A broken man, Lake returns from prison

Shortly after Forrest Lake resigned as mayor and the Seminole County bank went under, the State of Florida sent in its bank examiners. They produced a detailed report. It was published in The Herald. It proved that Rolland Dean's accusations had been true.

In 1928, Lake and his cashier, Key, were indicted. Lake pled not guilty. It was a far different story with Key. He pled guilty, went to the witness stand and told the court the whole story. He put all the blame on Lake. He testified that the mayor made him do it. Most observers we talked to felt that Key opened up in an effort to keep from ing to prison. to three years in prison at Raiford. The trial itself revealed that Lake owed his own bank well over $300,000 and had misappropriated well over another $500,000. The only question the trial did not answer was what did Lake do with all that money. The City of Sanford was supposed to have had over $1 million on deposit when the bank failed.

Tressure hunter's digs protected

JUPITER — An unusual contract giving a treasure hunter the right to make archaeological digs on county-owned property and keep part of the profits was the target of protests.

The Palm Beach County contract gives Don Anderson, a treasure salvor for 36 years, the right to make the digs and keep 10 percent of any profits generated by the sale of artifacts. "If he just goes plundering into the attes, he could damage a lot of Nems," complained Elizabeth Relies, curater of the Loxahatchee Historical Museum in Jupiter.

Some of the six plots of county-owned land are known archaeological attes, and could hald artifacts from prehistoric Jeags Indian settlers, she said Tuesday.

The Jeagss made pottery and curved bone erasments, and probably left shells, tools and food remnants that would give insight into how the tribe live.

Rat Lady ad draws scores of applicants

ORLANDO — The help-wanted ad running in major Florida newspapers announced a part-time job for someone "to share small dark coffin with 100 live rats."

"No experience necessary," said the advertisement. But the applicant "must not have irrational fears of being buried alive." And, a high-pitched sefeam "is destrable."

Universal Studion Florida is receiving scores of applications for the Rat Lady character in its Dungeon of Terror exhibit during Halloween Horror Nights, theme park officials said Tuesday.

Visitors to the exhibit make the encounter with the Rat Lady as they wend their way through a narrow hallway into a small, darkened room. Suddenly, the guests realize they are standing on a glass floor, on top of a lighted coffin, with the acreaming Rat Lady's face under their feet and the rats skittering about the open coffin and gnawing at her face.

"We're being inundated with applications," said Joe Curley, a spokesman for Universal. "All kinds of crazy people want the job."

SANFORD - After nine years of focusing SANFORD — After nine years of focusing on contruction of new homes for low-income families. Seminole Scif-Reliant Housing Inc. will concentrate on rehabilitating existing homes into livable homes once again.

SSRH administrator A.A. "Mac" Mc-Clanahan said Friday the self-help agency has started on the last nine of what will be the self-help agency's legacy of 141 new homes built with federal grants since 1983. All of the homes were built in or near

"New land isn't immediately available asymore," said RicClanahas. "I think the new census will show Oviedo is no longer eligible for Farmer's Home grants."

Central Florida FBI manager Eddie Budighelmer confirmed in July there would be an investigation of McClanahan based on a complaint received in December by the Farmer's Home Adminstration. Budighelmer and FmHA officials declined to state the nature of the complaint.

Since the first housing construction was begun in 1963, SSRH has received about $1.6 million from the PmHA to build

Members only clubs discussed

by Modic Programs Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Proposals for a dance hall and a new headquarters for the Fraternal Order of Engles, came before the Sanford City Commission Monday night. Decisions on both items were tabled.

The dance hall proposal was to open a new private club at 420 S. Sanford Avenue. Ronald Thompson, doing business as Love Truck, had requested city approval to operate the establishment.

In making the presentation, a spokesman for Thompson told the commission they would not be serving alcohol on the premises, and would only have dancing.

The club is proposed to have 50 to 75 members age 21 and older, and remain in operation until 2 or 2:30 s.m.

operation until 2 or 2:30 s.m.

Commissioners were mixed in their reaction. Lon Howell recommended the request be turned down. "This may be a private club," he said, "but they can't control what may happen on the street in front of the dance hall, and this may present a proioner Whitey Eckstein. "We would be guilty of prior censorship."

During further discussion however.

Thompson revealed that members of the club would be allowed to bring in their own beverages, including alcohol. The comment changed the entire mood of the commission.

'I think we need some input on this from our city attorney," said Mayor Bettye Smith.
"At first you said no alcohol, now we find out it will be a bottle club, and that may give us an entirely new approach."

The commission voted to table the matter until more information could be obtained. The vote was unanimous.

The Eagles, also a private club, had requested permission to relocate from their present headquarters at 2672 Orlando Drive, to Riverboat Plaza, at the intersection of 25th Street and Airport Blvd.

Land Development Coordinator Bettye Sonnenberg reported that the present Orlando Drive property is located within 2,000 feet of the boundaries of Pinecrest Elementary School, Lakeview Middle School and Seminole High School.

However, because the facility would be a private club serving alcoholic beverage to members only, the City Planning and Zoning Board approved the conditional use.

Presented to the commission Monday night was a request for consideration to move to the new location.

The city had previously denied a permit for a Class 3 license to John Attcheson of Beer 30, located at Riverboat Plaza. Sonnenberg's question now was whether there would be a difference at the same plaza, based on the fact that the Eagles would be a private non-profit fraternal organization with a controlled clientele.

"What's the difference here between private and public clubs," said Commis-sioner Whitey Eckstein. "I would want to know more about this before I vote on it."

No representative of the Eagles was on hand for the meeting. Commissioner Lon Howell suggested. "I move that we table this indefinitely, or at least until someone comes forward to represent the Eagles."

The suggestion to table was approved by a unanimous vote of the commissi

The dance hall question is scheduled to be presented for further consideration during the next City Commission meeting, sched-uled for Monday, Oct. 26.

The Eagles request will be held until representation can be established to respond to commission questions regarding the change of location.

