Shuttle Probe Gets Public Hearing Today At Cape

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — The Challenger commission, weighing the validity of subtle failure scenarios, prepared for a public hearing today expected to include testimony about pre-launch trouble with a suspect rocket joint.

The presidential panel investigating the Challenger disaster planned to consider the status of salvage operations, studies of failure modes and a review of launch processing and assembly of the shuttle's solid-fuel rockets.

Appropriately, the daylong hearing was scheduled for the Galaxy Theater at Spaceport USA, the visitors center at the Florida shuttleport. Officials said some 300 of the 500 seats in the theater were reserved for the public.

Commission chairman William Rogers and other panel members assembled at the space center Thursday to review the results of field trips made by working groups to other NASA

Pen Pals Project Write-On With Kids

Keeth Elementary School students are "excited" about the possibility of making up to 800 new friends across America. With the help of the U.S. Postal Service, the students are writing to counterparts in all 50 states, in hopes of developing pen pals.

The letter writing was part of recent school Literacy Week activities. Principal David Sawyer combined ideas to come up with the program. He said a Keeth teacher had used the postal service's Junior Pen Pal Directory earlier in the year. Sawyer then recalled while he was a teacher some years ago, his classes would find odd named towns such as Dime Box, Texas, and write to people there. He put the ideas together to come up with the pen pal project, which was apparently well received by both students and teachers.

The letters were sorted by Keeth's Student Council, and picked up by Casselberry letter carrier Gary Boyce Thursday morning.

Linda Shull, who coordinated the program with Sawyer, said, "This is the first time we've done this. The letter writing is part of students' studies related to language, writing, spelling, and social studies." Student council members who turned the letters over to Boyce agreed the project has been fun, and are anxious to get responses.

Council president Cherie Sine, a 10½-year-old fifth grader, said she wrote to a girl in New Mexico.

"I ask her how old she is and what grade she's in," Cherie said. "I also asked what the weather was like and if they have earthquakes. I wanted to know if she had any animals." She added she wrote about her cat named Brandy. "I told her I hoped we would be able to be pen pals for a long time."

Angela Birch, a 9½-year-old fourth grader, council vice-president, wrote to a school principal in Washington state.

"I told her about the things I like to do like playing dodge ball and dancing, and I like to do things outside since the weather is usually warm. I asked her to give me with the name of a fourth grade pen pal who liked the same things.

Eleven-year old fifth grader David Boydston wrote to a boy in his home state of North Dakota.

"I asked what school is like there and if his school was nice. I told him he is my first pen pal and that I was glad to have him as a friend. I asked if he had any other pen pals, and told him about Disney World and the attractions here." Of the letter

It's Plan I

Hughes Said Decided On Zoning Issue

By Paul Schaefer
Herald Staff Writer

It may be all over but the shouting in the Seminole County school district's efforts to draw new middle school attendance lines. After months of work, it is anticipated Superintendent of School Robert Hughes will recommend that the school board "approve as presented" rezoning Plan I with modifications, the Evening Herald has learned.

The final opportunity for public input on the issue is to be Wednesday night, before Hughes makes his recommendation to the board. It is expected the board will vote that night to adopt a plan.

New attendance zones are needed to accommodate opening of Greenwood Lakes Middle School in Lake Mary this fall. The plan is scheduled for consideration and adoption in a special one-item agenda meeting at the school board offices Wednesday night.

School officials released a memorandum to Hughes from zone task force members Jack Heisler and Marion Giannini late Thursday, which outlines modifications to Plan I, and notes the superintendent will recommend approval of the plan.

Plan I, the ninth rezoning proposal was designed by Hughes, based on Plans C and G, which were recommended to him by the task force. Hughes unveiled the plan at a special worksession February 24.

The plan met with approval of most parents attending the February meeting. Especially pleased were most Lake Mary residents, who wanted their students to attend the middle school closest to the homes. Previous plans would have split the community.

Remaining unsatisfied with Plan I are small pockets of residents with students north of Lake Mary Boulevard, including those living in the Markham Woods Road area west of I-4 and south of 46A, the Heathrow development, and Rinehart Road north of Lake Mary Boulevard. Those parents contend their small number of children should attend the school closest to them, which is Greenwood Lakes.

Those parents contend that they live closer to the new school, and students would have to be bused twice the distance to Lakeview Middle School where they are designated to attend under plan I.

Markham Woods Road area parents will meet at the home of Jan Railey Tuesday morning at 9 a.m. to plan their final push for consideration by the board for inclusion in the Greenwood Lakes attendance zone.

