Critics may cut 'corporate welfare'

By Russ White

County Charter Committee member wants to end business incentives

Seminole County's economic development program — described by its supporters as "wildly successful" and by others as "corporate welfare" — could be gutted next week by the county's newly-organized Charter Review Commission.

Next Wednesday (Dec. 8) Jimmy Ross will propose an amendment to his fellow charter commission members to require further big business incentives to be approved by the electorate.

"If the people of Seminole County are going to continue to pay for growth, then the people should have the opportunity to have a voice and to approve of such a program as authorized by the Florida Constitution," Ross says in his report.

"Growth does not pay for itself, and the giving of millions of our tax dollars to foster more growth has literally contributed to ruining the bucolic atmosphere of Seminole County," Ross said.

"It seems to me that it is incongruous that officials are authorized to use public money to outbid one another to win the good graces of a multi-million dollar corporation," Ross continued.

"In our county, if development pays for itself, why hasn't the 1991 10-year self-imposed sales tax that brings in about $44 million per year solved our transportation problems?" Ross asked. "Traffic problems are not getting better; they're getting worse."

The impact, Ross said, is that more growth equals more people which requires more deputies, clerks, judges, firemen, roads, schools, etc. Ross cited the present debt of the Seminole County School Board to be $282 million.

"Please consider that growth has contributed to the indebtedness of our county, and we still have more millions of debt on the horizon," Ross said, using

Local girl a winner in Crayola contest

By Nicole King

When 9-year-old Jordan Hubler was asked to draw a self-portrait, she chose a scene only found in Florida. In Jordan's pastel drawing, she sits in a Mickey Mouse T-shirt watching the space shuttle go up. "I was thinking of what people like to see in Florida, and everyone likes Mickey Mouse," Jordan said.

Jordan's picture was good enough for her Goldsboro Elementary art teacher, Sue Dietrich, to enter her in the Crayola Dream-Makers Award contest, held every two years.

Jordan's picture was one of 40 chosen for the award.

The 10-year-old didn't think it was that big of a deal.

"I was proud," she said. "But it wasn't a big deal. When I found out only 40 kids in the whole southeastern division won, then I got excited."

Her Dream-maker picture will go on permanent display in the U.S. Department of Education Building in Washington, D.C.

"She's won quite a few awards, but this one is her biggest," Barbara Hubler, Jordan's mother, said. "I think at first she thought it was no big deal."

The home invasion was discovered when another family member returned home and notified authorities.

The suspects ran from the scene and tried to hide in the

Let your fingers do the (marathon) walking

Ten-digit dialing doesn't make much sense to me. Instead of adding digits, we ought to be eliminating them.

Ten-digit dialing and driving, for instance, is much too dangerous. That's far too many digits for any driver to be dialing. Too many digits for anyone to be dialing. We should have better things to do with our index fingers.

Surely, A.G. Bell didn't have 10-digit dialing on his mind when he invented his marvelous talking toy. A.G. was a single or double-digit dialer. He also kept his calls brief. "Watson, I need you,"

..... was his first message. Hello and good-bye.

Most people don't need to make as many calls as they do — and certainly not receive as many.

Russ White

Reluctantly, Clerk of the Court Maryanne Morse has a cell phone. "But she doesn't tell anyone the number — not even me," said her assistant Bob Lewis.

A number of friends were telling me on Tuesday that they're not excited about the 10-digit dialing they'll be required to do as of today. If you want conversation, ask someone about telephones. More specifically, car phones.

Diane Merkt told me how a woman on a car phone nearly wiped out everyone at a grocery store parking lot recently.

"She kept talking and talking," Merkt said. "A woman was yelling at her. So was a kid bringing back three shopping carts. Finally, the woman backed right into a small sports car. She was still talking away."

"The man driving the small car went to the woman, pulled her out of her van and showed her what she had done. The man's wife was close to being crushed inside the small car. Believe it or not the woman kept on talking on the phone."

Others told me stories of people talking on a cell phone throughout a meal in a restaurant or taking a call in church. One man said he saw another on the telephone inside a men's rest room. A collect call to Flushing, perhaps?

Some states, I'm told, have laws against folks talking on a cell phone and driving. Ohio is one of them. It's not a good idea to drive and talk in a blizzard. Ohio has enough problems in the wintertime. Since I don't plan on moving to Ohio, I wish someone would call a legislator in Tallahassee. Make the call from home or the office, though.