Seminole County Commission

Like the spark she has been to many volunteer organizations, political newcomer Ginger Bowman could also ignite the Seminole County Commission with her fresh ideas and her companion for the underdog.

Bowman's broad experience as an advocate of the people could lend a humanistic twist to issue-oriented decisions on growth, transportation and borrow pits.

She thinks interaction with citizens is a must. For example, she would create a business advisory board to replace many of the functions now played by the Economic Development Commission of Mid-Florida. Members would include chambers of commerce, business leaders and municipal representatives charged with attracting light industry to the area. Schools would implement programs that would further attract industry by producing a trained work force. Bowman also has a strong focus on human services: prioritizing early intervention programs for children with special needs; pre-school educa-tion; well-child medical services; and, re-habilitation programs for first time juvenile Bowman's opponent, businessman Dick Van Der Weide, is a formidable candidate making his third bid for elected office. He is highly respected by the Republican Party, having been chosen by members to chair the annual, prestigious Lincoln Day dinner. It is our hope that Van Der Weide remains active in the political arena.

But Bowman's great sense of volunteerism and her tireless effort to improve the county services for every citizen, especially those in is, have earned our endorsement. The first Safehouse in Seminole County, a haven for abused spouses and children, will open fargely due "to Bowman" afforts: She countered by hundrids of victims of violent crimes when the verved as a victim's advocate for the Victim Services provided by the Seminole County State Attorney's Office. She has served as director of the Retired Senior Volunteer Program and as the president of the Seminole County League of Women Voters. She has also served as chairman of the Program Review Committee

But most of all, she has served the people in need - the abused, the elderly, the victimised. Ginger Bowman deserves a chance to serve all of the people in Seminole County.

Seminole County School Board

Currently comprised of educators and parents who lend a special view to proceedings, the Seminole County School Board lacks only a member with exemplary business acumen to complete it.

Candidate Larry Strickler would do just

Strickler is skilled in the use of growth projections and forecasting, in budgeting and managerial decision-making, all of which he has used in his 25 years with Southern Bell and in his extensive involvement with numerous community activities.

The school board needs that type of business savvy. For example, members are debating prospective sites for a new high school. Strickler's projections, coupled with the fact that Seminole and Oviedo high schools are not up to student capacity, prompt him to suggest a new high school isn't even needed. He also says schools should be built to be used as something else. because ultimately, projections predict, school enrollment will decline and buildings suited to one use will become albatrosses around the school board's neck. He advocates partnership between business and industry. preparing every student with a relevant curriculum whether it be college prep. vocational or technical.

Like any practical business, he would solicit outside public relations help to counter image problems that have plagued some northern Seminole County schools for years.

Candidate Bob Goff calls himself a "Bulldog type" and we can almost see him clamping his teeth down on a relevant problem, tearing it apart, refusing to let go until the problem is gone. Staging scenario for debate week

It would be best for all if the two principal candidates, particularly President Bush, would just follow my mildly convoluted script for the rest of this election.

Recall where we were just prior to the first debate: Bill Clinton had proved himself to be a smart man and a profligious campaigner. He had debate: Bill Clinton had proved himself to be a amart man and a proligious campaigner. He had a double-digit lend. Time was running out for Bush. For those of us who believed that there might still be more to come in this strange political year, and that more might be better for the country, there was only one question on the table. This: Could the debates re-open a scaled verdict in Clinton's favia?

Writing on Samday evening that after that first verdict in Clinton's favier?

Writing on Sunday evening, just after that first debate, some small steps have been achieved that may well lead to a tighter campaign.

The biggest fact about the debate was that it was not a bore. The opening combat exchange, about Clinton's overseas anti-war experiences, was electric political theater. Ross Perot provided humor, always useful in drama. How often does a tri-billionaire denounce "people with $1,000 suits and alligator shoes"? The 4-event, 6-person, 9-day sequence might turn out to be a major national experience, perhaps of the intensity of Thomas-Hill, Iran-contra and Watergate. That could beep the ball in play.

Neither was George Bush a bore. He has been partinged as a ninny, and we begin to believe it. But ninnies don't become president. When Bush

the filter of the supercilious media, he's a solid citizen. Bush is slowly finding the right track. When he attacks Clinton for enying "America is coming sport at the season," he is on solid ground, aphatantively and substantively and tactically. America to the world's most successful nation. And pessimistic ex-aggration, which he ascribes to Chinton, is the liberal mark of ilin. Bush is most effective when he rubs elbows with the liberal grain. His answer on AIDS stressed that it is principally caused by "behavioral" factors, and he condemned gay the have some "to Catholic Mass and extremists who have gone "to Catholic Mass as thrown condoms around."

part about the debate is that it was not a bore.

Bush's stress on "character" and "trust" works best when it also paints Clinton as amon of the Left, which he was in his youth. (And Clinton showed gleaming steel when he assailed Bush for challenging his patriotism, which Bush may be did not do.)

But Bush to still a step away from putting forth a full-bodied and coherent anti-liberal theme. He seems to think this what Americans hold most against recent liberalium is "tax and opend." That is only a part of R, and probably not the biggest part either.

For example, Bushbragged about the new civil rights law, but chose not to note that he had been instrumental in changing earlier versions of a Democratic bill that had been characterized as "quota legislation." Interesting: All three can-didates fall all over themselves endorsing diversity." (Me too.) But a serious conservative hould remind us that the biggest threat to harmonious diversity in America is group preference, i.e., "proportionalism." i.e. "quotas, which set diverse Americans against each other.

Similarly, Bush offered only goo, much and saccharing on the "values" question.

Bush to a loser unless he gets tougher on liberalism, and by now even that may be too

Have courage for a change

PITTSBURGH - Lynn Yeakel is standing in a living room in this beleaguered steel valley talking to a houseful of voters abut jobs and health care, about Washington and Pennsyulvnia, about heraelf and her opposent.

