Congressional Delegation Split On Nerve Gas, ERA

Two hot issues in Congress this week were a resurrected "Equal Rights Amendment," killed by the House Tuesday, and whether the 14-year old ban on the production of chemical weapons should be lifted.

The chemical weapons measure permits production to resume and was sent to a conference committee of both the House and Senate to work out differences in the versions that passed in each house.

Sen. Lawton Chiles, R-Lakeland, voted against the proposal. Chiles felt the military or defense department already has sufficient stockpiles of chemical weaponry on hand and does not need more in light of budget problems and huge deficits.

"Chiles feels this is an area where money could be saved," said Jack Pridgeon, the senator's aide.

ERA defeat blamed on politics, page 2A

Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Winter Park, announced her plan to vote for the measure, but then withdrew her vote to "pair" with Sen. Thad Cockran, R-Mississippi, who has strongly opposed the nerve gas production, but could not be present to vote on the matter. Pairing is a usual courtesy among members of the Congress and also among state legislators.

Meanwhile, U.S. Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Altamonte Springs, voted for a limited production of nerve gas earlier. He said that while he doesn't support the type of warfare where nerve gas or other forms of chemical warfare would be used, the limited amount of nerve gas could be used as leverage in negotiations with the Soviet Union.

"We ought to be concerned about chemical or biological weaponry," McCollum said. "I object to producing a stockpile, but the limited production can be used as leverage in negotiating with the Soviet Union to provide verification of arms."

McCollum, a member of the House Judiciary Committee, was in the minority earlier this week when he voted against the ERA amendment and voted for four additions to the amendment that failed.

Chiles in the past, said Pridgeon, has voted for the concept of equal rights, but has not had an opportunity to look over the new amendment proposal.

Mrs. Hawkins meanwhile has not favored the new ERA because she thought the "wording was too vague," said her aide Christina Evans. "She is not against equal rights as such."

McCollum said the four additions to the version he voted for, but which failed by vote of the majority of the committee, are key ones.

He said the four items would have eliminated the possibility of later court action: "The courts would not be able to take ERA and use it as a basis for ruling that women do or do not have a right to abortion and to prohibit the drafting of men only," he said.

McCollum said it would also mean that ERA could not be used to force women into combat roles in the military and would protect private and parochial unisex school from having to go coeducational or lose federal money.—Donna Estes

Shots Fired, Suspect In Custody

Gunman Robs Sanford Bank

A gunman held up the Florida National Bank (formerly Tropic Bank) in Sanford about 11 a.m. today, but was captured a few moments later during a foot chase in which he fired three shots at police.

Details of the robbery were sketchy at press time, but Sanford Police Chief Ben Butler said the robbery suspect was in custody by 11:17 a.m. He said as far as he knew then, although there was some shooting during the chase, no one was injured.

Chief Butler said early reports indicate the man, in his early or mid-twenties, entered the bank on 25th St., near S. Park Drive., brandished a weapon and demanded money. Butler said the man got away briefly with "a considerable amount of cash in large bills," but was captured shortly after he left the bank.

Butler said the money was recovered along with the suspect's .38 caliber pistol.

Police said they were called at 11:03

a.m. by bank employees who reported the robbery and said the man fled on foot. About 10 officers were sent to the scene and apparently spotted the suspect not too far from the bank. During a four-to-five block chase, the suspect was ordered to halt three times by Officer Aaron Keith after the lawman saw the suspect fire once at police. Officer Keith said he heard two other shots fired before the suspect was captured.

Sgt. Bill Bernosky said although police did not return his fire, the man stopped running and surrendered.

The suspect identified himself to police as Tony Johnson, 24, of Daytona Beach, Bernosky said.

Although the suspect entered the bank alone, police said today they believe an accomplice or accomplices were waiting nearby with a getaway car. A search was continuing for additional suspects.

An FBI agent in Orlando said his office had not been notified by 11:45 a.m., but "we'll be up there to look into it."

Roland Lamar Dean

'...throughout the 30-year period... we were in the thick of every fight.'

Former Herald Owner, Editor Dead At 83

By Jane Casselberry
Herald Staff Writer

Roland Lamar Dean, owner and editor of the Sanford Herald from 1924-1954, died Monday at the age 83 at Winter Park Towers, 1111 S. Lakemont, Winter Park, where he resided. He was buried today at Woodlawn Memorial Park, Miami. Memorial services will be held at 10 a.m. December 22 at the Holy Cross Episcopal Church, Sanford.

Born August 16, 1900, in West Palm Beach, he moved to Winter Park from Sanford in 1953.

He was also a former editorial writer for the Orlando Sentinel. He became an associate editor there in 1954 after selling his interest in the Herald to Fred Perkins. He was still a contributing editor and writer for the Sentinel in the early 70s.

While living in Sanford, Mr. Dean and his late wife, newspaper columnist and writer Nina Oliver Dean, who died in 1979, made their home in Indian Mound Village.

She had been chairman of the English department at Rollins College.

Dean was sent to Sanford fresh out of Yale University by Miami newspaperman R.H. Berg to look after his circulation business. When they discovered the Sanford Herald was for sale, they made arrangements to buy it from the owner Robert Holly, who had founded the paper in 1908. His brother, Gordon, who still lives in Sanford, was co-owner and business manager.

The Herald's first project after Dean became editor was to start a Community Chest. "It was nothing but a Community Chest and today it seems incredible that anyone could have opposed it. But the town wasn't ready for it then and I soon became known as 'that 23-year-old upstart from Miami,'" Dean recalled in an article on the newspaper's history.

Other projects the Herald supported under his leadership were the Seminole Memorial Hospital, golf course, the swimming pool, tennis courts, a yacht basin and bulkhead for the lakefront, deeper water for the St. Johns River, a bridge across Lake Monroe to Enterprise, a baseball stadium, Fort Mellon Park and the General Henry S. Sanford Memorial Library. He was also involved in the USO.

"The Herald has always been interested in politics," he wrote. "Whether on the local, state or national level, and fearlessly voiced its views whether anyone else agreed with them or not. For the most part we believe most people accepted that policy for what it was worth, or attributed it to a weakness of the mind rather than hardness of the heart."

"We were proud," wrote Dean, "that throughout the 30-year period in which we were in the thick of every fight, nobody ever took a shot at us and we never had to shoot anybody, though we always thought we had 'the fastest gun east of the Perdido.'"

Woman Testifies Defendant Shot Her Companion

By Charles Cobb
Herald Staff Writer

A woman who was with a 43-year-old Sanford man when he was shot to death Feb. 12 identified Donald Ray Bean Jr. as the gunman who placed a gun to her neck and struggled with the victim moments before he was killed.

But in the second day of Bean's first-degree murder trial in the Seminole County Court House Tuesday, Bean's defense lawyer indicated in his opening statement that Bean was not at the murder scene when John Thomas Ellis was shot to death in a van parked near the Post Time Lounge at U.S. Highway 17-92 and Dog Track Road in Longwood. Ellis lived at 816 Cherokee Circle in Sanford.

Assistant State Attorney Angela Blakely said Bean, 18, and Jay McDonald Willis, 18, both of Eustis, were driving around in the Longwood area before the shooting and they parked their car in the parking lot of the Post Time Lounge and later Ellis drove up in a van and parked near them.

Mrs. Blakely said Ellis got out of the van and went into the lounge and Bean then got out of the car and entered the van.

Later Ellis came out of the bar in the early hours of Feb. 12 with a woman identified as Dolly Ann Perry and the pair got into the van, Blakely said.

Mrs. Perry, of 4212 S. Rio Grande Ave., Orlando, testified that she met Ellis in the lounge and then entered the van with him. She said the two sat in the front seat of the van and talked for awhile and then Ellis cranked up the van, planning to drive to another bar.

A man who had apparently been hiding in back of the van placed a handgun to Mrs. Perry's neck and told Ellis to take him where he wanted to go or he would shoot her, Mrs. Perry testified.

"I could see the barrel of the gun," she said.

Ellis offered to give his wallet to the gunman and to take him anywhere he wanted to go if he would "let the lady out" of the van, Mrs. Perry said.

The gunman ordered Ellis to drive a short distance on Grant Street behind the Post Time lounge and then ordered Ellis to pull over and let Mrs. Perry out, she said.

The van stopped and as she got out, Ellis jumped toward the gunman, they struggled, and she heard several shots, Mrs. Perry testified.

The gunman jumped out of the van, ran to a car that was waiting nearby and sped away, Mrs. Perry said.

She said she looked into the van and saw Ellis lying face down in the rear, bleeding from his head and abdomen.

Ellis was shot in the head, stomach and the leg with shots from a .38-caliber handgun at 3:20 a.m., records show.

Buses Will Roll Again Thursday

Using non-union drivers, Greyhound officials say they will begin offering limited bus service Thursday in Central Florida.

A Greyhound agent in Orlando today said the first bus was scheduled to leave there at 10:25 a.m. Thursday with the first bus to Sanford leaving at 10:40 a.m., arriving here at 11:10.

The buses will have to cross Teamster picket lines, raising the prospect of possible violence.

Greyhound and more than 12,000 striking employees expressed little hope today for a settlement in new talks on the 14th day of a bitter walkout and Greyhound rushed to put hastily trained non-union drivers on the road.

Shortly after Greyhound Chairman John Teets said no progress had been made during a Tuesday negotiating session called by federal mediator Sam Franklin, both sides briefly met face-to-face for the first time in Phoenix, Ariz.

Defending Prefab Home Restrictions Could Be Costly For County: Attorney

Seminole County Attorney Nikki Clayton said she anticipates a "long, expensive struggle" in federal court as a result of a suit filed against the county over restrictions on mobile homes.

A Casselberry couple and a manufacturer of prefabricated homes Friday filed suit in U.S. District Court in Orlando disputing Seminole County's right to ban prefabricated homes in residential areas zoned for single-family dwellings.

The suit says the county's land development code prohibits the couple from placing their mobile home on land they own.

Ms. Clayton said mobile homes are not "built to the same specifications as conventionally built homes, so we do not feel we are discriminating. If they (mobile homes) were built according to specifications for conventional homes, we would have to let them in."

The suit was filed by a Tallahassee law firm on behalf of James W. and Delores Grant of 986 Mango Drive in Casselberry. Also named as plaintiffs are Stairs Manufactured Housing Inc., Apopka, which sold the mobile home to the Grants; Brigadier Homes Inc., Ocala, which manufactured the mobile home and the Florida Manufactured Housing Association, a mobile home lobbying group.

Ms. Clayton said the mobile home manufacturing industry is the driving force behind the suit and they have "selected Seminole County as a target for this kind of legislation."

She said Seminole has been targeted as a test case by the industry which hopes to overturn similar building codes all over the state. "They are trying to put the full economic burden of fighting this on a small county," she said.

But, she said, the county "will put together its case" and fight the suit in court. "They (the manufacturers) may be surprised," she said. She said such complex cases "can go on for years in the courts."

The suit also alleges that the county has denied the free enterprise rights of the manufacturers. The suit seeks an injunction to declare the county's zoning code unconstitutional.—Charles Cobb

Meetings Set On Nuclear Holocaust Movie

By Susan Ruel

EMERYVILLE, Calif. (UPI) — A woman who is organizing nationwide public meetings the day after the upcoming television movie The Day After is broadcast, says citizens of a democracy must overcome the feeling they are powerless to stop nuclear holocaust.

About 40 million viewers are expected to watch the nuclear war film Nov. 20, Claire Greensfelder, field director of the Day Before project, said Monday. The movie depicts the effects of a fictional nuclear attack on Lawrence, Kans.

Since April, she and Wendy Roberts, a former Berkeley therapist, have been working out of Emeryville to organize at least 250 gatherings at which people can discuss their reactions to the movie and what they intend to do about it. The organization, working with 17 national church, mental health and peace groups, chase to concentrate on cities such as Knoxville, Tenn., Tallahassee, Fla., Opelika, Ala., and Portland, Maine, rather than traditional political centers like Cambridge, Mass., and Berkeley, Calif. Ms. Greensfelder said the cities chosen were "locations in the country where the issue was not as widely discussed, where congresspersons voted against arms control."

EDITORIAL, page 4A

She said, "One of the things that keeps people from doing anything about the nuclear threat is they're afraid to talk about it. If even in a democracy, people are afraid to talk about it, we're really in trouble."

In a three-hour format, the gatherings Monday and Tuesday evenings Nov. 21 and 22 will allow participants, who have signed up in advance, to "talk spontaneously about what they appreciate about life," she said. They will discuss their responses to particularly traumatic scenes in the movie.

About 500 people were trained in one-day sessions to lead the group discussions. Most of them are therapists, doctors, nurses, teachers and others "from the helping professions," she said.

Every participant will receive a "citizen's action kit" containing a list of local organizations working on the issue, a voting profile of their congressional representatives' records on arms control and a brochure about the cruise and Pershing II to be deployed in Europe, Ms. Roberts said.

"We hope people will find a way to create ongoing small support groups" that will keep meeting after the Day Before project, she said.

IN BRIEF

Administration Appeals Civil Rights Case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration wants an appeals court to hold an emergency hearing and reverse a lower court that ordered three Democratic members of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights reinstated.

In legal papers filed Tuesday, the Justice Department asked the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington to temporarily block the ruling until it considers whether U.S. District Judge Norma Johnson erred in barring President Reagan from firing the commissioners.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the administration decided to appeal the ruling because it sets a "dangerous precedent" denying a president the right to fire his employees.

Speakes said the dispute would not be legally dead with passage of a compromise bill to keep the agency alive because the case involves the question of executive authority over Congress.

The Senate approved a reorganization plan Monday to allow Congress and the president each to appoint four members. Two of the fired commissioners would be retained under the compromise, which must be approved by the House.

Tuition Tax Credit Backed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan said he would rely on his frequently successful telephone lobbying technique today in an effort to get the Senate behind one of his pet proposals — tuition tax credits for parents who send their children to private schools.

Reagan Tuesday went all out in support of the Senate proposal that seemed doomed to failure this late in a session scheduled to end Friday. He made it both a moral and a racial issue, appealing to parents too poor to move their children out of often-maligned urban public schools.

The bill would give taxpayers a credit for 50 percent of tuition expenses paid to private elementary or secondary schools with the maximum credit rising from $100 in 1983 to $300 in 1985 and following years. The maximum credit would be allowed only to taxpayers making $40,000 or less. Those making over $50,000 would not be eligible. The estimated cost is $800 million a year.

Sex Scandal Toll Mounts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The chief of the House pages, accused of having sex with a 17-year-old female page under his supervision in 1980, resigned rather than face House action to dismiss him.

James Howarth, 30, submitted a brief letter of resignation shortly after the House ethics committee recommended that the House fire him.

Howarth was the last of the principals in the sex portion of a sex-and-drugs investigation that lasted over several months in the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct. A report on the drugs portion of the probe is expected shortly.

The ethics committee earlier found that Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Mass., had engaged in sex with a male page and Rep. Daniel Crane, R-Ill., had done so with a female page. Both were censured, but still are serving in Congress.

House Effort Falls Six Votes Short

Congress Playing Politics With ERA

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House's failure to pass the Equal Rights Amendment brought the issue squarely into next year's elections with Democrats blaming Republicans and the GOP laying the defeat in the lap of the Democratic leadership.

The amendment's failure also may force proponents to address next year their colleagues' qualms over the ERA's potential effect on abortion and drafting of women.

