Hats Off, Graduates

Mortarboard Madness

Graduating seniors of Lake Mary High School fling their graduation caps into the air during commencement ceremonies Friday morning at the school. More than 500 students received their diplomas in the ceremonies at the school's sports stadium. Despite the hoopla, Quinn Allen Hollingsworth, 2½-years old, found other things of interest to delve into while his aunt, Kelly Skeens, was graduated. He was there with his mom, Karen Hollingsworth, and his grandmother.

City Commissioners To Consider Library Plan

By Karen Talley
Herald Staff Writer

Rather than deny site plan approval for the library Seminole County plans to build in downtown Sanford, the city's Planning and Zoning Board has formally bowed out of judging the project.

The P&Z voted 5-2 on Thursday to send the plan to city commissioners for review during their Monday night meeting.

City staff has recommended site plan approval, Sanford Zoning and Arbor Inspector Bettye Sonnenberg said.

The P&Z decision was based on the site plan's shortcomings versus the project's benefits for the community, according to P&Z vice-chairman Brent Carl, who offered the motion Thursday night.

"The project does not meet the requirements for good planning," Carl said. "But we also realize this is something the community really needs. Instead of our denying it, we think it's best that commissioners conduct the site plan review."

The county plans to build the 12,000 square foot library on Palmetto Avenue, directly behind the First Street library in downtown Sanford.

Carl said the P&Z decision was primarily due to the project's lack of sufficient on-site parking and a potentially hazardous situation involving a truck loading area that is too close to Palmetto Avenue.

There will be seven on-site parking spaces and, through a waiver granted by the city, all other vehicles are to park 300 feet away, at the municipal lot located on Palmetto Avenue and Seminole Boulevard, County Library Services Director Jean Rhein said Friday.

She said the P&Z decision resulted from "a mix-up and misunderstanding" regarding the parking waiver, which she said the board "apparently wasn't aware of."

"I'm sure this will all be cleared up by the city commission on Monday," she said.

Carl said the 300 foot distance between the library and municipal lot is within city parking requirements, although he said "the problem is, the lot is already overcrowded. Requiring library patrons to park there will make things a lot worse."

Carl also said a truck loading area in an alley between the old and new libraries is too close to the Palmetto Avenue sidewalk and will result in trucks "ateking out onto the sidewalk, and possibly even into the street."

Ms. Rhein said the project "meets all city requirements" as demonstrated by city staff's recommendation approval.

The county's project architects and engineers had worked this

Federal Tax Reform Bill Poses Threat

County Faces Decision Deadline On Expressway

By Sarah Fischer
Herald Staff Writer

Impending federal legislation which would restrict bond financing for government agencies is pushing the Orlando-Orange County Expressway Authority ahead with a plan to build the northern extension of the east/west expressway.

The neighboring expressway authority has given Seminole County until June 13 to opt into an interlocal agreement to extend the expressway into Seminole, however it appears the county's concerns will not be addressed in the pact.

Those issues include the sharing of toll revenue generated by the roadway and control of the extension's right-of-way.

Seminole County Administrator Ken Hooper said Friday he does not believe those issues can be resolved prior to June 13, when OOCEA is slated to have its bonds validated for the project.

Failure to approve the agreement, though, would not doom the construction of a 2,000-foot extension from the county line to State Road 426, officials from both counties said.

OOCEA has proposed to build an $85 million stretch of roadway from Highway 50 north to S.R. 426, about 7.5 miles. The portion in Seminole County would cost approximately $4 million.

An agreement between the two expressway authorities would authorize Seminole County to connect to the extension in the future, when it constructs its own expressway, Hooper said.

The agreement would also authorize Seminole County to establish tolls on its expressway, Hooper said.

In a letter to OOCEA and the Department of Transportation, Seminole County also said it wants its expressway authority to own land and road located within Seminole County, to participate in public hearings and meetings relative to the segment in Seminole County, to review and approve preliminary and final plans and specifications prior to construction and to condemn lands in Seminole for right-of-way.

In response to the letter, OOCEA Executive Director David W. Gwynn proposed that OOCEA would design and build the roadway to S.R. 426 at its own costs, including improvements to 426.

"SCEA would have the right to review and comment on existing plans, however the OOCEA must control the final decision making process on the road design and construction," Gwynn wrote. "The control of right-of-way and road within Seminole County would be under the jurisdiction of the OOCEA for the life of the (bonds) subject to the right of SCEA to make, at its costs, the proper connection at S.R. 426 for any further extension of the expressway north."

As a second option, he said OOCEA would build the section of the roadway to the Seminole/Orange County line and the SCEA would build the section from the county line to S.R. 426.

"For this to be a viable option, an agreement would have to be reached by June 13 guaranteeing simultaneous construction and containing mutual covenants that would limit tolls to those that are reasonable," Gwynn said.

"If either of the above cannot be accomplished, it is the intent of the OOCEA to terminate the northern extension with an interchange at University Boulevard in Orange County," he wrote.

Reaching an agreement by June 13 would mean "the road would be built earlier" but if an agreement cannot be reached by that date, this would not preclude Seminole County from initiating the project at a later date, he said.

"We will continue to work

Anti-Crime Rally

Preparations for Tuesday night's anti-crime rally are complete, and the event's success now rests solely with the community, Sanford Police Chief Steve Harriett said Friday.

The rally is slated to begin at 7 p.m., at the Sanford Civic Center on Sanford Avenue.

Mayor Bettye Smith is among those who will be attending, and she wants the civic center "to be overflowing."

"Crime is the number one concern of so many city residents, myself included," Mayor Smith said. "We have an opportunity on Tuesday to combat this problem together, and it shouldn't be missed."

Harriett said the rally will take a "partnership approach" to crime prevention. The event will be both "informal and informational," he said.

It is being sponsored by the Sanford Police Department, in conjunction with Seminole Citizens Neighborhood Watch Association and Crime Commission Inc. of Central Florida.

Representatives from these organizations will be on hand to offer crime prevention guidelines to the young and old, homeowners and businesses, Harriett said. Crime prevention displays will be featured and plenty of Sanford Police officers "will be available to discuss what we can do together to stop crime." Harriett said.

Resurrected Bill Lacked Unanimous Consent

Zoo Bill Caged In Senate

By Sarah Fischer
Herald Staff Writer

A bill which would have enabled the Central Florida Zoo to move from Sanford to Orlando died in the Florida Senate Friday.

Sen. John Vogt, D-Cocoa Beach, said the measure failed to come up for a vote after Sen. George Stuart said he would object to bringing the matter up for debate.

Because the bill was not heard by any Senate committee, it required unanimous consent of the Senate to bring it up on the floor.

A bill that is part of the legislative package to fund the zoo's relocation was unanimously passed by the Senate Thursday but a like measure was bogged down in the House.

The legislation that passed is a general bill which would implement a local bill to create an independent taxing district levying a 25 cent per $1,000 property tax in Seminole, Orange and Osceola counties to support the zoo's move to Orlando's Turkey Lake Park.

A clerical error enabled the local bill to be placed on the House agenda Wednesday even after the measure was killed in Tallahassee Monday.

The bill died when Rep. Carl Ogden, D-Jacksonville, chairman of the House Finance and Taxation Committee, rejected several bills asking for selective hikes in property tax.

Vogt said the general bill would not be considered by the House. He presumed the zoo legislation would not have moved forward without the general bill even if the local bill passed.

The general bill was amended to broaden a statute that allows

After 12 years of marriage Nancy Talley said her divorce turned her into "a whimpering little thing."

"I expected him to take care of me," said this 30-year-old Sanford woman who has been divorced seven months. "I was so naive. He said he would take care of me. I never thought that I would have to take care of myself."

Ms. Talley is not only learning, through the help of a Seminole Community College program, to care for herself, but also how to be a single parent of daughters, ages two and four.

She worked part-time as a nurse aide when first married, but when her marriage ended she had been out of the job market many years and didn't have the skills needed in a job that would

She works as a home health assistant, visiting elderly patients in a post-hospital program. But she's upgrading her skills. Through training at SCC Ms. Talley is preparing for a career as a medical assistant to work in a doctor's office.

She has new found self-confidence. Ms. Talley is readying herself for a career and is no longer wallowing in self-pity and doubt about her abilities. In fact she now feels ready to help other women who are experiencing the turmoil of abandonment. ## Lake Mary Police Chief Starts Monday

The city of Lake Mary's new chief of police starts work Monday, Charles Willford Lauderdale III, 43, who recently retired from the U.S. Army after 26 years of in the service, will assume command of the 12-man department.

Lauderdale was hired by the city commission May 5 by a 5-1 vote. Mayor Dick Fess, and commissioners Charlie Webster, Russ Megonegal, Buzz Petros, and Ken King voted to hire Lauderdale, while commissioner Paul Tremel voted for the runner-up candidate, Frederick Justin Staly, Orlando, because, he said, he favored a central Florida candidate.

Lauderdale replaces former chief Harry Benson, who retired after 11 years on the job March 1. Department Lt. Samuel Belfiore has been the city's acting chief during the selection process.

Lauderdale comes from Killeen, Texas, where he retired from his position as Chief of Command at Fort Hood May 1. His former annual salary was $53,100. His new job pays $26,460.

The new chief and his family reportedly arrived in the city this weekend, and will rent a home in the city until a home can be built, city officials have said. Lauderdale told commissioners he plans to be a city resident.

Lauderdale said at his final interview with commissioners June 5, that the early months of his term will be "an assessment period" while he evaluates the department and gets to know the city employees and citizens.

He indicated he would be strong on administering the department, saying, "Planning is 50 percent of a police chief's effort."

He said he will also stress training of police employees, and building the public trust in the department.

Lauderdale and his wife Sharron have three children: Darren, 21; Amber, 18; and Charlie, 9.

The new chief was born in Beaumont, Texas. He is a graduate of the University of Texas at Arlington with a Bachelor of Arts degree in Government; a Master's of Military Arts and Science in Management from the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College; and a Master's of Art in Criminal Justice from Sam Houston State University. He is also a graduate of the FBI's National Academy.

He entered the U.S. Army in May, 1960.

Sanford Police Nab DUI 'Suspect'

By Karen Talley
Herald Staff Writer

The Sanford Police Department's BATmobile apprehended its first suspected drunk driver Thursday, although after extensive testing with the unit's alcohol detection equipment George Atkinson was released to resume his duties as the police department's computer operations officer.

Atkinson was "detained" by Sanford Police officer Michael Horan in the parking lot at police headquarters as part of an unveiling ceremony for the department's $38,500 mobile breath alcohol testing unit.

The BATmobile's capabilities were demonstrated to Sanford City Commissioners, area law enforcement representatives and local citizens, all of whom agreed the community has acquired a powerful combatant against drunk driving.

The unit, the first of its kind in Seminole County, will be on patrol by the end of next week, Sanford Police Chief Steve Harriett said.

It was purchased and outfitted solely with contributions from more than 50 local businesses, residents and civic organizations.

The BATmobile's primary purpose is to cut down on alcohol related traffic fatalities and accidents by increasing drunk driving arrests.

It is equipped with an intoxilyzer to test breath alcohol levels and a video system to capture suspects' behavior. Both measures are important elements for securing drunk driving convictions, Harriett said.

