Shots fired, police flood neighborhood

SANFORD — Law enforcement officers swarmed over a neighborhood in the vicinity of South Sanford Avenue and 29th Street late this morning.

A neighbor, Wilbur Kallys, said at mid-morning that police apparently responded to shots being fired. The neighbor said he understood at least one person had been hit and one person was taken into custody after police forced their way into a house on Central Drive.

The account could not be confirmed officially; no other details were immediately available.

Sanford Police Chief Steve Harriet was on the scene with a number of officers according to his office.

A spokesperson said Seminole County sheriff's deputies also were on the scene.

Stout to speak to support group

SANFORD — Doctor Richard Stout, therapist at West Lake Hospital in Longwood will be the guest speaker at tonight's meeting of the Sanford Desert Storm Support Group.

Judy Osborne, chairperson of the group said Stout will speak on methods family members should use to cope with loved ones returning from the Persian Gulf, to help them readjust to home life and, for reservists, civilian society.

The support group meets every Monday night, beginning at 7 p.m. at the Sanford American Legion Hall, 2874 Sanford Ave. Anyone who has a family member or friend stationed in the Persian Gulf, especially those who are returning, is invited to attend.

Seniors celebrate birthday

LAKE MARY — Lake Mary Seniors will celebrate their second birthday at a gathering Tuesday at 158 N. Country Club Road. The event will begin at 10:30 am. Along with an entertaining musical program, Seminole County Sheriff Don Eslinger will be the guest speaker. All seniors are welcome. For information, phone 322-1438.

An eggstra good time

SANFORD — The Second Annual Easter Egg Hunt was held by the Independent Order of Foresters-Court Gator 463 recently at the Central Florida Zoo. There were over 150 children attending the day full of fun activities. The highlight of the day was "The Easter Bunny" hopping down the trail with a basket full of goodies. "Krusty" the clown performed, games were played and later everyone visited the zoo.

Crystal Lake swimming?

Lake Mary eyes long range plans

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — Several approaches Lake Mary may make toward reopening Crystal Lake as a public swimming area are under consideration.

The possibilities surfaced as management personnel from the engineering firm of Dyer, Riddle, Mills & Precourt, Inc., made a final presentation of their master infrastructure study during a city commission meeting.

The report, requested by the commission on May 17, 1990, is aimed at informing the city of problems and possible solutions regarding such matters as the stormwater, street system and lake water quality of the city's infrastructure.

Of special concern was Crystal Lake, where the city's former public swimming beach was closed down five years ago by the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services for a number of reasons.

Ron Ferland, DRMP's project manager led off the Thursday-evening presentation. Ferland said some of his group's tests, especially for Crystal Lake, showed it was bad while others showed it was good. "It ended up about 50 percent each way," he said, "some of our results were in compliance, while others were out."

The two steps Ferland suggested the city should take to enable the lake to be reopened for use were to petition the Department of Housing and Rehabilitative Services to change their standards required on that lake, and to evaluate possible treatments of the actual beach area. He said he could not find any substantial damage from waste materials or sewage in the lake, and that he found the it contained ingredients of a normal ecological nature.

Studies on all eight major Lake Mary lakes had been made on such matters as the location, drainage, nearby homes and construction and the amount of pollution in each lake.

Ferland reported that overall results of the study, undertaken during this past year, showed

Sanford weighs repaving of streets

Ruth Bennett and granddaughter Julia Coffman show cracks in front Mrs. Bennett's home along East 4th Street in Sanford.

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — If the City Commission approves a request from the Public Works Department at tonight's meeting, there will eventually be a number of city residents and motorists who will be happy with repaved streets on which to drive.

Four main areas are being recommended for complete repaving. They include 4th Street from Mellonville to Locust Avenues; both Laurel and Elm Avenues from 3rd Street to 13th Street, and a patching job on S.R. 46, West of Poplar Avenue.

All four of the city streets to be considered have been in need of repaving for a number of years, and while they have all been previously listed on city plans in the past, they had to be deferred because of pending Utility System construction. The utility work however, has now been completed.

Ruth Bennett, who has lived on 4th Street for the past 35 years, said she will be very happy if it is finally repaved properly. "Ever since I've lived here, it's been in poor condition," she said. "The city comes around about once a year, plugs up a few holes, then within a couple of weeks, the paving materials dry out and the holes come right back."

Public Works Director Jerry Herman gave assurance that this will not be just a patching of holes, rather it will be a complete repaving. The various projects will receive a total of 22,036 square yards of paving materials, plus almost the same amount in milling. When current pavement is dug up, crushed and used for a base on which to apply the concrete, the process is called milling.

Herman said if the City Commission approves the projects, there is at present, no specific starting time for the repaving projects, but he added, "it should get underway in the very near future, and will probably take only a couple of weeks to accomplish."

One street that has long been the subject of complaints about its condition is not on the list. Seminole Boulevard, along the lakefront, is full of holes, uneven in many places, and badly in need of a complete reworking.

Sanford City Manager Bill Simmons said Seminole Boulevard cannot be repaired as easily as the other streets. "It would have to be dug up and completely redone in order for it to be done properly," he said. Simmons, a member of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce said the chamber, following surveys and extensive committee work, has placed Seminole Boulevard as a number one priority project in an effort to get it rebuilt and repaved. He said he expected it wouldn't be too long from now before it comes about.

Herman said the cost for the new paving will be funded by Local Option Gas Tax revenues, and will be done by Seminole County personnel without the need to hire any outside contractors.

The meeting is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. at City Hall, 300 N. Park Ave.

HRS working on new breath analysis rules

By Associated Press

ORLANDO — Central Florida attorneys are successfully using the lack of state standards for breath analysis tests, one of the best weapons against drunken driving, to defend their clients.

Since January, five judges in Orange County have sided with defense attorneys. Prosecutors there have appealed the decisions.

If upheld by the appellate courts, the rulings would require prosecutors to present costly expert testimony to prove the machines are reliable.

"The practical effect is that state attorneys are not going to be willing to make an extensive showing of proof in every case," said Orange County Judge Stephen W. Carter, who made the initial ruling in January. "They have limited funds and thousands of DUIs."

The issue, meanwhile, has spread to the Tampa Bay area, where a Hillsborough County judge is expected to hear arguments April 1. A date has not been set in two similar cases in Pinellas.

The breath analysis device tests exhaled breath to measure the amount of alcohol in the body. A person must blow into the machine for seven seconds. In Florida, a percentage of 0.10 is considered high enough for a conviction of drunken driving.

Attorneys are arguing that Florida health officials have failed to compile statewide testing standards for the machines, raising questions about the accuracy of their results.

Right to Bear Arms committee selects Durant for citizen award

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — The nationwide Citizens Committee for the Right to Bear Arms has selected Frank H. Durant Jr., of Longwood for its Citizen of the Year Award.

Committee officials at the organization's headquarters in Bellevue, Wash., said Durant was selected to receive the citation because of a dedication to the efforts to preserve the right of the people to keep and bear arms as guaranteed by the Second Amendment to the United States Constitution.

