senior citizen centers, volunteer work, square dancing classes; there are even tours especially for seniors. Do not allow yourself to be maneuvered into the role of your parent's parent. It is one of those that last her entire remaining lifetime

DEAR ABBY: My husband has been divorced from his ex-wife since 1992. They did not have children.

Abby, he still has the key to her condo. He says it's because he does work for her. He is a painting contractor. I think he should return the key and get it only when he has work to do there.

She calls him for everything — from picking her up after a dentist's appointment to starting her car a couple of times a month while she's out of town. I think she should call some of her other friends. She has to call him only once for him to do whatever it is she wants. I have been after him for three years to change the showerhead in our shower. (I purchased it three years ago.) He says I "nag" him. I think three years is a long time to wait. When she calls him, he leaves work and does whatever it is she needs.

Am I being unreasonable by asking him to return her key? If the situation were reversed, I wouldn't be allowed to keep an ex-boyfriend's key and go to his place to do errands for him. Please answer. This is becoming a big problem for me now.

HURTING IN FORT LAUDERDALE, FLA.

DEAR HURTING: Your husband's first marriage may be over, but his emotional bond to his first wife hasn't been severed. I don't blame you for being upset. Most wives wouldn't tolerate what you have.

Tell your handy husband you feel threatened by his maintaining such a close tie to his former wife. You two are overdue for some marriage counseling. Pick up the phone and schedule an appointment. And while you're at it, call a plumber. Three years is too long to wait for your husband to install the showerhead.

Cookies for cookie monsters

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: I am looking for a recipe for monster cookies that contains almost everything: oatmeal, peanut butter, chocolate chips and M&Ms. You use an ice-cream scoop to dish the batter out onto a cookie sheet. I lost my recipe.

CAROL WHALEY Lake Station, Ind.

Ask Ann & Nan

Station, Ind.

MARILYN NELSON Chino Valley, Calif.

DEAR MARILYN: As to what recipe may have produced the cornbread your son enjoyed in Louisiana, we haven't a clue. However, the following is according to Anne's family and friends, the tastiest, moistest cornbread they've ever eaten — and it's a cinch to make, too.

Quick Corn Bread
1 can creamed corn
2 eggs, beaten
1 cup sour cream (low-fat is fine)
1/4 cup vegetable oil
1 cup cornmeal
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1 1/2 tablespoons sugar

Mix all ingredients together. Pour into a hot, greased, cast-iron skillet (we grease ours with lard). Bake at 350 F for 45 minutes or until done.

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: I would like to know if "20-year-old Ambassador Scotch" ages in a bottle that has not been opened. If so, I have two bottles that should be 75 years old. Do other whiskeys, scotches and gins also age? I need a collector to talk or write to.

DEAR EY: Your scotch was bottled after it had been aged in a cask for 20 years. Once bottled, liquors — unlike properly stored wine — will deteriorate over time. Also, it is illegal to resell hard liquor — old or new — unless you have a purveyor's license. So, drink up and enjoy!

© 2000, Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Monster Cookies
12 eggs
2 pounds brown sugar
4 cups white sugar
2 tablespoons plus two teaspoons baking soda
1 pound (4 sticks) margarine or butter, softened
3 pounds creamy peanut butter
18 cups quick-cooking oatmeal
1 pound chocolate morsels
1 pound M&M candy
2 teaspoons vanilla

Beat eggs. Mix in remaining ingredients in order given. Use an ice-cream scoop to drop scoops of batter onto an ungreased cookie sheet. Do not leave cookie in a ball, but press flat before baking. Bake at 350 F for 12 minutes. Makes 100 Monster Cookies.

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: My son has asked me to find him the recipe for cornbread he ate while he was in Louisiana. He was impressed with how moist it was, and he also really liked the taste. Can you help?

Remembering the Revolution

Sallie Harrison Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution remembered 10 signers of the Constitution at their opening fall meeting presided over by Regent Julia Sartin. The men, who gathered in Philadelphia from May to September 1787 were remembered for their dedication in creating a constitution which established the rights, privileges and responsibilities of American citizenship. Following the presentation by the executive board members, a quiz was held and flags and pencils were given to members with the correct answers. Norrises celebrate golden anniversary

Jean and William A. "Bill" Norris have made a mark on the Sanford community since their arrival here 46 years ago. Never in their wildest dreams did they envision that they would celebrate their golden anniversary in the sunny land they came to love.

While the winds of World War II were raging, a pretty girl, Jean, was volunteering in a canteen for service personnel in Live Oak. A friend told Jean about a tall, good-looking sailor from Alabama, stationed at Jacksonville, whom she should meet and arranged a blind date with the Chief Aviation Electronics Technician. It didn't take Bill long to fall in love with the girl of his dreams, but they postponed marriage while she attended Huntingdon College in Montgomery, Ala., and he continued as an instructor with the Navy.

Their wedding date finally arrived and they were married on Sept. 2, 1950, at the Live Oak home of her parents. She traveled with him to several assignments, and in 1954, he was transferred to Sanford Naval Air Station where he retired in 1962, having served his country for 22 years. At the time, Bill was already operating a television service which he continued as a civilian. Sanford seemed the perfect place to raise their children who are all Seminole High School graduates.

Jean was a substitute teacher in Sanford public schools for 10 years, owned and operated Jean Norris Ferns & Exotic Plants on Celery Avenue for nine years and was employed by J.C. Penney's for four years.

The Norrises are recognized on the national scene for their day lily expertise. They are plant aficionados and have opened their colorful day lily gardens to those attending day lily conventions in Central Florida. Jean has served as an officer of the Sunbelt Day Lily Chapter of the American Hemerocallis Society and is a certified day lily judge and instructor in exhibitions. She is a state director for setting up exhibitions.

On the political scene, Jean is a past president of the Seminole County Democratic Women's Club and second vice president of the Florida Democratic Women. She is a former member of the Seminole County Democratic Executive Committee and for 10 years has been a clerk at Precinct 10 in Lake Mary with Bill as her deputy.

The couple are active in the First United Methodist where Bill has sung with the choir for a number of years and has served on nearly all of the church committees including chairman of the administrative board. Jean has taught Sunday school for years and currently serves as chair of the Altar Guild.

Due to Bill's recent illness, no formal celebration is planned at this time. The family gathered Sept. 2 for a celebration at the couple's Idyllwilde home. Son Bill Jr. and his wife Sandy, of Seminole, brought a large decorated sheet cake with a picture of the anniversary couple embossed in the center. Their daughter, Jo Arline, arrived from Deland and another daughter, Ginger Leslie and her husband, Bob, are from Branson, Mo. There are eight grandchildren and nine great grands.

Jean said that while Bill Jr. manned the grill, the "girls" whipped up a feast which was enjoyed by all. A surprise highlight of the celebration was the arrival of granddaughter Cindy Bridges from Virginia.

The Norrises have had a good life, so good, in fact that Jean said, "I just wish I had married Bill four years earlier."

Lt. Hartson Earns Wings

Lt. Michael "Mike" David Hartson is sporting brand-spanking new silver wings on his USAF uniform these days. The lieutenant has spent the past year in pilot training at Vance AFB, Okla. Graduation ceremonies were held on Aug. 18 at Vance in Enid where Mike and his wife, Laurie Hartson, formerly of Sanford, have made their home. Laurie had the pleasure and honor of pinning the wings on her husband.

The young couple were married on June 4, 1999 in the USAF Academy, two days after he was graduated from the Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs, Col. President Clinton conferred degrees on nearly 1,000 Air Force cadets as they earned lieutenant status that day.

Mike, son of Dr. and Mrs. David (Nancy) Hartson of Longwood, and Linda and Bill Marshall of Tulsa, is currently in survivor training at Spokane, Wash. Following this intense course, he will enter training by TWA in St. Louis to fly a medical evacuation plane. After three months training, his next stop will be Ramstein, Germany, where he will be stationed for three years.

After Oct. 15, the date the couple's belongings will be packed by the Air Force for shipment to Germany, Laurie will be at the Sanford home of her parents, Mary and Barry Hillman, during Mike's continued training. The exuberant lieutenant and his lady will depart Sanford on Dec. 27 for their new home in Germany.

