The jackpot rolled over when nobody won in the Oct. 6 drawing, then jumped from $16 million to an estimated $20 million because of brisk sales carly in the week.

Nation is sinking into the 'Politics of Disgust'

By GREGORY B. MARKUS Written for UPI

ANN ARBOR. Mich. - As Election Day approaches, the public mood is foul - make no mistake. A majority of Americans believe the govern-ment in Washington will do the right thing "only some of the time" or "never."

and three out of four think "elected officials in Washington lose touch with the people pretty quickly."

Asked in May which political party is better able to manage the government well, a plurality of respondents (31 percent) chose an option not even offered by the pollster: neither party.

These findings come from the latest Times-Mirror survey and other recent media polls. Other data show that voters are angry at elected officials for first helping to create and then failing to come to grips with a daunting array of "crisises" - crime, the environment, education, lagging standards of living, the S&L ballout and. lately, the likelihood of a recession.

KAWKAWLIN, Mich. - Theima and Charles Bellows are not about to walk away from the $10 million they thought they had won late last week.

McDonald's restaurants announced Mrs. Bellows as a big winner in its "McMillions" contest on Friday and then, a few hours later, announced the 49-year-old mother of five had been disqualified. Mrs. Bellows said Saturday the was too emotional to talk about the wild reversal in her fortunes.

But now, she and her husband are contemplating a lawsuit to challenge the decision. McDonald's officials said Mrs. Bellows was disqualified because a daughter works at one of the company's restaurants. Contest rules bar the immediate family of McDonald's employees from participating.

Youth club cleans local 'fishing hole'

SANFORD - Concern over pollution is not just something for adults. Children aged 7 to 10 are also involved at the West Sanford Boys and Girls Club.

It may be just a ditch, but the children consider the water flowing near the club building as their "fishing hole." Recently, five children banded together and spent many hours cleaning out the debris and trash that had collected in the area.

"They were getting tired of people using it as a garbage dump," said Donna Kanaga, the club's gameroom coordinator.

Kanaga explained. "They had a broken shovel to use, and they chopped old roots with a dull hatchet. Besides that, they used bare hands and enthusiasm.

State officials predict one-fifth of the 4.5 million cars to be tested will fail the first time, a Sunday report in the Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel said.

Unless those cars undergo tuneups and minor repairs to bring them up to code - at a cost estimated at $50 to $100 for the average car their owners cannot renew their registration tags.

That $90 million estimate does not include the $10 cost of the test.

The tests will be required in Dade, Broward and Palm Beach counties, in the Tampa Bay area and in the Jacksonville area, for all cars and light trucks made in 1975 or later.

But the twice-delayed testing program could be further delayed in some areas because of opposition to proposed locations for inspection centers.

ORLANDO - New research raises the question about the long-term benefits of mating the Florida panther with the South American puma.

A report published Monday in the National Geographic Research Journal said that Florida's panthers might not be as biologically pure as some had hoped.

The Endangered Species Act was written in 1973 to protect only the purest of animals. But as biologists discover new ways to interbreed similar animals, the law may have to be re-written to protect those animals that breed naturally with other animals.

The Florida panther may be the test case. The federal overnment has asked researchers to determine whether some government has asked rescarched to between two species or Florida panthers are hybrids, a cross between two species or subspecies.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE Advisor's post boosted lobbying

TAMPA - Within a year of engineering Gov. TAMPA — Within a year of engineering Gov. Bob Martinez's election in 1966, the governor's closest political adviser began lobbying efforts with state officials that benefited his legal firm, a published report said Sunday. While other lobbyists see no impropriety, they believe J.M. "Mac" Stipanovich's personal and political relationship with the governor may have provided some clients beeline access to the Republican administration, the Tampa Tribune said.

"Of course he's profiting from the relationship as has every campaign manager in the history of the world." said a Stipanovich fishing buddy, Ralph Haben, a state legislator-turned-lobbyist. "It's no different than what's been done in the past.

A close confidant of Martinez for more than a decade, Stipanovich said said he talks to the governor three times a day about the re-election campaign he is managing for the former Tampa mayo

But he said he has divorced himself from legal work and from lobbying on behalf of special interests during the campaign. Stipanovich denied that he would have used his or his clients. "It's fun and it's good soap-opera stuff that I'm the man behind the curtain and the man behind the throne and all this kind of stuff." Stipanovich and. "But I deny it and there's no objective cridence that I'm not telling the truth." The 41-year-old ex-Marine became Martines's deputy chief of staff shortly after the governor's insugaration in January 1987. He soon got bared with the bureaucracy and left the governor's office to rejoin his old law firm. By then, the Tamps firm of Powler, White, Gillen, Boggs, Villarcal and Banker, which has inspected its Tallahassee office. A month after teaving his state job, Stipanovich signed up to tobby for a number of corporations.

