New Uniforms

New gray-green uniforms may replace the old olive drab ones for Army dress.

The new uniforms will be dressier and slightly more colorful than the olive drab uniforms worn by our soldiers for the last half-century.

One part of the country which will welcome the change in uniforms will be the New England textile areas.

Fine feathers do not make fine birds, nor does the color of the uniform affect the ability of a soldier in any great degree.

Red Goldbricks

It now appears that the pro-Communist government of Guatemala was the victim of a swindle in the deal which brought arms to Guatemala from behind the Iron Curtain shortly before the revolution.

Guatemalan army officers report that most of the weapons received were machine guns, some captured by the Russians from the Germans in World War II and a few rifles of British make.

Senate Rule Is Worked Overtime

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate, proud of its rule which lets a member talk till he's speechless, is working the rule overtime. It has been talking steadily all day and all night, around the clock, since Wednesday morning on atomic energy.

Sen. Knowland of California, Senate Republican leader, made up his mind he'd get action on the administration bill to make some major changes in the atomic energy law.

His challenge was taken up by a number of Democrats and Sen. Morse, Oregon Independent, who don't like the changes and probably wanted to show him they couldn't be pushed.

The atomic energy act, passed in 1946, is the basic law on the development and control of atomic power for both military and peaceful uses.

And while one senator might be willing to buy one change, but not another, and since the Democrats as a group don't like the bill as a whole, they're having a field day arguing against the bill, piece by piece.

The law was built around that monopoly. To guard the secrets of the bomb and atomic energy, even friendly relatives, under the law, could not be let in on those secrets.

In the eight years since 1946 there have been great changes: Russia developed the bomb on its own, some of the Allied-developed atomic energy. There were scientific and technical advances.

SNAPS AT NIGHT are easy to take part of the shipment consisted of anti-tank mines and experts say that tanks would have been useless even if the invading revolutionists had employed them.

All of this should serve as a warning to nations tempted to cast their lot with the Communists. The Guatemalans were sold goldbricks by the Red hucksters.

Red Chinese Bridge

The Red Chinese plan to build a bridge over the Yangtze river at Wuhan. It will be eight miles long, with its approaches, and will link the north and south sections of the railway from Peiping to Kowloon.

Anything which will give China better transportation cannot help but lessen its provincialism and the danger of famine.

The present regime has not made any moves in that direction. Instead it has concentrated on aggression in Korea and in Indo-China.

Adjournment Rush

Once again the closing days of Congress find the legislators in a desperate rush to wind up their work and adjourn.

In the rush to adjourn a lot of necessary legislation will be ignored or postponed. Even worse is the ever-present possibility that worthless bills will be made law without due consideration.

Another bad result of the log jam of legislation which occurs at the end of a congressional session is the opportunity it provides for minority to kill legislation by threatening to oppose it at length and delay adjournment.

Congress works hard and the problems it faces are weighty and complex. It is inevitable that some of their work will be unfinished at the end of each session.

By HERMAN M. DUNN, M.D. The disease named after James Parkinson may follow an attack of sleeping sickness or encephalitis.

Many drugs have helped to give relief to those who suffer from Parkinson's disease.

By SYD HELGON The Eighty-third Congress, the leadership says we will adjourn by August 1st.

Pausing to look back, we naturally think of those Members who served in the Eighty-second Congress, but have since passed on.

These deaths are due in large part to the fact that this is strenuous work—much more strenuous than many realize.

Mrs. Eueline Jordan sets her table with reed and raffia place mats made of reeds gathered from Florida bayous. As a finishing touch, the weaver adds a coat of clear varnish to provide a glossy finish and seal the reeds in place.

At her originally designed loom, Mrs. Jordan weaves with Florida canes, a Florida product she selected several years ago as an attractive base for place mats, shade covers and tapestries. First, she used the woven cane as covers for unsightly flower pots.

Nature Provides The Material For This Pensacola Weaver

By BETTY MARKER

Right in her own back yard, a Florida weaver, Mrs. Eueline Jordan, is finding an abundance of native Florida products for her weaving loom.

At her residence at Beach Haven in Pensacola, Mrs. Jordan gathers Southern pine needles, reeds from the banks of Big Bayou, wild roots of Wisteria trees and palmetto stems. These she converts into decorative woven designs.

On a small "lap loom" of her own creation, she produces place mats, lamp shades, tapestries and other objects for home decorations.

Combining her Florida products with jute and bright colored raffia, Mrs. Jordan creates items that blend with cane and beach furniture, often seen in Florida homes.

"When you think of weaving you should examine what you have at hand," the weaver suggests.

In selecting her out-door materials the native Alabamian, who adopted Florida as her home 20 years ago, set out to weave the "unusual and escape traditional designs."

Many visitors to Pensacola, along with other area weavers, have become interested in her creations. On request she has supplied residents of other states with "bushels" of Florida products.

Mrs. Jordan says that "foreign" weavers readily admit that "we've got something they don't have."