Plan I modifications will send about 53 Highlands and Rustic Woods students to Greenwood Lakes. Other Winter Springs area students numbering about 120 will go to Lakeview. Winter Springs Elementary School students would be a "feeder school" to Lakeview, Greenwood Lakes, and Seminole Middle Schools.

Police Can Be Sued If Warrants Are Faulty, Supreme Court Rules

From Staff and Wire Reports

Local law enforcement officials expressed mixed feelings Thursday about a U.S. Supreme Court ruling that citizens arrested on improper warrants can sue the arresting officer for damages if they can show he was incompetent or knowingly broke the law.

The unanimous ruling Wednesday affirmed a decision by the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which said police officers may be liable in cases where they properly obtain an arrest warrant from a judge, but lack the necessary probable cause to do so.

Such officers "will not be immune (from civil suits) if, on an objective basis, it is obvious that no reasonably competent officer would have concluded that a warrant should issue," the opinion, written by Justice Byron Whitem said. "But if officers of reasonable competence could disagree on this issue, immunity should be recognized."

"The key is knowingly unlawfully or incompetent," said Sanford's Police Chief Steve Harriett.

"If an officer knowingly violates the law, he is going to have to justify that action," he said. Harriett said the ruling, however, would have little effect on Sanford police since they usually do not serve arrest warrants.

Sheriff John Polk, whose deputies serve arrest warrants, said he was not aware until the ruling that law officers had immunity.

Polk said if a warrant is improper because there isn't sufficient probable cause, it would not be the fault of the serving deputy. He said it would be the fault of the state attorney's office, even though that office often would be issuing the warrant after evaluating information sent to it by the sheriff's department. Polk said deputies have always run the risk of serving the wrong person or some other mistake.

The decision to give police officers so-called qualified immunity for improper arrests was a defeat for 19 states, which had argued for complete immunity on grounds law enforcement activities would be hampered if officers knew they can be sued for their actions.

The court, responding to that concern, said, "True, an officer who knows that objectively unreasonable decisions will be actionable may be motivated to reflect before submitting a request for a warrant. But such reflection is desirable because it reduces the likelihood that the officer's request for a warrant will be premature."

Justices Lewis Powell and William Rehnquist did not join the majority opinion, but concurred with the ruling that police officers should be given qualified immunity in such cases.

Belfiore Not Among Finalists For Lake Mary Police Chief

Lake Mary city commissioners agreed to authorize the Central Florida Police Chief's Association screening committee to begin the process of background checks on their six recommendations for Lake Mary's new police chief, during their Thursday night meeting. The authorization to begin the process came despite impassioned pleas by citizens for the commissioners to add the name of applicant Lieutenant Samuel Belfiore to the list.

Sam Belfiore

Belfiore, Lake Mary acting chief, is a seven-year veteran of the Lake Mary force, but was not included in the list of six finalists recommended for the position. He is the interim chief of police, following the retirement March 1 of eleven-year veteran chief Harry Benson.

Commissioner Russ Megonegal motioned for the background checks to begin, and commissioner Buzz Petsos amended the motion to leave the matter of additions or deletions from the list open. Commissioner Charlie Webster protested, saying, "The people here tonight are asking we include Lt. Belfiore, but the commission is saying let's start the selection process without him."

Megonegal said the set procedure should be followed, and the list could be expanded or shortened during the process.

Petsos said, "We're not locked into just the six, but we would be calling the screening committee a farce if we don't

Contra Aid Package Wins 1, Loses 3 In House Votes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan's $100 million aid package for the Contra rebels in Nicaragua has scored only one victory in four House committee votes and apparently faces serious trouble in the Senate.

Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said the administration had eliminated "any hope for a reasonable and rational debate" by making the proposal a political and patriotic issue.

"I find this simplistic reasoning highly offensive," she said.

Kassebaum and Republican Sens. Charles Mathias of Maryland and Dan Evans of Washington told Secretary of State George Shultz Thursday that they could not support the package, which includes $70 million in military aid and $30 million in non-lethal assistance.

Reagan planned to speak to the nation March 16 to rally support for the package, three days before it is scheduled for a vote in the full House.

So far, the package has scored one victory and three defeats in House votes:

- In a 30-second maneuver, the Armed Services Committee, under Chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis., approved the package

Student Finds Body

The body of an elderly black male was found in a wooded lot near Lakeview Middle School by an eighth grade student Thursday afternoon, police said.

Sanford Police Chief Steve Harriett said the body was discovered at approximately 3 p.m. Clothing on the body is similar to that believed worn by Robert May, 87, 413 E. Seventh Street, when he disappeared on Dec. 30, he said.