Unlike Florida legislators, who are limited by law in the types of contacts they may have for two years after leaving government, public officials appointed before July 1, 1989, can lobby their old colleagues right away.

"People may have hired me because of the influence they thought I had," Stipanovich said. "Either I didn't have it, or the governor didn't exercise it on my behalf to any extent greater than any other reasonably successful lobbyist in Tallahapacc.'

Last year, questions were raised about whether Stipanovich had pulled political strings for a tobacco company opposed to a 10 cents increase in the cigarette tax or for an equipment company that almost won a $34 million contract with the Department of Transportation.

Transportation Secretary Ben Watta took the unusual step of rejecting a turnpike contract award after the governor's office had asked him to investigate a losing bidder's contention that political favoritism was involved.

A state hearing officer who reviewed the award later wrote in a 54- page opinion that the facts of the case didn't support favoritism toward Stipanovich's legal client, PRC Public Manage-ment Services, a toll equipment supplier.

Also in 1989, three weeks before the end of legislative debate on increasing cigarette taxes, R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. hired Stipanovich for $25,000. At the time, Martinez said the company officials "wasted their money" because the tax eventually would have been vetoed if the Legislature hadn't defeated it.

Stipanovich shouldn't be "starved out of business simply because he happens to be someone who advises the governor on the political side," Martinez said.

Stipanovich said he accepted the $25,000 fee believing Martines would veto the proposed cigaretie tax increase. "Everybody knew he was against the cigaretie tax. "It didn't take a rocket scientist to figure it out."

Grant to help study killings' psychological impact

Group will study fear among residents, UF students and parents

WARHINGTON - The National Institute of Justice said Sunday it has approved a $15.000 grant to the University of Florids to study the psychological impact of a string of marriers in Gamesville.

"The brutal murders of five college students in Gainesville last month have created an atmosphere of fear for the students, the parents, the community and the residents of the state of Floride." said Charles DeWitt, director-designate of the institute.

"We need to help law enforcement agencies respond to such calamaties." DeWitt said. "We also want to learn how people are coping so that others can be shown how to deal with such psychological catastrophies."

The money will pay for an interagency agreement that, among other things, will prepare a national technical assistance guide for police departments across the country that face similar crimies in the future.

The guide will include a discussion of multiple murders, the most effective immediate response and the best ways of assisting family and friends of the victime.

Attorney General Dick Thornburgh an-nounced last month a 6041.630 grant to Florida for emergency law enforcement assistance in the investigation.

The bodies of tive victims, all college students who lived within 2 miles of each other and within 2 miles of the University of Plorida campus, were discovered Aug. 26, 37 and 27.

The victims, four women and one man, were all stabbed to death and some of the bodies had been mutilated. Four attended the University of Florida and one attended Santa Fe Community College in Gainesville.

A task force was formed immediately after the killings and is still investigating. No one has been charged.

Police publicly identified two suspects, both them in custody on other charges, but will no longer comment on whether they are still suspects. Published reports quoted investigators as enying genetic tests on hair and body fluids at the death scenes did not implicate either suspect.

EDITORIALS Seafood inspection

Fish is brain food, we were told, and now we are told that it is health food. We don't have to be told that seafood offers the finest kind of cating. There have been lobster bisques and bouillabaisses and barbecued crab dishes and salmon souffles that remain forever in blessed memory, not to speak of more recent sushis and sashimis. But now we find all of this is a tad risky. No matter what dietary benefits a fish dish can confer, it is not covered by federal inspection requirements. Mest and poultry are inspected routinely at taxpayers' expense. Fish and shellfish, although even more prone to contamination, are not.