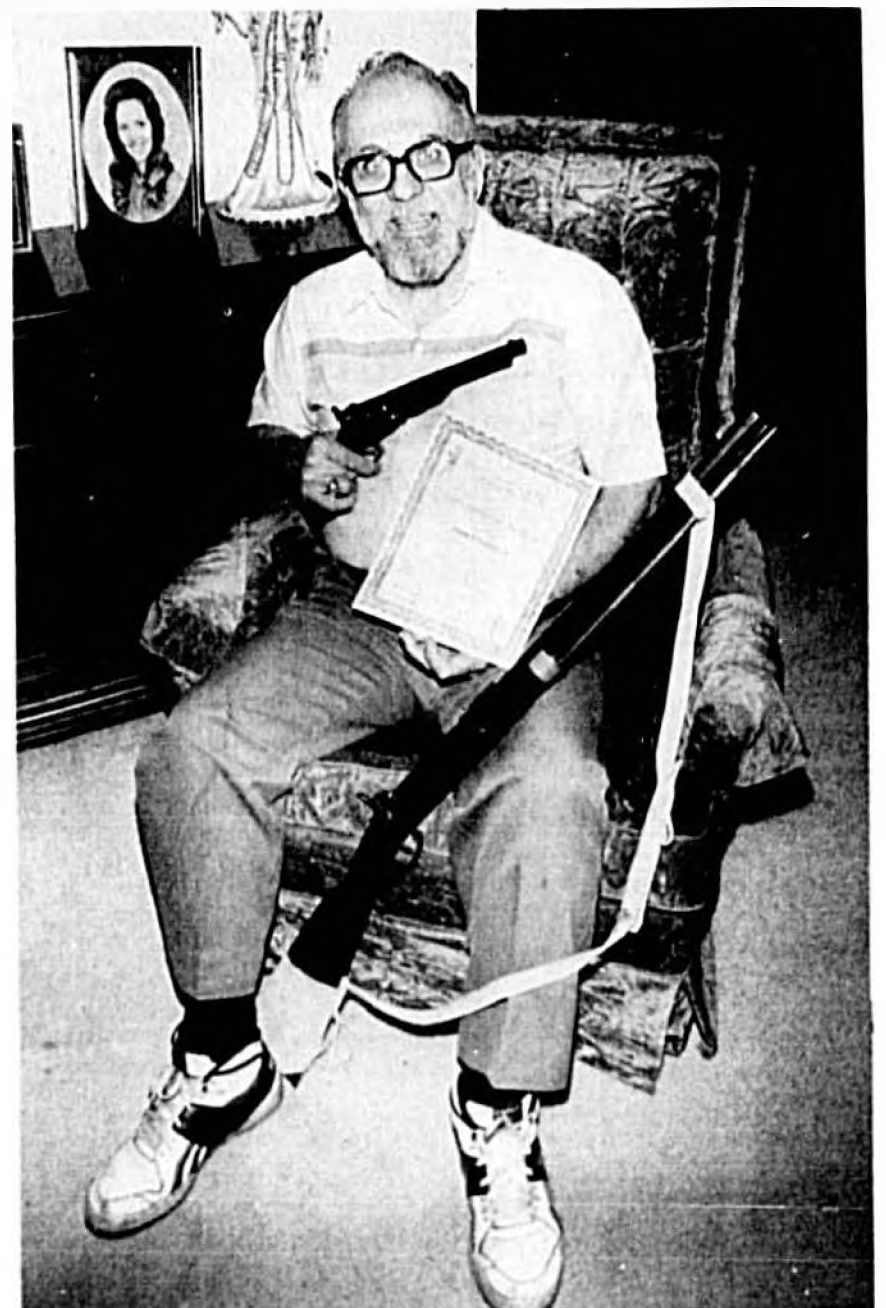

"I'm all in favor of our right to have guns, it's a good safety feature for personal protection," Durant said. He spends a great deal of time in Washington, working with lobbyists, either supporting legislation he believes in or fighting what he is opposed to.

Durant has been with the Right to Bear Arms group for the past 15 years. "I've been with them since they first organized," he said.

In Bellevue, Committee Chairman Alan Gotlieb said, "If it weren't for people like Frank Durant, Jr., our Constitutional rights would have been eroded years ago."

Selection of the Citizen of the Year Award is based on the activities of individual members. They might include being active in local, state or national gun rights issues, writing to editors of newspapers, contacting elected officials or giving talks during public gatherings. The person selected is not required to meet all the criteria.

The Citizens Committee for the Right to Keep and Bear Arms is a national organization with nearly 50,000 members as well as more than 130 members of Congress serving on their National Advisory Council.

Frank H. Durant, Jr., bears arms with certificate received.

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Law lets criminals hide convictions

ST. PETERSBURG — Tens of thousands of people in Florida are hiding their criminal backgrounds from police, employers and potential victims, thanks to a state law that lets them deny they were ever arrested.

A six-month investigation by the St. Petersburg Times found that at least 68,000 people in Florida since 1974 have had criminal arrest records sealed, according to a computer analysis by the newspaper.

While other states strictly limit what crimes can be sealed, or require defendants to prove they have reformed, Florida's statute is full of loopholes. The Times reported Sunday in a copyright story.

In Florida there's no wait and anything can be hidden — charges of rape and robbery, murder and arson, forgery and fraud. People can get cases sealed even if they plead guilty. It's a law, critics say, that may actually encourage crime, not deter it.

Legislature to tackle budget, tax

TALLAHASSEE — House and Senate committees plan to hammer out the details of their versions of a $28 billion budget this week, laying the groundwork for the one critical task facing the Legislature each year.

But as the annual 60-day legislative session moves into its fourth week, lawmakers will also be considering other high-profile issues.

Topics expected to come up in committee include the creation of a new department of elderly affairs, the appropriation of $91 million to provide health care for poor pregnant women and the modification of Florida's $25,000 homestead exemption.

Oscars

Newsletter tells moviegoers about film content

By MICHAEL WARREN
Associated Press Writer

BOCA RATON — Martin Scorsese's "GoodFellas" is a critical hit, with Oscar nominations for best picture and best director. But did you know 282 expletives are spoken in the film?

Or that the movie about a New York Mafia family depicts 14 bloody death scenes, including shootings, stabbings and the digging up of a corpse?

"Some people say it doesn't matter how many swear words there are in a movie, but other people are offended," said Robert F. Lake, Jr., a father of two who hopes to provide moviegoers more information on movie content.

Lake, 38, and two friends have launched a newsletter aimed mostly at concerned parents and senior citizens unhappy with language and sex scenes once forbidden in films.

The "Entertainment Research Report" promises to warn moviegoers what to expect in the way of profanity, violence, sex and ethical conduct before they plunk down money on tickets.

Lake said he got the idea when he took his wife to see "Ferris Bueller's Day Off" several years ago on the advice of friends and glowing reviews — and ended up squirming in his seat.

"They all said the movie was funny and great," said Lake. "But there were just a few words said by young people in the movie that I didn't care to hear in the company of my wife. There should have been a way to know about that beforehand."

A guide to how 'Dances with Wolves' fares tonight

By JOHN HORN
AP Entertainment Writer

LOS ANGELES — The Academy Awards broadcast is supposed to overflow with suspense. This year, the drama may tap out early.

The first award to be presented on tonight's show (9 p.m. EST on ABC-TV), following a production number with Jasmine Guy and Steve LaChance, will be for best supporting actress. The announcement in this category could be the first indication of a "Dances With Wolves" rout.

Coming into the 63rd Annual Academy Awards, Kevin Costner's epic Western had 12 nominations, the most of any film. With a best supporting actress victory for Mary McDonnell, "Dances With Wolves" may collect a wave of momentum and never look back until it gallops off with the best picture Oscar.

Here, then, is a viewer's guide to the Oscar telecast, based on a script subject to change, with pivotal moments described. Plan refrigerator and bathroom visits accordingly.

Stay tuned to see if Madonna does anything nasty while singing "Sooner or Later" from

"Dick Tracy."

Award No. 1: Best Supporting Actress. Miss McDonnell (Stands With a Fist in "Dances With Wolves") is not the clear favorite for supporting actress, but her competition is weak. The upset pick would be Whoopi Goldberg, the dimstore psychic of "Ghost."

Award No. 4: Best Supporting Actor. Graham Greene (Kicking Bird in "Dances With Wolves") is nominated. Even if Bruce Davison wins for his depiction of a selfless care-giver in "Longtime Companion," this should not be seen as a "Dances With Wolves" defeat.

Award No. 10: Film Editing. This category can be a bellwether, and "Dances With Wolves" is in it. Last year, "Born on the Fourth of July" won both here and for best director for Oliver Stone. It lost best picture to "Driving Miss Daisy." Upset specials: "The Godfather Part III" and "GoodFellas."

Reba McEntire, who lost most of her band in a recent airplane crash, is set to follow with her version of "I'm Checking Out" from "Postcards From the Edge." This might be the evening's most emotional moment.

Award No. 15: Cinematography. Last year's winner was "Glory."

State probes Southern Bell's customer refunds

Associated Press

MIAMI — Four state agencies are investigating Southern Bell for allegedly withholding millions of dollars owed to customers for out-of-order phone lines.