Harriett said the body appeared to have been at the lot since around that date and that foul play was not suspected at this time.

He added a positive identification has yet to be made, nor has the cause of death been determined. An autopsy was scheduled for 9:30 a.m. today at Central Florida Regional Hospital.

After the youngster discovered the body he brought a friend back to the lot and the two then flagged down a patrol car, Harriett said. The lot is located behind the Sizzlin Steak House on U.S. Highway 17-92 and the Lakeview Middle School on Lakeview Drive, Harriett said.

The body was partially covered by shrubbery, and did not appear to have been purposely hidden from sight, according to Harriett.

He said the department's investigation is continuing.

One of the last people to see May was reportedly Sanford police officer Curt Schuster, who stopped at 1 a.m. on Dec. 30 to offer May assistance with his car.

As The Years Go Up, The Senses Go Down

Dr. Gott

DEAR DR. GOTT — I still have some sense of smell and taste, but I can only smell and taste things that are strong. A long time ago I had a bad head cold and inserted some Vicks Vaporub up my nose. Could this have caused the problem? I'm past 72, and also suffer from deafness.

DEAR DR. GOTT — As people age, they tend to develop less efficient senses: eyes, ears, smell and taste can be affected. I doubt that the Vicks caused the problem, but putting this material up the nose is an unwise idea. The oil base in Vicks can irritate the nose and, in some people, enter the lungs, where it causes a form of chronic pulmonary infection called lipid pneumonia.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I'm a teenager and have visible veins on my legs, arms and face. They don't stick out like varicose veins, they are just on the surface. What are these from and how can I get rid of them?

DEAR DR. GOTT — I believe you may have inherited a tendency to enlargement of the capillaries or veins in your skin. You need an examination to make sure you don't have an internal problem, such as liver disease, that might account for prominent veins. If your condition is a cosmetic problem, you may also wish to see a plastic surgeon.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am 61 and in relatively good health. My ophthalmologist diagnosed me as having "suspect glaucoma." He wants to wait a year for a repeat test. However, I have a fullness in my eyes, and I'm not sure if this is related to the glaucoma or a sinus problem. Is it safe to wait a year?

DEAR DR. GOTT — Yes, it is. Early glaucoma does not ordinarily produce symptoms of eye fullness. Have your doctor evaluate your sinuses. If you are uncomfortable about waiting a year for a glaucoma followup, ask your ophthalmologist to refer you to a colleague for a second opinion.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Is there any possible physical danger in having a hair transplant?

DEAR READER — Hair transplants performed by a medically qualified person are safe. However, when performed by one who is not qualified, the results can be disastrous. Infection is the primary problem.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am a man of 85 and have problems with constipation and straining.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

Occasionally good bridge play involves suppressing one's natural card-playing instincts developed over the years. That's the theme of today's deal. South played in four hearts. After the king of diamonds had held the first trick, West played the club 10. Naturally declarer covered with the queen, and East put on the king. Declarer now drew trumps, ruffed one diamond, cashed the jack of clubs (on which West played the nine), and then played dummy's jack of diamonds, throwing a spade. West was on lead, but he had preserved a low club. He led it to his partner's good club eight and the contract was set with a spade back through declarer's A-Q.

To achieve a perfect end play, declarer must suppress the instinctive natural play when West switches to the club 10. Instead of covering, declarer should simply play low from both hands, allowing West to hold the trick. For the defenders, what now? If clubs are continued, declarer will win the trick in his own hand or in dummy, depending upon what East plays. He can then draw trumps, ruff one diamond, cash the third club and exit with the diamond jack as before, throwing his small spade. Now West, with no exit card, will be forced either to lead into the A-Q of spades or to play a diamond, allowing declarer to ruff in the dummy and throw the spade queen from his hand.

It's a simple little end play, with the frosting on the cake being the unusual play to eliminate the club suit without letting East gain the lead.

Gardening

Tropical Caladiums Are Delightfully Colorful And Easy To Grow

Caladiums are one of our most popular warm-season foliage plants. These colorful tropical plants grow well here, are relatively inexpensive and require very little maintenance. Their wide varieties of bright, contrasting colors add a cool look to our summer gardens.

You can choose from either fancy- or lance-leaved varieties. The fancy ones, which are the most popular, have large, somewhat rounded leaves. They vary in color from pure white with contrasting green veins to pink, rose and red. Many varieties have showy crimson-erinkled centers and dark green veins. The lance-leaved types are available in all colors, too. Their leaves are narrow and elongated, rather than round, and the plant is somewhat smaller than the fancy-leaved varieties.