Not far from her home in Pensacola, Mrs. Jordan finds and gathers an abundance of reeds which are woven into decorative items for the home.

Just a few feet from her front doorstep, Mrs. Jordan clips wisteria "runners" that will be used as weaving material.

Pine needles unlimited, along with an abundance of palmetto stems and rushes are providing this Florida weaver with a bountiful supply of natural fibers for her loom.

Who says producing a full-scale water ballet is as simple as 1, 2, 3?—these University of Florida students are pictured during an early rehearsal of "Holland Holiday," which was one of their major aquacades during the 1953-54 school year. Each routine in a show must be practiced both with and without music on land for several weeks before the "aquatic cast" even dips a toe into the pool for actual water rehearsals.

Now that the routines have been practiced on land and rehearsals have been held for several weeks... it's time to take to the water for approximately three hours of drill between and after classes each day. Men students, as well as coeds active in Swim Fins, try out for the "aquatic cast" and are shown working on one of the closing numbers.

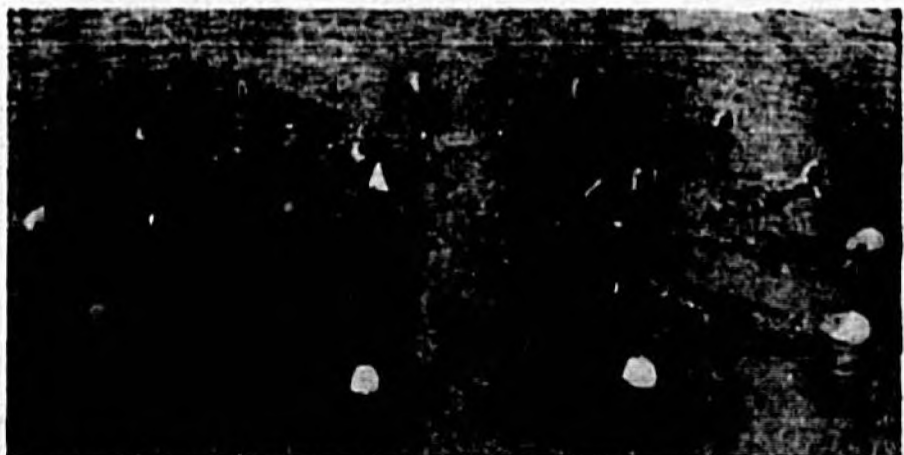

As they take their places in the water, these girls transform the pool into an old Dutch garden scene that gradually floats around in front of the audience. Each swimmer pushes a tray of gaily decorated flowers that are built on non-sinking hoops.

NICK—two, three, four—raise those legs and point your toes, says the swimming coach who gives instructions to the cast of a number entitled "A Dutch Windmill." The production of this number involves not only the training of these ballet swimmers, but the help of approximately 25 painters, costume designers, and collegiate carpenters who spend hours adding the ruffles and frills before a show is staged.

It may be raining outside—but that doesn't stop the dance rehearsals that go on inside the University Gymnasium. Mary Lou and Polly Duggill, coeds from DeLand, run through a "Dutch Twins" number done to music with words inviting the audience to "come down the street and see the Dutch Twins in our city; they dance and swim and here they come! My! My! Now aren't they pretty?"

Another water number shows the cast as they silently revolve in a windmill formation that is interrupted by four male clowns who climb up the high diving board and regale the audience with their hilarious antics of stunt diving. Clowns are a prominent part of almost every aquacade.

SWIM FINS

Every Day Is Swim Day In Florida . . . As A University Goes All Out To Produce Year 'Round Water Pageants

By DETSY LIVERMORE

Regardless of whether it's the middle of December or the beginning of summer, students at the University of Florida stay busy 12 months a year producing water ballets and aquatic shows that are presented to thousands of people throughout the state.

These aquacades are completely written and produced by students under the direction of the College of Physical Education. Each number requires the precision of a chorus line, the colorful touch of collegiate artists who paint backdrops and build scenery, plus the talent of dramatists who write script, work out pantomime acts, and plan the musical background.

Staging a water show with all its color and pageantry, takes an average of three months' hard, but interesting, indoor and outdoor work. Most of the ones presented on the Florida campus are supervised by the Swim Fins, coed swimming club, and the finishing touches are put on with the help of interested people from the faculty and local merchants who donate materials.

The Swim Fins, composed of an average of 30 regular members each semester, were organized in 1930 and have been invited to perform at Sarasota's annual "Sara de Soto" pageant, as well as the opening of municipal swimming pools throughout the state.

Short demonstrations and swimming clinics are held periodically, including summer school, and two full-scale aquacades are presented each year . . . one on both afternoons of the University's Homecoming weekend in October, and another near the close of the spring semester . . . thus keeping water activities going 365 days of the year.

Swimming, swimming, and MORE swimming takes the spotlight at a huge southern university as Florida students take advantage of the Sunshine State's year 'round "let's go swimming" weather and facilities.