This is a situation that should be easy to correct. The budget crunch, however, makes it next to impossible to start a new federal it next to impossible to start a new federal spending program unless it is self-financing. Perhaps a fee could be imposed on fish products to pay for the inspection. A further difficulty involves the continual sparring for jurisdiction between federal agencies. The Agriculture Department, which inspects meat and poultry, wants to be responsible for inspecting fish and shellfish also. Consumer advocates, such as Public Voice for Food and Heatih Polcy in Washing-ton, would prefer to have the Food and Drug Administration do the job. Time is short in this session of Congress. But there is time enough for urgent action.

up to a point, one can sympathize, specially if one lives in an exclusive, visitor-infested area in this country. But like that this country. Tourism most swords, this one has two edges. Tourism brings in tons of money, indeed. Britain expects 16 million foreign visitors this year. expects 16 million foreign visitors this year. Having it both ways is never easy. Still, The English Tourist Board is giving it a go by putting out a booklet. "20 Tips for Visitors," that seeks to tame foreign guests and thus, it's hoped, pacify the natives. Among other things, visitors are reminded to dress tastefully, restrain their horrid children and to asy "thank you" and "piesse" — which, of course, the English unfailingly do, own when they don't mean it even when they don't mean it. This raised a number of foreign cycbrows and voices. A Dutch official recalled the behavior of some British travelers. In particular those murderous soccer fans who have laid waste to more than one European city. A German noted the quaint British custom at home of queueing duitifully at bus stops, then impersonating a rugby team when the bus arrives. Yet the last word, property, goes to a perceptive Brit, the Daily Mail editorial writer who assessed the govern-ment's "good manners" guide as follows: "That's ripe, coming from one of the most litter-strewn, ghetto-blasted, lager-loutish tribes in the global village. Surely...the only same advice to our millions of paying guests should be: Please don't go native in England. We already have more than enough of our own!" WILLIAM A. RUSHER

What became of merit in learning?

Say what you will about the American system of public education, it was, as Herbert Hoover said of prohibition, "an experiment noble in purpose." The states would offer an education to all children alike in schools maintained at public expense. From these, or private schools accred-ited by the state and meeting similar standards, our youngsters would emerge to take up their roles as responsible citizens. Thus would the cultural values of our American heritage be transmitted down the years to generations yet unborn. unborn.

unborn. It hasn't worked out quite that way. For one thing, the Supreme Court in 1964 took judicial notice of the fact that the "separate but equal" school facilities provided by many states for black and white schoolchildren were in fact very far from "equal." A long effort was begun to insure equal educational opportunities for whites and blacks by insisting that they attend the same schools. But this effort has been only nartially successful, and even where it is partially successful, and even where it is successful the educational results for the two races are rarely the same. The dropout rate for black students is much higher, and the grades of those blacks who stay the course are often sharply lower.

Moreover, the same is true of college scores. It is not too much to say that the problem of what to do about the discrepancy is one of the most critical issues facing the nation today. From the legislature of California there have

From the legislature of now emerged two bills, proposing solutions that differ in detail but are alitie in principle. One - AB 462, introduced by Assemblyman Tom Hayden, commands all three segments of California public bigher education its higher education "to approximate, by the year 2000, a diverse student body which mirrors the composition of recent high-school gradu-ates, both in firstyear classes and subsequent colleges and university graduating classes. for individuals from groups." This amounts to a flat legislative order to California public colleges and universities, first to admit and to graduate a student population which "mirrors" the proportion of "under-represented or economically disadvantaged represented or economically disadvantaged groups" among recent high-school graduates. AB 3993, introduced by Assembly Speaker Willie Brown, would go even further in enforcing "comprehensive equity goals in higher educa-tion." It requires enhanced success at all educational levels so that there are similar achievement patterns among all groups regard-less of ethnic origin race gender, age, disability less of ethnic origin, race, gender, age, disability or economic circumstances." It directs every college and university in the state to "implement programs to facilitate higher graduation rates" for individuals belonging to "underrepresented groups." If signed by Governor Deukmejian, which surely they will not be, these appalling pieces of legislation would quite simply spell the end of marican experiment in public the 200-year American experiment in public education.

In these bills, equality of opportunity has been jettisoned quite openly in favor of equality of result. It reminds one of the reason Lord Russell said he enjoyed awarding the Order of the Garter: "There's no damned merit about it."

No perfect moment for art world

BOSTON — There are times when the Mapplethorpe trial in Cincinnati produces testimony worthy of the title attached to the museum exhibit: "The Perfect Moment."

Pefect Moment Number One: Prosecutor Frank Prouty holds up two photographs, one of a man with a bullwhip in his rectum. He asks the art director who chose these images for the show: "Would you call these sexual acts?" She answers: "I would call them figure studies." studies.