Plant your caladiums soon after the danger of frost has passed. You can grow them from tubers or purchase established potted plants from your favorite garden center.

If you start them from tubers, set them about two inches deep and 18 inches apart in the garden. Potted specimens should be set at the same depth at which they are growing in the container and at the same spacing as for dormant tubers.

Caladiums grow best in moist, but not soggy, soil. If your soil is quite sandy, be sure to mix in

Alfred Bessenes
Urban Horticulturist
323-2500
Ext. 181

some compost or peat moss before planting. Make sure the site has good drainage, as too much moisture will cause the roots to decay.

A somewhat shaded area is best — caladiums won't tolerate the full summer sun. The ideal spot has about 40 to 60 percent shade. An hour or two of morning sun delights them. Longer exposure results in bleached or faded-out foliage and limits plant growth as well.

Proper feeding will produce healthy, large-leaved specimens. If you have a somewhat organic soil, spread about two pounds of a 6-6-6 or 8-8-8 complete fertilizer per 100 square feet of garden area, four to six weeks after setting the tubers. For plants growing in sandy soil where nutrient leaching may be a problem, feed your plants on a monthly basis.

To maintain the necessary soil moisture and grow lush plants, spread a one-to-two-inch layer of organic mulch around the plants, but not directly against the stems. If the soil is allowed to dry out, the caladiums will wilt rapidly.

Caladiums may be grown indoors, too, and make excellent house plants. Use a potting mix of one part sand and one part peat moss. Fill your container just about full, then set the tubers about one-inch deep. Water thoroughly. Keep the soil mix moist, but not soggy. If the leaves turn a little pale, give them a little extra plant food.

The colorful foliage can be used in floral arrangements, too. Plunge the freshly cut stems into hot water and leave until the water turns lukewarm, then place the stems in a bath of cold water. The leaves will last several days in an arrangement if given this pre-treatment.

Caladiums are not the only bulbous plants we can grow here. You can grow others in the same type of soil as preferred by caladiums. Some that can be set out this time of year include the Aztec Lily, Canna, Gladiolus, Gloriosa Lily, Kaffir Lily, African Lily, Ginger Lily, Society Garlic, Spider Lily, Tuberous Begonias, Star-of-Bethlehem and Tiger flower. True Lillium species, such as the Easter Lily, Formosa Lily, Madonna Lily, Regal Lily and the L. speciosum and gold-banded lilies, can also be planted now. Would you believe that Florida has one native species, the Catesby or pine lily, which is commonly seen in moist flatwoods in August and September?

As you can see, you can be choosy when it comes to selecting foliage or flowering-type bulbs for your garden. Some need partial shade — others full sun. And, bed preparation before planting will certainly help in producing more beautiful flowers and foliage. Some of the bulbs are left in the garden for several seasons before they need to be dug and divided. A good complete fertilizer should be spread at two to three pounds per 100 square feet several times during the season, too.

Water is still the most crucial cultural practice you can do. Be sure that the plants do not suffer for lack of water during times of growth and flowering. Except when the bulbs are being dried-off at the end of a growing season, keep the soil moderately moist, but not soggy, at all times. How much you will have to water depends on your soil type, time of the year, and weather conditions.

A good cultural practice, too, is to remove dead blooms before seeds are produced. Flowering will be greatly reduced if seeds are allowed to set. Removing dead blooms and foliage also helps to maintain the beauty of the planting and may prevent disease problems.

Happy gardening!

Sorority Founders Day Celebrated by Alumni

The Sanford Alumni Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta sorority recently celebrated its first observance of Founders Day. The newly chartered chapter dedicated the ceremony to its 22 founders, who 73 years ago set goals toward higher achievement in the areas of education, economics, physical and mental health and political and international involvement.

Chapter members renewed their pledges to public service, and Soror Fannie Miller gave a history of the chapter. Soror Patricia Hitchmon entertained the group with a solo.