Far more liberal than the GOP-led Senate, the House nevertheless voted down an attempt Tuesday to revive the ERA. The count of 278 for the measure and 147 against was six votes short of the two-thirds majority needed for passage.

Democrats said the 109 Republicans who voted against the politically popular measure have a lot to explain to constituents, especially since the GOP is trying to woo women voters. President Reagan opposes the ERA as unnecessary tampering with the Constitution.

Kathy Wilson, head of the National Women's Political Caucus, said, "This is the day of truth and consequences. I think it's time to send a message to Republicans in Congress and the states who vote against the ERA and sanction sex discrimination. Women, too, can be very discriminating (at the ballot box)."

The Republicans said Democrats were to blame for the defeat because it was their leadership's decision to bring up the amendment under a procedure allowing for no amendments and only 40 minutes of debate.

"You can't blame this one on President Reagan. You can't blame it on Republicans," said Rep. Lynn Martin, R-Ill., an ERA supporter.

"I think this was a cynical political move by the speaker so he could blame the Republicans for killing it," said Rep. James Sensenbrenner, R-Wis. He noted that no one opposed the principle of equal rights for women during the entire debate, a change from years past.

"You're not fooling anybody," Speaker Thomas O'Neill said of those who claimed to support the amendment but opposed the leadership's steamroller tactics. "In your hearts you were never with us."

Supporters said that GOP amendments to prohibit government funding of abortions and drafting of women probably would have passed if the Republicans had a chance to offer them.

ERA supporters said those amendments were unnecessary and not well-intended.

"They said state versions of the ERA already in effect have not been interpreted by courts to require abortion funding. They also argued that Congress has always had the power to draft women and individual qualifications should determine who is sent into combat.

Extended by three years when it reached the seven-year deadline, the ERA died in June 1983.

Teen Pleads Guilty To Placing Bomb At Doctor's Home

A Fern Park high school boy has pleaded guilty to planting a pipe bomb outside the home of a Fern Park doctor.

Daniel Huguenard, 16, of 330 Spartan Drive, pleaded guilty Tuesday in a hearing before Circuit Judge Robert B. McGregor to a charge of placing or throwing or attempting to discharge a destructive device.

Huguenard will be sentenced Jan. 25. He faces a maximum sentence of 15 years in prison if sentenced as an adult, according to Assistant State Attorney Kurt Erlenbach.

If sentenced as a juvenile, Huguenard could be placed in juvenile custody until his 19th birthday.

The pipe bomb was found in some bushes near the front door of the home of Dr. Victor Hochman, 215 Yarmouth Road, Fern Park, and Huguenards was arrested a few days later on Aug. 22.

Authorities said the bomb contained 145 grains of smokeless gunpowder.

A 15-year-old co-defendant in the case, Scott Andrew, 1921 Collier Drive, Fern Park, pleaded no contest Sept. 8 to a charge of attempting to manufacture an explosive device. He was sentenced to an indefinite period of supervised probation.

Andrew said he made the bomb and sold it to Huguenard for $35.

Seminole County sheriff's investigators said the bomb apparently was placed at the doctor's house in retaliation for Hochman reporting Huguenard to deputies in connection with vandalism at Hochman's home three years ago.

STANO TRIAL SET

Mass murderer Gerald Eugene Stano will go on trial Dec. 19 in Seminole County Circuit Court for the 1974 slaying of an unidentified woman in Altamonte Springs.

for Stano, who confessed to the slaying in October 1982. Stano, 32, will be represented by the public defender's office and he can change his plea after consulting with his attorney.

Authorities have not been able to identify the victim whose skeletal remains were found in underbrush in an undeveloped area near the Interstate Mall in Altamonte Springs Nov. 24, 1974.

Stano was indicted in the slaying last month and charged with killing the woman by "stabbing or cutting with a knife" between Oct. 1 and Nov. 24 of 1974.

According to court records, Stano said he picked up the woman as she was hitchhiking on State Road 436 in Altamonte Springs. Stano said he drove to an isolated area behind the Interstate Mall and forced the woman out of the car at knife-point when she refused to have sex with him, records state.

Stano said he stabbed her four to six times in the upper chest with a 6-inch hunting knife, records state.

Stano could be sentenced to death if convicted of the first-degree murder charge. He already faces two death sentences and six life sentences in other murder cases.

AGGRAVATED ASSAULT

An Apopka man charged with aggravated assault has been freed from the Seminole County jail after posting a $5,000 bond.

A Seminole County sheriff's deputy reported that while on routine patrol of the parking lot of the ABC Lounge on U.S. Highway 17-92 at State Road 436, three men told him they had been verbally assaulted by a man who threatened them with a gun.

In the parking lot, the deputy located the car the men said the assailant was driving. The driver of the car was searched and six bullets were found in his pocket and an empty handgun was found under the driver's seat of the car, the deputy said.

Jose Angel Reys, 24, of 600 W. 13th St., was arrested at 11:22 p.m. Sunday.

HOUSE BREAK-IN

Household appliances, including a microwave oven, and jewelry were taken in a Sanford burglary Monday, Seminole County sheriff's deputies said.

Morin C. Meulagh, 38, of 831 Markham Woods Road, Longwood, said someone entered his home through a bedroom window between 7 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., a report said.

DUI ARRESTS

The following persons have been arrested in Seminole County on a charge of driving under the influence:

—Fred Barry Richard, 49, of 1121 Pleasant Circle, Winter Springs, was arrested Monday at 11:16 a.m. on U.S. Highway 17-92 north of Bush Boulevard after his car was seen weaving between lanes and crossing the center line.

—Gale Ray Burger, 43, 125 Charles St., Winter Springs, was arrested Monday at 9 a.m. on State Road 436 just east of Casselberry after his car was involved in an accident.

FIRE CALLS

The Sanford Fire Department responded to the following calls:

Tuesday

—11:12 a.m., 18th Street and French Ave., rescue.
 —8:23 p.m., Shenandoah Village, rescue.

American Killed By Terrorists

ATHENS, Greece (UPI) — A left-wing terrorist group that killed a CIA agent in Athens eight years ago claimed responsibility for the assassination of a U.S. naval officer and his Greek driver.

Late Tuesday, a man representing the Nov. 17 leftist group telephoned Greek newspapers to claim responsibility for the attack Tuesday that killed Capt. George Tsantes, 53, a Greek-American from Merchantville, N.J.

Tsantes was chief of American Naval Mission of the Joint United States Mission of Aid to Greece. His driver Nikos Veloutos, 46, died later Tuesday in the hospital.

Two gunmen on a motor scooter fired seven shots into the U.S. Embassy car carrying Tsantes as it waited at a stop light in rush hour traffic Tuesday morning.

The Nov. 17 caller said the newspapers would receive a written statement detailing the reasons for the attack. The group takes its name from a Nov. 17, 1973, protest against Greece's former military government.

The group has claimed responsibility for assassinating Richard Welch, the CIA's Athens station chief, on Dec. 23, 1975, and is believed to have killed several senior Greek police officials since the slaying.

School Board To Court: Restore School Prayer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court, which banned voluntary prayer in public schools in 1962, has been asked by an Alabama school board to reconsider its landmark decision.

The Mobile County, Ala., School Board has filed legal papers with the high court asking that a May 12 decision of the U.S. 11th Circuit Court of Appeals be overturned.

The Atlanta court struck down a decision by a local federal judge that Mobile County teachers had the right to lead their classes in prayer. Judge W. Brevard Hand said the Supreme Court should never have outlawed school prayer 21 years ago.

Dan Alexander, president of the school board and head of a national pro-prayer organization, was joined by four congressmen in a news conference on the steps of the Supreme Court.

"Very frankly, for 20 years the Supreme Court has been wrong" about school prayer, said Alexander.

The Mobile case is the strongest school prayer case to come before the high court since the ban was imposed, Alexander said.

He said the case was strong enough to convince Judge Hand and might have swayed the appellate court were it not for the Supreme Court's long-standing precedent.

"I can only hope these nine folks inside this building have enough God-given sense to give people back their prayer," he said.

The original suit was filed by Ishmael Jaffree, a self-proclaimed agnostic who claimed his three elementary school-age children were being subjected against their will to prayers led by teachers and grace before meals.

Three Mobile teachers sued in the case testified they had been leading classroom prayer for years, despite the high court ban.

"We had one teacher who said, 'My Father, (the Lord's Prayer) and we had two who said 'God is great, God is good' (let us thank him for our food)," said Alexander.

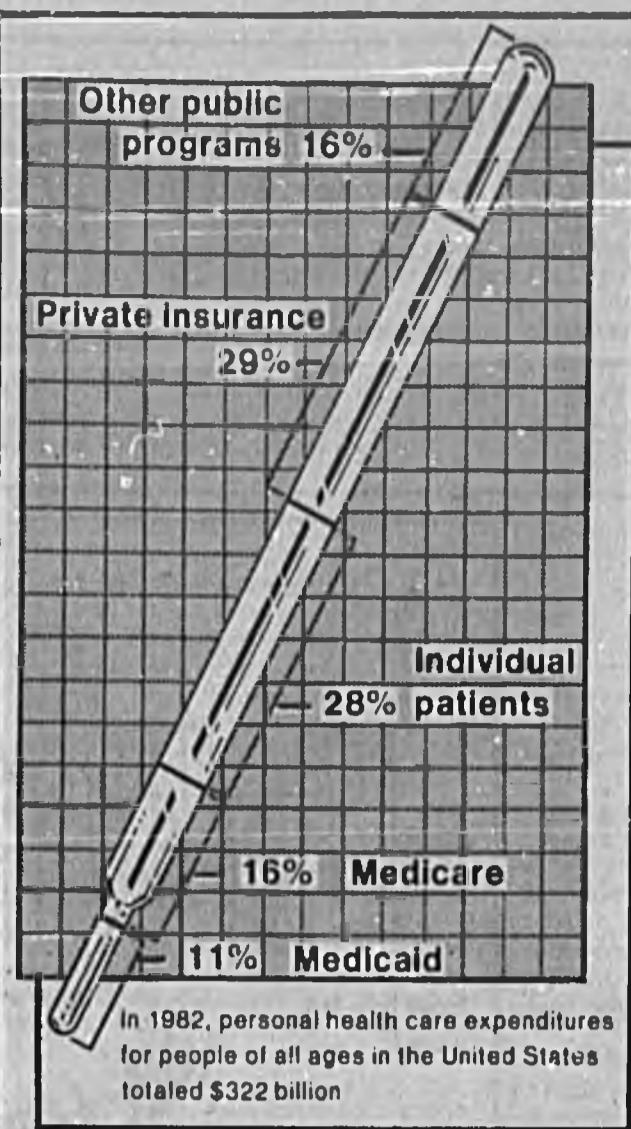

Alexander, who said he has discussed the case with President Reagan, a prayer advocate, claimed the Justice Department gave him "prior indications" the administration will support his case.

Reps. Duncan Hunter, R-Calif.; John Kasich, R-Ohio.; Mark Siljander, R-Mich., and Michael Billirakis, R-Fla., all spoke in favor of the suit.

"Congress starts its day with a prayer and school children need to pray as much as Congress," said Hunter.

"I think we ought to end all this legal mumbo-jumbo and let the kids have their prayer," echoed Kasich.

Billirakis said the congressmen are considering filing a friend-of-the-court papers in the case but have not yet reached a decision.

Malone Is National Conference President

By David E. Anderson

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Bishop James Malone of Youngstown, Ohio, was elected president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops to succeed Archbishop John Roach of Minneapolis-St. Paul.

Malone, who got the post Tuesday, is Roach's heir apparent and vice president of the organization. He becomes the first bishop to win the position. All past leaders have been cardinals or archbishops.

Malone was overwhelmingly elected on the first ballot, getting 152 votes out of a total of 10 candidates.

Within the Bishops conference, Malone has undertaken a host of the quiet tedious jobs that demand attention to detail. He currently runs a committee seeking to establish priorities for the bishops' organization.

Malone attracted national attention several years ago as one of the primary organizers of the ecumenical coalition in Youngstown that sought to save the jobs of displaced workers when Youngstown Sheet and Tube closed down.

The otherwise quiet meeting has been turned into a major event by its alleged confrontation with the Vatican. The conference leadership, buffeted by criticism from Rome, is questioning both its loyalty to the Holy See and the need to go its own way in responding to the unique U.S. situation.

In addition to electing their new president, bishops planned to discuss the impact of their major pastoral letter on war and peace.

Top church officials, including Roach, acknowledge that the U.S. church has a unique role in world Catholicism and that their May letter on nuclear war issues has put them "out front" on the topic and subject to more scrutiny than usual.

As the 300 U.S. bishops gathered for their annual four-day meeting, they confronted a recent history that appears to put them on a collision course with Vatican authorities.

Underscoring that confrontation is the Vatican-ordered investigation into the activities of two of the U.S. church's most liberal prelates — Archbishop Raymond Hunthausen of Seattle and Bishop Walter Sullivan of Richmond.

Computer Software: Seminole County Bargain-Hunting

By Micheal Beha Herald Staff Writer

Seminole County officials are bargain-hunting in their search for computer software to speed dispatching of county emergency vehicles.

Commissioners have set aside $27,000 in their 1983-84 budget for development of a computer-aided dispatch system for fire, rescue and police vehicles. The CAD system helps dispatchers keep track of all emergency units and sends the nearest available unit to a fire, accident or crime scene.

County Computer Services Director Jack Harward has been working since July to adapt a CAD system in use in Manatee County for use by the Public Safety Department. Harward is trying to adapt the program, used on an NCR computer, for use on the county's IBM System 38 computer. He faces a January deadline in developing a fire service system and is supposed to work up a CAD system for the Sheriff's Department by June, 1984.

But the county is also studying proposals by Data Control Services Inc., of Charleston, S.C., for CAD programs already available for use on the IBM computer.

Company representatives visited Seminole County in October to demonstrate the programs available. The programs, which can be ready for use in one day, cost $12,000 to $16,000 for the fire service CAD and $30,000 to $38,000 for the law enforcement system.

County Administrator T. Duncan Rose said he wants to study the law enforcement program for the county.

"What we're looking at is whether it's cost-effective to buy the police system and convert it to use for Public Safety," said Rose.

He explained that the fire service system is not as in-depth as the law enforcement program. The law enforcement program has more of the coordinated reporting functions the county is looking for, he said.

Rose said if Harward reworks the Manatee County program he will have to translate the programs used on Manatee's NCR computer into commands that can be understood by Seminole's IBM.

But Sheriff John Polk has complicated the county planning. He's considering proposals for a CAD system of his own which would use a separate computer.

"The sheriff has to make a decision whether he wants to consolidate his computer hardware with one brand," Rose said.

Polk said he's received proposals from NCR and IBM for computer aided dispatch systems, each of which is in the neighborhood of $200,000 for the programs and the computer to run the system.

Polk said his staff is reviewing the two proposals to see if they meet the department's needs. He said a copy of the proposals also has been sent to the county administrator's office for his staff's study.

"I don't think the proposals are out of line at all," he said. Polk, who doesn't believe Harward can develop the CAD system from the Manatee County program, said "$200,000 is a little less than we expected."

Drivers Face DUI Charges

Forgotten Holocaust

In its dramatization of the horrors of a nuclear attack on the United States, ABC television network will be giving a helping hand to groups that favor unilateral nuclear disarmament of the United States.