Perfect Moment Number Two: Prouty ques-tions museum director Dennis Barrie: "This photograph of a man with his finger inserted in his penis, what is the artistic content of that?" He responds: "It's a striking photograph in terms of light and composition."

Perfect Moment Number Three? This one occurs when even the most devoted defender of free expression lifts her eyes from the page to offer her own art criticism to the great curator in the sky: "AAAARGGH!"

There was never any doubt in my mind that the trial over Robert Mapplethorpe's photo-graphs would bring "a cultural clash" into the courtroom. Sobo meets Cincinnati.

But in its opening week, the testimony turned into a linguistic battle, a tale of two tongues: One side speaking art: one side speaking English. It began to sound less like a case about obscenity than about class, slitlem, artistic sensibilities and common sense.

Americans often divide like this when dealing with art. One group thinks that Andy Warhol's Brillo Box is brilliant and the other thinks it's a scam. Each believes the other a pack of foois, though one may be called anobs and the other rubes. Guess which one is larger?

The divide is bad enough when the argu-ment is about Brillo. But when it's about bodies, watch out.

The seven planage of a large in this trial contain noise gravities subjects. In one of them a main uringers into another man's mouth. Show me constantly who can look at that photograph and think about the composi-tion, the symmetry, the classical arc of the liquid and 1'll show you consense with an advanced degree in fine arts. This is the sort of thing being and in Cincinnati.

By the end, the verdict may bings on legal maneuvers. The Contemporary Arts Center may have lost when the judge denied its plea to show all the photographs, not just these. The outcome may have been determined in the jury selection. There are no museum-goers, no artists, no students of "What is Art?" in this group.

about the line of the second

But the trial in Cincinnati, like the troubles at the National Endowment for the Arts, are partly the result of the art world's own chic insularity. They come because the art com-munity speaks its private language to a circle so small, so cosy and so closed as to be dangerusly isolated. Perfect Moment Number Four: The prosecu-tion asked how art was determined — was it merely the whim of the museum? The wilness, a museum director.

and will not be finished until late October or early November. The United States will not launch any attack until all the equipment has been received.

"We can't begin a battle with tanks still on ships at ses." one top Pentagon official said. Still, the analysis at the Pentagon and the Still, the analysis at the Pentagon and the Central Intelligence Agency are worried that Saddam, with a bad case of the jitters, could make the first strike on his own this week to pre-empt any U.S. attack. Those analysis consider a cornered Saddam to be a danger-ous Saddam. Currently, Iraq has more than 175.000 troops in Kuwait and another 175.000 or one in Kuwait and another 175,000 or so near the Iraq-Kuwait border. The United States has more than 175,000 troops in or near Saudi Arabia, but is moving toward a full deployment as high as 250,000 people. The number of Saudi and other allied troops in place or en route could bring the people. The number of Baudi and other allied troops in place or en route could bring the total to more than 300,000. Our intelligence sources estimate that the Iraqis have more than 1.500 tanks in Kuwait and another 1,500 or so just over the border in Iraq. The United States hopes to have 1,000 tanks in Saudi Arabia by Nov. 1.

The final decision to attack would be up to the president, the Pentagon and the State Department, and sources tell us Bush will feel pressure to use the troops within a month of full deployment. The Pentagon sources speak about the "fighting edge" of the Americana in the desert. Heat, boredom and alienation in a strange land will sap the soldiers of their spirit. State Department sources say the politics of the conflict also conspire to favor an early stack by U.S. forces. For one thing, an early stack by U.S. forces. For one thing, Saudi Arabiane are uncomfortable with a foreign army encamped in their very private country.

And as the months go by, that discomfort will turn to antagonism. Other Arab allies are also likely to leave the hastily stitched alliance if the crisis drags out. Th y would change sides not out of love for Saddam, but out of fear that a prolonged crisis would push them tenered a repugnant alliance with lerael. Almosty, Buddam, Jurden's King Hussein and Priorities Liberation Organization leader Yast Arafist are linking the resolution of the iragi occupation to a resolution of the israeli occupation of Palestinian territories.

One scenario that U.S. intelligence analysis say Soldam is considering is to attack Israel if the United States attacks Iraqi troops, Israel would return fire, and all bets would be off. would return fire, and all bets would be off. The Arab nations, including perhaps even Saudi Arabia, could switch allegiance overnight to side with Saddam in a holy war against lersel. Our sources say it is that accessite that prompted Arafat to line up with Saddam in the first place. Arafat is afraid of finding himself on the wrong side of an Arab-israeli war.