These coeds, who have become Dutch maidens for this show, change roles several times each semester as they learn entirely new numbers and don different costumes for other productions. Short demonstrations and swimming clinics are held periodically, including summer school, and two full-scale aqua programs such as "Holland Holiday" are presented each year.

As the weeks slip by, leaving the fun of planning and producing a show in their wake . . . the lights go on as the curtain rises for the first choreographic presentation of "Scrub-A-Dub-Dub." The wooden shoes that clack on the cement pavement around the pool and the colorful tubs scattered around the dancers, transform regular collegiate surroundings into a "Holland Holiday."

Everybody gets into the act, including two members of the Florida Players who cut filter paper and adjust the position of the lighting effects that are a major factor in the success of an after-dark show. Other members of the dramatics club contribute their time and talents to write the script, plan pantomimes, and help design costumes that must be made from special materials that hold their shapes and colors when wet.

Synchronized swimming, an up and coming attraction in Florida water sports entertainment, was given a spectacular introduction by the "Swim-Fins" of the University of Florida. Now comes along the "Dolphinettes," a younger group of high school performers, to add their bit to water ballet production.

The Dolphinettes cast is made up entirely of students at Vero Beach. Strictly an amateur organization, the shows are put on for the members' own enjoyment—usually for the benefit of some worthy organization—but hundreds of spectators in various Florida cities have also enjoyed the guided antics of the junior swimmers.

Excellent entertainment is provided in the form of hour-long shows that include dance numbers, fancy diving, comedy acts featuring clowns, and spectacular water ballets with the cast in costume.

The group has two dancers, who also perform in the water ballets. Cathy Calhoun does dance ballet and Margaret McIntyre does the modern dance. The girls make up their own dance routines and fit them into the "chorus line" patterns. Both are students of a local dance studio and have studied for a number of years.

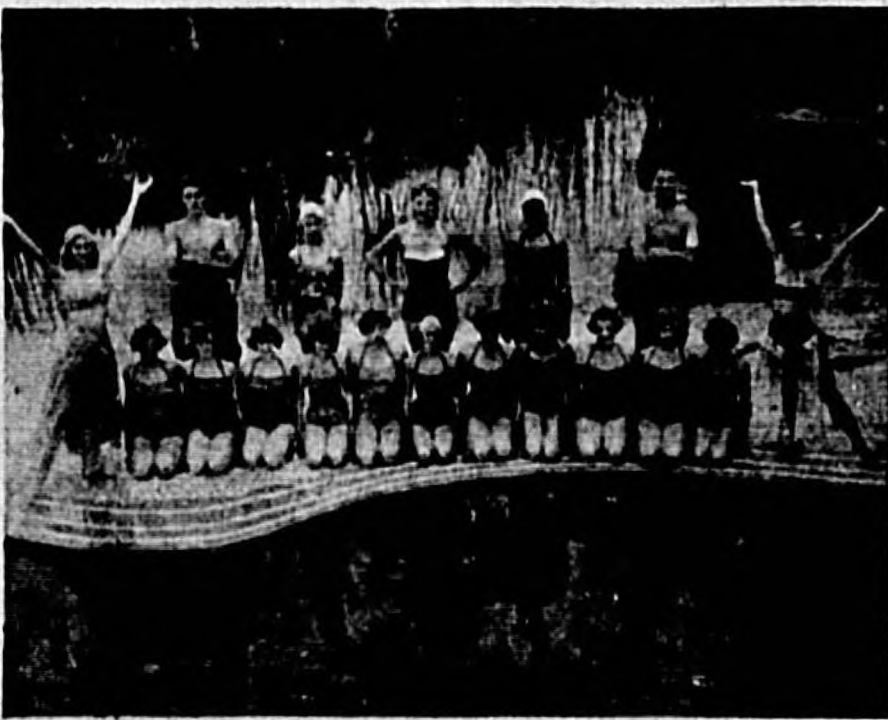

Predominately a feminine cast, the Dolphinettes are supported by two male performers—Marvin Carter and John Schneider, who have been with the group for two years. These boys have performed as clowns, pirates, South Sea Islanders, and in general helped with the heavier tasks of decorating and staging a water show.

The youngsters are, of course, swimming enthusiasts before joining the group, but there are few other qualifications for membership. There are no dues, but when a swimmer joins, she must agree to buy suit and cap to match those of other swimmers. Practice—and time to devote to it—is the major requirement; the instructor does the rest, by coaching the individuals and teaching the fundamentals of synchronized swimming.

After a student has worked through a show, rehearsals and the final performance before an audience, she earns her emblem. The five-inch emblem carries the words "Dolphinettes" and "Vero Beach," and are worn with pride by the members.

The Dolphinettes owe their beginning and a major portion of their success to the club director and instructor, Mildred Frasier, who was one of the originators of the "Swim-Fins" at the University of Florida. Entering the university in 1949, Miss Frasier was an avid swimming fan, having taught three years for the Red Cross in all phases of swimming from Senior Life Saving to beginners classes. She was among the few students who got together and formed a club which today is known as the Swim-Fins. The university swimmers have put on many spectacular water shows since then and have become well known throughout the state.