Soror Alexis Johnson gave special recognition to charter members Shirley Allen, president; Sylvia Stallworth, vice-president; Ella Robinson, secretary; Ella Gilmore, parliamentarian; Ruth Williams, treasurer; Patricia Hitchmon, corresponding secretary; Rashla Sherman, chaplain; Fannie Miller; Albert Taylor; Linda Williams; Ruby Williams; Deborah Dickerson; and Shirley Williams. Other sorors spotlighted were Sharrone Coachman and Alexis Johnson. The chapter joyfully recognized its newly initiated sorors, Dianetta Alexander, Marian Mitchell and Lenora Mobley. The sorors of the Sanford chapter were recently guests of the Orlando Alumna Chapter, Orange County Alumnae Chapter and the Daytona Beach

King's Wives Prone To Lose Their Heads

DEAR ABBY: I must set you straight about your ignorant impression of King Henry VIII of England. You perpetuate that erroneous American stereotype of King Henry VIII as the ultimate slob. This gross misconception comes from the rage so he could marry Anne. The pope refused. So Henry separated England from the Roman Catholic Church, established the Church of England and made the king himself its head. (Convenient?) With the Roman Catholic Church out of the way, he had his marriage to Catherine declared null and void. Then Anne (whom he had already secretly married) was crowned queen. Was Henry happy? Nooooo! Three years later, their marriage was such a mess that good king Henry had Anne separated from her head, charging her with infidelity. So much for King Henry VIII, whom I disparaged for his bad table manners.

Dear Abby

Hollywood movies, made in the United States with notorious disregard for historical facts.

I am honor-bound to say that Henry VIII was a great ruler in a difficult period of religious and political change for the western world. He was greatly loved by his people, who called him "the good King Henry."

Please browse through your history books and elevate yourself above the trashy movie stereotypes.

ALL-AMERICAN HISTORY BUFF

DEAR BUFF: I just finished browsing through the World Book Encyclopedia. A few facts: Henry VIII came to the throne when he was 18. His father had arranged a marriage between Henry and the widow of Henry's brother Arthur. Catherine of Aragon, daughter of King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella of Spain, who just happened to have a handsome dowry.

It seems King Henry lost his head over a beautiful maiden named Anne Boleyn who was later to lose hers literally.

The good King Henry tried to get the pope to annul his mar-

...Shuttle

centers earlier in the week. Shuttle astronaut Dr. Sally Ride, in charge of one of the subcommittees, arrived in Florida Tuesday.

In an interview with ABC News, Ride, 34, a physicist who flew two shuttle missions, said she is "not ready to fly again now. I think that there are very few astronauts who are ready to fly again now."

"I think we all believe that it's important to NASA to, number one, understand the problem and dedicate themselves to fixing the problem, and also to just assess other areas of the program and areas within NASA to make sure that there aren't other accidents lurking in the background."

She said NASA may have neglected its responsibility in not emphasizing the danger in shuttle operations.

"I think that we may have been misleading people into thinking this is a routine operation, that it's just like getting on an airliner and going across the country and that it's safe. And it's not," she said.

"Now maybe they (teacher Christa McAuliffe and other civilians who have flown in the shuttle) did understand the risks and maybe they didn't," she said. "I think that NASA's responsibility and I'm not sure that NASA has carried out that responsibility."

She added she thinks the shuttle could be grounded for several years, even if the reason for the explosion is found.

With commission activity heating up, President Reagan Thursday asked former NASA administrator James Fletcher to replace James Beggs as the chief of the troubled space agency. Beggs resigned last week to fight a federal indictment unrelated to his tenure with NASA.

Various theories have emerged in the five weeks since Challenger blew up to explain the worst disaster in space history.

George Hardy, deputy director of science and engineering at the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., said Thursday the crucial rubber O-ring seals in Challenger's right-hand booster may have been damaged before takeoff.

A rupture in a joint connecting the lower two of four fuel segments in the booster triggered the explosion of the ship's giant external tank Jan. 28, destroying the spaceship and killing the shuttle's seven crew members.

Previous commission testimony has focused on the operation of the O-rings in the suspect rocket joint. One leading theory holds that the seals failed to work properly after exposure to freezing weather the night before blastoff, allowing a deadly 5,900-degree "burn through" at the joint.

But Hardy said one of the solid fuel segments in question was slightly out of round after delivery from the factory and that special tools had to be used to force it into shape during assembly.

"The segment was rounded to (specification) in the procedure but there's a possibility ... the O-rings may have been damaged," he said.

"It's not untypical that we get out-of-round when we get this joint," he said in an interview.

Artistry

...with a little bit of country

For the artistic with a country bent, tole isn't toil.

Handpainting hearts, flowers and other designs onto wood, metal and fabric is a fun and crafty trend in Sanford.

Yvonne Alday works in a Sanford crafts shop where the artist comes to learn this craft that was an 18th Century rage. She said it seems most want to brush up on their painting skills to personalize their decor, even if it isn't country. Or they want to create gifts or items to sell.

Early tole artists usually worked their craft on metal and the practice takes its name from a thin French metal.