Composer Bernstein dies at 72

NEW YORK — Leonard Bernstein, 72, a legend of American and world music as revered on Broadway and in Hollywood as he was in Philharmonic Hall and Vienna, is dead only days after retiring from public performance because of ill health.

The versatile composer, conductor, planist, author and educator died Sunday evening at his Manhattan home with his son, Alexander, at his bedaide. The cause of death was sudden cardiac arrest caused by lung failure, said Dr. Kevin Cahili, Bernstein's personal physician, who also was present. Bernstein, a longtime heavy smoker, only last week had announced that, on Cahill's advice, he was canceling all conducting engagements and giving up performing at the plano due to worsening emphysema complicated by a pleural tumor and recurrent pulmonary infections.

ike remembered on 100th birthday

GETTYSBURG, Pa. - Comedian Bob Hope and former President Gerald R. Ford joined the citizens of Gettysburg to mark the 100th birthday of Dwight D. Eisenhower, the nation's 34th president and "everybody's friend."

Under warm, sunny skies in the historic Civil War town, some 2,500 people gathered Sunday outside Gettysburg College to honor the World War II general known by most Americans as "Ike."

"He gave me an "I Like Ike" button," said Hope. "I wore it for 47 years. Those tattoos are so hard to get off."

Sewer gas sickens tourists

LAS VEGAS. Nev. - More than 100 gamblers and vacationers, complaining of nausea and breathing difficulties, were hospitalized Sunday after being overcome by an apparent release of sewer gas inside two Las Vegas Strip hotel-casinos. The release of fumes forced the temporary closure of a basement recreational level of the Excalibur Hotel-casino known as "Fantasy Fair" and the evacuation rooms on the 22nd floor in the Paradise Tower of the Tropicana Hotel-Casino.

A dispatcher for Mercy Ambulance said 107 people were transported to area hospitals between 3 p.m. and 9 p.m. EDT and two ambulances remained on standby at the resorts into the evening. Hospital attendants said most of the people were treated, primarily by administering oxygen, and released.

Abortion rate for unmarried women drops

By CHARLES S. TAYLOR United Press International

ATLANTA - The abortion rate for unmarried women and teenagers is dropping, the feder-al Centers for Disease Control reports, but the proportion of black and women minorities going to a legal clinic is increasing. The proportion of women ob-taining an abortion in their state of residence also is increasing. from 89 percent in 1975 to 93 IN THE CIRCUIT COURT, EIGENTREENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT, IN AND FOR SEMINDLE COUNTY, FLORIDA. It has remained at approximately 92 percent since 1984, the CDC reported.

These and other findings are outlined in the CDC's latest abortion surveillance summary that includes the years 1986 and 1987, the latest time period for which figures were compiled. The CDC compared the abortion statistics for those years with the numbers and percentages it col-lected between 1972-1985. The federal health agency first began it abortion surveillance in 1969.

According to the CDC. 1.353.671 American women obtained legal abortions in 1987, a 2 percent increase over the 1,328,112 reported to the agency in 1986.

The national abortion rate decreased from 24 abortions per 1,000 women ages 15-44 in 1985 to 23 per 1,000 in 1986 and increased again to 24. per 1.000 in 1967.

The CDC admitted, however, that its figures may be on the low side.

"The number of legal abor-tions reported to the CDC in 1986 and 1987 were probably lower than the number actually performed," it said in its "Abor-tion Surveillance, 1986-1987." It noted that CDC numbers are obtained from central health agencies whose totals are often CARACAS. Venezuela — After more than a century. South American independence hero Simon Bolivar's cobweb-covered dream of a united Latin America is being dusted off in a growing wave of enthusiasm for huge regional free-trade sones. While Bolivar's 19th century plan for a single political unit covering all of Latin America is still not probable, the theme of economic integration has caught fire — wildfire it seems. Brazil, Argentina and Uruguay have signed agreements to create a common market by 1995, with the possible participation of Chile. Mexico and Chile are siming for the same date.

nited Press Intern

OSLO. Norway — Soviet Presi-dent Mikhail Gorbachev was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize Monday for his "leading role" in the world peace process and his support for "dramatic changes." Gorbachev, credited with proventing Community regimes preventing Communist regimes from crushing the peaceful revo-lutions that swept Eastern Europe last year, had topped a short list of nominees considered favorites for the peace prize, awarded by Norway's Nobel Committee.