If I were making the call on calls, I'd restrict the hours for telephoning. There would be a cutoff at 10 p.m. No calls to a residence after 10 p.m. unless in emergency. Most of us have said all there is to say by 10 p.m. Anything else can wait until tomorrow.

Calls themselves ought to be limited to 10 minutes. After a caller has dialed a 10-digit number, he shouldn't need more than 10 minutes to talk his talk. Those using a pay phone ought to get off even sooner. The next caller may need his call more than you.

We definitely have to do something about telemarketers. None of them mean a thing to me. The last people I want to talk to on my home telephone are hucksters. If they had a deal that was good,

I'd have heard about it. There should be a law to stop these calls.

My favorite story about the use — or misuse — of a telephone concerns the farmer who moved to the city and was not sure how he could give his dog proper exercise each day.

Observing that his dog would run around the city apartment building whenever the telephone rang, the man decided he would call two or three times a day just to get Rover roving.

One day, the man told the landlord of his brilliant scheme.

The landlord was impressed enough to drop by the apartment one day to check on Rover.

On the 10th ring, the landlord couldn't resist the urge to pick up the telephone and huff into it "a-huh, a-huh, a-huh, a-huh," until he heard the other receiver drop.

Don't anyone let this 10-digit dialing let you go to the dogs.

Russ White's column appears Tuesday through Sunday in the Seminole Herald.

Fire department issues cold weather alert

By Nick Pfoelz Staff Writer

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Although new residents in Central Florida may chuckle at the prospect, the Altamonte Springs Fire Department this morning issued a Cold Weather Alert.

While many people may believe the prospect of temperatures in the 50s or even 40s don't represent truly cold weather, Florida has a stronger moisture content and wind flows that can produce a great deal of discomfort to long time residents.

The Altamonte Springs Fire Department says the high cost of home heating fuels and utilities are causing many people to search for alternative courses of home heating. Unfortunately, the use of space heaters, fireplaces or other heating sources has contributed to an increase in the number of residential fires and serious burns.

Also the number of carbon monoxide poisonings and deaths increase at this time of year. The following suggestions are made:

- Kerosene and space heaters:
 - Be sure the heater is in good working condition. Inspect exhaust parts for carbon buildup.
 - Check to see if the heater has an emergency shut off in case it is tipped over.
 - Give space heaters space. Place them at least three feet from any type of combustible material.
 - Keep young children safely away from space heaters, especially since they may be wearing clothing that can be easily ignited.
 - For electric space heaters, be careful not to overload a circuit.
- Fireplaces:
 - Make sure flumes have been cleaned and are clear before lighting a fire. (This should have already been done. Don't merely assume they are clean. It's not worth the risk.
 - Never discard hot ashes near the home. Place them in metal containers well away from any structure or items which could ignite.

While the temperatures may not get down to the level of the northern states, Central Floridians none-the-less will be doing what they can to stay warm. As in all cases involving fires and chemicals, safety first can save lives.

Our View

What's it going to be?

Now that Jean Metts has the variances she needs to open her soup kitchen, one question remains: Does she want to spend her time and resources feeding people or fighting people?

It's been more than 8 months since she first proposed plans to feed the poor at her 4th Street warehouse. So far, not one meal has been served, but the bitter and divisive arguing between Metts and her neighbors in the Historic District regarding the appropriateness of a soup kitchen in a residential area has effectively destroyed any hope of community cooperation that is needed to make such ventures truly successful. People are too busy picking sides.

Who's to blame? Both sides. Battle lines were drawn early and no one offered to move an inch from their original positions. Extremists from each group lobbed verbal grenades that entrenched the two sides even deeper. Soon all chance for reasonable discussion was lost.

Could the soup kitchen and the Historic District peacefully co-exist? Not now, though we believe such an existence would have been possible if proper relationships were built at the inception of the idea. Instead, Metts pushed forward with her plans with little regard for home owners' concerns. In her mind, she had the moral high ground, so why compromise. Now her unyielding attitude, and the equally unyielding attitude of some who opposed the project, has left serious scar tissue in a community that sorely needs a citywide spirit of cooperation.

There's no doubt that a community has a responsibility when it comes to those in need. Providing hot meals is one way of meeting that responsibility. Ensuring that a community remains economically viable to provide such services is another.