"I think all those who contributed can take pride in knowing they've done something to save lives and property in the city of Sanford," Harriett said.

The BATmobile "is an outstanding example of what can be accomplished when people take pride in their community," Mayor Bettye Smith concurred.

She also said the large, black and white vehicle, by presence alone, will serve as a deterrent to drunk driving.

"I think the BATmobile will have a psychological effect," Mayor Smith said. "People are going to see it on our streets, and it will make them think twice about getting in their cars after drinking."

The BATmobile will be manned by police officers trained to administer alcohol detection tests, Harriett said.

The vehicle will enable police to process suspected drunk drivers in less than an hour, rather than the more than two hours it takes to use detection equipment at the Seminole County jail, Harriett said.

In addition its alcohol testing equipment, the BATmobile contains a holding cell, a communications system, high powered lighting, first aid and photography equipment and an electric typewriter.

It can serve as an on-scene command center for homicide and major accident investigations and will be dispatched to local schools for educational demonstrations, Harriett said.

The Sanford Police Department has offered the unit's assistance to the Seminole County Sheriff's Department and the Florida Highway Patrol.

The drunk driving suspects these agencies apprehend locally will either be brought to the BATmobile for testing or the unit will be dispatched to them, FHP Sgt. Scott Bond said.

After viewing Thursday's demonstration, Bond said the BATmobile "will really benefit our efforts; testing at the county jail gets pretty backed up, especially on weekends. This will get us back on the road a lot sooner."

Atkinson, the BATmobile's first "suspect," said he has mixed emotions about the unit.

"It's terrific, and it will be a tremendous benefit to the community," Atkinson said. "But it's also sad, when you think about what the BATmobile will be used for and how very necessary it is."

spring to bring the library site plan into compliance with city building codes prior to submission for formal P&Z review, she said.

The P&Z, however, "found too many inadequacies in the plan," Carli said. "It would be better if the city commission decided this one."

Thursday night's P&Z decision came seven months after the library project was first presented to the city for review.

The process began in December with site plan review by the Sanford Historic Preservation Board. The board has jurisdiction over the exterior design of projects slated for construction or modification in the downtown historic district.

The library's site plan was twice amended at the historic board's request, although it was still judged as having too contemporary an appearance when the board conducted a final site plan review in February. The project was denied historic board approval on a 6-4 vote.

The ruling was overturned on appeal to the city commission a month later, when commissioners unanimously agreed the project's educational benefits outweighed its perceived incompatibility with nearby historic structures.

Locked Up For 'Rocking' Train

A Lake Mary policeman who said he saw five youths throw rocks at a train as it passed through that city at about 1:20 a.m. Friday reported arresting five suspects.

Three of those arrested are juveniles, police said. The other two were booked into the Seminole County jail as adults on charges of throwing a deadly missile at a train and prowling.

The arrests were made at 220 Short St., Lake Mary, after the policeman watched five suspects leave a 7-Eleven at Lake Mary Boulevard and Country Club Road and run into woods near a railroad track. The policeman said he saw the five throw rocks at a passing train and heard the rocks hit the train.

Charged as adults were: Anthony John Clancy, 18, of 220 A Short St., Lake Mary, and Christopher Dale Breese, 19, of 1165 A. Paseo De los Flores, Casselberry. They were being held in lieu of $5,000 bond each.

POLE DAMAGE ARREST
One of two suspects, seen in an area of Lake Mary where a policeman found poles on city property had been torn down, was nabbed by police at the scene and charged with criminal mischief and prowling.

The policeman reported responding twice to the area of Fourth and Washington streets. On the second call, at about 10 p.m., he reported seeing a suspect running with a stick in his hand.

That man was nabbed where the officer noted that several poles that had been painted the day before had been broken or torn out of the ground. The estimated cost of replacing the poles is $130 each, a police report said.

Ronald P. Keola Jr., 18, of P.O. Box 21, of Raccoon St., Lake Mary, was arrested at 10:25 p.m. Thursday and was being held in lieu of $100 bond.

DUI ARRESTS
The following people have been arrested in Seminole County on a charge of driving under the influence:

—L. Robert Russell, 64, of 380 State Road 427 lot 3, Sanford, was arrested at 8:30 p.m. Thursday after he was seen driving erratically on U.S. Highway 17-92, Sanford.

—Raymond Anthony Gilsendorfer, 24, of Orlando, at 1:10 a.m. Friday, after he was seen driving without headlights on 25th Street in Sanford. Police report his car was also weaving and was clocked traveling 65 mph in a 45 mph zone.

—Russell Anthony Cery, 26, of 1213 Rossman St., Apopka, at 12:05 a.m. Friday after he was seen driving a vehicle with one headlight out on State Road 436, Altamonte Springs. He was also charged with having defective equipment.

Tampa's Topless Doughnut Shop Called Cabaret

TAMPA (UPI) — The owner of Tampa's first and only topless doughnut shop has been found guilty of violating two city ordinances.

R. Gene Radney was convicted by a county court jury Thursday of failing to have special licenses to operate a cabaret, and of allowing bare-breasted women to serve food.

County Judge Robert Bonanno sentenced Radney to one year probation, $2,000 in fines and 100 hours of community service. He also ordered Radney to stop using topless waitresses.

Radney, who operates Dolly's

Donuts, said he will appeal the sentence and said he expects his doughnut shop to remain open — although he wasn't sure what his waitresses would be wearing.

The four-woman, two-man jury took just 20 minutes to reject arguments of Radney's attorney that the city's cabaret ordinance, which applies to nude, topless and go-go dancers in commercial entertainment, was not applicable to the doughnut shop.

The attorney argued unsuccessfully that the principal business of Dolly's was doughnuts, not entertainment.

Aggravated Battery Charge Is Dropped

A Sanford man charged with aggravated battery in connection with a dispute in April regarding a woman will not be prosecuted.

The State Attorney's Office has decided not to press charges against Michael Clifton Dempsey, 26, of 417 W. Third St. The case was not prosecuted because of lack of cooperation from the alleged victim.

Dempsey was arrested along with Earnest Blake Sanders, 53, of the same address, after reportedly beating Ronnie Tilghman, 25, of 213 E. Fourth St., with a bat.

After the alleged incident, Sanders reportedly shot Tilghman in the arm. The incident brought out the sheriff's SWAT team (Special Weapons And Tactics) after Sanders retreated inside home. Dempsey was arrested outside the residence.

After the incident, which occurred at about 10:40 p.m. April 7, Tilghman was treated and released from Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford.

The SWAT team was called to assist Sanford police because witnesses had reported that the armed man who had allegedly shot Tilghman was inside the home. He had refused police orders to surrender. The team was called as a safety precaution, police said.

Sanders surrendered around 3 a.m. April 8 and was charged with aggravated battery.

In another court proceeding, the wife of a Sanford man serving 10 years for the shooting death of another Sanford man has been granted a divorce.

Linda Jean Conquest was granted a divorce from Freddie Lee Conquest.

Conquest, 27, who pleaded guilty to manslaughter, was sentenced in June 1984 to 10 years for the death of Michael McCloud, 22, of 29 William Clark Court. A codefendant, Carl Presley, 24, of 114 E. 11th St., Sanford, was sentenced the same month to 10½ years for second-degree murder. The murder occurred when a drug deal soured.

According to Mrs. Conquest's petition, the Conquests were married May 13, 1983 and lived together until January, 1984, the month Conquest was arrested on the murder charge.

According to court records, police officers were dispatched to William Clark Circle the afternoon of Jan. 10, 1984, after the report of a shooting. On arrival they found McCloud's body.

Witnesses told police McCloud and the men were arguing when Conquest handed Presley a gun who then shot McCloud. A single shot hit McCloud in the upper arm, traveled through his chest piercing both lungs and his heart.

Conquest and Presley fled. Conquest was arrested a few minutes later. Presley surrendered the next day. A juvenile in the case was not charged.

Circuit Judge S. Joseph Davis handled the divorce case.

In a third case in circuit court, an 11-year-old Altamonte Springs boy has filed petition to have his name changed.

Gaylon Dwight Black Jr., of 138 Spring Valley Loop, has petitioned the court to change his name to Michael Gaylon Black.

He states in the suit that he was born to Gaylon Dwight Black Sr. and Pattie J. Ball on July 20, 1974 in Daytona Beach.

His parents agree to the name change, according to court records.

The case has been assigned to Circuit Judge C. Vernon Mize Jr.

Gene Transfer May Help Citrus Survive Cold

GAINESVILLE (UPI) — By 1990 it may be possible to alter the genetic makeup of economically important crops such as citrus fruits to help them survive

Charges Of Racism Levelled At Ag Dept.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The case of a government nutritionist, who charges her proposed dismissal is racially motivated, is one of two civil rights controversies at the Agriculture Department.

Edith Thomas argued to keep her job at a review hearing and said her efforts to provide nutrition information to black institutions were thwarted by racist attitudes.

A move to dismiss Thomas was delayed to give her a chance to reply to 34 pages of charges made by her superiors at the department's Extension Service. If she loses her case, she is expected to file a federal lawsuit.

"There is only one logical conclusion that I can reach as to why my nutrition services were consistently denied to low-income, black and minority people — despite this being a major function of my ... job — and why I have been so thoroughly mistreated as an employee and human being," she said at a news conference before the review proceeding began.

She charged the Extension Service, "motivated by racism, has intentionally adopted a policy of keeping blacks and non-white minorities in a disadvantaged condition in violation of the mandate of the Civil Rights Act."

In correspondence with Agriculture Secretary Richard Lynn, Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., recently called for a civil rights investigation against Agriculture Department programs in Arkansas.

Blaze Destroys Lake Mary Home

A blaze of undetermined origin destroyed a wood and brick home on Smathers Lane overlooking Lake Emma in Lake Mary late Friday morning. Lake Mary Fire Marshal John Tighman gave a preliminary estimate of $40,000 as the cost of the house, not including contents. A cause has not been determined.

No one was reported to be in the house when the fire started at about 11:13 a.m. and there were no injuries. An additional water tanker was called in from Seminole County to back up the two Lake Mary pumper trucks and tanker.

Fourteen Lake Mary firefighters, plus several members of the city's police department battled the blaze for an hour-and-a-half, but the home was fully engulfed when they arrived.

"The second floor was already gone when we got here," Jim Ortoles, Jr. of the Lake Mary department. He estimated that 20,000 gallons of water, much of which was drawn from the nearby lake, was used to extinguish the blaze.

The owner of the home, Elmer Ray Wilson, was at a neighbor's at the time the fire broke out. Nancy Lanier said Wilson had just walked to her home, two houses away, to borrow some paper towels.

"We heard what sounded like sizzling, and saw smoke. (Wilson) ran out and yelled to call the fire department, and just then we heard an explosion," Mrs. Lanier, who called the fire department said.

Neighbors reported that Wilson lived alone in the home. Wilson said he had fire insurance, and watched in shock as the fire was extinguished. Wilson also said he had no idea what caused the fire.

Mrs. Lanier said the house had an all wood interior, and that Wilson had been improving the home. "It was beautiful. What he did in that house was superior," she said.