She is in what she described amusingly as her "ninth month" of public life. The official due date is Nov. 3. So she ends these remarks by remeating her slogen, asking these remarks.

by repeating her alogan, asking these people to have "courage for a change."

It is just one year since Anits Hill faced a phalanx of white male senators in a hearing room. Just one year since Arien Specter appeared as the Senate's chief inquisitor. cross-examining the law professor as if she were a perjurer.

The image of the Senators and the Professor, The Boy's Club and the Lone Woman fueled a new political activism all across this country. Here, in Specier's home state, it propelled Yeakel, founder and executive of a fund-raising organization called Women's Way, to take on the senator himself.

Now, of all the Senate races in the country, this one has become a classic. It's the real outsider versus the real insider. It's the pitfalls of inexperience up against the ptifalls of arrogance. And it's very much up for grabs.

Last May, when Yeakel won the Democratic primary with a videotape ad of Specter interrogating Hill, there were many who sasumed it was all over. In the afterglow of her victory, with all the rosy hype about The Year of the Woman, some assumed she would easily best this veteran senator. Now in a tough race, she says, "The expectations set for me were totally unrealistic."

Gradually and predictably, The Year of the Woman became the year of individual women, each on her own turf, with her own strengths and weaknesses. Yeakel, a true political novice among the 11 women running for the Senate, slipped badly in the polls. She was unable to widen her appeal. Her momentum was halted by Specter's skilful ad campaign, and by a series of attacks, many unfair. More than a few times. Yeakel had to remember Sen. Barbara Mikulaki's advice: "When you get up in the morning, put on an imaginary raincost. Then, whatever gets thrown at you won't touch your

By late September, the common wisdom had determined that neither Yeakel nor her campaign was ready for prime time. The common wisdom reported that Specier's tough, well-heeled and experienced campaign hd simply overrun her.

But the debate last Saturday night stopped this talk of certain Specter victory. Yeakel showed what analysts invariably called "surprising" strength, while Specter seemed often uneasy and defensive.

From now to November, the sharp dif-ferences in style and substance of these two candidates will make this one of the most interesting case studies of Politics 92.

In a year of supposed anti-incumbent feeling. Arien Specter is running on seniority. He takes personal credit for every popular bill. He claims responsibility for nearly every street light in Pennyalvania and drops every prominent name but one: George Bush.

in a year of supposed passion for fresh faces, Lynn Yeakel is both applauded and faulted for political inexperience. Her speech is thoughtful and honest, but often halting and low key in public. For better and for worse, she doesn't sound or look 'like a politician.

Competition ires Postal Service

WASHINGTON - When Postmaster General "Carvin" Marvin Runyon received a letter from Federal Express last month, it was about as welcome as a brand-new Toyota would be in Lee facocca's driveway.

Rather than opening the letter. Runyon threw it in the garbage and promptly wrote an explanatory note back to his Denver-based accountant, who had sent the letter.

"I received a from you at my resi-dence, and as I throw out anything deliver-e d by FEDEX without opening it, I don't know what it contained," Runyon wrote. "I do this because I retuet aumoriti involvent a business: situation? and at the United States Postal Service we only do business with people and companies who use postal products."

Runyon's tantrum is an appropriate metaphor for the troubles he inherited when he ssumed slewardship of the Postal Service last July. The agency that was born under Benjamin Franklin and has held a virtual monopoly on mail delivery ever since has been shaken by competitive pressures from The Postal Service maintains that the days of its monopoly are over, lamenting the fact that competition has spring up at every level - from express mail to first-class mail. But according to some experts, in this new sink-or-ewim competitive climate, the Postal Service is sinking. Charles Fombrun, a management professor at New York University's business school, says the Postal Service is still scratching to hold onto every last piece of its old monopoly. He calls Runyon's letter "a nice symbol to hand your hat on."

"Marvin's whole pitch is about how he's going to increase competitiveness and effi-ciency," Fombrum said. "But the Postal Service is constantly trying to restrict competition. It keeps resisting change. It's always been the largest civilian monopoly in the country and, quite naturally, it behaves like a monopoly."

For years, the Postal Service has kept competitors at bay with policies like the "double postage" rule, which says that private carriers must charge at least twice the rate for urgent delivery that the post office charges for first-class mail. Still, the post office's share of the "urgent mail" market has dropped from 33 percent in 1980 to just 12 percent in 1980.

investigators with Congress' General Accounting Office offered a simple explanation for this in a recent report: "The Postai Service has a reputation for being less consistent and reliable than its major competitors for on-time performance in its overnight and second-day market."

With just three months on the job, Runyon has been alternately lauded and chastised for the changes he has ushered in. One of his first moves on the job was to announce a sweeping reorganization that included closing more than 50 regional offices and trimming more than 30,000 managerial jobs from a bloated workforce of 700,000. Marvin Runyon is carning his nickname: "Carvin

"From all sides, the message is clear: To survive, we must compete. To compete, we must change," Runyon said shortly after must change," Runyon said shortly after announcing the changes.

The competitive spirit has even found its way up to Capitol Hill, where PACs have been flooding influential members with campaign contributions. PACs representing Federal Express, United Parcel Service and postal workers have each made the list of the top 50 contributors, to members of Congress since contributors to members of Congress since Jenuary 1991.

The school district is not reimbursed by the state for transporting youngsters who live closer than two miles to their zoned school. If they are transported, it is as a courtesy to the parents, but the district must pay the expenses out of the district budget.

But that's still not the end of this tale.

Back to September, 1928, we go. Ten amendments to the city charter were adopted by the voters. The major change called for a city commission of five seats. In December, 1928, three new commissioners were added. They were Robert A. Newman Sr., Vivian Speer, and S.G. Gray. Newman operated Hill Hardware, Speer ran a ladies' department store, and Gray was a certified public accountant with Pentland, Gray & Moore. Only 188 folks voted in that election for the simple reason none of the candidates had an opponent.