Metts has her variances and can move forward with her plans. Some would say she has earned the victory. But the only thing earned in this case is the ire of a large block of residents who could have been a valuable ally. If she stays at the 4th Street location, the bitterness, arguing and fighting will end. Each day she'll face a new battle that takes time and resources away from what she says are her true goals, and her plans will never reach their potential.

So what's it going to be, Jean? Do you want to feed or fight?

To the editor:

The Sanford City Commission's recent 3-2 vote to grant Jean Metts and Seminole Volunteer Enterprises a variance to run a restaurant at 407 W. 4th St., should serve as a condescending and insulting thunderclap to property and business owners not only in Sanford's Historic District, but to every property and business owner within city limits.

Not only did the majority of the board violate every common-sense principle associated with planning, zoning, and codes enforcement, it royally exposed the city's rear flank to a Pandora's Box of future litigation by any homeowner or business operator who steps before this commission seeking a variance next week, next month or next year.

For months the issue of this so-called "Soup Kitchen" has been carefully couched by Metts and her supporters as one of good versus evil, haves and have-nots, and compassion versus cold-heartedness and mean-spiritedness. The local media has bought into the battle, weighing in heavily on Metts' side. Article after article and column after column in the local print media has inaccurately and unfairly portrayed homeowners and business operators in the Historic District as elitist and isolationist, lacking in concern for those less fortunate, and turning a deaf ear to their plight. Nothing could be further from the truth — and for supporters of Metts and her friends to suggest they have cornered the market on compassion and humanity is an insult to the city of Sanford.

Metts' appeal to the 4-1 vote by the city's Planning and Zoning Board to deny her request for a variance was played out before a packed chamber in an emotionally charged atmosphere. Monday night's vote should have been about the integrity of the city of Sanford's Land Planning Agency, Planning and Zoning Board, and Codes Enforcement. Instead, it degenerated into egotistical posturing in a hypersensitive environment of political correctness.

Completely unaddressed by both the Seminole Herald and Orlando Sentinel in next-day stories was the crux of what the vote should have been about. As an applicant for a variance, Metts was required to provide the Sanford City Commission with compelling evidence, based on fact and statistically accurate information. She failed to appropriately address even one of the six criteria incumbent for a variance to be granted. Metts sidestepped those issues, ranging from seating capacity, to required parking spaces, to how often and how many people she expects to feed in her restaurant with vagueness. At one point during the testimony, Metts not only confirmed she had no parking spaces for the facility, but also that she plans to rent the building for weddings.

To their credit, Mayor Larry Dale and Commissioner Brady Lessard provided intelligent half-baked hypocrite of a columnist, Russ White, should consult a dictionary for the meaning of the word "objectivity." He has repeatedly characterized Historic District residents in a negative light, yet has failed to interview or discuss with any of us who live here the "other side" of the story. He sure seems to have a lot to say about this issue, especially given the fact that he does not reside in the Historic District, nor does he live in the city of Sanford. A lot of hot air from someone who didn't bother to attend Monday night's meeting and vote on the variance. We wonder how many homeless and hungry Mr. White is inviting to his home and neighborhood for dinner tonight?

Signed by residents of the Historic District

Editor's note: This letter was signed by owners of 42 separate properties in the Historic District, but because of space limitations we did not include their names. Also, though this letter has been edited some for length, it is longer than our standard policy. Because of the nature of the topic, and because further editing would substantial change some portions of the letter, an exception has been made.

Dig deep, Sanford city taxpayers, the meter will soon be running in the city attorney's office.

The Seminole Herald's

Jean Metts and only Jean Metts is allowed to run a restaurant with no parking. How will the City Commission react when the next applicant for a variance comes before them?

Working hard for others

Members of the Seminole High School Air Force Junior ROTC

By Bill Kerns
Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole High School Air Force ROTC students are collecting turkeys and canned goods to give families a brighter holiday season.

So far, the ROTC has collected 113 turkeys and 2,700 canned goods in the turkey drive that started in September. The drive will last until Dec. 15.

The school's ROTC program has been collecting canned goods and turkeys, and other items for food baskets to be given to people in need since 1994. The goal for this year is to collect 5,000 canned goods. Last year 3,000 canned goods and 105 turkeys were collected. Teachers are also participating in the collection drive.

"This is the largest year we've had for collecting turkeys," said Col. Charles Gibson, an aerospace science instructor at the school. "The students have really been working hard."

