Iran Military Pledges No Coup If Shah Leaves

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Iran's army chief of staff today pledged publicly for the first time that the military would not stage a coup after the shah quits the country. An American engineering executive was killed in a fresh wave of violence.

Viets Near Final Target

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — A Vietnamese-led column preceded by Cambodian rebel scouts today slowly closed in on the town of Poipet near the Cambodia-Thailand border, tightening the invaders' already solid grip on Cambodia. But officials at the Thai border said they believed the Vietnamese were delaying the capture of Poipet — the final target in their 22-day blitzkrieg — to allow reporters to witness Cambodian rebels, rather than Vietnamese, capturing the town.

Lake Mary Asks HUD Money For Drainage, Paving

By MAX ERKLETTIAN Herald Staff Writer

Lake Mary's application for a $24,300 federal Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) community block grant to correct drainage problems and pave streets in an area south of Lake Mary Elementary School was submitted to federal officials today.

Stacy Lanzford, president of Lanzford Consultants, the firm retained by the city to seek federal grants, hand-delivered the application to HUD office in Jacksonville, according to Phil Kubles, city building administrator and grants coordinator.

"We should know the results sometime in the first week of March," Kubles said. HUD is scheduled to notify applicants if their projects have been funded by March 15.

The application includes $20,000 for street paving and improvement projects. HUD officials indicated that HUD funds would be used to pay for the project, but the city would have to pay for the design and engineering costs.

Investigators for Seaboard Coast Line Railroad (SCL) have completed their investigation of Saturday's train derailment in Altamonte Springs and are expected to announce the cause either Tuesday or Wednesday.

"We had three people on the scene from our transportation, mechanical and road departments and the cause will probably be determined either tomorrow or Wednesday," according to T.P. King, SCL assistant superintendent.

After the incident, about 300 persons were evacuated from nearby homes and a hotel as a precautionary measure.

King said today that neither SCL nor the Federal Railroad Administration ordered the evacuation and he was surprised that the evacuation was ordered.

However, county fire inspectors today defended their actions noting they were told one of the freight cars contained about 500 gallons of fuel.

"When we talked to the Texas Company they didn't know how much of the fuel had been pumped out, so we didn't want to take any chances," said Raymond Pippin, fire inspector investigator.

Pippin also noted the train car also contained fumes which also posed a danger if any accidents occurred with the train.

"You never get the vapors out and we just didn't know how much was going to happen when they moved that train," Pippin said. Agreeing with Pippin was Joe McCann, chief fire inspector, who noted a man with a revolver was just thought for everyone's sake it was better to be safe than sorry."

STATION ROBBED

The Amoco service station at 702 Highway 17-92 in Fern Park was robbed of an undetermined amount of cash by a man with a revolver.

According to records, the robbery occurred Saturday at 7:59 p.m. Denise Miner, 21, of Winter Springs, told sheriff's deputies the man, about 40, walked up to the station and pulled out a gun.

"Empty out the drawer and I want the quarters, too," the woman quoted the robber as saying. "Hit the floor, if you get up I'll shoot you," the robber told the woman.

WALLET STOLEN

A 66-year-old Sanford man had his wallet stolen in the parking lot of a local tavern.

The man said the incident occurred Saturday at 11:30 p.m. at Bill and Jan's Bar at east 28th Street, Maurice Lofstedt, 68, of Magnolia Avenue, said he was pushed from behind as he was getting into his car, causing his glasses to fall off his face.

He said as he was searching for the glasses the man who pushed him took his wallet from his rear pocket, according to records. The wallet contained $25 cash and several credit cards, records indicate.

Alan Wrase, business manager at Jack Prosser Ford, 5786 Highway 17-92, reported three plate glass windows at the dealership's business building were shot. Damage was estimated at $300, according to records.

BULLDOG TAKEN

A registered "Pit" bulldog valued at $300 was reported stolen from an Oviedo home.

Amy Tyler, 23, told sheriff's deputies the dog was chained at her home at Highway 426 and 28th Street, Maurice Lofstedt, 68, of Magnolia Avenue, said he was pushed from behind as he was getting into his car, causing his glasses to fall off his face.

Administrator David Chacey said while a building permit is required in Longwood for installation of chain-link fences, they do not have to be inspected.

He added that the city took someone to court over a fence violation of city ordinance and the court refused to hear the case. "They said they had more important things to listen to," Chacey said.