Those who are familiar with the ABC film "The Day After" point out that it is designed to engender fear among Americans so that they will oppose the new MX missile. The disarmers refuse to recognize that peace comes through strength, in a world of Soviet aggression.

A sidelight on this political film-making by ABC is that the networks are completely uninterested in the virtually forgotten holocausts for which the Soviets are responsible. In the more than 60 years of Soviet history, as many people have been killed by that savage despotism as would be killed in a nuclear attack.

Not everyone has forgotten, of course. Among those who remember are Ukranians, one of the captive peoples of the Soviet Empire.

Early this month, Ukranians who fled to the West marked the 50th anniversary of what they call "The Forgotten Holocaust."

Americans of Ukranian descent held a memorial meeting in Washington. They reminded us that "The Great Ukranian Famine of 1933 was a calculated act of genocide by Soviet rulers against the Ukranian nation.

"Twenty percent of the population starved to death. This deliberate famine was calculated to crush the spirit of the freedom-loving and independent-minded people of the Ukraine. Millions died."

One wonders how many Americans know of this holocaust, how many know that the Soviet dictatorship deliberately starved millions to death in order to crush people who were opposed to communist tyranny. Certainly, ABC and the other networks have not helped educate Americans to this grim reality.

True, the great famine in the Ukraine resulted in slow death rather than in sudden death from nuclear missiles. Death is death, however, whether slow or fast. Moreover, the lesson of the Great Ukranian Famine, the "Forgotten Holocaust," is that the Soviet Union is the enemy of life.

We have just witnessed another gruesome example of Soviet contempt for human life in the shooting down of the Korean airliner in September.

The Soviet leaders would not hesitate to kill millions of a people in the West in a nuclear attack if they thought the USSR could escape unharmed.

A Soviet assault on the free world is deterred only by the defense forces of the United States and primarily by U.S. strategic nuclear weapons.

The way to prevent a nuclear holocaust in the United States is to build and maintain the strongest possible nuclear deterrent force.

However, don't count on ABC to spell out that fact of life.

Restraint Needed

Three U.S. carriers and a battleship steam in the eastern Mediterranean off the coast of Lebanon. The Pentagon says the convergence of 29 Navy ships is only a coincidence, but rumors of reprisal by the United States against Syria for the Beirut bombing are being circulated in Europe and the Middle East.

A truck bomb killed 239 of our Marines and sailors on Oct. 23, and many Americans would like to strike back.

The Israelis did that, bombing Palestinian guerrilla positions in central Lebanon after a car bomb recently killed 28 Israelis in Tyre. There was no proof that the Palestinians were responsible, but an Israeli spokesman said the Palestinians were punished because they were surely celebrating the attack on the Israelis.

That kind of reasoning may be accepted in the Middle East, where one Israeli general said before the invasion of Lebanon, "You step on my foot, I cut off your head."

But retaliation directed at people who have not been proved guilty and who may be innocent is not the American way.

If those responsible for the Beirut bombing can be positively identified, they should be punished. If not, we should control our deep feelings and not give way to the desire for revenge.

BERRY'S WORLD

"...and for keeping everything under control — including INFORMATION..."

JULIAN BOND South Will Rise Again

The Rev. Jesse Jackson's political hopes — and those of his fellow candidates for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination — rest heavily on the outcome of primaries to be held March 13.

On that date, Georgia, Alabama and Florida hold selection primaries. And in what amount to mini-elections in each state's congressional districts, the eight Democratic candidates will face each other in the first real test of the '84 season.

Because of the mix of races, incomes and educational levels in the those states, Georgia, Alabama and Florida offer a truer test of strength than the traditional "first" primary in New Hampshire (March 4) or the first caucus in Iowa in February.

With 294 delegates at stake — 84 in Georgia, 148 in Florida and 62 in Alabama — those states are hardly crucial mathematically to any candidate except Jackson.

If he is to be successful in his attempt to broker black votes at the convention, Jackson must do well in the five Alabama congressional districts with a greater than 20 percent black population, in four similar districts in Florida and six Georgia.

Here's how the process works: The "base" unit in most primary states is the congressional district, and party rules set a cutoff level near 25 percent of the vote as a minimum for winning delegates.

If Jackson cannot win the overwhelming majority of black votes or a significant number of cross-over votes from whites in those districts, his presidential hopes will end in the South on March 13.

The other candidates face similar dilemmas.

While any of them could theoretically lose every Southern pre-convention contest and still win the nomination, it is extremely unlikely that the party would nominate a candidate who could not compete successfully in the region of the party's greatest local strength.

This special consideration makes the South a good test of the national mood in '84. The candidate who does well with all elements of the Southern electorate — blacks, women, labor, business, farmers — should do equally well against Ronald Reagan in November.

But the white candidates, particularly Walter Mondale, risk having Jesse Jackson's successes come at their expense.

Mondale, especially, is counting on strong support from blacks to help him maintain his lead over Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio. A decent showing by Jackson may fail to win him delegates, but it may still scuttle Mondale's chances.

Thus, both Mondale and Jackson could be damaged March 13 if Jackson does well enough to draw Mondale's black votes away but not well enough to win any delegates of his own.

The March 13 primaries in Georgia, Alabama and Florida, followed by caucuses in Mississippi and South Carolina March 17, constitute a sort of regional primary.

These primaries and caucuses will also be a test of Jesse Jackson's ability to make the transition from civil rights spokesman to political candidate.

The March contests may give the first clear indication of who will — and who won't — face Ronald Reagan next November.

Keep your eyes on the South. It will rise again.

U.S. May 'Supply' Nicaragua Invasion

WASHINGTON — There are alarming indications that the Reagan administration is seriously thinking of giving "logistical support" to an invasion of Nicaragua by Honduras and Guatemala.

High-level Pentagon and intelligence officials have expressed confidence that the Honduran and Guatemalan armies, trained and armed by the United States and Israel, can "take out Nicaragua" without any need for a commitment of U.S. combat troops. But they say a joint invasion force, coordinating its efforts with the anti-Sandinista guerrilla groups already fighting the leftist Managua regime, would need U.S. supplies to carry off the attack.

There would be abundant reasons for an administration decision to support an invasion of Nicaragua, and one would be political: The president figures it would win back his disaffected New Right supporters in time for his reelection bid. The presence of a Cuban-backed regime in Managua has long been a source of irritation for the right wing, and the Reagan administration's supposedly covert support for the anti-Sandinista rebels hasn't succeeded in toppling the Marxist Junta in Managua.

Far from satiating the New Right's anti-communist zeal, the invasion of this Grenada may only have whetted its appetite for even more ambitious military adventures in the hemisphere. In fact, polls showing overwhelming public support for the Grenada invasion may be the most persuasive factor in the president's decision on Nicaragua.

Meanwhile, intelligence sources have told my associates Jon Lee Anderson and Dale Van Atta that Gen. Gustavo Alvarez Martinez, head of the Honduran armed forces, has told U.S. officials privately that he intends to celebrate his next birthday in Managua. His birthday is Dec. 12.

Just how Honduras and Guatemala expect to vanquish the Nicaraguan army — Central America's largest — is not clear. But here are some of the possibilities:

— They could invoke the recently revived Central American Security Council (Condeca) to achieve a united front of Nicaragua's neighbors in the face of "provocation" by Managua. This provocation could take the form of Sandinista forces crossing into either Honduras or Costa Rica in hot pursuit of guerrillas taking sanctuary there — something Managua has been careful to avoid so far.

— If the Nicaraguan rebel forces could agree on a combined operation, such as a pincer movement from north and south along the Atlantic coast, they might seize a large enough "liberated zone" to ask for international recognition. The Reagan administration and the Condeca countries would grant this, and the rebels would then appeal for Condeca's help in seizing the rest of Nicaragua.

Emboldening the Sandinistas' enemies is Fidel Castro's recent admission that he would be unable to send Cuban help because of "superior American force." So Managua would have to rely on its own forces and the estimated 6,000 Cuban advisers already in Nicaragua.

Left-wing sources allied with Guatemalan and Salvadoran guerrillas have been denouncing recent "mobilizations" in Guatemala and Honduras. Officially, the troop movements have been described as "routine exercises."

But a high Guatemalan military officer, asked if any action against Nicaragua is planned, laughed and said: "Well, I can't speak for Guatemala, but from statements being made by U.S. officials like Secretary of Defense (Casper) Weinberger, I'd say there is an open possibility."

If you need to buy a hearing aid, expect to pay about $400 to $700 for it. And if a binaural design is used, expect to pay double that amount, says the Better Business Bureau of Central Florida.

Since there is such great diversity of prices in designs, the BBB strongly urges you to obtain the best professional advice you can if you suspect you have a loss of hearing.

The doctor/specialist will test your hearing with an audio-meter, tell you whether or not a hearing aid will help you.

show you the different aids available and help you adjust to the hearing aid.

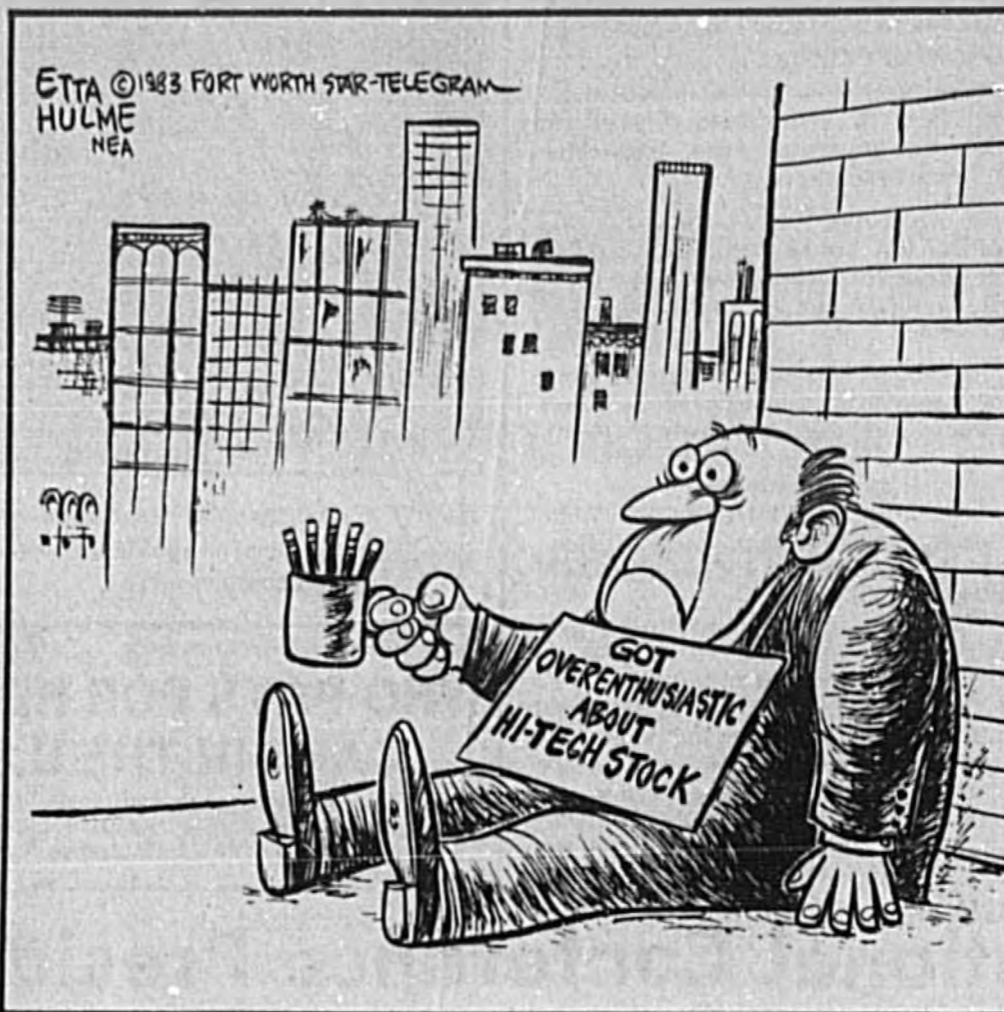

Some firms that sell hearing aids will arrange a trial or rental period, ranging from two weeks to several months. You may be asked to pay a rental fee which usually is added to the purchase price of the hearing aid and mold.

Before you buy a hearing aid, ask yourself these questions:

- How is the quality of the sound?
- Does the hearing aid help you understand speech in quiet areas and in noisy

- Is the aid comfortable to wear?
- Are the tone control, volume control and telephone switch easy to operate?
- Is the aid easy to put on and take off?
- Does the price include the ear mold?
- What are the upkeep costs?

Sinatra's Way, Or Else

WASHINGTON (NEA) — What was the nature of the relationship between Frank Sinatra and the late Sam "Momo" Giancana, the reputed leader of Chicago's La Cosa Nostra "family" for more than two decades?

Is it true that Sinatra has been friendly with admitted Mafia assassin Aladena "Jimmy the Weasel" Fratiano and notorious organized crime bosses Carlo Gambino, Frank Costello and Charles "Lucky" Luciano?

If Sinatra has his way, nobody is going to write about his alleged links with Mafia figures — or any other "numerous events and personalities connected with (his) private life" — in an unauthorized biography.

In fact, Sinatra is in the process of advancing a unique legal theory. It holds that even a man who has spent his entire adult life promoting himself as a public figure has a special exemption from being the subject of a critical book about his life.

Sinatra claims that only Camden Enterprises, Ltd., a privately held Nevada corporation which he controls, has "the right to commercially exploit the name and likeness of Frank Sinatra, including the right to publish the authorized biography or autobiography of Sinatra's life."

That assertion is made in a civil suit, recently filed by Sinatra and Camden Enterprises in Los Angeles County Superior Court, whose effect has been to harass and intimidate a writer who has devoted the past year to interviewing approximately 300 people for a planned Sinatra biography.

The defendant in the case is Kitty Kelley, a Washington writer whose earlier books "Jackie Oh!" and "Elizabeth Taylor — The Last Star" also were unauthorized biographies of celebrities.

Miss Kelley's literary efforts are carefully researched but hardly noted for their dignity or decorum. The books about Miss Taylor and Jacqueline Onassis were generally viewed by critics as being at best superficial and at worst lurid.

One critic characterized "Jackie Oh!" as "a literary garage sale of Jackie's unmentionables — her undies, her money, her sex life, her psyche." Miss Kelley herself told a reporter several years ago, "I've crossed the line between biographer and voyeur."

But Miss Kelley's penchant for the sensational cannot be a legitimate issue in the dispute with Sinatra because the First Amendment guarantees freedom of expression to everyone — not merely those who eschew sensationalism.

If Sinatra is libeled because Miss Kelley knowingly and maliciously mangles the facts, he can indeed sue her for damages. But in the current case, he has gone to court to thwart publication of a book that Miss Kelley says she hasn't even started to write.

The last person to attempt such an audacious maneuver was the country's most famous recluse, the late Howard Hughes. But the U.S. Supreme Court summarily dismissed his contention that he had the right to prohibit unauthorized biographers from writing about his life.

Because Sinatra's lawyers apparently are shrewd enough to know that a similar frontal assault on the First Amendment would be doomed to failure, they have chosen an indirect but equally chilling approach — they want the court to order Miss Kelley to pay Sinatra and Camden Enterprises $2 million in damages.

Miss Kelley's earlier books were financial successes and Bantam Books has contracted to pay her $1.5 million for the Sinatra biography. Thus, she's hardly poor. But the expenses of protracted litigation and the threat of seven-figure damage awards can be devastating to even the wealthiest writer.