Just last month, Southern Bell agreed to pay a $4.9 million settlement for shortchanging pay phone commissions.

Three former Bell employees have told investigators that Florida's largest phone company systematically falsified its records to show it didn't owe refunds on the out-of-order lines. The Miami Herald reported Sunday.

The former employees said fabricating records was a routine practice throughout the state.

Southern Bell has confirmed some records were falsified in Dade County, company spokesman Spero Canton said. The utility has launched its own inquiry. "We're trying to find out the validity of this," he said.

Canton also noted that the accusations come from fired employees; one was dismissed for medical reasons, the other two for alleged misconduct.

Frank Falsetti and Nancy D'Alessio, who worked for the phone company in Dade, told investigators in January that complaint handlers routinely were ordered to fabricate reports to show problems were corrected promptly.

Sometimes, they said, workers lied and reported that customers weren't home or that the repairmen weren't allowed inside — when all along customers were waiting for help.

Falsetti said he handled customer complaints about phone lines used for burglar alarms. He said he was ordered by his boss to report that service problems were corrected right away — even though they were fixed much later.

“This falsification procedure cheated customers out of refunds.”

—Frank Falsetti

"The recorded elapsed time would only be about five minutes, a physical and mechanical impossibility," Falsetti said in a sworn statement. "We were instructed to do this even if a call came in at midnight when no employees were working. This falsification procedure cheated customers out of refunds."

The Florida attorney general, the statewide prosecutor, the Department of Law Enforcement and the public counsel are trying to determine how much money is owed and whether criminal wrongdoing was involved, said Les Garringer, a senior assistant attorney general.

"We don't know the extent of the unpaid refunds and manipulation of records," said Public Counsel Jack Shreve, whose office represents utility customers for the Legislature. "But this is not something inadvertent. It did go on for a period of many years. We're looking for how high in the company people knew about it."

It's been going on in South Florida for at least 10 years, D'Alessio and Falsetti said.

Donald Babair, a former service manager in Orlando, told a state investigator in January that the same things happened in his Central Florida service district.

Attempted murder charged

Anthony Bernard Jamison, 20, of 1107 W. 8th St. in Sanford, was arrested on Friday.

He was charged with armed robbery, the use of a firearm in the commission of a felony and attempted murder.

On Friday night, he allegedly used a small calibre handgun to rob Robert Bacak Jr. at the corner of 9th Street and Mulberry Avenue.

He allegedly took $280 from his victim and then allegedly threatened to kill him and fired two shots in the general direction of the victim, according to police.

He was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he is being held without bond.

Traffic stop brings other charges

Toby Allen Dykes, 23, of 310 E. 18th St. in Sanford, was arrested on Friday.

He was charged with carrying a concealed weapon in addition to three traffic violations.

When police stopped Dykes for allegedly having a broken tag light lens, a computer check of his auto tag revealed that the tag was allegedly registered to another vehicle. Further investigation showed that the decal was allegedly registered to a third vehicle.

When the car was searched, a .177 calibre BB gun was allegedly found under the driver's seat.

Dykes was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held in lieu of $1,000 bond.

Trespassing charged

Brian Thomas Johnson, 30, who reported no local address, was arrested on Friday and charged with trespassing after warning.

He allegedly had caused a disturbance at the home of his wife in the past and had been warned not to return to the property, according to police reports.

On Friday night he returned to the property and refused to leave, the police said.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held on $100 bond.

Driving with suspended license charged

Tyrone Banks, 37, of 58 Seminole Gardens was arrested on Friday.

He was charged with driving with a suspended driver's license and driving with a license that had been expired for more than four months.

When he was pulled over for a routine traffic offence, it was discovered that Banks' license was allegedly revoked in 1980 for six months. After it had been reinstated it allegedly had not been renewed.

Banks was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held on $100 bond.

Cmdr. Ray Fox Jr., 64, dies

LAKE MARY — Cmdr. Raymond George Fox Jr., 64, 275 W. Lakeview Ave., Lake Mary, passed away Saturday at Central Florida Regional Hospital, Sanford. Born Sept. 5, 1926, in Sanford, he was a second generation Floridian.

Fox's military career began when he joined the Navy during World War II. Following his discharge, he attended Auburn University in Alabama.

Upon graduation from Auburn, he re-enlisted in the Navy during the Korean War and attended aviators school in Pensacola, Florida. It was during this schooling that he met his wife, Patricia and was married.

During his career, he served on several aircraft carriers, and was stationed at the Sanford Naval Air Station from 1960 to 1963.

Ray Fox

At the time of his retirement from the Navy in 1978, he had attained the rank of Commander, and settled in Lake Mary, where his hobbies included hunting and fishing. He was a member of several hunting groups. One of his greatest pleasures however, was boating.

His political career began almost immediately after his retirement from the service as he was named to the Lake Mary Planning and Zoning board by the city commission. Three years later, he ran for the office of City Commissioner and won the race. He served as Commissioner for two terms, beginning in January, 1980. In October, 1983, he ran for a third term but was defeated.

Following his political career however, he kept in close touch with the Lake Mary governmental operations and was called upon a number of times for advice and suggestions.

Fox was a member of the Sanford Area Retired Naval Officers Association, Orlando Area Auburn University Alumni Association, Association of Naval Aviation and Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity.

State targets high-risk employers

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — The state is moving ahead with work on a project that was supposed to be finished 15 months ago — making a list of Florida companies with the worst safety records.

In 1989, state lawmakers gave the Department of Labor and Employment Security until January 1990 to compile the list. The goal was to monitor high-risk employers until they reduced work-related injuries.

Lawmakers also gave regulators new authority to inspect private companies and fine them if necessary, a power they had not had before.

The measures were a response to skyrocketing workers' compensation insurance rates. Rates for everyone are going up in part because of a small percentage of companies with bad records, according to regulators and lawmakers.

Bill Marsh, chief of training and audit in the division of safety, got the task of compiling the list in August.

"Our problem is developing a system that isn't arbitrary and capricious in selecting companies," he said. "That is the main problem."

But Marsh said he hopes that soon he'll find a way to fairly pick companies that need help. His office began reviewing 1989 accident data this month.

Early last summer, the accident-list materials were shipped to a new safety research office in Miami. At the time, officials said the project was moved to take advantage of researchers at universities in the Miami area.

But the safety office was closed last month after developing only a preliminary list.

Yet late last spring, members of a state workers' compensation oversight task force reviewed an earlier preliminary list of highaccident companies.

Dan Miller, head of the AFL-CIO in Florida and a former task force member, said the list was at least 90 pages long and listed several thousand companies. About a third of the companies appeared to be in construction. Many cities were also listed.

Rather than sit around and wait to produce a new list, Marsh's staff has begun to go through the old list and contact companies with poor records.

Search on for two gunmen after two shot

By Associated Press

ORLANDO — Sheriff's deputies today sought two gunmen they say shot and wounded two men and attempted to kidnap a woman after stealing her car.

The woman kicked one of the men in the groin and ran to safety as he tried to force her to go with them, deputies said. The two suspects and a third man then drove off in the woman's car, deputies said.

The vehicle was recovered and one of the three men was arrested Sunday afternoon, deputies said.

Rene Hechevarria, 21, of Orlando, was charged with armed robbery, kidnapping and auto theft, sheriff's spokesman George Prochehl said.

Noel Torres, 18, of Kissimmee, was reported in stable condition and under armed guard at a hospital while investigators tried to determine any connection between him and the gunmen, Prochehl said.

Torres had been dumped from a car in which the three suspects were riding, deputies said. He suffered gunshot wounds to his upper and lower right arm.

Three Killed in auto accident

Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE — Two women heading home after attending a baby shower were killed, as was the driver of a speeding car that struck their car head-on, police said.

Killed were Lucille Blessing Replogle, 82, of Jacksonville, and Patricia May Lavery, 50, who had been living in Saudi Arabia. They were in a 1977 Chevrolet that was struck by a 1983 Mercury driven by Ronald Scott Stevens, 21, of Jacksonville.

*Based on a Refund Anticipation Loan

The amount of personal loan interest that's tax deductible in 1991.

The amount of closing costs you pay on our home equity loan.