Mary and Barry Hillman answered a call to the wild when they recently cruised to the Alaskan frontier. Although they nearly froze to death, the trip was fabulous, Mary said. "The scenery was breathtakingly beautiful," she added. "Photographs just don't do it justice."

ON THE (OLYMPIC) SIDE

The Modern Olympics

The original Olympic Games were celebrated as a religious festival from 776 B.C. until 393 A.D., when Roman emperor Theodosius I banned all pagan festivals (the Olympics celebrated the Greek god Zeus).

On June 23, 1894, French educator Baron Pierre de Coubertin, speaking at the Sorbonne in Paris to a gathering of international sports leaders, proposed that the ancient games be revived on an international scale. The idea was enthusiastically received and the Modern Olympics were born.

The first Olympics were held two years later in Athens, where 245 athletes from 14 nations competed in the ancient Panathenaic stadium to large and ardent crowds. Americans captured nine out of 12 track and field events, but Greece won the most medals with 47.

The Olympic Flag

The Olympic flag has a plain white background with no border.

In the center are five rings forming two rows of three rings above and two below.

The rings of the upper row, from left, are blue, black and red. The rings of the lower row are yellow and green. The rings symbolize the five continents — Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia and the Americas. It is believed the colors of the rings were chosen because at least one of them can be found in the flag of every nation.

The Olympic Flame

The Olympic flame is a symbol carried over from the ancient Olympics, where a sacred flame burned at the altar of Zeus throughout the competition. It was reintroduced at the 1924 Amsterdam Games.

The flame is lit at the ancient site of Olympia in Greece by the rays of the sun reflected off a curved mirror. It is then handed to the first relay runner and starts its international trip.

Olympic stars vow to shine

World athletes meet in Sydney

Two of the greatest Olympians of the 20th century will be among the biggest stars competing in Sydney, Australia, at the 2000 Summer Games.

Sprinter Michael Johnson of the United States gained unprecedented wins at the 1996 Atlanta Games in the 200-meter and 400-meter races. He's the only man ever to sweep both events at the same Olympics.

Weight lifter Naim Suleymanoglu of Turkey is trying to become the first in his sport to win a fourth Olympic gold medal. The 4-foot-11-inch "Pocket Hercules" won in the 141-pound class in 1988, 1992 and 1996.

Over 10,000 athletes from nearly 200 nations will compete in Sydney.

Marion Jones of the United States is the most-heralded woman.

She hopes to win five gold medals at one Olympics, a feat unmatched by any female in track and field history. Jones is favored in the 100 and 200 meters, the 400 and the 1,600 relay. Plus, she is a long-jump contender.

In the premier race of the Summer Games, Maurice Greene of the United States wants to capture the 100-meter dash. Greene, who has set a world record of 9.79 seconds, is billed as the world's fastest human.

In gymnastics, U.S. coach Bela Karolyi has Dominique Dawes and Amy Chow back from the "Magnificent Seven" that won the team gold medal in 1996. Plus, he's got newcomer Elise Ray. They'll battle Romania's Andreea Raducan.

Russia's Svetlana Khorkina was the uneven bars gold medalist in 1996.

Among U.S. men, Blaine Wilson, tattooed and tongue-studded, has won five straight U.S. gymnastics titles. He's joined on the strong American team by fraternal twins Paul and Morgan Hamm, who will turn 18 in Australia.

Swimmer Ian Thorpe, 17, dubbed the "Thorpedo," is the favorite son in Australia's national pastime. He's the world freestyle record-holder at 200 and 400 meters. His size-18 feet serve as natural fins.

The U.S. men's swim team features world record holders Tom Malchow (butterfly), Leroy Krauszburg (backstroke), and Tom Dolan (medley).

Vet swimmers Jenny Thompson, Dara Torres and Brooke Bennett lead the American women. But Inge de Bruijn of the Netherlands is swimming's top star. The freestyle and butterfly ace recently set six world records.

U.S. divers have won more Olympic medals than the rest of the world combined. Lately, however, China has begun to lead the world.

Mark Ruiz and Laura Wilkenson are American divers to watch.

Russia's Dmitry Sautin is the defending men's Olympic platform champ.

China's Fu Mingxia will try to repeat her women's springboard gold.

NBA stars Alonzo Mourning and Vince Carter are among the best-known Americans at the Summer Games. They lead a somewhat less than Dream Team that is favored to win again. The American women will try to repeat their 1996 gold-medal victory with the help of WNBA stars Lisa Leslie and Sheryl Swoopes. Leslie led the U.S. scorers in Atlanta.

In tennis, U.S. stars Andre Agassi and Lindsay Davenport have Olympic gold medals to defend. America's Venus Williams is playing singles and also doubles with sister Serena.

As the reigning Olympic gold medalist in women's soccer, the United States will count on scorers Mia Hamm and Brandi Chastain in Sydney. Hamm led the 1999 World Cup champions and Chastain scored their winning goal.

Dr. Dot Richardson and Lisa Fernandez are U.S. women softball stars.

Road-race cyclist Lance Armstrong of the United States is coming from back-to-back wins in the Tour de France. Track-race star Felicia Ballenger of France is a four-time world cycling champ in the 500-meter event.

The three mascots for the Sydney games

While watching the 2000 Summer Olympics on television, people may notice a new furry or feathery creature walking around in some of the venues.

Olympic organizers selected three animals native to Australia to serve as mascots. Like Atlanta's Izzy and others in the past, the three will appear on Olympic memorabilia, including pins.

ed by both athletes and spectators. Millie, the echidna, is named for the millennium. She represents Sydney's hope and optimism at the dawning of the year 2000. Other echidnas, or spiny anteaters, can be found across Australia. Syd the platypus is named for the 2000 Games. He reflects the energy and vigour of Australia and its people.

Ollie was named after the Olympics. He is a kookaburra, and his enthusiastic, loyal and open-hearted personality represents the Olympic spirit of international friendship.

What's Up In The NFL... Week No. 3

The CRYSTAL BALL appreciated the praise that you all showered on me this past week. I was amazing predicting those games.

The DENVER BRONCOS were my LOCK OF THE WEEK and beat their opponent so badly I've forgot who they played. Another unbelievable example of my accuracy was in the Monday Night Football game. I called the Jets/Patriots matchup a TOO CLOSE TO CALL game that would go to the wire. New England jumped to a huge lead early, and I received a stern conference call from Herald Editor-in-Chief, Dan Ping. He and the Big Cheese, Publisher Doug Fetzter, were mocking my prediction of a tight game and threatening to dock my pay.

My response my loyal readers? I kept my cool and politely asked them to call me back at the end of the game. Needless to say, I never got that call. The final score of my TOO CLOSE TO CALL game was 20-19 with the Jets stealing it in the fourth quarter. On occasion my friends, the Crystal Ball amazes even himself.

Florida teams went 1-2 last Sunday as I predicted.

The Jaguars learned the hard way that they are no longer in charge of their Division, the Ravens are. Baltimore's defense will make the highlight reel more than any other team this year. They seem to be finding some offense as well, but there lies the weakness of the team.

The Dolphins were treated like children in Minnesota with local hero Daunte Culpepper getting another win. I'm giggling to myself about some of you actually thinking the Fish had a shot at the Super Bowl... get real!

Tampa Bay smashed the new and improved Bears, and looked great on both sides of the ball. Barring a major disaster, this team can go all the way. Remember folks, Quarterback King is from my wife's alma mater Tulane University, where he led The Green Wave to a perfect 13-0 season.

Let's take a quick look at the schedule and find some winners.

NEW YORK JETS (-2) VS. BUFFALO

My beloved Bills face a major test in this one as they travel to play the Jets. Vinny got his groove back and I don't have a good feeling in this Divisional matchup. This game is must see TV. Jet 23, Bills 21.

ST. LOUIS (-16) VS. SAN FRANCISCO

Why the Niners are bothering to participate in this one is beyond me. This team is in absolute disarray and the Rams will punish them for it. Give up the points and turn the channel. Ramblers 43, Niners 6.