If the current brazen attempt to stifle what ought to be constitutionally protected literary effort is successful, will we ever learn about the "real" Frank Sinatra?

"At such time as he decides is appropriate," the lawsuit says, "he will 'set the record straight' as to many such aspects of his life."

In other words, we'll get the authorized, sanitized version from a vain, arrogant man who insists upon doing it "my way."

Grenada: 'Justify' Easy to Say

By Don Phillips

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A lot of congressmen would love Grenada. They would get a lot more love and respect there than they do back in their home districts.

The 14 members of the fact-finding delegation that visited the small island 1,900 miles south of Miami could hardly move without seeing and hearing expressions of gratitude from islanders.

"God bless America" is scrawled occasionally on doorways. Smiles flash across any Grenadian face whenever an American passes. Almost everyone wants to talk, and judging by the conversations, it would seem that almost everyone has at least one relative in the United States.

One must suspend stereotypes. Walking through an alley filled with tough-looking young men is not a harrowing experience.

"Hey, mon, how ya doin'?" they smile.

And if you talk with Grenadians — in alleys, in stores, in taxis or wherever — inevitably someone will ask you as an American to intercede with your government to keep your troops on the island.

"Please, don't let your troops go home," they implore.

That attitude is not limited to the men, women and children on the street. The intellectuals, businessmen and other upper crust types join in.

"We ask you to stay as long as possible. I think Grenadians are getting to love your troops." Eric Pierre, a longtime labor leader, told the visiting congressmen.

The U.S. troops return the favor. According to all reports and observations, the behavior of U.S. troops has been exemplary, more like Boy Scouts earning merit badges than trained killers.

Taxi drivers seem to have formed a separate unofficial league to make Grenada the 51st state, or at least a protectorate.

"We're tired of (Grenadian) politicians," a taxi driver told reporters. "Let the Americans run Grenada. You take over."

House Democratic whip Thomas Foley, the leader of the delegation, was stunned.

"In a world of Yankee-go-home, painted on walls, this is kind of a strange place," he said.

This sort of euphoria won't last forever, of course. As the years go by, the Grenadians will turn their attention to other matters, as will the congressmen who visited them.

But there is little doubt that their attitude, whatever its genesis, had a profound effect on U.S. foreign policy and on the attitude of Congress.

If the congressional delegation was brainwashed in Grenada, as George Romney once said he was in Vietnam, then "brainwash" must be redefined. Romney was brainwashed by a slick military and diplomatic sideshow; the congressmen in Grenada were emotionally enveloped by the "victims" of the invasion.

There were many serious questions to be answered in Grenada. Were the students really in danger? Was there a legal basis for the invasion? Was it carried out properly? Those questions still have not been fully answered.

But after meeting these easygoing, friendly people face to face, it was difficult not to rejoice that they no longer were under the control of madmen.

They made "justified" much easier to say.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Rebel Gunners Ignore Plea To Stop Shelling

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Indiscriminate shelling of Beirut marked the worst breach of a 7-week-old cease-fire and cast new doubts today on efforts to achieve peace among Lebanon's warring factions.

From behind Syrian lines in the Shouf mountains to the east of the capital, Moslem gunners lobbed shells and rockets into the residential heart of Christian east Beirut during the morning and evening rush hours Tuesday.

Official Beirut radio said at least three people were killed and more than 20 injured in the shelling. Police, however, said at least four people died in the new attacks on the capital. Several buildings and cars were set ablaze.

"Stop the shelling," Prime Minister Chefik Wazzani, a Sunni, Moslem, appealed after an emergency meeting with Christian President Amin Gemayel. "This kind of situation cannot prevail."

But anti-government militiamen ignored the appeal and kept firing until a truce was reached in the early evening hours Tuesday.

Grenada Nears Normalcy

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (UPI) — Grenada moved closer to stability today with a state of emergency lifted, an interim government sworn in and the United States dismantling its makeshift prison camp.

In administering the oath of office to five members of the nine-person Advisory Council appointed last week, Governor General Sir Paul Scoon Tuesday announced his withdrawal from handling day-to-day public affairs on Grenada. Scoon said he would resume his mostly ceremonial role as Queen Elizabeth II's personal representative in Grenada.

Scoon and a few personal advisers headed the reorganization of the Caribbean nation's government institutions since shortly after U.S. troops toppled a hard-line Marxist regime that overthrew Marxist Prime Minister Maurice Bishop Oct. 12.

One of those advisers, attorney Anthony R. Rushford, announced the lifting of the state of emergency Tuesday, which included a ban on public meetings and allowed arrest without warrant.

In a third major development Tuesday, U.S. mission spokesman James Dandridge said a prison camp erected near Point Salines Airport to house and interrogate Cubans and Grenadians would be closed down today.

Missile Protests In Britain

LONDON (UPI) — Anti-nuclear demonstrators stepped up their protests against the stationing of U.S. cruise missiles in Britain as transport planes apparently carrying a second batch of missiles arrived at Greenham Common.

Police arrested some 300 people outside the House of Commons Tuesday night under an 1839 law that prohibits demonstrations within a mile of parliament when it is in session.

A Scotland Yard spokesman said the demonstrators, many of whom were chanting and singing, were peaceful but refused to move "after repeated warnings."

Franco's Durable Ghost Still Troubles Leaders Of Spain's Young Democracy

By Dianne Klein

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Eight years after the death of Generalissimo Francisco Franco, the legend of "el caudillo" still haunts the leaders of Spain's young democracy.

As the anniversary of his death Nov. 20 approached, rumors of military unrest grew louder and the Socialist government renewed its efforts to bury Franco's legacy once and for all.

"Those groups in favor of a coup are few," Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez said recently. "They have little force and besides, there is no social base of support. That is why there is no reason to fear a coup."

But Gonzalez' government, a year old in December, is nonetheless taking no chances. The memory of the failed military coup in February 1981 is still fresh.

While there is little evidence of a right-wing threat these days, the socialists are careful not to pose any direct challenges to the right-wingers and military officers loyal to the ideals of Francoism.

Sensitive to the symbolism so dear to the right, government spokesmen publicly praise exemplary military service, and government officials regularly attend funerals for victims of Basque terrorists — many of them military men.

In response to escalating Basque separatist violence, Gonzalez consulted with the right-wing opposition Popular Alliance before strengthening the country's already tough anti-terrorist laws.

Even so, the socialist government still has not won over a sizable percentage of the militantly electorate at large who long for the relative tranquility of life under "el caudillo."

With the undisputed loyalty of the armed forces, Franco ruled Spain for nearly four decades as one of the world's most iron-fisted dictators.

Coins minted during Franco's reign bore his likeness with the slogan, "Francisco Franco caudillo (leader) of Spain by the grace of God."

After his death, many of Franco's faithful cast their bs for the right-wing Popular Alliance, led by former Franco minister Manuel Fraga.

But with the Alliance stymied in Parliament by the socialist majority, the patience of many Francoists seems to be wearing thin. The anniversary of the Franco's death, Nov. 20, 1975, has traditionally served to galvanize the anti-democratic sentiments of Franco's most ardent loyalists.

The Madrid city government, however, has banned for the second time an annual gait in the capital's Oriente plaza where Franco used to address the throngs from the balcony of the royal palace.

In place of last year's right-wing gathering, organizers held a mainly religious ceremony at the Valley of the Fallen, Franco's burial ground outside Madrid.

The event's organizers, Nationalist veterans of the Spanish civil war and other right-wing groups, have not yet decided whether to risk a confrontation by defying the city government on gatherings at Oriente square.

The right-wingers are particularly upset this year by what they consider a government ordered "offensive" against the memory of Franco.

Among the moves the right-wingers consider an insult was the removal in September of an equestrian statue of the late dictator from the main plaza of Valencia. Indignant rightists stoned demolition workers before police restored order.

The government later gave the military permission to install the statue in an interior courtyard at the Valencia military command.

To the Francoists, unemployment, separatist violence, rising crime and relaxed public morals prove the failure of Spain's democratic experiment.

El Alcazar, the newspaper of the extreme right with a circulation of 92,319 last year, has led the campaign by giving front page coverage to terrorist attacks, labor disputes and what it considers the latest government "outrage."

It has reserved some of its strongest criticism for a government plan to end the implicit autonomy of the armed forces by placing them under the command of the defense minister.

Chemicals May Lower Cholesterol

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (UPI) — Researchers at the University of North Carolina say chemical compounds similar to saccharin can reduce the levels of cholesterol and other fatty substances in blood by up to 60 percent.

"I'd have to say these substances look beautiful right now and we are pretty excited about them," Dr. Iris H. Hall said Thursday.

The compounds are called cyclic imides. If they pass a series of long-term animal studies and clinical tests, they would be far superior to drugs now used to control blood fat levels and could become a major weapon against cardiovascular disease, she said.

"Low fat diets and drugs currently on the market, even at high dosages, reduce cholesterol and triglycerides (fats) by only about 10 to 15 percent. Another problem is the drugs can have undesirable side effects," Ms. Hall said.

Cyclic imides work at very low doses and without apparent side effects, she said. The compounds are structurally related to saccharin and have been used with limited success as sedatives, hypnotics and anti-convulsants.

Ms. Hall, an associate pharmacy professor at UNC, presented results of experiments conducted on human and rat cells during a news conference sponsored by the American Chemical Society, meeting in Charlotte. Cyclic imides produce major reductions in blood fat levels by blocking the conversion of cholesterol into fatty plaque that blocks arteries, she said. The buildup of plaque has been blamed for heart attacks, strokes and blood vessel disease — the leading causes of death in the United States.

Most doctors believe reducing levels of cholesterol and other fats in the blood will reduce the risk of cardiovascular disease and treat patients accordingly.

Ms. Hall said the compounds "are not only preventing fats from moving into plaque, they also are facilitating excretion of cholesterol, which is exactly what you want them to do."

Two other UNC researchers are collaborating in the studies. They are Dr. Wallace L. Williams Jr., a post-doctoral fellow, and Dr. Steven D. Wyrick, an assistant professor of medicinal chemistry.

Their research involved subjecting both human tissue cells and rat liver cells to radioactively labeled low density and high density lipoproteins — compounds of fats and proteins.

Levels of radioactivity measured in the test cells showed the extent to which they were absorbing cholesterol as they do in the formation of plaque on artery walls.

In human fibroblast cells, Ms. Hall said the researchers found cyclic imides inhibit the binding of low density lipoproteins containing cholesterol to "receptors" located on the outside of the cells.

They also block an enzyme that converts cholesterol to the form in which it is stored in plaque, she said.

IN BRIEF

Incumbent Ferre Wins Bitter Mayoral Battle

MIAMI (UPI) — An election bitterly divided along ethnic lines ended with incumbent Maurice Ferre denying Xavier Suarez' bid to become Miami's first Cuban mayor and appealing for unity because "that is the American way."

Ferre claimed an unprecedented sixth term on the strength of near-unanimous support among blacks, an almost evenly divided white Anglo-American vote and a strong comeback in Cuban districts where he had a relatively poor showing in the primary last week.

The 48-year-old Puerto Rican-born Ferre garnered 36,096 votes, or 54.82 percent, and Suarez 29,747 votes, or 45.18 percent. Turnout was 61.78 percent, slightly less than predicted by election officials.

Boom In The Night

By United Press International

Residents of southwest Georgia and northcentral Florida received a jolt late Tuesday when a loud "boom" of undetermined source rocked a 100-square-mile area, breaking out windows in several homes, authorities said.

The incident, which occurred around 10:30 p.m., was attributed by law enforcement officials to either a small earthquake tremor or a sonic boom from a military plane.

Mayor Promises To Go Straight For Great American Smokeout

Sanford Mayor Lee P. Moore admitted to Arnold Gottlieb, president of the Geneva Civic Association, that he would have to be restrained to observe the Great American Smokeout Thursday, so Gottlieb obliged with a straight-jacket.

The Smokeout is a day smokers make progress towards quitting by pledging to give up their cigarettes for "just one day" and non-smokers benefit by lots cleaner air to breathe. Moore didn't promise to quit for the whole day, but promised to give it the old college try.

Gottlieb said Geneva would observe the smoke-less holiday.

According to Irene K. Brown of the American

Cancer Society, Sanford and Lake Mary will join Geneva in observing the day by having a "pine box" available for citizens to "bury" their cigarettes instead of smoking them.

In Geneva the pine box will be at the post office. In Sanford and Lake Mary the coffins will be displayed at the respective city halls.

Cancer Society volunteers will be on hand to reward those discarding their smokes with an ACS pen and life-saving literature.

Residents of the three municipalities are encouraged to give up smoking for the day (who knows, after one day you may be able to quit) and discard their butts in the pine boxes between 8 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Arnold Gottlieb fits Mayor Moore for his straight-jacket.

Supreme Court To Hear Appeal In Death Case

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — The scheduled electrocution Thursday of Stephen Todd Booker for the murder of a 94-year-old woman has been moved back five hours by the Florida Supreme Court so justices can hear a last-minute appeal.

Booker's lawyers filed the appeal late Tuesday and the state's high court set oral arguments on the petition for 8 a.m. Thursday. The lawyers also planned to file an appeal today with the U.S. District Court in Tallahassee.

Booker had been scheduled to die in the electric chair at Florida State Prison at 7 a.m. Thursday but the execution was moved back by the high court to noon.

Booker was condemned for the 1977 rape and slaying of Lorine Demoss Harman of Gainesville, whose body was found in her home with a dozen stab wounds and a knife protruding from the neck.

Earlier Tuesday, Booker refused to be interviewed at Florida State Prison by a panel of three psychiatrists appointed by Gov. Bob Graham to determine his mental competency. Booker's lawyers advised against the interview.

Proposed Program Legacy Of County's Resigned Officer

Though Seminole County's Safety officer has resigned, he's left behind a safety program which county commissioners are scheduled to consider for adoption at their Nov. 22 meeting.

Frank Talarico resigned from the safety post last month citing the county's inconsistent support for safety programs. But before he left, Talarico developed a $28,000 package of safety items for employees in Public Works, Fleet Management, Public Services and Development, Health and Human Services, Environmental Services and Public Safety departments.

Talarico's recommendations include purchasing safety shoes and glasses, hard hats, first aid kits, bright orange jackets and shirts, ear plugs, snake protection, gas detectors and other equipment designed to protect employees.

The recommendations include back-up alarms for road maintenance trucks, strobe lights and turn signals for road graders to bring county vehicles up to federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration guidelines. Safety shoes are recommended for 133 employees whose jobs put them in positions where they could be injured by things falling on their feet. Orange tee shirts are recommended to increase visibility of employees who work along the roads. Orange vests and windbreakers should be purchased, Talarico said, to provide high visibility in cold weather.

Hard hats are recommended for building inspectors and other county workers who may be in construction areas.

The report also recommends distress devices for the county's 98

firefighters. The devices emit an audible alarm whenever a firefighter fails to move within a few seconds.

Commissioners have been divided on the need for a safety program. Commissioner Robert Sturm, a retired insurance executive, feels a safety officer is necessary to coordinate the county's safety program.

Commissioner Barbara Christensen disagrees, arguing that the department and division heads can manage the county's safety program.

State Official In Line For School Post

The Seminole County School District has recruited a prestigious official from the state Department of Education to become its assistant superintendent for business and finance.

Carey Ferrell, 53, director of budget and evaluation for DOE, has been recommended by Superintendent Robert Hughes to replace Roger Harris, who retires Dec. 15.

