Teen arraignment set for 1993

A Casselberry teen-ager accused of arson and burglary in the $4 million fire at Tuskawilla Middle School will not be arraigned until next year. Assistant State Attorney Ralph Eriksson said Tuesday.

Eriksson said the state is considering trying the Casselberry teen-ager as an adult.

"We're looking into the possibility of doing a waiver hearing, asking the court to allow us to consider adult sanctions. That's the step that has to be taken first," he said.

The state cannot automatically try a juvenile in adult court but must first seek a judicial hearing on the question, Eriksson said.

Two other suspects have also been arrested in connection with the fire. A 17-year-old boy and a 15-year-old boy have been taken into custody.

The fire engulfed the school on April 11, 1991. The three suspects were arrested early this month.

Christmas spirit on Mall

SANFORD — The Christmas spirit will be felt at Market on the Mall this Saturday, when the area resounds to the familiar "ho, ho, ho," and the carols of the Holy Cross Episcopal Church Choir.

Susan Owens, Market chairman, said Santa will also be on hand, arriving around 10:30 a.m. to hear how good the girls and boys may have been, and what they might want for Christmas.

"Talk to the Plants" will again provide fresh plants and herbs for the season, and hand-crafted gift items will be available in the various craft stalls.

The Christmas carol singing by the choir will begin at 10 a.m.

Market on the Mall, located at the intersection of Magnolia Avenue and East First Street, is sponsored by the Sanford Historic Downtown Waterfront Association. The Market on the Mall will operate Saturday from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m.

Doctor: Miller sane

Wife was shot due to rage, not insanity

By GEORGE DUNCAN
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — David Miller may have been in a rage when he killed his wife in September 1991 but he knew what he was doing and was legally sane, a psychiatrist testified Tuesday.

Dr. Martin Lazoritz told jurors that Miller knew the nature and quality of his actions. Miller may have been depressed and did suffer from a narcissistic personality but he knew right and wrong, the psychiatrist testified.

Lazoritz was called by prosecutors to rebut the testimony of Dr. Michael Gutman, a defense witness who said Miller was legally insane at the time of the crime. Gutman said Miller shot his wife while he was in a "trance-like" state.

Lazoritz said that to attribute a trance-like state to Miller was not reasonable. After an argument with his wife, Miller may have reacted with rage but he was not suffering from temporary insanity, he said.

Miller is accused of first degree murder in the slaying of his wife at a Sanford storage facility last year. He is pleading temporary insanity.

Gutman had also testified Miller was suffering from a major depression and had a narcissistic personality.

Lazoritz basically agreed with that diagnosis but said the depression was not emotionally crippling. Miller could function in his day-to-day activities. Even if the defendant had talked and written about suicide, that was not evidence to lead someone to conclude he experienced a "trance-like" state when he shot his wife, Lazoritz said. Many people make a passing, or even written, reference to suicide without carrying out their statements, he noted.

The defense had rested its case when prosecutors called Lazoritz to the stand.

To back up the defense contention that Miller was in a major depressive state and even suicidal, Defense Attorney Leon Check put Miller's sister on the stand who told jurors her brother delivered a packet of letters to her shortly before the crime.

Included in the packet was an envelope with the words "Burial Instructions" on it. Miller also gave her the suit he wanted to be buried in, she testified. She added that Miller also gave her his will during the brief visit to her house.

Check said he had recently discovered the packet of letters, prompting an initial objection from prosecutors. However, Judge Newman Brock ruled the defense had informed prosecutors of the evidence as soon as he had become aware of it and allowed the letters into evidence.

Testimony in the case may end today. Closing arguments are expected to begin Thursday morning, then the case will be given to the jury.

Miller faces life imprisonment if convicted.

Leo Club at Lakeview collects 17,000 items

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Learning to help others is of primary importance to the students at Lakeview Middle School.

To prove that point, the Leo Club (a youth organization of the Lion's Club) rallied the other students at the school to collect non-perishable food items for the needy in Central Florida.