We're now into 1928. J.C. Penney opened his second store in Florida in Sanford. After things cooled down a bit. Dean and The Herald got to wondering In print what part City Attorney George DeCottes had played in this drame. DeCottes was also the bank's lawyer and his offices were right above the bank.

In print, Dean accused De-Cotten of at least knowing what was going on and if for no other reason than that he should resign as city attorney. Well. DeCottes made two replies. First he stated that he was a field grade officer in the Florida National Guard's 124th Infantry Regiment and he didn't appreciate Dean, The Herald, or anyone cise telling him what he should or should not do. The second reply DeCottes made was to slap a $300,000 libel suit against The Herald. The case went to court in mid-1929. It lasted 21 exciting days, especially the day The Herald's business manager. Gordon Dean, was thrown out of the courtoom. It seems that Gordon was packing a pistol under his jacket. Once when he stood up the weapon fell to the floor and Gordon got the old heave-ho."

When all the testimony had been heard the judge was instructing the jury when the defense asked for and got a 15-minute recess. During the break DeCottes and his attorneys agreed to reduce the amount of damages from $300,000 to one cent. The jury was out for 36 hours. It got hung and folks to this day the case has never been settled. And nobody thinks it ever will.

Lake remained in prison until May 30, 1934. He was paroled because of falling health. After he returned he was penniless. I can still see him, and others tell me the same thing, going through the trash cans in the downtown alleys, desperate to find his next meal.

It was rather pitiful. But the old gent amazed me. No matter how tattered and torn his "threads" were, he was always seen in in a sports jacket, tie and hat, plus his came and two-toned

Peter Schaal, who dropped out of school in the 11th grade to help his family put food on the tab e after his father died, was a collections clerk of Lake's bank. He also served as a "stringer" for The Herald. After the bank went under Dean hired Schaal as a news and sports writer on a full time basis. About fiver years later Pete went to the Orlando Sentinel as sports editor. Later he became managing editor. From there he went to Silver Springs as a public relations man. After that he became executive director of the Winter Haven Chamber of Commerce. Then he returned to Orlando and started his own advertising

Quayle, Gore brawl accomplished each candidate's debate goals

A White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON - In angry bursts of ridicule. Dan Quayle nourished the idea that Bill Clinton is a liar, while Al Gore painted Fresident Bush as a par artist and lousy custodian of the economy. It was an extraordinary sandiot brawl, in contrast to the gentlemanly leadoff presidential debate.

Their mission in the vice presidential debate was to make the other side look bad, and Quayle and Gore ripped into each other in 90 minutes of finger pointing, accusations and interruptions Tuesday night. The instant polling gave Gore the edge, but there was no runaway winner.

Instead, in the three-way match, the lover likely was James Stockdale. Ross Perot's teammate, whose befuddled per-formance may have hurt their

"This slows Perot's momentum if not totally eliminates it." said Martin Wattenberg, political scientist at the University of California at Irvine. 'How can Americans take Perot as a serious candidate for prealdent when he doesn't have a serious candidate for vice president behind him."

"He hurt Perot," said James A. Thurber, director of the Center for Congressional and Presidential Studies at American University, "At times it was tor allowed frewheeling charges and countercharges by the can-didates, and Quayle and Gore rushed to take each other on.

After watching a testy exchange, Stockdele said, "I think America is seeing why this nation is in gridlock." His pithy observation was in contra his opening statement where Stockdale lost his thought, stopped and put on his glasses to read from notes.

Gore opened with an attack on the Bush-Quayle record on the economy, the No. 1 issue in Clinton's playbook.

"When the recession came they were like a deer caught in the headlights — paralyzed into inaction, blinded to the suffering and pain of bankruptcies and people who are unemployed," Gore said. "We have an environmental crists, a health trisurance crisis, substandard education. It is time for a change.

Quayle immediately fired back that Clinton would raise taxes and increase government spending. Moreover, Quayle said. "Bill Clinton does not have the strength nor the character to be president of the United States."

That was Quayle's chief message, that Clinton could not be trusted. "Do you really believe that Bill Clinton will tell the truth?" Quayle saked. "And do you trust Bill Clinton to be your president?"

Determined to redeem himself for his stumbling debate performance four years ago. Quayle was aggressive. Democrats said he was strident. Gore, on the other hand, appeared wooden at times, as if he were reciting lines from his campaign speeches.

"Quayle did what he needed to do," said George Washington political scientist Christopher

Deering. "He set up the issues: trust, tax and spend. Did he beat Gore? No, probably not. But he didn't lose to him. either. It's probably a tie."

Gore was deemed the winner by some analysts. "The expectations were very low for Quayle," said Thurber. "I don't think he exceeded those expectations. Gore certainly helped his candidate; Quayle didn't hurt but he didn't help that much."

Gore and Quayle tasued demands of each other.
Gore attacked Bush for raising questions about Clinton's stu-dent trip to Moscow. "It's a classic McCarthy-ite smear technique. I think the president of the United States ought to ologize," Gore said.

Quayle called on Gore to answer the charge that Clinton couldn't be trusted, and concluded that he never got an of members of Congress, Quayle noted that terms of presidents are limited. Gore jumped in to say, "We're fixing to limit one."

With the understudies' debate complete, Bush, Clinton and Perot will return to the stage Thursday night for the second of three bouts. Those are the de-bates that really count. The vice presidential debates, said Thurber, "will be just a footnote."

Meanwhile, much-maligned Vice President Dan Quayle get good reviews from some state political ligares who watched Tuesday night's debate. Fortis is a close race, and the state had been one of Peret's strongest before he halted his can-lidacy.

"The Bush team moved up in my view might," said Ed Hubbard, a Port Walton Beach and," said Ed Hubbard, a Port Walton Beach insuman formerly active in the Perot cam-go and now undecided. "I've been criticizing and now undecided. "I've been criticizing in Queyle for four years, but I was totally rewasted by his performance."

Hubbard had been leaning toward Clinton, but he said Sen. Al Gore came off as "a wind-up toy."