Hughes said he will ask the school board to hire Ferrell at the board's Wednesday meeting.

"He is the most knowledgeable person in the state on school finances and education law, said Hughes. "I'm really excited. This is a great opportunity for us."

If approved, Hughes said Ferrell will begin his $41,000 job on Dec. 1.

Hughes also recommends that the board approve Ferrell as the district's lobbyist in the state Legislature in Tallahassee.

"Because of his name recognition and his expertise there's no better person to serve as lobbyist," said Hughes.

The lobbyist position was recently approved by the school board and pays an additional $5,000.

Alcoholics' Center Opposed In Geneva

Metropolitan Alcoholism Council of Central Florida's proposal to operate a treatment center for recovering alcoholics has met opposition from the Geneva Citizens Association.

The council has asked for a special exception to permit operation of a farm near Lake Harney which will be worked by recovering alcoholics.

Seminole County's Board of Adjustment will hear the request Monday at 7 p.m. in the Seminole County Courthouse in Sanford.

Arnold Gottlieb, president of the homeowners association, said the Geneva location for the farm is inappropriate because of the residential nature of the community. He said it takes deputies 30 minutes to an hour to respond to calls in the area.

"It should be located in a city where there is better police protection," he said.

Adam's First

Gene Kellner, executive director of the Red Cross, which sponsors aquatic events in the Golden Age Games, introduces to the Games dinner dance audience a prospect for the Games some 50 years from now: Adam Gardner, 6. A member of the Blue Dolphins Swim Team, Adam is the youngest swimmer in the United States to earn the Red Cross' 50-mile swim award. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Phil Gardner of Winter Park, he completed the 50 miles by swimming between a half and one mile each day from June 4-Oct. 22 — the equivalent of 4,400 laps in the pool.

Governors' Resolution Praises President Reagan

By Clay F. Richards
UPI Political Writer

CHICAGO (UPI) — President Reagan asked the nation's Republican governors Tuesday to pressure members of Congress to keep down federal spending, which he said was the key to continued economic recovery.

Reagan's long-distance speech followed a resolution by the governors strongly supporting Reagan's economic and foreign policies.

"Bless you," Reagan said in a telephone call from the Oval Office to the governors' conference. "I appreciate that more than I can say."

"You and I know that keeping this recovery strong is going to take holding the line on federal spending," he said. "And I hope you will make sure your delegations in Congress know about it."

The Republican governors, their ranks shrunk, praised Reagan for taking "bold decisive action with regard to the island of Grenada to ensure the safety of Americans on that island and ... to restore democracy in Grenada."

He also told the governors that he would meet with members of Congress later in the day to push his proposal for tuition tax credits for private school children.

"Getting that passed will be an important step at the federal level to improve the education policies of the nation," the president said.

The resolution passed unanimously by the governors said Reagan's economic program was bringing a recovery that is "one of the strongest in 20 years." While it praised the president for bringing down inflation and unemployment, it also noted that "the Republican governors believe this recovery can only be sustained and strengthened by a substantial reduction in the federal deficit."

The foreign policy resolution praised Reagan for taking "bold decisive action with regard to the island of Grenada to ensure the safety of Americans on that island and ... to restore democracy in Grenada." It offered more praise concerning the Middle East, saying Reagan has acted "in the best interest of promoting peace."

Monday the governors spent the day discussing how to modernize aging smokestack industries that are vital to the health of their states' economies.

Leaders of industry said states must help provide retraining programs needed to keep major industries alive and the governors said they felt states must do more to provide a climate attractive to business.

"Most of the jobs lost during the recession are not coming back," said Gov. Christopher Bond of Missouri. "We simply have to retrain those workers for the jobs in the '80s and '90s."

Gerald Greenwald, vice-chairman of Chrysler, asked the governors to help keep down the cost of health care, which he said is increasing at the rate of 12 percent a year.

Marvin Runyon, president of Nissan Motor Manufacturing Corp. in the USA, which recently began building trucks at a plant in Tennessee, said a comfortable work environment is among the reasons for his company's success.

The new Nissan plant has ping-pong, basketball and volleyball facilities for use during work breaks, a fitness center for exercising and workers are able to lease cars for about half the price it would cost to buy them.

Pets: Cremating Better Than Dumping Them Into A Landfill

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Dumping a dead pet into a landfill doesn't appeal to many people and that reason cremation is increasing among owners, says an official of the Pet Cremation Service.

For $35, a person can have his or her dead pet cremated at the Orange County facility and the animal's ashes scattered in a wooded area adjacent to the company. Faye Harris, the firm's general manager, said about 25 percent of the company's customers take that option.

The other 75 percent pay $40 and have the pet's remains processed for return to the owner. The extra $5 covers an additional step where the pet's bone residue is ground into dust in an electric grinder.

Of those who ask to have the ashes returned, about half select one of the company's urns, the others provide the company with containers.

The urns range from plastic to bronze with aluminum, steel, walnut and cherry wood and marble in between. The lowest-priced $10 plastic urns are primarily used by pet owners who want to bury the ashes, J.W. Hill, manager of the firm's Hillsborough office, told The Charlotte News. The solid bronze "Athenia" urn carries the top price — $157.

Most urn buyers take the $40 rectangular-shaped wooden urn, but another favorite is a bronze urn in the shape of a dog house, which sales for $105.

Hill said cremation "is a lot better memory to most people than the thought of their pet decaying away in the ground, with water running over its body and everything."

Ms. Harris said dogs comprise about 60 percent of the firm's business, followed by cats at 35 percent and other animals 5 percent. Other animals have included rabbits, guinea pigs, gerbils, goats, a canary and two tigers.

"To a lot of people, a pet is just like a child," Ms. Harris said. "We see people who are in a lot of grief and pain, and who often are feeling guilty that they somehow caused the death."

"We see a lot of people who can't afford the higher cost of burial at a pet cemetery and people who aren't able to dig a hole in their backyard to bury the pet."

Charlotte Humane Society president Patti Lewis said she is not surprised at the firm's growth.

"It seems like a viable alternative," she said, adding "most people who care about their pets don't want them covered over with dirt in the landfill."

Ms. Harris has used her firm. Her terrier's cremated ashes are in a handcrafted, wooden urn she uses as a bookend on her desk at home. "Instead of her being at the door when I get home, I go in and she's sitting on my desk, looking back at me," Ms. Harris said.

Since 1979, the firm's business has tripled each year to the current level of 500 cremations annually, Ms. Harris said.

It is the Carolinas' only pet cremation business and one of a few nationwide, including companies in Florida, New York, Illinois and California, the Charlotte newspaper reported.

Americans Are Facing Energy Crisis

By Ros Liston
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Americans face shortages of oil and gas in the near future unless Congress opens up offshore areas to exploration and the United States reduces its dependence on foreign oil, an oil industry official says.

"The nation is not that far from a return to the days of tight supply, of crisis mentality, of frantic attempts at the legislative quick-fix, of the governmental errors," Charles J. DiBona, chairman of the American Petroleum Institute, told the oil industry trade group.

"That scenario could take several years — or it could happen sooner."

His views were echoed by Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., who said the United States could face a "severe natural gas shortage" as early as 1985 unless prices are completely decontrolled and incentives provided for further exploration.

DiBona said Congress must lift its restrictions on offshore leasing and allow the nation to increase its energy supplies.

"The reality is that economic recovery and softening prices have already turned oil imports upward so that they are now almost at the October 1973 level" when the Arab oil embargo began, he said.

"There exists today an energy 'glut' mentality in America — a mentality that thrives despite the fact that we import a third of the oil we use and that those imports are growing," DiBona said.

Secretary of Energy Donald P. Hodel warned the 2,000 oil executive at the opening session of the two-day meeting that the current instability in the vital Persian Gulf area has clouded the outlook for stable oil prices and adequate energy supplies.

"The economic conditions of the free world are based on the fact that 20 percent of its oil supplies come from the Persian Gulf," he said.

Hodel pointed out that France recently delivered jets equipped with Exocet missiles to Iraq — a move that could intensify the Iraq-Iran war and lead to a shutdown of the Strait of Hormuz at the entrance to the Gulf.

Closure of the strait would have a "serious impact" on the economies of the United States, its allies and the lesser developed nations, he said.

"The United States must rely primarily on the marketplace to weather the storm," Hodel said.

He said many Congressmen would rush to impose price controls and allocations on the oil industry in a misguided attempt to protect consumers.

"Controls did not work before and would fare no better in the future," Hodel said. Emergency measures adopted by Congress after the last oil price shock of 1979-1980 unleashed "cruel" inflation that ultimately led to the worst recession since the Depression, he said.

But under the DOE's free market response to a foreign oil cutoff, Hodel said, the oil industry would have to realize that "it can't conduct business as usual at the expense of the public."

This winter, warm up your house with a new heat pump. And we'll pay you up to $600 cash.

FPL will pay you up to $600 cash if you replace your inefficient heating/cooling system with a high-efficiency heat pump.

You save two ways. You get cash back on your installation now, and your new efficient heat pump can lower your heating bills by as much as 50% when compared to the conventional electric heating systems that many of our customers have.

A heat pump both heats and cools your home very efficiently. In the winter, it extracts heat from outside, pumping it indoors. In the summer, it cools by removing heat and humidity from your home.

For qualifying details, contact any heating/cooling dealer displaying the Watt-Wise™ Products Program symbol, or call FPL's Watt-Wise Line™ for a list of dealers participating in this program. And an FPL representative will personally check to see that the completed job meets our rigid standards.

This program benefits you and all our customers. Because it costs less than the oil necessary to generate the electricity wasted by inefficient heating/cooling systems.

So pick up the phone. And pick up as much as $600.

We're working hard at being the kind of power company you want.

A free Home Energy Audit will provide more information. To arrange for one, send us this coupon or call the Watt-Wise Line weekdays 8 to 5.

Cook Of The Week

Tradition Will Reign When The Clan Gathers

By Lou Childers
Herald Correspondent

Angelic Marion looks forward to the month of November every year. Her favorite meal of the year is Thanksgiving Day when all of the family gathers for a "covered dish" par excellence.

Angelic and her husband, Dan, live in Chuluota with their two children, Daniel, 4, and Niesha, 3. "I moved to Chuluota 12 years ago," recalls this week's cook. "and I can tell you it was quite a change from where I was born and grew up — Battle Creek, Mich."

Angelic states that her brother and sister-in-law, George and Sandra Traver of Deltona, will be hosting this year's family gathering that will include her mother and sister, also of Deltona, Shirley and Kiersten Ellfander, and another sister and brother-in-law and their family, Mike and Sharee Childers of Geneva.

"We will all make traditional dishes and meet about noon to see the turkey carved," says Angelic.

One of her favorite side dishes at Thanksgiving and all through the year is Bread Stuffing. And, this is one of her contributions to this year's festivities.

Angelic will also be making Stuffed Orange Shell Dessert which she says is attractively garnished with a slice of orange and a big red cherry.

Angelic's orange dessert starts when she picks six luscious Florida oranges right from the tree. Of course, she washes them thoroughly, and then slices them "zig-zag style." The oranges are scooped clean while the recipe progresses. "I take the segments from four or five tangerines, add 1/2 cup of orange juice (from the fresh oranges) and mix this all together with a large package of frozen whipped topping." Angelic then returns the mixture to the refrigerator for a few hours before filling the orange shells. For a picturesque touch she takes plastic toothpicks and "stabs" a maraschino cherry and a slice of orange for a garish for each orange half.

If you are fond of oysters and don't like them in your dressing, try Oysters Cremeux for another great Thanksgiving Day side dish. Looking for an alternative to traditional pumpkin pie? For the easiest pecan pie you'll ever make, Pecan Crumb Pie is the answer. No crust, no fuss and 30 minutes in the oven!

BREAD STUFFING

3/4 cup minced onion
1 1/2 cups chopped celery
1 cup butter
9 cups soft bread crumbs
2 teaspoons salt
1 1/2 teaspoons crushed sage leaves
1 teaspoon thyme
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1 egg
(Optional: 1 cup oysters with liquor)
In a large skillet cook and stir onion, celery and butter until onion is tender. Stir in about one-third of the bread cubes. Turn into a deep bowl. Add remaining ingredients and toss. Stuff turkey just before roasting. This recipe yields enough for a 12 lb. bird.)

STUFFED ORANGE SHELL DESSERT

6 large Florida oranges
4 or 5 tangerines
1 large container frozen whipped topping
1 small jar maraschino cherries plastic toothpicks
Cut oranges zig-zag style and remove pulp. Reserve 1/2 cup of orange juice. Remove segments from tangerines and stir into frozen topping with the 1/2 cup of orange juice. Refrigerate 2 to 4 hours in a covered container. Fill each orange shell and garnish by placing one orange segment and a cherry on a plastic toothpick.

PECAN CRUMB PIE

3 medium eggs
1 cup sugar, divided
2 cups graham cracker crumbs
1/4 cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 cup chopped pecans
2 tablespoons butter melted
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 cup heavy cream, whipped and sweetened
1. Heat oven to 350 degrees.
2. Beat eggs until very light with 1/2 cup of the sugar.
3. Combine remaining sugar with crumbs, flour, baking powder, and pecans. Add butter, vanilla and beaten eggs and mix lightly.
4. Pour into a buttered 9-inch pie pan.
5. Bake 30 to 35 minutes.
6. Cool. Serve with whipped cream.
Makes one 9-inch pie.

Herald Photo by Lou Childers

Angelic Marion will make a luscious orange dessert for Thanksgiving dinner.

OYSTERS CREMEUX

6 ounces uncooked egg noodles milk
2 cans (8 ounces each) oysters, drained (reserve liquor)
1/2 cup butter softened
1 egg
1 tablespoon flour
1 clove garlic, crushed
1/2 teaspoon bottled brown bouquet sauce
1/4 teaspoon mace
dash of cayenne red pepper
2 cups shredded process sharp American cheese (about 8 ounces)
3 tablespoons snipped parsley
1/4 teaspoon freshly ground pepper
1/4 cup buttered bread crumbs

- Heat oven to 350 degrees. Cook noodles as directed on package; drain.
- Add milk to reserved oyster liquor to make 2 cups. Heat oysters and liquid in large skillet over medium-high heat about five minutes.
- Blend butter, egg, flour, garlic, bouquet sauce, mace and cayenne pepper; stir slowly into skillet. Heat to boiling over medium heat, stirring constantly. Boil and stir one minute. Mix in noodles, 1 1/4 cups of the cheese, the parsley and pepper.
- Pour into ungreased 2-quart casserole. Sprinkle with remaining cheese and the bread crumbs. Bake uncovered until bubbly, about 20 minutes. Yield: 6 servings.

English class dressed as famous personalities when giving reports on their biographies

Rock Lake Sixth Graders Give Living Book Reports

By Karen Warner
Herald Correspondent

Getting her sixth grade English class at Rock Lake Middle School interested in developing good reading habits has become a dramatic experience for Crystal Milstead.

The students have been participating in living book reports and dress as the famous personalities whose biographies and autobiographies they are reporting.

Some of the students and the persons they have given living book reports about are, above photo, top row, from left, Tyler Griffin as Ned Lawrence, Kyle Kubanek as Ben Franklin, Brian Lebensburger as Buffalo Bill, Kent Brubaker as Sam Houston, Shane Bowen as George Washington, Jessica Halperin as Pocahontas and Shawn Kosinski as Clara Barton.