Vatican City (UPI) — It was not your everyday papal blessing. Pope John Paul inadvertently told 40,000 well-wishers in St. Peter's Square to go get soaked.

If that wasn't enough, the pontiff gave a 14-minute Sunday blessing speech — his shortest since his Oct. 16 election — much to the dismay of the cheering multitudes below his balcony.

Two hours later, his flawed Italian forgiven, he left the walls of the Vatican and was greeted by signs that called him "John." The pope who knows how to be a better father than a Roman.

John Paul, the 58-year-old former Cardinal Karol Wojtyla of Poland, rushed his delivery to the thousands attending his noon blessing and said: "I am always happy, so happy, when it rains."

The odd comment left the crowds puzzled as they stood in the sunshine.

After an instant of silence, the quick-thinking pope added: "But I'm even happier when it's sunny."

An avid ski fan, he wanted to see a televised ski race, or at least that was the reason Vatican sources gave for his quick speech and his views on the weather.

Wayne's Physique Saves Him

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — In his films, John Wayne is noted for his rugged physique and tough characters. THE MYSTERY HOUSE IN SANFORD

Mystery House Remains A Mystery

By JANE CASSELLERBY Herald Staff Writer

The Herald continues to be deluged with calls from readers who think they know the location of the "mystery house"—and the search goes on.

A Jan. 4 article in the Evening Herald told of 75-year-old Earl Townsend Ware's appeal for help in locating the old two-story house where he had lived with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William E. Murray in the early 1900s. Ware was here from California on his first visit since he left Sanford 70 years ago.

He had a photograph of his grandparents; his mother, Ella Mae Ware Babbit, sister, Stella Mae Babbit; himself; and two other youngsters in front of the house.

He estimated the photograph had been made in 1908 or 1907. Ware remembered that the five-piece had an arched well and a little creek running alongside the property.

One of the most frequently suggested houses is the one at 301 E. Fifth St., which still shows evidence of the fire that occurred there just before Thanksgiving. Philip Schumacher of 1402 Valencia Court East called to say: "Me and my friend Russell Green were looking last night and we think it is on Fifth and Palmetto because it has five windows, a big porch and a chimney."

Theresa Robey of 704 Palmetto Ave. was also certain that the Fifth Street location was the house she was looking for as was Bonner Carter of 300 Lake Mary Blvd.

However, on close examination the house was to have a gable roof while the house in Ware's photograph had a hip roof, the trim on the posts was different and the porch extended beyond the house on the right. Ware's house had a front porch and two side porches. But it did have five windows and a chimney.

An excited employee of Suncrete at 2701 W. Fifth St. called to say the office was located in the old house. The building had undergone a considerable facelifting recently and was modernized, but indeed it did have a hip roof the front porch. However, there were two chimneys instead of one and the windows were different.

Sharon Johnson dropped by to announce: "We think we've found the mystery house. It is the old Wilson place on Wayside Road west of I-4. It was sold by auction a few months ago and now it's posted with a fence around it. (Our photographer failed to locate that one)."

Mary Roland thought she recognized the photo as being the old Stemper home that was no longer there and had been replaced by apartments.

Beryl Dyal remembered a house at Oak and Fourth—since torn down that looked like the one in the photo.

"I remember walking by it one day to get some mail. A short while after she left the house, Mrs. Roland called to say she had hidden out to take a look for herself and discovered

Tragedy That Almost Was

Yes, it can happen here. And did. For what seems like forever, we had been reading almost daily of disaster after disaster throughout the nation when railroad cars filled with dangerous or lethal gas led the tracks causing fear, panic, or worse.

Well, it was Seminole County's turn just this past Friday and Saturday.

Fortunately, the worst was averted after a Seaboard Coastline train traveling from Groveland to Sanford with a tanker filled with 530 gallons of highly explosive liquid petroleum gas derailed around 11 p.m. Friday.

Early morning newspaper reports erroneously indicated that the tank was empty. Later, correct reports from authorities, however, revealed that indeed the stalled tanker car was filled with gas.

That explained why about 300 persons were evacuated from nearby residences in the area around State Road 424 and Douglas Road, Altamonte Springs, scene of the derailment.

This latest incident — one that touched us here at home — just underscores one more time the crying need for governments, from the federal level on down, to continue taking a long, close look at the manner in which these dangerous materials are cavalierly transported across the nation.

And the sooner the better. Sure, we were lucky this time. There was no explosion, no fire, no panic, no injuries, no death. But we can't help wondering: What, if...?