With shopping carts donated for the purpose by the Publix store in Sanford, the members of the club went from class to class collecting the cans and boxes of food that the students had brought in.

In all, 1,700 items were brought in and were bagged to be brought to the WESH-Channel 2 collection headquarters at Goodings in Casselberry this morning.

Publix also donated a bale of shopping bags for carrying the food.

"They have been very excited about this effort," Debbie Owens, Leo Club sponsor at the school, said. "They seem to understand the needs of the community."

The food was collected over the course of 13 days, ending yesterday.

The students leader from the club were interviewed live on television when they made their donation this morning.

"I'm very pleased with all the work they put into this," Owens said. "They deserve the recognition."

Error costs county $$ in tourist tax

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A paperwork error will result in the loss of $17,000 to $20,000 in Seminole County tourist tax revenues.

Because the county attorney's office failed to complete a paper routing form and the clerk's office failed to read the tax-increase ordinance, local hotels, motels and other short-term rentals failed to begin collecting the additional penny tax on Dec. 1. County commissioners passed an emergency ordinance last night extending the start-up date to Jan. 1.

"It won't result in an extension of the bonds or delay the process," said County Manager Ron Rabun. "I'm not looking to blame the county attorney's office or the clerk's office. It won't have a large impact. There will be an impact, but not a large one."

On Oct. 13, county commissioners voted to raise the tourism tax from 2 to 3 cents on Dec. 1 to generate up to an additional $325,000 yearly to repay bonds to be sold for the U.S. Soccer Federation training facility at Sylvan Lake Park. Commissioners approved the sale of $2.9 million in bonds Dec. 8.

After the tax increase was approved, the Florida Department of State was to be notified of the ordinance adopting the tax increase so it could be recorded in official records. The Florida Department of Revenue was to be notified of the tax increase so it could notify hoteliers in time to begin collecting the tax.

All well and good.

About a week ago, county tourism director Jack Wert called a few hotels to see if DOR had notified them to begin collecting the additional penny on short-term stays and found they had not. Wert said he and county attorneys began checking and found DOR had not been notified.

Rabun said a paper routing form, attached to formal documents indicated the ordinance should be sent to DOS after commissioners approve it and commission chairman Bob Sturm signed it. But the routing form, completed in the county attorney's office, did not indicate it should also be routed to DOR, said Rabun.

After the ordinance was approved and signed, it was sent on to the clerk's office for disbursement. Rabun said apparently, a clerk followed the directions on the routing form and sent the ordinance off to DOS.

But the routing form did not indicate a copy should be sent to DOR, so none was sent, despite the following wording in Section 4, of the ordinance: "A certified copy of this ordinance shall be sent to the Department of Revenue, State of Florida, within ten (10) days after enactment."

"I guess somebody in the clerk's office didn't read the ordinance," said Rabun.

Wert said the lost revenue will have little impact on the training facility project.

"It would have been nice to have it, but it won't affect anything," said Wert.

Purdy promises change for democrats

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — James Purdy promises to bring change to Seminole County Democrats.

Purdy, the county party's first black leader, says his election last week marks the main message he wants to impart to the residents of Seminole County. With that message, Purdy said he will turn potential voters to his party with that message.

"I want us to convey the sincere desire that the voters at large understand that the Democratic Party is the party of inclusion, rather than exclusion," said Purdy.

65. "I can't think of one thing that Bush and Quayle did because it was the right thing to do, rather than the politically correct thing to do. If you have a good message, people will come to you."

Purdy has served as the state committeeman for the Seminole County Democratic Executive Committee for about four years. He moved to his home in The Crossings 6½ years ago after retiring from a 24-year career with the Veteran's Administration, including 11½ years as director of the New Jersey VA regional office.

Noting his historic position, Purdy said blacks and other minorities can gain many of the benefits of American society if they register and vote.

"If you participate in the political process, then you will get your share," said Purdy. "But you must earn the right to complain. You will not have the right to complain unless you register to vote and participate."

