By MAX ERKILETIAN Herald Staff Writer

Had Sanford firefighters crossed the street to battle a fire in a building 100 feet south of the city limits one week ago today they would not have been covered by the city's insurance plan and taxpayers would probably have had to pay for any injuries that might have resulted, according to City Manager Warren E. Knowles.

The fire occurred in a vacant building across the street from Sanford Fire Station Number Two on U.S. 17-92 near Lake Mary

Sanford firefighters called the Seminole Fire Department to report the blaze, then stood and watched as three Seminole units arrived three minutes later to put out the fire. "The fact is we had no authority to go across the street and we rould not have been covered by our insurance if we had," said

"If a fireman gets killed or one of your trucks runs over a little old lady in a Volkswagen while you're operating outside the city and not on a mutual aid call, you would be opening the city up to lawsuits," Knowles said.

The expense of such lawsuits would be incurred by the city and not its insurance company, according to Knowles, because operating outside the city and not under mutual aid is not covered by city insurance. "If a question of liability was found against the city, you would only find that the taxpayers would have to be insurance company," commented Knowles. The city's insurance coverage is based on the city's fire response policies, he said. Under that policy, the city would respond to any situation where life was endangered or a school is nvolved - without being asked. "We would probably even cross county boundaries in a situation like that," commented Knowles. "I say that, because I can sit here and look across the river to Osteen and Deltona and since they are near, if they needed assistance where a life was involved.

Seminole County Director of Public Safety Gary Kaiser blasted the city for its mutual aid pact with the county. "I think it's unfortunate we don't have more progressive cities in terms of providing service without regard to boundaries," said Kaiser following the incident.

However, according to Knowles, the county is responsible for drafting the mutual aid agreement binding it and Sanford. "This mutual aid agreement was drawn up by the county," said Knowles. "They were asking us for mutual aid. This was back transfer Butler from his post as plan calls for active recruitwhen they were first getting started and we had more men and assistant to the city manager ment of personnel to fill city

Under terms of the agreement, the city would have responded to the blase had the county sought their assistance. "All they would have had to say is, 'help," said Knowles. "If to "appoint" Butler chief, suggested Butler fill the post on they had done that, we would have been operating under our pending certification by the a transfer. mutual aid agreement and we would have been covered by our

Israelis Debating Treaty; $4 Billion Package Readied

By United Press International

The Israeli cabinet opened an historic debate on a peace treaty with Egypt today and government sources said President Carter sent a cable urging Israeli approval of the compromise draft.

Egypt is urging the United States to make "certain" amendments in the draft Egyptian-Israeli treaty and Israel left it up to its Cabinet to decide on accepting the U.S.-authored pact. In Washington, Israeli officials are putting together a request for U.S. aid that could reach $4 billion over a three-year period for the Sinai pullout. Diplomatic sources said President Carter, in private talks at a crucial stage last week; promised to consider "generous financial aid" to help meet the relocation costs, and he asked the Israelis to prepare a formal request.

Meeting The Defense Challenge

In its most recent report on the subject, the Central Intelligence Agency estimates that Soviet military spending rose by four or five percent every year from 1967 to 1977.

Figures for 1978 are not yet available but no one expects the pattern of the last decade to be broken in the immediate future.

This steady, cumulative growth in Soviet military spending accounts for the ominous in-crease in Moscow's military strength across the board from conventional forces to strategic nuclear weaponry.

It explains how the Soviets moved from a position of marked inferiority in strategic weapons to rough parity with the United States by the mid-

If current trends are any gauge, Soviet leaders can expect to enjoy military superiority over the United States by the early 1980s with or without the SALT II agreement as its terms are commonly understood.

One might expect the Carter administration to react to these threatening developments by funding adequate increases in this country's defense

Defense spending for fiscal 1978, the Carter administration's first complete budget period, represented only a one percent boost over 1978. It's hardly a robust response to the Soviet challenge. Next year, the response may be even more feeble. Planning for the fiscal year 1980 federal budget is well under way. The White House is developing its spending priorities for the budget period beginning next October 1.

And the early word from the White House is that Mr. Carter's aides favor a fiscal year 1980 Pentagon budget that, adjusted for anticipated inflation, allows for zero growth in defense spen-

Such a budget would inevitably permit the Soviets to extend their lead in arms categories ranging from tanks to submarines to the destructive power of intercontinental ballistic

Worse, it would perpetuate a fundamental flaw in the negotiating posture assumed by the United States in the strategic arms limitation talks. By permitting Soviet military expansion to go largely unchallenged, the United States offers the Soviets little real incentive to agree to significant reductions in their own strategic programs. It's a failure that tends to undermine the potential benefits the United States might otherwise expect from the SALT talks.

Of necessity, national security must be the first riority of the federal government. After two years of drift, it's time for a defense

Calvin Plans Apology

NEW YORK (UPI) - In the next couple of days or so, just as soon as he shakes that nagging cold he has, Calvin Griffith plans to call Butch Wynegar or sit down and write him a letter assuring him he has nothing in the world against romance.

He would've done it a lot sooner than this, especially in light of the fireworks ignited by those off-the-cuff remarks of his at a Lion's Club luncheon in Waseca, Minn., a few weeks ago, but he feels he has a much better chance of conveying exactly what he meant to his 23-year-old receiver now that some of the furor over his original statements has subsided.

Griffith said some things about his seven-time batting champion, Rod Carew, and about his young catcher, who slumped to .229 this year, and although he later explained he intended no malice and Carew told him he understood, the Twins' owner has heard nothing from Wynegar, who makes his home in York, Pa. What particularly angered Wynegar, who wed the former Gretchen Oas last December, was that Griffith blamed the catcher's slump on his marriage, saying he felt Wynegar shouldn't have come to spring training while still on his honeymoon.