CAROLINA (-6) AT ATLANTA

The Panthers seem to have secretly rebuilt their football team and face a hurdle in this one. Win and they can claim to be in the race. Lose and become a spectator. Panthers 27, Dirty Birds 13.

TAMPA BAY (-3) AT DETROIT

This game should terrify any true Dubs fan. You know we will take this Lions squad lightly, and it could come back and bite us. This is the one time I will be hoping the Bucs just run the ball like they used to. If you give the Lions defense an opportunity to intercept the ball, they will. Bucs 17, Lions 10.

JACKSONVILLE (-13) AT CINCINNATI

The Jaguars got taught a lesson last week and hopefully they learned something. I'd love to call this one a potential upset, but I'm not sure the Bengals have EVER won a game. Jaguars 27, Bengals 23.

OAKLAND (-3) VS. DENVER

The Cheaters came to life and smoked the Colts last week but this game is in their Division. The Broncos are a proud team, and I think this one will be a lot closer than I got to writing for Sports Illustrated. Cheaters 27, Broncos 24.

NEW ENGLAND (-2) VS. MINNESOTA

Daunte Culpepper and company travel to New England to try and make it three in a row. The Patsies will be firing on all cylinders after giving up last Monday Night. Does a loss like that steal your steam? Vikings 31, Patsies 20.

CHICAGO (-3) VS. NEW YORK GIANTS

I like the Bears big at home. The thrashing they took at the hands of the Bucs wasn't as bad as it looked. They'll bounce back in the friendly confines of Soldier Field. Bears 17, Giants 13.

BALTIMORE (-1) AT MIAMI

The Fish could lose two in a row here but they won't. The Ravens spent everything they had to beat the Jags last week, and will need some time to three minutes off the clock as a promising drive ended on fourth-and-two a yard short at the Lake Brantley 48, giving the ball back to the Patriots with 5:15 remaining.

Lake Brantley quickly moved the ball into scoring position as Jamel Oliver gained 12 yards and Ramsaur ran for 11- and nine-yards on the next two plays.

After being stopped for no gain, Ramsaur ran three yards for a first down and another three yards, giving the hosts a second down and seven at the 14.

Oliver carried eight-yards for a first-and-goal at the six and Ramsaur capped off the drive with a six-yard touchdown run with 1:55 left. Kallish's extra-point try was wide, but the Patriots looked to be in good shape, holding a 33-31 lead.

A lead which lasted exactly 16 seconds.

Justin McKinney took the ensuing kickoff at the three, sprinted through the middle of the defense, broke to the left sideline and outran a pair of Lake Brantley defenders to the endzone for a 97-yard touchdown.

Quarterback Brad Locke then ran in for the two-point conversion and the Tribe led 39-33 with 1:39 left.

But that was just enough time for Lake Brantley.

Starting at their own 16, Ramsaur hit Jonathan Shaw for a seven-yard gain before Seminole's Robbie Carr just missed an interception that would have sealed the game.

On third-and-three, Josh Demateis ran for 16-yards and Ramsaur hit Dryden with a 26-yard pass.

But things looked bleak after the next three passes, including another near interception miss by Donnell Peterson, fell incomplete, leaving the Patriots a fourth-and-10 from the 30 with only 21.2-seconds left on the clock.

But Dryden got open down the right sideline and Ramsaur hit him in stride with Dryden being knocked out at the three.

Seminole again looked good for the win when Ramsaur was sacked for a six-yard loss with only 9.2 remaining.

But again Ramsaur rose to the occasion, hitting Dryden on a slant just before the Tribe's Willie Bennett could get their to tie the score at 39-39.

Kalish, who had already had one kick blocked and missed another, calmly split the uprights and Lake Brantley had improved its record to 2-1.

The final two minutes was just a microcosm of the entire game that saw several outstanding individual offensive performances and a pair of defenses trying to figure out what was going on.

The game started off very strange as two busted plays resulted in seven lost yards and Seminole punted to the Patriots, who in turn lost nine yards on three plays, including a fumble on the third play that gave the ball back to the Tribe.

Taking over at its own 48, Seminole marched down the field, on the strength of a 29-yard run by Bennett, to the three, but a two-yard loss on third down force the 'Noles' Matt Groover to kick a 22-yard field goal.

But wait a minute...the Patriots were called for a personal foul and Seminole took the points off the board and went for the touchdown from the three. Locke slammed his way into the end zone, but the Tribe was called for motion and Groover came back on to nail a 25-yard field goal.

Lake Brantley quickly answered, going 80-yards on seven plays, capped by Oliver's 50-yard touchdown run. Kalish's kick gave the Patriots their first lead, 7-3, with 24.4-seconds left in the opening period.

Seminole came right back, moving 66-yards on 10 plays to take the lead back on a 1-yard run by Locke and Groover's extra point.

Three plays later Lake Brantley was back on top as Oliver went 72 yards on the second play down to the one and Ramsaur scored on the dive. The score remained 13-10 as Kalish's PAT was blocked by Robinson.

The Tribe then took control of the game, as Bennett capped a 59-yard drive with a three-yard touchdown run, and after a three-and-out by the Patriots, Bennett ran for 44 yards and caught a 21-yard touchdown and Groover added both extra points to give Seminole a 24-13 lead with 55.6-seconds left in the half.

This again was enough time for Lake Brantley as Oliver took the ensuing kickoff back 55-yards to the Seminole 45 and Ramsaur hit Shaw for 22 yards, followed by a 15-yard pass interference call against Dryden and a 13-yard Ramsaur to Shaw touchdown pass.

A two-point try failed and the two teams went to the locker room with Seminole leading 24-19.

The opening drive of the second half saw the Patriots take the lead again as Dryden caught a 53-yard pass and Francisco Banos ran for 21 yards before Ramsaur capped the 79-yard, six-play drive with a two-yard touchdown run. Demateis added the two-point run and Lake Brantley led 27-24.

Now it was the Tribe's turn and Bennett gained 48 yards on five carries, including one for 40 yards, capping a nine-play drive with a two-yard touchdown run and Groover added the extra point making the score 31-27.

Seminole held the Patriots in another three-and-out and took over at the 50 as Ramone Raines returned a punt nine yards before fumbling, but Eddie Johnson fell on the loose ball, keeping the possession for Seminole.

But two plays later, the Tribe lost a fumble at the Lake Brantley 42, setting the stage for the dramatic ending.

Ramsaur led the way for the Patriots, gaining 68 yards on 19 carries and scoring three touchdowns and completing nine-of-16 passes with no interceptions for 177 yards and two touchdowns.

Oliver also had a big all-around game for Lake Brantley, rushing for 131 yards and a touchdown on just six carries and also returning five kicks for 119 yards. Dryden also had an outstanding night, catching six balls for 135 yards and a touchdown, will almost every catch coming at a crucial time in the game.

Bennett was awesome for the Fighting Seminoles, carrying the ball 24 times for 268 yards and two touchdowns and catching two passes for 29 yards and another touchdown.

The Patriots will look for their first district win when they host University at Tom Story Field in a Class 5A-District 2 game next Friday and October 12-13 will host No. 3 state-ranked Mainland (1-1), which also lost its first game, 16-13 to Lake City-Columbia Friday in a monster 5A-District 2 game at Thomas E. Whigham Stadium. Both games will begin at 7:30 p.m.

The projected first round NFL draft pick for the University of Florida Gators is a delicious blend of rich vanilla ice cream and orange sorbet swirls.

The ice cream packages sport the familiar Gators' orange and blue and Seminoles' garnet and gold colors. Both winning flavors are available through years end at grocery stores and supermarkets throughout Florida with a suggested retail price of $4.99 per half-gallon.

Last second touchdown, conversion gives Lake Brantley 40-39 win

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS - The best screenwriter in Hollywood could not have written a better script to a game than the one that unfolded at Tom Story Field Friday night.

Corey Dryden's nine-yard touchdown catch and Corey Kallish's extra point with 4.9-seconds left capped an amazing final two minutes as host Lake Brantley edged previously undefeated Seminole, 40-39, in a battle of Seminole Athletic Conference powers.