The turkeys and canned goods are primarily donated to senior citizens, churches, and handicapped people. Donations are also made to students, pre-schools, and others who are in need.

In addition, 600 canned goods were donated to hurricane victims in South Carolina. Students also distribute food baskets at local stores during the holiday season.

In the past year, turkeys and food baskets have been given to 100 families.

Any excess canned goods will be donated to the Salvation Army in Sanford, where ROTC students also volunteer to assist in food distribution during the holiday season. Last year, Seminole won the Salvation Army's Golden Can Award for the most canned goods donated by a school in Seminole County.

Students receive a service ribbon for every 100 canned goods that are collected. One student alone, ninth-grader Ryan Hager, has brought in 400 canned goods.

"He is doing a super job," Gibson said. "This is just a student that has turned himself around since joining the program."

Students in the ROTC program raise money to support the turkey drive working parking details and football games and collecting money from fellow students.

Win at Bridge

Tricks with trumps

By Phillip Alder
 Bobby Wolff's first Bridge Trx CD-ROM won the 1999 American Bridge Teachers' Association's award for the best bridge software. His second CD-ROM, which requires Windows 95 or 98, contains more deals, 78 rather than 60, and you get extra videos of Wolff giving the reasoning behind the right play, 21 instead of 13. You still have to look at the four inanimate mug shots, and these deals on average are more challenging than those in the first product. This is because Wolff covers a harder topic, the various aspects of trump contracts. Anyone who gets all the deals right is already an expert. With each deal, you get an indication of its difficulty and a hint to point you in the right direction. You are normally the declarer, but there are some defensive deals, of which this is one. Sitting West, against four hearts, you lead your singleton spade, partner winning with the 10. He switches to a trump. After winning with the ace, declarer leads a spade toward dummy's queen. How do you plan the defense? It looks natural to discard, perhaps selecting an encouraging diamond jack. Still, if you do that, declarer cruises home with these 10 tricks: five hearts, one diamond, two clubs and two spade ruffs in the dummy. As you know partner doesn't have a second trump to lead, you must ruff his trick and exit with a trump. Now declarer gets only one spade ruff in the dummy and goes one down. The defenders win two spades, one spade ruff and one diamond.

Always cook ground beef thoroughly

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.
DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been eating raw hamburger since I was a child. What we called beef tartare was a delicacy. Now, when I grill burgers, I always pinch off a bite of the raw stuff. Is this practice harmful?
DEAR READER: Unfortunately, yes. In the past decade, there have been several instances of widespread food poisoning caused by contaminated ground beef. The culprit is a particularly vicious type of E. Coli bacteria, which has even caused deaths in young children and elderly adults. Public health experts, in a unanimous consensus, urge consumers to cook hamburgers thoroughly before consuming them. Because of the very real danger posed by raw ground beef, the days of steak tartare are over.
DEAR DR. GOTT: Is it true that expectant mothers can get a disease from cats that may endanger the fetus?

DEAR READER: You are referring to toxoplasmosis, a parasitic disease that can be spread to humans from cats. Cats acquire the organism by eating infected birds or mice. The felines suffer few, if any, symptoms from the infection. The parasite is carried by cat excrement to humans by inadvertent oral contamination — usually after an individual fails to wash thoroughly after coming in contact with soiled cat litter. Once in a human host, the toxoplasma reproduce, leading to infection in the lungs, heart, lymph nodes and brain. In pregnant women, the parasite easily penetrates the placenta and enters the fetus, where its effects are far more serious than in the adult. Once in the fetus, toxoplasmosis can cause convulsions, brain shrinkage, blindness and mental retardation. Because of this possibility, pregnant women should avoid contact with cat litter. The disease can be diagnosed in the mother by blood tests and is treated with special medications.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have a beautiful, bright, 7-year-old grandson who constantly walks on his tip-toes. His parents refuse to seek medical advice and they tell me to back off. Will he outgrow this way of walking?
DEAR READER: Children often tend to walk on their toes. Although this occurs in normal youngsters, some orthopedic abnormalities — such as congenitally tight calf muscles — can produce this gait. Your grandson will probably outgrow the tendency to walk on his toes as he grows older. Nonetheless, I agree with you that he should be medically checked. Perhaps, with your gentle encouragement, his parents will mention this to his pediatrician at the time of the child's next routine examination.