Tole work was first done in lacquer or enamel and usually gilded, but today, Ms. Alday said, oil or acrylic is the paint of choice. And today's tolists, she said, rarely work with metal pieces because of the expense. Instead they add a colorful touch to wooden cutouts, fabrics, wooden boxes or, Ms. Alday's favorite, baskets.

Tole originated as an inexpensive way to add a decorative touch to working-class homes with functional tin items such as coal scuttles, buckets and candle holders receiving a bright handpainted bouquet on a dark background.

New England, Ohio and Kentucky were prime centers for toleware production in the olden days. And many early pieces are prized by collectors. As old tole becomes harder to find, today's craftsmen are creating their own designs. Many go beyond combining function and beauty and create a purely decorative design that fits their lifestyle.

Sanford's Linda Renfro, a watercolorist who recently shifted to tole work, favors working with wooden hearts, to which she adds homey slogans along with flowers and dots.

She starts with a precut design base, either hearts, houses, animals, or another and sands the wood, then seals it with a sealant that causes the grain to rise for a second sanding. After the wood is "smooth as glass," Ms. Renfro said, she adds a base of white paint and then the color coat.

Patterns can be traced or drawn freehand onto the piece and the color coat of paint is topped with a design added through a series of repetitive strokes using a variety of brushes. Painted dots or shading effects can also be added, Ms. Renfro said.

She also sometimes works a tole design onto fabric which has been washed and then treated to prevent over absorption of the paint. The cloth is stretched onto an embroidery hoop to be painted. The hoop also serves as a frame for the finished piece, which may later have a ruffled edge added.

"You see it in crafts shows and everywhere," Ms. Renfro said of tole work. "I just love it." And she added that although hers is, your decor doesn't have to be "country" for a few pieces of toleware to have a place in your home.

"You wouldn't want a house full of it," she said. "Just a piece here or there or it would really be busy."

In addition to her own tole work, Ms. Renfro has collected a few pieces - hearts from Germany and napkin rings crafted in Minnesota.

But she has no antique pieces, which collectors say are getting hard to find with some items, such as canisters or sugar bowls, costing more than $200.

That turns some tole artists into forgers attempting to pass their new goods off as old. The collector of the old, who isn't attracted to contemporary tole work, should be wary of "old" tole work that bears a date. A ploy used, experts say, by forgers who want their new work to appear old, but who don't realize that in the old days these simple household items weren't dated.

Ms. Renfro said it's fairly inexpensive to begin as a tole artist and to produce your own items. A basic, six-week course is available for about $30 and then initial supplies of paint, brushes, and blank forms will cost about $50. Ms. Alday said, you can add to your supplies as your skill develops.

But she cautions that tole work is addictive and once you start making tole pieces friends and relatives will likely want to collect the crafted pieces.

Both Ms. Renfro and Ms. Alday said they love the craft and the end result.

"I just go crazy with baskets," Ms. Alday said. "You can glue anything you want to onto a basket. I like baskets. I've done one with a goose and one with a teddy bear."

Tole isn't toil, in fact. "It's a lot of fun," Ms. Renfro said.

Farrah Fawcett Stars In "Don't Miss" Flick

By Mark Schwed
NEW YORK (UPI) — Some people still believe "quality" and Farrah Fawcett don't belong together in the same sentence. Those same people will eat those words — feast on them — after seeing the TV movie "Between Two Women."

ABC will air the flick Monday (March 10, 9-11 p.m. EST) and it is one of those few programs on television that should not be missed.

Fawcett, often the butt of bimbo jokes since her one-year stint on the jiggy "Charlie's Angels," resurfaced in 1984 with "The Burning Bed," a stinging tale of a woman abused by her husband.

With some serious acting on a serious subject in "The Burning Bed," Fawcett's image as a well-filled bathing suit under a hairdo began to slip away as she won critical praise for the performance.

After "The Burning Bed," Fawcett had a baby, did not marry Ryan O'Neal, did do Off-Broadway, and was offered a lot of roles.

"You know, they were socially moral subjects," Fawcett said. "Like a white woman who marries a black man and has her child taken away from her, incest roles. With 'Burning Bed,' I kind of created this monster."

She chose to do a play, "Extremities," about a woman who gets beat to a pulp by a rapist. In the end, she captures the guy and ties him to her fireplace.

The time came to settle down — no more fistfuffs — and the choice was a TV movie.