While Perot renewed some of his interest in the first presidential debate Sunday night, James Stockdale's halting performance raised doubts.

Like Stockdale, Hubbard spent seven years as a prisoner of war in Vietnam. He was "sadly disappointed by Sinchdale. I felt sorry for him. He was placed in an universable situation."

Althon DeFoor, a Key Largo businessman and somer Monroe County judge and sheriff, said tockdale looked like "a croquet player in a rugby satch." DeFoor, former Republican Gov. Bob Martinez's running mate in 1980, said the debate was "good theater."

"This probably went the way the presidential chate should have: a lot of discussion of the sues, they took some good hard blows but didn't take it personal."

Few minds changed, but at least debate was entertaining

Vice presidential debates usually aren't an event people rush home to watch. But Stephanie Winesewaki, a nurse in Portland, Ore., didn't want to miss seeing her man Al Gore spar with Dan Quayle.

"I think it will be as good as 'Saturday Night Live," she said before the debate. "It could be very entertaining." She wasn't disappointed.

Unlike Sunday's gentlemanly presidential de-bate, Tuesday's matchup of Quayle, Gore and Ross Perot's running mate, James Stockdale, provided plenty of fireworks. Wincsewski, 35, plans to vote for Clinton. She went into the debate expecting a poor performance by Quayle, whose reputation for gaffes preceded him. While Quayle made no major blunders — indeed, he took an aggressive stance from the start - Winczewaki was not impressed.

"He was rude," she said. "He avoided issues. He was not as sure of himself or as well composed as Gore.

"It was interesting, but what did they say we do't siready heard?" asked Jim Morris, 60, of Frankfort. Ky. The real estate broker described himself as a lifelong Democrat who nonetheless is voting for Bush.

Though Morris said Gore and Quayle expressed serives well, he questioned the value of the debate itself. He said he couldn't recall an election in which so much attention was paid to the bottom half of the ticket.

But others valued a look at the men who would be a heartbeart away from the presidency.

"There have been too many times in my lifetime where the vice president has become president," said Sam Tayloe, 56, a mortgage banker in El Pago, Texas. George Hadden, another El Paso resident, said he thought Quayle won the debate - even though Hadden liked what Gore had to say and is determined not to vote for the Bush-Quayle

Quayle "countered every argument and dis-cussion." said Hadden, 71, a retired postal worker. "To me, he came out on top 90 percent of the time. That Quayle didn't hesitate." Hadden said the debate convinced him Dan Quayle would be a competent president should something happen to Bush.

"When he first got elected four years ago, I thought: 'Who the heck is this joker? Quayle? Some young punk? He can't even tie his shoes.' But he's learned a lot in the four years," Hadden

In Cheyenne, Wyo., 61-year-old Walt Miner came to the opposite conclusion, saying Gore won the debate "hands down." "He seemed to me to behave with dignity," said

Miner, who calls himself a Republican for Clinton.
"When he had a chance to make a point that he cared about, he made it vigorously."

Miner said he was repulsed by Quayle.

The thing that came through most was a certain meanness. I find him viscerally hard to watch." Miner said. "It seems to me his judgment is so flawed and his performance tonight seemed to me juvenile — picking fights, essentially, I simply cannot picture him as a president."

Many viewers said they feit uncomfortable watching Stockdale, who made a few sharp points but appeared befuddled at times.

In advance of the two reports. analysts said retail sales may post their best showing in months, climbing by 0.5 percent, helped out in part by the sale of construction supplies to rebuild devastated South Florida communities.

However, economists were braced for both wholesale prices and retail prices, which will be released Thursday, to take bigger jumps because of the hurri-

economic effects from storm

Donald Ratajczak, head of the forecasting unit at Georgia State University, said he looked for Andrew to be reflected in higher lumber prices, because of in-creased demand, and higher natural gas prices, because the hurricane disrupted production along the Gulf Coast.

For those reasons, Ratajczak said he expected the Producer Price Index, which measures inflation before it gets to the consumer, to show an increase of 0.3 percent in September. three times the tiny increases in July and August.

Michael Niemira, an economist at Mitsubishi Bank in New York. said he believed retail sales would surge by 1.4 percent in September, making it the biggest increase since January.

However, other analysts were not quite as optimistic. forecasting a gain of 0.5 percent. That would still be far better than the 0.5 percent decline recorded in August, with part of the gain attributed to a spurt in auto sales and increased purchases of construction materials, reflecting the rebuilding in South Florida.

On both the inflation front and consumer spending, economists said they believed Andrew's impact would be short-lived. Many economists said early reports showed retail sales have slowed again following the Sep-tember spurt and said the weak economy is likely to keep a lid on inflation for at least the next 12 months.

Cynthia Latta, an economist at DRI-McGraw Hill. forecast that consumer prices will rise just 3.2 percent this year and next, little changed from the 3.1 percent increase recorded in 1991.

While some analysts said the absence of inflationary pressures and the sluggish economy would give the Federal Reserve room to cut interest rates for a 25th time. others said they did not look for the Fed to ease again before Election Day.

"There's more competition for U.S. companies," said Martin Buily, a University of Maryland economics professor and cosuthor of the study. "Managers are forced to raise productivity in order to survive and be prof-

Productivity is the ratio of goods and services produced to the resources used to produce them. Worker productivity measures goods and services produced by employees in an hour, week or year

In 1990, each full-time U.S. worker produced $49,600 in goods and services, compared with 844,200 for West German workers. $38,200 for Japanese workers, and $37,100 for British workers, the institute said. East Germany was not included in the figures because data in the study was collected before the October 1990 reunification. The study also excluded statistics about workers in government. education, health and real estate.

Japan led the United States in productivity in automobile production and consumer electronics, but the rest of its economy lagged behind. Lewis Japanese productivity in general merchandise retailing, for example, was only 44 percent of that of U.S. workers, and Japanese factory workers overall produced only 80 percent as much as Americans on an hourly basis, the study said.

