The city employees who smoke must do so outside the building.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. - One had asked a prostitute for "megasex." Another had offered to pay for the pleasure of sucking a woman's toes. Both men were more than disappointed they were arrested.

But that was not the end of their troubles. The charges against the men — along with their names, ages, races and hometowns — were broadcast on a telephone recording for all to

The hot line was set up by the Westport Crime Prevention Commission, a citizens group in Kansas City's popular Westport nightspot area. The anti-crime crusaders have enlisted a simple weapon — a dose of public shame delivered via telephone — in their battle to inhibit the world's oldest profession. By humiliating customers, or johns, caught in the act and arrested, they hope to cut the demand for paid sex.

"I would think the guy who wanted to suck the officer's toes would be real embarrassed," said Roy Johnson, the commission's executive director. "We are not making a moral statement on prostitution. It's been around for thousands of years, and it will be with us as long as man is around. What we're saying is: We don't want prostitution on the streets where we live.'

The hot line coincides with a new police policy of mailing letters to the homes of johns who were arrested. The letters document the offenses and provide information on the risks of contracting AIDS and other diseases

"As the word is getting around, several of the johns have begun asking about the letter. They're not so much worried about being arrested as they are about the letter being sent to their house," said police Sgt. James Corwin.

"One of the first things out of the john's mouth is usually: 'Is my wife going to find out?' or 'Who else is going to know about

Communities agross the country have tried various approaches to the vexing problem of prostitution. Most groups simply try to harass customers or encourage pro-stitutes to take their business claewhere.

But Tom Behrens, executive director of The Knight Ministry in Chicago, says his group tries to "establish a relationship of trust with prostitutes" and convince them that theirs is an "unhealthy lifestyle."

Workers and volunteers walk the streets and go into bars to with provide prostitutes condoms or information about AIDS and other health risks.

Another approach was tried by Joe Mele, former commander of the police vice unit in Orlando, Fla. Officers there would advise johns that an area had been hit by a rash of muggings by pimps.

Cowboys and spouses weren't beaten Sunday

Superbowl Sunday is gone. The Bills didn't beat the Cowboys, and husbands didn't beat their wives.

Several days prior to the annual football classic, a number of leaders in women's movements, in California and Virginia, spoke out against spouse abuse. They said past records had indicated extremely high numbers of assaults against women during and immediately following the game.

Patricia Occiuzzo Giggans of the Los Angeles Commission on Assaults Against Women had said, "The betting, the bonding and the beer for the men can turn into beating for women."

People joined in the movement, and the NBC Television Network responded. They presented 30 seconds of time in an antispouse abuse public service announcement. The time could have brought in as much as $850,000 for a commercial announcement.

Whether it was because of the announcement or, as some have said, "a boring Superbowl game," spouse abuse was low locally as well as across the country according to some reports.

In the Sanford, Lake Mary and Longwood areas of north Seminole County, only a half dozen domestic violence arrests were made during this entire past weekend. Not one of them involving spouse abuse, was made on Sunday.

Normally, in domestic violence battery cases reported by the Sanford Herald on a daily basis, two major reasons are given in arrest reports: the use of alcohol, and culmination of relationships, married as well as unmarried.

It shouldabe noted that not only men are involved. Many reports are written about domestic violence charges against a wife or girlfriend.

People who were angry or disappointed over the results of Sunday's game should be commended for their ability to control their emotions. They may have vented their anger somehow, but at least it was not on a loved-one.

Persons, women as well as men, should be urged to continue honoring the safety and well-being of their spouses or friends. Giving someone a beating will not resolve anything. It will cause emotional as well as physical harm to another human being. People were not put on this earth to be someone's punching bag.

Bitter memories

In my heart lie bitter memories of this past Martin Luther "King Fest." Memories of a lesson I wish I had not been taught, memories of a lesson I hope my nephew forgets.

My sister and I took my five-year-old nephew to the "King Fest" parade in Eatonville on a recent Saturday. Our goal was to teach him about people living in harmony and unity. The lesson he learned was of blacks' hatred toward whites. We are white.