Dennis Smathers, whose home is next to Wilson's, about 15 feet away, wasn't home when the fire broke out. He was called at work and quickly came home.

"Some paint peeled and a window was knocked out by the heat," Smathers said of damage to his home. He said he would inspect his roof to see if there was any heat damage.

According to a Lake Mary fire dispatch report, the call from Mrs. Lanier came in at 11:13 a.m., and firefighters arrived on the scene at 11:22 a.m.

cold weather, University of Florida researchers said.

"We are not aiming to produce citrus that can grow in Minnesota, but rather, we're working to add a new dimension to crop protection so that Florida agricultural producers don't lose everything they have invested when cool weather or a freeze hits," said Charles Guy, a researcher at the university's Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences.

In 1985, Guy became one of the first to publish research tying certain proteins in spinach to the phenomenon of cold-hardiness.

He and researcher Eduardo Vallejos are attempting to isolate the genes responsible for triggering the proteins that protect against cold.

Guy predicted that by 1990, scientists will be able to transfer cold-hardiness genes from one species, such as spinach, into economically important crops such as citrus fruits to increase their tolerance to cold.

The researchers described their work at an international symposium on commercial uses of biotechnology. The conference, which attracted scientists from Europe and Asia, is jointly sponsored by the University of Texas, and IFAS.

The research is significant, Guy said, because since 1980 cold weather has caused economic losses of about $5 billion to Florida crops such as citrus, ornamental plants, and vegetables.

Temperatures don't have to dip as low as freezing to damage crops. Temperatures of even 55 degrees Fahrenheit can cause millions of dollars in damage to sub-tropical crops such as ornamental plants and tomatoes, Vallejos said.

Although commercially grown tomatoes do not tolerate temperatures below 50 degrees Fahrenheit, wild varieties in the tomato family found in the Peruvian Andes show natural adaptation to nighttime temperatures as low as zero degrees.

Vallejos hopes to use the tomato family's natural diversity to discover the genes responsible for the internal genetic protection against chilly weather, then transfer the information to commercial varieties of tomatoes.

"Traditional crop breeding techniques that cross and backcross varieties have not successfully incorporated low-temperature tolerance into cultivated tomatoes because the trait is so complex. This wonderful technique looks at the genes themselves," says Vallejos.

NATION IN BRIEF

Women Tellers Killed During Bank Robbery; Two Men Held

NORTHAMPTON, Pa. (UPI) — Three women bank employees were shot and killed in a still unexplained attack "with blazing guns" blamed on two men now facing murder and robbery charges.

Two Pennsylvania men were being held for allegedly storming the small branch office of the First National Bank of Bath in suburban Allentown Friday.

"There is no evidence they said anything at all, just came in with blazing guns," State Police Capt. Benjamin Brooks said. "The investigation indicates that they went behind the tellers' cage. However, it is still undetermined how much money was taken."

A fourth woman employee was listed in critical condition from gunshot wounds and an injured customer was in stable condition. Two others in the bank escaped injury.

Brooks identified the dead as Janice M. Confer, 48, of Northampton; Hazel S. Evans, 55, of Coplay, and Jane E. Hartman, 34, of Catasauqua, Pa.

Marcos Will Get His Millions

HONOLULU (UPI) — A federal judge has ordered the Customs Service to give deposed Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos and his entourage millions of dollars in cash, jewelry and other belongings seized when his party arrived in Hawaii.

Marcos told a television station the release of the money would enable him to pay back the United States for expenses incurred when the U.S. military flew him, his wife, Imelda, and 88 others to exile in Hawaii Feb. 26 after 20 years of rule in the Philippines.

U.S. District Judge Harold Fong Friday ruled the Customs Service lacked authority to hold the money and other belongings. The property was not seized in connection with any investigation into potential violation of U.S. law, he said.

The decision was made on a suit filed by two Marcos aides who accompanied the deposed leader into exile. A separate suit filed by the Central Bank of the Philippines seeking return of the money still is pending.

The government of new Philippine President Corason Aquino, which maintains the property was stolen, in March released a Customs inventory of $7.7 million in goods it said accompanied Marcos and his entourage to Hawaii.

Chaplain Jailed For Sex Crimes

FORT RICHARDSON, Alaska (UPI) — A defense lawyer blamed the Vietnam war for the behavior of an Army chaplain sentenced to four years in prison for hypnotizing women clients and then sexually assaulting them.

Lt. Col. Anthony Longval Jr., 53, faced a maximum 56-year sentence after pleading guilty Thursday to 14 sex-related charges.

Longval told UPI after the Friday sentencing, to four years behind bars, that he wanted everybody to know he was "terribly sorry and very much ashamed" for his crimes. The chaplain added he did not want the public to hold his crimes "against the Army in general or chaplains in particular."

Longval's lawyers blamed the chaplain's behavior on a "post-traumatic stress disorder" which chief defense counsel Vaughan Taylor, Jacksonville, N.C., said was caused by Longval's experiences in Vietnam. "Absolutely Vietnam — that was the sole source," Taylor said.

King Proud Dad, Despite Tragedy

BOSTON (UPI) — Jordan's King Hussein returned by rainy motorcade from the Connecticut high school graduation of one of his daughters, declining comment on the fatal crash of one of four helicopters his entourage was to have used.

Shortly after Hussein, an experienced pilot, decided the weather was too foul to fly to Middlebury, Conn., the Sikorsky S-76 crashed in fog and rain Friday morning in Sutton, Mass., killing all four Sikorsky employees aboard.

"It is very unfortunate and we really regret the loss of lives, but we don't want to speculate on the reason. We will leave that to Sikorsky," Jordanian embassy spokesman Akram Barakat said late Friday from Washington, D.C.

The Sikorsky craft bound from Hanscom Field in Bedford, Mass., for Sikorsky Aircraft in Stratford, Conn., disappeared from radar screens at 9:03 a.m. The wreckage was found about 10:30 a.m. The cause was under investigation.

Senator Urges U.S.-Soviet Mars Mission

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., thinks a joint manned mission to Mars with the Soviet Union is just the medicine the nation's ailing space agency needs to re-energize itself after the space shuttle Challenger disaster.

Gore said at a news conference Thursday that for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to regain its commitment to safety and its self-esteem, it needs "a clear and hopefully inspiring goal" similar to President John Kennedy's 1961 directive to put a man on the moon by the end of the decade.

After NASA triumphantly met that goal July 20, 1969, and on five later Apollo missions in the early 1970s, human performance and "the level of inspiration began to decline" at NASA, Gore said.

A new challenge is needed, he added, and, "The most striking goal ... would be a joint mission to Mars with the Soviet Union. It is an achievable goal."

Gore also promised that in the wake of the shuttle disaster, Congress would take its oversight function of the space agency much more seriously. "There will be a new attitude toward NASA," he said. "From now on, Congress is going to be looking extremely carefully at every move NASA makes. No longer will NASA be given the benefit of the doubt. No longer will wildly optimistic projections about the performance of technology be accepted at face value."

Gore, who has been among the most outspoken critics of NASA since the shuttle disaster Jan. 28, also introduced three bills he said would help the space agency achieve higher safety standards and greater efficiency.

One of Gore's bills would allow employees of federal contractors who become whistleblowers and who are subjected to reprisals by their bosses to sue in federal court for as much as $500,000 in damages.

He said he introduced the bill after Morton Thiokol Inc., builder of the space shuttle's flawed solid rocket boosters, demoted two engineers who warned against launching Challenger on Jan. 28. The two engineers have since been reinstated.

A second bill would designate NASA's chief engineer as the official responsible for quality assurance and would require him to report directly to NASA's administrator.

The third bill is a resolution urging more central control by NASA headquarters over its various operations centers.

Seminole P&Z Recommends Against Commercial Development Along SR46

Citing the need for a change to Seminole County's comprehensive land use plan, the county planning and zoning commission Wednesday recommended denial of a request to rezone land along State Road 46 for commercial development.

The P&Z voted 6-1 against the request by Arthur Davis for rezoning from agriculture to planned unit development for 5.4 acres at S.R. 46 and Lake Markham Road. Commissioner Dot Meadors voted in favor of the request.

The P&Z followed county staff's recommendation in deciding the request does require a land use amendment.

The property is located in the same study area as land on which a change from general rural to commercial was previously denied. County commissioners last month turned down the request by E. Parker Harrison to change the land use of 2.9 acres at S.R. 46 and Orange Boulevard.

Residents in the area who opposed the request urged the county to stall a land use change there until the comprehensive plan is updated and the total impact on the area can be studied.

Citizens said they were "fighting to maintain the uniqueness of northwest Seminole County" and that approval of the change would mean a "piecemeal" approach to land use.

The residents were also concerned about commercial development intruding into the area and setting a precedent along S.R. 46.

WEATHER

NATIONAL REPORT:

Thunderstorms flooded streets and threatened to overflow streams from Texas to New York today as the Atlantic's first tropical storm of the 1986 season lashed the Carolinas with gale-force winds. Flash flood watches and warnings were issued for parts of New York state, New England, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Texas, the National Weather Service said. Showers and thunderstorms that rolled from the Mississippi Valley to New England closed roads in Pinebush in southeastern New York and sent 3 feet of water surging over roads in Austin town, a suburb of Youngstown in northeastern Ohio. Flooding also was reported in central Illinois. Storms in flood-weary Texas dumped more than 3 inches of rain in the east central part of the state, causing a 4-foot rise in Rocky Creek between Johnson City and Stonewall. Flooding was also reported near Del Rio in southwestern Texas. At least 10 people have died in Texas storms and floods in the past week. In Chicago, heavy fog closed two of the city's three airports early today. "If I had a butter knife, I might be able to see a few feet," said Joseph Straub, an air traffic control specialist at Meigs Field. "I can't see the runway, I can't even see the lights on the runway, and they're on." Straub said visibility at Meigs Field was less than 1/8th of a mile. Midway Airport was also closed, but O'Hare International Airport, the world's busiest, was still open, officials said. Tropical storm Andrew, the first of the 1986 season, threw 40-mph winds and 6-foot waves at North and South Carolina, prompting gale warnings along the Atlantic coast from Cape Lookout, N.C., to Virginia Beach, Va. At 12:30 a.m. EDT, Andrew was located about 100 miles south-southeast of Wilmington, N.C., and was moving northeast at about 7 mph, the weather bureau said. "If we have a continuation of (northeast movement), that will take it away from the land," NWS meteorologist Paul Fike said. "But with all tropical storms, you have to keep an eye on them because they change direction." Thunderstorms in the eastern part of the nation dumped up to 6 inches of rain Friday in Litchfield County in northwest Connecticut and Hampden County in southwest Massachusetts, flooding roads and filling streams to the brim. Flooding also was reported in east central Ohio, and residents in Montpelier in northwestern Ohio monitored the St. Joseph River as it neared flood stage. "Quite a few places have filled up with water, and there's no place for it to go," said Kelly Hephner, a government clerk in Montpelier.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Three More Burned Bodies Found In South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Police patrols found the burned bodies of three blacks, and a former black politician and a woman friend were killed by an attacker firing a Soviet-made rifle, police said Saturday.

The three charred bodies brought to six the number of burning victims found by police in black areas in three days. Police said one of the unidentified overnight victims may be a police officer.