Upon moving to Vero Beach in 1951 Miss Frasier became pool manager at the Windswept Hotel on the beach. Having some spare time on her hands, the comely and talented instructor took six girls, all of high school age, and began teaching them water ballet.

Some months later the six girls put on a half-hour performance in connection with a fashion show at the hotel pool. The suits weren't alike, and the music records were old ones, but still it was a beginning—and from this somewhat humble start the movement began to grow. That year matching suits were purchased and the girls put on three shows, each an hour long. One of these shows was a guest appearance at the Shamrock Village pool in Ft. Pierce, where the girls adopted the present name, "Dolphinettes." As the director put it, the name came to her "out of the clear blue sky" although the graceful, rhythmic action of her charges may have reminded her of the no less graceful salt-water swimmer—the dolphin.

Less than three years later, the club has grown to a membership of 30 students. The shows are much more elaborate, with costumes for the various acts, and a wider variety of water ballet entertainment.

Many times the Dolphinettes have put on shows in other Florida cities besides Vero Beach. The water shows have been staged at the Palm Beach Biltmore Hotel for two years, and a show was presented at the Sea Dunes on Melbourne beach. This year the club received an invitation from the Sarasota Chamber of Commerce to appear in their Lido Beach pool in connection with the Sara-de-Soto Pageant, but the troupe couldn't make the trip because of school activities.

Under the impetus of Miss Frasier's enthusiasm for water sports, the youth of Vero Beach have become aqua-minded to a high degree. Each summer, she teaches swimming for the Red Cross, supervises a swimming program at the Youth Center, and has helped formulate plans for swimming lessons for some 400 children at three pools in the city.

And that's not all—Miss Frasier has organized a group of seven- and eight-year-old "paddlers" under the name of "Miniature Dolphinettes," and has issued a warning to the high school and college swimmers that they had better be looking after their laurels when these tiny "balletinas" crash the water ballet entertainment circuit.

The hour-long water shows by these amateur swimmers include dance numbers, fancy diving, clown acts, and costumed water ballets. The cast is made up entirely by high school students of Vero Beach, who must be strong swimmers and willing to devote much time to practice. The shows are usually put on for the benefit of some worthy organization.

At The End of The Track . . . FLORIDA!