Sheriff Department Spokesman John Spolski summed up the situation succinctly: "If that tanker blows, we're all in a heap of trouble," he observed.

So, as we have a giant sigh of relief that all ended well, while taking note of the several complaints (expected in such circumstances) of confusion in the moments following the derailment, let us all count our blessings.

And let us be thankful that all in all the situation was handled superbly.

To the sheriff department volunteers, the members of the Altamonte Springs Fire Department, Pastor Burke Johnson who threw open the doors of his Rolling Hills Moravian Church to evacuees, the Red Cross and McDonald's who provided the necessities of life and survival, congratulations on a job well done.

So well done, in fact, that one of those evacuated — Harry McConnell of Niagara Falls who was staying at the Quality Inn North — was especially complimentary of the emergency personnel.

"If we have to go through this again," he reflected, "we're going to come (back) down here."

Well, Mr. McConnell: Thanks, but no thanks.

ANGLE-WALTERS New Kids In Town

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The new senators taking office for the 96th Congress constitute the largest freshman class in more than 30 years — and the most Republican.

The 20 newcomers, 9 Democrats and 11 Republicans, are probably a shade more conservative than the senators they replaced but only a few of them fell into any neat ideological category.

As a group, this year's class is remarkably youthful; eight are under 40, and two others just a couple years over. They are also well-educated; all have at least some college training and three have at least some graduate training.

The Senate used to be regarded as the top of the heap for elective politics — short, of course, of the presidency. And indeed, the newcomers include seven former House members and three former governors. But five of the 20 freshmen — Sens. Rudy Boschwitz and David Durenberger, both R-Minn.; Bill Bradley, D-N.J.; Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H.; and John Warner, R-Va. — have never held elective office.

Few, if any, of the new members are likely to find a permanent home in the Senate; the casual rate for incumbents is just too high these days. Although less than 5 percent of the House members seeking re-election in 1978 were defeated, 10 of the 23 senators running for another term were beaten.

David Durenberger, the Republican elected to Hubert Humphrey's old seat, was the first of the new senators to be sworn in but it didn't do him much good financially.

Durenberger took the oath of office Nov. 5, just two days after the election, but was told neither he nor his new staff could be paid until Minnesota's state canvassing board certified his election victory over Democrat Robert Stortz.

The board met Nov. 21, issued the certificate Nov. 28 and mailed it to the Secretary of the Senate. But it seems Minn. Gov. Rudy Perpich had failed to sign the certificate, so back it went — while Durenberger and staff missed their first two-week paycheck.

Perpich signed the certificate was mailed again to the Secretary of the Senate, and then it was found that the state seal was missing. Off it went to Minnesota once more, to be duly sealed and returned on Dec. 18 as Durenberger and staff missed a second two-week paycheck.

By this time the new senator had gone home to Minnesota for Christmas. Just as a third payday was looming Dec. 20, Senate officials found Durenberger had never signed the payroll oath — as the papers were telecopied to Minnesota, signed and notarized there and returned — by Federal Express — just in the nick of time. If they had waited for the post office to deliver, the senator and his aides would probably still be broke.

JACK ANDERSON

Abbie Hoffman: A Man On The Run

WASHINGTON — The aging activist, once a headline figure who showed defiance at the police, is now on the run from the police. He talked to us about the 1960s and the shaggy-haired generation, with flashes of his old wit. He also spoke about the 1970s and his flight from the past, with traces of sadness. Once he had to choose bleak tears.

What we had here was a failure to communicate. Anyone being called or trying to call The Herald offices last week might have been subjected to some strange conversations. For my part I would like to apologize.

VIEWPOINT Help For The Disabled

In recent years there's been an upsurge of attention to the problem of the handicapped. Their rights have been affirmed by Congress and, after a struggle, the Health, Education and Welfare Department has issued rules supposed to put the nation's handicapped on equal footing with the non-handicapped.

But that, unfortunately, isn't saying much. You can put words on paper but unless the folks in charge dedicate themselves through their attitudes and actions to making the words mean something, very little will change.

That's the way it is, so far, with employing the handicapped. You can take Paul Hippolitus' word for that. Hippolitus is a job adviser to the President's Committee for Employment of the Handicapped, set up by President Truman in 1947.

"We're now guaranteeing the employment rights of the handicapped and employers are looking for handicapped workers," he says. "But the REAL problem is that handicapped workers are not coming out of the system. Training and preparation haven't caught up with the opportunities."