After moving to Lake Mary with his wife Dorothy, Purdy said he promptly registered to vote and immediately thereafter, began attending DEC meetings.

"I just went and didn't say anything," he said. "I must've gone for a year without saying a word. What I noticed was it was not effective. I didn't know why, but it

St. Lucia Festival a Sanford tradition

The 4th annual St. Lucia Festival this past weekend was another big success. Sanford is becoming widely known for this unique observance.

Only a few cities around the state and nation pay tribute to their ancestors and founders in such an elaborate style. Sanford's celebration, which also helped usher in the holiday season, should be a point of pride when citizens talk to friends and families in other areas of the state and nation.

Thousands enjoyed the festival and all of its features including the arrival of Miss St. Lucia in the Viking ship along the lakefront; the festive parade that featured both holiday and traditional displays and participants; the holiday lights of the boat parade Sunday night; and all of the other festivities that kept visitors entertained throughout the weekend.

Needless to say, the influx of visitors to the downtown area helped the economy in more ways than just the immediate spending of money for food, gifts, gasoline, and in some cases motel rooms.

It helped to create an improved image of Sanford to those who may have recently moved to Central Florida, and others who attended the festival for the first time. They undoubtedly will be back, and hopefully bring more of their friends with them. It can only help in the city's future.

When something big goes over so successfully, the people who planned and executed it need to be given due notice of our appreciation for their planning and work.

Of most prominence, is the St. Lucia Festival Committee, which is headquartered at the First Street Gallery, 203 E. First Street, in downtown Sanford. The officers, committee chairpersons and membership deserve the lion's share of our thanks.

There were many others however. Those who did the physical work in setting up the displays, those who participated in the parade, planners, organizers, workers, runners, phone-callers, and probably a hundred other people.

The success should not only be credited to the Festival Committee, but to everyone involved, and everyone who attended. No event would be successful if no one came, and no large turnout would be successful if people hadn't worked so diligently.

It's time to give each other a round of applause for a festival well-done. And we suggest, when visiting in downtown Sanford, residents as well as visitors stop at the First Street Gallery and extend appreciation.

The thanks received this year, will undoubtedly give support for possibly an even larger St. Lucia Festival next year.

With such an excellent presentation and celebration, the spirit of St. Lucia, as well as Santa Claus, will continue to live on in Sanford for many years to come.

Beckner says thanks, supports Lon Howell

My first campaign has passed, and I wanted to take this opportunity to thank the voters of Sanford for their support of my candidacy for Mayor, 8 city commission election.

I have a strong passion to make Sanford the best it can be. Clearly, the 30 percent of Sanford's citizens who voted for me on Dec. 8 believed I was the best alternative.

During the course of the campaign I came to realize that Lon Howell and I share the belief in Sanford's future and the critical issues its citizens face. I now ask Sanford voters to support Lon Howell on Dec. 22.

I believe we are left with a clear choice for Sanford's City Commissioner. Lon Howell has proven his commitment to the city, and is the more knowledgeable. He has a clear plan for the future. Lon Howell is the clear choice, and I will ask my supporters to help him during the runoff.

Give every instance of staying involved in Sanford and community. Again, I want to thank the voters of Sanford for their support. Thank you all for your work to make Sanford a better place.

Happy Christmas and happy holidays.

Demographic Santa arrives for 1993

There is some little-noted holiday good news for deficit-fighters, businesses, America and President-elect Clinton. It can even help future presidents who may seek to avoid Clinton's current, demeaning task of "picking a Cabinet that looks like America."

The happy tidings come from new Census Bureau "most likely" projections, which show American population growing 133 million by the year 2050, and still climbing moderately. The previous projection had shown a growth of 49 million, at a plateau, and with decline in sight.

That's an extra 84 million Americans who will be coming on stream - an amount equal to the current population of Germany! - yielding a total population of 383 million.

The earlier study used 1986 data; the new one uses 1991 data. Modest recent changes in behavior, law and medicine account for the differences. There is a lesson: Small changes, person-by-person, extended over time, change us in big ways.