"Words fail one at such mo-ments." Gorbachev said in comments carried by the Soviet Union's official Tass news agency. "I am moved." Gorbachev told Norwegian Bedte he would come to Norwegian Radio he would come to Norway Dec. 10 to accept the prize. "I am touched and proud." Gorbachev said, adding he felt like a "successor to Andrei Sakharov." the late Soviet dissident awarded the prize in 1975.

Announcing the awar Committee Secretary Gidske Anderson said Gorbachev was chosen for "his leading role in the world peace process." "Gorbachev has given many and decisive contributions to the dramatic changes that have marked this world." he said.

Andersson said the Nobel Committee considered whether. to award the prize to more than one candidate, but "found that Gorbachev's importance is so great that this year the prise should go to him alone."

"Immense changes are in progress after his initiatives." Andersson said in announcing the prestigious award, which the prestigious an includes $700,000.

Words fail one at such moments. I am moved.

-Gerbache In Washington. President Bush congratulated Gorbachev on his victory, saying the Boviet leader has "been a courageous force for peaceful change in the world."

world." "He has brought historically significant changes, both politi-cal and economic, to the Soviet Union and to Eastern Europe," Bush said in a written state-ment. "East-West relations hold greater promise for peace and world stability today than at any time in the last 45 years." Apart from Gorbachev, other natisfaction" at the award. "It shows the Soviet Union is now regarded with confidence by the rest of the world," Norwegian television quoted Ligachev as saying. In its citation, the Norwegian Nobel Committee said it had "wanted to hone Mikhail Cortachev for his many and Gorbachev for his many and decisive contributions." to the "historic changes" now taking place between East and West.

"During the last few years, dramatic changes have taken place in the relationship between East and West. Confrontation has been replaced by negotis-tions," the citation said.

"The arms race is slowing down and we see a definite and active process in the direction of arms cuntrol and disarmament." it added. "These historic changes apr-ing from several factors." the cliation cuntinued, asying it wished to honor Gorbachev for his role. his role.

"The greater openness he has brought about in Boviet society has also helped promote in-ternational trust." the citation said.

Roy Medvedev. a former dissident rehabilitated by Gorbachev and now a member of the Supreme Soviet, and the award was well-deserved. "No one else in the past year has realized such success in the politics of peace as Gorbachev," Medvedev and.

Alexel Yemelyanov, another member of the Supreme Soviet, was more critical of the Soviet president because of his mestic problems.

"This is the only sphere where Gorbachev's activities have Gorbachev's activities have produced positive results, where there has been new thinking." Yemelyanov said. "We have become a bit more civilized and more humane. And the world has noticed and responded." Norway's Prime Minister Jan Byte said Blonday of the sward to Gorbachev: "The award is a well-advised choice by the Nobel Committee."

It was an unusual wesk for the Lake Mary High School girls' volleyball team. Last Tuesday, the Rame suffered one of the worst losses in the school's history, falling 15-2, 10-15, 15-0 to Lake Howell. Actually, things started to go wrong when Coach Willie Richardson (above) was ejected near the and of the junior varsity match. But on Thursday, Coach Cindy Henry (right) and her team bounced back to defeat Oviedo 3-15, 15-10, 15-13.

Some local officials making a tough job tougher

Since today is designated "Na-tional Officials Day" on the Florida High School Activities Association calendar, it seems appropriate that we take this time to discuss those arbiters crucial to the success of interscholastic athletics. Being a sports official is easily one of the most demanding and frustrating careers that is not actu-ally life-threatening (or not sup-posed to be). As many officials have said. "Being an (umpire, referee or whatever) is the only job where you have to be perfect at the beginning and improve every game." An official should be anonymous, like a piece of equipment. You do everything right and no one knows you're there. Make a mistake and the entire building can come down around your cars.

around your ears. That being said, there appears to be a growing problem with the officiating in high school girls' volleyball. Not only does it seem that some officials (and I can't stress the word "some" enough) don't have a rudimentary knowledge of rules, but the interpretation and application of rules is incomstent. In other states (and, in Florids, in other sports), the steps to become a high school varsity official is specific and stringent. Clinics, practicals and a passing grade on a test are demanded before getting certified as an official.