"Between Two Women" is a story of the most eternal of love triangles — man, woman and mother-in-law. Colleen Dewhurst is magnificent as Barbara, the cantankerous mother-in-law that Fawcett alternately loves like the mother she never knew and hates with a passion. Fawcett plays Val Petheron and Michael Nouri plays her artist-husband, Harry.

It is difficult for anyone not to shine opposite Dewhurst, who last graced the TV screen in the marvelous "Anne of Green Gables" on PBS, but Fawcett pulls it off in her own right in "Between Two Women" and maybe slam-dunked any dumb blonde bimbo bathing suit image still lingering from "Charlie's Angels."

Dan Rather: Cause To Pause

By Mark Schwed
NEW YORK (UPI) — One would expect to find a finely tuned machine humming away at the bastion of CBS News on West 57th street, the place where Dan Rather hangs his anchor hat.

Instead, there is Rather, kicking around in shiny black cowboy boots, and blue jeans that have lost their crease. His blue anchor blazer is draped over the chair behind the half-moon anchor desk, awaiting the next rendition of CBS Evening News. At news time, below the cardigan, under the blazer, behind the desk, there are the boots and the jeans.

Calmness in the eye of the storm comes only to someone who for 200 weeks in a row, five straight years as of March 10, has held the envious position of being the best news shark in the land. No. 1 in news. The Nielsen ratings that prove it are posted just around the corner from his office. Countless other polls rank him more believable than President Reagan, more trustworthy than Tom Brokaw at NBC or Peter

Jennings at ABC.

It is all kind of funny, considering that Rather never really wanted to be an anchor.

"I'm not a natural anchorperson," Rather said. "God did not put me on this earth to be an anchor. God put me here to be a reporter."

That's a nice thought, but Rather is an anchor first, then managing editor of CBS Evening News, then a reporter. Rather's job is to hold down the fort, while the troops are out securing the scalps.

Fame spoils it for the reporter and Rather's eminence gets in the way of street reporting. He can, however, call by first name people who wouldn't even talk to the ordinary hack on the street. The power comes with the turf.

Anchoring may not sound like such a tough job for the bucks. You come in, read through the news, sit through the meetings, decide what goes on, and how long, and the rest is up to the writers, field crews, reporters, producers, technicians and union men who must flick on the lights over his anchor desk.

But: "There is pressure. There was pressure. There still is pressure," Rather said about replacing the man known to millions of CBS News viewers as "Uncle Walter" Cronkite.

"Some think being an anchor is as easy as falling off a log. I think it's closer to falling off a cliff," he said.

The ground floor of West 57th Street is Rather's home away from home, a gritty, lean and mean newsroom with no frills, no techno-fluff, no glitz; just the hard-core instruments of news — clanking typewriters, banks of TV monitors, wire machines, papers and people.

Such trappings would seem to generate an atmosphere of steady tension, as hard-edged as a Marine sergeant's bark. But what you get there is news with a grin. The top newsmen in the field of broadcast journalism lounge in sweaters — a Rather trademark — and open collars. Only two neckties were visible in the newsroom, not counting executive producers and anchors. These guys work with the quiet confidence that comes with winning success.

Why are they smiling? Because it's fun being No. 1 — even more fun when it's No. 1 for 200 straight weeks, No. 1 after Walter Cronkite.

"If you win anything for five years straight, I think you have some justification to pause," said Rather.

It has been a long but straight road to the top. Born 55 years ago in Wharton, Texas, Rather majored in journalism, taught journalism, worked for the Associated Press and United Press International wire services, two radio stations and a newspaper before TV news ever came into the picture.

Visit L. A. And Hope For A Miracle

Dear Dick — Do you know if John Travolta lives in Los Angeles? A friend and I are going to LA this June and I would love to be able to meet him. Is there any certain place I should go to possibly run into him or even catch a glimpse of him? — L.J., Knoxville, Tenn.

Thousands of people flock to Los Angeles, figuring they are sure to run into Travolta or Eddie Murphy or Jackie Bisset or some star. Unfortunately, the chances of running into stars in LA is very remote. There are a few restaurants — Jimmy's or Chasen's or the Polo Lounge in the Beverly Hills Hotel — where you might get lucky and see a star. But you could spend a year here and never see anybody except maybe me and my wife.

Dear Dick — A friend of mine insists that Mary Tyler Moore is the daughter of Garry Moore, the former "I've Got a Secret" host. I thought his name was Morfit. Is Moore Mary's real name? — V.G., Muskegon, Mich.

Tell your friend to keep her insisting to herself. You are absolutely right in every particular. Yes, Mary Tyler is a real, genuine Moore, but Garry is a Morfit. No relation.