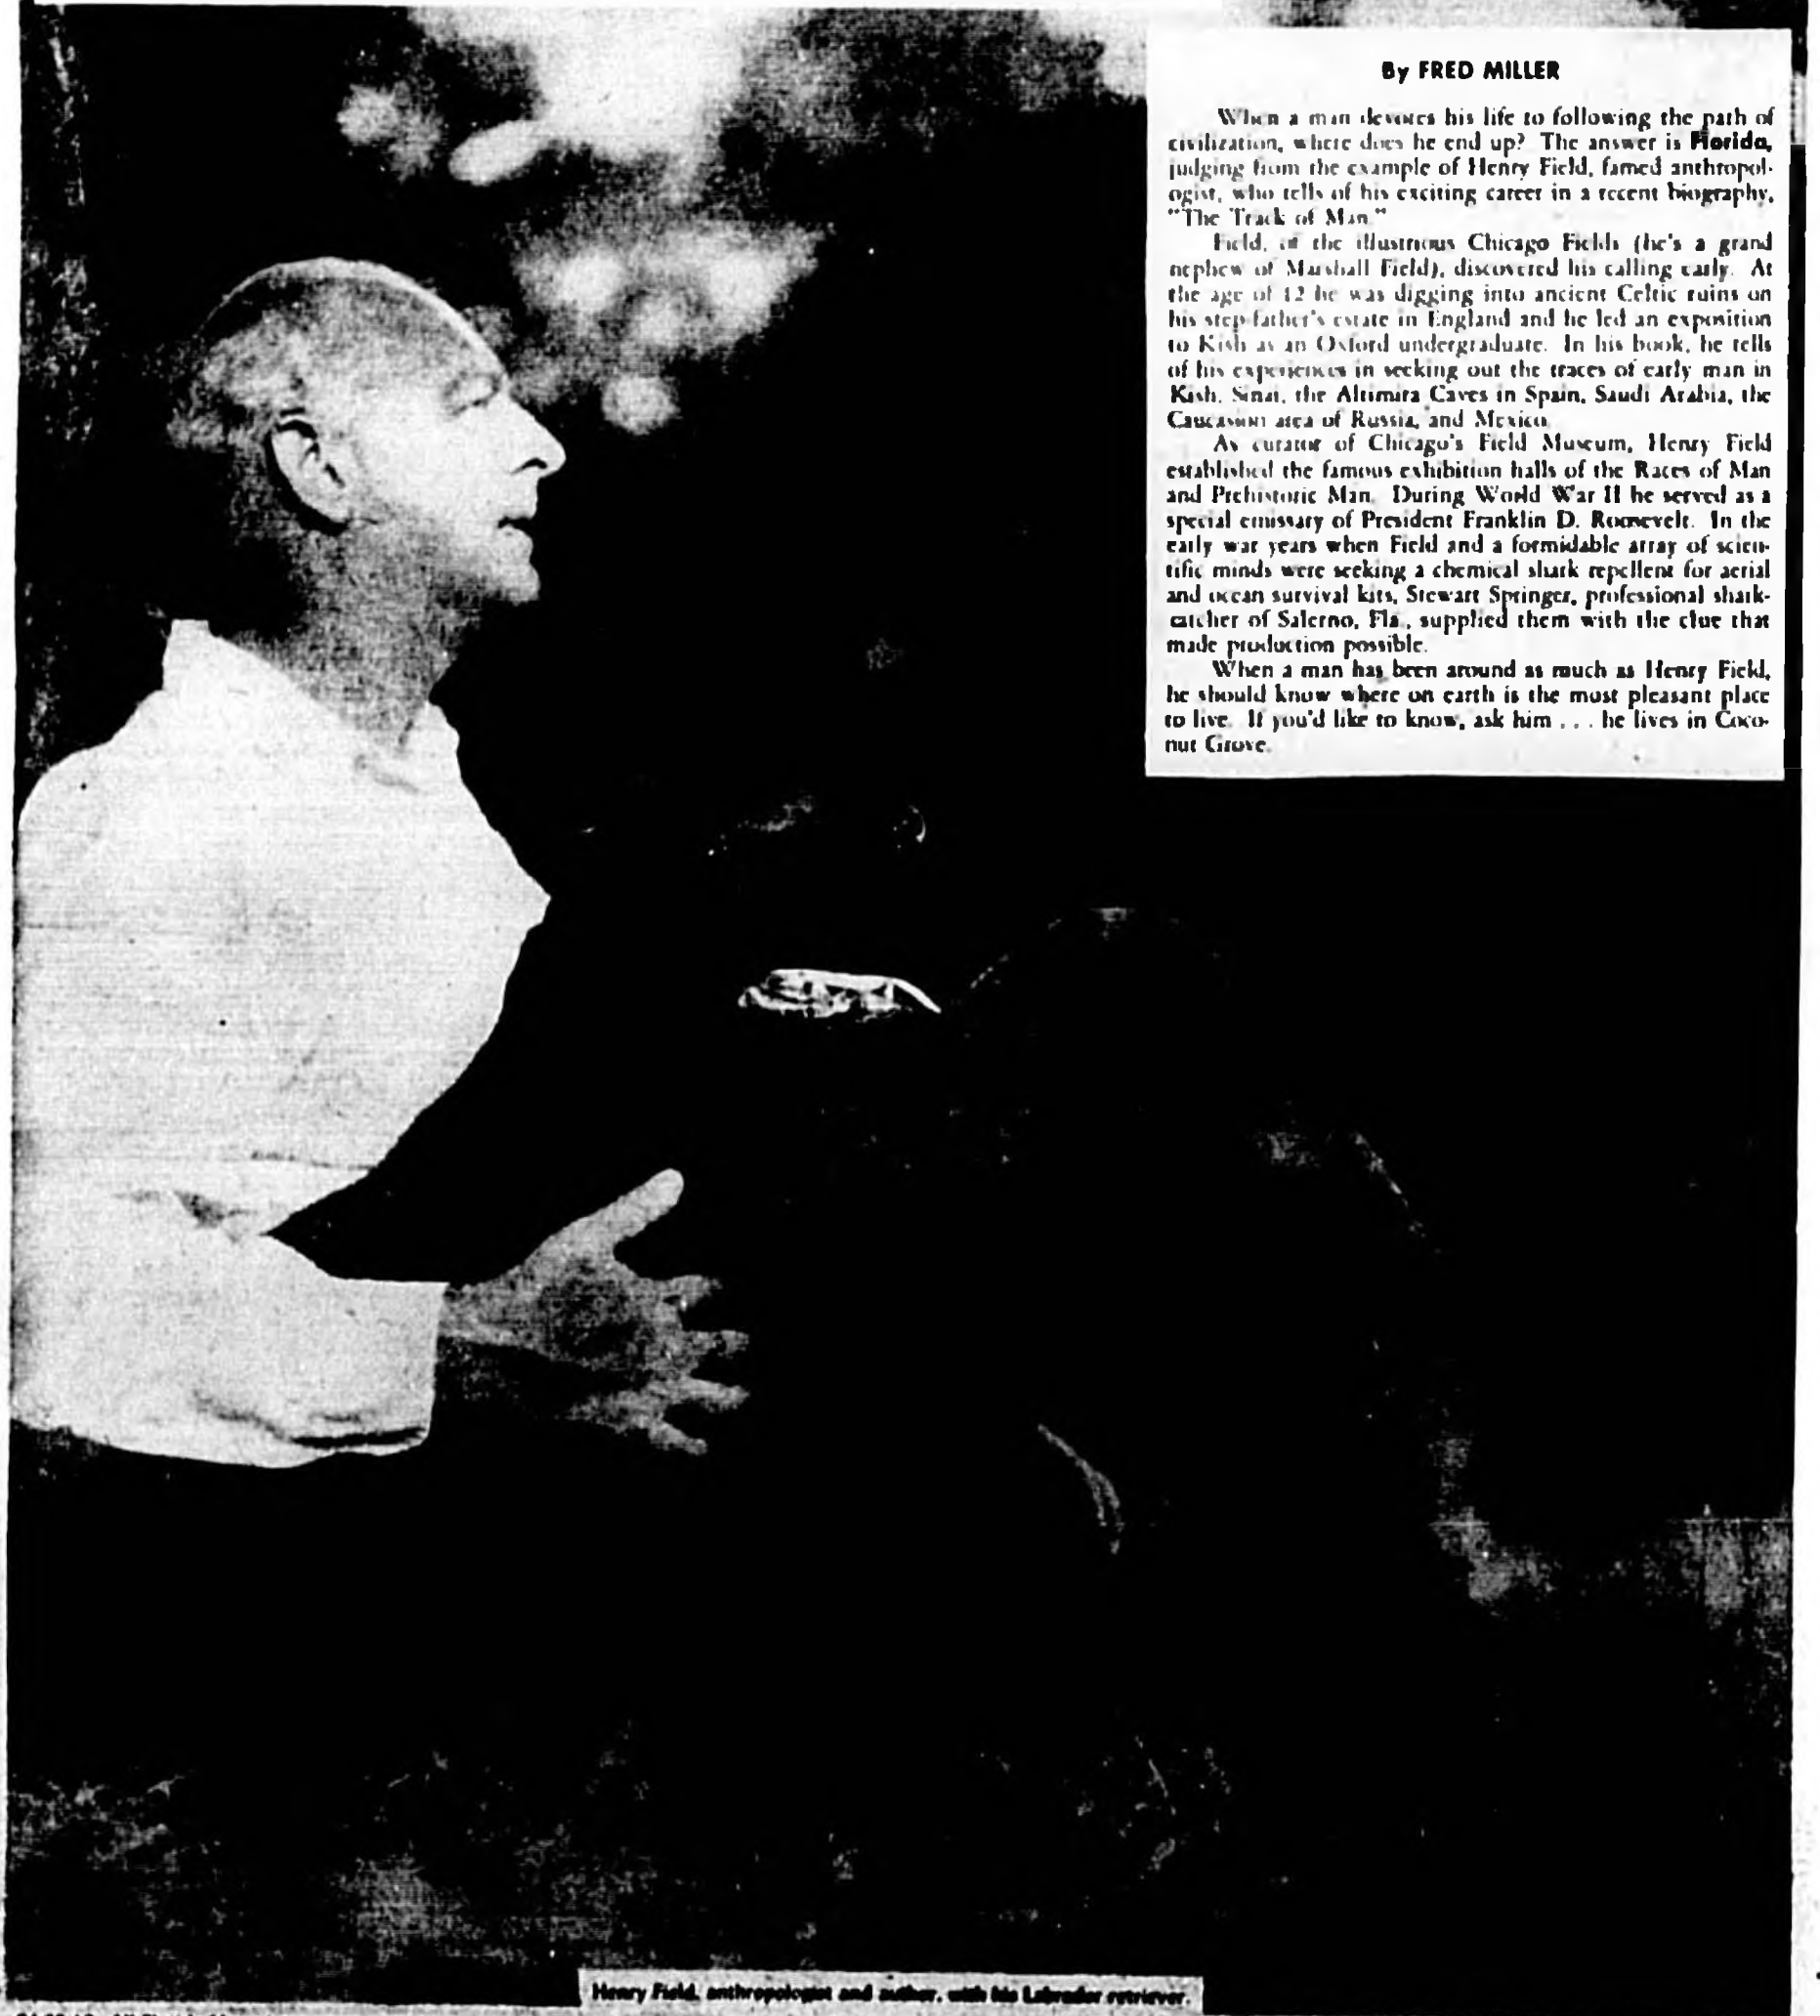

By FRED MILLER

When a man devotes his life to following the path of civilization, where does he end up? The answer is Florida, judging from the example of Henry Field, famed anthropologist, who tells of his exciting career in a recent biography, "The Track of Man."

Field, of the illustrious Chicago Fields (he's a grand nephew of Marshall Field), discovered his calling early. At the age of 12 he was digging into ancient Celtic ruins on his step-father's estate in England and he led an expedition to Kish as an Oxford undergraduate. In his book, he tells of his experiences in seeking out the traces of early man in Kish, Sinai, the Altamira Caves in Spain, Saudi Arabia, the Caucasian area of Russia, and Mexico.

As curator of Chicago's Field Museum, Henry Field established the famous exhibition halls of the Races of Man and Prehistoric Man. During World War II he served as a special emissary of President Franklin D. Roosevelt. In the early war years when Field and a formidable array of scientific minds were seeking a chemical shark repellent for aerial and ocean survival kits, Stewart Springer, professional shark-catcher of Salerno, Fla., supplied them with the clue that made production possible.