We needed to leave before the parade was over and per a police officer's instructions drove our car along the parade route half a block to a side street.

We did not receive a warm welcome. I was out of the car alerting people that we were driving through. I turned to see my sister getting spit on and her car being pounded on. She was told to remove her "white ass.

Angry and baffled I ran into the crowd screaming over the jeers that the police told us to exit there. Finally someone heard me and responded: "I don't care what the police said. If it was one of us (black), they wouldn't have let us through!

I probably should have left then but I couldn't leave then. Not without being heard, being understood. I cried over and over again, "What is the purpose of celebrating Martin Luther King's life if I can't be here. if all people can't be here?"

I was surrounded and dragged into the crowd. I was punched in the face by two different women. My sister was shoved back and forth through the crowd as she tried to come get me. My five-year-old nephew sat in the car and watched.

Now he wants to know why black people are bad. I hope the crowd in Eatonville realizes the impression they've made on the future, and on the Real sports heroes are now a rarity

The Super Bowl. I am informed, will have been guy like Fred Funk, who finished among the top viewed by more than 100 million Americans. I was not one of them. I chose to watch golf how Funk overcame the most daunting odds to instead. It is the last pro sport in which the succeed in pro golf athletes regularly evince character.

When I was growing up, pro athletes were real heroes. They embodied much of what was virtuous about America. The solid work ethic, the spirit of competition, the code of honor. No

I cannot imagine any parents today who would hold up the average pro athlete as a role model for their children.

Certainly not Steve Howe, the pro baseball player who has been suspended seven separate times for drug abuse. Not Lloyd Daniels, the probasketball player who has a bullet lodged in his body, the result of a drug deal gone bad. Not Mike Tyson, the pro boxer serving time for raping a young woman.

This is the state of professional sports today. Pro athletes are paid so much money increasingly disproportionate to their actual performance - and receive such fawning attention - no matter their conduct - that the homely virtues of work, competition and honor hold little meaning to them.

My idea of the classic American sports hero is a

He has come a long way from his days as golf coach at the University of Maryland, where I first made his acquaintance. imagine any parents today who would hold up the average pro athlete as a role model for their children.

While the hot-shot junior golfers around the country were avidly recruited by major collegiate golf programs, young Funk had to play his way onto the team at Maryland.

When the hot-shots left college, there were sponsors awaiting them, offering to underwrite their expenses while they tried to make the pros. But Funk, as it turns out, was a late bloomer. When he finished school and decided to take a stab at the PGA tour, he had to pay his own way.

In golf, as in all pro sports, many aspiring amateurs are called, but very few ultimately are chosen. Before one is permitted to tee it up with the likes of Jack Nicklaus or Freddy Couples or Davis Love, one must survive a grueling qualifying process that eliminates all but the tiniest fraction of golfers.

In his first three attempts to join that elite fraction, Funk fell short. At one point, he recalls, times were so hard, money so thin, that he signed up with a temporary help agency. He remembers mental jobs that were "the bottom of the barrel," as far away from the glamor of pro golf as one can imagine. On his fourth try to qualify for the tour. Funk finally earned his playing privileges. He made it to the big leagues at 32, about eight years older than the average tour rookle.

Land restoration wards off famine

The Somali relief effort being carried out under the protection of U.S. arms is an affirmation of the ability, when linked with resolve, to alleviate famine. To extract hope from Somalia's suffering, the means should now be sought to give the world's hungry the ability to ward off famine's onset.