Fertility patterns have changed. Almost alone among nations, America is having more babies than previously. From 1973 to 1987 the Total Fertility Rate had stayed at about 1.8 children per woman, a rate at which a society ultimately loses population. Recently, the TFR climbed to almost 2.1, at which level a population remains stable over time, not counting immigration.

(Japanese fertility has recently fallen from 1.8 to 1.5.)

So, the "Birth Dearth," chronicled by this author, has apparently been avoided in America, for now. The reason is a happy one: Women and men in their 30s are deciding to give parenthood a chance.

Immigration has changed, too. A 1990 immigration law was quietly passed, allowing in more legal, from everywhere, with an extra bonus for Europeans and people with skills (good news). However, we have been less successful in stopping illegal immigration (bad news). This means our annual net immigration rises from 800,000 to 880,000, of which almost 80 percent is legal.

In 2050, because of immigration patterns, 83 percent of the population will be whites of non-Hispanic descent, compared to 76 percent today.

Finally, life expectancy went up, from 75.3 years to 75.8 years. The new report is the first to feature the effects of the AIDS epidemic. Modern medicine, on balance, is outrunning our newest plague.

What does it mean? Among other things that it will be easier to square our financial accounts.

Why? Two major reasons. Because most of the new 84 million people will be arriving here young: They are babies and/or immigrants (median age 25). And because much of America's debt, budget deficit and due bills come from fixed costs.

Social Security is more complicated. It is in surplus now. It will go into deficit when Baby Boomers reach retirement age next century. But the immigrants and babies arriving in this decade will be around then to help pay the pension freight. All this reduces the need to either cut benefits or raise taxes, making Clinton's task easier.

The happy tidings come from new Census Bureau 'most likely' projections.

Women address safety issues

BOSTON - "This is what I am getting my daughter for Christmas," says my friend, placing a newspaper ad on the table that we share for our annual holiday lunch.

The ad contains no teddy bears or Barbie. Her daughter, like mine, is grown. Rather it shows a young woman bent in a broken car in an isolated area. The model, with an anxious look on her face, is urgently crying into a car phone. "Please hurry, it's getting dark."

My friend's gift idea is, of course, the phone. She wants to give her twentysomething daughter - the same child who once longed for a Cabbage Patch doll and then yearned for a pair of silver earrings - a haulie of added security.

I understand this choice, although my friend's taste usually runs more to funky hats than to hardware. Car phones themselves, once sold as a basic for work, are now featured as a dress-for-security accessory. They are sold for protection.

But this afternoon as I pass the ad back, it occurs to me that her worries about safety are not seasonal. Nor are they restricted to the car and its occupants. Indeed I share them.

I tell my friend about a conversation I had with my own daughter, like the wanderer, had just called to describe in detail her new apartment. I, the wanderer, had asked for the most important detail: "Is it safe?"

She had talked about cabinets in the kitchen and curtains on the windows. I had asked about alarms on the door and grates on the windows.

The two of us, mother and daughter, stopped and calculated the hidden "safety tax" on her last two apartments. Hadn't the difference between pretty safe and not-so-safe places been about $100 a month? Wasn't this a sort of gender tax?

Now, my friend and I go on. We tabulate the everyday costs of being female and sometimes afraid. Do we count the extra look on the friend's door? Self-defense lessons for mother? Cuban pepper sauce for a third? Do we include the fines we took taxis instead of streetcars?

What is the price list for other women? How many jobs are passed up because they are in places or at hours considered unsafe? How many places do women not go to - movies, dinner, friends - on low money nights, out of how much anxiety? And how do we estimate this cost of safety?

The world is not always safe for men either. We know that males who are young and black are at the greatest risk of criminal harm. But we also know that feeling unsafe - at home, at work, on the streets - parades women's lives most pervasively.

Last fall, when two groups - the Ms. Foundation and the Center for Policy Alternatives - surveyed women across race and class and age, they found that worries about personal security were second only to worries about economic security. Indeed the two worries were often connected.