"What they've done to create a overhouse in automobiles, electronics. and they've exported those products around the world," Bally said. "But they don't encourage competition in the rest of their economy; so the rest has really languished."

Researchers had expected to find the five countries about equal because of the increasing-ly global marketplace and were surprised by the results, Lewis sold.

Dr. Wassily Leontief of the Institute for Economic Analysis at New York University and the results also surprised him.

"That kind of reductionist

"That kind of reductionist approach is popular because it's generally relatively easy to interpret. It's useful for public debate and things like that, but I'm not sure how much it advances us in understanding a basis for action."

The McKinsey Global Institute, a Washington-based division of the McKinsey consulting firm, combined data from a Dutch study on manufacturing with figures it compiled on the service sector for an overall estimate of productivity. The service sector now employs three quarters of all American workers.

Despite feeding both games, Carrie Scranton (white jersey) and the Lyman Greyhounds couldn't put away Karen Pinckney (No. 15), Sara Moore (No. 7) and the Lake Mary Rams Tuesday night, losing the match in straight games.

Lake Mary rallies twice to sweep past Lyman

good team down.

The homestanding Lyman High School girls' volleyball team jumped out to a 9-0 lead in the first game against Lake Mary in an important Seminole Athletic Conference matching Treasury width matchup Tuesday night.

But instead of folding, the conference-leading Rams got their backs up and rebounded to beat the Greyhounds, 15-11, 15-11.

"It's nice to know we can come back," said Lake Mary head coach Cindy Henry. "Every coach likes to see their team come back and not die on you. But I would like to start seeing some fire in them and also see then start using some strategy out there. It's only two weeks until districts and we need to start seeing the intensity that we want it all."

The Rams improved to 16-4 overall and 6-1 in the conference with the victory, giving Lake Mary sole possession of first place in the SAC after Oviedo was upset by Seminole. The Rams will travel to Merritt Island today for a non-conference doubleheader with Merritt Island at 6:30 p.m. and Titusville-Astronaut at 7:15 p.m.

Lyman led in both games but was unable to hold the momentum as it fell to 12-7 with the loss.

"We tend to get ahead, then let it go," said Lyman head coach Christy Tibbitts. "We led Lake Howell 10-1 last week and also lost. You'd like to win when you get a lead like that. It seems like everyone takes advantage of our errors and we haven't learned how to take advantage of our opponents mistakes.

"But we played good and I think we're starting to come back together. To play that good against a team like Lake Mary is a real Lyman will look to get back on the winning track. Thursday as it hosts Lake Brantley in an SAC match. Junior varsity action starts at 5 p.m. with the varsity set for a 7

After battling back for the win the first game, the Rama got the first point of the second game on a Jennifer Greissing ace, but the Grehounds took a 4-1 as Carrie Scranton and Tammy Morris won two service points each.

The visitors rebounded to tie the score at 4-4 on a Lorrie Boger ace, a block by Greissing and a defensive Aggle Ratkal served a winning point for Lyman to give the Greyhounds a 5-4 lead, the last time the home team would lead. Lake Mary got a side out when Greissing kill off an assist from Boger.

After getting the ball back Nikki Preece served eight consecutive winning points to give the Rams a 12-5 lead. During the series, Preece had one ace, Greinsing and Angle Snow had one kill each, Diane Duber had a block and Boger had an ace and a dig for a point.

But with the big lead Henry took the opportunity to get her reserves into the game, but the move seemed to sap the momentum out of Lake

An ace by Michelle Perez got one point for Lyman and after a pe side outs. Scranton came up with an ace and three other service points to make the score 12-10 and you could sense that maybe the tide was turning.

But Snow got the ball back for the Rama on a lob over the Greyhounds Rams on a lob over the Greynounds defense and served a point on a kill by Sara Moore to make the score 13-10. Ratkai got the point back for Lyman, but Duber got the ball back on a kill off an assist by Boger and Karen Pinckney got the final two points, the last on an ace, to give lab Moore the step.

Tribe ends 12-year losing streak to Oviedo

From Staff Reports

SANFORD - It took 12 years, but Seminole finally beat Oviedo in girls' volleyball.

Tuesday night at Bill Fleming Memorial Gymnasium, the Tribe got a superb team effort to knock the Lions out of a share of the Seminole Athletic Conference lead in three games, giving Seminole Its first victory over Oviedo since 1980.

At the start it didn't look like this would be the Tribe's night either as the Lions came out smoking and won the opening game 15-1. "We were so bad that first game," said Corso. "We couldn't do anything right. I'm surprised we got on the court with our uniforms on. But it was all Seminole after that as the Tribe handled Oviedo in the next two games 15-8, 15-11.

The second and third game the whole team played and had a superb effort." said Corso. Everyone played so well, especially Megan (Hay) and Dawn (Burks) with kills and (Catherine) Foye with blocks and touches.

Corso also heaped praise on her two reserves 'Ann (Schaeffer) and Kelly (Richards) both served and passed well." said Corso. "A team is only as raised our level of play tonight." Seminole improved to 5-6 overall and 3-4 in the SAC. The Tribe will be at Lake Mary for a tripleheader Thursday. The girls junior varsity will play at 5 p.m., the girls varsity at 6 p.m. and the Lake Mary boys will play Apopka at 7 p.m.

SAMSULA - Montverde's Pete Orr. driving the Horsen Around Farma Camaro, took top honors in the second leg of the ninth annual Triple Crown Late Model championship Saturday night at New Smyrna Speedway.

Thanks to the crew and everybody involved." said Orr. who is the Triple Crown defending champion. "The Homen Around Farms car ran just perfect tonight.

"All night long, there was someone in my mirror. If I made one mistake, I could have lost the race. I have to thank Dennis Boyd. who freshened up the engine. Because of his work, we had the power when we needed

Orr, who is also the 1992 World Series of Asphalt champion, set the evening's second fastest qualifying time and, by virture of the draw, started the race from the eighth position. By Iap 33, Orr was in second place, challenging Bruce Lawrence for the lead.