Two Reasons For Getting A Barnett Home Equity Loan That Have Nothing In Common.

As many of you probably already know, the tax laws have changed. And as of January 1991, the interest on most personal loans is no longer deductible.

Just about the only personal interest that is deductible is that which you pay on your home.*

That's where a Barnett Home Equity Loan comes in. Not only do you get a loan with tax deductibility, you also get one that's very flexible. You can use it to pay for a car, a boat, a vacation or tuition.

You can even use the funds to make certain investments or consolidate other loans into just one payment.

That's not all.

Now through May 15, Barnett will pay the closing costs associated with the loan. That can save you hundreds of dollars right from the start.

To make things even easier, you can have your loan payment automatically deducted from your checking or savings account. And if you have recurring borrowing needs, ask about Barnett's Home Equity CreditLine.

So come in to your local Barnett office and find out how a couple of things that have nothing in common can actually save you money.

*Subject to certain important qualifications, generally, interest paid on home secured loans is tax deductible. Please consult with your individual tax advisor for the tax consequences of any Barnett loan. This applies only to Home Equity Loans. Normal closing costs apply to other mortgage finance programs. It took Japan's Parliament longer to approve the country's financial contribution to the Persian Gulf War than it did the allied coalition to fight and win it. After weeks of bitter legislative and public resistance and some last-minute horse-trading, Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu won approval recently of a measure authorizing payment of nearly $9 billion toward the war effort. Together with last year's pledge, Japan's total commitment now approximates $13 billion.

The sum is impressive, but it came grudgingly from a country that's easily able to afford it, that gets more than 70 percent of its oil from the Persian Gulf and that wants none of the money to be used to defray costs of the fighting, preferring, instead, that it be used only for postwar reconstruction. Japan has not been a cheerful giver.

There are complex reasons for this, largely growing out of World War II's disastrous results for Japan, which persuaded most Japanese to reject militarism. In the Gulf crisis, however, this principle has been stretched so far that neither non-combat military units nor even medical teams went to the Gulf, facts not lost on a U.S. Congress already spooling for a fight with Tokyo on a number of trade issues.

Most Japanese are very sensitive to this problem. Some Japanese firms reportedly are hesitant even to seek reconstruction and supply contracts in the Gulf now that the war is over, for fear of looking like crass opportunists. And Japanese political leaders now say that they recognize that political responsibility goes with economic power. Whether that recognition is translated into policy and practice remains doubtful.

A similar reluctance has been evident in Germany, where, despite majority support for the allies, anti-war and anti-American sentiment are voiced by substantial minorities. After long hesitation, Bonn has roughly matched Tokyo's financial pledge. More important, Germany sent an anti-aircraft contingent to Turkey and allowed U.S. forces to use Germany as a prime staging area; now, Bonn is engaged in postwar diplomacy and its military is helping to clear mines from the Persian Gulf. All that is a far cry from Tokyo's dithering.

What's troubling is that it's late in the day for two rich, globally engaged countries still to be holding back in the global arena, as if somehow they were exempt from far-off crises. History has something to do with that, of course, but so do smugness and hypocrisy.

If Germans and Japanese don't want the United States to be the only world power, or don't like the way it wields that power, they ought to say so forthrightly.

Vietnam vs Iraq

As the wife of a Vietnam veteran, I can sympathize with the feelings expressed on the evening news recently, by some area Vietnam veterans. They are threatening to boycott or protest parades and homecomings for veterans of the Persian Gulf War.

The Vietnam veterans were cheated of proper welcoming and homecoming. They were heroes and were ignored, forgotten and left to deal with the anguish — alone.

I know the hell we went through for the first 14 years of our marriage when my husband wouldn't discuss his involvement in the Vietnam War; he was ashamed of having served. There have been years of nightmares, but a visit to the Vietnam Veterans Memorial "Moving Wall" in Orlando three years ago, began to change all that. Attending the Brevard Vietnam veterans reunions have been even more of a healing experience.

Now, exactly 20 years later — he'll be coming home from another war. I can't bear to think of him coming home to the kind of reception he and other Vietnam veterans received. He has fought with this issue over and over in his head. His heart told him it was his duty to serve in the Persian Gulf — but his mind told him he would be a fool to do it again — for an ungrateful nation. Somehow, in the back of his mind... the fact that he truly was proud to be an American always surfaced. His unit was called to active duty and he went. I have constantly assured and reassured him that his homecoming would be very different this time.

We can't change what happened 18-20 years ago, but we can do what is necessary to assure it never happens again — in our lifetimes. Two wrongs don't make a right. We do not need another generation of troops (some a little older) coming home from the desert sands where they put their lives on the line — to protest over a hero's welcome — the welcome they so justly deserve — as did the troops coming home years ago.

I beg these Vietnam veterans to come out in full force — and welcome these troops home — so they can keep them from the kind of suffering they know all too well. There could be some healing in their efforts — knowing they were part of a generation that cared.

Tell students about campus crime

Locally, we refer to the history-making case against my alma mater as "the little girl against the big guys in the suits."

Traci Bauer, small, soft-spoken editor of the Southwest Missouri State University newspaper, sued the school when administrators refused to release campus crime reports to journalists.

And, boy, what a hearing it was in a city small enough that murders still make big news on the front page.

The SMSU security director testified that his office had not reported drug cases among students to city police, and had destroyed evidence.

A security officer testified that the security director told him to keep quiet about a university administrative assistant who was suspected of theft.

And the clincher: testimony from both sides about the night administrators first decided to invoke a federal law and refuse to release crime reports to Bauer. That night a starter on the university's basketball team — a team that over the last five years has come up from a group of also-rans to rub elbows with the big boys and become a great financial draw for the school — was accused of raping a student in one of the dorms.

SMSU brass cited the federal Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act, interpreting it to mean they could not release personally identifiable information about students. They didn't say why they decided to suddenly invoke the 1974 law on the night in 1989 when the alleged rape occurred. However, a government directive indicated they might be correct in their interpretation.

Quite a can of worms, no?

In his mid-March decision, U.S. District Judge Russell Clark ruled in favor of Bauer, saying that the federal act does not cover records maintained by university police; and that withholding campus crime reports violates First Amendment freedoms to gather and publish information.

If the decision holds, it will mean that colleges may no longer withhold crime information in a way that could jeopardize students' safety.

In cases involving other schools, victims have testified of attacks by criminals known to campus police, but no one else; and of cases where numerous violent attacks have gone unpublicized. Imagine your daughter walking to night classes in an area where attacks have occurred, but have not been reported — so she has no idea of the danger she may be in.