This great game had more twists-and-turns than a roller-coaster ride.

Holding a 31-27 lead with 8:37 left in the game, the Fighting Seminoles looked like they might have made the defensive play that would decide the issue when a fourth down Taylor Ramsaur pass fell incomplete at the Patriots 13-yard line.

But Seminole could only take See Patriots, Page 2B

Senior quarterback Taylor Ramsaur (No. 5) ran for three touchdowns and threw for two more scores, including the game-winning nine-yarder with 4.9-seconds left, as Lake Brantley upset previously unbeaten Seminole, 40-39, at Tom Story Field Friday night.

Oviedo finally gets offensive

By Tony DeBorja
HERALD CORRESPONDENT

OVIDIO - After the month they've had, the Oviedo High School Lions needed a breather. Unfortunately for the Lake Howell Silver Hawks, they provided it.

After falling behind 6-0 in the second quarter, the Lions scored 41 unanswered points to rout the visiting Silver Hawks in their Seminole Athletic Conference football clash Friday night at Jim Courier Field.

"After we scored the touchdown that put us up by 41 points early in the fourth quarter, the first thing I told the players was 'OK, we can breathe now,'" said Oviedo head coach Greg Register.

"We've had a lot of nail-biters last year and this year. Tonight, our offense started to click in the second half and we were able to pull away a little bit."

Last year, the Lions were in so many close games that senior quarterback Kenny

Starling called nearly every play, leaving Oviedo without a quarterback with any varsity experience going into this season.

This year, Oviedo had its preseason classic with Winter Park stopped in the first quarter by a severe lightning storm, needed a pair of goal line stands from its defense to get past Lyman, and had to rally past Lake Brantley last week with a last-minute field goal.

And all of that pales in comparison to the emotional turmoil surrounding the Lions' concern for teammate Sammy Hughes, who suffered a spinal injury against Lake Brantley.

What helped Oviedo over the hump was the offense finally getting untracked.

"The offense did a great job," said Register. "We've got all the parts in place, good running backs, receivers, and quarterbacks ... we're just waiting for all the pieces to fall together and for them to start clicking."

OHS offensive coordinator Troy Kessinger - who was one of the 20 members of the Inaugural class inducted into the Oviedo High School Sports Hall of Fame in a ceremony prior to the game - used just about every weapon the Lions had available Friday.

Nine different players had at least one carry of the ball, four players had at least one catch and, if you count two-point conversion attempts, three different players attempted and completed passes. Add in a 42-yard field goal as well as a fake punt by Steve Asby and you have a pretty full package.

"We've had 2-plus games of nothing," said Kessinger. "We'd drive and throw an interception. Or we'd drive and be stopped by a penalty. Or throw an interception. It was killing us."

"I think Christian (Tenekedes) and Brett (Murphy) (the Lions' pair of starting quarterbacks) both grew up a little bit tonight. They both had very effective performances."

WINTER SPRINGS - Chad Hunter's 11-yard touchdown catch with 32-seconds remaining earned a 10-point rally as Winter Springs Bears upset No. 10 state-ranked Lake Mary, 32-28, in a Seminole Athletic Conference battle at the newly dedicated A.W. Eppe Stadium on Friday night.

The Rams led 28-18 with 9:08 left in the third quarter but would not score again as the Bears scored 14 unanswered points to even their record at 1-1.

Senior quarterback Adam Abilto (No. 10 above) threw a pair of touchdown passes of 68- and 11-yards to junior Chad Hunter (No. 3, right), the latter being the game-winner with 32-seconds left, as host Winter Springs celebrated the dedication of its on-campus stadium to Principal A.W. Eppe by rallying from 10 points down to upset No. 10 Class 6A state-ranked Lake Mary, 32-28, in a Seminole Athletic Conference battle Friday night.

The Way We Were: Celery Feds take trip down Memory Lane

Despite the rainy weekend, those attending the annual Seminole High School Celery Fed Reunion Weekend at Daytona Beach, Sept. 8-10, had a great time. This event has been sponsored by the SHS Class of 1950 for 21 years. Spearheading the arrangements have been

Grace Marie Stinecpher

Tommye Methvyn Johnson and Joan Dampier Anderson. Most of you know that the SHS nickname was the Celery Feds from the school's founding until about 1957 when it was changed to the Seminoles. Anyone claiming to be a Celery Fed is invited to this event and there are some who wouldn't miss it for anything. For example, Garnett White (1951), who had a heart catheterization on Friday, was there on Saturday (The test was negative).

Some couldn't wait to get started on the fun and went over on Tuesday or Wednesday, several others arrived on Thursday, while the majority were there by Friday evening.

I had planned to go over on Thursday, but because of car problems didn't get there until Friday about 6 p.m. A group of my friends said they'd wait for me so I could eat with them, but they didn't realize that I hadn't even unpacked my car. It took me awhile, they got a little impatient, but finally 14 of us descended on Sweetwater for dinner. Other groups scattered all over the area to other restaurants.

The class of 1949 had a mini-reunion that evening at another hotel so a large number of them came back to our hotel, the Holiday Inn Shores, for the rest of the weekend.

The usual procedure is for everyone to gather around the pool all day and in the evenings, but the rain kept us inside. We lingered at the breakfast tables and then gathered in the hotel lobby, guest rooms or wherever we could to visit, play games or watch television. On Saturday, both the UF and FSU football games were followed closely as several of the group of the group had attended these schools. Alumni were there from the early 1940s classes through the late 1950s. There were 120 reservations for the Saturday night dinner, but there were several others there also. My class (1954) was well represented with 10 members there: Freeda Colvin Koopmans (California), Sheila Browning Wilson (New York City), Dickie Moss (Key Largo), Sonny Haskins (Titusville), Sandra Dunn Parker (Orlando), Imogene Bostick Yarborough (Geneva), and Carlton Jay Jacobs, Paulette Casen White, Edward McCall and I from Sanford.

A large number of the alumni have known each other since elementary school, for example, Edward, Dickie and I were in Miss Welch's first grade class together in First grade.

The Saturday night dinner was held in the hotel banquet room with the barbecue meal catered by the General County Store of Sanford. We enjoyed barbecued ribs and chicken, baked beans, potato salad and cole slaw, after which we visited with long time friends; some didn't give up until close to midnight.

Even though the very youngest in our group would be about 60 years old, we are all young at heart. In our senior citizen status, we all have some sort of ailment or other problem, but all is forgotten on this special weekend each year as we reminisced about our youth and enjoy being together with our longtime friends. Now we look forward to next September for another great weekend together!

SHS Class of 1945 plans reunion

The Seminole High School class of 1945 will hold its 55-year reunion Nov. 3 and 4 with activities scheduled for Friday evening and Saturday afternoon and evening.

According to class member Sonny Raborn, members of this class have contributed $500 for a chair in the renovated Ritz Theater, now known as the Helen Stairs Theater. They anticipated collecting another $500 soon for an additional chair.

Many in this class have fond and interesting memories of attending the Ritz, especially in Saturday afternoons for the double feature which always included a Western. Admission was only 9 cents for children while Milk duds, popcorn, Black Cow or licorice cost only 5 or 10 cents. Some remember the "height line" that measured you as you stood in front of the window; this determined the price you would pay.

Heritage Brick Walk

If you have been to the Sanford Museum in the past year, you will have seen the Heritage Brick Walk in the front sidewalk. This is a project of the Sanford Historical Society.

Heritage Bricks are brick pavers with lettering inscribed in black. Donors may choose to inscribe an individual's name (including their own), an ancestor's name, family or club name. Cost of each brick is $50 and proceeds benefit the Sanford Museum. A brick order will be placed soon so they can be laid this fall. If you would like to order one, do so ASAP. Forms are available at the Sanford Museum.