After several discussions with local coaches who wish to remain unnamed for obvious reasons. I learned that this is not the case with vulleyball officials. There are clinics.

learned that this is not the case with volicyball officials. There are clinics, classes and tests, but the demand to attend and/or pass is not as high. The biggest reason for that is the addition of boys' volicyball. There were just enough decent officials to cover all the varsity girls action in Central Florida. With the boys now playing volicyball, that stretches an already thin pool of officials. But even that's not a real pro-ties. I think that most of us, given the time to think about it rationally, can respect an honest effort by a hard-working official who's doing his or her best and sincerely attempting to call the best match within their skills.

within their skills. What has exacerbated the situa-tion has been the undeniably beligerent attitude of a handful of officials who, for some inexplicable reason, keep showing up at key matches during the regular season. You normally don't see an arro-sant, combative attitude in a good official. The confidence that comes from being good at your job helps you rise above the occasional quee-tions of your judgement or ability. Not only that, the confidence exhib-ted in making a call (also known as "selling" the call) reduces the number of arguements. How can you argue with someone who's sure he or she is right. Indecisiveness, the tendency to rely heavily on the rule book or the rely heavily on the rule book or the willingness to constantly get into debates over calls betrays an uncertainty. It looks like an official is trying to convince himself or herself that they were right.

Like an animal can sense fear, coaches and athletes know when an official is unsure of a call and will always choose that instant to at-tack. And no one likes to be accused of being wrong, even if you are wrong.

It's an explosive combination. You have an intense, tightlyted match between two to con in the hunt for the conference champion. One bad call. Another bad call. Coaches and players get frustrated. The chip on the official's shoulder gets bigger. Confrontations are inevitable.

Is this what high school athle is supposed to be about? If it were one or two incidents, could call it a coincidence, if it t If it were one or two incidents, you could call it a coincidence. If it were the same coach, you could say be or she had something to do with it. But

and rand something to do with it. But its happened several times to sever-al different coaches. Again, I have to stress that these officials are the exception to the rule. The problem is, there's guilt by association. If a player, coach, fan or whatever thinks they got the short end of the atick from an official things will be them.

short end of the stick from an official, things will be twice as difficult for the next official who has to work in front of that person. You'd think it wouldn't be too much to ask, to have trained, qualified officials at varsity athletic events, officials at varsity athletic events, officials at varsity athletic and maintains the mocessary pro-fessional attitude. fessional attitude.

But apparently it is.

Trees are different than people Recent research about tree

PERMITS AND ADD AND A THE AVERAGE AND A growth is changing what we d to think about tree care. Dr. Ed Gillman from the Department of Environmental Horticulture at the University of Florida in Gainesville has been a primary researcher in tree culture and has been instrumental in dispelling misconceptions about trees. I want to share with you some of his findings.

A State of the sta

Trees are different than people! People and other animals are able to heat themselves by replacing or regenerating injured tissue. A cut on your finger quickly heals. Several weeks later, the injured area is hardly noticeable.

Trees. on the other hand, are unable to replace injured tissue. Instead, they form boundaries around an injury and seal the area off from the rest of the tree. The "scaled off" wood within the area can no longer supply the rest of the tree with stored food. Notice any healed injury on trees around your yard and look' carefully at the amount of callus tissue that surrounds it. Doesn't it look scaled of?

A small trunk wound inflicted by equipment like a string weed trimmer can cause major injury or kill a treef Remember, trees cannot replace or heal tissue like us. String trimmer injury can girdle the trunk and the tree loses the capability to move nutrients and water up to the leaves and down to the roots. In addition, any injury permanent-ly reduces the trees' capacity to fight future stress like attacks by insects or disease. Always place a mulched tree ring around trees so that you do not have to trim the gruss or weeds close to the trunk of the tree.

Most trees do not have tap roots! In sandy, well-drained solls, some trees such as oaks and pines develop deep roots directly beneath the trunk which are tap roots, but many trees never develop tap roots. When the water table is close to the soil surface or where the soil is compacted, tap roots do not develop. Tap roots generally do not develop on trees planted in our urban landacapes.

Tree roots grow far beyond the dripline or edge of the branchest Roots on trees and shrubs planted in the landscape grow as far as three times the branch spread in as little as two or three years after planting. Thus. damaging the roots that extend well beyond te branches can happen easily during planting. construction or other types of activity around the roots. Generally, most tree and shrub roots are in the upper foot of soil near the surface.