A government minister Friday said President Pieter Botha may impose a state of emergency to combat racial violence expected to spill over from protests to mark the 10th anniversary of a black uprising in Soweto on June 16.

Deputy Information Minister Louis Nel's statements underscored opposition lawmakers' fears that the government will invoke emergency powers for police and troops.

The government Friday sought to avoid confrontation with churches, saying a ban by Law and Order Minister Louis le Grange on June 16 commemorations did not apply to genuine church services.

Such prominent clerics as Bishop Desmond Tutu and the Rev. Allan Boesak, contending the ban was aimed at church gatherings, said they would ignore the decree and organize special services on the anniversary.

Mexican Currency Loses Value

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The Mexican peso has not stopped dropping in value, finally sinking to an all-time low against the dollar, the latest in a gathering storm of problems that threaten to stretch beyond the Mexican economy.

After a steep decline Thursday that saw the peso slide as low as 640 to the dollar, some private exchange houses reported Friday that the dollar was bringing close to 740 pesos — the lowest level in the history of the currency.

Faced with an exchange rate that was changing by the hour, some financial institutions along the U.S. border were reported to have at least temporarily stopped buying pesos Friday.

But the growing problems went beyond inconveniences for border-area consumers by raising new questions about how Mexico was going to keep up with its international debt payments. Any new moratorium on debt repayment could have a ripple effect on American bank stocks and reignite a debt crisis that up to now has been considered manageable.

Mexico is already staggering from a severe decline in its oil income, the result of the drop in world oil prices, as well as mounting difficulties in keeping up with interest payments on its $100 billion foreign debt — the second largest in Latin America. Only Brazil's is larger.

Abortions Urged In Russia

MOSCOW (UPI) — Abortions have been recommended for some Soviet women caught in the radioactive fallout from the Chernobyl nuclear disaster, the U.S. surgeon helping the most severely affected victims said.

Dr. Robert Gale also told a Friday news conference that "radiation levels in Kiev are approximately 15 to 30 times above normal levels," although there was no immediate danger.

The American surgeon, who returned from Chernobyl, 80 miles north of Kiev on Thursday, said the 100,000 people evacuated from a 19-mile zone around the damaged reactor face increased risks of developing leukemia and thyroid cancer because of the April 26 accident.

Gale said such cancers would only show up between five and 20 years from now and it was too early to predict how large the expected increase would be.

"There is a continuous risk of cancer increasing from radiation and that these 100,000 people are in fact at a potential risk of developing cancer," Gale said. He said they would be monitored for the rest of their lives.

Gale said people as far away as Britain face increased cancer risks but added those actually developing cancer from Chernobyl outside the Soviet Union would be "small."

...Deadline

with SCEA to coordinate an extension from this termination to the Orange County/Seminole County line whenever the SCEA has plans and is desirous of constructing a project north from the (county) line," Gwynn wrote.

He continued, "I think we are all aware and appreciate the need for a beltway that would continue north into Seminole County in order to handle the traffic demands in the Central Florida area."

"Consequently, the OCEA feels that the first alternative would be the most beneficial to the travelling public in Orange and Seminole counties and we hope you would see fit to agree with this proposed solution."

"Again, we realize this is a short time frame, however it is dictated by the financial impact of pending federal tax legislation."

The bill, under discussion by the U.S. Senate, is expected to be passed by mid-August, Gwynn said Friday.

The legislation would set forth a different set of restrictions for local government's ability to refinance interest-free municipal bonds.

"We must get into the bond market prior to the new tax law to get a good interest rate," Gwynn said. "Interest rates now are the best they've been in the last 10-12 years."

An interlocal agreement would be part of the official statement OCEA must have by June 13, describing the project in detail, he said, but added that there is not enough time to work out some of the conditions which have been addressed.

"To operate and maintain (the extension), there are certain things we have to have control over if we're going to build it," Gwynn said.

Hooper said Friday that Seminole County will continue to work with OCEA and hopes to come to an agreement, but not necessarily by June 13.

He said he does not feel the extension is a "dead issue" and that there is "still time to resolve the differences and construct the interchange."

Construction of the extension is still one to 1½ years away, Hooper said, adding that failure to have an interlocal agreement would not affect bond validation.

"They can still have bond validation without stopping plans for the 2,000-foot extension," he said. "Bond validation is an important step, but it's not the final step."

One of the differences between the two expressway authorities yet to be resolved is how and if Seminole County would share in the toll revenues from the extension.

It has been estimated that between 15,000 and 17,000 trips per day would be generated along the extension by motorists in south central Seminole County, generally in the Tuskawilla/Red Bug/426 area.

That traffic is expected to generate $400,000 per year in revenues, of which Seminole County wants a portion. The figure is based on current toll rates of seven cents per mile.

OCEA has said the issuance of bonds would be hampered by sharing toll revenues and that construction costs would exceed those revenues.

"At one point, Seminole County offered to construct the 2,000-foot extension. As an alternative to sharing revenues, the county has proposed that OCEA construct a 426 interchange, the point at which the county's expressway would tie into the extension and proceed north. However, the cost of constructing the interchange has yet to be determined.

The county has also proposed that OCEA buy the right of way on the north side of 426 for Seminole to construct the interchange at a later date.

Also at issue is which entity would control the extension's right-of-way. Both have agreed that Seminole must condemn the land to be used, however OCEA said it needs control for its bond covenants.

Seminole said it wants to retain ownership of the right-of-way for its future expressway project.

Hooper said he feels the issues can be resolved so neither the revenue source nor the trips per day will be affected.

He said the staffs of both expressway authorities have met twice to discuss the proposed agreement, but that it has not been presented to the local board.

The local expressway authority last month directed county staff to begin negotiating the agreement with OCEA.

Geysers Serve Iceland's Energy Needs

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (UPI) — Let the rest of the world cope with the environmental perils caused by coal, oil and nuclear power. Icelanders are warmed by pollution-free geysers and lava fields.

As European farmers destroyed crops contaminated by fallout from the Soviet nuclear accident, Iceland's geothermal market gardeners went on filling shops with risk-free tomatoes and other vegetables grown defiantly on the edge of the Arctic circle.

Radiation monitoring recorded only negligible extra levels on Iceland's east coast after the April 26 Chernobyl mishap. Winds from the North Pole virtually kept the nuclear cloud away — just as acid rain from Europe's coal-fired industries never finds its way to this North Atlantic outpost halfway between New York and Moscow.

As terrorism and radioactivity scare American tourists away from Europe, Iceland is the only country to report no drop in bookings," said Sveinn Saemundsson, a spokesman for Icelandair, the country's largest airline.

Cultivating food and flowers in greenhouses heated by water from the depths of the earth is only one way Iceland uses its unusual natural resource.

Geothermal power is created when rainwater seeps down to the geologically young island's hot underground, where it is turned to steam. Iceland has a greater concentration of hot springs than any other country.

Vikings settling on Iceland in the 9th century are thought to have used hot springs for cooking and washing. The word "geyser" comes from the Icelandic "geysir."

Today, geothermal energy means year-round Mediterranean temperatures in homes and boiling water at the turn of a tap for over 80 percent of the island's 240,000 inhabitants. Many of them brave blizzards to swim outdoors in the steaming local pools.

A nationwide buildup in the use of geothermal power and heat began in an effort to beat the oil crises of the 1970s. Today, home heating on the central hot-spring system costs only a fraction of oil or electrical heating.

The hot springs provide one-third of Iceland's energy needs. The rest is supplied by hydropower and oil, which is used mainly for cars and the fishing fleet.

Iceland was importing

160,000 tons of oil a year in 1973," said Ratur Halldorsson, a spokesman for the national energy authority. "Today the figure is down to 24,000 tons. Without geothermal heating we would have to import 450,000 tons of oil a year (now)."

Geothermal water and steam are also used in chemical manufacture and fish meal production. Biotechnologists are at work on the latest idea — developing microorganisms found only in Iceland's hot springs for high-temperature industrial jobs.

Iceland's geothermal consultancy is a developed export industry, with over 30 countries and four continents on its roll of customers.

But the best aspect is that Mother Nature's energy, unlike that generated by man, leaves the environment untouched.

No radiation, no soot and no acid rain come with the columns of steam rising from geostations such as the eight-megawatt svartsengi plant on southwest Iceland's Reykjanes peninsula.

But there are perils. Iceland lives on the lid of the earth's bubbling cauldron, and sometimes things bubble over.

In 1973, the 5,000 inhabitants of the Westman Islands got out in the nick of time when their friendly neighborhood volcanic mountain erupted one night. But when they returned there was hot water for all until the end of this century from beneath the new-formed lava fields.

Reagan Missed Marines' Latrines

WASHINGTON (UPI) — When President Reagan visited the Marine Corps Recruit Depot at Parris Island, S.C., earlier this week, he toured the grueling training ground of the "confidence course," but not the male recruit latrines.

Had he, the president would have noticed that some of the toilets come without stalls and all those with stalls have no doors.

"They are nasty looking," said Capt. Robert Ruark, a platoon series commander. The reason the recruit toilets don't have stalls or doors is "they don't rate it," he said.

According to Maj. Jim Vance, base public affairs officer, the purpose of not including doors on the stalls that exist "is a matter of control."

"I don't think this is a loss of human dignity at all," he said, adding it allows the drill instructors "to see who is around."

4C To Publish Child Care Directory

A guide to central Florida child care centers will be published this spring, and is targeted for distribution by the end of the month.

The 72-page directory, "The Complete Guide to Child Care in Central Florida" will be published by Community Coordinated Child Care for Central Florida, (4C), Orlando.

The first edition of the guide, expected to be produced annually, will list 308 child care centers, family day care centers, Head Start centers, and half-day programs operating in Seminole, Orange, and Osceola Counties, according to 4C spokesman Ruth Shively. About 35,000 copies will be printed, and available to the public at no cost, she said.

Each center listing will include address, phone numbers, hours, rates, capacity, and photographs. The listings will be divided into nine geographic areas, and maps will be included.

The book is designed to help parents locate care centers to suit the needs of their children. Advice in how to choose the right center, employer supported care centers, and the changing child care center industry will be discussed in the directory.

4C's Child Care Information and Referral Service has made data contained in the new publication available to the public over the phone for a decade, with the support of the United Way. The directory will be distributed through 4C, social service agencies, hospitals, doctor's offices, libraries, chambers of commerce, and other organizations.

4C is seeking donations to underwrite the cost of producing the directory, and so far have funded one-fifth of the cost through contributions from JP Hotels, North Lake Foods, Seven-Eleven, and Cushman & Wakefield of Florida.

IN BRIEF

Tropical Storm Andrew Moves North; Sea Warning Issued

MIAMI (UPI) — Tropical storm Andrew moved north off the coast of North Carolina Saturday with winds of 45 mph, and forecasters warned that heavy seas could be dangerous for coastal residents.

"At the present time the primary threat is from high surf. We do not see this turning into a hurricane within the next 24 hours," said Jim Lynch, a meteorologist at the National Hurricane Center.

At 6 a.m., the season's first tropical storm was 150 miles south of Cape Hatteras, N.C., near latitude 33.0 north, longitude 76.0 west. Andrew was moving toward the northeast at 10 mph.