New steps have begun in that direction. In December, even as U.S. Marines were occupying Mogadishu, the United Nations decided to begin talks on an international treaty to combat one of famine's closest allies, the impoverishment of farm and grazing land. The effort, formally termed the negotiations on an international convention to combat desertification, is a direct outgrowth of last summer's United Nations Conference on Environment and Development. It was one of the top priorities of African nations attending the Earth Summit. The recent agreement to move forward was led, in part, by the United States. Robert Ryan, the State Department's representative to the discussions, says a treaty could be ready for signature by the summer of

This international response is an assault on decades of neglecting the world's hungry and on the twin to indifference, the fatalistic notion that starvation is immutably ordained by cycles of drought that are beyond human recourse. It is easier to ignore what can be rationalized as inevitable. But hunger-related deaths that strike hardest at children, which the U.N. estimates at 25,000 to 35,000 people every day among the world's 1 billion malnourished, are not inevitable. Famine in today's crowded world, however much assisted by political disintegration and periodic lack of rainfall, is increasingly the result of human damage to the land itself. Being caused by human actions, it can be halted and reversed by them, too. Descrification is the term most often applied to the process of land exhaustion. It takes several forms. Deforestation, according to the U.N.'s Environment Programme, is the most common. Somalia, for example, where 93 percent of the land is now classified as arid, has lost 67 percent of its forests, according to a recent U.N. Africa briefing paper. Land stripped of its protective forest cover for fire wood or to make way for crops quickly gives up its shallow layer of top soil to water crosion, leaving the ground barren to human uses.

In another form, describination results from overgrazing that packs the soil like clay as livestock denudes ground cover. Wind and water erosion do the rest. The same barren result comes from overcultivation that exhausts soil nutrients, again exposing coverless topsoil to crosion. In irrigated areas, more land is lost to waterlogging and the accumulation of salts.

Each year, according to UNEP, desertification consumes another 15 million acres of land. All told, the agency estimates, some 11 billion acres of land worldwide are threatened with descrification, with three-quarters of that land already moderately degraded. In Africa, where per capita food production has steadily declined each year for the past two decades, "All the evidence we have is that desertification is an increasingly severe problem." says Shelia Edwards of the U.N.'s Sudano-Sahalian Office. As the land degrades, she says. "and output drops, and drops and drops" the people have fewer reserves of stored food and seeds for replanting to rely upon. The addition of political turmotl or drought "can push them over the top" into a direct confrontation with fam-

Sudan and Ethiopia beginning with the severe drought of the mid-1980s and may be set to recur in large portions of southern Africa now experiencing the worst drought of this century.

Land withered beyond the capacity to nurture is not unique to Africa. The problem affects thousands of square miles in China, has afflicted deforested areas of southeast Asia and has begun to make its appearance in South America.

The treaty to combat descrification the U.N. has begun work on is aimed at reversing these trends. It can become a unifying commitment by the world community to abandon its indifference to a correctible cause of hunger. It can also facilitate taking needed actions, discrete to each locale and arising from the experience of the people involved, to reclaim the land before it recedes beyond reach. In many instances these measures may be as direct as reseeding grasslands, enclosing livestock and feeding them with cut fodder, and planting new stocks of

What Zoe Baird didn't understand

Scurrying to get ready for work the other morning, I skidded by the radio, then stopped short. Did I hear that right? I backed up and listened closer.

'Despite the disclosures about Ms. Baird's hiring of illegal aliens and failing to pay Social Security or unemployment taxes on them. Clinton Insiders say they expect the attorney general-designee to sail through her confirmation hearings."

Beg pardon? Did he say ''sail through'? Clarence Thom as and Antta Hill went through the Spanish Inquisition crimes that were never proven. "Judge Thomas, is your favorite movie 'Long Dong Silver,' or 'Roots,' as you allege?" Did they honestly think Zoe Baird would get a free ride after breaking Immigration and Naturalization, Social Security and Internal Revenue Service laws? I didn't think

When Baird asked President Clinton to withdraw her nomination, it was what I expected.