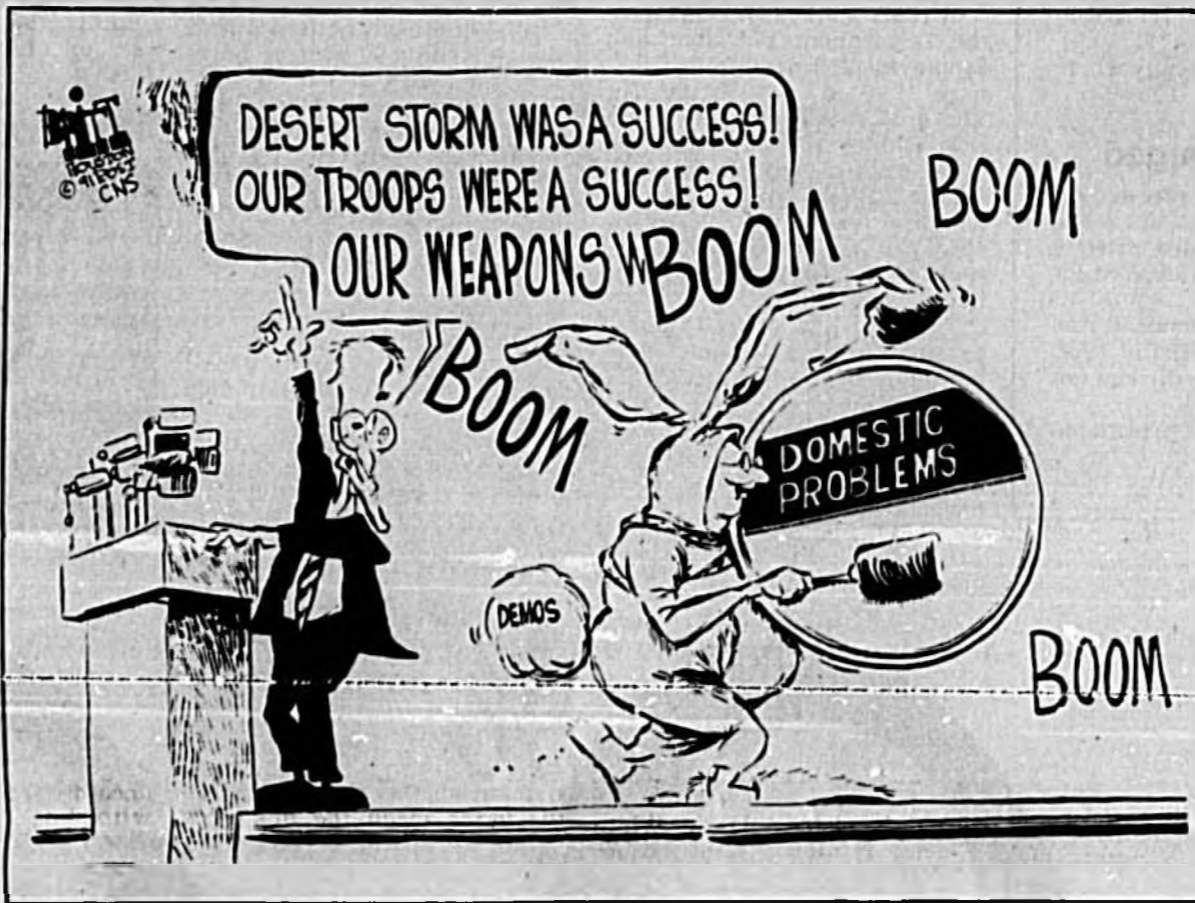

The oddest thing about the SMSU furor was another controversial incident, which had been reported as follows:

A couple years ago, a former SMSU dorm resident assistant was shot to death in a woman's apartment where he was hiding, masked. When the woman entered her bedroom, the man attacked her — and her boyfriend shot him. The woman's apartment had shown signs of a break-in the previous night, so her boyfriend had accompanied her home armed with a gun.

In the aftermath, information was leaked to the press from files SMSU had kept on the attacker.

Victims have testified of attacks by criminals known to campus police.

Think tanks enhance states

BELLEVUE, Wash. — When John Carlson and several other young political activists organized the Washington Institute for Policy Studies in the mid-1980s, their first project was to be an analysis of the state's finances from a conservative perspective.

They logically assumed that a document detailing the yearly budget of Washington's state government would be readily available to the public — but they were repeatedly rebuffed when they sought to obtain one.

"Initially, we thought the difficulty we were encountering was caused by a typically sluggish bureaucracy," says Carlson, now the institute's president. "Then we realized that there was no unified budget document anywhere inside state government."

The product of that unnerving experience was the institute's first major public policy proposal — that Washington's taxpayers be provided with detailed information about the state's annual budget.

Since that time, the institute has dealt with dozens of other matters, ranging from education to regulation. "But we stress economic issues," says Carlson, noting that the state budget remains of paramount importance.

The Washington Institute typifies an especially salutary development in recent decades — the establishment at the state level of issue-oriented "think tanks" (both conservative and liberal) that once existed almost exclusively in Washington, D.C.

Indeed, the nation's capital is home to dozens of organizations such as the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, Economic Policy Institute, Brookings Institution, Heritage Foundation and American Enterprise Institute.

But they focus on federal issues in an era when governance has become decentralized. Thus, the new groups have found a receptive constituency among people throughout the country concerned about state and local matters ranging from taxation to consumerism.

Among the most respected statewide conservative "think tanks" are the South Carolina Policy Council, Independent Institute in Colorado, Commonwealth Foundation in Pennsylvania, Heartland Institute in Illinois, Mackinac Center in Michigan, Pioneer Institute in Massachusetts and Yankee Institute in Connecticut.

Providing a liberal perspective are Public Interest Research Groups in California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Illinois, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, Montana, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania and Washington.

The Washington PIRG based in nearby Seattle, has a second office in Spokane, maintains a full-time lobbyist in the state capital of Olympia and employs almost a dozen organizers across the state.

It operates research projects dealing with issues such as recycling, pesticide contamination, air pollution, voter registration and consumer protection. Typical of the professionally researched studies it has produced is an analysis of the state's hazardous waste problems titled "Turning the Tide on Toxics."

Another liberal research group, Washington Fair Share, is also based in Seattle but maintains additional offices in Tacoma, Yakima and Spokane. Among the issues upon which it places a high priority are health care, education and the state's minimum wage.

Just as the Washington Institute was founded by three young conservatives in 1985, Washington Fair Share was established by three young liberals in 1983. (The older Washington PIRG was launched in 1976.)

To finance their operations, the two liberal organizations rely primarily upon small contributions collected in door-to-door canvasses of homes across the state. Their conservative counterpart obtains most of its financing from larger donations made by foundations established by corporations or wealthy individuals.

All three have enhanced the quality of political dialogue here in Washington by aggressively advancing their provocative views in not only studies but also speeches, television commentaries, newspaper columns and other forums.

But their work remains unfinished. "There still is no requirement for a synthesized state budget," says Carlson. "We're insisting on that. With all these smart people around, why is there so much chaos and disorganization?"

The Washington Institute typifies an especially salutary development.

Iraq owes billions for farm products

WASHINGTON — Saddam Hussein lost the Persian Gulf War, but in the process he proved that there is such a thing as a free lunch. Saddam stopped paying his commodity credit bill to the United States when Iraq invaded Kuwait on Aug. 2 — a credit that should never have been extended in the months leading up to the invasion. The bottom line is, Iraq got the U.S. agricultural exports it ordered and America didn't get its money. The outstanding bill at the Agriculture Department (USDA) is $2 billion.

The USDA should not have been surprised that Saddam turned out to be a bad risk. The General Accounting Office had been warning the USDA about that possibility for years. It doesn't take a Monday-morning quarterback to wonder why Iraq was given billions of dollars in credit — 25 percent of all the credit extended by the export guarantee program. There were plenty of signs even before the invasion that the bills might not be paid.

Allan Mendelowitz, the GAO investigator who looked into the credit given Iraq, says it was simply a bad loan. The USDA did a risk analysis, rated Iraq as a "reasonable risk" market in 1989, and then continued to extend credit. If Saddam had gone to one of Charles Keating's high-flying savings and loan offices, he couldn't have gotten an easier loan with fewer questions asked.

The Commodity Credit Corp. is a federally insured loan program to help foreign countries buy U.S. farm products. A country places an order, a bank loans them the money to pay for what they buy and then the federal government guarantees that the loan will be paid if the foreign nation defaults. The USDA assesses the credit risk of the countries, and another federal board, the National Advisory Council, decides whether the credit policy is in sync with U.S. foreign policy.

Our reporter Jonathan Ullman looked into the handling of Iraq under that program. During the Iran-Iraq War, the United States wanted to help Iraq. Iraq needed food but was short on cash (all those tanks cost money), so the credit program for Iraq was born in 1983. Iraq became the 10th largest buyer of U.S. farm products — including buying 20 percent of American-grown rice in 1988 — using taxpayers' money.

As Saddam's poor human rights record got longer, including the gassing of his own people, the State Department continued to insist that the United States had more to gain by maintaining a friendly relationship with Iraq. In September 1989, the USDA extended $30 million in additional farm loans to Iraq, but an internal USDA memo warned against issuing a press release about it. The fear was that if the USDA made a big deal about Iraq's credit, someone in Congress might come down hard on the whole guarantee program.

By the beginning of 1990, the bills were piling up. The general sales manager at the USDA, F. Paul Dickerson, wrote a memo to his boss acknowledging that the bills were high, but adding that to cut off Iraq then would be taken as "unwarranted and an affront to their dignity," and that might prompt Iraq to stop paying anything. The USDA believed the best way to guarantee payment of the old loans was to continue giving Iraq new ones.