Life Style

Hard to stop the habit once you get a taste for Pomegranates

When I was a child, a visit from my grandmother meant one thing: treats for me and my sister. But Nana's string bag was not full of chocolate or cookies. Instead, it was laden with unusual fruit for us to try. I remember my first slippery taste of mango, of delicate persimmons and puckery kumquats. She brought pods of St. John's bread (carob) for us to chew on, and quince and clementines. But my favorite treat of all, one I never tired of, was pomegranates. It astounds me that, so many years later, pomegranates are still something of a novelty. I have read that in the Middle East they are an everyday fruit, and their juice is added to food much as we might add lemon juice to a dish. But many of my children's friends have no idea what a pomegranate is, and even less of an idea of how to eat one.

Marialisa Calta

If you are among the pomegranate-illiterate, you should by all means educate yourself. Pomegranates date back to ancient times, and probably originated in Persia. Elizabeth Schneider, in "Uncommon Fruits and Vegetables," describes them as "the size of a smallish grapefruit, crowned with a turret-like calyx that gives the fruit a regal look." A pomegranate, she writes, is covered with leathery skin, and is so distinctive that it has a genus of its own. The eating part, which we call the seeds, is made up of what are called "arils": tiny, whitish seeds surrounded by translucent, delicious scarlet pulp. There are hundreds of arils in each pomegranate, which makes eating one a time-consuming (Schneider terms it "devotional") activity.

Pomegranates are available from fall to early winter; most American pomegranates come from California. Look for richly colored, heavy fruit with thin skin almost bursting with the wealth of arils within. Store them whole in the refrigerator up to 3 months. You can also freeze the seeds at least that long.

To separate the seeds from

Paul O. Bolevert for the New England Culinary Institute

the tough white membrane encasing them, Schneider recommends the following method: Cut the blossom end of the fruit, removing with it some of the white pith, taking care not to pierce the red seeds within. Lightly score the skin in quarters, from stem to blossom end. Gently break the fruit in half, following the score lines. Then break each piece in half again. Do not cut the fruit, or you will release the juice. Bend back the rind and pull out the seeds. One pomegranate will give you about 1 cup of seeds.

The recipes below come from Schneider's book, from the New England Culinary Institute in Montpelier, Vt., and from the California Pomegranate Council. But try to expand your uses of pomegranates: Think of them as a garnish for salads, a sauce for meats, and a wonderful way to gussy up ice cream, fruit desserts and sorbet.

As Schneider says, "Once you've gotten the pomegranate habit, it's hard to stop."

Elizabeth Schneider (Harper & Row, 1986)

SALAD OF POMEGRANATES, PERSIMMONS AND KIWIS
seeds of 1 large pomegranate
1 cup yogurt
1 tablespoon honey
1 tablespoon lemon juice
4 small ripe persimmons (preferably the Fuyu variety)
4 kiwis, peeled, halved lengthwise, then sliced crosswise

Lightly crush 2/3 of the pomegranate seeds in a bowl to extract some juice. Reserve the remaining seeds for garnish. Stir in the yogurt and honey and lemon juice to taste. Refrigerate for half an hour or longer.

Cut out leaf base from the persimmons, then halve fruits lengthwise. With a sharp paring knife, gently cut into the flesh as close to the skin as possible, to separate the skin and the flesh. Gently cut the flesh into slices.

Arrange persimmon and kiwi slices on 4 salad plates. Drizzle the dressing over each, then sprinkle the reserved pomegranate seeds over all. Yield: 4 servings.

— Recipe from "Uncommon Fruits and Vegetables," by

LAMB WITH POMEGRANATE GLAZE
Seeds from 1/2 a pomegranate

1 cup cranberry juice
4 loin chops (2 double loin chops)
salt and pepper to taste
1 to 2 tablespoons butter

In a small saucepan, cook the pomegranate seeds and cranberry juice, stirring, until a sauce consistency is reached. Set aside.

Heat a skillet until very hot. Season the lamb with salt and pepper and cook it until done to your liking (about 3 minutes per side for rare). Remove to a warm plate.

Keep the skillet over medium heat, and pour in the pomegranate sauce, stirring to deglaze the pan. Stir in the butter, swirling until melted. Add salt and pepper to taste.

Slice the lamb and drizzle the sauce over the plate. Serve immediately. Yield: 4 servings.