Lynch said the storm may move into the coastal islands during morning hours, but he doesn't expect much damage from the wind.

Surrogate Mom For 'Royal' Deer

GULF BREEZE (UPI) — A palm-sized newborn muntjac deer rejected by its mother has a box for a home, an old sweatshirt for a blanket, and a "preemie bottle" to nurse on.

The muntjac deer was born Tuesday evening at The Zoo. But the tiny baby's one-foot tall mama refused to feed her offspring. So the zoo took matters, quite literally, into its own hands.

Head zookeeper Debbie Pleasanton volunteered to become the six-ounce deer's surrogate mother. Her boyfriend is a surrogate daddy. He is raising a baby chimp at his Pensacola home.

The muntjac deer, also known as a "barking deer," has horns rather than antlers atop its head. The deer is a native of Southeast Asia, India and Nepal, and grows no larger than a foot tall measured from the shoulders.

Lawmakers Complete Budget

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — The 1986 session of the Florida Legislature produced a $16.5 billion budget and watershed reforms of insurance and the civil liability system.

But even though the lawmakers gave themselves an extra three hours past their midnight Friday deadline, they failed to reach agreement on professional standards for doctors, optometrists, osteopaths and dentists.

The failure means the state's regulatory structure for those professions will "sunset" Oct. 1 — unless the lawmakers return for a special session to finish the job. Senate President Harry Johnston would not rule out that possibility.

The Senate voted 38-2 to approve the spending plan moments before midnight. The 94-20 House vote came a few moments before the Senate took up the plan.

Beached Whales Moved

KEY WEST (UPI) — Cranes hoisted 14 sunburned whales onto mattress-lined trucks where they were cooled with ice in preparation for the trip from Key West to research facilities elsewhere in the Keys and in Orlando.

"All of them were in pretty good condition," said Linda O'Brien late Friday as the last truck left. O'Brien is an owner of Flipper's Sea School, a closed-down tourist attraction where the whales were brought after they were beached.

The whales, known as false killer whales because they resemble killer whales, were among 28 stranded Thursday at two points in shallow waters off Key West. Because their exposed skins dried out, they were badly sunburned.

riett said. "We want the rally to permanently open the lines of communication between the public and their law enforcement officials," the chief said. "We also want the evening to result in some new Neighborhood Watch programs and a rekindling of others that aren't as active as they should be."

The police department "can't do it alone," Harriett said.

"It's imperative that people take and maintain an active role when it comes to crime prevention. We want residents to look out for one another, and to call us whenever they see something that isn't right in their neighborhood," the chief said. "A suspicious car, or strangers, definitely warrants a call to the police department. We want to prevent crime, rather than catch criminals after the fact."

"It's a proactive, rather than reactive approach to preventing crime," the chief said.

Harriett also said he hopes the rally will instill the same spirit of camaraderie that was displayed during barn raisings of years gone by. "People would say 'Let's build a barn,' and before you knew it the whole community was there to pitch in. This is what we want people to take home with them Tuesday night, that same spirit of cooperation, of neighbor caring for neighbor." —Karen Talley

Not Guilty In Pyramid

By Deane Jordan
Herald Staff Writer

Three people were found not guilty Friday of running a pyramid scheme in Seminole County.

A jury of three men and three women returned the verdict in favor of Herbert J. Shepard, 69, of 350 Southcot Drive, Casselberry, Lillie M. Sims, 54, of Ocoee, and Stewart Beale, 50, of 350 Maytown Rd., Osteen.

The defense argued that under statute, which refers to chain-letter activity as a lottery, the defendants were not conducting a lottery. The jury was apparently influenced by the argument.

The defendants could have received up to a year in the county jail and a $1,000 fine each.

According to court records, sheriff's investigators and an assistant state attorney attended a meeting of The Trend Club, on Feb. 10, at Denney's Restaurant, Oxford Road and State Road 436, Casselberry.

At the meeting they heard about members selling "trend cards" for products purchased to successive members. Each successful member gets a commission from the members they enroll, according to the arrest report.

The investigators announced their presence at the end of the meeting and told the people there that criminal charges would be filed.

On Feb. 17, detectives from Seminole and Orange counties attended another meeting at the same place. After hearing basically the same information, they announced their presence and arrested the defendants.

The statute states "... the organization of any chair letter club, pyramid club, or other group organized or brought together under any plan or device whereby fees or dues or anything of material value to be paid or given by members thereof are to be paid or given to any other members thereof, which plan or device includes any provision for the increase in such membership through a chain process of new members securing other new members and thereby advancing themselves in the group to a position where such members in turn receive fees, dues or things of material value from other members, is hereby declared a lottery, and whoever shall participate in any such lottery by becoming a member of, or affiliating with, any person for membership or affiliation in any such group or organization shall be guilty of a misdemeanor of the first degree..."

The case was heard in county court before County Judge Harold Johnson.

...Divorce

they married for life; whose hopes and marriages ended in divorce or with the death of a spouse. They are seeking and receiving help through New Beginnings, a free, state initiated program for single parents and displaced homemakers.

At 51, Luey Long, of Orlando, is also one of the graduates of this four-week program which, since a February start, has offered support to about 50 women. New groups are started each month at SCC and there are both day and evening sessions under the direction of SCC vocational specialist Midge Mycoff.

Ms. Long's has, because of divorce, twice found herself in the role of "displaced homemaker." Mrs. Mycoff defined "displaced homemaker" as a woman who for the major part of her active life has worked in the home without pay, who finds herself divorced, widowed or separated, and who needs to seek economic self-sufficiency.

Ms. Long's first 18-year marriage ended when her husband left her for another woman. She had abandoned her education to put him through school, she said. For five years, before she remarried, Ms. Long struggled to rear her three children and said she never received support payments ordered by the court.

During that five years, being 18 credit hours short of a college degree, Ms. Long said she was unable to support herself and relied on her father to supplement her income.

After the failure of her second marriage, which endured eight years, Ms. Long said because of Florida's no-fault divorce laws, she found herself on her own with no money, no home and no marketable skills.

Again she has turned to her father for financial assistance, but this time Ms. Long said, New Beginning was there to help her make a positive start on the road to developing a career. Even if she were again swept off her feet by a man promising to care for her she would continue her study of word processing and would pursue a career, she said.

Ms. Talley too likes the taste of freedom she has sampled.

"I like my independence now, even though I'm struggling. If I were to become involved with someone there would be a lot of talk and understanding before I would give that up."

Both Ms. Talley and Ms. Long said they will never again give up their goals for a promise of perpetual care and support from a man.

"I realize I really am an individual and nobody's going to look out for me. If it's going to be done I have to do it," Ms. Talley said. "I never expected to be on my own like this."

Mrs. Mycoff, who has been married 32 years, taxing districts to fund community improvements such as parks.

Under the bill, voters in the three counties would have had to approve the tax and a $40 million bond issue to finance the construction of a zoo in Orlando.

Al Rozon, executive director of the zoo, said Tuesday officials will "work hard out here to make it a viable zoo and to make it a better attraction."

Supporters of keeping the zoo in Sanford last November planned a push for similar legislation to fund a local zoo through property taxes, but they backed down from the effort after the zoological society made its proposal.

The state legislature reconvenes next April.

Investigator Charged With DUI

A state attorney's investigator arrested on a driving under the influence charge has been released from the Seminole County jail on his own recognizance.

Rodger Erwin Webb, 43, of 623 Groveswood Ave., Sanford, was arrested by a Florida Highway Patrol trooper at 10:15 a.m. Friday after his truck that was southbound on U.S. Highway 17-92 at State Road 434 in Longwood, reportedly crossed the center line of the roadway. Oncoming traffic reportedly had to take evasive action to avoid an accident. Trooper R.S. Gregory reported.

Webb, who is an investigator for the Brevard/Seminole state attorney, refused to take a breath test to determine his blood alcohol level after his arrest, according to Seminole County sheriff's department personnel.

In reporting the incidents leading to Webb's arrest, Gregory wrote: After the truck was stopped and the driver exited the vehicle there was a "very strong odor of alcohol on his breath and he appeared to be very excited." The subject's speech was slurred and impaired, the officer reported.

When the driver was given a series of roadside tests to determine if he was intoxicated, Gregory reported, he could not follow directions for the test. In a balance test the subject could stand on one foot only to the count of three, not to the required count of 30, the officer said. With his left hand, he could not touch his nose, and with the right touched his upper nose instead of the tip of the nose, Gregory said.

Webb was not available early Saturday to comment.

Miranda Debate Continues On 20th Anniversary

By Andrea Neal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the 20 years since the landmark Miranda decision, most police can recite by heart its litany of rights for arrested suspects. But the Supreme Court still is tinkering with the ruling's meaning — and its reach.

Critics say the justices are diluting the 1966 opinion with an eye toward overturning it. Civil rights advocates think the court has committed itself forever to the principle that suspects should know their rights.

"I think it has done a little of both," said constitutional law expert Laurence Tribe of Harvard University. "But the most dramatic thing is that the Miranda ruling — which was so adamantly attacked at the time — has survived in its essentials for 20 years."

On June 13, 1966, the court of Chief Justice Earl Warren rocked the criminal justice world when it mandated in Miranda vs. Arizona that the reading of rights to suspects to protect their Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination.

The ruling said citizens under arrest must be told they have a right to remain silent and to have an attorney present during police questioning and any waiver of those rights must be "knowing and voluntary."

Justice Byron White was one of four court members who dissented from the decision, which he said would return killers to the streets and have "a corrosive effect" on law enforcement.

United Way Board To Disperse U.S. Funds

By Jane Casselberry
Herald Staff Writer

A local board has been named by United Way of Seminole County to allocate $40,000 in federal funds for supplementing and extending emergency food and shelter programs in the county.

Susan A. Moore, executive director of the Central Florida Community Health Clinic, Sanford, is chairman of the local board.

The funds are part of the $70 million appropriated to the Emergency Food and Shelter National Board Program to allocate to qualified non-profit organizations and public agencies providing these services to the needy.

The board consists of representatives of social service agencies and the city of Sanford.

They include: Lea Lowrey, associate director for the American Red Cross Seminole County Office, Longwood; Lots Jackson, chairman of Seminole County School social workers; Rayetta Beaver, planning director of United Way of Orange County; Alvin Gamson, executive director, Jewish Family Services; Tom Aglio, executive director of Catholic Social Services; Ralene Carroll, director of Social Services for Central Florida Regional Hospital; the Rev. Richard G. Danilek, vice president of the board of Sanford Christian Sharing Center; Margaret M. Anderson, administrator of Human Services Program for the state department of Health and Rehabilitative Services; Jean Melonis, administrative assistant of the Department of Health and Human Services; Micky Adams, associate director of Information and Referral; and Sanford Mayor Bettye Smith.

Interested private and public agencies may apply for a share of the funds no later than June 11. All funds must be spent by Sept. 15. The funds will be dispensed in two increments of $20,000 each, according to United Way Executive Director Bob Walko.

To be eligible the applicants do not have to be agencies of the United Way of Seminole County, but must be non-profit, have a board of directors, an audit and a reputable track record, Walko said.