In public, activists and policy-makers still tend to divide such concerns into their parts: Rape, sexual harassment, battering, crime. But add them together and give them one proper name - personal safety - and a quarter of all women will admit that this is their top concern. Some, poor Latina women in particular, worry more about safety than even about paying their rent.

This is one woman's issue that can cut across all lines because it cuts across all lives. It can link together a woman with the cellular phone on her Christmas list and the woman who cannot leave her housing project apartment after dark. They share the gender tax and, often, the fear.

My friend and I finish our pre-Christmas lunch in a not-so-festive mood. We are women who feel confident at work but tense in an empty city parking lot. We know others who have broken the glass ceiling, but feel afraid - and sometimes ashamed of feeling afraid - of loneliness in the dark. We have raised daughters to be strong and yet daughters who must beware.

Now we are learning that women cannot feel free unless they feel safe. Trying to communicate that message will take much more power than a cellular phone.

Trying to communicate that message will take much more power than a cellular phone.

Aristide may have ordered murder

WASHINGTON - The results of a recent polygraph test secretly administered by the FBI have apparently corroborated previously published reports alleging that Haitian President Jean Bertrand Aristide ordered the murder of a jailed political opponent on the night his regime was toppled by a military coup.

An FBI polygraph expert flew to Port-au-Prince last Sept. 1 on a Hercules C-130 to interview the former head of Port-au-Prince's National Penitentiary, Capt. Stagne Doura, according to well-placed sources in the United States and Haiti. On Sept. 2, Doura passed a polygraph to determine the veracity of his account of the murder. The information was passed on to the State Department, where it is said to remain highly classified.

A polygraph isn't conclusive proof of guilt or innocence, but the growing credibility of the story could alter the dynamics of the ongoing Haitian political stalemate that has resulted in punishing economic sanctions against the tiny nation.

Charges that Aristide may have had a role in the murder of Roger Lafontant - the former Interior Minister under former Haitian dictator "Papa Doc" Duvalier - first surfaced when Haitian military officials unveiled Lafontant in his bloodstained pajamas to the press in the days following the coup. At the time, Lafontant had been jailed for leading a failed coup attempt against the Haitian government in January 1991.

Though few mourned the death of the man who had terrorized Haiti for years through the death squads of the Tontons Macoute, a dispute instantly erupted over the circumstances surrounding Lafontant's murder. At a post-coup press conference, Gen. Raoul Cedras read a report authored by Doura which alleged that the order to execute Lafontant had come from Aristide on the night of the coup. At the time, Aristide's prime minister, Rene Preval, disclaimed the claims as a "false declaration."

According to Doura's Oct. 2, 1991, written statement, around midnight Sept. 29-30 he received a call "coming directly from the President Jean-Bertrand Aristide demanding that the undersigned arrange to proceed with the execution of prisoner Roger Lafontant." Doura recounted that he asked Aristide to repeat the order, pretending to not understand. At that point, Doura claims he was implicitly threatened by Aristide who told him: "It's either you or him."

Doura claims he then briefed the Haitian chief of police on the orders and explained the situation to two or three soldiers present that night. "One of the soldiers finally agreed to execute the order received from the President," the statement reads. The soldier accused of actually killing Lafontant was subsequently jailed.

An arrest warrant for Aristide in connection with the Lafontant murder was issued in Haiti on Nov. 8, 1991. Aristide by then was in exile and the charges seemed irrelevant. By last summer, however, sources say U.S. government officials decided to conduct an inquiry, and arranged for the jailer to take a lie detector test.

The Bush administration is apparently intent on keeping the polygraph results secret. A State Department spokesman refused to comment, and an FBI spokesman told our associate, Dean Boyd, "We neither comment, nor release information, nor deny that we are concerned in Haiti."

Repeated calls to Aristide's ambassador in the United States went unanswered, but a spokesperson at the Haitian embassy argued, "passing a polygraph doesn't mean anything."

A polygraph isn't conclusive proof of guilt or innocence, but the growing credibility of the story could alter the dynamics of the ongoing Haitian political stalemate that has resulted in punishing economic sanctions against the tiny nation.