When the USDA submitted a $1-billion credit proposal for Iraq to the National Advisory Council in 1990, the NAC finally got nervous. The Atlanta branch of an Italian bank was under investigation for allegations that it had loaned money to Iraq under the USDA program, but that not all of the money went for farm products. The NAC said Iraq should get only $400 million in credit.

The USDA should not have been surprised.

four of the lakes, Little Crystal, Emma, Bingham and Como, rank highest in the need for protection from future degradation. He added, "Actually, none of your lakes could be classified as bad. Five of them are in the middle range, and three are relatively good, compared to other lakes in the Orlando and Volusia County areas."

Commissioner George Duryea said he has heard questions regarding whether or not private citizens might be able to improve the lakes near their homes by pulling dead materials such as weeds and underbrush out of lake bottoms. Ferland answered, "That only works some of the time." Later he commented that in such cases, "if only materials which were completely dead were removed, and live foliage was only mowed but not pulled up completely, it would be an improvement."

DRMP's project coordinator Malcom Day and the assistant director of storm water also made presentations to the Commission, including a review and inventory of the city's street system, recommended roadway improvements, and some estimated improvement costs and funding sources. Because of the complexity of the entire study, the engineering firm compiled booklets containing approximately 300 pages of reports, findings, maps and lists. Each of the Lake Mary officials received a copy of the report for study and reference.

In conclusion, Ferland gave five suggestions on how the city could resolve its various environmental problems, including those in the lakes and waterways.

The suggestions were that the city conduct an information program for residents near lakes on fertilizer and pesticide use; adopt an open space and wetland policy to protect its lakes; work with the Department of Natural Resources on recommendations for lake maintenance; control new construction to insure it does not cause lake problems; and have proper water runoff and sewage treatment plans included in all roadside improvements.

On the subject of road improvements the printed survey included suggestions for paving and repaving 55,150 feet of city streets, at an estimated cost of over $8½ million. Ferland said, "Only a small portion of the amount could be obtained from outside sources, the rest would have to be paid by the city."

Lake Mary Mayor Randy Morris extended his appreciation for the survey, calling it, "the most comprehensive, and also the most expensive study ever made of this city."

Movies, books, prime time play to the dark side of an audience

EDITORS NOTE Humanity's fascination with its dark side is an ancient and perennial phenomenon. However, some periods are more fertile than others. Judging by the spate of serial killers, vampires and psychopaths inhabiting today's books, films and TV shows, this seems to be one of those times.

By NANCY SHULINS
AP Special Correspondent

Had any good nightmares lately? Try seeing a movie, reading a best seller, or turning on the TV during prime time. Popular culture is unleashing a panoply of monsters, from serial killers to vampires to psychopaths, all playing to a bloodthirsty audience.

But what does that say about us? The dark side has always held fascination; exploration of evil is as old as humanity. But horror also tends to be cyclical, flourishing at moments of acute anxiety. The current proliferation of dark themes in literature, television and film speaks volumes not only about who we are as consumers, but about the anxieties that define our times.

"Essentially, horror has little to do with fright," says scholar James B. Twitchell of the University of Florida, who says horror is to teen-agers what fairy tales are to children: education in the guise of entertainment. "Beneath the horror is a prescriptive text. From watching horror movies, adolescents learn to avoid pitfalls of dating and mating."

To some extent, horror is perennial. Each generation must learn its lessons of sexual initiation, as evidenced by endless remakes of "Frankenstein" and "Dracula." Souvenir Press of London says the original 19th-century "Dracula" book has never been out of print and currently there are 17 editions by 17 publishers in print in English.

But in an era of date rape and AIDS, with many people staying single into their 30s and beyond, sexual and reproductive worries aren't restricted to adolescents. "People are looking for partners in a world in which making those connections is becoming increasingly difficult," says Harold Schechter, an English professor at Queens College. "There's a growing sense that you can't know anyone, that we're living in a world in which people wear masks."

This obviously is an anxious era. And Americans of all ages are out for blood.

Given the buying power of American teen-agers, it's no surprise that NBC slotted gothic vampire soap opera "Dark Shadows" in prime time, there are no fewer than eight vampire movies in the works, and the novels of Stephen King and Anne Rice ("Interview With the Vampire," "The Vampire Lestat," "The Queen of the Damned") are best sellers.

"The period in human maturation when exploring darkness is an important way to control anxiety is adolescence," Twitchell says. "If you look at who is driving the pop culture markets — mass-market books, blockbuster movies, and fringe and prime-time TV — you see that it is an audience of adolescents."

"That's why Stephen King has pushed aside other authors on the best-seller list. The levels of sophistication and subjects he addresses are levels of adolescent anxiety. It's what happens if you open that door, what will you see in that dark closet?"

Not all pop culture monsters are make-believe. Adults' bogeymen are more flesh-and-blood, outwardly indistinguishable from the rest of us. Hannibal Lecter, the seemingly urbane serial killer known as "Hannibal the Cannibal" in the movie "The Silence of the Lambs," is one such, and others are bound to follow.

"Killers are a personification of the world outside hearth and home, increasingly a place of peril," says Schechter, author of two books about serial killers, "Deviant" and "Deranged." "We sit in our family rooms watching 'The Simpsons' together, while just outside that little fortress lies an increasingly dark, threatening, chaotic world."

Television being the magnifying glass of society that it is, prime time during a recent week was a sampler of twisted family relationships. They included fact-based dramas about a father who drives his daughter to murder, a domineering mother and her serial-rapist son, and a remake of "Whatever Happened to Baby Jane?," a gothic tale of aging sisters, one helpless, one deranged.

Not exactly the Brady Bunch? In fact, they're wholesome family fare as reflected in a funhouse mirror. It stands to reason that they coincide with renewed emphasis on family life and traditional values, Schechter says.

Test

Every month, local breath-testing experts test the devices and record the results on a form supplied by the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

Carl Barletta, supervisor of Hillsborough's Central Breath Testing office, said he is confident his machines are accurate.

But HRS acknowledges that there are no guidelines to determine whether the response on the forms mean the machines are accurate.

"We made some mistakes and we're in the process of re-promulgating new rules," Paul Tomlinson, an HRS breath-testing supervisor, said.

"But until then, if the courts continue to go with the defense, I'm sure there will be a lot of DUI cases lost."

Different counties test the devices differently, leaving no single standard for accuracy, according to Victor J. Pellegrino, who has filed motions to suppress the test results in 27 cases in Hillsborough County and eight in Pinellas County.

"It is prone to breakdown, yet people are brought to trial every day for what the machine says," Pellegrino said.

Fernando Perez, another Tampa attorney, has filed legal challenges in two Hillsborough DUI cases.

"You can't have something that's going to be that important to a person's life be that arbitrary," he said.

U.S. closer to setting up Arab land base

By GEORGE ESPER
AP Special Correspondent

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf says the United States is closer than ever to establishing a permanent land base on Arab soil — a goal governments in the region blocked for many years.

The U.S. commander in the Persian Gulf War told reporters Sunday that the base would not include American ground forces.

He also said that the American troops who remain in the gulf will go home after a permanent cease-fire is signed with Iraq.

Iraq's government newspaper, Al-Jumhuriya, on Sunday denounced the cease-fire terms set by the allies as aimed "at usurping Iraq's sovereignty, mortgaging its will and holding its wealth hostage."

The U.S.-led coalition, which halted hostilities last month after driving Iraq from Kuwait, says it will not sign a permanent cease-fire accord unless Baghdad destroys its chemical, biological and nuclear arsenals and agrees never to resume production of the weapons, among other conditions.

Prisoner releases, however, continued. A Red Cross official in Riyadh said 1,000 Iraqi prisoners of war traveled to the Saudi border post of Arar on Sunday and were handed over to Iraqi officials. He spoke on condition of anonymity.

Also Sunday, hundreds of Kuwaiti soldiers who spent months in Iraqi prisons returned home to their war-wrecked nation, where they were greeted by weeping relatives and celebratory bursts of machine-gun fire.

Banks in the emirate opened Sunday for the first time since Iraqi troops shut them down in December.