When Baird asked President Clinton to withdraw her nomination, it was what I expected. On the day Baird's confirmation hearings started, I flipped on C-Span and found the "Clinton insiders" had miscalculated. Senator after senator asked Baird what she had known, did she understand the laws she had broken and would her breaking of laws impair her ability to enforce those same laws as the highest law enforcement officer in the Baird's calm demeanor and perfectly spoken, polysyllable sentences sounded so reassuring I almost wanted to find the logic in them, but I couldn't: Yes, it's against U.S. law to knowingly hire an illegal alien. Yes, she knew they were aliens. No, she had not sent in the F.I.C.A. contributions required if one pays an employee more than $50 in a calendar quarter, and no, she did not pay the federal unemployment tax required if one pays an employee wages of $1,000 or more in that quarter, but yes, she had paid the couple

$2,000 a month plus room and board. Yes, she had just paid $8,000 in back Social Security taxes and a $2,900 fine for violating INS laws. Yes, she had consulted an attorney about the legality of hiring the couple, and no, neither that attorney nor she, who would be First Lawyer, could figure out the law. No. she doesn't think any of this will impair her ability to enforce the laws she just broke.... When C-Span opened its phone lines after the hearings, it became even more apparent Zoe Baird wasn't going to "sail through." Then the senators quizzing Baird began to get hundreds of calls from angry constituents. A lot of the folks Baird would serve. professed Clinton Democrats included. couldn't follow her logic either: The laws were on the books. But Brinton and the interchange, now expected to cost $85 million, has been removed because it will be a federallyfunded project. Without the added burden, the project expenses are less and tolls can meet the funding requirements.

Funding of the interchange could be a major obstacle, Brinton said. About 10 percent of I-4 traffic will take the expressway, paying the tolls necessary to make the funding equation work. the guilty verdicts. Bellamy, wearing a black and multi-colored jewel tone shirt with gold thread detailing and royal blue pants, stood expressionless with his hands clasped behind his back as the verdicts were read.

Assistant Public Desender James Figgatt voiced his objection to the separation of the jury while awaiting the penalty phase of the proceedings. Judge Dickey noted the objection but said it was not possible to keep the jury together until the parties are ready for the penalty phase.

During closing arguments someone other than Bellamy actually killed Cohen. Although Bellamy initially cooperated in the police investigation of the killing, and agreed to wear an electronic device to gather evidence from another alleged suspect, he left the Sanford Police station on the day of the planned meeting and fled to Georgia. Figgatt said Bellamy left Florida because he feared for his safety and the safety of his family.

Stone cited inconsistent statements by Bellamy when he was questioned on three different occasions about the case.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Calling on old friends

WASHINGTON — President Clinton is asking some old friends to help him sell unpopular programs needed for deficit reduction and is brushing aside early controversies by saying his new job isn't just "to do things that are easy."

"I know it defies the momentary conventional wisdom, but I think we're off to a pretty good start," Clinton told a friendly audience Monday night at a Democratic Governors Association dinner, shrugging off bumpy moments of his first days in the White House.

"We need to shake things up in this country and have a debate again," Clinton said to applause. "Let people argue."

Still, the former Arkansas governor was using the governors' winter meeting in Washington to shift focus onto staple campaign promises and to garner grassroots support for a deficit-reduction plan that even in the drafting stages already is stirring opposition in Congress and elsewhere.

Miners strike today

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. — As many as 7,000 miners in Appalachia and the Midwest went on strike today at the nation's largest coal producer in a dispute over job security.

Members of the United Mine Workers failed to report for the midnight shift at Peabody Coal Co. and Eastern Associated Coal Corp., which operate mines in eight states. Both are subsidiaries of Peabody Holding Co. of St. Louis.

It wasn't immediately clear what effect the walkout would have on production or on industries that rely on coal. In 1990. Peabody Holding said it supplied 10 percent of the coal used by U.S. utilities.

"The coal company has a lot of coal stockpiled, and the power companies do, too. So they're ready for a fight," said Mark Rankin, who works at a mine in Blacksville. "I guess we'll just have to give them the best one we can."

Cops may be tried by all-white jury

LOS ANGELES — Lawyers say the second trial of four white policemen in the videotaped beating of black motorist Rodney King could very well be heard by an all-white jury.

Prospective jurors cannot be excluded because of their race, but factors such as opinions about authority figures and the fact that those selected will have to be sequestered for weeks could favor whites as jurors, experts said.

"You may wind up with an all-white jury," said Harland Braun, attorney for Officer Theodore Briseno, one of the officers scheduled to go on trial Wednesday in federal court.