When a man has been around as much as Henry Field, he should know where on earth is the most pleasant place to live. If you'd like to know, ask him . . . he lives in Coconut Grove.

KITCHEN SHELF

Summer days are meant to be spent out of doors under a shady tree and just the thought of baking a pie makes the temperatures in any home seem to rise at least ten degrees. Why not plan a glamorous dessert for your family using a crumb pie shell that only needs a few minutes baking in a moderate oven and do this in the early morning hours when the kitchen is still cool?

There are so many delicious pie fillings that can be used in the crumb pie shells and so many varieties of crumbs, including chocolate cookies, cereal flakes, gingersnaps, graham crackers, vanilla wafers, zwieback or even toasted bread.

Your family will rave over the desserts you can make so easily and you will enjoy sitting under that shady tree with your work done hours ahead of serving time.

While you are enjoying this period of relaxation try a frosty glass of Lime Freeze. You will readily agree that the time taken to whip up this cooling beverage was time well spent. It is just the thing to serve when afternoon guests drop in or when your family wants to gather round for an afternoon break. Beat until frothy two scoops of lime sherbet, two cups of crushed ice, $\frac{1}{2}$ cup milk, and $1\frac{1}{2}$ cups of carbonated water. Garnish with slices of Florida limes, and maraschino cherries will add the patty touch. Serves four.

Crumb Pie Shell

$1\frac{1}{2}$ cups fine crumbs
 $\frac{1}{4}$ cup sugar
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup sugar, melted

Mix crumbs and sugar together, stir in butter. Line pie pan with mixture by pressing it firmly into place. Chill for 20 minutes or bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) ten minutes. Cool. Makes one (nine-inch) shell.

CINNAMON—Add $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon cinnamon to bread or graham cracker crumbs.

Use crumbs of the following: chocolate cookies, cereal flakes, gingersnaps, graham crackers, toasted bread, vanilla wafers, zwieback.

CITRUS

Recipe of The Week

Candied Orange or Grapefruit Peel

3 grapefruit shells or 6 orange shells
1 teaspoon salt
3 cups sugar
1 cup water

Save fruit shells from breakfast fruits. Cut peel into strips $\frac{1}{4}$ inch wide from stem to blossom end. Add salt and cover with cold water. Boil 15 minutes, pour off water and add fresh water. Boil 20 minutes. Change water again and boil another 20 minutes. Drain thoroughly and cover with $2\frac{1}{2}$ cups of sugar and water listed. Summer, stirring continually to prevent scorching, until remaining syrup has boiled away. Spread on waxed paper and roll each piece of candied fruit in remaining sugar.

Puddin' Proof

Mrs. Michael Kaffen of 267 Atlantic Ave., Palm Beach, writes that she has been using coconut with wonderful results. She suggests that you sprinkle some shredded coconut on lemon meringue pie for a new taste treat. Mrs. Kaffen would like to have some recipes using citrons as she has a tree full of them. If you have any recipes using citrons, send them to Mary Louise, 1117 Lake Weir Ave., Ocala, Fla. Recognition will be given to the contributor on our Kitchen Shelf page.

Household Hint: When not using the pimento in a can, put the remainder in a small glass jar and cover with hot paraffin. Cooking or salad oil (cold) can be used instead of paraffin, and later used for salad dressing.

Pineapple-Marshmallow Pie

32 marshmallows
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup sweet milk
1 cup heavy cream
1 teaspoon vanilla
 $1\frac{1}{2}$ cups chunk pineapple drained

Melt marshmallows in milk in pan over hot water. Cool thoroughly but do not permit mixture to jell or become lumpy. Whip cream, add vanilla and fold in marshmallow mixture. Cut pineapple chunks in small pieces. Alternate layers of cream mixture and pieces of pineapple in pie shell, beginning with cream mixture and topping with cream mixture. Chill at least one hour before serving. Fresh peaches or strawberries may be used instead of the pineapple.

Strawberry Chiffon Pie

2 envelopes plain, unflavored gelatin
1 pkg. strawberry gelatin
2 12 oz. pks. frozen strawberries, thawed
Juice $\frac{1}{2}$ lemon
 $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon salt
1 egg whites, sugar
9 inch pie shell
1 pint heavy cream, whipped

Soften unflavored gelatin in $\frac{1}{2}$ cup cold water for five minutes. Dissolve strawberry gelatin in $1\frac{1}{2}$ cups hot water. Add unflavored gelatin, stir until dissolved. Force thawed strawberries through sieve. Add sieved berries and lemon juice to gelatin mixture. Chill until it begins to set. Beat until fluffy. Chill, and beat again. Beat salted egg whites until stiff, gradually beat in $\frac{1}{2}$ cup sugar. Fold into gelatin mixture. (If gelatin does not hold shape, let stand in refrigerator for a few minutes.) Fill into pie shell. Chill in refrigerator for several hours, or overnight. Shortly before serving, whip cream until almost stiff. Beat in $\frac{1}{2}$ cup sugar. Spread most of cream over top of pie. Put remainder in pastry tube, and decorate top of pie. Garnish with whole fresh strawberries. Cut in 8 or 10 pieces.