Grading to prepare a site for laying nod or planting shrubs can harm trees! Since many of the fine feeding roots are located close to the soil surface, changing the grade of the soil by as little as 6 inches can cause extensive damage to the root system of existing trees. Design the landscape to fit the existing grade. If a grade change is absolutely necessary, remove the tree since it will decline anyway and replant a young

If a tree survives the first two to four years following construction, it may still die from construction related injuries! Trees frequently decline after con-struction of a house. Often, branches begin dying within a year or two due to severe root damage. The tree may be dead in 4 years. However, it is not uncommon for trees to show a slow decline over a 5-to-15-year period. The tree may not show signs of decline for many years, but following a drought or other stress, the trees may quickly lose leaves, begin a rapid decline and may be dead within a year or two.

There are more of these misconceptions about trees that will review in a seminar on Wednesday, October 24th at 7:00 P.M. The seminar will be held at the Seminole County Agriculture Center located across from Fies World off 17-92. The program is free and open to the pupile. Call me 323-2500, Ext. 5558 for more information.

All Seminole County Cooperalive Extension Service programs are open to all regardless of race. color, sex or national origin.

Faulty test isn't worth second try

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from the woman whose doctor disgnosed her with chiamydia. She said she had been faithful to her husband for 91/2 years, and he claimed to have been faithful to her. She asked if she could have been carrying the disease that long You told her yes, it was possible.

This situation sounded all too familiar to mc. That's why I'm writing. I recently went for a checkup at my local state health department, and was told upon initial examination that, I too. had chlamydia. I had been married for 10 years and had been faithful to my husband, and never did I doubt his faithfulness. I told the nurse this, and she said that the doctor felt no need to run another test to confirm the diagnosis as I had complained of the symptoms and he was 99 percent sure. But if I wanted to be sure which sexually transmitted disease I had, they would take a sample for the test.

Then I went home and con-fronted my husband. He said a ary -I have since contacted the health department and asked the people there to counsel their staff, as this could have ruined a marriage that was not as strong as ours. Please publish this letter. And sign me...

DEAR DR. GOTT: Are drug companies committing murder?" Every year, 125,000 people are killed by prescription drugs. You recently advised a reader with costochondritis to use Indocin, ust mu conv of "Worst Dills Best yet my copy of "Worst Pills, Best Pills" tells me it can cause depression, mood changes, confusion, epilepsy, and Parkinson's disease can be worsened. Now what do you think?

DEAR READER: With this issue - as with many others in medicine — it's important to examine the risk/benefit ratio before making a blanket condemnation.

I don't know how you arrived at the figure you quoted. Such a figure would be next to impossible to compile. Surely, thousands of people die every year from prescription drugs, but many of these patients suffer from incurable diseases for which potent medicines offer the only hope; some patients have unpredictable allergic reactions; other people may use the drugs improperty. In good conscience, I couldn't blame the medicines' 37 Am not (si.) manufacturers for these unfortunate outcomes.

More important, all medicines - both prescription and over-the-counter drugs - are dangerous and have side effects. When we take these medicines, we do so with the knowledge that we might be one of the few people who will experience dif-ficulty. This is the way it is; this is one of life's risks.

Penicillin is one of the most dangerous drugs. It is associated with a high incidence of com-plications and side effects, such as severe allergic reactions and shock. However, it has saved shock. movever, it may saved millions of lives. Are we going to deprive a child with pneumonia of the very drug that could return him or her to health? Of course not. We — the doctors benefits vs. the risks and give the drug (or withhold it) based on a rational analysis.

North's negative double could have created a problem, particu-lariy if South jumped in the heart suit. North was lucky in two respects: First, South invited game in spades, and second, South was Houston expert Eddie Wold, who, as declarer, made the right assumptions from of his trunps, throwing two low hearts from his hand. Meanwhile. East had three more desards to make, and wound up blanking his king of hearts. Declarer played a low diamond from dummy. When East followed with the seven-spot. Wold played the eight from his hand. West showed out. Declarer now eached the ace of hearts and played back a low diamond. East won the king and had to give up the last two tricks to declarer's A-10 of diamonds. Lesson: Early discards in a suit known to be important to declarer can be a tip-off that a defender has length and strength in that suit. In today's deal, if East first throws two hcarts, declarer might misread the situation. (C) 1990, NEWSPAPER EN-TERPRISE ASSN.

Since South's opening bid had been one diamond, these discards made little sense unless East had extra length in the suit. So Wold decided that East had started with four hearts and six diamonds.