On the 45th lap, Lawrence spun coming out of turn two, opening the door for Orr to move into the No. I spot. Lawrence pilled for service while Ed Meredith. Randy Weaver and Guy Thomas started to close in

But Orr was able to withstand the charge and drove to his ninth Late Model win of the season at the half-mile/high-banked oval.

Pole sitter James Powell Jr. jumped to the early lead and was in undisputed command of the 100-tap event until he suffered mechanical and had to withdraw from competition on lap nine.

"I can't believe it," said Powell, who has been plagued with misfortune at the speedplant. "We were running real well and I stripped a rear end gear and half to pull in.

'We've broken something eight times out of our last nine races. It seems like we have a jinx or something following us. I guarantee you the next time we race, we'll have the monkey off our back."

Four weeks ago. Powell was racing unchallenged in the Late Model feature when a blown transmission seal put him out of action.

With Powell pitalde, Lawrence - who set the evening's fastest qualifying time, took over the point. Lawrence quickly established a groove and successfully re-buffed repeated challenges by Orr for the lead. But Powell apparently got into some fluid and spun into the high side of the track

"We were running good and sticking good when all of a sudden, the car went around on me," said Lawrence, "Because of earlier rains, the track was real runny tonight. It seems like where we had a dry place a few laps back would all of a sudden become alick a few laps later. "This is one of those nights that if we had another 20 laps, we could have won.

With Orr on the point, the Slender You team cars - piloted by Meredith and Weaver - moved into second and third places, respectively. Orr was able to hold off their challenges as well as repeated charges by Guy Thomas, who was attempting to unlap himself.

On lap 59, Meredith withdrew from the race with mechanical problems. Weaver the pulled up to Orr's bumper and, for the remainder of the race, ran nose-to-tail with Orr beating Weaver across the stripe by half

"I'm really tickled with this finish," said the 22-year-old Weaver, who has only raced on asphalt a total of three times. "Bob Clark had confidence in me and gave me a chance to race. We had a good car and with a more experienced driver, the probably could have won this race.

San Francisco bid 'very, very credible'

By CATALINA ORTIZ Associated Press Writer

SAN PRANCISCO - A key investor in a local group trying to buy the San Francisco Giants expressed cautious optimism about ita 995 million offer, even though it is $20 million less than a previous bid from Florida.

'I think we made a very, very credible offer compared to other franchises." San Francisco de-veloper Walter Shorenstein said Tuesday, one day after the investors group he assembled presented its proposal to Na-tional League president Bill White.

The bid will be forwarded to a committee of baseball owners. which already is reviewing a tentative $115 million deal Giants owner Bob Lurie reached with Florida investors who want to move the Glants to St. Petersburg. Any sale needs ap-proval by 10 of 14 National League teams and eight of 14 American League teams.

"I think baseball has to deeide." Shorenstein said at a news conference with San Francisco Mayor Frank Jordan. We felt it was appropriate for us to look at the prices that were paid for teams lately - Houston. Detroit and Seattle."

The Tigers were sold for about $80 million, and the Mariners went for about $100 million. The Astron deal, which includes real estate, is not yet complete. The local investors' group also Includes Peter Magowan, chairman, president and chief executive officer of Safeway Inc., who

It does not include George Shinn, owner of the NBA Charlotte Hornets, whose asso-ciation with the local group abruptly dissolved over the weekend. A spokesman for Shinn said the deal did not make

The local offer, in addition to competing with a richer one from Florida, also faces the threat of a lawsuit from there.

St. Petersburg assistant city manager Rick Dodge said the San Francisco bid infringed on the exclusive deal that Florida investors reached with Lurie in August. He threatened legal action if the sale and move to Florida isn't approved.

In the event of a lawsuit, the city of San Francisco will pay any legal costs or damages awarded against local investors. The city's Board of Supervisors and Jordan agreed last month to grant indemnity to the investors.

A San Francisco neighborhood group sued in an altempt to reverse the decision, but a Superior Court Judge on Tuesday ruled in favor of the city. Judge William J. Cahill rejected the group's arguments that the city violated state law and the charter in offering investors a legal shield.

A lawyer for the coalition said the group may appeal, but city attorney Louise Renne said the city would prevail if an appeal were filed.

Late wreck hands win to Burkett

ORLANDO - Sometimes in racing, being in the right place at the right time can be as big an sdvantage as having a fast car. Friday night at Orlando Speedworld, Longwood's Jeff Burkett used both to score a win in the firsy leg of the Late Model Triple Crown.

Past timer Pete Orr drew the outside pole and immediately took the lead closely pursued by Dick Anderson as polesitter Wayne Anderson settled into third place. Burkett moved into fourth with Ronnie Roach rounding out the top five.

Caution flags flew in lap 49 for a David Russell/Ron DiCandio tangle, bunching the leaders. But Orr and Dick Anderson immediately streaked ahead on the restart.

On lap 59. Anderson tried to nose under Orr in turn one and the two tangled, sending Anderson pitalde with a flat tire and suspension damage. Burkett assumed the lead while Orr lined up fifth as the last car on the lead lap. Burkett held off Roach to claim his first ever Late Model win at Orlando.

Following Burkett and Roach to the stripe were Wayne An-derson, Orr and dirt track specialist Randy Weaver.

Ron McCreary's Ford Thun-derbird dominated the limited late model race for his 10th win of the year. Michael Williams was a close second over Mike Todd, Timmy Todd and Darrell

Letter comforts family at death

In 1990, our brother Dan died suddenly. He was 34. As family members gathered to plan the funeral liturgy, the letter Dan had written to our parents in 1988 came to mind. Dan had always been a quie person and not one to express his feelings. but he poured out his heart in that letter, expressing his love and gratitude to Mome and Dad for having given him life even though there were some difficult for writing. No need to apologize for the lateness of your letter. At least you wrote.