The decision to fund or not to fund an organization rests with the local board. The appropriation is intended to supplement and extend currently available resources and not to substitute or reimburse any agency for ongoing programs and services, he said.

The Human Resources Planning Council in Orlando will act as fiscal agent and will meet with the agencies. For applications interested organizations and agencies should contact the United Way office at Suite 140, 1250 U.S. Highway 17-92, Longwood.

Police, prosecutors and defense attorneys are divided over whether his prediction has come true.

Law Professor Fred Inbau of Northwestern University said Miranda has kept police from obtaining confessions that could make an open-and-shut case.

"There's no question in my mind that it (Miranda) has contributed to our crime problem," he said. "After that litany, if a guilty person is half-way intelligent, he's likely to take the police up on the invitation that's being extended to remain silent."

Police, however, say Miranda has forced them to become more professional in solving crimes.

Gerald Arenberg, executive director of the National Association of Chiefs of Police, said, "The convictions are still there. Crime rates have gone up but I don't think that has anything to do with Miranda."

"What Miranda has done is improve the investigative techniques used by police officers," he said. "You have to remember the role of police officers is not only to arrest and apprehend, but also to protect the Constitution."

Since Miranda, the court has issued more than 30 opinions to clarify, refine and define appropriate police conduct for questioning suspects.

Inbau said the decisions have further confused police and lower courts, citing a case involving a suspect who made incriminating statements to police as they spoke to him through a bullhorn. The man challenged the use of his statements at trial and the case went to a three-judge panel of the 3rd

U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

"One judge held Miranda was not necessary because it was not interrogation. One said it was not necessary because the person wasn't in custody. One judge — the dissenter — said the warnings were necessary because it was both custody and interrogation," Inbau said.

The Supreme Court's most recent decisions have seemed to erode Miranda's protections and make it easier for police to get confessions. Earlier this term, the court ruled that a suspect's voluntary confession is valid, even if police neglect to tell the suspect that his attorney had asked to speak with him. Last year, the court said police who illegally obtain a confession can read a suspect his rights and then try to get the confession again.

Inbau believes those two decisions are a sign the court is moving to get rid of Miranda.

"I think one of these days it will," he said. "Meanwhile, they've taken the easier way of just whittling away at it."

Agriculture In The Classroom

By Sonja Millgren
UPI Farm Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Hugh Johnson, a poultry expert with the nation's largest farm group, has a new problem on his hands: this week anonymous "farm freedom fighters" took 24 hens from a Delaware farm to protest production practices.

They called their militant act "the first direct farm animal liberation ever conducted in the United States" and they promised more of the same.

Part of Johnson's job has been to counteract the animal rights movement by explaining to the public, including school children, the benefits of production of poultry and animals in confinement rather than in the old-fashioned barnyard.

Johnson works with agricultural organizations in the Farm Animal Welfare Coalition, which defends production of American poultry and livestock that is anathema to the animal rights movement.

He said, "We're raising our animals in a way that is the most efficient and the most humane." He said existing techniques yield cheaper food.

The coalition developed a handbook to explain their side of the issue to Americans.

And Johnson, in an interview, said one of the key ways to fight the new militancy is a program called "Ag in the Classroom," a grassroots effort, loosely coordinated in Washington, to teach children about agriculture.

Johnson said the general public is often a few generations removed from farming and "much of what is getting out is misinformation."

In fact, many people in agriculture see "Ag in the Classroom" as one of the best ways to tell their story, which is what former Agriculture Secretary John Block had in mind when he invited people to an initial gathering in 1981 from which the program emerged.

Block feared lack of knowledge about agriculture would lead to uninformed citizens and poor public policy.

More than 130 education and agriculture representatives from 42 states and Canada will meet in Washington next week to discuss their local programs. They often borrow ideas and programs from each other.

Although not all states will be represented next week, the program now has a presence in every state. Five Canadians attended the meeting are interested in starting a version in their country.

Problems facing American agriculture have "heightened everyone's awareness" of the effort, said Shirley Traxler, director of "Ag in the Classroom."

Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng said the effort "is reaching thousands of kids. They learn the simple fact that agricultural issues and events have been a major influence in human history — and that this impact continues in today's economy and society."

He said, "We work with state and national organizations to help teachers bring agriculture to the classroom in an interdisciplinary way — mix it in with social studies, math, science, languages and art."

At the meeting, Washington State will show off one of the most comprehensive and creative programs.

Financed by the Washington State Beef Commission, a state agricultural council produced an instructional computer game for fourth to sixth graders to learn about the state's agriculture.

Called "The Great Evergreen State Tractor Rally," it is being tested and will be distributed during the next school year.

Washington State University offers a two-hour course to teach educators with little agricultural background about "Ag in the Classroom" curriculum development.

In Florida, the program developed a brochure of suggested science fair projects dealing with agriculture and a list of professors willing to give students assistance. It was distributed to every high school and junior high school in the state at the start of this school year.

Missouri is developing curriculum for kindergarten through the third grade in which agriculture is viewed through the eyes of "Jay, the space alien."

Oregon's program, setting an example from the beginning, last fall published a hard-cover textbook about the state's agriculture for fourth graders. Ten percent of children in the state are using it.

Another text has been designed for high school social studies classes.

the center commended Marietta Fenton, staff development coordinator, "for a job well done in coordinating the drill."

Longwood City Commission will open bids for the construction of a new police station at a special 7 p.m. meeting Monday in the city hall at 175 W. Warren Ave.

Deadline for submitting bids to the city clerk is 4 p.m. Monday. Plans for the building estimated to cost $1 million were drawn up by Architects Design Group, 333 N. Knowles Ave., Winter Park.

The design for the one-story facility calls for approximately 9,482 enclosed square feet constructed of exterior masonry walls with brick veneer. There is a drive-through security vehicle sallyport and a secure booking area.

The building site is located at the end of Jessup Avenue, east of West Lake Street, south of Florida Avenue and North of Church Avenue adjacent to the Longwood Historical District.

Royal Wedding

Sarah Suddenly Becomes A Star Equal To Diana

By GEORGE JENSEN
UPI Senior Editor

LONDON (UPI) — Princess-to-be Sarah Ferguson has just lived through the oldest cliché in showbiz — "You're going out there a nobody but you're gonna come back a star."

Six months ago no one had ever heard of her. Today, with her wedding to Queen Elizabeth's second son drawing close, "Fergie" Ferguson is a star of Princess Diana's magnitude.

A British sightseeing tour company is running jam-packed buses past her one-time apartment, her office building and the Italian cafe where she used to drink coffee. It detours through the street "where Sarah gets her hair done."

We know her measurements — 36-26-38, size 14. For weeks the British press has resounded to arguments for and against her wish to trim off some of those inches before she walks down the Westminster Abbey aisle with Prince Andrew July 23.

When "Mrs. L. Watson" flew to the Caribbean the other day for a quiet six-day break in the sun, a whole corps of British reporters flocked along. London newspapers splashed pictures of "Mrs. Watson" at poolside in a cover-up shirt because Fergie doesn't want to add to her freckles.

The British post office is issuing two special stamps for this sudden new star. There's a pub in East London newly named "Fergie's."

We know what Sarah wants for wedding presents. Three expensive dinner services and one very grand breakfast service, for instance. Or 500 other goodies she's listed as acceptable gifts with Princess Diana's favorite London store.

We know what exercises she used to do, at what time of day

(7:30 a.m.). We know Diana calls Fergie "BF" — for "best friend."

Everyone not only knows every detail of the engagement ring Andrew gave her; they can buy replicas for 18 pounds ($27). In two days the department store offering them sold 49 of its first 50.

We know what she's been reading — royal biographies — and where — in the third floor suite in Buckingham Palace which Diana used just before she married Prince Charles five years ago.

We know, in excruciating detail, the story of Sarah's entire 26 years. We've learned, for example, that the future Princess Andrew attained a breathless typing speed of 39 words per minute at the Queen's Secretarial College in London's Kensington district during her 11-month course in 1977.

For most of the breathless period before the wedding, in fact, Sarah has eclipsed even Diana in royalty-loving British media.

So many of her current or former acquaintances have been grilled by reporters that, said one of them, "any minute we will have her ex-hamster giving an in-depth interview on the day Fergie forgot to grate his carrot."

But in her leap to stardom, Ferguson has not only enchanted the royal family, including her future mother-in-law the queen ("something neither Cinderella nor Snow White ever achieved," one newswoman noted), but seems to have sweetened every tart tongue on Fleet Street, London's newspaper row.

"It is no small achievement," wrote usually waspish columnist Jilly Cooper, "that by being her lovely, larky, unaffected self, she has captured the heart not only of the most eligible man in the country but also the entire nation."

Drawn To Crackers

Florida Film Maker Eyes Seminole County As Setting For Next Rustic, Rural Movie

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

Florida film maker Carter Lord is drawn to the complexities of the "simple" life of Florida crackers.

As a boy in Lakeland he roamed the woods, hunted game and developed an attachment to the Florida backlands and natives that can't be broken by his desire to link with the Hollywood film industry.

With one feature film, which drew strongly on his rural roots, to his credit as a director and executive producer, Lord, is eyeing Seminole County or possibly Osteen as a setting for a future film.

"I'm interested in the area where people are few, like the edge. That fringe area where there's not that much civilization. The woods and the natural earth," Lord said.

His first film, The Enchanted, was released in 1983 and is set in the backwoods of southwest Florida. That supernatural, cracker romance features Orlando actress Casey Blanton as leading lady in her first movie role, and is scheduled for an early August run at Maitland's Enzian Theater. CBS is also set to air the film in the coming year.

Former University of Central Florida instructor Larry Miller, who uses the stage name, Royce Hagan, also made his film debut playing a cracker sailor who returns home to farm and finds Ms. Blanton, her parents and her siblings working his homestead.

Against the advice of his black mentor, an old family friend, the sailor portrayed by Hagan, becomes enchanted by Ms. Blanton's character in this Florida folk mystery. That brings disaster to her family, a rather eccentric, brightly-dressed, closed-mouthed crew, which doesn't quite fit the cracker mode.

Their drama plays against lush Florida greenery and fields, giving a glimpse of cowboys, Florida-style, and hunters who pursue, or who might become the pursued in wilds.

In making The Enchanted,

Lord, 39, who based the film on a children's book, produced a movie that has won compliments from critics, and which played the 36th International Festival du Films in Cannes.

He has also learned a hard lesson based on the lack of box office success of the film. A scarring lesson he will carry into future productions.

"I had a healing process to go through," he said. "It took a couple of years to let it settle. Basically I'm optimistic." But not always. Catch him at a certain time, and he is apt to use strong language.

"But I'm in movie making till I die. I'm in it for the long haul. I'm a film maker and I'm going to do that till I die. If I'm alive to make another one or 10 or 15 more that will be great. I'm just going to do it minute by minute forever. Now I'm just taking my time and trying to do it my way, he said."

Lord says he would never go "Hollywood," although he's more cosmopolitan than his "aw shucks" childhood and athletic Lil' Abner looks indicate. But in spending and losing a personal fortune of $1 million on his independent production, Lord has learned that Hollywood is the place you have to turn to for backing, promotion and distribution of a film, if it is to be a financial as well as a critical success.