International effort needed to develop pneumonia vaccine

By BRENDA C. COLEMAN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO — A type of bacteria that kills more than a million youngsters a year will be stopped only through an international effort to create a new vaccine, studies suggest.

The bacteria — streptococcus pneumoniae — usually invades children's lungs and causes pneumonia. But it also may attack the brain lining and cause meningitis, or infect the eyes, the blood, the skin or elsewhere.

Adults can be immunized with an existing vaccine, but it doesn't work on the immature immune systems of children under 2, the germ's most frequent and vulnerable victims.

Complicating the picture is the existence of 84 subtypes of the bacteria; only a fraction of them can be covered by a single vaccine, said Dr. Robert S. Baltimore, associate professor of pediatrics and of epidemiology and public health at Yale University School of Medicine.

Different subtypes are more prevalent in different countries, as shown by two new reports — one from Finland and one from Israel — in today's issue of The Journal of the American Medical Association.

"A vaccine that might contain (subtypes) for Finland might not be appropriate for Israel," said Baltimore, author of an editorial in JAMA calling for international cooperation in developing a new vaccine.

No one knows exactly how many U.S. youngsters die each year from

One of things I'm calling for is studies of the quality of those in JAMA to be done in other countries around the world

pneumococcal illnesses, as they are called, because they are not required to be reported, Baltimore said.

Previous studies have found U.S. illness rates for children under 2 ranging from 26 per 100,000 to as high as 1,195 per 100,000, the latter among Alaskan natives.

"One of things I'm calling for is studies of the quality of those in JAMA to be done in other countries around the world," Baltimore said. He said that was the only way for vaccine developers to get the necessary information about which subtypes to fight in which locations.

The technology exists for developing an effective childhood vaccine, he said. Pneumococcal bacteria can dwell in the throats of healthy humans.

They are usually passed from person to person by coughing or sneezing. They become dangerous when they invade the tissues.

They kill more than a million children under 5 each year worldwide through pneumonia cases alone, previous research has shown.

Clinton promises quick action on economic woes

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — President-elect Clinton promises to get to work fast on the country's economic woes with a double-barreled program featuring stepped-up spending on investment and credible efforts to cut the budget deficit.

But beyond those vague goals, there are still plenty of details to be worked out.

At a news conference Tuesday night, Clinton repeated his pledge to introduce his economic program right after he takes office Jan. 20. But he said he would delay until the last possible moment decisions on the exact makeup of the program.

The advice he received from two days of nonstop public discussions was split on the question of whether the economy needed a quick-fix stimulus program of increased government spending and business tax breaks next year even though such a program would worsen the already huge federal deficit.

Some economists said they still believed a stimulus program ranging from $20 billion to $60 billion was needed because economic growth was likely to remain so sluggish that the unemployment rate will be stuck at high levels.

But other analysts said Clinton should shelve the short-term stimulus package because by the time it gets enacted it won't be needed and it will only hurt the economy by driving up interest rates.

Clinton did not tip his hand on this debate, saying only, "If we decide to go for a stimulus package to modify this fiscal year's budget, I will make the decision on how much as late as I can based on the latest available evidence."

Aides said the president-elect will soon be provided with an option paper laying out various proposals ranging from no stimulus to a middle approach of $20 billion to $40 billion and a high approach of $60 billion. Clinton has emphasized in the past that any such program would focus on increased public works spending and on tax credits to encourage businesses to boost investment spending.

Clinton had no public events scheduled today, although it was thought he was nearing further personnel announcements.

His news conference on the economy came at the conclusion of nearly 20 hours of nonstop, nationally televised discussions Monday and Tuesday in which the president-elect and his 329 invited guests from business, labor and academia explored every nook and cranny of the nation's economic difficulties.

Clinton remained fully engaged during the long hours of discussions, frequently asking questions on a wide range of topics, taking notes and even announcing Tuesday that things were running so far behind schedule that they would skip the lunch break.