"Society needs a multiracial jury to make them feel that the trial is fair," Braun said. "But I'm somewhat skeptical about that. African-American jurors may feel pressure from the community that will make them unfair."

Buchanan back on the air

WASHINGTON — Pat Buchanan is back on the air, but the conscrvative ideological brawler doesn't have George Bush to kick around anymore.

In his return to the right-wing seat on CNN's "Crossfire" program Monday, Buchanan sounded uncharacteristically subdued.

Gays in the military? This would seem to be an issue made to order for Buchanan. But he never mentioned it.

Hillary, Rodham Clinton in charge of the new administration's effort to reform the health care system? How could be resist that one? Not a word.

Viewers who tuned in expecting to see some ideological bloodletting were disappointed.

Buchanan got in a few partisan punches.

"What's the difference between the new Democrats who are taxing and spending and the old Democrats who taxed and spent?" he said at one point in the forum he shared with columnist Michael Kinsley, occupant of the left-wing chair.

The guests on the program were Democratic Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey and Republican Rep. Richard Armey of Texas.

With Bradley sitting in, Buchanan took out after President Clinton in the opening moments of the program.

Social Security may suffer cuts

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — When the Clinton administration let it be known that its budget cutters might take a nick out of Social Security, the predictable cries of protest arose on Capitol Hill. But they were hardly deafening.

Could this be the year, after a decade of failed tries, that a president outmaneuvers the senior citizen lobby and milks the sacred cow of federal benefit programs?

Don't count on it, private economists say.

