

DELAUD ERRORS AID 11-7 DEFEAT BY DELAND NINE

Tofaletti Huris Good Game But Six Errors Give DeLand 7 Runs

By PETER SCHAAL

Errors to the right of his, errors to the left of him, on into the valley of defeat strode, or rather, was pushed, Louis Tofaletti, the Fed's hard-working level-headed leader, who, called to the mound over DeLand yesterday when Manager Chapman was unable to produce young Buddy Lake, saw a well-pitched ball game go against him by an 11 to 7 score, all because of some of the worst fielding you've ever seen.

For about the 11th time this year, a Fed pitcher has stood on the mound doing the best he could against the united efforts of every team in the league, yet being forced to go down to defeat because of errors. The Fed made six errors yesterday afternoon with the result that seven, imagining that, seven DeLand runs came over the plate. Not even Lefty Grove could win ball games back at that sort of support.

Before we get into an argument about the fact that the DeLanders got 12 hits of Tofaletti would like to say here and now that, glancing over the box score, only seven of those hits were real hits. Five of them could have been handled easily had the Fed's played heads-up ball of the former Gator ace. Tofaletti worked like a Trojan even with every-thing breaking against him, and, even if he was hit freely, if his mistakes had proved that they were worthy of his confidence, the game would have had a different ending.

The finest thing which came out of the game was Tofaletti's remarkable coolness under fire. That's an asset which few players have, especially pitchers, and, if he never throws another curve ball the rest of his life, he can go through plenty of ball games if he maintains that cool, deliberate air. Even when one of the DeLand coaches started razzing him, big Louis held up in great shape, handling the situation manfully as he walked over to the mound and asked him to "direct" his remarks to some other individual.

The Fed's got off to a great start, pounding out five beautiful hits which, with an error and a walk, gave them five runs in the first frame. McCormick, on the mound for the DeLand outfit, was certainly in foul shape in that inning. Britt was able when he dropped his easy fly ball. Pete Schirard laid down a fancy bunt to advance Britt to second, and, when Phillips, playing first, let the throw get away from him, Britt went on to third and scored as the first baseman threw the ball past third base. Deutch then doubled to left field, scoring a second later on Red Martin's single to right field, Red going to second on the throw home. Pat Miller hit the first ball pitched him for a single to center, but Martin was thrown out at the plate. Peters took a walk, moving Miller to second. John Higgins singled to right field, scoring Miller. Roy Harrison doubled at center field, and home came Peters and Higgins. It was one of the longest hit balls of the day, landing some distance back of the theater in center field. Tofaletti mused the inning by being out, short to first. What a batting seven!

Then came the DeLand first inning, when they scored three runs on two errors and two hits. First came an easy out, Higgins to center. Wilkes singled to short and Red hit a high fly to left field which Britt misjudged, and which went for two runs. Wilkes went to third instead of scoring, because he thought the ball was going to be caught. Robinson hit an easy single to Harrison, who, with intention to spare, scored nicely to backward to get Wilkes out at the plate. But Schirard let the ball drop in front of the plate, where he walked past as Wilkes and home scored, and Robinson went to second. That was the first of six errors. Phillips hit through the legs, the ball striking the umpire, and Higgins retrieving it in time to get Phillip at first. McCormick hit to Deutch, who fumbled the throw for Robinson to score. McCormick hit to Deutch, who fumbled the throw for Robinson to score.

McCormick went to the hill in the second, and saw a changed pitcher. In that inning he set the Fed's down without a hit, a feat which he kept up for three more innings.

Although Beck got a triple in the second inning, the Fed's didn't crack, and the DeLand outfit failed to score. However, in the third, they peached over three runs on a combination of unusual circumstances. Breaks of the game you might say. Robinson opened with a beat out hit in front of the plate. Phillips hit a long fly to center field which went for three bases because Red Martin, in trying to field it, ran into the brick theater with such force that he was knocked cold. Britt, who thought Martin was going to catch the ball, had slowed up, but, seeing Martin hit the dirt, he gathered speed again, and got the ball just in time to throw it back to the infield to keep Phillips from getting a home run.

The game was held up until Red was able to be awakened. He certainly was stunned. Robinson had scored on the hit by the way. McGowan (then singled sharply past short, scoring Phillips. Culp got to first on what had to be credited with an infield as Tofaletti let a weak roller go by him, thinking that Harrison was going to field it. Hogan was allowed to go to first base when the umpire ruled that a ball, which actually struck Hogan's bat, struck Hogan. It was another break for DeLand. With the bases full and none out, Tofaletti started bearing down again. McCormick fled out to short, Beck was out, short to first, McGowan scoring on the play, and Wilkes fled out to Higgins.

No use telling you how the Fed's were held hitless and runless until the seventh when they scored two runs on two hits, and an error, including Pete Schirard's double-center, scoring both runners. Nor is there any use telling you how DeLand scored four runs on three hits and two errors in the sixth. DeLand nearly scored a run in the seventh on another Fed error, but a fast double play, Deutch to Higgins to Peters, killed the chance.

As said before, the feature of the game was Tofaletti's coolness in the face of tough breaks. At bat, the Fed's produced Miller and Higgins as the only players able to get two hits, although Schirard and Harrison, who both batted in two runs, got hits when they were needed. Red Martin, the mystery man, got off to a bad start when he let his temper get away with him. He singled in the first inning, but, when he was called out at the plate later, he flew up in the air with such force that he didn't cool down until late in the game. On top of that, he was acting to hit a ball over the short-center field fence. Red admits that you can't play ball and be griped at the same time, and he promises a different story here next Sunday.