During the talks, Clinton seemed to be shifting the emphasis a bit on his program to fix the economy. All during the election campaign, he stressed increased public investments on such things as highways, bridges and communication systems as the way to boost the country's lagging productivity and he promised to overhaul the expensive U.S. health care system.

At the news conference, Clinton said those two proposals were still high on his list. But in a bow to jittery financial markets, he also promised to be equally tough in getting Congress to adopt long-term solutions to the federal budget deficit, which is expected to hit a record $331 billion this year.

Clinton said there was widespread agreement among the conference participants "about the need for a balanced approach between a new investment agenda and a long-term commitment to deficit reduction that will be credible, public and specific in the short run."

Clinton didn't explain what he meant by that.

Registers ringing well for Xmas

By JOYCE M. ROSENBERG
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Retailers are in the critical last 10 days before Christmas and reporting that sales are good despite the storms that struck the Northeast and Pacific Northwest last week.

Store owners say consumers seem confident.

At Sears, Roebuck and Co., spokesman Perry Chan says, "We're running ahead of our projections."

"We're still looking for a pretty good Christmas," according to spokesman Duncan Muir at J.C. Penney Co. Inc.

Wind and rain in the Northwest and flooding and snow in the Northeast left overall sales at Penney stores "pretty much flat last week," Muir said. "On the other hand, our catalog saw some increases ... some people stayed home and shopped."

TeleCheck Services, which measures sales nationwide based on purchases by check, reported its business through Saturday was down 1.5 percent, primarily from the weather.

But retailers in storm areas expected to make up for the lost time.

"It's early enough in the season," explained Jeffrey Felner, an analyst with Merrill Lynch & Co. "If it happened a week from now it would be worse."

However, Jeffrey Steinberg, a retail consultant with Deloitte & Touche in Boston, noted that thousands of people whose homes were damaged are likely to have more pressing needs than shopping.

Retailers are finding innovative ways to attract the shoppers.

For those offering markdowns — and these days, that's most storeowners — signs saying "20 percent off" won't necessarily do the trick. Customers need to feel they're really getting value for their money.

Some merchants, such as apparel retailer Brooks Fashions at Colone Center Mall near Albany, N.Y., are offering "Buy One, Get One Free." Shoppers buy two garments and get the less expensive item for nothing.

The Chicago-area bookstore chain Kroch's & Brentano's Inc. is running a home delivery service. President Bill Rickman said the company distributed flyers at high-rise apartments. The offer: Call before 5 p.m. and get home delivery by 10 p.m. on any order.

Lyle Schenck, manager of a J.C. Penney in Peoria, Ill., ran two "Friends Nights" in November in which store employees invited friends to shop on Sunday evenings when the store was closed to the public. The store provided a Santa Claus and baby-sitting.

At this point in the season, it comes down to customer service Schenck said.

Test to spot anti-cancer gene found

By DANIEL G. HANEY AP Science Writer

BOSTON — A new test may someday help people born into cancer-prone families learn whether they are likely to get the disease themselves.

The test provides a quick way of detecting whether people have inherited a defective copy of a gene that ordinarily protects against cancer. The bad version of the gene, called p53, is linked to many kinds of cancer and in some families is passed from generation to generation.

The test's principal developer, Dr. Stephen H. Friend of Massachusetts General Hospital, said the test should shortcut the search for bad versions of p53 and similar genes from a few days to a few hours.

If people are found to have bad genes, they can be examined more often so treatment will start sooner when cancer arises. At present, however, there is no way to repair the broken p53 genes.

Question doctor about HMO testing

MEDICINE

PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 72-year-old man in pretty good health who belongs to an HMO. During my annual examinations, the doctor listens to my heart and lungs, checks my prostate and orders urine and blood testing. I haven't had an electrocardiogram or X-ray for several years, or, for that matter, a more extensive rectal exam by tube. Is my HMO short-changing me?

DEAR READER: Perhaps. Many HMO members are concerned that this type of medical practice does not meet their needs.