"The handicapped" is a phrase covering the deaf, blind, epileptic, mentally retarded; people who have lost limbs, who are confined to wheelchairs; people with speech impairments; diabetes, rheumatoid arthritis, paraplegia, and on and on.

In 1970 the Census Bureau made a partial count and concluded that one of every 11 non-institutionalized Americans between the ages of 16 and 64 was handicapped. The only other solid figure comes from HEW's Bureau of Rehabilitation for the Handicapped, which estimates there are 7 million Americans below the age of 18 who are handicapped.

The younger handicapped need the most help, right now. They can be trained and can become productive citizens. But there are a lot of school officials who are failing these younger handicapped persons. The reason, basically, is that it takes extra money and extra trouble to work with the handicapped.

Dorothy Dean, director of an organization called "Closer Look," says that youngsters who are trained, starting from infancy, to cope with their handicaps can "prove to be real talents to our economy."

Ma. Dean helped found "Closer Look" in mid-1970. Its function is to provide information to help parents in educating their handicapped children for the real world of work. "Closer Look" is a project of the Parents' Campaign for Handicapped Children, which estimates there are $400,000 a year in support from the Bureau of Education for the Handicapped.

It receives about 1,000 letters a week and responds to all of them, giving both general information about aid available to handicapped children and specific state and local information. Information from "Closer Look" is free. Write to 1201 16th Street, Washington, D.C. 20036, or phone 202-633-4186. Your packet will include a list of more specialized organizations that can help with your child's specific problem.

interviewing fellow reporters more than we did public officials. One case in point: I had placed a call to a local mayor. In the midst of one question, a puzzled voice began saying, 'hello, hello.' "Mr. Mayor?" said I. "What?" "Oh, I thought we had a disturbance on our line," I explained. "Who is this?" the voice demanded. "What do you mean, who is this?" I said. "Exactly what I said," retorted the voice. "Who is this?" "This is ridiculous," I commented. "Don't get cute," the voice replied. "I didn't mean that I'm ridiculous. I mean this conversation is ridiculous," I said. "I agree. Who is this?" the voice said. "What do you mean. We were just talking. You had called me by name. Did you have a mental lapse?" I asked. "No I didn't have a mental lapse," said the voice, "and what do you mean I called you by name? Who is this?"

McEnroe Sweeps Masters Crown

NEW YORK (UPI) — For the curly-haired kid from New York, it was nearly a quarter of a million dollar weekend. If you're ready to believe him, though, the title he won, the international prestige he will receive, and the general respect he has earned, are more important than the money.

John McEnroe, all of 19 and a professional only since last June, completed a fairy tale week Sunday when he outdistanced the older, wiser and far more seasoned Arthur Ashe to win the final of the $400,000 Grand Prix Masters 7-5, 7-5.

Only hours earlier, he learned with Peter Fleming to win the doubles championship, and this title came only a week after he and Fleming captured the world doubles in London.

The singles victory in the world's richest tennis tournament was worth $100,000, his share of the doubles spoils was $30,000, and McEnroe also was the recipient of an additional $18,000 bonus money for his performance on the Grand Prix circuit last year.

Yet, when he was asked about the money before his match with Ashe, McEnroe said, "I'd rather win the title, but if you win the title the money comes with it."

As important as winning the Masters was the way he did it. McEnroe, who had run over Ashe 6-3, 6-1 only four days earlier during the round-robin phase of the tournament, had to struggle for two hours and 34 minutes Sunday, staging one comeback after another before achieving victory.

McEnroe virtually threw away the first set when a triple set point, he double faulted three consecutive times, eventually dropping his only set of the tournament when he won the tie-breaker 7-5.

Then, after he evened the match by breaking service in the fourth game of the second set, thanks to two double faults by Ashe, McEnroe fell behind 1-1 in the deciding set.

In the 10th game, Ashe had double match point. ("I was thinking of my runner-up speech," McEnroe said later), and that's when the only controversy arose. On the second match point, Ashe returned a service for an apparent winner, but the serve was ruled a fault.

McEnroe managed to hold his service, then won the next two games for the match, giving him five victories in his last nine tournaments.

Super Bowl A Tossup?

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — The most impartial witness you can find in football are the scouts. They have no ax to grind. When their teams are not involved, they don't care who wins. Jim Rorer is a man like that. He's strictly neutral. His team isn't involved in Super Bowl XIII.

Rorer is chief scout and personnel coordinator with the New York Jets, one of five teams in the NFL who met both Dallas and Pittsburgh this season, and he followed and scouted both the Cowboys and Steelers.