By JOHN R. HABERMAN

William Bartram, the famous naturalist who toured Georgia and Florida in 1773, learned an interesting and colorful legend of the Creek Indians. It was told to him while staying at the Indian trading post on the St. Mary's River. At the head of the St. Mary's lies the vast Okfenokee Swamp, which Bartram called Ouaquaphenogaw.

According to the legend, a hunting party of Creeks had gone into the swamp in search of game. They penetrated far into the interior and then, when they tried to get out, they found that they were lost.

Exhausted and starving, they were on the point of giving up hope, when something happened that seemed like a miracle. Nothing less than a band of beautiful women suddenly appeared and rescued the hunters. The women gave them food and showed them how to get out of the swamp.

"Go back to your own country," the Amazons warned. "Our husbands are fierce men. They are very cruel to strangers."

Now the Creek hunters were far from lacking as admirers of feminine beauty, and when the women left they decided to follow their trail and find if possible the paradise in which such goddess-like creatures must dwell. "A plague on the husbands!" said the creeks. "We ourselves are not the least among warriors."

So the Creeks turned back into the swamp. But try as they would, they could not reach the village of the lovely women. They came within sight of it once, a village on an island in the middle of a beautiful lake. But the way was barred by labyrinths of water passages which seemed to have no end. And strangely too, as they approached the island, it appeared to move away, out of sight.

The hunters decided that the island must be enchanted, and they gave up the search. Then with great difficulty they made their way out of the swamp.

When the hunters told their strange tale in their home village, they spoke of the enchanting women of Ouaquaphenogaw as the Daughters of the Sun. That was the most appropriate name they could think of. And many of the young warriors who heard their story resolved to find for themselves this magic island where the women were so beautiful. But they searched in vain. They could never find any way to it, although they constantly found footprints and other signs of human habitation in the great swamp.

Thus the Daughters of the Sun lived in peace on their enchanted island and remained unmolested by the young Creek braves. These mysterious inhabitants of the Okfenokee were, according to Bartram's reasoning, descendants of some of the remnants of the Yemassee who had escaped massacre at the hands of the Creeks. The Creeks had fought on the English side in the terrible war that had destroyed the Yemassee nation.

Bartram continued to record much information about the Creek Indians. Georgia, the homeland of the Creeks, was his first field of investigation. After a short visit on the St. Mary's, he returned to Georgia and travelled extensively in that region before going back again to Florida.

In many places, both in Georgia and afterwards along the St. Johns in Florida, he found the remains of ancient settlements. These deserted townsites, long overgrown with forest vegetation, were usually located on the banks of rivers or on the edge of large swamps. They were raised above the water level by systems of terraces and embankments. Sometimes the terraced areas were of great extent. And each townsite was usually marked by a great conical mound of earth, sometimes with an approaching ramp and highway and an artificial lake.

Bartram could only conclude that these ancient earthworks had been raised long before the white man's discovery of the continent—by a lost and forgotten race, a people of skill and intelligence, if not civilization. According to Creek legend, the earthworks were there when that tribe arrived.

As for the origin of the Creeks themselves, Bartram records their legend that they came from the far West, beyond the Mississippi. They fought their way eastward through various tribes who opposed them until they found permanent sanctuary in Georgia. From there, of course, branches of them migrated into Florida and became the Seminoles.

Bartram thus bears out the theory that the Creeks, and possibly some of the earlier related Florida tribes, came originally from Mexico, fleeing from the conquering Aztecs who took over that country and founded the empire which Cortez and his conquistadores later destroyed.

Bartram's journeys in Georgia were interesting but unexciting, and in March, 1774, he turned again towards Florida. At St. Simons Island he embarked on board a small coasting vessel bound for the St. Johns River.

The voyage was hardly begun when, off Cumberland Island, they met another vessel, a schooner from the trading posts of the British firm, Spalding and Company, which operated along the St. Johns. The captain of the schooner brought alarming news.

"The Indians are on the warpath in Florida! They have plundered three trading houses. The traders barely escaped with their lives."

"I'm putting back to St. Simons," the master of Bartram's vessel announced. "It's not safe to land in Florida."

But Bartram was determined to go to his destination, Indians or no Indians. He demanded to be put on shore on one of the islands of the Georgia coast. From there he proceeded on foot and by boat, whichever was available, to Cowford on the St. Johns, a ferrying place where cattle crossed. Some time later Cowford would acquire a new name—Jacksonville.

Bartram was chiefly worried because he had, by a vessel sailing previously, sent his chest full of books and other valuables on ahead to the St. Johns. Whatever might be the fate of his own neck, he didn't want the Indians to get that chest.