From a fielding stand-point, Johnnie Higgins and Jack Peters were the best on the club. Higgins has improved his game about 1,000 per cent since last month, and is easily the most natural ball player in the infield. He had a good day at bat and in the field, although he made one error. Peters handled first base in his usual fine style, digging low when he got it together for an hour's skill practice at Municipal Park. He expects to have all the kinks ironed out by the time the Daytona team gets here Sunday afternoon, and he also expects to give Buddy Lake on the mound after two games play. Bud couldn't get off work yesterday

Land outfit takes advantage of it too. In this way, I've seen four games over this year, and against Sanford, one with Cocoa, and one with Daytona. I've noticed that the DeLand outfit tries to hit the ball to various spots in the infield. On purpose, I suppose, because in every game I saw, the visiting team made at least 10 assists, all by infielders, and as few as four and as many as seven errors. That may be strategy on the part of the DeLand outfit, or not. Whatever it is, I suggest that when the Fed's play there again, that they fight DeLand with the same method.

Manager Chapman, with and tired of nothing but errors on the field of play, thought this afternoon when he got it together for an hour's skill practice at Municipal Park. He expects to have all the kinks ironed out by the time the Daytona team gets here Sunday afternoon, and he also expects to give Buddy Lake on the mound after two games play. Bud couldn't get off work yesterday afternoon, by the way.

Mayor Walker Celebrates His 50th Birthday

day. Arrayed in all his sartorial splendor he celebrated the turn of the half century with work and wisecracks, another way of saying that it was "just another day."

He said he was feeling fine, "but I may be worse by the time this is printed. You can't tell. It's a fast life. I'm not boasting of my age. But I don't think I resemble a frontispiece or a title page of the tragic era."

As he dashed from a board of estimate meeting, to a hospital dedication, and to a luncheon in his honor, he reiterated that "to forget is a great art." He explained his greatest interest is in the next 50, not the last.

"One wisecrack often dooms a serious minded man to wear the cap and bells eternally," he once said, but yesterday he seemed to be relishing that role as much as ever.

He cautioned reporters: "Don't write my obituary, I'm not dead yet."

As for such characterizations as jazz mayor, the sartorial marvel, Jimmy the playboy, and all that sort of thing, he replied in one word: "Bunk."

Investigations of his administration?

"The records still speak for themselves," he replied. "The only trouble is we haven't duplicate copies enough to satisfy all the investigators at once."

It was he who doomed a book censorship bill with the quip: "I have never yet heard of a woman being ruined by a book."

He has been amateur, bicycle expert, professional ball player, fast-stepping boxer, song-writer, lawyer, assemblyman, mayor and a lot of other things.

UPON SWISS LAKE

Eckener's Feat Accomplished Without Assistance

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany June 20 (AP)—The dirigible Graf Zeppelin settled down on the surface of Lake Constance yesterday, thus demonstrating for the first time that she could alight on water without outside aid.

The successful experiment was hailed as "line news" by Dr. Hugo Eckener, designer of the big ship, who expects to take the Graf to the North Pole this summer.

"Now if we shoot a sail in the Arctic, we can safely go down and be him," Eckener said.

The water landing was effected without the assistance of an outside crew such as is used when the ship is descending on land.

A couple of police boats were standing in case of need, but they weren't called upon.

Capt. Ernst Lehmann, in command of the ship maneuvered so that the passengers gondola was the first to touch the water. A moment later the engine gondola astern touched the lake, and, after a couple of rubber lifeboats had been lowered and tested, the dirigible taxied along for about a mile. A specially devised mooring room anchor also was tried out.

Dr. Eckener did not witness the performance, as he was in Berlin. News of the good behavior of his dirigible reached him about the same time as a message from Sir Herbert Wilkins, whom he has planned to meet at the pole this summer. Sir Herbert informed him that, despite the mishap to his submarine, the Nautilus, on her Atlantic voyage, he will carry out his plans for a cruise under the Arctic ice.

"In his message to me he said the British navy has offered to provide facilities for repairing the Nautilus quickly," said Eckener.

"I believe this will merely delay us for some days so that we can't leave before the end of July. Should Wilkins fail to arrive at the pole, we would still carry out the Arctic geographic and scientific expedition, only we would have to change our plans for financing."

The Nimy-Gnomes felt their hair. And it was interesting to see their expressions change from doubt to smiling surprise.

"Why—why, it's soft!" Tinkle exclaimed excitedly.

"And—just sort of springy," Lucky said, as he patted his head gently. "Gee, I like the feel of it!" he shouted enthusiastically, as he grabbed the little woman around the waist and together they danced around and around the room for joy.

Lucky was just getting into the swing of the dance when the little woman begged him to stop.

"Fired?" her partner asked.

"And though she was puffing loudly, the little woman replied, "Of course not." She looked about the room. "We should have asked Tinkle to join us. Where's Tinkle?"

"Here I am," the little fellow called, as he stepped from behind her wide skirts.

Lucky touched his cousin's sleeve. "We didn't mean to dance away with you," he said apologetically.

Tinkle looked in wide-eyed astonishment, first at the little woman and then at Lucky. "But you didn't dance away without me," he protested.

The little woman screwed up her face thoughtfully and looked at