2001 Calendars are here

The 2001 Historical Sanford Calendars have just arrived and are presently on sale at the Sanford Museum and Knights Shoe Store. This project of the Sanford Historical Society contains 12 old Sanford scenes. For you train buffs, there is a picture of a 1913 train wreck near Sanford plus one of the trains at the old depot at Railroad Way (now North Oak Avenue). On the cover is the PICO Hotel. Following the transportation theme, there are two pictures of boats on Lake Monroe plus one of a boat manufacturing company. There are two late 1940s parade photographs, one on Sanford Avenue and the other on North Park Avenue. There is a picture of a blimp and other airplanes at the Naval Air Station and other photos featuring horses and cars.

This year the calendar has a spiral binder and the time line has been retained. Cost is still only $5.

Shoppers can avoid supermarket seduction

Tips offered to help spend less money while at the grocery store

With heightened competition from sell-anything supercenters such as Wal-Mart and specialty stores like PETSMART — and with online grocery shopping gaining in popularity — conventional supermarkets are trying harder than ever to draw you in.

Some enticements — such as beefing up the assortment of store-brand products, adding amenities like pharmacies, and staffing store kitchens with trained chefs — offer real advantages. Others, like "smart" cash registers that let you scan and bag your own groceries, sound intriguing, but the payoff isn't clear.

Once stores have drawn you in, they have ways to keep you there so you'll buy more stuff — ways that border on the wicked. Although it may sometimes seem so, no part of the shopping experience happens by accident. Here, for example, are some common tricks of the trade:

— Seducing with smell. It's no fluke that bakery and flower departments often tickle your senses just as you enter the store. They're two of a supermarket's most profitable centers — along with the deli — and can carry markups over wholesale of more than 40 percent. That's about 10 to 15 percent higher than the markup for packaged goods.

— Color me gullible. Color is an especially powerful lure. Researchers at the Institute for Color Research say it influences up to 80 percent of all purchase decisions. According to the institute's Jean Luck, yellow is usually the first color the eye sees, and it's used to grab attention on the cereal aisle.

Black implies elegance and is popular on products whose makers seek an upscale image. Green conveys a good-for-you, good-for-the-earth image. Red can increase your blood pressure and suggests that a product is on sale.

Orange conveys affordability and is used on packages of detergent, which compete by price.

— Offering temptations. As much as 25 cents of every grocery dollar is spent on unplanned buys, says Brian Wansink, a marketing and consumer economics professor at the University of Illinois. Impulse items are most ubiquitous at the checkout counter, and that's where price-gouging tends to be the worst. There, you might find chilled soda in a 20-ounce bottle selling for as much as a two-liter jug in the soda section. Resolve is weakest when you anticipate a long wait, Wansink says, specifically when at least three people are ahead of you.

— Placing products. Displays at the ends of aisles are the most potent customer magnets in the store, doubling or tripling sales of any items stacked there.

But don't assume that merchandise on these "endcaps" is a bargain. It may not even be on sale. Placing items next to an endcap can stop shoppers in their tracks, too.

Supermarkets use these "adjacencies" to complement items on the endcap. For example, they put cake ingredients on the end and baking pans around the corner. Such tie-in products are especially unlikely to be discounted.

You can be a smart shopper, and avoid some of the snares supermarkets set, by following a few simple rules:

— Make a list. It can keep you from buying things you don't need.

— Buy store brands. They can save you hundreds — if not thousands — of dollars a year. Our tests have found store brands that are similar in quality to their pricier national-brand counterparts. That's not surprising, since supermarket brands are often made by such companies as I.I. Heinz, Nestle, Con Agra and Reynolds.

— Use coupons judiciously. Manufacturers have moved away from coupons that reward you for buying one item and toward those that require you to buy two or more.

Those can be useful when you buy goods that disappear fairly fast, but not for items like oven cleaners.

FYI: Prices range from the $140,000 to the $200,000. Living areas range from 1,698 to 2,928 square feet. Features include an abundance of mature trees clustered around three small lakes. "But what has really contributed to the community's sales appeal is its in-town location," said Marketing Director Marilyn Anderson. "The City of Casselberry has been one of the few cities in Central Florida that has not been a part of the area's housing boom."

According to Anderson, Lake Griffin Estates is drawing an influx of move-up buyers from Longwood, Maitland and Winter Park, "who prefer living east of Interstate-4 in an established city setting."

Amenities include a community park to be called "The Esplanade" which will offer a classic neighborhood setting nestled among huge trees and including a children's playground and walking bridge to Lake Griffin.

Hormone Replacement Therapy

There have been a number of published articles within the past year which have raised the fears of many women utilizing hormone replacement therapy. The publication of two recent reports of increasing risk of breast cancer has certainly made a number of women fearful with regards to utilizing hormones and other medications for symptoms of menopause.

As yet these studies have not withstood the scrutiny of statistical testing nor have they been repeated. Before women decide to discontinue a previously recommended medication regimen, there should be a discussion with their healthcare provider concerning their specific risks and benefits.

A number of factors will need to be considered. One's family history, individual risks for bone disease, heart disease and blood vessel diseases are important factors. One will also need to weigh the quality of life issues particularly regarding menopause symptoms. Reproductive organ disturbances, mental function, and activity levels will need to be considered.

There has been extensive experience with the use of hormones in the past 40 years. The benefits are well established. At this time the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology has not revised any recommendations that would change any previous prescribing decisions.

It is advised that before one voluntarily discontinues her hormones, she should discuss this with her healthcare professional. Hopefully within the short term we will have more extensive and more reliable research data to provide patients with specific advice concerning these issues.

Football

 players died during one of those early scrimmages and no further games were allowed until 1899.

Two years after football was once again allowed, Stetson played Florida's first intercollegiate football game in 1901. It is said that five members of the Stetson squad had not seen a football until three weeks prior to the Nov. 22 game.

Stetson met Florida Agricultural College (FAC) of Lake City in the state's initial intercollegiate football contest. FAC had a team since 1889, but parents and school officials thought that the sport was too brutal and thus, no game was permitted to be scheduled until 1901.

The long awaited game was played in Jacksonville during the closing days of the State Fair at the Fair's racetrack. The game determined the state champion because it was the only game played that year. The score: Stetson 6, FAC 0, in what was deemed a "bowl game" played before a crowd of 2,000 fans.

In 1902 Stetson played four intercollegiate games. Two games were played against its 1901 victim, FAC, and two were against East Florida Seminary (EFS) of Gainesville.

In 1903, the season record was another win over FAC and a tie with Florida State College.

In 1904, the record was two wins over EFS and losses to Florida State College and the Jacksonville Light Infantry. The games with these Florida schools ended in 1904, however.

Stetson also had an intense rivalry with Rollins college during the very early years of intercollegiate football. Rollins College had its original campus in Sanford.

Florida Agricultural College moved from Lake City to Gainesville and merged with the East Florida Seminary to become the University of Florida — the Gators. Stetson won the last game against the Gators by a score of 45-0 in 1953. Stetson's overall record in the series was 2-15-2.

Stetson did not play the new Florida State University until 1947, after the Tallahassee school ceased being the Florida State College for Women. The 1947 game with FSU resulted with the Hatters shutting out the Seminoles 14-0.

In that initial game, FSU player Don Grant threw the first forward pass for the 'Noles, but the Seminoles now-feared passing game did not start out well, as the throw was intercepted by Hatter Byron Brasington. In 1948, FSU and Stetson joined the same football conference, the Dixie Conference, along with the University of Tampa, Mississippi College and Millsaps College. The Dixie Conference was organized to bring ideals to football and "to keep intercollegiate athletics on a non-subsidized basis." Stetson never again beat the Seminoles, however, the Hatters tied the 'Noles 6-6 in 1952 in a game played in the Citrus Bowl.

Ten years after its only victory over the Seminoles, Stetson quit playing intercollegiate football. On Jan. 25, 1957, Dr. J. Ollie Edmunds, president of Stetson, announced that only three schools were under contract and Stetson would ask to be released from its contractual obligations. Stetson, said Edmunds, could not find enough colleges to play "unsubsidized football."

Seminole County Circuit Judge Gene Stephenson remembers some of the last days of Stetson football. Stephenson, a Winter Park High School graduate, played for Stetson from 1952-55 along with his brother Henry "Sonny" Stephenson. He recalls Stetson playing not only FSU and the Gators, but also notable colleges such as Auburn, Miami and Southern Mississippi.