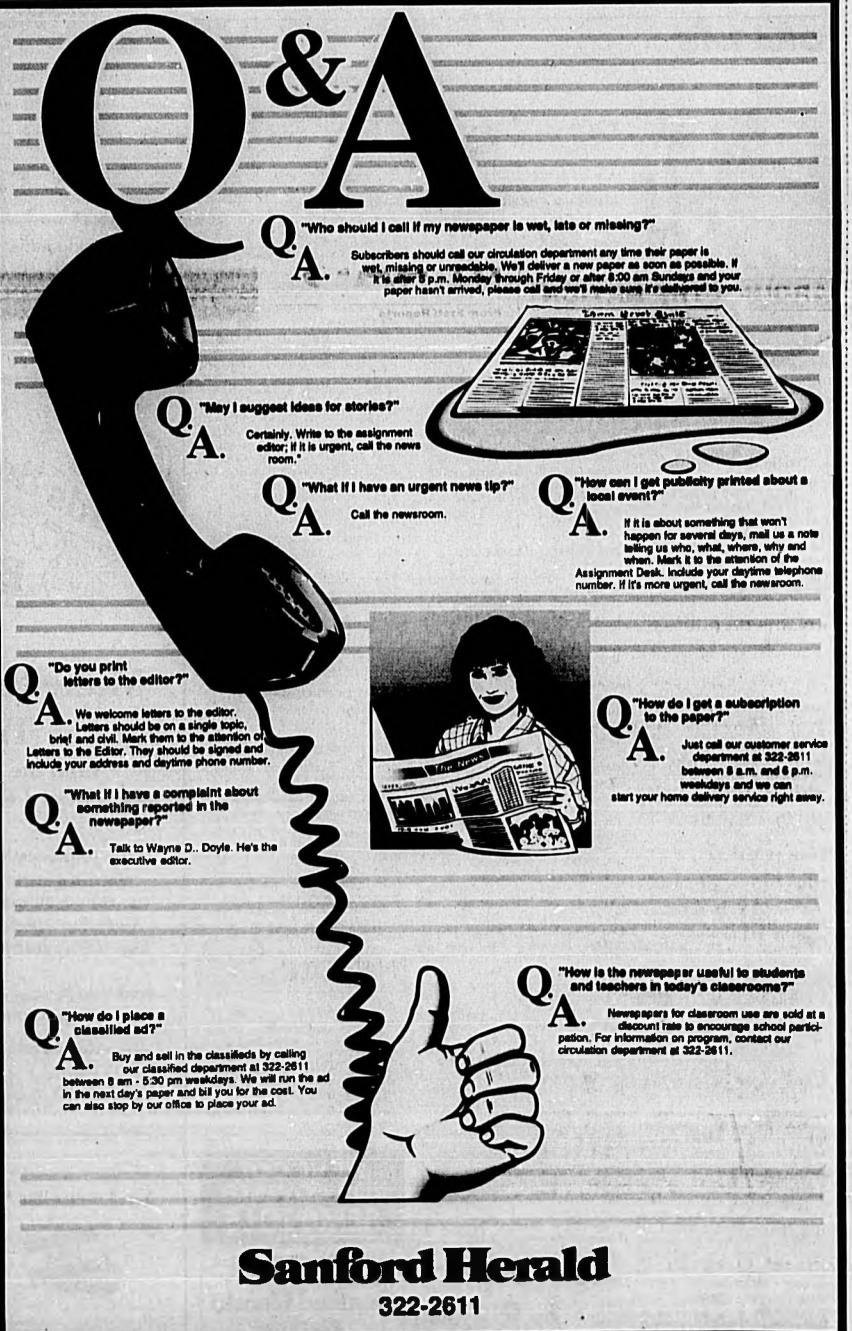

although it may be more feasible than in the past.

Shortly after the administration let slip that it was considering limiting cost-of-living increases for the roughly 41 million Social Security recipients, Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynthan, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said such a proposal wouldn't get past his panel alive.

"A death wish," the New York Democrat called it. In less colorful terms the American Association of Retired Persons denounced the idea and cranked up its lobby machine. Yet beyond that quick-fire criticism, the initial outcry has been unexpectedly muted.

"The reaction was less violent than in the past because the public realizes how bad the deficit is and that something has to be done about it," said Lawrence Chimerine, senior economist at the forecasting firm DRI-Mc-Graw-Hill.

Other economists said the political firestorm hadn't started because it is not yet clear that President Clinton will accept his aides' advice to take on Social Security as part of a comprehensive effort to reduce the budget deficit.

Beach (5-12) attempted the only corner kick. Goalie Lorne Jones had three saves for the visitors.

"We played well defensively." said Merlino. "Wood, Walraven, Grimes and Rohan Campbell all had a hand in stopping New Smyrna's offense."

The Tribe (6-14) will conclude its regular season with a game at Lyman Thursday night and then prepare for the district tournament that will be played next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday at a place and time to be announced.

The game with Lyman was originally scheduled for Friday, but has been moved to Thursday night.

LAKE HOWELL 3, OVIEDO 2 WINTER PARK - Mark De-Graff and Fernando Mejia scored second half goals as Lake Howell upset Oviedo 3.2 in a Seminole Athletic Conference contest at night. The Silver Hawks (6-10-3) varsity scheduled for 7:30 p.m. scored the first goal of the night at your local that ladd on a Brian Fowler kick off an assist from Mike Gray. But Ovledo (11-7-2) came back just before halftime to score on a penalty kick from Brad Franz to make the score 1-1 at intermission. DeGraff's goal came early in the second half off a feed from Fowler and Mejla added his score 13 minutes later to give the home team a 3-1 advantage. Franz added his second penalty kick score with 10 minutes left in the game, but that was as close as the Lions would get. Lake Howell outshot Oviedo

DAR honors four chaplains

By NICK PFEIFAUF Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - The Sallie Harrison Chapter of the Daughters of the Ameican Revolution is paying tribute to a World War 2 event. Wednesday, Feb. 3, has been declared Four Chaplains

According to DAR historian Virginia Powell, the day, "...is in memory of four chaplains, two Protestant ministers, one Roman Catholic priest and one Jewish

"Fifty years ago," she said, on Feb. 3, 1943, when the transport ship Dorchester, with over 900 men on board was torpedoed in the North Atlantic, these brave men of different faiths gave their life jackets to four sailors, in order that these young men might be saved from the sinking ship."

The four chaplains aubsequently lost their lives, along with 668 soldiers and sailors, when the ship went down.