Thousands of cash-poor Kuwaitis lined up to get new Kuwaiti currency, and then they went on shopping sprees at newly reopened stores.

Since Kuwait was liberated on Feb. 27, some U.S. forces have begun helping the Kuwaitis rebuild their nation.

Other American soldiers are occupying part of southern Iraq, where they are keeping an eye on Saddam Hussein's troops.

Schwarzkopf said the soldiers are not expected to remain in Iraq after a permanent cease-fire. But a permanent truce has been complicated by the rebellions by Kurds in northern Iraq and Shiite Muslims in the country's south.

Schwarzkopf said U.S. logistics troops could be in the gulf as long as eight to 10 months to help load up equipment, but that the vast majority of soldiers will be home before then.

Nearly 100,000 of the 540,000 American troops sent to the gulf in Operation Desert Shield have departed, the Central Command says.

The command, now based in Riyadh, plans to return soon to its headquarters in Tampa, Fla.

Congress regains life as war ends

By STEVEN KOMAROW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Ready or not, like it or not, Congress seems to be happily getting back to normal.

Since the 102nd Congress convened in January, lawmakers have seemed consumed, overwhelmed by the war in the Persian Gulf.

Republicans spent their time attacking Democrats who voted against it. Democrats mounted their defenses and both sides patted themselves on the back for conducting such a serious debate.

President Bush's postwar speech to a joint session of Congress earlier this month may have provided the closure needed for the legislature to move on.

With passage last week of the spending bills to cover Operation Desert Storm, Congress showed itself ready to tackle other issues.

Lawmakers gave final passage to a much-delayed $30 billion infusion of cash to settle the accounts of failed, federally insured savings and loans.

The House passed a bill to provide drought aid to California, and OK'd observance of Greek Independence Day on March 25. The Senate approved a slew of Bush's nominations, including former Florida Gov. Bob Martinez as Bush's drug policy director, and voted to give gold medals to the war leaders, Gens. Colin Powell and Norman Schwarzkopf.

Meanwhile, the debate on the legislation covering Gulf War costs showed little disagreement on the military spending at hand.

Like car buyers nearing a purchase, lawmakers argued over the options and not the basic vehicle. They picked some and rejected others, dickering all the way.

For example, the score at week's end was Wheat 1, Dairy 0.

Both of those agricultural sectors had amendments riding on the back of Desert Storm.

The wheat industry wanted the government to spend more money on "enhancing" its exports, that is, having American taxpayers pay more so foreigners could pay less.

Civil Rights groups risk much on bill

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — For a cause that sounds morally unassailable, the civil rights movement is finding the going difficult these days.

Its No. 1 goal, a new civil rights act, was vetoed by President Bush last year, with no discernible negative consequences for him. So advocates are trying again this year.

But there's an awful lot at stake — from the Democrats' control of the Senate to the credibility of the entire civil rights movement.

"The politics of this legislation clearly come down to who does the best job of defining what it's about," said Democratic pollster Geoff Garin, who has polled for supporters of the bill.

Though the bill had wide support in Congress last year, winning a veto-proof margin this year won't be easy. The bill is intended to reverse a series of 1989 Supreme Court decisions that increased the burdens of proof on plaintiffs in job-discrimination suits.

That makes it arcane, technical, difficult to understand and harder still to explain.

And opponents, who include the White House and Republican leaders, have distilled their argument to one easily understood word — quotas.

That's how Bush denounced last year's version and it's the word the bill's supporters are trying to avoid this year. The bill does not require quotas in hiring and promotion — indeed, they are illegal. But opponents argue it would prompt employers to use them anyway to avoid job-bias suits.

"The Republicans think that if they can make the civil rights bill purely about race, and sort of win the argument that it is a quota bill, then they've got a great wedge to use against the Democrats," Garin said.

Democrats say they, too, reject quotas. But they acknowledge the potency of the other side's argument, and they have tried to shift the public debate by emphasizing another angle: the bill would increase women's rights by allowing them to collect damages, beyond the back pay now allowed, in sexual harassment and discrimination suits.

Information phone service controversial

By ROBERT NAYLOR JR.
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Until 1980 no one had ever heard of a telephone number with a 900 area code.

Then came an experiment by the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and ABC. The television network asked its viewers to call either of two 900 numbers to say whether they believed Jimmy Carter or Ronald Reagan had won a presidential debate.

It was the proverbial beginning of the end for Carter — who lost the unscientific poll and later the election to Reagan. But it inaugurated the fastest growing and possibly most debated telecommunications service since Alexander Graham Bell invented the telephone.

The 500,000 people who called that first 900 number paid 50 cents each for the call. Last year, millions of people called more than 13,500 companies with 900 numbers, spending, by some estimates, as much as $1 billion.

Some of them weren't too happy with what they got in return.

At its advent, 900 service was "ballyhooed as having tremendous potential for offering all kinds of new information age services for consumers," said Gene Kimmelman of the Consumer Federation of America. "Unfortunately, for every opportunity, there seems to be some kind of shady practice that goes along with it."

IN BRIEF

SOFTBALL

Coaches needed

SANFORD — The Sanford Recreation Department is looking for coaches for its senior girls softball league. The league, for girls 13-15, has enough girls registered to fill the teams but several coaches are still needed.

Interested parties are requested to call Jim Adams, Recreation Supervisor, at 330-5697.

TENNIS

Sanford native Jim Courier wins

KEY BISCAYNE — David Wheaton had the most aces he folded anyway.

Jim Courier, a native of Sanford whose grandfather, Jim Spencer, still lives there, capitalized on Wheaton's third-set double-fault on break point for a 4-6, 6-3, 6-4 victory in Sunday's final at the International Players Championships.

The double-fault — Wheaton's seventh — gave his former high school classmate a 4-3 lead in the final set. Courier held his final two service games to earn the first-place check of $179,000, the biggest payday of his five-year career.

FOOTBALL

Thunder open season tonight

ORLANDO — The Orlando Thunder play their first game against the San Antonio Riders tonight at the Citrus Bowl as the 10-team World League of Football kicks off its inaugural season.

"It's been very hectic starting this up from scratch," said Thunder owner Raj Bhathal, whose team was the first franchise named by the league but one of the last to name a head coach and front-office staff.

"We've been working hard to convince people in Orlando that this will happen, that there will be quality professional football here. I think we're accomplishing that. It's very exciting."

NCAA TOURNAMENT

Tar Heels hold off Owls

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Through eight years, Dean Smith and North Carolina struggled in vain to get back to the Final Four. With one last struggle, they finally did it Sunday.

The Tar Heels held off upstart Temple 75-72 for the NCAA East Regional championship, ending Smith's longest absence from the Final Four and making him the first coach to get there in four different decades.

It wasn't easy. In fact, not until Mark Mason's last shot clanged off the front of the rim in the triumph and sigh in relief.

Duke makes it four in a row

PONTIAC, Mich. — Give Duke a halftime lead in the NCAA tournament and the Blue Devils will go to the Final Four. Give them a healthy Bobby Hurley and they might have a better chance this time.

Hurley scored 13 of his 20 points in the first half as second-seeded Duke defeated fourth-seeded St. John's 78-61 for the Midwest Regional championship Sunday and joined UCLA and Cincinnati as the only schools to make four consecutive Final Four appearances.

AUTO RACING

Wallace the young wins 200

BARBERVILLE — Kenny Wallace had a message for his older brother after winning Sunday's Spring 200 Grand National stock car race. "I'm the man now."

Wallace, who's driven in the shadows of Winston Cup star Rusty Wallace, won his first NASCAR race, driving a Pontiac Grand Prix to a 141-second victory over Tommy Houston.

"I'm relieved for myself," the younger Wallace said after winning $12,975. "Now I got some credentials. Now that I have my first win, I really can feel like a winner."

Amato sets NHRA record

GAINESVILLE — Joe Amato, the defending Top Fuel champion, established an NHRA record for elapsed time en route to his first victory of the season Sunday at the NHRA Countdown.

Mark Oswald and Warren Johnson won division titles. Oswald used a patched together racer to win in Funny Car while Johnson won the Pro Stock event.