When it comes to evaluating next Sunday's Super Bowl competitors, Rorer says you can flip a coin, they're that close. And if you're going to the game or plan to watch it on TV, he adds, keep an eye on Pittsburgh's offense.

"That could be the key to the game," Rorer says. "The determining factor I think will be how well Pittsburgh can run the football. If Dallas can limit Pittsburgh's rush, that will force the Steelers to throw the ball more, and that would play right into the Cowboys' hands because one of their greatest strengths is their pass game."

The basic difference in the teams, says Rorer, is their style of attack. "Pittsburgh is more physical, offensively and defensively," he reminds. "Dallas goes in more for finesse. The Cowboys try to finesse you by shifting so much. They try for a mismatch right there at the line of scrimmage, feeling if you miss by half a step they have that much of an edge on you. Otherwise, most of the matchups are pretty even. If the two teams lined up shoe to shoe and there were no other outside factors involved, the end result probably would be nothing-nothing."

But it can't possibly wind up that way even if the Cowboys and Steelers have to keep hammering away at each other all day and all night in the Orange Bowl, where it'll do both down to which of the two quarterbacks has the better game.

"He hasn't changed much since I first met him, except to get better," says Rorer. "From the first day he came out for football, he had a strong arm and good velocity when he threw. You could see the leadership qualities in him when he was at Navy and they have carried into professional football."

Terry Bradshaw is more physical than Staubach, Rorer says. "On occasion, he'll still challenge the tackler. Roger doesn't, but that isn't a negative point against him. He's smart. He'll go left for the sideline more often than Terry will, preferring to lose the battle but win the war. That doesn't mean Roger won't run the ball if he gets the chance or feels he has to. If push comes to shove, he and Terry will both go for it, knowing they have all winter and summer to get well."

"Pittsburgh's defense is always doing something different," Rorer says. "You'll see Joe Greene and Jack Lambert fooling around the middle, jumping around or doing something to confuse the offensive blocking patterns. They have a way of forcing the other teams to do something it doesn't want to do."

"The quarterback sees something like that and he has to change the play. That causes indecision, and you know what that does." I asked Rorer if he'd pick a winner, and he laughed and said no because the Cowboys and Steelers are too evenly matched.

The bookmakers, who have made Pittsburgh a slight favorite, feel pretty much the same way. Brad in mind, though, they made the Steelers only seven-point choices over the Oilers last week and you remember how that one came out.

MRS. LINDSEY NELSON ALLEN

Miss Williams, Lindsey N. Allen Exchange Vows

Deborah Lee Williams and Lindsey Nelson Allen were married Dec. 30 at Holy Cross Episcopal Church. Rev. Leroy D. Soper, rector, solemnized the 4 p.m., double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Williams, 1920 Park Ave., Sanford. The bridegroom is the son of Captain and Mrs. N.W. Allen, 2432 Foxwood Road, South, Orange Park.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose for her vows a formal gown of sheer silk crepe with Venice lace lavishly applied on the bodice and sheer pleated Juliet sleeves. The skirt and voluminous chapel train were edged with pleated ruffling.

Her three-tiered lace-edged nylon illusion waist length veil fell softly from a lace cap matching her gown. She carried a French hand bouquet of white roses, tube roses, baby's breath and greenery.

Frances W. Riser of Altamonte Springs, served her sister as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Sheralynn W. Morgan, sister of the bride, Jacksonville; Mary Beth Donaldson, cousin of the bride, Sanford; Mary S. Young of Jacksonville; Cindy A. Mosher, sister-in-law from Connecticut; and Christie Barney, niece of the bride, Sanford. The junior bridesmaid was Michele Morris, the bride's niece.

The attendants were dressed identically in mauve colored gowns, empire styled, with pleated skirts and caplet collars. They wore matching halos of baby's breath in their hair and carried French hand bouquets of mixed flowers in shades of mauve, pink and lavender.

Fred W. Allen of Jacksonville, served his brother as best man. Usher-groomsman were Joe Newman, Tampa; John Heelan, Columbus, Ohio; George Drake, Princeton, N.J.; Dave Miles, Orlando; and Robert T. Williams, Sanford.

After the ceremony, the parents of the bride entertained at a reception at Sanford Garden Center.

Following a beach wedding trip, the newlyweds are making their home in Orlando where the bride is a legal secretary and the bridegroom is an accountant.