In 1952 and '53, he remembers playing the Gators at the much-feared "Swamp" in Gainesville. He shirks when he recalls his first play in the 1952 game when he was a freshman.

"I was hit head-on by future NFL great and Chicago Bear star, Rick Casares," Stephenson said. "That was the hardest hit

I ever took."

Stetson lost that game 33-6 and Stephenson says that he "lost" his pre-game orange juice on the field that day.

"The Swamp was a tough place to play even back then," he said. Casares went on to be inducted into the Florida Sports Hall of Fame.

In his first season as a starter, 1953, Stetson went 3-6, but beat arch-rival Tampa 14-7 with Stephenson scoring both Hatter touchdowns.

The judge was called "Steamboat Stephenson" as a result of the many long runs he broke.

Also in 1953, he remembers breaking a kickoff down to the Florida 20-yard line only to fumble when hit by Gator, Joe D'Agostino, who was also a central Florida native.

"That's the last time I remember fumbling," said Stephenson. "It was quite a licking D'Agostino gave me."

In 1954, Stephenson made the only Hatter touchdown in a 47-6 home game loss to FSU. That Stetson team went 2-6. He was a player on FSU's roster one year by the name

Buddy Reynolds, who of course, became "Burt" when he later arrived in Hollywood and garnered fame in the cinema and television. Stetson's overall record against the Seminoles between 1947-54 was 1-6-1.

Stephenson played as a running back on offense and a safety on defense. He also ran back kickoffs and punt returns and during two seasons, he handled kickoffs. One season he kicked extra points.

During his senior year at Stetson (a 2-4-2 season), he was the only full-scholarship player. Stephenson suffered from knee injuries and was limited in his playing time and ability to run. He also recalls that his last season was the only season the team had face masks on their helmets. The new device (a single clear plastic bar) did not work well for Stephenson.

"One time mine smashed into my mouth and knocked two teeth out, but I just swallowed the teeth and kept on playing," he said.

Stephenson said that although playing at The Swamp was a challenging away game, "the toughest place to play for us was at Auburn. It seemed like the whole city mobilized around out hotel," he said. "They were all yelling at the top of their lungs 'War Eagles! War Eagles!' over and over again. We only had two or three seniors on the team, so it was pretty intimidating."

The 1953 Auburn game did not turn out very well for the Hatters. Stephenson remembers breaking two kickoff returns, but was tackled at the Auburn 10- or 30-yard line each time by a talented War Eagle named Vince Dooley who was, of course, later a great coach for the University of Georgia Bulldogs and is now the Georgia athletic director. Stephenson recalls that the Auburn quarterback was Fob James, who later became governor of Alabama.

"Stetson traveled in cars to away games," said Stephenson. "On a long trip like to Hattiesburg, Miss., we would play a lot of cribbage and sleep a lot." Even with those memories of less than modern travel and accommodations, Stephenson highly recommends athletics.

"Athletics teach you patience, to anticipate unexpected events, to be assertive, to work as part of a team and to be respectful of authority," he said. "It's possible that Stetson may rejuvenate its football program, I'd like to see that."

It is probably unrealistic to think that the Stetson Hatters will ever be a football power playing in a major bowl game on New Year's Day.

However, at one time, Stetson was playing football teams that are now preeminent and even beating the Gators and Seminoles on occasion. Imagine if things had not changed, could it have been a coach Spurrier or Bowden working their magic just up the road from Sanford?

"Athletic teach you patience, to anticipate unexpected events, to be assertive, to work as part of a team and to be respectful of authority."

Glass

Solito said. Hand-made glassware made during the 1930s, however, was sold in jewelry stores and fine department stores. It was not unusual for 32 people to work on one glass pitcher from the beginning to the end of its creation. "One person would make the handle, another would make the base, another would do the etching and so on," Solito said. "It was an art form, and you just don't find stuff like this anymore."

"The hand-made industry in this country is all but gone." Depression Era Glass also has historical significance. According to Solito, it was the first time in history people could buy dinnerware made of glass in a variety of hues. "They had china or pressed glass, but no color glass ware," he said. "This was a major breakthrough. Dinnerware went from pretty plain pressed glass to some neat stuff."

And, now that "neat stuff" can sell for only a few dollars or hundreds of dollars. It all depends on what a person wants to add to his or her collection.

Collectors shouldn't have trouble finding what they are looking for at this weekend's show. According to show co-organizer Millie Downey, there will be Depression glass, Elegant glass, china and pottery of the Depression Era along with Carnival Glass.

"There will be something for everyone and a price to fit every pocketbook or wallet," Downey said.

This is the 15th year Downey and her husband, Bill, have organized the Sanford show. It originated in 1973 when Sara and Edison Myers, who lived in Sanford, decided to organize a Depression Era Glass show and sale — the first of its kind in Florida.

The Downeys also organize Sanford's January show, which also features Depression Era Glass.

It's not just about organizing shows for the Orlando pair. The Downeys have their own collection and also own a store, Millie's Glass and China in Orlando.

"I got into this when the formed a club in Orlando," Downey said. "One piece led to another, and now I have 43 sets of my own plus what we sell in the store."

"You can get hooked. It's like a drug," she said. "It won't kill you, but it can bankrupt you."

The three-day show continues 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday at the Sanford Civic Center at 401 East Seminole Boulevard. Admission is $3.

a diverse place to live and to work. I'm thrilled at the opportunity to work for Seminole County."

When Turk resigned, some said the county's economic development team would be disbanded.

"Not so," Grace said. "I said so then and today here's the proof. With Rob Nixon, our team is better than it has ever been. He's got terrific credentials and it would be hard to match his eagerness."

John Jones, who worked with Turk, will assist Nixon.

program other than allowing the use of polling places, "where there is adequate space for them." She said in polling places which are small in size, a nearby room may be required. She added that none of the county election equipment would be involved. "They will have to supply their own ballots, their own voting booths, and do their own ballot counting," she said.

It is hoped that adults having to go to the polls with their children will be of help in improving the overall voter turnout.

Among the partners and sponsors participating in this year's project are the Seminole County Public Schools, Seminole/Lake Mary Regional Chamber of Commerce, League of Women Voters, both the Democratic and Republican parties of Seminole County, the Seminole County Sheriff's Department, and a number of businesses including the Seminole Herald.

Volunteer to assist in the project, either individuals or groups, are asked to phone Pat Shields at 407-323-4440, ext. 3, or Mary Campbell at 407-327-3463. Persons wishing to become a partner or sponsor, or for additional information, are asked to contact Jane Palmer with the Seminole County School system, at 407-320-0357.

Hopper students compete in Olympics

By Michelle Jeria
Managing Editor

SANFORD — While the Summer Olympics commenced Friday in Sydney, students at the Hopper Center participated in their own "international" competition.

Each class chose a country to represent, including Australia, Germany, Kenya, Mexico, Nigeria and the United States, Hopper Center Principal Bill Dailey said. During the week before Friday's event, students studied the history of the Olympics and the culture and history of the country they represented.

"This gave the students a chance to make the Olympics personally important to them," Dailey said. "It also demonstrates the idea of teamwork."

Each class held an election to vote on what country it would represent. Throughout the week, students logged onto the Internet and read stories about their chosen countries.

"We let the younger children be the United States, since it was easier for them to make a decision," Dailey said. "Some of the older ones realized Australia would be the first to walk in during the opening ceremony, and so they chose to represent the hosting country."

The students also made flags and cuisine, including gingerbread cookies and apple pie, from their designated countries.

On Friday, the Mini-Olympics kicked off with an opening ceremony. Student of the Month Javier Rodriguez, holding a torch, led the young athletes onto the playing field during a parade of nations.

Events included the 50- and 100-yard dash, a relay race, a softball throw and a basketball free-throw competition. Several parents, foster grandparents, faculty and the event organizer Terri Iannuzzi cheered for the athletes.

No scores were kept, and every participant was a winner. "They are all stars," Hopper Center Guidance Counselor Sarah Freeman said. "This event was to promote sportsmanship and participation. It's like what the original Olympics were all about — the participating, not the winning."