THE SEVENCHILDREN. CHECAGO DEAR CHILDREN: Thank

For years I have prodded my young readers who are fortunate enough to have their parents (or even one parent) to give a gift that money can't buy: a letter expressing love and gratitude for the countless things that a parent must do to raise a child.

My belated condolences on the loss of your beloved brother Dan.

DEAR ABBY: I work as a cashier in a major grocery store in Garland, N.C. Recently a woman with a newborn baby came through my checkout lane. After I told her the amount of her purchase, she reached into her bra. pulled out a wad of food stamps, handed them to me and said. "Here - they're wet because I am breast-feeding.

Abby, what do you think about this? WANDA

DEAR WANDA: I've heard of the milk of human kindness, but I think your customer overdid it.

DEAR ABBY: I read a letter a while ago in your column con-cerning the physician who complained because some veterinarian made more money than he makes.

I have a story I'd like to add: A a very sick cat to our small animal hospital. She complained that the cat had been urinating all over her house and furniture.

We kept her cat and worked on him for three days. When the woman returned to pick up her cat, she was given her bill, which totaled 678.

She hit the roof, screaming that it didn't cost that much to see her own physician!

I then told her that if she had had been urinating all over the house and furniture, and he cured her in three days, she would have gladly paid the $78 on the spot. She gave me no argument, and has been a loyal and satisfied client ever since.

DEAR ABST: My husband and I have been invited to a 50th wedding anniversary party.

The invitation reads: "Your presence is enough to give our hearts a lift. Therefore, please do not bring a gift."

Abby, would it be inappropri-ate to give a gift? And would money be in poor taste? We hate to go empty-handed.

GOOD PRIENDS

DEAR FRIENDS: Respect their request: do not bring a gift. but a contribution to their (not your) favorite charity, in honor of their 50th, would be a gracious gesture.

Today, however, she excels in barbecue, which is her favorite meal, and said the secret is in the fire. "You have to get your own oak wood and let the coals burn down just right," she said.

Know when to give up to your disease

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been diagnosed with metastatic cancer of the lung and have received chemotherapy with no received chemotherapy with no improvement. I recently heard about a program in Michigan that offers a special liquid diet and pulse patch to effect a cure. They claim a cure rate of 85 percent of 50,000 people to date. My doctor advised against this "formula," and I'm confused as to what to do.

DEAN READER: This scheme to what to do.

DEAR READER: This scheme sounds like another get-rich scam. Anybody who can cure 85 percent of 50,000 cancer patients ought to be lionized. The fact that this organization is not in the headlines of this newspaper or on the cover of Time should provoke much healthy skepticism about such outrageous claims. Stick with your doctor.

Your question promots me to

Your question prompts me to address an issue that is seldom discussed: when enough is enough. Cancer is a hideous disease in large part because there is no consistent cure for it. Sure, there have been marvelous advances, particularly the therapy for lymphoma and childhood leukemia. However, the majority of cancers are as untreatable today as they were 30 or 40 years ago. True. patients may live a few more months because of chemotherapy but there's an awful trade-off; those last few months may be marked by constant pain and feeling like hell from the drugs.

Many cancer patients are beginning to ask: is it worth it? Do a few more weeks of life justify the pain and discomfort? When should I surrender to inevitability, give in to the disease and request that I be made as comfortable as possible?

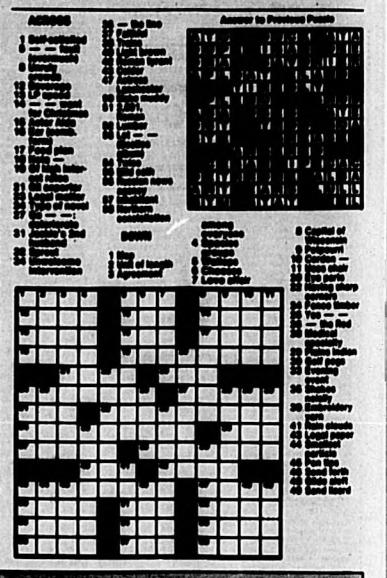

These questions are difficult to answer but they must be asked. And each patient has to make his own peace. Traditionally. doctors' roles were to help patients accept death, to be comforting and supportive. Today, all too often, it seems to me, some cancer specialists play weird little games with their poisons, giving this patient this and that patient that—all in the name of almighty survival, when really what is needed is caring, pating control and halo according pain-control and help accepting

There are many books about defense in bridge. Within the pages of all of them you will find one play discussed that is still missed by many players below expert level.

South's sequence described a balanced hand with 23-24 points.

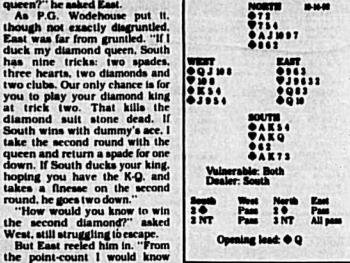

South ducked West's spadequeen lead and won the second spade with the king. Declarer aw that he had eight top tricks. A 3-3 club break would produce a ninth trick, but that was against the odds. Hoping he might make something from the diamonds. South immediately led a diamond to dummy's 10. East won with the queen and fired back a spade. However, declarer won, took a second diamond finesse and cashed the diamond ace. When the king dropped. South claimed 11 tricks.

West was unhappy. "Why didn't you duck the diamond queen?" he asked East.

As P.G. Wodehouse put it, though not exactly diagruntled. East was far from gruntled. "If I duck my diamond queen South duck my diamond queen. South has nine tricks: two spades. three hearts, two diamonds and two clubs. Our only chance is for you to play your diamond king at trick two. That kills the diamond suit stone dead. If South wins with dummy's ace, I take the second round with the queen and return a spade for one down. If South ducks your king, hoping you have the K-Q, and takes a finesse on the second round, he goes two down."

'How would you know to wir the second diamond?" asked West, still struggling to escape. But East reeled him in. "From that the contract is unbeatable if South has three diamonds."