Search On For Mrs. Florida

The annual search to find the most beautiful married woman to represent Florida in the 1984 Mrs. America Pageant has officially begun.

Bill and Pinky Rerucha, Mrs. Florida state directors for Florida, announce that their pageant office is now accepting applications for its state-wide competition March 16 and 17, 1984 at the Chain O' Lakes Convention Center and Recreation Complex in Winter Haven.

The winner qualifies for the 1984 Mrs. America finals, which will be taped for national television on May 4 from the Las Vegas Hilton.

1 cup (4 oz.) shredded Cheddar cheese
2 tablespoons chopped parsley

Rinse cauliflower and separate into flowerets. Cook in a 4-quart covered Dutch oven, in 1-inch boiling salted water, for 8 to 15 minutes or until just tender; drain. Preheat oven to 400°F. Place in buttered 3-quart casserole.

Sprinkle with salt, nutmeg and pepper. Cover with 2 cups Cheddar cheese. Drizzle butter over all. Tuck in tomato wedges, sprinkle over an additional 1 cup cheese and bake 5 minutes or until cheese is slightly melted. Serve garnished with parsley.

NOTE: If cooked cauliflower has cooled before assembling casserole, heat in oven 5 minutes with 2 cups cheese and butter before tucking in tomato wedges and sprinkling with 1 cup cheese. 12 servings.

CARAWAY CHEESE POTATOES
3/4 cup (1/2 stick) butter
3 tablespoons flour
1 1/2 teaspoons caraway seed
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
3 cups milk
6 large red potatoes (about 3 pounds), peeled, sliced
2 medium-sized onions, sliced
2 cups (8 oz.) shredded Cheddar cheese

Preheat oven to 350°F. Melt butter in 1-quart saucepan. Stir in flour, caraway, salt and pepper until smooth. Remove from heat. Gradually stir in milk. Bring to boil, stirring constantly. Boil and stir 1 minute. Arrange potatoes and onion in buttered 3-quart baking dish. Pour sauce over top. Cover with aluminum foil. Bake 1 hour. Remove cover. Bake an additional 30 minutes, or until potatoes are tender. Sprinkle with cheese during last 10 minutes of baking. 12 servings.

DATE NUT FRUITCAKE
3/4 cup (1 1/2 sticks) butter
3/4 cup sugar
4 eggs
1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
2 cups coarsely chopped pecans
1 cup (16 oz. jar) canned fruit mix
1 cup chopped pitted dates

Preheat oven to 275°F. Butter 9x5-inch loaf pan and line with waxed paper. Cream butter in large mixing bowl. Gradually add sugar and beat until light and fluffy. Beat in eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Blend in 1 cup flour. Mix remaining 1/2 cup flour with pecans, fruit mix and dates. Fold into batter. Pour into pan.

Evening Herald, Sanford, FL, Wednesday, Nov. 16, 1983-5B

(Have a pan of hot water on bottom shelf of oven. Cake will have greater volume and a moister texture.) Bake 2 to 2 1/2 hours or until done. Remove to cooling rack; when completely cool, remove cake from pan. Yield: 1 loaf cake

Heavenly dessert has holiday garnish

CHRISTMAS WREATH CAKE
1 package (16 oz.) angel food cake mix
1/2 cup (1 stick) butter
2 cups confectioners sugar
1 egg
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1/4 teaspoon brandy extract
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
1 to 2 tablespoons milk
1 cup whipping cream
1 tablespoon confectioners sugar
1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract
Green colored coconut
Maraschino cherries

Make cake according to package directions. Cool completely. Cut cake into 3 layers. Cream butter in small mixing bowl. Beat in 2 cups sugar, egg, 1 teaspoon vanilla and brandy extract, nutmeg and milk. Spread 1/2 cup filling between cake layers. Whip cream until almost stiff; add 1 tablespoon sugar and 1/2 teaspoon vanilla and beat until stiff. Frost top and sides of cake; chill. Just before serving sprinkle coconut on top of cake to resemble a wreath and decorate with cherries. 12 servings.

Colored coconut is easy to make. Simply place shredded coconut in container with tight-fitting cover. Add a few drops of food coloring for the color desired. Shake to combine. Spread colored coconut on waxed paper to dry. To store, keep in container with tight fitting cover; store in refrigerator.

ORANGE EGGNOG SOUFFLE
2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
1/4 cup sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
5 eggs, separated
1 cup water
1/4 cup frozen orange juice concentrate
2 cups dairy eggnog
1 tablespoon rum extract
1 tablespoon grated orange peel
1/4 teaspoon cream of tartar
1/2 cup sugar
2 cups whipping cream
Orange slice

Mix gelatin with 1/4 cup sugar and salt. Beat egg yolks with water and orange juice concentrate. Add to gelatin mixture. Stir over low heat until gelatin is completely dissolved, 5 to 8 minutes. Remove from heat. Add eggnog, rum extract and orange peel. Chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from a spoon.

Beat egg whites with cream of tartar until frothy; gradually add 1/2 cup sugar and beat until soft peaks form. Fold in gelatin mixture. Whip 1 1/2 cups cream until soft peaks form; fold into gelatin mixture. Pour into 1 quart souffle dish with collar. (See note.) Chill until set, at least 6 hours. Remove collar. Whip remaining 1/2 cup cream until stiff; garnish with whipped cream and orange slice. 10 to 12 servings.

HOT ALMOND EGGNOG
3 quarts dairy eggnog
3 cups milk
3 tablespoons almond extract
Whipped cream
silvered almonds
Heat eggnog and milk in a large, heavy saucepan, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat and stir in extract. Serve garnished with dollops of whipped cream and silvered almonds. Yield: 15 cups.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

Use More Bulk In Your Diet

Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am extremely concerned about what foods are likely to cause trouble now that my physician has diagnosed diverticulosis. Do you have a brochure or something to help me know what to avoid? Even though I am trying to be careful, there is often a heaviness in my stomach that is quite uncomfortable but I do want to avoid diverticulitis.

DEAR READER — Keep in mind that those little pockets of the colon are extremely common. Some estimate that as many as 70 percent of older people have them and they are not rare in people below 50. In many people, they cause no symptoms at all.

But a spastic colon, which does cause symptoms, may cause diverticulosis. When a spasm exists and pressure builds up in the colon, the pressure causes a "blow-out" or tiny ruptures of the colon known as diverticula or pockets of the colon.

The heaviness you describe may be from a basic poor function of your colon rather than the diverticula. Let your doctor guide you, but the usual advice today is to use more bulk in the diet. This includes whole-wheat products, perhaps some miller's bran and avoid foods that do not contain any bulk.

The complications of diverticulosis may vary with the symptoms. Diverticulitis, which means inflammation of one of the small pockets, causes pain and symptoms similar to appendicitis. But it is usually on the left side. That is because the diverticula are mostly on the left side of the colon. These symptoms are different from the symptoms of a spastic colon.

We do not know why a diverticulum becomes inflamed any more than we know why the appendix becomes inflamed. But patients with diverticula are often advised to avoid seeds, such as grape seeds, for fear that they may lodge themselves in a diverticulum and cause problems. The vast majority of diverticula are not on this basis. Probably the best thing you can do is follow a sensible diet that encourages good colon function. Laxatives should be avoided, as well as any foods that cause you to have symptoms.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Could you please provide a description of the drug tetracycline and what it is generally prescribed for?

We have had several discussions on this drug because it is prescribed so much for different ailments. We were wondering if you could set us straight.

DEAR READER — There are a number of antibiotics included in the group of medicines known as tetracyclines. They all have essentially the same action but some are short and others long acting. They affect the basic metabolism within bacteria, making it nearly impossible for the bacteria to reproduce or multiply.

When you keep bacteria from multiplying, as the old bacteria die new ones are not available to take their place. The result is that within a few hours, the growth of bacteria may slow, and finally the bacteria causing the infection are eradicated.

That feature of antibiotics explains why you should take your antibiotics as long as your doctor told you to do so.

What The Day Will Bring...

YOUR BIRTHDAY

NOVEMBER 17, 1983

Your splendid imagination will be put to profitable uses this coming year. Ideas you conceive will be moneymakers, but you must follow them through to conclusion.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)

The ways and means are presently available to make it possible to get something you've been desiring. Eye the landscape carefully. Scorpio predictions for the year ahead are now ready. Romance, career, luck, earnings, travel and much more are discussed. Send $1 and your zodiac sign to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Send an additional $2 for the NEW Astro-Graph Matchmaker wheel and booklet. Reveals romantic compatibilities for all signs.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)

You have good leadership qualities today, but they may be more evident to others than to yourself. However, you'll use them when situations warrant it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

In any activities today of a sensitive or secretive nature, try to restrict them to just the persons directly involved.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)

Confidential information may be passed on to you by a pal today. It'll be left to your discretion as to whether other friends should be informed.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)

Conditions continue to favor you where your material interests are concerned. If inspiration dictates that you should move in a definite direction, do so.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

Success comes today when you adhere to your ideals regardless of what others may say or do. You'll know the path to follow.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

Follow your inclinations today to step in and manage something which another is not handling properly. Both of you will benefit.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

Your popularity is likely to reach a high point today because of your sincerity when dealing with others on a one-to-one basis.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

Be goal-oriented today. Know that you can achieve that which you set your mind to. Great heights can be scaled if you're inspired.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

You have a manner and style about you today that members of the opposite gender will find both attractive and pleasing. Be yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

Matters where the family is harmony on common objectives should turn out to everyone's liking today. Operate as a unit.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)

Decisions you make today should not be predicated solely upon their material aspects. Take into consideration other factors as well.

dummy at trick one. East takes his king and returns the suit.

South draws trumps with three leads, cashes dummy's diamond queen and leads a spade. West takes his ace and leads a spade back. Two tricks have fallen to the defense and two club losers look to be most likely. Still there is some chance for success. South cashes his jack of diamonds and plays ace and one club. Declarer's justice has triumphed. East has to win the second club and lead a spade to give South a ruff in one hand and a club discard from the other.

Could the defense have defeated the contract?

Yes indeed! A club opening by West would have stopped developments of the end play, as would have a club shift by East when he took his diamond king. And, of course, if clubs had broken 3-3 or if the club honors had been divided differently, no play would have worked, but South had been given a chance to win and had taken it.

Low Zinc Linked To Learning, Memory Problems

BOSTON (UPI) — Experiments in rats suggest that pregnant women deficient in zinc may run a substantial risk of bearing children with learning and memory problems, federal scientists say.

U.S. Agriculture Department researchers emphasized no direct link has been established between the laboratory tests and humans. But they said the findings were sufficient to urge expectant mothers to eat foods rich in zinc, such as oysters and liver during and immediately following pregnancy.

A report on the research, done at the agency's Grand Forks, N.D., Human Nutrition Research Center, was delivered Thursday to the annual meeting of the Society for Neuroscience in Boston.

"Diets mildly deficient in zinc caused memory and learning impairments in the offspring of laboratory rats fed the diets during pregnancy and suckling," the department said.

Edward S. Halas, a department research psychologist, said whether the zinc deficiency occurs in human fetuses and interferes with the brain's hippocampus during pregnancy and postnatal periods is not known, but said the tests "may have implications for humans."

He said the test of rats showed the impaired learning of animals continued into adulthood.

Halas said a rat maze used to diagnose the impairments was the same kind researchers at Johns Hopkins University developed to study effects of surgically imposed injuries on the rat brain.

University researchers found that injuries to the brain's hippocampus area impaired short- and long-term memory.

A 17-arm radial maze resembling the hub of a wheel and 17 spokes was used by Halas in the experiment, the department said.

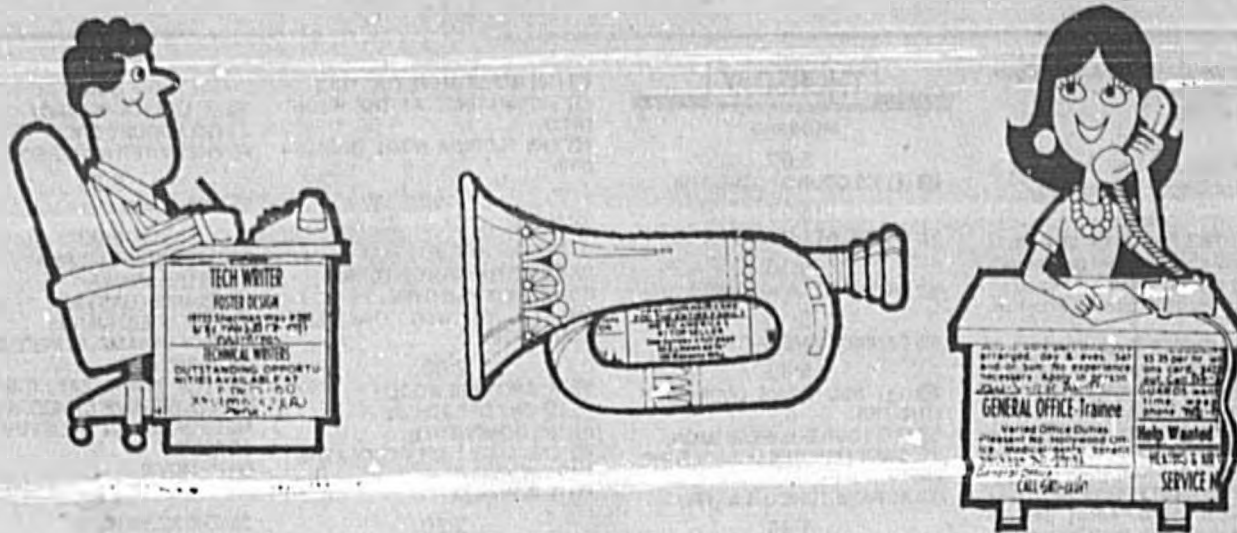

Halas said the Grand Forks study "found that the hippocampus areas were less well developed in zinc-deficient rats with memory and learning impairments than they were in the rats on control diets."

He said in both rats and humans, the hippocampus normally has high concentrations of zinc, a trace mineral that is essential for formation of nucleic acids and protein.

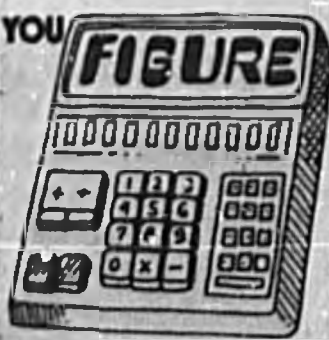

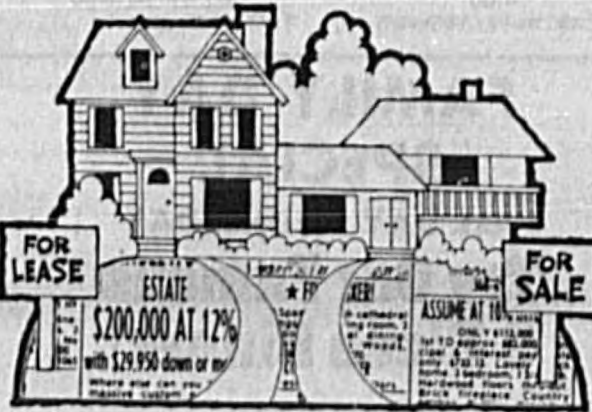

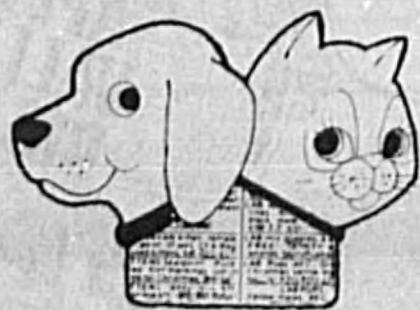

He said if zinc deficiency occurs in early life during a critical period of brain development, normal growth and maturation may be irreversibly impaired.