A proclamation declaring the observance, was signed last week by Seminole County Commission Chairman Bob Sturm. It urges all citizens, "...to participate in appropriate commemorative events and to reflect on the committment of those brave men of three faiths who stood united in prayer as they died, symbolizing for all Americans and for all time the unity of this nation founded upon the fatherhood of one God

Women's activists may have distorted report's findings

By The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - Women's rights activists misinterpreted a report on football's link to to violence against women at a pre-Super Bowl news conference, the study's author said.

Garland F. White, a sociologist at Old Dominion University, said lawyer Shella Kuchl erreti when she told reporters Thursday that the study showed that beatings went up by 40 percent after games won by the Washington Redskins during the 1988-89 season.

'We didn't publish that," White said Sunday in a telephone interview from his Norfolk, Va.,

"What we said was that after the Redskins won (during the 1988-89 season), we found that women's trips to emergency rooms ... were slightly higher than average." White said. "We found that significant but something in need of much further research."

At the Rose Bowl news conference, Ms. Kuchl. Linda Mitchell of the media watchdog group Fairness & Accuracy in Reporting and other activists said shelters and violence hotlines are flooded with more calls from victims on Super Bowl Sunday than on any other day of the year.

Police in several cities contacted by The Associated Press said there was no rise in the typical number of domestic violence calls Sunday evening.

But at least one agency confirmed the activists' claim after this year's game.

"This is traditionally our busiest domestic violence day of the year," said Tess Wischeart, executive director of the Portland (Ore.) Women's

"We always find that there's a lot of Super Bowl-related violence," she said Sunday, "We had extra people working today. Our domestic violence calls are up 300 percent. We anticipate a lot of calls all evening, tonight and until tomorrow when the batterers go back to work."

A hotline worker for the Battered Women's Coalition in Cambridge, Mass., who identified herself only as Linda, said she handled a few telephone calls but not an unusual number.

"A lot of people say different events during the year will cause a rise in the incidence of domestic violence, but that doesn't necessarily translate into calls to a hotline - let alone to this hotline." she said. "Maybe a woman is too busy dealing with what's happened. The calls could come in later in the week.

The activists used the news conference to announce that NBC-TV had agreed to air a public service announcement against domestie violence. The announcement aired during Sunday's pre-

Ms. Kuchi, managing lawyer for the California Women's Law Center, said the did not talk to the researchers, but read an article of thinging the research in a journal called "Violence and Victims," published in 1992.

"I was simply quoting from their own summary of the research," she said, looking at the journal at her Santa Monica home Saturday night. "As I read these numbers, one of the tables does show an increase in admissions of 40 percent over the average intakes. It doesn't say that after every game there was a 40 percent increase.

"And I can't say that every Super Bowl it goes up 40 percent." Mitchell appeared at the news conference with Ms. Kuehl and made similar links between domestic violence and the Super Bowl.

She said that she recognized that Ms. Kuchl had misrepresented the study's findings but did not see fit to challenge her.

"I wouldn't do that in front of the media." she in Sunday's editions of The Washington Post. "She has a right to report it as she wants."

Ms. Mitchell did not return calls made Sunday to FAIR's Los Angeles office.

Ms. Kuchl said Ms. Mitchell never mentioned that she felt the study had been misinterpreted.

"I'm looking at these numbers the best I can," she said. "I never meant to misrepresent it, if I

NBC spokesman Curt Block told the Post that the network decided to air the anti-abuse message "because their cause is a good one" and not because of any link, real or imagined. between domestic violence and football.

Medication, surgery treat Graves' disease

DEAR DR. GOTT: After a year of trying to correct my Graves' disease with medicine, my GP has referred me to an en-docrinologist. I am now to decide if I would prefer to have surgery to remieve part of my thyrold or ... radioactive iodine treatment. I'm 26. married, and we no children yet. Would you discuss these two procedures in reference to my situation? DEAR READER: Graves' dise a se i s a form of hyperthyroidism, in which the thyroid gland enlarges and produces too much thyroid hormone, leading to weight loss, nervousness, rapid pulse, prominent eyes, and other symptoms.