Half of the money was his and he had borrowed the rest. "I thought the film would pay off, but it didn't. We thought the film was going to cost about $600,000, but we went over budget and I had to borrow a lot of money, which was a mistake.

"It wasn't frightening until it became clear that the film wasn't going to make it in the theaters. That's when it started to get scary. It really did get scary. It had never been in the program in my brain that it would not at least pay back, or at least get a significant amount of the money back.

"I figured the film is good. I was just naive about the distribution. I'm not negative about it. I've gone past that period. I know that one day the film will have a place, because it has no time and it's strong. I know it's strong. I know that it will live. It remains with people. A year later they remember it.

"I've never really had that feeling of great accomplishment yet, because it has been such a struggle. The financial crunch was so serious and severe. There have been no laurels to rest on.

"As time passed I think it was okay. I think I deserved it. I had it coming. I was cocky about it. I didn't include any industry people in it, even though I knew about the industry. I didn't listen. I was just hard headed. I think I had it coming.

"I've never had that feeling, oh well, now this is really done. It's too bad. I should have it some day," Lord said.

That learned, he may leave the backwoods occasionally to venture into Hollywood, but at the core of his films will be the rustic and the rural, which Lord said is what he knows and loves best.

"I was always kind of a tweener. I'm a tweener, one of those that didn't live in town or really out in the country," this Maine native who moved to Florida as an infant said. "I'm not a cowboy and I'm not a real redneck woodsman, but I know a lot about it and I've spent a lot of time there. My heart's there. I'm not a city person at all.

"I'm a local guy and it's happening here. There's a lot of film production coming in from out of state, but there's very little being done on a grassroots level.

"I'm not well known, but

County Women Help Home For 'Nice' Girls

Hacienda Girls Ranch, Melbourne, is a home away from home for nice girls with problem home situations.

The Woman's Club of Sanford Inc. helps support the ranch as a continuing benevolent project. At the regular club meeting Wednesday, president Ann Brisson presented a $500 check from the Seminole County Federation of Women's Clubs to Peggy Deere, the club's representative to Hacienda.

Mrs. Deere says she has become "so close" to the unique home for girls who have no homes. "They are really nice girls," she stressed.

Five Sanford girls are currently making their home there, Mrs. Deere said. Funds and supplies are always needed for the operation of the facility, she added.

Hacienda Girls' Ranch, a non-profit child caring facility, licensed by the State of Florida, is located on 25 acres in Melbourne.

The idea of a home for homeless girls originated with concerned citizens in Brevard County. These citizens saw that much was being done in the State of Florida for homeless boys, but very little help was being given to the norman (not delinquent) girl, who, for many reasons could not live at home — orphaned, victims of neglect, abuse, abandonment, divorce, alcoholism, death, and other tragic interruptions.

Dad Says Less Will Make Unforgettable Wedding

DEAR ABBY: Our family is approaching a time of disension concerning the upcoming wedding of our eldest daughter. Recent weddings of friends and family have been real "blowouts," each trying to outdo the last.

My wife and daughters keep talking about the reception, dresses, flowers and tuxedos as if we had a mature money tree. They justify a "nice" wedding for the "memories" it will make.

I believe that a "nice" wedding can consist of a bride's gown, and simple dresses for the ladies that won't cost them a fortune — and ones they can wear again. And what's wrong with dark blue suits for the guys, a few simple bouquets, and cake and punch for the reception?

We aren't rich, but we meet our needs and have no bad debt problems — yet! My wife uses coupons to shop at the grocery store and she manages our daily money matters very well, but no amount of coupons will be able to cover the disaster they are planning.

What do you say?
HAS THE LADDER SET UP

DEAR HAS: Take the ladder down. I'm on your side, Dad. A wedding need not be an extravaganza to be memorable, nor does it have to top a previous one. Hold that line, and don't let your family talk you into going into debt to put on a show you can't afford.

DEAR ABBY: I am married to a German, and lately our breakfast conversation has gone to the dogs. Please settle this dispute. We have been watching reruns of the old "Lassie" shows. My husband says that Lassie was not a collie; she was a mixed-breed dog with a collie "costume" attached.

I say the original Lassie was a pedigree collie. Also, there were several look-alikes who played "Lassie" in the movies.

Was our beloved Lassie a mixed-breed impostor or not? Please settle this argument for us.

PHYLLIS FEUCHT,
PARIS, TEXAS

DEAR PHYLLIS: According to the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, the tale about Lassie wearing a costume must have been a put-out. While the original Lassie was not a purebred collie, she certainly looked like one. There were six look-alikes who later portrayed Lassie. All of them were pure-bred collies who so closely resembled Lassie from her imposters, only her hair-dresser knew for sure.

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: "Bill" and I have been married for seven months and we can't come to terms on our husband-and-wife roles. Bill thinks we should share our household expenses 50-50, but when it comes to dividing up the household chores 50-50, I seem to get all of the responsibility.

He shows little gratitude for what I do, and complains because I refuse to iron his shirts. Because I refuse to iron his shirts, he refuses to help me with the maintenance on my car. I feel that I am doing more than my fair share, and if he expects me to iron his shirts, then he should pay all the bills and let me stay home and do all the household chores.

I would appreciate your opinion about this — and also the opinion of your readers.
DON'T DO SHIRTS IN FLORIDA

DEAR DON'T: The solution as I see it is for you to learn how to maintain your own car and for Bill to iron his own shirts, then neither of you would be at the mercy of the other.

DEAR ABBY: I met a beautiful girl last year and fell head over heels in love with her. I am 23 and she's 19. We are both college students. She attends Montana State University, and I attend the University of Idaho. We plan to marry after I graduate.

I will begin my senior year in August. Now my dilemma. I have asked her to transfer to the University of Idaho so we can be together. She refused, although her credits are transferable. I have even offered to pay her out-of-state tuition. She says, "It took me too long to find friends where I'm at."

Abby, I cannot transfer to Montana State. What should I do?

PERPLEXED AT U.I.

DEAR PERPLEXED: Your "dilemma" could be a blessing in disguise. The separation will give your love time to mature, which will benefit both of you. For now, don't pressure her.

If your love doesn't survive the separation, rejoice. It was not meant to be.

temporary one — an old house in Cocoa, which provided for eight girls. After land was donated near Melbourne, the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs (FFWC) put on an all-out drive throughout the state to raise funds for the first building on the new site. This building was named the "Katie Pratt Cottage", after Mrs. Katie Pratt of Tallahassee, who was the president of FFWC at the time Hacienda was adopted as the FFWC State Project — 1970-72.

Pratt Cottage opened its doors to ten girls in June of 1972, giving them an environment of love and firm direction. The cottage has six bedrooms with two or three girls sharing a room and a bath.

April, 1976, the FFWC dedicated the King-Harris Cottage (similar to Pratt Cottage) in honor of recent past Presidents of the FFWC Lucille King (72-74) and Betty Harris (74-76). This cottage increased the capacity of Hacienda from fifteen to thirty girls (housing three girls to a room).

Retired colonel Frank Kramer and Mrs. Kamer (Eshier) have been Executive Directors of Hacienda Girls' Ranch since February 1974. These Directors supervise one of the best counseling/therapy programs in the State of Florida for group-care homes. The program is headed up by two Master's Degree social workers licensed by the State and augmented by two additional Master's Degree counselors. Intake, diagnostic, career goals for 16 year olds and up, with individual counseling weekly. Group therapy, both directed and non-directed, is also a weekly activity. As a back-up to the above, psychological and/or psychiatric support is available as needed.

The girls alternate chores around the houses, help with cooking, yard work, vehicle care, go to school, attend the church of their choice, go skating, to the beach, have boy friends, and, thanks to a local pool builder, they swim in their very own pool.

Hacienda Girls' Ranch treatment program is based on the philosophy that young people wishing to reach maturity are in a never ending process of growth in every area of their personalities, and must be given a suitable setting in which they can develop to the fullest of their potential. As a first step in this growth process, the residents of hacienda must have an awareness that they have a personal need for growth and a willingness to commit themselves to the difficult work that this process involves.

Girls are referred by parents, Health and Rehabilitative Services, school officials, or any interested citizen from throughout the state. An application, followed by an interview is required. However, the final decision is up to the girl.

Applications can be secured by writing or calling Hacienda Girls' Ranch, P.O. Box 361097, 326

Croton Road, Melbourne, Florida 32936-1097. (305) 254-1233. Financial support for operational needs is major day-to-day problem. Voluntary contributions are a major source of income except for the monthly foster care fee paid by the State for girls entering the Hacienda from HRS. Hacienda depends on YOU, the individual as well as community clubs throughout Florida for financial support. All donations are tax deductible.

Mary, a former school teacher, said she has always wanted to visit the British Isles and her dream finally came true. She said they saw the beautiful countryside, castles, palaces, flowers, cathedrals, royalty and the entire works in and around London.

"But just seeing the countryside in Ireland" was well worth the trip to Mary.

Carolyn and Bill Rodgers of Idyllwilde were honored by close friends on their golden wedding anniversary.

Joining the couple for an elegant dinner were Mimi and Jack Greene, Sophie and Kay Shoemaker, Helen and Reg Howe, Valerie and George Weld and Bunkie and Jimmy Cooper.

Several years back, the Rodgers, along with the Greens, played Cupid and introduced the Welds, who were later married.

...Lord

you can see from the film what kind of quality level we're on. I think it's a high level. This film is spiritual and exciting.

"It's not ugly. It's pretty and it tells something about the real Florida, the way it was. The object was to have something nice for the kids and that you could bring your family to. It's not ugly. It's not going to offend anybody. There's a black/white thing there that's profound and beautiful.

"That's the way I look at it. It's a good thing. It's a nice thing. It should enrich your life and not take away."

His boyhood home was at the end of a dirt road and today Lord lives in the Hardee County boonies with wife Kathy Jo and daughter Fonya Suzanne, 2. But, Lord, whose father, a successful businessman, is the product of Exeter Academy in New Hampshire, a breeding ground for Ivy Leaguers. He's also a class of '68 Harvard grad, with a degree in economics.

A star college athlete, Lord was tapped to be a Dallas Cowboy, but injury kept him off the field. He bypassed opportunities to play professional baseball and instead opted for adventure as a tugboat crewman and South American jungle explorer.

While exploring his expanded world, Lord said at age 26 he decided he was meant to make movies. With financial backing from his father in addition to his earnings from odd jobs he spent the next seven years in New York City, learning the behind the scenes skills of movie making and paying his dues.

Now he's running an airplane parts business and has almost paid off the his film making debt, his legacy from The Enchanted.

Lord, who also helped write The Enchanted script, said being both the executive producer and the director of a major motion picture is an almost impossible challenge. The wheeling-dealing involved with putting the deal together as the producer is at odds, he said, with the creative aspects of film making.

"I'm fairly good at business, but I'm not good at tricky stuff," he said. "I'm pretty straight forward. It's hard. It's a tough business.

"That's fair enough. That's what it is. I'll get another chance. I know I'll get another chance sooner or later. The idea is not to be in a hurry. To not get up tight about it. The only thing to do is go on writing and take it as it comes."

In the meantime, Lord is living the life he loves in what he calls the "pale yellow oval." The place on Florida population maps that is colored pale yellow to illustrate it is the least populated section of the state.