Halas said studies currently under way may show whether learning deficiencies resulting from malnutrition become worse in succeeding generations.

Other good sources of zinc are crab, variety meats such as beef heart, other kinds of beef and dark poultry meat.

The Boomerang

Marc Floyd demonstrates the successful way to hold a boomerang — between first and second fingers and thumb, round side back.

Well known symbol of Australia, its origin, its use and just how it can be made to return to its thrower, places it among the most amazing implements of all time.

Herald Photos by Diane Petryk

Jenny Bauer, left, and Nicki Scroggins, study the markings on a boomerang hand-painted by Australian aborigines.

5th Graders Grasp Technique From 'Down Under'

In 1770, Captain Cook and his landing party at Botany Bay were surprised to see Australian natives throwing boomerangs and amazed by the boomerang's ability to return to the thrower.

But none were more surprised than several students in Barbara Rothberg's 5th grade class at Keeth Elementary School, Winter Springs, when they gave boomerang throwing a try and met with some success.

As part of their study of Australian culture, the pupils read directions for throwing the devices and tried it with some authentic aborigine-made boomerangs. Students Jenny Bauer, Marc Floyd, Jeff Karson and Nicki Scroggins were able to make their boomerang follow a U-shaped path on the very first try. Their teacher's attempt was slightly less successful. Mrs. Rothberg's pitch sent the boomerang straight into the ground.

Although no-one had a boomerang come back and land at their feet, as practiced Australians can regularly accomplish, the students felt they did a pretty good job for novices.

Boomerangs should be held almost vertical between first and second fingers and thumb, with the round side towards the thrower's body. Joint action of the index finger and wrist make the boomerang spin. And here's the secret: its the spin and the wind that make the boomerang return.

As the class and passersby watch, teacher Barbara Rothberg takes aim for a pitch that drives the boomerang straight into the ground.

Jeff Karson shrugs and seems to take a philosophical approach to the strange device. His efforts were fairly successful.

Schooner Replica Will Recall Early Days On Great Lakes

MUSKEGON, Mich. (UPI) — A bit of history was laid to rest in 1910 when the first schooner to carry lumber on the Great Lakes succumbed to age and slipped to the bottom of Lake Michigan.

The Challenge, then 58 years old, sprang a leak just out of Sheboygan, Wis. Crewmen pumped furiously but eventually were forced to abandon ship. Sailors were saved but there was no salvage effort.

The ship would have been lost forever had it not been for Howard Chappelle, curator of the Smithsonian Institution, who sent an associate to record the dimensions of the Challenge.

The sketches and measurements taken by Chappelle's associate now serve as the blueprint for a second Challenge, a replica envisioned by its builders as a traveling "nature center."

"What a tremendous way to get people out on the lakes, to increase public awareness of what the Great Lakes are, historically and environmentally, to help them better understand the resource," said David Jasperse, executive director of Project Lakewell.

The new Challenge is little more than a few skeletal ribs fastened to an oak beam in the Lumbertown Building on Muskegon's lakeshore. Most of Project Lakewell's efforts are now directed more toward fund-raising than carpentry.

But by the spring of 1986, Jasperse said, Project Lakewell hopes to launch the vessel for its shakedown cruise. When finished, the Challenge will be 125 feet long, 22 1/2 feet wide and 64 feet tall. She is to be constructed entirely of white oak and will weigh approximately 758 tons, Jasperse said.

"From an educational point of view, this is tremendously important," said Jasperse, a former ecologist with the state Department of Natural Resources.

"We will travel along the shoreline offering programs about history and ecology. Historically, in this part of the country everything starts at the Great Lakes and moves inward."

Jasperse estimates the cost of building the ship at $528,000 and says the organization is seeking an additional $500,000 to establish a lifetime maintenance and rebuilding endowment.

"Once completed, it will be the first Great Lakes lumber schooner built in this century; the only American design tall ship on the Great Lakes," Jasperse said. "We want to be sure it will be maintained and hope to have the funds to begin rebuilding in 35 to 40 years through the endowment fund."

Jasperse said Project Lakewell grew out of a cocktail party discussion between "four teachers... who talked about the lack of educational facilities" on the Great Lakes.

"We didn't know anything about building a ship," he said. "We told people what we were planning to do and they laughed."

The "gang of four," as Jasperse refers to himself and his associates, stuck to their idea, however, and appear well on their way to seeing the Challenge to completion.

Project Lakewell, founded in 1980, already has raised approximately one-third of the funds needed to build the Challenge.

His Brother's TV Role Chief Cause Of Notoriety

By Jane Casselberry
Herald Staff Writer

Winter Springs resident Bob Grady's claim to fame these days is that he's the brother of actor Ed Grady.

Brother Ed's in the limelight playing the role of Police Chief Melvin Thomas in the three part television series Chiefs that began on Channel 6 at 8 p.m. Sunday and continues through today, beginning at 9 p.m.

Grady, 147 Hayes Road, said his brother, who lives in Morganton, N.C., is scheduled to spend Thanksgiving with him.

He performs in Chiefs with well-known actors such as Charlton Heston, Keith Caradine, Wayne Rogers, Brad Davis and Billy Dee Williams. He is chief of police at the beginning of part II and dies of a heart attack (off camera). The film was made in Chester, S.C.

Ed wrote his brother describing the production as "really a class act."

"I was picked up by a chauffeur at the motel where I stayed," he wrote. "— they picked up the tab for that. I was chauffeured to the portable dressing room with my character's name on the door."

"They wanted to chauffeur me to makeup and the set, but I managed to evade them and walk when it was only a few blocks. Production assistants waited on you... everyone was thoughtful and courteous. Jerry London, the director, would amble over while setting up ashot and sort of chat with you and tell you what he wanted, if you weren't doing exactly what he wanted. He gave the talent great leeway and freedom... I enjoyed working with him."

He described his co-workers: "Charlton was friendly, but remote. Steve Collins was friendly, helpful, gracious and a real pro; Brad Davis was a bit distant and inclined to disappear between shots; Paul Sorvino was jovial and friendly; Danny Glover was a great pleasure to work with."

But as far as the weather was concerned "conditions were terrible" with temperatures in the 100s and costumes of heavy wool.

Bob Grady said Ed, who teaches language arts, theatre, film and TV production classes at the local high school, has led a multi-faceted life. He was the subject of a book, later made into a musical, The Me Nobody Knows, based on his work with delinquent youths in New York City.

Photographer, poet and lecturer as well as actor and teacher, he has appeared in many films and plays. He played the role of the sinister minister in Wolfman, was in The Last Game, and played the role of Glenn Turner's father in Dare to be Great.

Contemporary Chic: Cook Once To Dine Twice

Modern American cooking has evolved from traditional haute to contemporary chic. Described by some food authorities as "U.S. Continental," this new cooking style combines foods of diverse cultures with ease of preparation and the flair of new ingredients to produce fresh dining excitement.

Part of this "new style" reflects today's lifestyles and interests — more elaborate cooking for weekends and when entertaining, with easy meals planned for hectic weekdays. One secret for streamlining mid-week cooking is by preparing double the poultry or meat and rice required for a party meal. A second day's menu, unique in taste and appearance and equally impressive, can then be ready to eat in minutes.

The first step is to choose versatile, complementary food items for your special meal. Succulent Long Island Duckling and fluffy, separate grain rice, for example, have a natural affinity for one another. Both can be used in a variety of cuisines and recipes, from the basic to gourmet.

To avoid dividing time between the kitchen and guests, prepare all the rice for Bacon Rice and Romaine Stir-Fry ahead of time. A portion of this rice will be removed and refrigerated or frozen for a dividend meal. For added convenience, the remaining ingredients in this non-Oriental stir-fry can also be chopped, sliced and measured in advance.

A few minutes before dinner is served, begin heating the wok. The electric wok makes it possible to cook the rice accompaniment with flair and showmanship at the dinner table. The constant temperature and concentrated heat at the bottom of the wok cooks food quickly, heightening the flavor of each ingredient and retaining the food's natural appetizing colors. In no time at all, with little last-minute effort, dinner is complete, as is most of a second meal.

Primavera Duckling and Red Pepper Rice, Duckling Risotto, or any other recipe with "planned over" duckling and rice is quickly prepared in the wok. Stir-frying is a fast and easy way to prepare all kinds of foods, both left-over and from scratch.

Try the convenient cook once to dine twice method and you'll wonder how you ever prepared an evening meal without it.

Bourbon Glazed Duckling and Bacon and Romaine Stir-Fry combine in an elegant guest meal with enough 'planned over' rice and duckling for a second dividend supper. The rice accompaniment and encore meals can be dramatically prepared at the table to the delight of family and guests

BOURBON GLAZED DUCKLING

- 3 Long Island Ducklings, thawed and quartered
- Salt
- ¾ cup bourbon
- ¾ cup packed light brown sugar
- ¾ teaspoon grated lemon peel

Preheat oven to 325°F. Wash duckling quarters; dry with paper toweling. Sprinkle both sides with salt. Arrange skin side up on racks in shallow roasting pans. Prick skin all over with sharp fork or knife. Roast at 325°F. for 1½ hours. Combine bourbon, brown sugar and lemon peel, stirring until sugar dissolves. Brush eight of the duckling quarters generously with glaze, leaving remaining duckling quarters unglazed. Continue roasting, brushing two or three times with glaze, until drumstick meat is fork tender, about 30 minutes. Wrap well and refrigerate or freeze unglazed duckling quarters for Primavera Duckling & Red Pepper Rice or Duckling Risotto. Serve glazed duckling with Bacon Rice & Romaine Stir-Fry. Makes 8 servings.

BACON RICE AND ROMAINE STIR-FRY

Dry white wine
3 cans (13¼ or 14½ ounces each) chicken broth
3 cups converted rice
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
1½ teaspoons salt
6 to 7 slices bacon, diced
½ pound mushrooms, sliced
¾ cup chopped onion
3 cups shredded Romaine lettuce
Add enough wine to chicken broth to make 6 cups liquid. Bring to a boil in large saucepan. Stir in rice, butter and salt. Cover tightly and simmer 20 minutes. Remove from heat. Let stand covered until all liquid is absorbed, about 5 minutes. Remove half of the rice (about 5½ cups); cover and refrigerate for Primavera Duckling & Red Pepper Rice or Duckling Risotto. Preheat West Bend Electric Wok to medium-high (375°F.), about 3 minutes. Add bacon. Cook and stir until crisp, about 5 minutes. Remove and set aside. Pour off all but about 1 to 2 tablespoons drippings. Add mushrooms and onion to wok. Cook and stir over medium heat (325°F.-350°F) 2 to 3 minutes. Add remaining rice and Romaine. Cook and stir 2 to 3 minutes or until hot. Stir bacon into rice. Serve at once with Bourbon Glazed Duckling. Makes 8 servings.

PRIMAVERA DUCKLING AND RED PEPPER RICE

4 roasted Long Island Duckling quarters
5½ cups reserved cooked rice
2 medium red or green peppers, cut into 1½ x¼-inch strips
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
6 medium carrots, cut into 1½x¼x¼-inch strips
2 cloves garlic, minced
2 tablespoons chopped fresh basil or 1½ teaspoons dried basil
2 to 2½ teaspoons grated fresh ginger or ½ to ¾ teaspoon ground ginger
1 teaspoon salt
½ to ¼ teaspoon cayenne pepper
3 small zucchini, cut into 1½x¼x¼-inch strips
½ cup heavy cream
Remove duckling meat from bones. Cut meat into thin strips; set aside. In large saucepan, combine rice and red pepper. Add 2 to 3 tablespoons water. Cover and cook over low heat, stirring occasionally, until rice is hot and pepper is crisp-tender. Heat oil in wok over medium-high heat (375°F.), about 3 minutes. Add carrots, garlic, basil, ginger, salt and cayenne pepper. Cook and stir 2 to 3 minutes. Add zucchini. Continue to cook and stir until vegetables are crisp-tender, 2 to 3 minutes. Add duckling and heat through. Stir in cream. Serve duckling and vegetable mixture over red pepper rice. Makes 6 servings.

DUCKLING RISOTTO

4 roasted Long Island Duckling quarters
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
¾ pound fresh Brussels sprouts*, sliced lengthwise ¼-inch thick
2 cloves garlic, minced
1½ cups reserved cooked converted rice
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
3 to 4 green onions with tops, thinly sliced
1 jar (4 ounces) whole pimientos, drained and cut into thin strips
½ cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese
Remove duckling meat from bones. Cut up meat; set aside. Heat oil in wok over medium heat (350°F.), about 3 minutes. Add Brussels sprouts. Cook and stir until sprouts are crisp-tender, 5 to 7 minutes. Add garlic and continue to cook and stir 1 minute. Add duckling, rice, pepper and nutmeg. Cook and stir until heated through, about 4 minutes. Stir in green onions, pimientos and ½ cup Parmesan cheese. Serve immediately. Sprinkle with additional Parmesan cheese, if desired. Makes 6 servings.

* 1 package (10 ounces) frozen Brussels sprouts, thawed and drained, may be substituted.

Holiday Help From Freezer

This holiday season you won't have to muster your strength and march into the kitchen for the long haul of preparing turkey and trimmings for the "Big Day." Just take a stroll down the aisles in any grocery store and discover the convenient prepared foods that can help cut holiday dinner fixing time down to minutes.

Keep your family traditions, but save time and effort with helpers like frozen pie crust shells, frozen prepared gravy and sliced turkey main dish, canned cranberry sauce and seasoned stuffing mix. The frozen gravy and turkey slices, in 32 ounce packages, are especially handy for a holiday dinner for two to five people, when a whole turkey is just too much. For Easy Turkey and Dressing, the frozen product is baked with a savory mixture of herb seasoned stuffing mix, pork sausage, onion, celery and canned mushrooms.

Round out the dinner with seasonal vegetables, hot rolls and surprisingly simple Cranberry Walnut Pie. Baked in a deep dish frozen pie crust shell, this dessert has the smoothness of custard and the crunchiness of walnuts.