Research gives 'club drugs' less than rave reviews

DEAR ABBY: Please alert your readers to a problem of grave concern. (No pun intended.) "Club drugs" are becoming the "rave" with teens and young adults at all-night dance parties across the country. While those who use Ecstasy, GHB, Rohypnol — to name only a few drugs may be the ones that are not yet known. Researchers, supported by the National Institute of Drug Abuse, are studying "club drugs" with a sense of urgency. Although we still have much to learn about the effects of these drugs, we already know that they can be extremely harmful.

Dear Abby

On Dec. 2, we will launch a National Club Drug Initiative that will include issuing a Community Drug Alert Bulletin explaining what science says about the effects of these drugs. In addition, we will be working with several national organizations to get the word out to parents, teens and others about the dangers of these drugs. We also have information about these and other drugs on our Web site at www.drugabuse.gov. Or, your readers can call (800) 729-6686 to request free copies of these materials. Thank you for your help in getting the word out, Abby.

ALAN I. LESHNER, Ph.D., DIRECTOR, NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF DRUG ABUSE

Ecstasy, which goes by several names including "X," "Adam" and "MDMA," is both a stimulant and a hallucinogen. People may use Ecstasy for energy to keep on dancing and improve their mood. However, this drug increases the heart rate and body temperature, occasionally to the point of heart and kidney failure. It also appears to diminish the sense of thirst, and Ecstasy users have died from acute dehydration.

In addition, brain-imaging studies have shown that frequent Ecstasy use may damage brain cells that produce serotonin, a natural chemical that is partly responsible for memory and mood. It is still not known if these cells can regenerate, so the memory loss — and perhaps additional, still-to-be discovered serotonin-related impairments — may be long-lasting or permanent.

GHB ("G," "liquid Ecstasy") and Rohypnol ("roofie," "Roche") have been associated with "date rape" and sexual assault cases around the country. These two drugs, which are colorless, odorless and tasteless, have been easily slipped in the drinks of unknowing victims. Because both GHB and Rohypnol cause sedation and produce amnesia, they often prevent a sexual assault victim from identifying and successfully prosecuting the perpetrator.

Widespread use of Ecstasy, GHB and Rohypnol is relatively recent. The worst effects of these

DEAR DR. LESHNER: I applaud your research, and I'm pleased to help.

When will people learn that there is no free lunch? There is a price to pay for every mood-altering chemical people put into their bodies. One can only hope that the substance is not addictive and the effects aren't permanent. Years ago, many people thought that cocaine was not addictive. Then fortunes were lost and lives were ruined or lost when the opposite turned out to be true.

I hope your Web site will be visited by people of all ages. Young people need to know everything they can about what they are putting into their bodies so they can make informed judgments. And as to the "date rape" drugs — it has reached the point that people should not drink beverages at clubs or parties unless they have opened the container themselves and had the beverages in their possession AT ALL TIMES.

woods. Deputies followed their footprints and found the trio, ordering them to the ground.

According to investigators, 28-year old Ronald Newton of Orlando and 23-year old Daniel Salamacha of Winter Springs threw down their guns and ran into nearby woods.

Terry Casady, 22, of 712 Castlewood Drive in Winter Springs, laid on the ground and surrendered.

Monday night, Seminole County Sheriff's Deputies arrested Salamacha at 601 Pearl Street in Winter Springs.

On Tuesday, investigators arrested Newton at an apartment in Lake Mary. Also arrested was Clifford C. Wright, 18, who lived at Huntington Reserve Apartments in Unit 832. Newton was staying at Wright's home.

Investigators believe Wright helped plan the home invasion, but did not participate.

Casey Hatfield, 30, of 131 Covington Street in Oviedo was also arrested. Investigators believe he was the driver of the would-be getaway vehicle, a full-sized, Dodge extra cab.

Hatfield was arrested when he returned home just before 6 p.m.

All five suspects are being held at the Seminole County Jail without bond. Wright is charged with conspiracy to commit home invasion. The remaining four are all charged with armed home invasion.

A Seminole County Sheriff's Office Helicopter joined deputies, Oviedo Police Officers, and Seminole County Canine Officers in search of Newton and Salamacha after they fled into the woods.

Deputies have recovered two shotguns, a gold necklace, and disguise clothing as evidence, according to the Sheriff's Office report.

Lawton Printers teams with county to mark trail

The Cross-County Trail in Seminole County has grown steadily in popularity since opening earlier this year.

As runners, bikers, walkers and in-line skaters exercise from downtown Oviedo to the Winter Springs Trailhead, it was difficult to chart one's progress.