Amato covered the quarter-mile distance in 4.892 seconds at 280.89 mph in his dragster to beat Don Priddy, who smoked the tires at the starting line and coasted to a 12.133.

Church leagues dry out

'A' League tightens up

By BILL KERNS
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — Following two consecutive weekends of rainouts, the "A" Division resumed play Saturday at the Ft. Mellon Softball Field with two thrillers and two romps, as St. Stephen Catholic and Church of God of Prophecy moved into a first place tie.

Church of God of Prophecy fell to First United Methodist 10-9, and defeated Sanford Christian 11-9. St. Stephen Catholic tipped Holy Cross Lutheran 6-5, and Central Baptist beat Neighborhood Alliance 14-1.

'B' League catches up

By BILL KERNS
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — After two consecutive weekends of rainouts, the Sanford Church Softball League "B" Division was forced to play doubleheaders in an attempt to get back on schedule.

Saturday at Pinhurst Park the "B" Division played the games rained out March 9 as well as the regularly scheduled games.

First Nazarene of Sanford defeated Sanford Christian 7-4. First Baptist Geneva stomped Holy Cross Lutheran 12-4. Markham Woods First Baptist tipped First Nazarene of Sanford 10-9 and Sanford Christian beat Grace Christian 13-6. Grace Christian also forfeited to Holy Cross Lutheran and there was no report on the game between First Baptist Geneva and Church of God.

Sanford Christian holds first place at 4-1, while Markham Woods First Baptist is 3-1. First Baptist Geneva and First Nazarene of Sanford are both 2-2. Holy Cross Lutheran is 2-3 and Grace Christian is 0-4.

DOUBLE TAKES

Pitching leads Lions

From staff reports

OVIDO — Oviedo High School's varsity baseball team got two excellent pitching performances over the weekend as the Lions improved their overall record to 13-4.

B.J. Calapa tossed an six-for-litter in beating Lyman 7-3 Friday night to improve his record to 7-0 on the season and David Blanton came back with a four-hitter Saturday to hand Daytona Beach Mauland a 7-6 setback to raise his personal record.

Trio paces Hawk girls

From staff reports

WINTER PARK — Jenny McDowell placed in three events while Kelly Kobna and Natalie Newberry scored in two each to account for all of Lake Howell's 28 team points at the Winter Park Invitational track meet Friday at Showalter Field.

McDowell was fifth in the long jump (15.51), fourth in the triple jump (33.11) and fourth in the 220-yard dash (27.4).

Newberry had the only first place finish, winning the two-mile run in 12:10. She was also fourth in the mile (5:34.3).

Kobna managed a pair of personal bests in finishing second in both the shot put (33.1) and discus (113.3). Her effort in the shot put is a new Lake Howell school record.

The Silver Hawks finished tied for fifth with Apopka. Evans finished first with a score of 65. Lyman was second (189) while Lake Mary came in seventh (27).

Where's the line between recreation, prep sports?

When kids compete in organized athletics, are they school sports? With the same program, the way they might act, and the relationships, are professional athletes and amateur athletes different?

The questions also apply to the line between school sports and prep sports. What if a student athlete competes in a tournament outside of school? Or a student athlete competes in a tournament outside of school? Or a student athlete competes in a tournament outside of school?

That's the line between recreation and prep sports.

It's the line between recreation and prep sports. It's the line between recreation and prep sports. It's the line between recreation and prep sports.

Coccyx pain has numerous causes

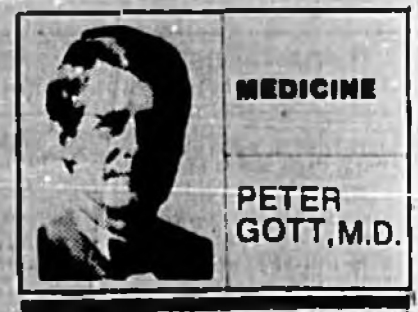

DEAR DR. GOTT: Since 1988 I've been plagued with coccyx pain. This condition followed long periods of sitting while writing a book. There are no signs of pain when standing, walking, running or jumping — only when lying on my back or sitting in a relaxed position. Why does the pain continue?

DEAR READER: Although the term "pain in the tail" is often reserved for the sensation we experience in dealing with unpleasant situations and irritating people, true coccygeal pain can be very uncomfortable. Arthritis of the bones in the lower back can cause this pain; however, there are other causes, too. For example, the lower intestine may be the source of such pain. Internal hemorrhoids (swollen veins inside the anus), rectal infections and fissures (cracks) and rectal tumors must be ruled out in any patient who suffers chronic pain over the coccyx.

I remember once seeing a patient who had put up with excruciating pain for days. My first clue to his disorder was a tiny dimple, just below the coccyx, that seeped a little pus. Later, after the patient had been anesthetized, a surgeon discovered a huge abscess, which had arisen in a pilonidal sinus — a congenital malformation consisting of an abnormal tract or opening between the rectum and the skin. I was surprised the patient had not suffered symptoms earlier because, judging from the size of the abscess, it must have been there for months.

Coccygeal pain can also be caused by gynecological infections in women and, obviously, by injury to the coccyx itself. When one of my patients fell from a ladder and landed on his bottom, his coccygeal fracture caused pain on sitting until the bone healed.

To provide additional information on arthritis, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Understanding Osteoarthritis."

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

You are defending against a suit contract and decide to lead from a holding of three small cards. Which one do you lead — top, middle or bottom?

If it is an unbid suit, even the experts cannot agree on the best choice. But if it is a suit partner has bid, there is no discussion. If you have supported your partner, lead high from three small; if you have not, lead low.

East-West used this understanding to produce a sparkling defense on today's hand. The one-club opening was Precision, showing 10-plus points. The one-heart overall was slightly unorthodox with only a four-card suit, but East wanted to help his partner find the best lead.

After supporting his partner, West led the heart three. Having the two, East then knew his partner held a heart honor, which had to be the queen. So he won the first trick with the king and returned the two.

When returning your suit, you traditionally lead your original fourth highest. Therefore West knew that his partner had overcalled on a four-card suit. West won trick two with the heart queen and returned his last heart. Finally East produced the coup de grace, leading the 13th heart. West ruffed with the spade king, promoting East's jack as the setting trick.

How did East know that South had the club ace rather than the spade king? If South had the spade king, on the fatal fourth round of hearts he would ruff high in hand and discard dummy's club loser. To prevent this, West would have cashed the club ace when in with the heart queen.

James Jacoby's books "Jacoby on Bridge" and "Jacoby on Card Games" (written with his father, the late Oswald Jacoby) are now available at bookstores. Both are published by Pharos Books. (C)1991. NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
March 26, 1991

It looks like Lady Luck will be quite cooperative in ventures you either direct or create in the year ahead. It will be up to you, though, to put the operations on track.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Try to make a mental game out of any difficulties you might have to contend with today. Your chances for resolving them will be enhanced — if you don't take things too seriously. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker Instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're apt to be very enterprising today, but not necessarily for selfish purposes. The wants and needs of those with whom you'll be involved will motivate you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your probabilities for success in endeavors look extremely encouraging today, provided you act upon your ideas. Your imagination, plus your initiative, are your greatest assets.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) This could be a materially rewarding day for you, but not necessarily as a result of your own efforts. Benefits may come to you indirectly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're likely to perform twice as effectively today with persons over whom you have some influence, rather than with individuals with whom you have to feel your way.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This is a day when you should be able to respond well to a challenge. Don't look for problems, but don't run from them either. Establish your own agenda.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You are presently in a good cycle for fulfilling your hopes and expectations. Be optimistic and think positively, regardless of the circumstances.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be bold but not foolhardy in striving to achieve your purposes today.

If bravado is required in certain circumstances, use it, but do so wisely.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) The answers for which you've been searching can be found today: Discuss your concerns with one in whom you have confidence and who has advised you correctly in the past.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You might spot a development today that could be financially meaningful to you — if you exploit it properly. This opportunity may be bigger than it initially appears.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Someone with whom you're presently involved is on a lucky roll that could include you. If you start spotting signals, it's time to snuggle closer.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) The possibilities for achieving your objectives in this cycle are better than usual, especially those that are related to your ambitious and material security. Good luck.