"He took his exercise running around the bedroom instead of running around the outfield," Griffith said.

A lot of ballplayers will make a statement and then deny it. Griffith doesn't deny saying what he did. Rightly or wrongly, many other baseball people share Calvin Griffith's belief, that a young ballplayer rarely is at his best on the field during his first year of marriage, the only difference being that the majority of baseball people who feel that way don't usually say it publicly

"I wasn't trying to downgrade Butch Wynegar," he says. "I think very highly of him as a young man and as a ballpi mber telling Gene Mauch a couple of years ago, 'don't worry about our catching, we got a kid over at Reno, who's gonna take care of it. Wait and see."

"Well, I was right about him. Wynegar made the All-Star team his first season with us two years ago and I'm sure he's going to make it again. He's only 22, and personally I think he could be a better. Not everybody can hit standing three feet away from the plate. Everybody can't be a batting instructor for everybo Woodley, LSS Hall of Famer if he gets some more strength." Calvin Griffith is a traditionalist and he thinks like one. Right here is as good a place as any to point out that all traditional thinking is not necessarily wrong or obsolete. "I am not against romance by any means," Griffith says, "and I'm not trying to tell a ballplayer when he should get married, but I think if he's only 20 or 22, and intends to make baseball a career, he should wait at least until he's fairly established before he gets married. And if he does, I don't think it's such a good idea for him to spend his honeymoon in spring training.

"A few years ago, Jim Hughes was voted our Pitcher of the Year Award after winning 16 games for us," goes on the Twins' boss. "The following spring he sent me an invitation to his wedding and said he was going to spend his honeymoon in Florida during our training period. I told him he was writing himself a ticket to Tacoma. What was so wrong with getting married a little Personally, I can understand Calvin Griffith's line of thinking, possibly because my old sports editor, the one I worked for more than 20 years, had little patience when it came to his employees taking time off to get married no matter when. One member of our department informed him he had set the date for his wedding during the second weekend in November, 'What!'' roared my old sports editor, getting his blood pressure up. "On a football Saturday!" Calvin Griffith was divorced recently but that doesn't doesn't believe in marriage.

"I was managing Charlotte of the Pledmont League when I got married in 1940," says Griffith, who was 20 at the time. "We got married on February first and went to New York for our honeymoon. Being in the minors like we were, our team didn't start spring training until the end of March."

"Right now, I don't care if I comes, LSU comes back to Kansas City," said McRae last week "Somes Marier, M.S. come back to Kansas City," said McRae last week. "Somebody said he heard Charlie was Prep Poll getting a job with Seattle. I'll go there if they want me." Brett, who won the betting title in 1976 with a .333 average.

Tuesday, Oct. 14, 1978-18

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) - The Public Service Commission will learn Thursday just how much money it can require Florida Power Corp. to repay to customers bilked by the 1973-74 "daisy chain" oil scandal.

"I've heard $8 million, $10 million, but all supposition," Chairman Paula Hawkins said Monday. But she said Russell Troutman, Orlando attorney and former Florida Bar president hired to document the amount of payments plus interest, won't make his report public until Thursday. "He told me the amount will be substantial," she said.

Can Program, Growers Urge

ORLANDO - Florida citrus processors should abandon their "voluntary" factoring program for processed grapefruit juice in view of a national grapefruit shortage and a "very bleak" supply outlook, United Growers said today. Gen. Mgr. Wilson McGee of the Orlando-based grower organization said he would suggest to the Florida Citrus Commission at its meeting today it withdraw "its tacit approval" of the controversial program that will be enforced by the Florida State Inspection Service.

Literacy Test Law Attacked

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) - Legal Services of North Florida lawyer Jack McLean says his group may go to court to change the functional literacy test law or zero in on a special task force reporting to the Cabinet.

It doesn't intend to stop its opposition to the test, McLean said, and doesn't feel it abused the Administrative Procedures Act, an argument raised by Education Commissioner Ralph Turlington and incoming Senate President Phil Lewis.

Learn To Drive With Pictures

JACKSONVILLE (UPI) - At the request of the Florida Department of Highway Safety and Motor Vehicles, a team of University of North Florida professors is devising a pictorial driver's test for illiterate motorists.

"Many non-readers seeking a driver's license possess a good working knowledge of road rules and safe driving practices," Dr. Bruce A. Gutknecht, an UNF reading professor and the project director, said Monday.

approved the U.S. draft peace treaty between Egypt and Israel. But the national radio said the cabinet made some changes in the

The approval came in the 17th hour and the third day of a marathon debate on the draft treaty that was hammered out in Social Welfare Minister Israel Katz said 15 ministers approved the document and two abstained. None voted against.

The abstantions came from the rightwing in Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin's ruling Likud bloc — Energy Minister Yitzhak Modai and Health Minister Elieser Shostak.

"I think were all satisfied," Katz said. "I think that Prime Minister Begin is satisfied." There was no immediate indication what changes the cabinet made in the draft treaty, which will be taken back to Washington

If Sadat accepted and agreed to go to Jerusalem, it would be his second visit to the Jewish capital, following up on his historic visit last Nov. 19, which began the negotiating process. It would be Begin's first visit to Cairo, although he visited the Egyptian city of Ismailia last Christmas.

Begin's central theme in the Maariv interview was that Israel did not want to be rushed into agreeing to the complicated provisions of the treaty but at the same time he served notice he expected a pact to be concluded.

He said he does not think the treaty will be ready for signing Nov. 19, the anniversary of Sadat's visit to Jerusalem, and that negotiations could last two or three months. "It won't be tomorrow or the next day," Begin said of the signing. "President Sadat gave new suggestions on which the