Following the last event of the day, students were rewarded with an international lunch of tacos and apple pie. Every participant was given a certificate and a round of applause for a job well done. "All of them are winners," Freeman said.

Olympic stars Female athletes now command attention

Olympic swimmer Jenny Thompson says her nearly nekkid pose in Sports Illustrated is a welcome alternative to the ubiquitous images of anorexic women that come at us from Hollywood and Madison Avenue. Though Jenny didn't have to strip down to tight swimming trunks to show us a healthy female body, I'm going to let her slide with that one. Adolescent girls do need to see a feminine form that is celebrated for strength and musculature.

Besides, Jenny would have to do something a lot more outrageous to sour my enthusiasm for this year's Summer Olympic Games and their women stars. If the Atlanta Olympics surprised us with the achievements of American female athletes, these Games confirm the arrival of women in the mainstream of athletic competition.

For those of us who grew up in a time when girls were often denied the opportunity to play, how deliciously things have changed. The most-hyped athlete of these Olympic Games is track star Marion Jones, who has been the subject of speculation since she declared two years ago that she would win five gold medals at these Games. Whether she makes it or not, she'll be a big draw.

Perhaps no one is more pleased with these developments than parents such as former Olympic track-and-field star Kafer Johnson, who stormed the world of sport with his gold-medal performance in the demanding decathlon in 1960. Back then, there were a few women around in a few sports, but only the rare superachiever garnered much notice. This month, Johnson is in Sydney to cheer on his daughter, Jenny Johnson-Jordan, who is on the American beach volleyball team.

Of course, there are still those who cannot take women seriously as athletes. John McEnroe groused in a recent New Yorker interview that any good male college tennis player could beat Venus and Serena Williams (who we'll also get to see during the Olympics).

And there are still those who must reduce women to mere sex objects. Sports Illustrated wrote breathlessly of blond Russian tennis player Anna Kournikova: "Even in this enlightened age, she is proof that a hot body can count as much as a good backhand." Or more, in the minds of the unenlightened editors of Sports Illustrated, notorious for a swimsuit issue featuring leggy, buxom models who have probably never even dressed out for gym. The thinness of supermodels is often attributable to less healthy habits.

(Of course, our inability to treat women purely as athletes sometimes shows in a prudish resistance to their showing a little flesh. When soccer star Brandi Chastain pulled off her jersey and exposed her sports bra after striking the winning goal in last year's World Cup, the controversy that followed was pure overreaction. Lots of out-of-shape, middle-aged women, including me, pad around in our co-ed gyms in the same sports bras, and no one gives it a second thought.)

But never mind the unenlightened. Most advertisers, Olympic sponsors and even media have gotten the message: Women athletes can command audiences. After its much-criticized scheduling of four years ago, when it didn't air the American women's soccer team, which eventually won the gold medal and garnered the largest audience of any female sporting event, NBC has come back with lots of attention to women's sports (especially when Americans are playing).

So Jenny Thompson is among those spectacular athletes who will help send a powerful message to little girls: Women can be aggressive, competitive, challenging, strong. For that, I can forgive her a little exhibitionism.

Devout Republican now voting for Gore

Editor's Note: The following letter was sent to Richard Hanway, chairman of the CIGNA Corporation. A copy was also submitted to the Herald as a Letter to the Editor.

Dear Mr. Hanway:

I am writing this letter to inform you of the part your company has played in convincing me to vote for Al Gore in this year's presidential election. I am 68, a registered Republican since 1954 and have voted Republican in all presidential elections since eligible. Not this year. Here is my reason why.

I am a member of CIGNA Healthcare for seniors, your HMO for seniors on Medicare here in Florida. Other than a few office visits and some prescriptions, I have not caused any expense to your HMO.

On Aug. 31, 2000, I saw my Primary Care Physician (PCP) due to severe shoulder pain. You dictated that I see this PCP, the second this year. He noted that I have a "bone-on-bone" condition and offered to give me a Cortisone shot. He cautioned however, that I should see an orthopedic specialist who may suggest surgery. In that case, the Cortisone shot could delay that action. Since I had seen an orthopedic specialist two years ago regarding this condition, I requested to see him again. He wrote the order for me to see that physician (OP No. 1). The PCP office management told me I needed to get permission from CIGNA to see the specialist, who is listed as a provider under your CIGNA HMO. I called CIGNA member services and was told bluntly and with hostility that OP No. 1 was not in my medical POD. Since I live in Sanford, I have to be treated by a physician in the Sanford POD. I called my PCP office and obtained a name of the Sanford POD Orthopedic Physician (OP No. 2). With the approval of my PCP office, I called OP No. 2 for an appointment.

OP No. 2 would not grant me an appointment until I obtained all medical records and X-rays from OP No. 1. I was also told that after OP No. 2 receives and reviews my records and X-rays, they will then determine if they will see me and that in many cases they do not. I explained that I was in severe pain and that I was not seeking a second opinion. This made no difference. These are the physicians you are requiring that I see.

So, I called OP No. 1 to obtain my records and X-rays to be told that I could get the records as long as I paid for them. I then called CIGNA member services about this and they said they could do nothing for me. On Sept. 1, I drove to OP No. 1 and purchased my medical records. I called OP No. 2 to obtain directions to their office so I could deliver the records but was told they were closed until the Tuesday after Labor Day. I am taking 65 milligrams of Darvon every four hours but the pain still persists.

Now I know you are saving money by using every trick in the book to deny me care. You are already getting my Medicare money, so why are you doing this to me? What have I done to you? I signed on with CIGNA to have the assurance of medical coverage. Then again, I know you are dumping all of us seniors here in Florida as of Jan. 1, 2001. I assume this is because your profits aren't high enough. How high do they have to be?

Al Gore is addressing the very problem you are creating with a Patients Bill of Rights and prescription drugs for seniors. Mr. Bush won't even speak to the Bill of Rights issue and in his political ads he sounds and looks like a puppet on a string when speaking about Social Security and prescription drugs.

Mr. Hanway, I am also a veteran. Had I known back in the '50s when I served my country, that I was serving for the likes of you and your company, I may have refused. Unfortunately, when we serve, we cannot differentiate or discriminate against those we protect. This I know, is much unlike your business.

By the way, on a call to your member services on Friday, Sept. 1, I was told to submit a receipt for the medical records I purchased, along with a letter of explanation to your Tampa office, and they would see what they could do. How thoughtful.

Final thought. Nearly all of the people in the doctors' offices and some in your own, spoke of the "System." That the "System" was at fault for what I was going through. You are the people, along with whoever your conspirators are, who created the "System." Why should I pay you to suffer for it? Vote: Al Gore.

Sincerely,
Joseph G. Hartwig

Bridges will still read twice-a-week paper

To the editor:

I have enjoyed reading the Seminole Herald over the past two or more years. Now that we are retired, we have time to read the Sentinel in the morning and the Herald in the evening.

According to your editorial, you will begin publishing the paper twice a week only. I'll miss reading you everyday (five days now) but if you continue to publish all the LOCAL news and more, I'll continue to look forward to receiving your newspaper even if only twice a week. Fill it with lots of pictures and local events!

Leshner thanks Herald for upbeat reporting

To the editor:

Hello all at the Seminole Herald. I'd like to express to you the thanks we all feel for using Mother's picture on her birthday, Sept. 8. You brought us all joy and you should have seen her smile when she saw it.

I also want to tell you that for years I've been coming to Sanford to visit from Pennsylvania and have always remarked how I like this newspaper for always being "upbeat" and reporting fun and good activities and events. I read it cover to cover and feel good and not "down" when I finish.

Thank you again,
Shuley Leshner,
Williamsport, Pa.

Some dreams die but others take their place

I run my finger along the baby's arm. His skin feels like antique silk, so smooth and soft that I linger over the bassinet, touching his face, his hands, his tiny feet.

"He's beautiful," I tell my friend Jan. She smiles and nods. "He is, isn't he?" This is Jan's third child. She's in her late 30s, a few years younger than I. She tells me she's done now. This is her last baby. Suddenly I realize, with a finality that settles me, that I'm doing, too.