"I'm from the pale yellow oval. It's great, no traffic, no people, no towns, a lot of land," he said.

His wife isn't involved in his movie making. "She has no interest whatsoever," Lord said. "She's a country girl. When I met her she said, 'I like the outdoor work.' I said, 'You're just the woman for me. How'd you like to get married?'"

Lord said his tie to the rural, to people who are not immediately accessible to the mainstream, gives him fodder for film unlike that of more urban film makers such as Steven Spielberg.

"Spielberg has a good thing," Lord said. "He's in touch with the suburban type that goes to the movies. He's comfortable in that world.

"I'm not. I'm more comfortable with no shoes and an old raggedy cracker house and some country people. Spielberg plugs into a suburban audience. More power to him.

"But I'm not in touch with that. I've got something else. I can't do what Spielberg can do and he can't do what I can do."

U.S. Churchgoing Holds Steady

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Despite reports of renewed interest in religion, recent statistics show Americans are not flocking to churches in dramatically increasing numbers, a book published in Nashville reported.

The 1986 "Yearbook of American and Canadian Churches," published by Abingdon Press, showed Mormons had the best record with 53 percent attendance followed by Catholics with 51 percent and Southern Baptists with 46 percent.

Church membership as a percentage of the population has actually declined. The book noted that 59.5 percent of the population were church members in 1984 while 60.1 percent were members in 1983.

"It's nothing like the post-World War II growth," said Constant Jacquet, the editor of the book. Church attendance among adults peaked in 1955 and 1958 at 49 percent.

"There's a lot of interest in religion in the U.S. There are intense pockets of religious activities, but overall the numbers don't show that religious groups are dramatically on the move," Jacquet said.

The yearbook, which used Gallup Poll data, showed U.S. church membership had risen to a record 142 million, keeping pace with the country's slight population growth.

Jacquet said statistics for 1984 were the most recent church figures available to the yearbook, which is produced annually for the National Council of Churches in New York.

In a given week in 1984, church attendance nationwide held steady at 40 percent which was in keeping with the same percentage reported each year since 1972, the yearbook showed.

The book said some mainline denominations were sustaining slight losses while more conservative church groups continue to grow, but at a slower pace than in recent years.

The Jehovah's Witnesses and Church of God are among the fastest growing denominations, the yearbook showed.

The book noted Gallup figures showed "churchgoing was highest among younger teens, girls, Catholics, Southerners and those whose academic standing is above average."

Bishops Urge Reshaping Of Economy To Aid Poor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. economy needs to be reshaped to better meet the needs of the poor, says the final draft of the Roman Catholic bishops' proposed pastoral letter on the economy.

The 45,000-word third draft, "Economic Justice for All: Catholic Social Teaching and the U.S. Economy," released Monday, will be debated and voted on at the National Conference of Catholic Bishops meeting Nov. 10-13. While strengthening a number of sections in response to the thousands of pages of comments received, the heart of the pastoral message remains the same: There is a need to change the U.S. economy to better meet the needs of the poor.

"The obligation to provide justice for all means that the poor have the single most urgent claim on the conscience of the nation," the letter said, adding that "as individuals and as a nation, therefore, we are called to make a fundamental option for the poor," and that social and economic policies must be evaluated "from the viewpoint of the poor and the powerless."

Archbishop Rembert Weakland of Milwaukee, chairman of the drafting committee, said there has been "general acceptance of the structure and message" of the proposed pastoral letter, but that the new version offers more on the family, on education, on conversion and personal lifestyle and Third World debt issues.

The draft, in an implicit rejection of the economic philosophy of President Reagan,

Musical Drama

A youth choir from Kempsville Presbyterian Church, Virginia Beach, Va., will present a musical drama, Surrender, at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, June 14 in the fellowship hall of First Presbyterian Church of Sanford at Fourth Street and Park Avenue. The group will also sing in the 8:30 and 11 a.m. worship services on June 15.

Army Of Baptists Invading Atlanta

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Atlanta will be deluged with Baptists next week and there may be shortages of convention seats, restrooms and lunch choices for the 45,000 delegates expected.

"It'll be manageable, but difficult," said Harold Bennett, head of the Nashville-based Southern Baptists Convention Executive Committee.

Atlanta's Georgia World Congress Center normally seats 30,000, but officials said some 45,000 messengers are expected for the SBC annual meeting.

Unprecedented interest in the fate of the country's largest non-Catholic church body has been prompted as battles between moderates and conservatives heated up.

Conservatives, who support a more literal interpretation of the Bible, have been "winning" the war by electing their candidates to key positions — such as the presidency.

Next week's meeting could challenge the record attendance of 45,519 at the 1985 meeting in Dallas, which doubled the previous record of 22,872, set in Atlanta in 1978.

Convention officials say some 70 percent of the 14.5 million Southern Baptists live within a day's drive of Atlanta.

The meeting runs Tuesday through Thursday. Tim Hedquist, convention manager, said there will be seating for 45,000 messengers for the first two days and standing room for 20,000 more.

"If you want to get in, you better get in line at 7 a.m. Tuesday," said the Rev. Bill Sherman, of Woodmont Baptist Church in Nashville.

Each of the 37,000 SBC-affiliated churches are entitled to send one messenger, plus an additional one for each 250 members or each extra $250 the church gives to Baptist missions. All churches are limited to 10 messengers.

Atlanta hotel officials say there is little room left at the inns.

"They have booked up almost every hotel within a 10-mile radius of downtown," said DeLores Sykes of the Atlanta Convention and Visitors Bureau.

To Preach

Royden A. Wilkinson Sr., the eastern states representative for New Tribes Mission, will be guest preacher for both services this Sunday at Pinecrest Baptist Church, Sanford. He has been with New Tribes Mission for 22 years and he and his wife are living in Connecticut.

Father's Words Passed On By Children

A father's influence can extend farther than he ever imagines, even in little things. Sometimes it surprises him how far.

My 27-year-old daughter, who lives in another city, visited us recently with her 4-year-old son. Just before we sat down to dinner, she said, "Christopher, let's see your hands." He held his hands palms upward for his mother to inspect. "Better wash 'em," she said.

What was being re-enacted here was a little suppersite ritual, carried out with exactly the same words and gestures, that goes back more than 50 years in our family. My father subjected my sister and me to the same nightly examination. Only occasionally would he put us on our honor by asking, "Are your hands clean?" Fathers come to know the answer they can expect if they ask that.

My four children were next. "Let's see your hands." The display of small, outstretched palms. Then inevitably, "Better wash 'em."

If I was delighted to see that my daughter was carrying on the tradition, I was even more tickled to hear her say, as food from time to time fell from Christopher's fork onto his lap. "Chin over the dish, Christopher."

Brunch Speaker

Reba McClain of Casselberry, who overcame multiple sclerosis to go to Haiti as a missionary in middle age, will give her testimony when she speaks at the Altamonte-Maitland Christian Women's Club brunch, Thursday, at 9:30 a.m. at the Maitland Civic Center. A bridal fashion show and special music will also be featured. For reservations call JoAnne Hammond at 339-3956.

Dinner Scheduled

Sanford Congregational Christian Church will hold a covered dish dinner Wednesday at 6:30 pm. in the fellowship hall at 2401 S. Park Ave.

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...

YOUR BIRTHDAY JUNE 8, 1986
Your financial prospects look extremely encouraging in the year ahead, so don't be dismayed by early downward trends. They will be followed by an upswing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you fail to do things in a businesslike manner today, it will result in financial confusion. Be methodical. Major changes are ahead for Gemini in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, Box 1846, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Interference from an outsider could cause you to doubt an arrangement you've worked out with another. Stand by your agreement.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Do not talk freely today about a confidential matter to a friend who has difficulty keeping secrets. Your pal will spill the beans again.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Do not be envious today if someone you like pays more attention to others than to you. This person is only trying to be friendly and sociable.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) An important objective can be achieved today, but perhaps not on the first try. Push a little harder if you initially fall short of your mark.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Victory or defeat is predicated upon your attitude today. If you think you'll win, you will; if you think you'll fail, you will figure out ways to do so.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Disappointment is likely today if you feel you're entitled to something that, in reality, you're not. Desire only what you deserve.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

Guard against tendencies today to do things against your better judgment. You'll be asking for problems if you override your common sense.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Abide by sensible health habits today. If there are certain foods, beverages or substances of which you shouldn't partake, don't.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Competitive games you play with friends today shouldn't be taken seriously. Don't let your ego get into the picture if you're having an off day and your opponent isn't.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A matter that has caused dissatisfaction in your family can be cleared up today if you bring together those involved. Act as the mediator.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) People you associate with today will have more respect for you if you take a definite position. Don't straddle the fence.

YOUR BIRTHDAY JUNE 9, 1986

Your possibilities for generating income from more than one source look good for the year ahead. Something you begin as an avocation could turn into a full-time job.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't put pressure on yourself today to buy something you know you can't presently afford. It will still be available when you're in a better cash position. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences governing you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, Box 1846, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't let your enthusiasm cloud your judgment on an important agreement today. Take ample time to analyze all its aspects.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Someone prepared to help you today may suddenly change his mind if he sees he's doing all the hard work while you're coasting.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't come on too strong at a gathering with friends today. You'll command more attention if you talk softly and are a bit subdued.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Try not to be possessive of those you love. They will resent it today if they feel they have to account to you for all their actions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Keep a tight rein on your temper today or you might take offense at something a friend says where no ill will was intended.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you put too many conditions on something you do for another today, he or she will, in turn, do the same to you at a later date. No one will get a good deal.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In a partnership arrangement today, your cohort's judgment might be better than yours. Keep an open mind regarding his or her suggestions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Because your mind won't be on your work, tasks that are usually easy could prove troublesome for you today. Don't let your attention wander.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Do not take it upon yourself to be the spokesman for your peer group today. If your pals want you to act or talk on their behalf, they'll vote you in.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be careful today not to show any type of partiality when dealing with loved ones. Each must be treated the same.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may have to deal with a difficult individual today. Keep your cool, even if this person becomes nastier as you try to be nicer.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

Even if you believe fervently in signaling length in a suit, you should not get carried away. When you're defending a doubled contract, signaling attitude in the suit led is usually more important. Because East did not like bidding at the four-level with his collection of cheese, he passed his partner's second takeout double, hoping for the best. Unfortunately, while hoping for the best, he made two plays that can only be called the worst.

First, on the opening king of diamonds lead, he played the three, meaning it to be the start of a high-low showing an even number of cards in the suit (in this case, four). Lacking clairvoyance, West attempted to take another diamond trick. Declarer ruffed, played two rounds of trumps ending in dummy and pitched a heart on the diamond queen. Declarer now played a heart. The defenders took two heart tricks and forced declarer to ruff on the third round of hearts.

The stage was now set for the second grievous error by East. South went to dummy with a trump and led the jack of clubs. East covered with the queen, declarer played the king and West won the ace. When West returned a club, declarer put in dummy's eight to make the contract. Even after the earlier mistake, if East does not cover the club jack with the queen, South will play low. West must now cooperate by not taking the trick. When clubs are then played a second time, correct play by the defenders will result in their taking two tricks and setting the contract.