Kicking Habit Easier Said Than Done

So You Want To Stop Smoking?

By DORIS DIETRICH OURSELVES Editor

The surgeon general's report released last week on the dangers of smoking was a little late. I beat him and his lengthy report to the draw, by about a week.

I am a periodic non-smoker, and Thursday was my seventh day—sans cigarettes—for the umpteenth time.

So the best way to stop smoking is just quit, huh?

Just try it. It's easier said than done.

It's like the physician who censures his patients for smoking while he blows smoke in their faces.

Non-smokers are quick to condemn the smokers. They cannot be sympathetic because they have never been caught in the clutches of the filthy weeds.

And by the way, how can any man really relate to labor pains? Wait until you have been in any given situation before looking down your nose at a victim.

From my experience in the battle with tobacco, the only way to defeat the deadly enemy is by completely ignoring that it exists. In other words, quit turkey.

Don't expect the desire just to go away, once you've made up your mind to pack away the pack. Sometimes, the craving is so severe, a person would swear his fire-engine-like nerves were dangling on the outside of his body, and that a smoke is the only solution to survival.

I once knew a lady who smoked one cigarette every night before going to bed. She said her husband would have had a fit had he known of her "little secret."

"It made me feel so wantonly womanly—just like a hussey," she confided.

Like other reformed smokers, I, too, take on airs of superiority, when I kick nicotine for a few days. It's really quite an accomplishment—like a kid ditching a security blanket.

People who diet, don't give up eating, and people who drink too much, don't give up all beverages.

But the smokers—forget it. Some say it takes a lot of will power. I disagree. It takes more like "want power"—to want to quit—or "won't power"—just don't.

I suppose that anyone who has quit smoking has some sort of program—a sort of a padded cell, complete edition, or a strait jacket.

Once I make up my mind to part company with the slikey, poisonous cylinder, I resort to chomping, chewing, sucking and cracking hard candy like a ravenous ill-mannered animal. Thoughts of the money saved justify some of the suffering. Once I quit smoking, I usually go hog wild on a shopping spree, and rationalize "this is my smoking money."

I recall several years ago when I went on a "no-smoking" kick, how dreadful it was. I was living alone, and it was late at night. I had been off cigarettes exactly 28 days.

I went outside, searched the garbage cans and looked all over the car for a cigarette or butt that may have made its way under the seat.

The craving was so severe that I sat at the typewriter and wrote my tear-jerking obituary—that I had died because I quit smoking. I usually start back unintentionally by reaching for a cigarette when a pack is available. Some time ago, I had been a non-smoker for over a year, and while waiting in the auto dealer's office for my car to be serviced, there was a package of Viceroy in plain view—I reached over, and that one cigarette resulted in stopping about two blocks away from a carton.

What are the merits of not smoking? I usually start back seriously. I feel better, breathe better, eat better and circulate better when I don't pack again in a few minutes. I suppose if I keep off of lung weeds, I may not die of lung cancer. But in the meantime, my teeth will probably all fall out from constantly crunching on the hard, sweet candy.

Please Call This Pastor 'Reverend'

DEAR ABBY: I take strong exception to the writer who took you to task for addressing a clergyman as "Reverend So and So."

She wrote, "Reverend is an old-fashioned, meaning honorable. You may say, 'The Reverend Mr. Blank,' or 'The Reverend Dr. Blank,' but, Abby, please do not address a clergyman as 'Reverend.' Anybody." It's simply not done!

How wrong! As a minister of the United Methodist Church I have always been addressed as "Reverend"—same as my father and mother, and I love the I would object vigorously were members of my congregation to address me as "Mister."

Our Episcopal friends address their priest "Right Reverend." I maintain that common usage by countless thousands makes it OK to call a pastor "Reverend."

If it's correct for our Catholic friends to call their priest "Father," or for our Jewish friends to call their clergyman "Rabbi," then it should be OK for my parishioners (and others) to call me "Reverend." Sign me.

REVEREND H. IN TUCSON

DEAR REVEREND H.: The English language purists will probably shoot me down, but I should have added, "However, employers must ask the same question of men applicants in order to stay within the law. Since that is a difficult rule to follow, most personnel directors now advise that questions about family plans not be asked."

DEAR L: My response was valid as far as it went, but I should have added, "However, employers must ask the same question of men applicants in order to stay within the law. Since that is a difficult rule to follow, most personnel directors now advise that questions about family plans not be asked."

DEAR LOLLIE: Let him look. When he's through looking, he's through.