Ces Lawton is a lifelong area resident and he and his family have utilized the trail from the opening day. Realizing a need for mileage markers, Lawton approached Seminole County Commission Chairman Carlton Henley with the idea of Lawton Printers underwriting trail markers. Lawton owns and operates Central Florida's first commercial printing company.

County Parks Director Bob Chorvat coordinated with Lawton designers to have signs made to mark every quarter mile in each direction. Lawton Printers intends to continue to mark the trail as its expansion occurs.

Ces, his daughter, Kimberly, a senior at Vanderbilt University and his wife, Sharon, just completed the Marine Corps Marathon in Washington, D.C. October 24th. They plan to run the Disney Marathon in January, as well. Youngest daughter, Kristin, utilizes the trail on her in-line skates to keep in shape for crew at Furman University.

Photo submitted
Ces and Sharon Lawton, along with their daughters Kimberly and Kristin, take a moment from their workouts to admire the new markers along Cross-County Trail. Lawton's company, Lawton Printers, is helping underwrite the cost of the markers.

New area code brings changes to dialing.

If you live in Brevard County (the light grey area on the map) and your three-digit prefix is listed below, your area code will be changing from 407 to 321. Beginning Nov. 1, 1999, and for 11 months thereafter, callers may dial either 321 or 407 for long distance calls to Brevard County. Starting Oct. 1, 2000, area code 321 will become mandatory for these calls.

259	369	453	501	615	640	722	751	853

Because area code 321 will overlay 407 in Orange, Osceola, Seminole and portions of Lake and Volusia Counties (the white "407/321" area on the map), starting Dec. 1, 1999, ten-digit local dialing will be mandatory in this area. Ten-digit dialing (the area code plus the seven-digit phone number) is necessary so that calls can complete in the 407/321 overlay area. Your existing area code will not change; only new numbers in this area will be assigned the new 321 area code and only after Jan. 1, 2000.

To accommodate ten-digit dialing and the 321 area code, you may need to reprogram equipment like speed dialers, fax machines, PBXs - almost anything that dials numbers automatically (consult your vendor if you're not sure). Calling rates and access to special services like 411 and 911 are not affected by either change.

If you have any questions about new area code 321 or ten-digit local dialing, visit www.bellsouth.com/areacode. Or call us at 1 800 964-9941.

*DeBary will retain the 407 area code and seven-digit local dialing.

Solar Bears move into second place

Special to the Herald

ORLANDO - The Orlando Solar Bears concluded their seven-game, 14-day road trip on Friday of last week and then hosted the International Hockey League (IHL)-leading Grand Rapids Griffins on Saturday and Sunday at Orlando Arena.

The Solar Bears posted a 3-1-0 mark in last week's action and are now 13-8-1 (27 points) on the season and in a three-way tie for second place in the IHL's Eastern Conference.

The O-Bears return to action this week with three games - visiting the Kansas City Blades on Wednesday, travelling to the Utah Grizzlies on Friday, and hosting the Cincinnati Cyclones on Saturday.

Orlando ended a two-game losing streak on Tuesday with a 5-2 victory over the Griffins at Van Andel Arena in Grand Rapids. With the win, the Solar Bears snapped a six-game Griffins winning streak.

Right wing Bob Lachance was the story for Orlando, recording a four-point night with two goals and two assists.

Solar Bears left wing Todd Krygler opened the scoring with his fourth goal of the season at 10:47 of the first period from forwards Mark Beaufait and Shawn Carter.

Lachance put Orlando up by a 3-0 score heading into the third period with second period strikes at 0:52 and on the power play at 12:01.

Rookie left wing Bryan Adams picked up the assist on Lachance's third of the season, and forwards Gary Shuchuk and Carter were credited with the helpers on Lachance's fourth of the 1999-2000 campaign.

Grand Rapids got on the board at 2:28 of the final period behind left wing Yves Serrault eighth of the season from defenseman Philippe Plante.

Adams restored the Solar Bears three-goal lead at 7:09 from Shuchuk and Lachance, and Shuchuk tallied Orlando's final goal of the evening at 7:38 from Lachance and Adams to make it 5-1.

Griffins center Konstantin Gorovikov rounded out the scoring at 12:05.

Orlando netminder Rick Tabaracci made 26 saves, while Griffins goaltender Jani Hurne stopped 21 shots in the losing effort.