Depending on specific aspects of your medical history and exam, you may need further tests. For example, a family history of bowel cancer or polyps puts you at high risk for these conditions. Even without this history, you should have periodic examinations with the flexible sigmoidoscope, a device to examine your lower colon. Also, if you were having occasional, mild chest discomfort or shortness-of-breath, the doctor would order a cardiogram (or a stress test) and a chest X-ray.

In all likelihood, your HMO doctor did what he was supposed to do, asked all the right questions, and satisfied himself that nothing more needed to be done this year. And he's probably right. Medical authorities now recommend far less annual testing for all healthy persons, especially those over 65. A lot of the things we used to do were not only cost-ineffective but were downright dangerous. Consequently, today's doctors -- whether in private practice or in an HMO -- are far more likely to individualize and minimize, attempting to test sensibly and with restraint. Sounds like your doctor is behaving appropriately.

However, I think you should discuss this important issue with him. Next year, before your exam, when he's asking you questions, say: "Now, Doc, I don't like testing any more than the next fella, but should we be thinking about checking my heart, lungs and colon?" His answer may also supply the information you seek regarding whether the HMO is short-changing you, an issue that I side-stepped, you'll notice

All over the United States, young players are being encouraged to take up bridge. In Europe, no encouragement is needed. In the antipodes, there is a small population, but they have some excellent juniors.

In the international match held in Brisbane earlier this year between the under-25 teams of Australia and New Zealand, the Kiwis won by one international matchpoint: 321-320. Ashley Bach won the match with some good card-reading on today's deal.

The Australian North-South pair at the other table had stopped in six hearts, just made. In the given auction, West's four-club overall left Imael Del'Monte, North for New Zealand, with no room to investigate. He used Roman Blackwood, gambling that his partner would have a useful ace and knowing that if South had two aces, the response would indicate which two.

Over East's five clubs, Bach forgot the system. His pass should have shown zero or three aces. So North bid five spades in case it was zero. Now Bach decided that if his partner was powerful enough to use Blackwood, he had sufficient strength for a grand slam.

After ruffing the club-ace lead in the dummy, declarer sat back and contemplated how to play the trump suit. Because West had pre-empted, he rated to be short. So Bach cashed dummy's spade king, dropping the 10 from West. Then he led the spade jack and ran it when East played low.

Success! Not only plus 2210 and 13 IMPs, but also a trip to next year's World Junior Championship.

YOUR BIRTHDAY
Dec. 17, 1993

Although you usually prefer to operate independent of others, there is a strong probability that you might become involved in three advantageous partnership arrangements in the year ahead.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Just as friends should feel free to come to you for favors today, you, in turn, should go to them if you need their help. Don't be reluctant to lean on pals. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you to understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Something significant might develop for you today that will have a beneficial effect on your career or earnings. This is an opportunity that you do not want to miss.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) ANNIE

Don't be afraid to think in expansive terms today. In this instance, more is better and you could be luckier than usual with large issues.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You may have two opportunities for personal gain today. The sources are likely to be unrelated, but each might include a person or people you've previously helped.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Both Lady Luck and Dan Cupid might eye you favorably today. Involvements you'll have with those you love and those you like should workout well.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Individuals who can give you a leg up where your career is concerned are approachable today. Request a meeting if you have something worthwhile to present.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You could do better than usual today in developments that have elements of chance. Don't take silly risks, but on the other hand, don't be unduly frightened of taking a gamble.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

Tenacity is extremely important today and if you hang in there long enough, things could have a way of working out to your ultimate benefit. Time and tide tends to favor you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Partnership arrangements should work out well for you today, especially those that involve members of the opposite gender. Give Cupid a chance to operate.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Greater gains than usual are possible at this time from your primary source of income. Devise ways to generate increases and improve your revenue.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) In developments where you have a firm hand on the tiller today, things should work out to your satisfaction. Delegate as little authority as possible and take charge of major events yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 23) The bottom line can be your friend today, so let events run their natural course instead of trying to force changes. The secret to your success is unerring faith in your own luck.