Therapy for this condition includes anti-thyroid medication, radioactive lodine and surgery.

Medication is ordinarily very effective in returning the thyroid gland to normal. Such drugs, such as Tapazole and propylthiouracil, shut off the gland's production of hormone. For some reason, this treatment was ineffective in your case.

Radioactive iodine, administered as a "cocktail," is absorbed by the hyper-active gland. The radioactivity destroys part of the thyroid gland, thereby reducing the overproduction of hormone. Because radioactive therapy is not appropriate for young patients and pregnant women, it is generally reserved for older patients or those who cannot, for one reason or another, take anti-thyroid drugs. I do not believe you should consider this therapy because of Surgery to remove part of the thyroid gland is a reasonable alternative that is permanent and safe, when performed by a qualified specialist.

I suspect that the en-control your Graves' disease with higher doses of medicine; if this isn't successful he will probably recommend surgery. To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "An Informed ... Approach to Surgery."

There are certain plays a defender can make that appear crazy. However, they work because the declarer, who cannot see all the cards, will never believe the defender would be so irrational.

One species was immortalized Frederick Turner in ni article "The Grosvenor Gambit" in the June 1973 issue of The Bridge World magazine. For example, suppose the declarer is in seven spades. You hold a pleasing Q-J-x of spades. Dummy, on your left, has the K-10-x of spades. Declarer wins trick one and plays a low trump. You table your low trump: you don't split your honors. Will declarer finesse dummy's 10? Of course not. Afterward, though, he will spend several deals recovering from the shock. How could you give him a chance to land an "impossible" grand

Another possibility is in today's deal. South opened with a questionable strong, artificial and forcing two clubs. North made a questionable positive response of two no-trump. Then, when North could raise only to four spades and did not cue-bid an ace en route. South should have passed.

West led off with his two top diamonds. South ruffing the second. South took the next three tricks with the spade ace. heart king and heart ace. Then he ruffed the heart eight with dummy's spade nine. East discarded a club.

Convinced that West had the spade queen, declarer led the trump five to his king. He couldn't believe his eyes when West discarded a heart.

The normal result had been obtained by abnormal means.

By Bernice Bede Osol YOUR BIRTHDAY Feb. 3, 1993

In the year ahead you should be able to use knowledge you've acquired from past experiences. This could serve you well if you are competing for a position in your field of endeavor.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Face challenges optimistically today, but not unrealistically, if you underestimate the odds, this could lull you into a false sense of security. Aquarius, treat your-self to a birthday gift. Send for Aquarius' Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 plus a long, selfaddressed, stamped copy to Astro-Graph. c/o this newspaper. P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Do not attempt to manage a critical situation for another today that you are not equipped to handle. There is a chance you might make a costly mistake for which you will be held accountable.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you are in a situation today where you have authority over others, strive to be gracious instead of domineering. If you start pushing, subordinates will push back. TAURUS (April 20-May 20) People you'll be involved with today will resent you if you try to manipulate them with flattery or insincerity. Your motives will be readily perceived.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In order to derive instant gratification today, you may be inclined to make deals that do not serve your best interests in the long run. This could be true whether you are buying, selling or bartering.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Today, hoping others will do things for you that you should be doing for yourself could lead to disappointments. The only person you can count on is yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Everyone is entitled to his or her opinion today, even those who totally disagree with you. Don't take it as a personal affront if views.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) There is a possibility today you might have a misunderstanding with a close friend. It won't be much to begin with, but if it isn't resolved quickly, it could be blown out of proportion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Generosity is one of your nobler traits, but be careful today lest you carry it to extremes. You might give away something that you'll need later. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)

You are a rather artistic and creative person, but today your customary sense of design might not be up to its usual standards. Everyone may be aware of this but you.

BAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be extremely careful of how you conduct yourself in social situations today. If you make a faux pas, you might make the situation worse by embellishing

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Even though your intentions will be good today, there is a chance you might do things in a manner that will offend others they are not in accord with your instead of arousing their grati-