Orlando ended the lengthy road trip on Friday with a 4-3 shootout victory over the Cleveland Lumberjacks at Gund Arena. With the win, the Solar Bears ran their winning streak against Cleveland to eight consecutive games.

The Lumberjacks have not beaten Orlando since a 2-1 shootout victory on March 28, 1998, and have not defeated the Solar Bears in regulation since a 3-2 win on March 14, 1998.

Cleveland center Brett Harkins opened the scoring at 8:35 of the first period with his ninth goal of the season from left wing Jeff Christian and defenseman Jim Paek.

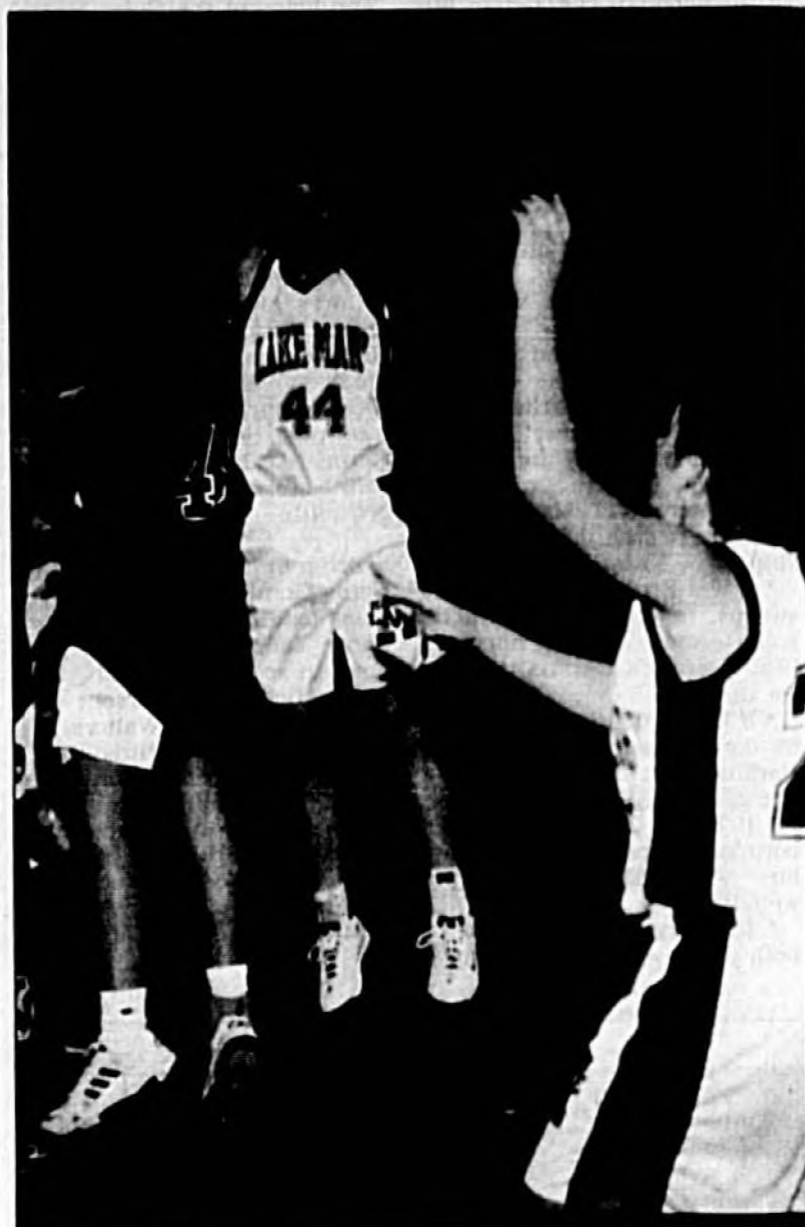

Orlando answered on the power play at 14:44 behind defenseman Brett Clark's second strike of 1999-2000 from defenseman Curtis Murphy and Krygler.

The Lumberjacks took a 2-1 lead into the first intermission with a power play goal from defenseman Ted Crowley assisted by defense partner Radim Bicanek and center Todd White.

Orlando surged ahead with a pair of second period strikes from rookie center Dan Snyder at 4:17 and from defenseman Sergei Vyshedkevich on the power play at 11:27. Murphy and left wing Jason Botterill were credited with the assists on Snyder's first professional goal, and right