Dear Dick — While this may not be in your field of expertise, there doesn't seem to be much you can't answer in regard to show business personalities. So, to settle a question for me and to prove I haven't lost my marbles, please answer two questions for me. First, maybe 35 to 40 years ago, was there a country music star named Spade Cooley, who played the violin and was known as The King of Western Swing? Also, wasn't this same Spade Cooley sentenced to prison for murder? — L.J.S., Hollywood, Fla.

You still have your marbles. Cooley was a major country star in the 1940s. He was beset with problems, however — health and drinking problems, primarily. He had several heart attacks. He also had marital problems which culminated in 1961 when he shot his wife to death and was sentenced to life imprisonment. While in prison, he was allowed to give a concert in Oakland in 1969, and he collapsed in his dressing room afterward and died.

Dear Dick — In 1967, my family and I were on a game show in California called "The Family Game." It was produced by Chuck Barris, ran on ABC and was hosted by Bob Barker. I am wondering if you can give me a name and address of someone I can write to and possibly get a copy of the show. — C.G., Houston, Texas.

Whether they would still have that show around is doubtful, but the person to ask is Rick Kates, at Chuck Barris Industries, 9100 Wilshire Blvd., Beverly Hills, CA 90212. Incidentally, the Barris people are now resurrecting that show and updating it for airing soon on CBS.

Dear Dick — I saw a movie at least 15 years ago in which a slender blond actor (Alan Ladd?) was riding in a motor boat and something came along in the wind and he slowly began to shrink. In the end, he was living in a doll house being stalked by a cat. Can you tell me the name of this film? — C.D., Moncton, New Brunswick.

Now you're talking Grant Williams. He was the star of that very fine 1957 sci-fi film, "The Incredible Shrinking Man." Grant Williams was the shrinker.

POSTAL JOBS

CLERK & CARRIER POSITIONS & LETTER SORTING MACHINE OPERATORS
Official Title: Distribution Clerk, Machine ($9.48/hr to start)

Special announcement for all candidates planning to sign up for the Distribution Clerk, Machine Examination at the Orlando Post Office (last given in 1982) and Clerk-Carrier Examination at the Sanford and Altamonte Springs Post Offices (last given in 1980) as well as many other Post Offices in the 327 Zip Code Area when they are announced. (Since it won't be offered again for at least 3 years, don't miss out!)

4½-HOUR WORKSHOP

Score 95-100% or Your Tuition is Refunded!

NOW is the time to prepare. The pressure is on to score as high as possible to get the job. Career Postal Workers will now earn a starting salary of $18,332 plus benefits — with an accelerated step increase plan, and women, regardless of age, are eligible. The first step toward a postal service career is getting your name onto the "Register of Eligibles," which is accomplished by passing this Exam. To be one of the first hired, you need to get one of the higher scores! And to be hired at all during the next three years, you will need to score at least 95%.

This workshop is being offered now, prior to the formal announcement of the examination dates, to give you adequate time to prepare for the test. Many post offices begin testing within a week of the announcement which isn't enough time to prepare properly. By starting now, you'll be ready to attain high scores using our methods when the test is given!

Come to the workshop: If you don't feel, at the end of the course, that it will help you achieve a score of 95% or better, don't pay for the workshop! Furthermore, if your score is less than 95% on the official exam after using our techniques, we will immediately refund your tuition in full!

WANT TO RELOCATE? We are the publishers of The Postal Alert, the bi-weekly newsletter giving you postal exam dates nationwide. Only The Achievement Center provides this service. Learn how you can relocate to any area of the country you like.

You are invited to bring your tape recorder to record the workshop for personal exam review.

You may attend as many extra sessions of the workshop as you like (on a space available basis) without additional tuition charge.

WORKSHOP TUITION — $45 (includes guaranteed 1½-hour Workshop, The Core Guide to Postal Exams (with 6 complete practice tests), a Sample Exam with Answers, Workshop Workbook, 12 Important Steps for Getting Hired into the U.S. Postal Service "Booklet," Follow-Up Consultation Privileges, Achievement Award to High Scorers and Practice Kit containing Six Additional Practice Exams with Answers, Memory Test Flash Cards, Simulated Exam on cassette tape, and ANNOUNCEMENT WITH SIGN UP DATES MAILED TO YOUR HOME.) Please bring two sharpened No. 2 pencils with you to the Workshop.

Seating is limited; pre-registration by phone is advised. Otherwise, you may register by arriving thirty minutes early. Tuition is payable at the door by cash, check, money order, MasterCard, VISA or American Express.