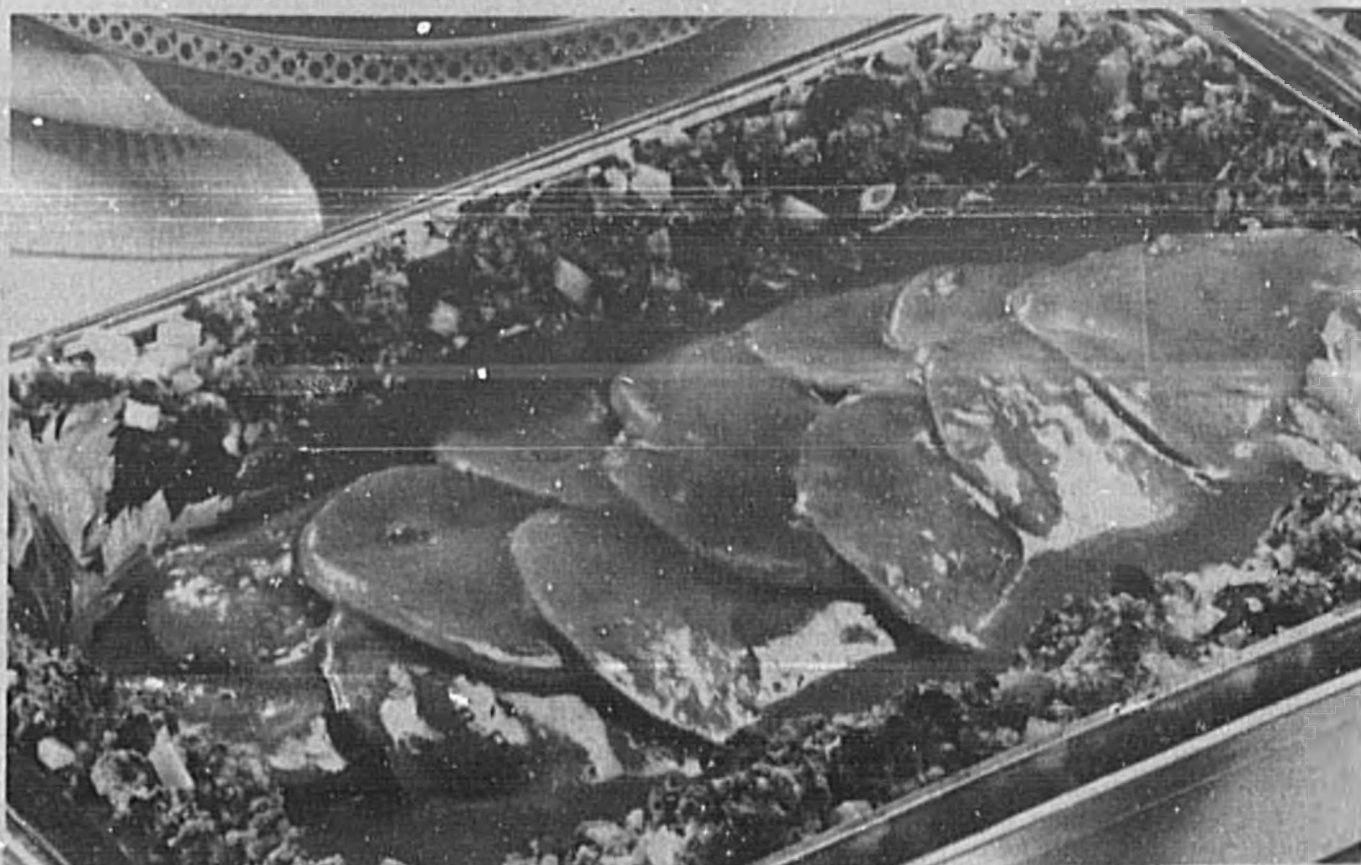

EASY TURKEY AND DRESSING

1 package (32 oz.) frozen prepared gravy and sliced turkey main dish
4 cups herb seasoning stuffing mix

1/2 pound ground pork sausage, crumbled
1 medium onion, chopped (about 3/4 cup)
1 rib celery, chopped (about 1/4 cup)
1 can (4 oz.) mushroom stems and pieces, drained
1/2 cup chicken broth
Remove gravy and sliced turkey from foil tray and place in 3-quart oblong baking dish. In large bowl, combine remaining ingredients. Place along edges of baking dish. Cover with aluminum foil. Heat in 400°F oven 20 minutes. Uncover. Heat an additional 25 minutes or until mixture is hot and bubbly.

CRANBERRY WALNUT PIE

3 eggs, beaten
1/2 cup sugar
3 tablespoons cornstarch
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 can (16 oz.) whole berry cranberry sauce
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 cup chopped walnuts
1 (9-inch) deep-dish frozen unbaked pie crust shell
In large bowl, combine eggs, sugar, cornstarch, cinnamon, cranberry sauce, lemon juice and walnuts. Pour into pie crust. Bake on cookie sheet in 375°F oven 40 minutes or until filling is set. Cool 2 hours before serving. Makes 1 pie.

Turkey and dressing feast is a snap for 'Big Day'

Score Points With Orange Juice Treats

As high school marching bands across the country vie for top honors at various Tropicana Music Bowl competitions this fall, you can score high points with family and friends by serving a variety of orange juice-flavored treats that are sure winners.

The Orange-Shortbread Bars and Orange-Pecan Cookies are ideal to tote along and enjoy while cheering on your local high school marching band. Both contain generous quantities of nutritious orange juice packed with energy-giving Vitamin C.

The recipes were developed in the test kitchens of Tropicana Products, Inc., maker of ready-to-serve orange juice and sponsor of the nationwide Music Bowl program which supports high school music education.

ORANGE-BANANA SHAKES

(About 2 1/4 quarts)

4 cups orange juice (1 quart)
4 medium-sized ripe bananas, cut up and mashed
1 quart vanilla ice cream, softened
1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg
Combine all ingredients in large bowl; beat well with electric mixer on medium to high speed until each half in food processor or blender until well mixed and foamy. Serve immediately.

ORANGE-SHORTBREAD BARS

(48 square bars)

3 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1/2 cup cornstarch
1 cup granulated sugar
1 teaspoon dried ground orange peel
1/2 cup butter or margarine, softened
2 cups sifted confectioners' sugar
1/4 cup orange juice
1 cup chopped walnuts
Combine flour, cornstarch, sugar, orange peel and salt in large mixing bowl; mix well. Using pastry blender or two table knives cut in butter until particles are quite fine. Add orange juice; stir lightly to mix. Using hands, work mixture until it forms a dough.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. With floured fingertips, press dough evenly in bottom of buttered jelly roll pan. Bake 25 minutes or until lightly brown. Let cool in pan.
For orange glaze: stir 1/4 cup orange juice into confectioners' sugar, mixing until creamy. Spread glaze atop cooled pastry; sprinkle with chopped walnuts. Let stand until glaze is set; cut into bars. Store in airtight container in cool place.

ORANGE-PECAN COOKIES

(3 1/2 dozen)

1/2 cup butter or margarine
1/2 cup granulated sugar
1/2 cup packed light brown sugar
1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract
2 tablespoons orange juice
1 egg, lightly beaten
1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon dried ground orange peel
1/2 teaspoon salt
3/4 cup finely chopped pecans
Cream butter. Add sugars; beat until mixture is light and fluffy. Add vanilla, orange juice, and egg, mixing well. Add remaining ingredients, stirring until thoroughly blended. Chill several hours or overnight.
Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Drop dough by teaspoonfuls on cookie sheets that have been lined with aluminum foil. Bake 10 to 12 minutes, or until lightly browned. Let cookies cool on cookie sheets. When cool, remove and place in airtight container for storage.

Fettuccine Alfredo In Basic Form

Fettuccine Alfredo is a rich pasta dish, made so by the blending of rich cream or half and half and cheese. Here is a basic recipe. Many Alfredo fans like to grate other hard cheeses to combine with the Parmesan.

FETTUCINE ALFREDO

8 ounces fettuccine (about 4 cups)
1 tablespoon salt
3 quarts boiling water
1/4 cup soft butter or margarine
1/2 cup half and half, heated
1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
Freshly ground black pepper

Gradually add fettuccine and salt to rapidly boiling water so that water continues to boil. Cook uncovered, stirring occasionally, until tender. Drain in colander. Pour back into heated pan. Gradually but quickly stir in butter, half and half and cheese, tossing quickly so butter will melt. Sprinkle with pepper and serve at once. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 6 servings. Medium egg noodles may be substituted.

Microwave Magic

Shape Up For Holiday Indulgence

Are you one of those people who goes on a diet just prior to the holiday season? I am. Knowing that I'm going to indulge in sweets from the end of November to the end of December, I try to cut back now and eat those foods which are calorie wise.

The microwave oven can help because it allows for fat free cooking and brings out the natural flavors of food. When the flavor is too bland or uninteresting, herbs and spices can be used to enhance flavor without increasing calories.

The Dieters' Delight has been a favorite of those who want a hot, low calorie drink.

DIETERS' DELIGHT

- 1 tablespoon garlic powder
 - 1 teaspoon black pepper
 - 1 tablespoon dried oregano
 - 1 tablespoon parsley flakes
 - 1 tablespoon dried basil
- Blend all ingredients and store in a tight container.

Soups are useful when dieting. They are satisfying and help you feel full.

LOW CALORIE MINESTRONE

- 1/2 cup thinly sliced celery
- 1/2 cup thinly sliced carrots
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 large potato, cubed
- 1 can (16 oz.) tomatoes

Midge Mycoff

Home Economist
Seminole Community College

- 1 cup thinly sliced zucchini
 - 1/2 pound of green beans, cut into 1-inch pieces
 - 1/2 cup spaghetti, broken
 - 3 cups hot water
 - 2 teaspoons instant beef bouillon
 - 1 teaspoon basil
 - 1 tablespoon parsley
- In a large microwave safe container, combine all ingredients. Cover. Microwave at 100% power for 25-35 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Stir several times.

Serves 6. Calories: 35 per serving.

CHICKEN NOODLE SOUP

- 2-3 pounds of chicken pieces
- 6 cups hot water, divided
- 2 large stalks of celery, thinly sliced
- 2 medium carrots, thinly sliced
- 1/2 teaspoon dried basil

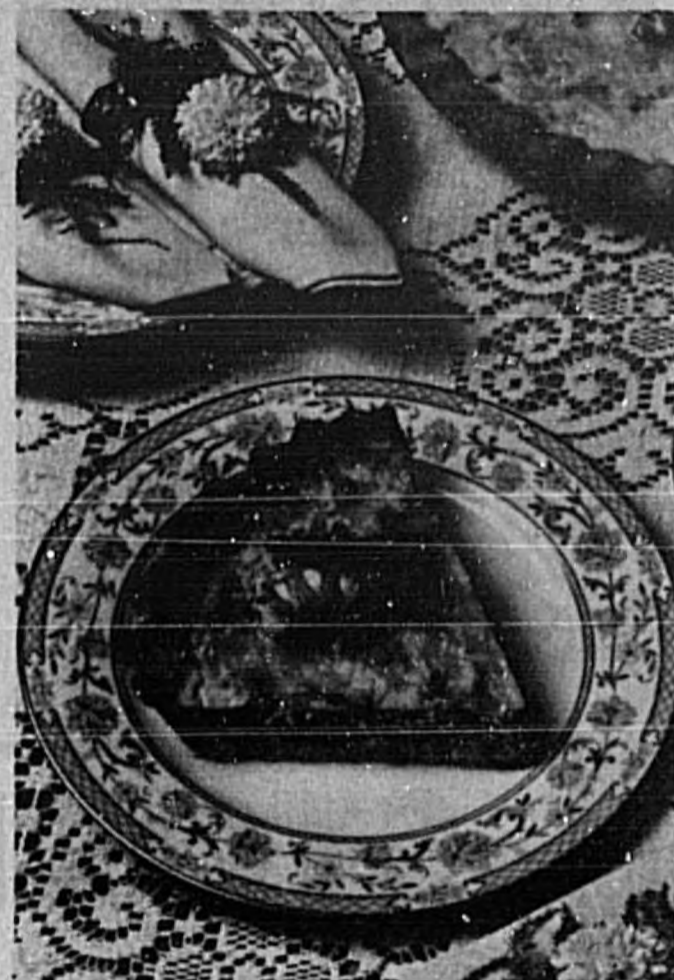

- 1/4 teaspoon rosemary
 - 1/4 teaspoon pepper
 - 1/2 cup thin egg noodles
- In a large microwave safe casserole, combine chicken, 4 cups water, celery, carrots, basil, rosemary, and pepper. Cover. Microwave at 100% power for 30-35 minutes or until chicken leaves the bones easily.

Remove chicken from bone. Discard bones and skin. Cut meat into small pieces and return to the casserole. Add 2 cups hot water and noodles. Cover. Microwave at 100% power for 6-8 minutes. Stir. Microwave at 100% power for 6-8 minutes or until noodles are tender.

Serves 8. Calories: 110 per serving.
This cream soup is not as low in calories as the clear soups, but it is a tasty change particularly for this time of the year.

PUMPKIN SOUP

- 4 green onions, chopped
 - 2 tablespoons margarine or butter
 - 1 can (16 oz.) pumpkin
 - 3/4 teaspoon ground ginger
 - 1/2 teaspoon turmeric
 - 1 cup evaporated skim milk
 - 1 cup skim milk
 - 2 cups hot water
 - 2 teaspoons instant chicken bouillon
 - 1 tablespoon sugar
- Place onion and margarine in a 3-quart casserole. Microwave at 100% power for 2-3 minutes or until onions are tender. Blend in remaining ingredients. Microwave at 100% power for 6-7 minutes or until heated. Stir every 2 minutes.
Serves 4. Calories: 180 per serving.

A busy hostess can prepare this quiche using rock shrimp "in a flash."

Quiche Is Shrimply Delicious

Feeling a little "gourmet" today? Why not test your expertise with a shrimply delicious quiche? Not only is it delicious, but it is simple and easy too, regardless of the degree of your culinary expertise. Whether entertaining guests or simply treating the family, you are sure to hear "compliments to the Chef!"

Quiche, France's sophisticated answer to Italy's pizza, is a type of savory pie which consists of a flaky pastry shell with a creamy custard filling. Quiche may be prepared using cheese, meats, seafood, onions, chopped vegetables, or any combination of these ingredients. These ingredients may be layered on the bottom or combined with the eggs and milk before pouring into the pastry shell.

Quiches have long been popular as brunch or luncheon entrees. Served hot or cold, this ever-popular pie is equally appropriate at a dinner for four or a cocktail party for 40.

Sautéed mushrooms and green onions, and the unique lobster-like flavor of Florida's rock shrimp, add richness to this quiche. The colorful ingredients produce a dish that is as eye-appealing as it is delicious.

Rock shrimp is readily available fresh from Florida's coasts from August until February or can be found frozen year round. Care should be taken in cooking, as preparation time is very short for rock shrimp. Overcooking toughens the meat and destroys the delicate flavor. Rock shrimp require a mere thirty seconds to cook, allowing the busy hostess to be in and out of the kitchen in a flash.

Note also that the recipe yields two pies — so "double your dining pleasure" with shrimply delicious quiche.

SHRIMPPLY DELICIOUS QUICHE

- 3/4 pound raw, peeled and deveined rock shrimp, fresh or frozen
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 2 cups water
- 1 1/2 cups sliced fresh mushrooms
- 3/4 cup sliced green onion
- 1/4 cup butter or margarine, melted
- 4 eggs, well beaten
- 1 1/2 cups half and half cream
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1 cup shredded mozzarella cheese
- 2 unbaked 9-inch pie shells

Throw rock shrimp if frozen. Add salt to water and bring to a boil. Place shrimp in boiling water; cook 30 seconds. Drain. Rinse under cold running water for 1 to 2 minutes. Remove any remaining particles of sand vein. Chop rock shrimp. Cook mushrooms and green onions in butter until tender, but not brown. Combine eggs, half and half, salt and dry mustard; beat until smooth. Layer half of the rock shrimp, half of the mushroom mixture and half of the mozzarella cheese in each pie shell. Pour half of the egg mixture into each pie shell. Bake in a hot oven, 425°F., for 15 minutes; reduce heat to 300°F. and continue to bake for 30 minutes or until knife when inserted in the center of quiche comes out clean. Let stand 15 minutes before serving. Makes 6 servings.