The truth is, I have known since my son was born 10 years ago that he would be an only child. It was a decision my husband and I made for many good reasons. I have never deluded myself on this issue.

I kept a few favorite outfits from his infancy and two pairs of tiny sneakers.

But in our garage, where we keep all kinds of maybe-some-day-will-need-this-again junk, we have no baby clothes, no crib, no stroller, no tricycle. We gave away or tossed away things as our son finished with them. We knew we were and always would be a family of three.

But as I stand by the bassinet, stroking this baby's arm, I know that somewhere deep and unacknowledged, I have harbored a vague hope that, as long as I was young enough, perhaps by some unimagined circumstance, another baby might come into our lives. (Left on our doorstep, maybe, with a note pleading with us to take him in. Who could say no?)

I always expected to have a big family. I remember lying in bed at night as a child, spinning pictures in my head of a big house filled with lots of children (none of whom would be cursed with my fair skin and blunt nose). My yard would be strwn with Radio

Hillary goes legit during primetime debate against Lazio

Hillary Clinton is a politician. She may prefer a less modest job title — "lifelong advocate for children" is one favorite — but last Wednesday's TV debate with Rep. Rick Lazio ended all that.

Thanks to her hour of public inspection, shared with her New York rival, the first lady deserves the title of Democrat. Finally, after two decades of deriving power from her husband, she seeks it directly from the electorate. She asks not for applause for her good deeds, but for votes that will put her in the United States Senate.

To attain this higher elevation, Hillary has taken an extraordinary step for someone so personally and professionally guarded. She has exposed herself.

Why did she mislead the country by saying her husband's relationship with a White House intern was cooked up by a "vast right-wing conspiracy"? NBC's Tim Russert asked.

"Obviously, I didn't mislead anyone," she answered with senatorial calm. "I didn't know the truth."

Why did she push a huge national health care plan that threatened New York's teaching hospitals? Russert demanded.

"We did attempt to reform our health care system," she answered, again with neither sweat nor squirm. "As everyone knows, that was not successful." She took specific blame for having failed to adequately help the teaching hospitals "six, seven years later."

And so it went for her share of the full 60 minutes. We saw a first lady acting anything but, taking on the moderator's tough questions, accompanied by the relentless jabs of a Republican opponent unafraid to let fly at every opening.

Isn't democracy great? With all its flaws, it offers something unavailable from any other form of government: the occasional chance to demand a personal, public accounting of those who would rule us.

For 20 years, beginning with Bill Clinton's election as Arkansas governor, Hillary avoided this reckoning. She refused to discuss her cases at the Rose Law firm while publicizing her selection as "one of America's top 100 lawyers." She refused to admit any role in the firing of White House travel office staffers while seeking the patronage their departure would make possible. She denied access to her national health care deliberations while demanding public adoption of their results.

Those desiring a damage report on the Hillary first lady should consult David Gergen's new book, "Eyewitness to Power." The top Clinton adviser describes in excruciating detail the national dysfunction that descends from a White House under divided command. Better than anyone before, Gergen illustrates how Hillary's political power would rise with each new episode of Bill's sexual weakness.

"It became obvious that the stories had privately humiliated Mrs. Clinton," he writes of the Paula Jones matter, "and her husband was deep in her doghouse. I sensed he was in no mood — and no position — to challenge her on anything. We were heading into the most important months of the health care fight with a president who was tiptoeing around the person in charge."

This is no way to run a presidency. It is certainly no way to build a new national health care system for the country. Had Clinton tapped a cabinet member, such as the seasoned professional Donna Shalala, secretary of Health and Human Services, to ramrod the top domestic mission of his presidency, the debacle of 1993 and 1994 might have been avoided. He did not, the insider Gergen reports, because his wife wanted the job.

Now Hillary is seeking power the right way: from the ballot. On Tuesday she won the Democratic nomination. On Wednesday, she tested her wits, brains and passion for public service in the primetime arena. You don't have to believe everything Hillary said, especially her claim to be a committed disciple of fiscal conservatism, a "New Democrat," to believe that her current pursuit of power is far more savory, and certainly more honest, than her last.

Win or lose, both Mrs. Clinton and the country will be better for her gutsy quest to win power over public policy openly and legitimately: not from a morally weakened spouse but from a democratically empowered electorate.

Chris Matthews, chief of the San Francisco Examiner's Washington Bureau, is host of "Hardball" on CNBC and MSNBC cable channels. The 1999 edition of "Hardball" was published by Touchstone Books.

Flyers and Wiffle balls. My fireplace would strain under the weight of so many Christmas stockings. I even kept a list of names I imagined someday writing on a series of birth certificates: David, April, Diana, Kevin.

But my life, like most lives, has lurched from one road to another, some I've sought myself, others I've found beneath my feet through luck or fate or whatever good and bad forces help shape our journeys. Along the way, I carried my accumulated dreams and expectations like heirlooms. I was going to live in New York.

I was going to attend law school. I was going to have lots of babies.

Then one day, with my 41st birthday just weeks away, I find myself having to let go. Everyone eventually does. We have no choice. We lose people we love. We lose jobs. We lose dreams. And each time we feel the same pang. It's as if the oldest pages of our scrapbook are slipping through our fingers in fine, dusty, irretrievable flakes.

I think about this on our drive home from Jan's. My son is in the back seat, my husband driving. Our new puppy, an Aussie shepherd mix named Bill, is draped over my son's lap, sleeping. I'm trying to sort out how I feel: a little melancholy, perhaps, for what I'll never have, but I also realize I'm not sad. I'm not disappointed. I have no regrets.

I will never live in New York; I have San Francisco instead. I will never become a lawyer; I am a journalist instead. I will never be a mother to a brood; I am the mother to one wonderful boy instead.

We get to today with these particular people in this particular place through no particular plan. We make the best choices we can each day and by some miracle usually end up all right. Maybe we even end up where we're supposed to be, doing exactly what we're supposed to do.

Maybe you let go of a dream not because the dream has died. You let go because another one has taken its place.

Let the kids park free ... give them back the $70

The good and bright students at our seven public high schools pay $70 for the privilege to park their cars. The fees provide the salary of extra security personnel needed to watch the kids park.

Teachers park free, of course.

"Why would they pay to work?" I was told.

The concept of education shouldn't be to scrounge every last penny out of our precious young people. Next thing you know, the security guards will want more pay and the fees go sky high. By 2020, our best and brightest kids will be spending $2,020 to park on the high-school lot.

"You're bringing back a sore subject," I was told Friday. "Mr. Hagerty won't like this."

Mr. Hagerty is, of course, Superintendent of Schools: Paul Hagerty. He's a robust old codger — a pillar of decency and decorum.

I'm sure he wants what is best for the students and may want to implement my strategy to save the children the $70 parking fee. You might call it, a rob Paul! to pay the meter plan.

Here's how it would work: the superintendent would contribute a portion of his salary to pay for security personnel wages. The school board commissioners would make similar sacrifices.

The way I figure, the six school big shots will still have plenty in their pockets while making several thousand kids very happy. The refunds could begin before the start of the second term.

Most of us have fond memories of being old enough to drive a car to school. I had to wait until the last couple months of my senior year. I had just purchased a second-hand 1949 Ford coupe. It was blue and had a sunshield. My friends called it the "Blue Goose."

Russ White

The school didn't require even a parking pass, and there were no security guards. The school officials knew who we were — and we knew who we were. We went to school to learn — not to pay parking fees. We were responsible to our teachers, not toll takers.

If the school honchos aren't willing to accept responsibility to obtain free parking for their students, perhaps community business leaders will respond. Firestone, for instance, could rent a section of a high-school parking lot. Firestone could use some young friends, right?

I'm afraid to suggest that the Orlando Magic buy an entire school lot. The kids would have to pay $10 a day to park at such a facility unless they had good jumpers or were 7-foot-tall.

The thing to remember kids is that your pain is my pain. Uncle Russ wants to help you, especially if it is at the expense of your school superiors. I want to save you $70. Think of what you can do with money like that. Buy a CD. Go see "Hollow Man."

Drive safely.
